

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

BOOK III.

CHAP. I.

Of the Wars, Valour, Military Glory, &c. of the antient Grecians.

THE antient Grecians were a rude and unpolished Sort of Mortals, wholly unacquainted with the modern, and more refined Arts of War and Peace. Persons of the highest Birth and Quality, and whom they fancied to be descended from the Race of the immortal Gods, had little other Business to employ their Hours, besides Tilling the Earth, or feeding their Flocks and Herds; and the Rapine of these, or some other petty Concerns, which was looked on as a generous and heroical Exploit, occasioned most of the Wars, so famous in their Story. Achilles in Homer tells Agamemnon, that 'twas purely to oblige him, he had engaged himself in so long and dangerous a War against the Trojans, from whom he had never received any just Cause of Quarrel, having never been despoil'd of his Oxen or Horses, or had the Fruits of his Ground destroy'd by them (a).

VOL. II. B he

Οὐ γὰρ ἰγὼ Τρώων ἔνεκ' ἤλυθον αἰχμητῶν
 Δαῖρο μαχησόμενῳ, ἵππεϊ δὲ μοι αἵτιοί εἰσιν.
 Οὐ γὰρ πώποτ' ἱμάς βῆς ἤλασαν ἐδὲ μὲν ἵππους,
 Οὐδέ ποτ' ἐν Φθίῃ ἱριβάλακι βωτιαίῃη
 Καρπὸν ἐηλήσαντ', ἵππῃ μάλ' αὖ πολλὰ μεταξὺ
 Οὐρίᾳ τε Κριόῃη, θάλασσά τε ἤχησσα.
 Ἄλλὰ τοι, ὦ μὲν' ἀναιδὲς, ἄμ' ἐσπόμεθ', ὄφρα σὺ χαίρης·

For tho' I here with warlike Trojans fight,
 'Tis not to vindicate my private Right;
 Since they by impious Theft have ne'er detain'd
 My Oxen, Horses, or on Phibia's Land
 Destroy'd my Fruits; secur'd by craggy Ways,
 O'er pathless Mountains and tempestuous Seas,
 I fear not what Invasions they can make:
 But 'tis ungrateful Man, 'tis for thy Sake,
 T' advance thy Triumphs that I hither come,
 That thou with greater State may'st reign at Home.

Mr. Hutchin.

And the Simplicity of their Conduct may be sufficiently evinced, as from several other Instances, so by those especially, where Achilles, Hector, or Ajax are introduced opposing themselves to vast Numbers, and by the Force of their own Valour putting to Flight whole Squadrons of their Enemies. Nor is the Poet to be thought Blame-worthy, or to have transgressed the Rules of Probability in such Relations; which, tho' perhaps strange and incredible in our Days, were, no doubt, accommodated to the Manners of the Times, of which he wrote. For even in the sacred Story we find it recorded, that a single Goliath defied all the Armies of Israel (b), and with a big Look, and a few arrogant Words, struck so great Terror into them, that they fled before him.

Notwithstanding this, in the Revolution of a few Ages, Greece became the celebrated Mother of the bravest and most experienc'd Soldiers in the World: For being canton'd into a great Number of little independent States, all which, tho' bordering upon one another, were govern'd by different Laws, and prosecuted contrary Interests, it became the Seat of continual Wars; every Hamlet being ambitious of enlarging it's Territory, by encroaching upon it's Neighbour-Village, and and contending for the Addition of a few Lands, with no less Heat and Fury than if whole Kingdoms had been the Prize : The Consequence whereof was, that the Grecians, being from their Childhood inured to martial Affairs, and having to their native Bravery added long and constant Experience, were rendered as well in good Order and Discipline, as true Courage and Valour, superior to most other Nations. They became a Terror to all the Countries round about them, and with small Numbers often put to flight vast Multitudes of the Barbarians : The Persians frequently experienced the sad Effects of it in the Loss of numerous Armies, and at length of the greatest Empire in the World. And (to enumerate no more Instances in a Thing so well known) the Carthaginians, tho' Men of great Courage, and excellently skill'd in the Art of War, being worsted in Sicily by Timoleon the Corinthian, in several Encounters, and by unequal Numbers of Men, were driven into an Admiration of the Grecian Valour ; and forced to confess, that they were the most pugnacious and insuperable of Mankind ; and forthwith made it their Business to entertain as many of them as they could procure, in their Service (a).

But tho' almost all the Grecians had their Share in Military Glory, yet were the rest far inferior to the Lacedæmonians, who by the Laws of their Country were under an Obligation to make War their Profession ; they never applied themselves to any Art or Employment, or the Exercise of Trades, which they accounted unworthy of generous and free-born Souls ; but committing all such Cares to the Helots, who were a genteeler Sort of Slaves, spent their Time in manly Exercises, to render their Bodies strong and active. They were also accustomed by hard Diet, by Stripes, and other Severities, patiently to undergo Hardships, to endure Wounds, to encounter Dangers, and if the Honour of their Country so required, to throw themselves into the Arms of Death without Fear or Regret. Yet were they not so imprudent or fool-hardy, as to court Dangers or Death ; but were taught from their Childhood to be always prepared either to live or die, and equally willing to do either ; as appears from those Verses, cited by Plutarch (b) to this Purpose.

 Ἀλλὰ τὸ ταῦτα καλῶς ἀμφοτέρῃ' ἐπιτίθειναι.

They dy'd, but not as lavish of their Blood,
 Or thinking Death itself was simply good,
 Or Life ; both these the strictest Virtue try'd,
 And as that call'd, they gladly liv'd or dy'd.

Nor was this Indifferency to Life or Death only discoursed of amongst them, as a Point of mere Speculation ; but carefully and seriously instilled in their tender Years, and always embraced as one of the first

Principles

(b) Pelopida.

Principles of their Actions ; which begot in them such an undaunted Courage, and so firm and unmoveable a Resolution, that scarce any other Nation was able to stand before them. This extraordinary and unparallel'd Bravery, being adorn'd and strengthen'd with the wisest Conduct, and the most perfect Skill in all the Stratagems of War those Times were capable of, has render'd them famous in Story, and Examples of Military Virtue to all succeeding Ages : " For " (these are Plutarch's (a) Words) the Lacedæmonians were most expert and cunning in the Art of War, being train'd up and accustom'd to nothing more than to keep themselves from Confusion, when their Order should be broken ; to follow any Leader or Right-hand Man, so rallying themselves into Order ; and to fight on what Part soever Dangers press."

It is therefore by no means to be wonder'd at, that foreign and vastly remote Nations should be desirous to entertain the Lacedæmonians in their Service ; that Cyrus the Younger should think it the readiest and most effectual Method to advance himself to the Empire of Persia : That Cræsus, the wealthy King of Lydia, and several of the Egyptian Monarchs, tho' surrounded with numerous Forces of their own, should never esteem themselves secure without Assistance from Sparta ; or that the Sicilians, Thracians, Cartaginians, with the Cyrenæans, and many others, were beholden to it for Protection, and Deliverance from powerful Enemies. And for the Grecians themselves, whenever any of their little States were in danger of being swallow'd up by their more powerful Neighbours, we find them having Recourse for Aid to the Spartans, who were a common Refuge to the Oppressed, and restrain'd the ambitious Invaders of other Mens Rights.

Hence likewise it came to pass, that in all Confederacies they were look'd on as the principal Associates ; and in all Wars carried on by public Contributions, they challeng'd the chief Command as their Right and Peculiar. Nor could any Exigency prevail with them to depart from that Claim, or resign it to the greatest of Princes. Gelon, King of Sicily, tho' promising to furnish them with large Supplies against the Barbarians, on Condition he might be declar'd Captain-General of the Grecian Forces, was reject'd (b). Yet we find, that after the Victory over Mardonius at Plateæ, Pausanias the Lacedæmonian General, having by his excessive Severity, and tyrannical Behaviour to the rest of the Soldiers, render'd the Spartans very odious, in the End they revolted to the Athenians, the gentle and courteous Carriage of whose Commanders Aristides and Cimon, had endear'd them to all the rest of the Grecians : And here the Magnanimity of the Lacedæmonians was wonderful ; for when they perceived that their Generals were corrupted, and their Minds too much elevated and puffed up by the Greatness of their Authority, they left off sending any more of them to the Wars, chusing rather to have Citizens of Moderation, and that persever'd in their ancient Manners and Customs, than to be honour'd with the Superiority of all Greece (c). But this

(a) Pelopida.(b) Herodotus, lib. VII.(c) Plutarchus Aristide.

this Misfortune did not put an end to the Lacedemonian Greatness; for we find them in a little Time re-assuming their ancient Spirits, and disdaining even Alexander himself (tho' submitted to by the rest of the Grecians, and declared their General against Persia) for their Superior. Which is the Reason, that in the Monuments erected after the Persian Victories, and bearing the Names of Alexander and the Grecians, the Lacedemonians were excepted by Name, as having no Share in that Honour (a).

The Athenians were alone able to dispute this Prerogative with the Lacedemonians; some few Junctures excepted, when some unusual Success raised any of the other States beyond their ordinary Grandeur; as it happen'd to the Thebans, who, from a mean and despicable People, were by the Conduct of Epaminondas and Pelopidas advanc'd to an Equality; if not a Superiority over the most flourishing Cities of Greece.

Notwithstanding these, and some other Obstacles, the Lacedemonians for the most part, made good their Pretensions, and in most Wars carried on by a Confederacy, were Generals of all the Land-Forces; but were at length constrain'd to leave the Dominion of the Seas to the Athenians; who having laid out their whole Strength in fitting out a Navy against Xerxes, for a long Time reign'd sole Lords of the liquid Element: During which Season we find a Decree put forth by their Senate, wherein it was order'd, That the Command of all the Naval Forces of Greece should belong to Athens; but the Land-Armies should obey a General from Sparta (b). But the Rival Cities could not be long content with this equal Distribution of Power, each being jealous of the other's Greatness, and thinking herself best able to govern the whole Jurisdiction; till at length the Athenians, having their whole Fleet, except twelve Trireme-Gallies, destroy'd at once by Lyfander the Spartan Admiral, in the famous Battle at Ægos potamus, were constrain'd to own the Lacedemonians for Sovereigns both by Sea and Land (c).

But the Lacedemonians were not long able to maintain this Command; for the Athenians, having recruited their Naval Forces, and engag'd Evagoras the King of Cyprus, and Pharnabazus the Persian Emperor's Lieutenant to their Interest; by their Assistance, and the singular Conduct of their own Admiral Conon, gave them so great an Overthrow at Cnibus (d), that they never after pretended to contest the Sovereignty of the Seas, but contented themselves with the chief Command at Land, which the Athenians suffered them to enjoy, without farther Molestation; both Cities being weary of the Contention, and convinc'd at length of the Truth of what had been commonly observ'd, That Fortune was most favourable to the Lacedemonians by Land, but in Sea Engagements sided with the Athenians (e). This seems not to have been without Reason, the Athenians thro' the Commodiousness of their Situation being disposed, and, as it were, invited by Nature to apply themselves to Naval Affairs ; whereas the Lacedæmonians were plac'd at a greater Distance from the Sea, and more inclin'd to Land-Service (to which they were inur'd from their tender Years) than to venture themselves on the Ocean, to which they had never been accusom'd ; for Lycurgus, their Law-giver, expressly forbad them (a) to visit foreign Countries, out of a well-grounded Fear, lest his Citizens should be corrupted by the Conversation of Strangers, and forsake that excellent Platform of Government he contriv'd for them. And it happen'd to them as he had wisely foreseen ; for no sooner had Lyfander render'd them Sovereigns of the Seas, but they began by Degrees to leave their ancient Customs, and to degenerate from the Virtue and Glory of their Ancestors (b).

C H A P. II.

Of their Levies ; Pay, &c. of Soldiers.

THE Grecian Armies consisted for the most part of free Denizens, whom the Laws of their Country oblig'd, when arriv'd at a certain Age, to appear in Arms, upon the Summons of the Magistrate, or commission'd Officer. In some Places they were more early admitted to the Wars, in others later.

The Athenians when arrived at eighteen Years of Age, were appointed to guard the City, with the Forts belonging to it ; from their going about to visit which, they were called περιπολοι (c) : But were not sent to foreign Wars till twenty ; the Spartans seldom till thirty. The younger Men in both Cities, with those who by reason of their Age, were discharg'd from Military Service, were left at Home to defend their Habitations.

Some Persons were excus'd by reason of their Age ; for having spent their Youth and Strength in serving their Country, it was but reasonable to discharge them from farther Service, that they might end their Days in Peace. After threescore Years it seems to have been usual in most Places to allow them the Liberty of retiring. At Athens no Man above forty was press'd to serve in the Wars, except in Times of extreme Danger (d). Others were exempt upon account of their Function ; such were at Athens οι τιμω περιάμεινοι, the Farmers of the public Customs (e), whose Presence was requir'd in the City, during the whole Time of their Employment, and several of the Holy Orders, as also the Persons appointed to dance at Bacchus's Festivals (f).

Others were excluded from serving in the Wars ; such were the Slaves, and such others as liv'd amongst them, but were not honour'd with the Freedom of their Cities. These were never admitted, except in in Cases of extreme Danger, when there remain'd no other Means of preserving the Common-wealth. Of this Custom I have already given a large Account in one of the foregoing Books (a).

All that serv'd were enter'd into a public Roll : Whence the Levy was call'd καταγραφὴ, κατάλογος, γραφολογία ; and to make a Levy, κατάλογον, or καταγραφὴν ποιῆσθαι. Amongst the Primitive Grecians it seems to have been frequently made by Lots, every Family being oblig'd to furnish out a certain Number, and filling up their Proportion by the Chance of Lots : Whence Mercury in Homer (b) pretending to be one of the Sons of Polydor the Myrmidon, adds, that he was appointed by Lot to follow Achilles to the Trojan War.

Τῷν μέτα παλλόμεθ', κλέρω λάχων ἰνδὰ δ'ἵππασθαι.

'Twas I, who when the Lots were drawn,
Was doom'd to follow Pelus' mighty Son.

For the Appointment of all Persons of a certain Age to be ready to serve in the Wars, seems only to be an Institution of later Ages ; whereas all such-like Things were formerly manag'd at the Pleasure of the Supreme Magistrate.

The Soldiers were all maintain'd at their own Expences ; no Name was more opprobrious than that of a Mercenary, it being look'd upon as a Disgrace for any Person of ingenuous Birth and Education to serve for Wages. For all this, it was not permitted any Person to absent himself, except upon Reasons allow'd by the Law ; and whoever was found thus to have transgressed, was at Athens depriv'd of his Voice in all public Business, and in a manner of all other Rights of Citizens, and was forbidden to enter into any of the public Temples (c). And lest any of the Persons appointed to serve should make their Escape, we find they were branded with certain Marks, call'd σημάτα. These are mention'd by Vegetius (d), who speaking of the Military Oath, and the Muster-roll, wherein the Soldiers Names were register'd, mentions also, that they were virtutis in cute punctis scriptis, branded with lasting Marks in their Flesh. These Marks commonly contain'd the Name or proper Ensign of their General. To distinguish Soldiers from Slaves, who were commonly mark'd in the Forehead, as has been elsewhere observ'd, they had σημάτα ἐν ταῖς χερσὶ, their Characters impress'd upon their Hands, as we are inform'd by Ælian. By the same Ceremony it was customary for Men to dedicate themselves to certain Deities : Whence is that Question mention'd in Zechariah (e), where he speaks of the Prophets and Votaries of the Pagan Gods : And one shall say unto him, What are these Wounds in thy Hands ? And the Beast, who requires all Men to worship him in the Book of Revelations (f), is there said to cause all, both Small and Great, Rich and Poor, Free and Bond, to receive a

Mark

Mark in their Right-hand, or in their Fore-heads (a). And to the same Custom St. Paul is thought to allude in his Epistle to the Galatians (b), where speaking of the Wounds he had receiv'd in his Christian Warfare, he tells us, that he bore in his Body the σημαῖα, or the Marks, of the Lord JESUS.

The Carians were the first that serv'd in Greece for Pay (c), and have thereby render'd their Names infamous to Posterity; being represented by all the Writers of those Times, as a base and servile Nation; insomuch that καίκοι, and καίμοιροι, are Proverbial Epithets for Persons of abject and pusillanimous Tempers, or servile Condition (d); and Κᾱρς is a synonymous Term for Slaves; as in that Proclamation at the End of the Athenian Festival Anthesteria, whereby the Slaves were commanded to be gone out of Doors;

Οὐραζε, Κᾱρς, ἐκ τῆς Ἀνθιστήριας.

Be gone, ye Slaves, the Anthesteria are ended.

Thus the Carians were reproach'd for introducing a Custom, which in a few Ages after was so far from being look'd upon as unworthy their Birth or Education, that we find it practis'd by the whole Nation of the Greeks, who not only received Pay for serving their own Common-wealth, but lifted themselves under foreign Kings, and fought their Battles for Hire; their chief Magistrates not disdaining to accompany them in such Expeditions. Several Instances of this Sort might be produc'd, were not that famous one of the Great Agessilaus's condescending to serve Ptolemy King of Egypt, instead of many others.

The first that introduc'd the Custom of paying Soldiers at Athens, was Pericles, who, to ingratiate himself with the Commonalty, represented how unreasonable it was, that Men of small Estates, and scarce able to provide for their Families, should be oblig'd to neglect their Business, and spend what their Industry had laid up, in the public Service; and thereupon preferr'd a Decree that all of them should have Subsistence-Money out of the Exchequer (e); which seems to have been receiv'd with general Applause. What Sum they daily receiv'd, cannot easily be determin'd, it being increas'd, or diminish'd, as Occasion requir'd. At first we find the Foot-Soldiers had two Oboli a Day, which in a Month amounted to ten Drachms (f). What we read in Thucydides (g) of the Soldiers that garrison'd Potidea, to every one of which was allotted a Drachm a Day, with another to a Servant for attending upon him, must not be understood, as if their ordinary Pay was of that Value, that being only to the common Seamen of Athens three Oboli, to those that mann'd the Sacred Vessel called Πάριος, and the Foot Soldiers, four; whence τετραώκιος βίος is a Proverbial Expression for a Soldier's Life (h); and τετραώκιον for serving in the the War. The Horseman's Pay was for the most Part thirty Drachms a Month, that is a Drachm a Day ; this we find to have been term'd κατάστασις (a).

The ordinary Method of raising this Money, was by imposing a Tax on the whole Common-wealth, whereby all Persons were obliged to contribute according to the Value of their Estates. But this was done only when the public Treasury was exhausted, and the constant Revenues from tributary Cities, public Lands, Woods, Mines or from Fines and Amercements, were not sufficient to defray the Charges of the War. In Cases of greater Necessity, the richer Citizens at Athens were obliged to extraordinary Contributions ; and there appears to have been a generous and laudable Emulation amongst the Men of Quality in that City, who voluntarily offered more than was required of them, and contended which of them should most largely contribute towards the Honour and Preservation of their Native Country.

Confederate Wars were maintain'd at the common Charge of all the Allies, every one being oblig'd to send a Proportion of Men ; as we find practis'd in the Trojan War, which was the first, wherein the whole Country of Greece united against a foreign Enemy. Sometimes they were carried on by public Contributions of Money, levied by Persons delegated by the common Consent of the Confederates, which was only the Practice of latter Ages ; the primitive Wars, wherein the Soldiers served at their own Expence, and supplied their Necessities out of the Spoils of their Enemies, being manag'd with less Charge to the Public. The first Tax, or Tribute of this Nature, that we find paid by the Grecians, was after the Expulsion of Xerxes out of Greece, when they agreed to make an Invasion upon their common Enemy, under the Conduct of the Athenians : For then Aristides the Athenian, at the general Desire of the Greeks, survey'd the whole Country and Revenue, and assess'd all particular Persons Town by Town, according to every Man's Ability : Thus he tax'd them four hundred Talents, to which Pericles added about a third Part more ; for we find in Thucydides, that in the Beginning of the Peloponnesian War the Athenians had coming in from their Confederates six hundred Talents. After Pericles's Death being increas'd by little and little, it was at length rais'd to the Sum of thirteen hundred Talents (b) ; all which was manag'd at the Discretion of the Athenians.

Of the different Sorts of Soldiers.

THE Armies were compos'd of various Sorts of Soldiers : Their Gros, or Main Body, usually consist'd of Footmen ; the rest rode, some in Chariots, some on Horse-back, others upon Elephants.

(b) Plutarchus Aristide.

The Foot-Soldiers we find distinguished into three Sorts; the First and Principal of which were term'd Ὀπλίται (a), being such as bore heavy Armour, engaging with broad Shields and long Spears.

2. Ψιλλοί, were Light-arm'd Men, who fought with Arrows and Darts, or Stones and Slings, annoying their Enemies at a Distance, but were unfit for a close Fight. They were in Honour and Dignity inferior to the Heavy-arm'd Soldiers; and therefore when Teucer in Sophocles quarrels with Menelaus, he is scoffingly reproved by him in this Manner.

Ὁ τοξότης ἴοικεν ἐς ἑμπερὰ φροσῖν (b).

This Archer seems to think himself to be some-body.

It seems to have been frequent for them, having shot their Arrows, to retire behind the Shields of the Heavy-arm'd for Protection; for so we find the same Teucer doing in Homer (c).

Τεῦκρος δ' εἰσας ἦλθε, παλίντωα τόξα τιταίνων,
 Στῇ δ' ἄρ' ὑπ' Αἴαντος Ἰάκκι Τελαμωνιάδαο,
 Ἐνθ' Αἴας μὲν ὑπεξίφευεν Ἰάκος· αὐτὰρ ὄγ' ἦρως
 Παπλήνης ἱππὶ ἄρ' τιν' οἰσιύσας ἐν ὁμίλῳ
 Βεβλήκει, ὃ μιν αὐθι πρὶν ἀπὸ θυμὸν ὀλισσιν.
 Αὐτὰρ ὃ ἀδθις ἰὼν, παῖς ὡς ὑπὸ μητέρα δύσκειν
 Εἰς Αἰ. αὐθ', ὃ δὲ μιν Ἰάκκι κρύπττασκε φασινῷ.

Teucer the ninth from these at length appear'd,
 And all his Bows for certain Death prepar'd;
 Behind the Shield of Ajax close he stood,
 Which whenso'er the Warlike Chief remov'd,
 Around on all he casts his angry Eyes,
 Threatning Destruction to his Enemies;
 Whom when his Arrows wounded had, or slain,
 Back he betook him to his Shield again.
 So tim'rous Boys, approaching Ills to shun,
 With eager Haste to careful Mothers run.

3. Πιλλασαί (d), tho' frequently comprehended under the Ψιλλοί, as oppos'd to the Ὀπλίται, were a middle Sort between both, being arm'd with Shields and Spears, but far inferior in Bigness to those of the Heavy-arm'd Men. The Name is taken from the narrow Shields, call'd πώλται.

The Horsemen amongst the antient Grecians were not very numerous, being only such as were possess'd of Estates, and able to furnish out Horses, at their own Charge. Hence both at Athens and Sparta we find ἵππις, or Horsemen, to have compos'd the second Order in the Commonwealth, being plac'd above the Commonalty, and next to those of the highest Quality and Fortune: The same is recorded of the Roman Equites, and (to mention no more) we are told by Hierodotus (a), that among the Chalcideans none but rich Men were admitted into that Order. Afterwards, when Men of Estates began to court Ease and Pleasure, and thought it more advisable to furnish out a Horseman, and to maintain him at their proper Expences, than to venture their own Persons; they retained indeed their former Name, but the Honour of serving on Horseback was lost (b).

Who it was that first instructed Mankind in the Art of Horsemanship, is not agreed by the antient Writers of Fables: Some attribute it to the Amazons (c), others to the Centaurs (d), others to Bellerophon (e), others, lastly (to trouble you with no more) ascribe the Honour of it to Neptune (f), the first Creator of this Animal; for which Reason we find the various Epithets ἵππιος (g), ἵππαρχος (h), ἵππογίτης (i), ἵππομαχός, &c. conferr'd upon him by the Poets and Mythologists.

Whoever oblig'd Mankind with the first Invention of this Art, seems to have left it very imperfect; for in those early Ages, 'tis probable they understood not the Method of governing Horses with Reins and Bits, but managed them only with a Rope, or Switch, and the Accent of their Voice; this we find to have been the Practice of several other Nations, as the Numidians (k), Getulians (l), Libyans, (m), and Massylians, of whom Lucan speaks thus (n),

*Et gens quæ nudo residens Masylia dorso
Ora levi flectit frænorum nescia virgâ.*

Without a Saddle the Massylians ride,
And with a bending Switch their Horses guide.

Afterwards Bridles came into Fashion, of which the most remarkable were those call'd Lupata, having Bits of Iron, not unlike Wolves Teeth, and therefore called in Greek Λύκος in Latin Lupi; whence Horace (o),

———— Gallica nec lupatis
Temperet ora frænis.

Nor with the sharper Bits
Manage the unruly Horse.

The first Invention of them is by Statius attributed to Neptune,

— *Neptunus equo, si certa priorum

Neptune, if we may Credit give to Fame,
First taught with Bits the gen'rous Horse to tame.

By others to the Lapithæ, or Centaurs, who inhabited a Town in Thessaly, call'd Pelethronium: Thus Virgil (a),

*Fræna Pelethronii Lapithæ, gyroque dedere
Imposui dorso* —————

The Lapithæ of Pelethronium rode
With Bridles first, and what their Use was shew'd.

Tho' some are of Opinion that the Poet speaks of Bridles, as invented not by the Lapithæ, but a Man of that Nation, whose Name was Pelethronius; to whom we find Pliny also attributing the Invention of Bridles, and Harnefs (b): The last of these the Greeks term σπονδα, and ἵππνια, which were made of divers Sorts of Stuffs, as Leather, Cloth, or the Skin of wild Beasts. Parthenopæus's Horse is covered with the Skin of a Lynx in Statius; Æneas's in Virgil with a Lion's (c).

Cover'd with Lion's Skin. —————

Sometimes we find them adorn'd with rich and costly Cloathing; as in the same Poet (d).

For ev'ry Trojan straight it is decreed,
That sprightly Coursers be in Order led,
Adorn'd with costly Trappings, to whose Breasts
The golden Poitrels hang. —————

Of the Saddles in use amongst us we find no mention in any antient Writers; as neither of the Stapia or more properly Subex pedaneus, or Stirrop, which does not appear to have been us'd till these latter Ages;

Ages ; there being no Notice taken of any such Thing in any Author, that I know of, before Eustathius, who flourish'd five hundred Years ago, and in his Commentaries upon Homer hath mentioned an Instrument of this Sort. In former Ages they supplied the Want of such Helps by their Art, or Agility of Body ; being able to leap on Horseback, as the Heroes in Virgil (a).

————— Corpora saltu
Subjiciunt in equos —————

And by a Leap bestride their Horses.

Or for their greater Convenience, the Horses were taught submissively to bow their Bodies to the Ground, and receive their Riders upon their Backs (b); as we find practis'd as well in Greece, as by the ancient Spaniards (c), and other Nations. Hence Silius speaks of the Horse of Clælius, a Roman Knight, in this Manner (d),

Inde inclinatus collum, submissus & armos
De more, inflexis præbebat scandere terga
Cruribus —————

Downwards the Horse his Head and Shoulders bent,
To give his Rider a more free Ascent.

Sometimes we find them leaping up by the Help of their Spears, or other Things. Several other Methods were us'd by men of weak and inactive Bodies : Some getting up on the Backs of their Slaves (e); others by the Help of short Ladders ; both which Supports were term'd ααββλῆς. Lastly, we find the Highways fill'd with Stones erected for this Purpose : which is said to have been done in Italy by Gracchus (f), and in Greece was always one Part of the Business of the Overseers of the Roads (g).

Let us now return to their Military Affairs, where we shall find it disputed, whether the Warriours of Primitive Ages were carried to the Field in Chariots, or on Horseback. Lucretius indeed tells us, that the first Heroes were mounted upon Horses, whereas Chariots were only a later Invention (h).

Et prius est repperitum in equi conscendere costas,
Et moderarier hunc frænis dextraque wigere,
Quam bejago curru belli tentare pericla.

Mounted on well-rein'd Steeds in ancient Time,
Before the Use of Chariots was brought in,
The first brave Heroes fought —————

But we are inform'd by Palæphatus, that Chariots were first in Use: the Lapithæ, who flourish'd about Hercules's Time, being the first that attempted to ride upon Horses, a Thing strange and unheard of by the Grecians in those Days, who view'd them not without Amazement, imagining them to be Monsters compounded of the different Shapes of Men and Horses, or Bulls, which they frequently back'd instead of Horses; whence we have the Fables of the Centaurs and Hippocentaurs, and 'tis more than probable, that at the Time of the Trojan War, the Custom of Riding and Fighting upon Horses was not commonly receiv'd by the Grecians; since the Heroes of Homer, whose Authority must in such Cases ever be held sacred, are always introduced into the Battle in Chariots, never on Horseback.

The Chariots of Princes and Heroes were not only contriv'd for Service, but Ornament, being richly emboss'd with Gold and other Metals; as we read of Orfines the Persian in Curtius (a) and several of Homer's as that of Rhesus (b), Ἄρμα δὲ οἱ χρυσῷ τε καὶ ἀργύρῳ εὖ ἡσκηται.

Silver and Gold his Chariot did adorn.

And another of Diomedes (c),

Ἄρματα τέ χρυσῷ πικρυκασμένα, κασσιτέρῳ τε.

Chariots richly adorn'd with Gold and Tin.

They were likewise adorn'd with curious Hangings; whence we read of Lycaon's Chariot (d),

——— ἀμφὶ δὲ πτελοῖ
πίπλυνται.

Like Wings its Hangings are expanded wide.

And the Poet calls that of Achilles ἄρματα εὖ πικρυκασμένα (e).

The Chariots in Homer are drawn for the most part by two Horses coupled together; that of Achilles had no more, the Names of his Horses being only Xanthus and Balius. So Lycaon's (f), ——— παρὰ δὲ σφῖν ἰκίστη διζυγίς ἵπποι ἔτασαν.

Two well-pair'd Steeds to ev'ry Chariot stand.

And Æneas's in Virgil (g),

To these two they sometimes added a third, which was not coupled with the other two, but govern'd with Reins, and therefore called σπράτος, σπαραφόρος, σπαράσιμος, &c. but in Homer usually σπαραγορ, and the Rein wherewith he was held in σπαραγορία. The same Custom was practis'd by the Romans, till the Time of Dionysius the Halicarnassian (a), tho' left off in Greece long before. In the eighth Iliad, Hector's Chariot seems to be drawn by four Horses; for there the Hero thus bespeaks them,

Ἰάδοι τε, καὶ ὦ Πίδαργε, καὶ Αἴθων, Λάμψι τε θε

And however some antient Criticks will have the two former to be no more than Epithets of the latter, because Hector afterwards speaks to them in the Dual Number.

Νῦν μοι τῶν κορυμβῶν ἀποτίμειται — — —

Yet it is evident from other Places, that even in Homer's Time it was customary to have Chariots drawn by four Horses; as when he tells us, the Phœacian Ship shap'd her Course, — ὡς ἐν σπιδίῳ τετραόρεσ ἵπποι (b).

Every Chariot carried two Men, whence it was term'd δίφορος, g. δίφορος (c): tho' that Word does not in its strict and proper Acceptation denote the whole Chariot, but only that Part wherein the Men were placed. One of these was call'd ἡνίοχος, because he govern'd the Reins, which in those Days was not a servile or ignoble Office, but frequently undertaken by Men of Quality; for we find Nestor (d), Hector (e), and several others of Note employ'd in it; and that not on extraordinary Occasions, but frequently, some of them making it their Profession. Yet the Charioteer was inferior, if not always in Dignity, at least in Strength and Valour to the Warrior, who was call'd παραίετης, and had Command of the other, and directed him which Way to drive, as Eustathius observes (f). When he came to encounter in close Fight, he alighted out of the Chariot, as we find every where in Homer, and the rest of the Poets. So Hercules and Cycnus about to engage,

When they were weary, which often happen'd by reason of their Armour, being heavier than any other, they retir'd into their Chariots, and thence annoyed their Enemies with Darts and missive Weapons.

Besides these, we find frequent mention in Historians of Chariots, call'd Currus falcati, and ὄπισθοφόροι, because arm'd with Hooks or Scythes, with which whole Ranks of Soldiers were cut off together. But afterwards it being consider'd they were never in any Use but in plain open Ground, and were frequently turn'd back by affrighted and ungovernable Horses upon their own Party, to its Confusion and Ruin, several Methods also being contriv'd to defeat or elude their Force, these and all other Chariots were wholly laid aside. Accordingly when Military Discipline was carried to its Height, though sometimes they were brought into Battles by Barbarians, as may be observ'd of the Persians in Curtius, yet we never find the Grecians making any use of them, or much damag'd by them; but contemning that old and unskilful Method of fighting, they chose rather to ride on Horseback, which Custom seems to have been received in a short Time after the Heroic Wars.

Of all the Grecians the Thessalians have the greatest Name for Horsemanship, and in all Wars we find their Cavalry most esteem'd. The Colophonians had once, by many remarkable Actions, arriv'd to such a Pitch of Glory, as to be esteem'd invincible: In all long and tedious Wars their Assistance was courted, and the Party that obtain'd Supplies from them, was certain of Success and Victory; insomuch that κολοφῶνα τιθέναι, and in Latin Colophonem imponere, was used proverbially for putting a Conclusion to any Affair (a). The Lacedemonians were but meanly furnished with Cavalry, and till the Messenian Wars, it does not appear that either they, or the rest of the Peloponnesians employ'd themselves in Horsemanship, but repos'd their chief Confidence in Foot (b); Peloponnesus being a mountainous and craggy Country, and therefore unfit for Horsemen (c), who in such Places become almost useless in Fight. But the Messenians being subdued, the Spartans carrying their Arms into other Countries, soon found the great Occasion they had of Horses to support and cover their Foot; and in a short Time supplied that Defect, by instructing their Youth in Horsemanship; to which End we find they had Masters in that Art, called προχαράτας (d). But the greatest Part of the Cavalry was furnish'd from Sciros (e), a Town not far distant from Sparta, the Inhabitants of which claim'd at their proper Post the Left Wing in the Lacedemonian Armies (f). Attica was likewise a hilly Country, and therefore not design'd by Nature for breeding Horses: We find accordingly the Athenian Cavalry to have been exceeding few in Number, consisting only of ninety-six-Horsemen: For the whole Athenian Nation being antiently divided into forty-eight Naucratiae, we are told by Pollux, that the Number of Horses each of these was obliged to furnish to the War, was no more than two. And therefore 'tis no wonder if the Medes thought them deprived of Reason, when at the Battle of Marathon, they had Courage to encounter a strong and numerous Army with so small, and appearingly contemptible a Force (a). Having afterwards expell'd the Medes and Persians out of Greece, and rais'd themselves to a flourishing Condition, they increas'd the Number of their Cavalry to three hundred; and not long after, having once more restor'd Peace to their City, and establish'd it in greater Power and Splendor than before, they augmented them to twelve hundred, and arm'd at the same Time an equal Number of Men with Bows and Arrows (b), of which they had before no greater Plenty than of Horses; for both then and afterwards the Strength of most of the Grecian Armies consisted in their heavy-arm'd Foot.

The Albanians admitted none to serve on Horseback, till they had undergone a strict Probation; and if any Person was found to have fraudulently insinuated himself into the Roll, upon Conviction he was declared ἀτιμος, and disfranchis'd (c). This consisted, with respect to the Men, in a Search after their Estates, and Observation of their Strength and Vigour of Body: For no Persons were enter'd into the Roll, but such as had plentiful Possessions, and were in good Plight of Body. This Probation was performed by the ἱππαρχος, General of the Horse; who, if Occasion required, was assisted by the Phylarchi, and Senate of five hundred (d). In Horses they observed their Obedience to their Riders; and such as they found ungovernable or fearful, were rejected. This was examin'd τὸ κωδωνος ψόφῳ, by the Sound of a Bell, or some other Instrument of that Nature: Whence κωδωνίζω is expounded πειραζω, to try, or prove; and ἀκωδωνίστω is the same with ἀπειραστός, unprov'd (e). Such Horses likewise as were beaten out with long Service, they branded upon the Jaw with a Mark, frequently term'd τροχός (f), being the Figure of a Wheel, or Circle; and sometimes τροσίππιον, whereby the Beast was released from farther Service. Hence ἰσιβάλλειν τροσίππιον, is to excuse. This in the following Verse of Eupolis, Ἰππῶ ὥσπερ ἴππῳ μοι ἰσιβαλὺς τροσίππιον.

Which was thus express'd by Crates, in his Comedy intitled, The Samians.

Ἰππῶ γηράσκουσι τὰ μάλιστα κύκλ' ἰσιβάλλε.

Ἀμφίπποι, sometimes by Mistake, or Corruption, called ἀνίπποι (a), were such as for Convenience had two Horses, on which they rode by Turns. They were sometimes term'd ἰππαγωγοί, διὰ τὸ ἄγειν ἵππων, because they led one of their Horses; which was not a late Contrivance, but practis'd soon after the heroical Times, as appears from Homer's (b) mentioning it:

— οὐδ' ἔμπεδον ἀσφαλὲς αἰὶν
Θρόνον ἄλλοτ' ἐπ' ἄλλον ἀμείβεται, οἱ δὲ πείρωται.

Nor does he ever fall, tho' at full Speed
He leaps from one upon the other Steed.

Διμάχαι, first instituted by Alexander the Great, were a Sort of Dragoons, and accommodated with Armour something heavier than that of ordinary Horsemen, but not quite so weighty as that of the Foot Soldiers, to the End they might be ready to serve either on Horseback or on Foot; for which Reason they had Servants attending to take their Horses whenever the General commanded them to alight (c).

They were also distinguished into καλὰφραξιοι and μὴ καλὰφραξιοι, i. e. heavy and light-armed, after the same Manner with the Footmen. The καλὰφραξιοι, or Cuirassiers, were not only fortified with Armour themselves, but had their Horses guarded with solid Plates of Brass, or other Metals; which from the Members defended by them received different Names, being called πορμύλωνιδια, παρώτια, παρήια, πορσιριδια, παραπλιριδια, παραμηριδια, παρακνημιδια, &c. (d): Sometimes they were compos'd of Skins, fortified with Plates of Metal curiously wrought into Plumes, or other Forms. Thus we find one of Virgil's Heroes arm'd his Steed (e):

*Spumantemque agitabat equum, quem pellis abenis
In plumam squamis auro conferta tegebat.*

He spur'd his gen'rous Horse, whose Cloathing was A Skin beset with Plates of Gold and Brass,
Made in the Fashion of a costly Plume.

They were likewise bedeck'd with various Ornaments, viz. with Bells, as we find Rhesus's Horse in Euripides; with Cloathing of Tapestry, Embroidery, and other curious Work; with rich Collars and Trappings, or what the Latins call Pbalerae, the Greeks Φάλαρα, which some will have to be an Ornament for the Forehead, others for the Jaws; nor are there wanting who think them to signify all the Ornaments belonging to Horses,

Of Camels and Elephants, which are so much talk'd of in the Wars of some Countries, we have no Mention in the Grecian Story before the Times of Alexander, when we find a great Number of Elephants transported from the Eastern Parts of the World. These were wont to carry into the Battle large Towers, in which ten, fifteen, and, as some affirm, thirty Soldiers, were contain'd, who annoy'd their Enemies with missive Weapons, themselves being secure, and out of Danger (a). Nor were the Beasts idle, or useless in Engagements; for beside that, with their Smell, their vast and amazing Bulk, and their strange and terrible Noise, both Horses and Soldiers were struck with Terror and Astonishment, they acted their Parts courageously, trampling under Feet all Opposers, or catching them in their Trunks, and tossing into the Air, or delivering them to their Riders (b). Nor was it unusual for them to engage with one another with great Fury, which they always doubled after they had received Wounds, tearing their Adversaries in Pieces with their Teeth (c). But in a short Time they were wholly laid aside, their Service not being able to compensate the great Mischiefs frequently done by them. For though they were endued with great Sagacity, and approach'd nearer to human Reason than any other Animal, whereby they became more tractable to their Governors, and capable to pay Obedience to their Instructions; yet being sore wounded, and press'd upon by their Enemies, they became ungovernable, and frequently turn'd all their Rage upon their own Party, put them into Confusion, committed terrible Slaughters, and deliver'd the Victory to their Enemies; of which several remarkable Instances are recorded in the Historians of both Languages.

C H A P. III.

Of the Grecian Arms and Weapons, with their Military Apparel.

THE Authors of Fables tell us, the first Person that put on Armour was Mars; who perhaps for no other Reason was honour'd with the Title of God of War; it being very frequent with the ancient Heathens gratefully to acknowledge their Obligations to the first Contrivers of any profitable Invention, by inserting them into the Number of their Deities, and decreeing to them the perpetual Care and Sovereignty of those useful and ingenious Arts or Contrivances, whereof they were the first Authors. The Workman employ'd by Mars was Vulcan, at that Time a Master Smith in the Isle of Lemnos, and so eminent in his Profession, that Posterity advanc'd him among the Gods, and honour'd him with the Superintendency and Protection of his own Trade : But his own Countrymen the Lemnians were not so fortunate ; for they stand represented to all Ages as common Enemies of Mankind, and branded with Characters of Infamy for that execrable and pernicious Device. Whence the Poets have fix'd upon them the Name of Σίντις, to continue the Memory of the Harm they did to Mankind. Thus Homer (a),

Ἔρδ' μὲ Σίντις ἄνδρες ἄφ' αἶος κομισαίνο πειρώλα·

Turn'd out of Heav'n the Lemnians me receiv'd.

Their Country likewise was call'd Σιντή, as we find in Apollonius (b), Εἰς σὶν' ἀφανήν Σιντήδα Λῆμνος ἵκοιτο.

To Lemnos, otherwise Sintis call'd,
They sail'd.

From the same Original are deriv'd those common Proverbs, Λήμνια κακὰ, great and intolerable Evils : Λήμνια χεῖρ, a fatal or mischievous Hand ; and Λήμνιος βλέπειν, to have a cruel and bloody Look (c). Tho' some will by no means allow this Character to have been given to the Lemnians for their Invention of Arms, but rather for the frequent Piracies and Outrages committed by them upon Foreigners, or for other Reasons : Whereas they tell us, that Liber, or Bacchus, was the first that introduced into the World the Use of Weapons (d).

The Arms of all the primitive Heroes were composed of Brass, as appears from Homer, who is herein follow'd as well by the ancient Poets, both Greek and Latin, as all other Writers that give Account of those Times. Pausanias hath endeavour'd to prove this by a great Number of Instances (e) : 'Tis reported in Plutarch (f), that when Gimon, the Son of Miltiades, convey'd the Bones of Theseus from the Isle of Scyros to Athens, he found interr'd with him a Sword of Brass, and a Spear with a Head of the same Metal. More Examples would be superfluous, since we are expressly told by Hesiod, that there was no such Thing as Iron in those Ages : but their Arms, all Sorts of Instruments, and their very Houses were made of Brass (g).

Τῷ δ' ἦν χάλκια μὲν τεύχη, χάλκεοι δὲ τὶ οἶκοι ;
Καλκῷ δ' εἰργάζοντο, μέλας δ' ἔκ' ἔσκει σιδήρεος.

Not yet to Men Iron discover'd was ;
But Arms, Tools, Houses were compos'd of Brass.

And in later Ages, when the World was acquainted with the Use of Iron, the Artificers and their Occupation still retained their old Names. Thus we are told by Aristotle (a), that χαλκίς denotes an Iron Smith: And (to trouble you with no more Instances in a Thing so commonly known) Plutarch (b) applies the Word ιχαλκίσας to the making of Iron Helmeta.

Some of their Arms were composed of Tin, especially their Boots, as we read of Achilles's in the eighteenth Iliad. This Metal was likewise frequently us'd in other Parts of their Armour, as appears from Agamemnon's Breast-Plate (c), and Aeneas's Shield (d).

Several other Metals were made use of: Gold and Silver were in great Esteem among them; yet the most illustrious Heroes used them only as graceful Ornaments: They, whose whole Armour was composed of them, are usually represented as more addicted to effeminate and delicate Arts, than manly Courage and Bravery. Glauco's Arms were indeed made of Gold, but the great Diomedes was content with Brass. Amphimachus, who entered into the War with Golden Weapons, is compared by Homer to a trim Virgin (e).

Νάηκε, Ἀμφίμαχος τε, Νομίονος ἀγλαὰ τέσσα, ὅς κ' ἤ χρυσὸν ἔχον ποδάρκην δ' ἰὼν ἔειπε κέρη.
 Νῆπιός, ἔδδ' ἐπὶ τοῖς γ' ἐπὶ κέρησι λυγρὰν ὄλεθρον,

 Like some trim Girl, does Nomion's Son prepare,
 The vain Amphimachus; but not that Show,
 Nor Pomp could ward off the unerring Blow;
 But by Æacides depriv'd of Life,
 His Arms were seiz'd by the more skilful Chief. H. M.

In like manner the Persians, having given themselves over to Softness and Pleasure, engag'd with the rough Grecians, richly adorn'd with Gold and Jewels, and became an easy Prey to them. The Grecian Heroes, tho' not so unpolish'd, as to debar themselves the Use of these Ornaments, yet were not so excessively profuse of them, nor applied them to the same Ends and Purposes: Achilles's Shield, so curiously engraved by Vulcan, is a Lecture of Philosophy, and contains a Description of almost all the Works of Nature. The Arms of other valiant Princes are frequently adorn'd with Representations of their noble Exploits, the History of the Actions of their Ancestors, or Blessings receiv'd from their Gods; or fill'd with terrible Images of Lions, or Dragons, and render'd bright and shining, to strike Terror and Amazement into their Enemies, according to that of Homer (a);

ὄσσοι δ' ἀμείβετο
ἀντὶ χαλκῆςιν.

Th' amazing Lustre terrify'd the Sight.

So 'tis reported of our British Ancestors, that they painted themselves with divers Forms of Animals, thinking thereby to appear more terrible to their Enemies,

The ancient Greeks were always armed, thinking it unsafe to adventure themselves abroad without a sufficient Defence against Aggressors. Hence Aristotle hath rationally inferred, That they were a barbarous and uncivilized Nation: For being educated in the deepest Ignorance, and having very little Sense of that Justice and Honesty, to which all Men are obliged by Nature's eternal and immutable Sanctions, being also in a great measure without the Restraint of human Laws, all Persons thought they had a just Title to whatever they could by any means take into Possession, which they had no other Method to secure, but that whereby they obtain'd it, and resign'd their Claim whenever a more potent Adversary exhibited his Pretensions. The Seas were filled with Pirates, the Land with Robbers, who made a Prey of whatever came to their Hands, and frequently made Incursions into Countries, which they spoil'd and depopulated, and, if their Force was great enough, drove out the Inhabitants, and compelled them to seek new Seats. By Men of this Profession, Io, Europa, Ganymedes, and many others, were stolen; which put Tyndarus in such a Fear for his Daughter Helén, that he caus'd all the young Princes that made their Addresses to her, to bind themselves by a solemn Oath to recover her, if ever she should be convey'd away. The Sea, we are inform'd by Thucydides (b), was freed from Piracies by Minos King of Crete, who with a powerful Navy maintain'd for many Years the Sovereignty of it. But the Land was still infested; and therefore when Theseus design'd to make his first Journey from Træzen to Athens, Plutarch tells us, that his Relations would have persuaded him to go by Sea. For (says he) it was at that Time very dangerous to travel by Land to Athens, no Place of the Country being free from Thieves and Murderers; For that Age produced a Sort of Men, for Strength of Arms, Swiftness of Feet, and Vigour of Body, excelling the ordinary Rate of Men, and in Labours and Exercises indefatigable; yet making use of these Gifts of Nature to nothing good or profitable to Mankind; but rejoicing and taking Pride in Insolence, and pleasing themselves in the Commission of barbarous and inhuman Cruelties, in seizing by Force whatever fell into their Hands, and practising upon Strangers all Manner of Outrage; who imagined that Civility, and Justice, and Equity, and Humanity, (which they thought were commended by many, either for want of Con-rage to commit Injuries, or Fear of receiving them) nothing at all to concern those who were most daring and strong (a). Of these indeed Hercules and Theseus, and other generous and public-spirited Princes, in a great measure freed the Country: But before that, 'twas not to be wonder'd if the Grecians always wore Arms, standing upon their Guard, especially since in those Days few of them were united into large Towns, but lived retiredly in Country Seats, or at the best in small and defenceless Hamlets. This Custom was first laid aside at Athens, the Occasion and Necessity thereof being first removed in that City (b): For Historians generally agree, that the Athenians entertained the decent Rules of Civility and Humanity, were modelled into a regular Form of Government, and enjoy'd the Happiness of wholesome and useful Laws, before the rest of the Grecians. Afterwards a Penalty was laid by Solon upon those who wore Arms in the City without Necessity (c); that having in former Times been the Occasion of frequent Murders, Robberies and Duels. On the same Account was made the following Law of Zaleucus, Μηδὲνα Φορεῖν ὄπλα ἐν τῷ βουλευτηρίῳ, That no Person should bear Arms in the Senate.

Let us now return to the Description of the Grecian Arms, which are distinguished into two Sorts, some of them being contrived for their own Defence, others to annoy their Enemies. The primitive Grecians, we are told (d), were better furnished with the former, whereas the Barbarians were more industrious in providing the latter; the Generals of these being most concern'd how to destroy their Enemies, whilst the Grecians thought it more agreeable to the Dictates of human Nature to study how to preserve their Friends: For which Reason Homer always takes care to introduce his brave and valiant Heroes well armed into the Battle, and the Grecian Lawgivers decreed Punishments for those that threw away their Shields, but excused those that lost their Swords or Spears; intimating hereby, that their Soldiers ought to be more careful to defend themselves, than to offend their Enemies (e).

First let us take Account of their Defensive Arms, as fitted to the several Members of the Body, beginning at the Head, which was guarded with an Helmet, called in Greek περικεφαλαια, κράνος, κόρυς, &c. This was sometimes composed of Brass or other Metals, as Menelaus's in Homer:

αὐτὰρ ἐπὶ σιφάνῃ κεφαλῇφιν αἶψας
Θηκαῖο χαλκίῳ.

He put his Head-piece on, compos'd of Brass.

And very frequently of the Skins of Beasts, which gave occasion to those different Appellations, derived from the Names of Animals, whereby it is signified in Homer, as ἐκιδίῳ, ταυρίῳ, ἀλώπηκι, λεωτίνῳ, αἰγίῳ, αἰγίη, and others, of which none is more common than κυνίη, which was composed of a Dog's Skin: Eusebnius tells us 'twas ποταμό-κυν, a Water-Dog, and was so frequently used by the Ancients, that we find it sometimes taken for the Name of an Helmet, tho' consisting of another Sort of Matter. Thus Homer (a):

— ἀμφὶ δὲ οἱ κυνίη κεφαλῆφι ἴθυσ
Ταυρίην —

He put on's Helmet of a Bull's Hide made.

These Skins were always worn with their Hair on; and to render them more terrible and frightful, the Teeth were frequently placed grinning on their Enemies. Thus the Soldier in Virgil (b):

*Ipse pedes tegmen torquens immane leonis,
Terribili impexum seta cum dentibus albis,
Indutus capiti, sic regia tella subibat.*

He shakes his Lion's Skin, whose grisly Hair
And dreadful Teeth create in all a Fear:
Thus having fortify'd his Martial Head,
The Royal Roof he enters.

Homer likewise arms Ulysses in the same Manner (c):

— ἀμφὶ δὲ οἱ κυνίη κεφαλῆφι ἴθυσ
Ρυῖ σπειντήν, πολλὰ δ' ὑποσθῆν ἱμάσιν
Ἐπὶ τὰτο γινῶς, ἔκτοσθε δὲ λευκοὶ ὀδόντες
Ἀργυρόδοι· ὡς θαρμὴς ἔχον ἰῖθα κ' ἰῖθα;
Εὐ κ' ἰπταμένους· μίσση δ' ἐν πίνεσσι ἀρήρη.

His Leathern Helmet on his Head he plac'd,
Whose Inside with the strongest Thongs was lac'd;
But all the outward Parts were fortify'd
With the white Teeth of Boars.

The Fore-part of the Helmet was open, for the Heroes all enter'd into the Battle with Faces uncover'd. To the Side was fix'd a String, whereby it was tied to the Warrior's Neck. This was term'd ὄχις, whence Homer speaks of Paris thus (d):

Ἄλχι δὲ μιν πολέμετος ἱμάς ἀπαλὴν ὑπὸ διρῆν,
Ὅς οἱ ὑπ' ἀνθρῶντος ὄχις τίταλο τρυφαλῆς.

The well-wrought String, which ty'd his Helmet on Under his Chin, now choak'd the Champion.

Some of its Parts receiv'd their Names from the Members guarded by them, as ὀφρύς, that Part which cover'd the Eyebrows, and the rest in like manner. The little Lappet erected over the Brow was by a metaphorical Term call'd γνίσω, the Pent-house. But the most remarkable of all the Parts in the Helmet was its Crest, term'd φάλο, and λόφος (a), which was first us'd by the Carians (b), and thence call'd by Alcaus, Κυρικὸν λόφος;

Λόφον τε Γείων Κυρικόν.

Shaking his Carian Crest.

For the Carians were once famous for Military Exploits, and oblig'd the World with this, and several other Inventions: Hence we are told by Thucydides (c), that it was customary for them to deposit a little Shield and an Helmet in the Graves of their Dead. Some will have φάλο to be distinguish'd from λόφος, that signifying the Cornus, this the Plume fix'd to it (d); but others allow no Difference between them. The former of these was compos'd of various Materials, most of which were rich and chargeable, being design'd as an Ornament to the Helmet. The other likewise was adorn'd with divers Sorts of Paint, whence Pollux gives it the Epithets of σινδόη, ὑπερδυσσεαφής (e). Homer has enrich'd it with Gold (f):

Τούτῃ δὲ οἱ κόρυθα βριαρὴν προτάφους ἀραρυῖαν
Καλῇ, δαιδαλίῃ, ἐπὶ δὲ χρύσειον λόφον ἔκει.

A strong and trusty Helmet next he made,
Which when he'd rightly seated on his Head,
The curious parti-colour'd Golden Crest
In beauteous Form he o'er the Helmet plac'd.

One of Virgil's Heroes has his whole Helmet of Gold, and his Crest painted with red (g).

Streak'd with large Spots of white the Thracian Steed

The Crest was for the most part of Feathers, or the Hair of Horses Tails or Manes; whence we read of λόφος ἱπποχαΐτης, κόρυς ἱπποδίομα, ἱππεύς. Thus Homer (b),

Like some bright Star the crested Helmet shone ;
The gilded Hairs, which Vulcan round the Cone
Had plac'd, where all in sportful Order mov'd.

The common Soldiers had only small Crests ; the great Officers, and all Persons of Quality, were distinguish'd by Plumes of a larger Size, and frequently took a Pride in wearing two, three, or four together. Suidas will have Geryon to have been famous in Poetry for three Heads, on no other Account, but because his Helmet was adorn'd with three Crests. Kirgil describes Turnus's Head-piece after the same Manner (a), adding also to it the Figure of a Chimera,

*Cui triplici crinita juba galea alia Chimera
Sustinet* —————

Whose triple-crested Helmet did sustain
A terrible Chimera.

This Helmet was called τρυφάλεια ; when it was surrounded with two Plumes ἀμφίφαλος ; and when adorned with four, τετράφαλος. Thus Apollonius (b) :

Τετράφαλος φοίνικι λόφῳ ἱπιδάμπετο σήληξ.

A four-fold Plume with dazzling Lustre shone,
Whose nodding Top o'erlook'd the dreadful Cone.

The Design of these was to strike Terror into the Enemies ; whence that of Homer (c).

— διὸν δὲ λόφος καθόπερβιν ἴουν.

For the same Reason Pyrrhus, King of Epirus, beside a lofty Crest, wore Goat's Horns upon his Helmet (d). We are told indeed by Suidas, that the τρίχυσσις, or Crest itself, was sometimes term'd κέρας. Nevertheless some of the ancient Helmets had no Crest or Cone at all. This Sort was call'd καταῖτυξ, as we learn from Homer (e),

— ἀμφὶ δὲ οἱ κύνῃ κεφαλῇφιν ἔθηκε

Ταυρίην, ἄφαλόν τε καὶ ἄλοφον, ἣ τι καταῖτυξ

Κίλῃται. —————

His Bull-skin Helmet on his Head he plac'd, Καταῖτυξ call'd, 'cause without Cone or Crest.

Other Sorts of Ornaments were us'd in Helmets, as in that call'd ————

— ὕδ' ῥεφάν δ' ὀνυ χυθε χαλκοβαρεία.

Nor cou'd his Helmet made of solid Brass

Ward off the Blow——

Of all the Grecian Helmets the Boeotian is said to have been the best (c). The Macedonians had a peculiar one term'd καυσίη, which was compos'd of Hides, and serv'd instead of a Cap to defend them from the Cold, according to the Epigram in Suidas,

*Καυσίη, ἢ τοιαύτη Μακεδόνων εὐκλον ὄπλον,
Καὶ χρίτας ἐν νηφτῇ, καὶ κάρως ἐν παλίμῳ.*

Were I to chuse what Armour I would have,
No Helmet forg'd in brawny Vulcan's Cave,
Nor Bear's, or Lion's grizly Skin I'd crave;
But an old broad-brim'd Macedonian Cap,
Whose spacious Sides should round my Shoulders wrap.
Thus all Attacks with greatest Ease I'd bear;
As well the Storms of Weather, as of War. } H. H.

Pliny attributes the first Invention of Helmets to the Lacedaemonians (d), as likewise of the Sword and Spear: But this must be understood only of the peculiar Sorts of those Weapons us'd at Sparta; other Kinds of them being known before the first Foundation of the Spartan Government, or Nation.

The Heroes prided themselves in wearing for their Defence the Skins of wild Beasts, which they esteemed Badges of their Prowess. Instances of this Kind are every where to be met with in the Poets. Hence Theocritus (e):

*Ἀνταρ' ὄντι νύκτωρ καὶ αὐχένος ἡμεῖτο
Ἄγρην δέρμα λιόντος ἀφ' ἡμίνων ἐκ ποδίωνων.*

Over his Neck and Back a Lion's Skin was thrown Held up by 't's Feet——

Hercules's Lion's Skin is very famous in Story, and Homer's great Princes are frequently introduced in the same Habit; in Imitation of whom the other Greek and Latin Poets have arm'd their Heroes. Thus Aeneas in Virgil (f).

But we find they were not ashamed of using better and stronger Armour for their Defence, the ordinary Sorts of which were these that follow:

Μίτρη, made of Brass, but lin'd with Wool, and worn next to the Skin, underneath the Coat of Mail. This we learn from Homer speaking of a Dart that pierc'd thro' the rest of the Hero's Armour, but was so blunted by the μίτρη (a), that it only ras'd his Skin:

Αὐτὴ δ' αὖτ' ἴδμεν ὅτι ζωγῆρος ὀχῆς.
Χρύσειοι ὑπὸ χροῦ καὶ διπλὸς ἦν αἰὲλ. θώρηξ,
Ἐν δ' ἐπιστὶ ζωγῆρι ἀρήρετι μικρὸς οἰστός.
Διὰ μὲν δὲ ζωγῆρος ἱληατο δαιδαλίοιο,
Καὶ διὰ θώρηκος πολυδαίδαλου ἡθήρειο,

She to that Part the deadly Shafes convey'd,
Where meeting Clasps a double Breast-plate made;
Straight on his Belt it fell, nor there cou'd stay,
But thro' both Belt and Breast-plate forc'd its Way;
And now his last Hopes, the well-lin'd Brass,
Which against Darts his surest Refuge was,
It ras'd, but could not thro' it make a perfect Pass.

Ζώνη, or ζωγῆ, reach'd from the Knees to the Belly, where it was join'd to the Brigandine (b). But the latter of these Names is more frequently taken for the Belt surrounding the rest of the Armour. Thus Homer (c):

Λύσι δέ οἱ ζωγῆρα παταίολεον ἔδ' ἐπίπλεβι
Ζώνη τέ, καὶ μίτρη τῶν χαλκῆς κάμον ἀνδρῶν.

His rich embroider'd Belt he then unbrac'd,
And all his Armour underneath it plac'd,
Which by the Hands of skilful Smiths were made.

This was so essential to a Warrior, that ζώνεσθαι came to be a general Name for putting on Armour (d): Whence Homer introduces Agamemnon commanding the Grecians to arm themselves thus (e).

The same Poet, when he makes that Hero resemble the God of War in his ζώνη, is supposed (as Pausanias (a) tells us) to mean his whole Armour. The Romans had the same Custom, as appears from Plutarch (b): And it prevail'd also amongst the Persians; whence Heredotus relates, how Xerxes having reach'd Abdera, when he fled from Athens, and thinking himself out of Danger, διὰ δούρι τὴν ζώνην; perforated himself (c). But ζώνη is a more general Name than ζώνη, and signifies the μύτην.

Θώραξ consisted of two Parts, one of which was a Defence to the Back, the other to the Belly; the extreme Parts of it were cou'd σπίρην, the Middle γυμνάς (d). The Sides were coupl'd together with a Sort of Buttons (e). The same may be observ'd in Silius (f) of the Roman Lorica, which differ'd not much from the Grecian Thorax, whence Θώραξ is by Hesychius expounded Λωρίκιον.

Lorica strabro laxata resoluatur isu.

ἡμιθώρακιον was an Half thorax, or Breast-plate, which Pollux tells us was first invented by Jason; and we find it very much esteem'd by Alexander, who, as Polyenus (g) reports, considering that the entire Θώραξ might be a Temptation to his Soldiers to turn their Backs upon their Enemies, those being equally guarded by it with their Breasts commanded them to lay aside their Back-pieces, and arm themselves with ἡμιθώρακια, Breast-plates; that so whenever they were put to Flight, their Backs might be expos'd naked to their Enemies. The Thoraces were not all compos'd of the same Stuff; some were made of Lime, or Hemp twisted into small Cords, and close set together; whence we read of Thoraces balices, and trilices, from the Number of Cords fix'd one upon another. These were frequently us'd in Hunting, because the Teeth of Lions, and other wild Beasts, were unable to pierce thro' them, sticking in the Cord; but not so often carried into Battles, as Pausanias observes (h): Yet there are not wanting Instances of this Sort, for Ajax the Son of Oileus has the Epithet of ἡμιθώραξ in Homer (i).

Ajax the Less a Linen Breast-plate had.

Alexander likewise is reported by Plutarch to have worn Θώρακα Λωρίδι λίαν διπλῶν, or a double-twisted Linen Thorax: And Iphicrates caus'd his Soldiers to lay aside their heavy and unwieldy Brigandines of Iron, and go to the Field in Hempen Armour, as Cornelius Nepos hath inform'd us in his Life of that Captain. The ordinary Matter the Thoraces were made of, was Brass, Iron, or other Metals, which were sometimes so exquisitely harden'd as to be Proof against the greatest Force. Plutarch (a) reports, that Zoilus an Artist, having made a Present of two Iron Brigandines to Demetrius Poliorcetes, for an Experiment of their Hardness, caus'd an Arrow to be shot out of an Engine call'd Catapulta, plac'd about twenty-six Paces off; which was so far from piercing the Iron, that it scarcely rais'd, or made the least Impression on it. This Armour was of two Sorts; one of which, because it consisted of one or two continued Pieces of Metal, and was inflexible, and able to stand upright, was term'd ῥάπαξ ῥάδιον, or ῥάδιον (b). The other was composed of a Beast's Hide, according to the Poet.

—— τῷ δὲ ῥάπαξ· Ἰχόριον.

Whence the Latin Word Lorica is thought to be deriv'd from Lorum. This was set with Plates of Metal in various Forms; sometimes in Hooks, or Rings, not unlike a Chain; sometimes resembling Feathers, or the Scales of Serpents, or Fishes; to which Plates or Studs of Gold were often added: Whence we read of ῥάπαξ ἀννοιδωτοί, ἀννοιδωτοί, φολιδωτοί, &c. And the Greek and Latin Poets frequently mention them. Thus Silius (c) speaking of the Consul Flaminius;

*Loricam induitur, tortos huic nexilis bamos
Ferro squama rudi, permistoque asperat auro.*

Virgil arms his Heroes after the same Manner (d);

—— Rutulum thoraca indutus, abenis
Horrebat squamis —— ——

Dress'd in his glitt'ring Breast-plate, he appear'd
Frightful with Scales of Brass.

The single Plates being sometimes pierc'd thro' by Spears, and misfive Weapons, it was customary to strengthen them by setting two, three, or more, upon one another. Thus Statius (e),

—— ter insuto servant ingentia ferro
Pectora ——

With triple Plates of Iron they defend Their Breasts.

And in another Place (a),

Whence in the same manner as from the Number of Cords, they were term'd bilices, and trilices; in Greek, διπλοῖ, & τριπλοῖ. Virgil (b), Loricam confertam hamis, aureque trilicem.

The three fold Coat of Mail beset with Hooks and Gold.

Κνημῖδες, Ocreæ, were Greaves of Brass, Copper, or other Metals to defend the Legs. Whence Hesiod (c), Homer frequently composeth them of Tin (d);

Τινῆς δὲ οἱ κνημίδας ἰανῷ κασσινίτιοιο.

He made his Greaves of beaten Tin.

The Sides were generally clos'd about the Ankles with Buttons, which were sometimes of solid Gold or Silver, as we have it in the same Poet (e);

Κνημίδας μὲν ἀνῶτα περὶ κνήμῃσιν ἴθηκε
Καλὰς, ἀργυρείοισιν ἐπισφύριοις ἀρπυρίας.

The curious Greaves he round his Ankles clos'd
With Silver Buttons.

It is probable, that this Piece of Armour was at first either peculiar to the Grecians, or at least more generally used by them than any other Nations; because we find them so perpetually call'd by the Poet, ————— ἰσκήμιδας Ἀχαιοί.

Χεῖρες were Guards for their Hands, which we find also to have been used by some of them, with other Defences for their Arms,

Ασπίς, a Buckler. This was first used by Prætor and Acrisius of Argos (a). It was sometimes composed of Wicker woven together, according to Virgil (b):

———— flectuntque salignas
Umbonum crates ————

The Buckles they of Osiers make.

Whence it is term'd ἱρίη (c). It was likewise made of Wood; and because 'it was expedient that the Warriors should be able with the greatest Ease to wield it, they usually chose the lightest sort of Wood for this Use, as the Fig, Willow, Beach, Poplar, Elder-Trees, &c. as we are inform'd by Pliny (d). But it was commonly made of Hides; whence we find so frequent mention of ἀσπίδες βόειαι. These were doubled into several Folds, and fortified with Plates of Metal. Ajax's Buckler was composed of seven Folds of Hide, and cover'd with a single Plate of Brass, as we read in Homer (e):

———— Ἄχ. αἶολον ἰπταόσιον
Ταύρων ζατρεφίων, ἐπὶ δ' ὄγδοον ἤλασε χαλκόν.

Made of the Hides of seven well-fatted Bulls,
And cover'd with a Plate of Brass

Achilles's was guarded with three Folds more, as the Poet tells us,

———— Ἔ. αἰ, Ἔ proxima rupit
Terga novena boum, decimo tamen orbe moratum est.

It pierc'd the Brass, and thro' nine Hides it broke;
But could not penetrate the tenth.

But the same Hero's in Homer was more strongly fortified by two Plates of Brass, two of Tin, and a fifth of Gold (f):

———— πέντε πλῆχας ἤλασε Κυλλοποδίου,
τάς δ' αὖ χαλκείας· δύο δ' ἰσοδοὶ κασσίδμοιο,
τὴν δὲ μίαν χρυσῶν ————

For with five Plates Vulcan is fortify'd,
With two of Brass, two Tin, and one of Gold.

The principal Parts of the Buckler were these:

Ἀσπίς, ἴσος, περιφέρεια, or κύκλος, the utmost Round, or Circumference.

Ομφαλός.

Ομφαλὸς and μισομφαλίων, in Latin Umbo, a Bos jutting out in the Middle of the Buckler, upon which was fixed another protuberant Part termed ἱσομφαλίων. This was of great Service to them, not only in glancing off, and repelling misfire Weapons, but in bearing down their Enemies. Whence Martial has this Allusion :

In turbam invideris, cunctos umbone repellat.

Should you be in a Crowd, your Slave
Wou'd with his Bos repel them all.

Ταλαμὴν was a Thong of Leather, and sometimes a Rod of Metal, reaching cross the Buckler, whereby they hung it upon their Shoulders, according to the primitive Fashion (a) : Whence Homer (b), αὐτὰρ ἀπ' ὤμων

Λοπιδὶ σὺν ταλαμῶνι χαμᾶι σίσι τιρμύισσά :

Down from his Shoulders the huge Buckler fell
With its loos'd Theng.

It was sometimes called κλῆν, except this may be understood of the Rod to which the ταλαμὴν was fasten'd, as Hesychius expounds it, which seems most probable ; and that κλῆνις were Rods whereby the Bucklers were held (as Homer's Scholiast reports) but ταλαμῶνις, the Thongs affixed to them, and hung upon the Warrior's Shoulders, tho' Eustathius will have them to have been put to the former Use, and to be the same with κλῆνις (c). Sometimes the Bucklers were held by little Rings call'd πόρπακες, but at length most of the Greeks used an Handle called ἔχασος, or ἐχάση, which, tho' sometimes spoken of with the former Names, and explained by them, was really different from both, being invented by the Carians (d), and, as 'tis commonly thought, composed for the most part of small Iron Bars, placed cross each other, and resembling the Letter χ (e). When the Wars were ended, and the Bucklers, (as was customary) hung up in the Temples of the Gods, they took off the Handles, thereby to render them unfit to serve in any sudden Insurrection : Whence Aristophanes introduces a Person affrighted, when he saw Bucklers hanging up with Handles,

Ὁ μοι τάλας, ἔχασι γὰρ πόρπακας.

O sad ! The Bucklers Handles have.

Which another had also found fault with a little before ;

(d) Etymologicæ Auctor, Homeri Scholiastæ, &c. (e) Eustathius, loco citato.

Οὐ γὰρ ἔχρη, ἢ περὶ φιλῶν τὸν δῆμον, ἐκ ἀρεσίας
Ταῦτα; ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ πορπαξίᾳ ἀνατιθεῖται.

Æschylus speaks of little Bells hung upon Bucklers to strike Terror into the Enemy :

— ἀπ' ἀσπίδος δὲ τῷ
Χαλκῆλαϊοι πλάτυσσι κτύπης φέρον.

Most of the Bucklers were curiously adorned with all Sorts of Figures of Birds and Beasts, especially such as were of generous Natures, as Eagles, Lions, &c. Nor of these only, but of the Gods, of the Celestial Bodies, and all the Works of Nature ; which Custom was derived from the Heroick Ages, and continued in later Times, being (as Herodotus (a) reports) first introduced by the Carians, and from them communicated to the Grecians, Romans, and Barbarians.

The Grecians had several Sorts of Bucklers, the most remarkable of which seem to have been those of Argos, which are thought to be bigger than the rest ; whence Virgil compares them to Polypheme's monstrous Eye, which he tells us was (b),

Argolici clypei, aut Phœbeæ lampadis instar.

Like an Argolick Buckler, or the Sun.

Most indeed of the ancient Bucklers seem to have cover'd the whole Body ; whence Virgil (c), — clypeique sub orbe teguntur.

Under their Bucklers cover'd close they stand.

Tyræus enumerates the Members protected thereby,

Μυρῆς τε, κνήμας τε κάτω, καὶ γένυα, καὶ ὄμους
Ἀσπίδος ἐνείης γαστρί καλυψάμενοι.

Thighs, Legs, and Breast, Belly and Shoulders too
The mighty Buckler cover'd.

This farther appears from the Custom of carrying dead Soldiers out of the Field upon their Bucklers ; whence we read of the famous Command of the Spartan Mothers to their Sons, ἢ τας, ἢ ἐν τὰς, i. e. Either bring this (meaning the Buckler) or be brought upon it ; meaning, they should either secure their Bucklers, or lose their Lives in defending them (d). And Homer for the same reason calls them ἀντι-δός

(d) Plutarchus

δαι ἀμφιγύρας, and σιδωμικῆ, which Eustatbius interprets ἀνδρομέδους, i. e. of the same Size with a Man (a).

Their Form was usually round, whence Virgil's clypei orbis, and the frequent Mention of ἀσπίδες κύκλοι, σφαιροειδῆς, &c. Hence the utmost Circumference was called περίεστος, as hath been already observed.

There were likewise Shields of lesser Sizes, and other Forms, the Use of several of which was later than the Heroick Ages.

Ῥάβδος, or ῥάβδος, was squar'd, like the Figure Romulus, and first used by the Persians (b).

Θυρίς was oblong, and usually bending inward: It seems to have been the same which is call'd in Pollux (c) ἀσπίς κοίλη ἐπιρρομένη.

Λαιονίον seems to have been shap'd like the former, and compos'd of Hides with the Hair, whence Grammarians derive it from λαίον, i. e. hairy. It was very light, whence (as Eustatbius (d) observes) Homer gives it the Epithet εὐρύον :

— — — ῥάβδος
 Ἀσπίδες σφαιροειδῆς, λαονίον τε σφαιροειδῆ.

Πάξ, was a small and light Buckler in the Form of an Half-Moon (e), or, according to Xenophon, resembling an Ivy-leaf, and first used by the Anaxens. But Suidas will have it to be a kind of Four-square Buckler, wanting the Trus, or exterior Rising.

This was the chief of all their Arms: The Regard they had of it appears both from what has been already observ'd concerning their Care in adorning and preserving it; and from the common Story of Epaminondas, who having receiv'd a mortal Wound, and lying under the Agonies of Death, with great Concern enquir'd whether his Buckler was safe (f). Cabrias the famous Athensian, when his Ship was sunk, rather chose honourably to resign his Life with his Buckler, than leaving it to escape to another Vessel (g). Military Glory indeed being esteem'd the greatest that human Nature was capable of, they had a profound Regard for all sorts of Arms, which were the Instruments whereby they attain'd it; whence to leave them to their Enemies, to give them for a Pledge, or dispose of them any dishonourable Way, was an indelible Disgrace both in Greece (h), and at Rome, and scarce ever to be aton'd for.

Thus have I endeavour'd to give you a Description of the principal of the Grecian Defensive Arms, which are in general term'd ἀσπιδία, σπιντορέν, and σφολδαμάλ.

The only Offensive Arms used by the Ancients, were Stones, or Clubs, and such as rude Nature furnish'd them with. They were wholly ignorant of all those Arts and Contrivances to destroy their Enemies, which Necessity and Thirst of Glory afterwards introduced into the World. Thus Horace describes the Fights of those wild and uncultivated Ages :

*Unguibus & pugnis, dein sustibus, atque ita porro
Pugnabant armis, quæ post fabricaverat usus.*

Sharp Nails and Fists the first Arms only were;
Then Clubs came into Use, next Men took care
To make more hurtful Weapons.

Lucretius hath an elegant Passage to the same Purpose (a) :

*Arma antiqua manus, ungues, dentesque fuerunt,
Et lapides, & item silvarum fragmina, rami,
Et flammæ atque ignes, postquam sunt cognita primum;
Posterior ferri vis est, ærisque reperta:
Sed prius æris erat quam ferri cognitus usus.*

In the first Ages, Nails, Hands, Teeth would please
A Combatant for Arms, and Boughs of Trees;
Or Stones, or flaming Brands with Anger thrown,
Were then the best, and chiefest Weapons known:
Men afterwards in Mischief wiser far
Us'd Iron and Brazen Arms in ev'ry War.
Of these Brasses first began to kill.

E. D.

These Clubs were call'd Φάλαγγες and Φαλαγγίαι; whence Grammarians conjecture that Squadrons of Soldiers were termed Φάλαγγες (b), and by the Latins, Phalanges; from this primitive Way of Fighting.

The principal of their Offensive Weapons in later Ages was ἄλχιον and δόρυ, Spear or Pike, the Body of which was composed of Wood, in the Heroic Times most commonly of Ash; whence we have so frequent Mention in Homer of μύλας, as when he speaks of Achilles's Spear (c) :

*Πηλεΐδα μύλιν, τῇ πατρὶ φίλῃ πόρτι Χείρων
Πηλὶς ἐν κορυφῇ, φόνον ἔμμεναι ἔρπεισσι.*

The Ashen Spear for Murder then design'd,
When to his Father with a cruel Mind
Old Chiron gave it.

The Trojans were likewise armed from the same Tree (d) :

Καὶ Πριάμῳ, ἢ λαὸς ἱυμμελὶν Πριάμοιο.

The Head, αἰχμή, was of Metal. So was also the σαυσωτήρ, which is so called either q. γαυρῶταξ, from γαυρός, a Cross; or from σαῦρος, a Lia Lizard, which it is said to have resembled, being hollow at one End, where it was fixed into the Bottom of the Spear; and sharp at the other (a), which being thrust into the Ground upheld the Spear erect, when the Soldiers rested from the Toil of War. Whence Homer, speaking of Diomedes's Followers (b) :

— ἀμφὶ δ' ἱταῖροι
Εὐδὼν, ὑπὸ κρασὶν δ' ἔχον ἀσπίδας, ἦρχον δὲ σφιν
Οἳ δ' ἐπὶ σκευῶν ἰσχυρὰ ———

Sleeping about him all his Men they found,
Under their Heads were laid along the Ground
Great Shields, their Spears erected upright stood Upon their Brazen Points.

Aristotle observes, that the same Custom was practised amongst the Illyrians in his Days (c). And it seems to have been common in other Nations, as may appear from the First Book of Samuel (d), where Saul is said to have slept with his Spear fix'd in the Earth close by his Head. In Times of Peace they rear'd their Spears against Pillars, in a long wooden Case called δυροδίκον, as we have it in Homer (e) :

Ἐλχῶ δ' μὲν ἔστησι φέρον πρὸς κίονα μακρὸν
Δυροδίκου ἵπποδου ἰσχυρὰ ———

Against his Pillar in a well-made Case,
He hung his Spear.

Virgil speaks something to the same Purpose (f) :

*Exin quæ in mediis ingenti adnixa columnæ
Ædibus astant, validam vi corripit bastem.*

Straight he pulls down with all the Force he cou'd
A Spear, that in the Middle of the House
Was rear'd against a mighty Pillar.

There are two Sorts of Spears, as Strabo hath well observ'd (g); The former was us'd in close Fight, and call'd ἀγρὸν ὄνυχον, for the Use and excellent Management of which the Albantes are celebrated in Homer (h);

Τὸ δ' αὖτ' Ἀλβανίης ἱπποδὸν οὖσι, ὅππῃ πομπῶντις,
Λιχμύται, μεμύηται ὄνυχον μέλιχρον
Θόρυκος ἔχων δαίτω ἀμφὶ γυμνασίῳ.

Th' Abantes follow'd him, whose bushy Hair
Lies thick behind; Abantes, who never fear
Close Fights, but bravely strike the Breast-plates through With Athen Spears.

Where may be observ'd the Signification of the Word ἰσχυροί, which (as the Scholiast remarks) is applied to Arms used in close Fight; whereas μακρὰ belongs rather to missile Weapons, which are call'd by the general Names of μακρὰ, and βέλη, of which Kind was the other Sort of Spears: Whence we find one making this Boast,

Δυσὶ δ' ἀκονίζω ὅσω καὶ ἄλλος τις ὄντω.

I strike as far with a Spear, as another with an Arrow.

This was frequently us'd in the Heroick Duels, where the Combatsants first threw their Spears, and then made use of their Swords. Thus Hector and Achilles (a), Meneleus and Paris (b), and the rest of the Heroes attack one another. Theocritus hath described the Combat of Casor and Lyncus after the same manner (c);

Ἐχιστοὶ μὲν ἀνέστιμα τίνασκάμωαι πόνον ἰσχυρῶς, ἀλλὰ δὲν εἴ ποτε τὴν χροὸς γυμνὰν ἴδωαι.
Ἀλλ' ἦτοι τὰ μὲν ἄκρα, πάρος τε καὶ δαλῆσασθαι,
Δὲρ ἰάγη, σακίισσιν ἐν δινούσιν παλίστα.
Τὸ δ' ἄρ' ἐκ κοίμοις ἱρυσσάμεναι, φόνον αὖθις
Τεύχεω ἐπ' ἀλλήλοισι, μάχης δ' ἐγὼ γίγν' ἱερῆ.

First with their Spears began the noble Strife,
Each sought to find an open Pass to Life;
But all in vain, the Shields the Strokes endur'd,
Their Spears were broken, and the Men secur'd;
Their Swords they drew, the Blades like Lightning shone,
Before the Thunderbolt falls swiftly down;
Now rose their Fury.

Mr. Creech.

The Macedonians had a peculiar sort of Spear called σάμισσα, which was fourteen or sixteen Cubits in Length.

Ξίφος, a Sword, which according to antient Custom was hung in a Belt put round the Shoulders, Whence Homer (d);

Ἀμφὶ δ' ἄρ' ὤμοισιν βάλλειο ξίφος ἀργυρόηλον.

His Silver-hilted Sword, about his Shoulders hung.

Hesiod

(a) Iliad l. (b) Iliad γ'. (c) Idyll 28, v. 129. (d) Iliad 8.

Hesiod and the rest of the Poets mention the same Custom (e) ;

Θηαισω δὲ μιν ἀμφὶ μιλανθίου ἀορ' ἔπειτο
Καλκίω ἐκ τιλαμῶν

————— A Brazen Sword
Plac'd in the Belt, down from his Shoulders hung.

The Belt reach'd down to their Thighs. Whence Homer's Hero (δ) ; ————— φάσγανον ἐξ ἱρυσσάμην· παρὰ μηρῶ.

Straight from his Thigh his Sword he draws.

And Virgil's Aeneas (c) ;

————— ——— ecus ensem
Eripit à femore—————

It may be enquired whether the Sword was hung upon the Right Side, or the Left ; to which some reply, that Foot-Soldiers wore it on the Left, Horsemen on the Right ; and Josephus (d) expressly mentions Horsemen with their Swords on the Right Sides : But whether this was constantly observ'd, or frequently vary'd, as Lipinus (e) has observ'd of the Roman Sword, cannot easily be determined. The Scabbard was call'd κολός ; close to it was hung a Dagger, or Ponyard, call'd τὸ παρὰ μηρὸν ; παρὰμηρῶν, or παρὰζωνῶν ξιφίδων ; according to Eusebius (f) παρὰξιφίδων, or ἰσιφιδίων, and in Homer, μάχαιρα. It was seldom us'd in Fight, but on all Occasions supplied the Want of a Knife, as appears from the Poet, out of whom I shall only set down this one Instance (g) :

Ατρίδης δὲ ἱρυσσάμεν· χεῖρσσι μάχαιρας,
Ἡ οἱ παρὰ ξίφος μέγα καλὸν αἶν' ἀέσπε,
Ἀρῶν ἐκ κεφαλῶν τὰ μιν τρίχας

Drawing his Dagger, which was always put Close by his Sword, Atrides straightway cut
Some Hairs from the Lambs Heads.

Poëdonius in Atheniensis tells us, the same Custom was practis'd by the ancient Gauls (b). Close by this, or rather instead thereof, the Soldiers of lower Ages used a Dagger call'd ακμαῖος, which was borrowed from the Persians (i). They had sometimes another Sword call'd κοπίς, which was the same with the Roman Ensis puleatus, and our Faulchion, or Scimeter, and was chiefly used by the Inhabitants of Argos. Not much unlike this were the Lacedæmonian Swords, call'd, according to Pollux, ξύβαι, but, as Xenophon, ξύβαι, and by the Athenians, κρίσις (a). They were bent Faulchion-like, and in Length far less than those commonly used in other Parts of Greece: The Reason of which Custom being demanded of Antalcidas; ῥίς (said he) because we encounter the Enemies Hand to Hand (b): And when another Person told Agésilas in Derision, That a juggler on a Stage would make nothing of swallowing their Swords; Well (reply'd the King) yet with these little Weapons we are able to reach our Enemies (c). The only thing further remarkable in the old Grecian Sword, is the Hilt, which they took a great Pride in adorning, not so much with Silver and Gold, and precious Stones, as with Figures of Lions Heads, &c. to make them appear more terrible to their Enemies.

Αξίνη, a Sort of Pole-ax. With this Weapon Agamemnon was encounter'd by Pisander in Homer (d):

— — — — — δ' ὑπ' ἀσπίδος εἶλετο καλὴν
Αξίνη ἰσχυράν, ἰλαίῳ ἀμφὶ πτελέῳ,
Μακρῷ ἰστίῳ — — — — —

The other from his Buckler straightway drew
 A curious Brazen Axe, whose Handle few
 Could match for Length, for Olive, or for Work.

Πέλις, was not much different from the former, and is join'd with it in Homer (e):

Ἄλλ' οἳ γ' ἐγυῖον ἱάμενοι, ἵνα θυμὸν ἔχοντες,
Οἷσι δὲ πτελέεσσι, καὶ ἀξίῃσι μάχοντο.

Both Parties fighting close together stood,
 And unconcern'd alike for Loss of Blood,
 Axes and Hatchets us'd,

Several other Weapons of less Note may occur in Authors; whereof I shall mention only one more, and then proceed to the missile Weapons: It is κορύν, a Battoon of Wood or Iron; from the Use of which the famous Robber Periphetes, slain by Theseus, was named κορυήτης (f); which Title was likewise conferred upon Arcitobus; who, as Homer tells the Story, used to break through whole Squadrons of Enemies with his Iron Club (g):

Τεύχῃ ἔχον ὅμοιον Ἀργυρόροιο ἄνακτος,

 'The Arms of King Arctibous before ;
 Godlike Arctibous, Club-bearer nam'd,
 And for his cruel Weapon greatly fam'd,
 Who with his Club whole Squadrons put to Flight,
 But never Spear or Arrow us'd in Fight. E. D.

Τόξον, the Bow ; the first Invention of which some ascribe to Apollo, who from the Art of managing this Weapon hath obtain'd divers Appellations, as ἰκνέολον, ἰκαλνδελίτης, ἰκαίον, τοξοφόρον, χρυσότοξον, ἀργυρότοξον, εὐφάρετης, &c. All which, tho' moral Interpreters force to other Applications, yet the ancient Authors of Fables refer to this Original. This new Contrivance the Gods communicated to the primitive Inhabitants of Crete (a), who are reported to have been the first of Mortals who understood the Use of Bows and Arrows (b) : And even in later Ages the Cretan Bows were famous, and preferred to all others in Greece (c). Some rather chose to honour Perses, the Son of Persus, with this Invention ; and others father it upon Scythes, the Son of Jupiter (d), and Progenitor of the Scythians, who were excellent in this Art, and by some reputed the first Masters thereof : Thence we find it deriv'd to the Grecians, some of whose ancient Nobility were instructed by the Scythians, which in those Times pass'd for a most princely Education. Thus Hercules (to trouble you with no more Instances) was taught by Teutarus a Scythian Swain, from whom he receiv'd a Bow and Arrows of Scythian Make : Whence Lycophon, speaking of Hercules's Arrows, Τοῖς Τευταρίοις βυκόλῳ περιώμασι (e).

With Arrows which he had from Teutarus,

And though Theocritus had chang'd his Tutor's Name into Eurytus, yet he also was of Scythian Original : And we find the Hero in that Poet arm'd with a Mæotian, i. e. Scythian Bow (f) :

Πήχτο Μαιωτικῇ λαβῶν ὑψαμπνία τόξα :

He went arm'd with a crooked Bow after the Mæotian Fashion.

Lycophron also arms Minerva with Μαιώτης πλόκος, a Mæstian Bow, and in the same Place speaks of Hercules's Scythian Dragon; whereby he means a Bow, which he bequeath'd to Philoctetes for his Care in kindling the Pile wherein he was burnt alive (a).

Drawing her Arrows with a skilful Hand,
She aim'd, and shot with a Mæstian Bow,
This crooked Bow the God-like Hercules,
Whose Arrows when they flew wou'd always kill,
First us'd, and then to Philoctetes gave,
A Present for the Pile at Dara's Banks.

E. D.

Both the Poets seem particularly to remark the Incurvations of the Scythian Bow, which distinguished it from the Bows of Greece, and other Nations, and was so great as to form an Half-Moon, or Semi-circle (b). Whence the Shepherd in Atthis (c) being to describe the Letters in Thebes's Name, and expressing each of them by some opposite Resemblance, compares the third to the Scythian Bow;

Σκυθικῷ δὲ τέξῃ τὸ τρίτῳ ἢ παραμφακῇ.

The third was like a Scythian Bow.

Meaning not the more modern Character Σ, but the ancient C, which is semicircular, and bears the third Place in ΘΗCΕΥC. The Grecian Bows were frequently beautified with Gold or Silver; whence we have Mention of aurei arcus, and Apollo is called ἀργυρότοξος; but the Matter of which they were compos'd seems for the most part to have been Wood; tho' they were anciently Scythian-like, made of Horn, as we read of Pandarus's in Homer (d);

Αὐτὰ ἰσούλα τέξῃσι τέξουσιν, ἰζάων αἰγῶν
Αγρίῳ ἢ ῥέ. ποτ' αὐτὰς ὑπὸ γέροντι τυχεύσας,
Πίτῃσι ἐκβαίνοντα διδύμηι' ἢ προδοκῇσι,
Βιβλῆκει πρὸς στήθεσ', ὃ δ' ὕψι' ἔμπροσθεν στήθεσσι.
Τὸ κίρα ἐκ κεφαλῆς ἐκκαίδιχαδῶρα σιφύκει,
Καὶ τὰ μὲν ἀσκήσας κεραξέσθ' ἔφασι τέκτων,
Πάν δ' ἰὺ λειψας, χρυσὴν ἐπέθηκεν κορύναν.

Straight

(a) Cassandr. v. 914.

(b) Ammianus Marcellinus, lib. XX.

(c) Lib. X.

Straight he pulls out an handsome polish'd Bow,
Once in a wanton He-goat's Horn did grow ;
A Goat, that coming from his wonted Rock
He spy'd, and wounded with a mortal Stroke :
The Dart pierc'd thro' his Breast, and straight the Ground
Receiv'd him falling by so deep a Wound :
Long were his Horns, and these a Workman wrought,
And made the very Bow with which he fought :
The Horn he smoothly polish'd, and affix'd
A Golden Knob upon the Top.

E. D.

Whence Lycophron, who affects antiquated Customs and Expressions, speaks thus of Apollo encountering Idas with his Bow (a) ;

— ἰς χάρματα ἱερώας κίρας.

— In Battles bent his Horn.

But some ancient Glossographers by κίρας would rather understand τριχους, or the Bow-string, which was composed of Horses Hair, and therefore call'd also ἵππεια (b) : To which Custom Accius alludes,

Reciproca tendens nervo equino concita
Tela — — —

Drawing the Arrows with an Horse's Hair.

Homer's Bow-strings are frequently made of Hides cut into small Thongs : Whence we read of τόξα βόια.

Εἰς δ' ἰμῷ γλαφίδας τε λαβὼν, καὶ τόξα βόια.

He drew the Arrow by the Leathern String ;

As Eustathius observes upon that Place (c). One Thing more is remarkable in their Bows : It is that Part to which the String was fix'd, being upon the uppermost Part of the Bow, and call'd κορυμή, commonly made of Gold, and the last Thing towards finishing a Bow : Whence Homer, when he has describ'd the Manner of making a Bow, adds after all — χρυσῇ ἐπιθήκας κορυμήν.

Hence Eustathius tells us, χρυσῇ ἐπιτιθέναι κορυμήν signifies to bring any Affair to a happy Conclusion.

The Arrows usually consisted of light Wood, and an Iron Head, which was commonly hooked : Whence Ovid (d),

Et

(a) Cassandra. v. 564.
(d) De Amor.

(b) Hesychius.

(c) Iliad. v. p. 344. Ed. Basil.

Et manus hamatis utraque est armata sagittis.

Hook'd Arrows arm'd both Hands.

Sometimes they were arm'd with two, three, or four Hooks : Hence Statius (a) :

Aspera tergemini acies se condidit uncis.

The Head with three Hooks arm'd Enter'd his Body.

In this Sense likewise Hippocrates's τρεπάρηνα βίλη are to be understood. The Heads of Arrows were sometimes besmear'd with Poison : for which Piece of inhuman Skill Virgil's Amycus was famous (b) :

— ferarum

Vaslatorem Amycum, quo non felicius aliter Ungere tela manu, ferrumque armare veneno.

— Amycus the Man,

Who many a wild and savage Beast had slain,
Fam'd for his Skill, and for his wond'rous Art
In giving double Force to any Dart,
Or Arrow, with his Poison.

This Practice was more frequent in barbarous Nations, but seldom us'd or understood in Greece : Wherefore Minerva in Homer, having assumed the Form and Titles of Mentes, King of the Taphians, and Son to Anchialus, pretends that her Father, out of an extraordinary Love to Ulysses, oblig'd him with a Quantity of this deadly Ointment, after he had been at the Pains of a tedious Journey to Ephyra, to furnish himself ; but had been denied it by Ilus, the Son of Mermernus, who (as the Poet tells us) rejected Ulysses's Request out of a Scruple of Conscience, being afraid that Divine Vengeance would prosecute so criminal an Action (c) :

Εξ Εφύρης αἰνία παρ' Ἴλου Μερμερίδαο.

Ὡχέλο γὰρ κακίῳ δόξ' ἐπὶ νόσ' Ὀδυσσεύς, φαρμακὸν ἀνδροφόνον διζήμενος, ὅφρα οἱ εἴη ἀλλὰ παταγεῖ οἱ δάκν' ἰμός, φιλέεισι γὰρ αἰνῶς.

— When he had Ilus left

Return'd from Ephyra ; in hopes to find
Some Poison he for Arrows Heads design'd,

Ulysses thither sail'd : Ilus rever'd

He found Anchialus, who straight took care
To give the killing Poison which he ask'd,
For dearly well he lov'd him.

E. D.

Arrows were usually wing'd with Feathers, to increase their Speed and Force ; whence Homer's ἀλκίους ἰδς (a) ; ἀλκίους ἰγδς (b) ; Oppian's ἰγδς φιδυλίουξ (c), and ἰγδς (d) ; Sophocles's ἰδς κομήτης (e) ; with divers other Epithets and Names to the same Purpose (f). They were carried to the Battle in a Quiver, which was usually clos'd on all Sides, and therefore as (Eustathius (g) observes) joined with the Epithet ἀμφημφός. This with the Bow the Heroes carried upon their Backs : Thus Apollo in Homer (b) :

Τὸξ' ἀμωισα ἔχων, ἀμφημφία τι φασίτην.

Carrying his Bow and Quiver on his Shoulders.

Hercules is represented by Hesiod in the same Manner (i) :

—ποῖλόν δὲ περὶ ῥῆθισσι φασίτην καθεσάλετ' ἐξέτιθεν, πολλοὶ δ' ἴπποσθον οἴσεν Πυγχαῖ, θανάτοιο λαδιόφθογιος δοτήρης.

—towards his Back

He turn'd the hollow Quiver, which contain'd
Great Shafts, whose Force no Mortal yet sustain'd,
And did not straight expire.

Likewise the famous Heroine in Virgil (k) :

Aureus ex humero sonat arcus & arma Dianæ.
The Golden Bow and Arrows loosely hung
Down from her Shoulders.

In drawing Bows the primitive Grecians did not pull back their Hand towards the Right Ear, according to the Fashion of modern Ages, and of the ancient Persians (l) : but, placing their Bows directly before them, return'd their Hand upon their Right Breast (m) ; which was the Custom of the Amazonian Women, who are reported to have cut off their Right Breasts, lest it should be an Impediment to them in shooting ; on which Account their Name is commonly thought to have been deriv'd from the privative Particle α and μαστός, i. e. from their Want of a Breast. Thus Homer of Pandarus (n),

Νεφέη

Νιυρὴν μὲν μαζῶν στήλασιν, τέξην δὲ στήθεσιν.

Up to the Head the mortal Shaft he drew,
The Bow-string touch'd his Breast.

There were several Sorts of Darts, or Javelins, as ῥιόσφοι, call'd in Homer αἰγυρίην (a), ὑσσός, and many others; some of which were projected by the Help of a Strap girt round their Middle, and call'd in Greek, ἀγκύλη, in Latin, amentum: The Action is express'd by the Word ἀγκυλίσσασθαι, which is also sometimes used in a more general Sense for any Sort of Darting, tho' without Straps. The Javelin thus cast was term'd μισάγκυλος. The Custom is mention'd in the Roman as well as Greek Writers: Whence Seneca in his Hippolytus,

*Amentum digitis tende prioribus,
Et totis jaculum dirige viribus.*

The Strap with your Fore-finger draw,
Then shoot with all your Strength.

The ancient Grecians were wont to annoy their Enemies with great Stones. Thus Agamemnon in Homer (b);

Αὐτὰρ ὁ τῶν ἄλλων ἐπιπυλῖτο σίχας ἀνδρῶν,
Εἰγγύτ', ἄορι τι, μεγαλοσί.τι χειρμαδίσιον.

But he to other Ranks himself betook,
And here his Spear, his Sword, and Stones too struck
The flying Enemy.

These were not Stones of an ordinary Size, but such as the joint Strength of several Men in our Days would be unable so much as to lift. With a Stone of this Bigness Diomedes knocks down Aeneas in Homer (c):

————— ὁ δὲ χειρμαδίον λαβὼς χερσὶ
Τυδιδῆς, μέγα ἔργον, ὃ ἔδν' ὅ γ' ἀνδρὶ φέροιεν
Οἷοι τῶν βροτοῖ ἐῖς, ὃ δὲ μιν ῥέα παλὰς κ' οἷον
Τῷ βάλεν Αἰνείας κατ' ἰσχίον —————

————— a vast and monstrous Stone
The brave Tydidēs took and threw alone;
A Stone it was, so heavy and so great,
Not two the strongest Men cou'd bear the Weight,
As now Men are; but he with Ease it hurl'd,
And broke Aeneas' Hip.

Ajax

(a) Enschelius, Odysf. 8. (b) Iliad. λ'. v. 264. (c) Iliad. ε'. ver. 302.

Alex likewise and Heber encounter'd one another with the same Weapons; and the latter (as the Poet tells us) had his Buckler broken with a Stone scarce inferior in Bigness to a Mill-stone (a);

Εἶλον δ' ἀντιδ' ἑαὶ βάλον μύλονδ' ἄντρον.

A Stone so big, you might a Mill-stone call,
He threw, which made the Shield in Pieces fall.

Nor did the Gods themselves disdain to make use of them; as appears from Homer's Minerva, who attack'd the God of War with a Stone of a prodigious Size, which had been in former Ages placed for a Land-mark (b);

Ἢ δ' ἀναχαισσάμην, λῆθον εἶδατο χερσὶ πατρὶς ἐν
Κύμῳ ὅ σιδῶν, μέλας, τρηχὺν τι, μέγαν τι,
Τὴν δ' ἄνδρ' ἑσπερος δίσσας ἱμῖναι ἔρον ἀνέρος.
Τῷ βάλε θυρὸς Ἀρηά κατ' αὐχένα, λῦσε δὲ γῆνα.

—where stepping back,

A Stone, that long had lain to part the Land,
She forces up with her commanding Hand;

A sharp, black, heavy Stone, which, when 'twas thrown,
Struck Mars's Neck; the helpless God falls down
With this ring Limbs.

Virgil has elegantly imitated some of these Passages in his twelfth Æneid (c), where he speaks of Turnus in this Manner:

*Nec plura effatus, saxum circumspicit ingens,
Saxum antiquum, ingens, campo quod forte jacebat
Limes agro positus, litem ut discerneret arvis:
Vix illud læti his sex cervice subirent,
Qualia nunc hominum producit corpora tellus:
Ille manu naptum trepida contorsit in bustum
Altior insurgens, et cursu concitus Heros.*

He spake no more, but straight a Stone he spy'd,
An old prodigious Stone, which to divide
The Lands there lay, lest Quarrels might ensue,
And one should claim what was another's Due.
Should fix the lustiest Men together try
To bear this Stone, it would their Strength defy;
So weak, so frail the Bodies that Men wear,
Such puny Men as now on Earth appear:
He snatch'd it up, and running on him threw
This massy Stone.

On

(a) Iliad, d. v. 270.

(b) Iliad, φ. x. 403.

(c) V. 896.

On all which Relations, several modern, especially French Criticks, insult with Triumph, imagining them grossly absurd and ridiculous; whilst forming what they call Rules of Probability from the Manners of their own Times, there is scarce any Passage in all the Volumes of ancient Poetry, which does not, on some Stone or other, foully disgust their curious and distinguishing Palates.

But however the heroic Fights were carried on in this Manner, as most of the ancient Poets witness; yet in nearer Ages, when they tell us Men's Strength and Courage were lessen'd, but their Policy and Conduct improv'd, we seldom find any Mention of Stones, except in Sieges, where the Defenders frequently roll'd down vast Rocks upon their Enemies Heads. They were likewise cast out of several Engines, of which the most common in Field Engagements was,

Squandern, a Sling: which, we are told by some, was invented by the Natives of the Balearian Islands, where it was managed with so great Art and Dexterity, that young Children were not allow'd any Food by their Mothers, till they could sling it down from the Beam, where it was plac'd aloft (a); and when they arriv'd to be of Age to serve in the Wars, this was the principal of their offensive Arms; it being customary for all of them to be furnish'd with three Slings, which either hung about their Necks, according to Eustathius (b); or were carried, one on their Necks, one in their Hands, a third about their Loins (c). Hence the Balearian Slings are famous in ancient Writers. I observe this one Instance only out of Quid (d):

*Non secus exarfit, quam cum Balearica plumbum
Funda jacit; volat illud, & incandescit cuncta.
Et quos non habuit, sub nubibus invenit ignes.*

— He burnt within,
Just like the Lead the Balearian Sling
Hurls out; you hear the Bullet whistling fly,
And Heat attends it all along the Sky,
The Clouds the Fire, it wants itself, supply.

E. D.

It was likewise common in Greece, especially among the Acaruanians (e), who were well skilled in managing it, and are by some thought to have invented it: Others give that Honour to the Ætolians (f). But none of the Grecians managed it with so great Art and Dexterity as the Achaians, who inhabited Ægium, Dyma, and Patra: They were brought up to this Exercise from their Infancy (g), and are thought by some to have excell'd the Balearians: Whence

(a) Vegetius de re militari, lib. I. cap. XIV. Lucius Florus, lib. III. cap. VIII.
Diodorus Siculus, lib. V. Strabo, lib. III. (b) Commentario in Dionysium. (c)

Pollux, lib. I. cap. X. (f) Strabo. (g) Livius, lib. XXXVIII.

Whence it became a Custom to call any Thing directly levell'd at the Mark Αχαιὴν βλάθ (a). This Weapon was us'd for the most part by the common and light-arm'd Soldiers: Cyrus is said to have thought it very unbecoming any Officer (b); and Alexander, endeavouring to render his Enemies as contemptible to his own Soldiers as he could, tells them, "They were a confus'd and disorderly Rabble, some of them having no Weapon, but a Javelin; others were design'd for no greater Service, than to cast Stones out of a Sling, and very few were regularly arm'd (c)." The Form of a Sling we may learn from Dionysius, by whom the Earth is said to resemble it, being not exactly spherical, but extended out in Length, and broad in the Middle; for Slings resembled a platted Rope, somewhat broad in the Middle, with an oval Compass, and so by little and little decreasing into two Thongs, or Reins. The Geographer's Words are these (d);

Οὐ μὲν πάντα διαπρὸ περιδρομος, ἀλλὰ διαμφίς
 Εὐρυτέρῃ βεβαιοῦα πρὸς ἡλίσιον κελεύθεις,
 Σφιδόνη ἰόικυϊα—————

Its Matter seems not to have been always the same; in Homer we find it compos'd of a Sheep's Fleece; and therefore, one of the Heroes being wounded in the Hand, Agenor binds it with his Sling (e);

Αὐτὴν (sc.) χεῖρα δὲ ξυνέδησεν ἑσφιδόνη οἷς; αὐτῷ,
 Σφιδόνη, ἣν ἄρα οἱ θεράπων ἔχει ποιεῖν λαόν.

A Sling of Wool he to his Hand apply'd,
 One of his Servants held it.

Out of it were cast Arrows, Stones, and Plummets of Lead, call'd μολυβδῆες, or μολυβδῖναι Σφαῖραι, some of which weigh'd no less than an Attic Pound, i. e. an hundred Drachms. It was distinguish'd into several Sorts; some were managed by one, others by two, some by three Cords.

The Manner of Slinging was by whirling it twice or thrice about their Head, and so casting out the Bullet. Thus Mexentius in Virgil (f):

Ipse ter adducta circum caput egit habena.

Thrice round his Head the loaded Sling he whirl'd.

But Vegetius commends those as the greatest Artists, that cast out the Bullet with one Turn about the Head. How far this Weapon carried its Load is express'd in this Verse,

Fundum

(a) Suidas. (b) Xenoph. Cyropæd. lib. vii. (c) Curtius, lib. iv.
 (d) Περὶ γῆς. v. 5. (e) Iliad. v. 599. (f) Æneid. ix. v. 587.

Fundum Varro vocat, quem possis mittere funda.

Its Force was so great, that neither Head-piece, Buckler, or any other Armour was a sufficient Defence against it; and so vehement its Motion, that (as Seneca reports) the Plummets were frequently melted.

Lastly, we find Mention of Fire-balls, or Hand'-granado's, call'd πυροβάλλοι λίθοι, &c. One Sort of them are call'd Χυλίσια, or Χυταλίδες, which were compos'd of Wood, and some of them a Foot, others a Cubit in Length: Their Heads were arm'd with Spikes of Iron; beneath which were plac'd Torches, Hemp, Pitch, or such like combustible Matter, which being set on Fire, they were thrown with great Force towards the Enemy's first Ranks, Head-foremost, whereby the Iron-spikes being fasten'd to whatever came in their Way, they burn'd down all before them (a): Wherefore they seem to have been of the greatest Use in Leaguers, to demolish the Enemy's Works; tho' my Author mentioneth no such Thing.

Concerning Military Apparel, nothing certain or constant can be related; only it may be observ'd, that Lycurgus order'd the Lacedæmonians to cloath their Soldiers with Scarlet. The Reason of which Institution seems either to have been, because that Colour is both soonest imbib'd by Cloth, and most lasting and durable (b): Or on the Account of its Brightness and Splendor, which the Law-giver thought conducive to raise Men's Spirits, and most suitable to Minds animated with true Valour (c); or, lastly, because 'twas most proper to conceal the Stains of Blood, a Sight of which might either dispirit the raw and unexperienc'd Soldiers of their own Party, or inspire their Enemies with fresh Life and Vigour (d): Which Eusebius observes to have been well and wisely consider'd, when he comments on that Passage of Homer, where the cowardly Trojans, upon seeing Ulysses's Blood flow from his Wound, receive new Courage, and animating one another, rush with mighty Force upon the Hero (e);

Τρῶες δὲ μεγάθυμοι, ἰ. σὶ ἴδον αἷμ' Ὀδυσῆος,
Κακλόμενοι καθ' ὅμιλον, ἐκ' αὐτῷ πάντες ἔπασσαν.

———The Trojans saw Ulysses's Blood

Gush from his Wounds; then with new Life inspir'd,
Each stirr'd the other up, and with joint Force
Rush'd on the Hero.

'Tis farther remarkable of the Lacedæmonians, that they never engag'd their Enemies, but with Crowns and Garlands upon their Heads (f), tho' at other Times they were unaccustomed to such Ornaments: Hereby ascertaining themselves of Success, and, as it were, anticipating their Victory, Crowns being the ordinary Rewards presented to Conquerors in all Parts of Greece. So wonderful, indeed, were the old Lacedæmonians Courage and Fortune, that they encounter'd their Enemies fearless and unconcern'd, joining Battle with Assurance of Victory; which was a Thing so common to them, that for their greatest Successes they seldom sacrific'd to the Gods any more than a Cock: Nor were they much elevated when the happy News arriv'd, nor made Presents of any Value to the Messengers thereof, as was usual in other Cities: For, after the famous Battle of Mantineæ, we find the Person, that carried the Express of Victory, rewarded only with a Piece of powder'd Beef (a).

The Soldiers usually carried their own Provisions, which consisted, for the most Part, of Salt-meat, Cheese, Olives, Onions, &c. To which End every one had a Vessel of Wickers (b), with a long, narrow Neck call'd γίλιον, whence Men with long Necks are by the Comedians term'd in Derision γολιανχίται; (c).

CHAP. V.

Of the Officers in the Athenian and Lacedæmonian Armies.

THE Grecian Cities being govern'd by different Laws, the Nature and Titles of Offices, whether in Military or Civil Affairs, must of Consequence be distinguished. Wherefore it being an endless Undertaking to recount the various Commands throughout the whole Grecian Nation, I shall only present you in this Place with a short View of the chief Offices in the Athenian and Lacedæmonian Armies.

In the primitive Times, when most States were govern'd by Kings, the supreme Command belong'd to them of course; and it was one principal Part of their Duty towards their Subjects, to lead them forth in Person against their Enemies, and in single Combat to encounter the bravest of them at the Head of their Armies. And it may be observ'd, that when any Prince, thro' Cowardice, or other Weakness, was judg'd unable to protect his People, it was customary for them, withdrawing their Allegiance, to substitute a Person better qualify'd in his Place: A memorable Instance whereof we have in Thymætes, an Athenian King, who, declining a Challenge sent by Xanthus King of Bæotia, was deposed without farther ado, and succeeded by a Foreigner, one Melanthus a Messenian, who undertook to revenge the Quarrel of Athens on the Bæotians (d).

Yet

(a) Plutarchus Agesilao. (b) Aristophanis Scholiastes Acharnens. (c) Paccv.
(d) Vide Actæ. leg. nostr. Lib. II. cap. XX. in Απατεύρια.

Yet on some Occasions it was not impracticable for the King to nominate a Person of eminent Worth and Valour to be his ἡγεμὼν, or General, who either commanded under the King, or when the Emergency of other Affairs requir'd his Absence, supply'd his Place: Which honourable Post was conferr'd by King Erechtheus upon Ion, the Son of Xuthus, in the Eleusinian War (a).

But, the Government being at length devolv'd upon the People, Affairs were managed after a new Method: For, all the Tribes being invested with an equal Share of Power, 'twas appointed that each of them should nominate a Commander out of their own Body. That this was done in the Time of Cimon, appears from Plutarch (b). But whether each of the Tribes perpetually made choice of one of their own Body, or sometimes nam'd Men of other Tribes, is not very certain. No Person was appointed to this Command, unless he had Children and Land within the Territory of Athens (c). Those were accounted Pledges to the Commonwealth: And sometimes the Children were punish'd for the Treason of their Fathers. Which, tho' seemingly cruel and unjust, was yet Antiquum & Omnium Civitatum, an ancient Custom, and receiv'd in all Cities, as Cicero hath observ'd (d). He gives us in the same Place an Instance in Themistocles's Children, who suffer'd for the Crimes of their Father. Hence Simon in Virgil, pretending to have quitted the Grecian for the Trojan Interest, speaks thus of his Children (e):

*Quos illi fors ad pœnas ob nostra reposcent
Effugia, et culpam hanc miserorum morte piabunt.*

To return to our Subject. The Nomination of the Generals was made in an Assembly of the People, which on this Occasion was conven'd in the Pnyx, and frequently lighted upon the same Persons, if they behav'd themselves with Courage and Prudence, and executed their Office for the Safety and Honour of their Country; inasmuch that 'tis reported of Phocion, that he was a Commander five and forty Times, tho' he never sued or canvas'd for that Honour, but was always promoted by the free and voluntary Choice of the People (f). Before their Admission to Office, they took an Oath of Fidelity to the Commonwealth, wherein one Thing is more peculiarly remarkable, viz. That they oblig'd themselves to invade the Megarians twice every Year: Which Clause was first inserted in the Oath by a Decree preferr'd by Charinus, on the Account of Anthemocritus, an Athenian Herald, whom the Megarians had barbarously murder'd about the Beginning of the Peloponnesian War (g). This done, the Command of all the Forces, and warlike Preparations, was entrusted in their Hands, to be employ'd and manag'd as they judg'd convenient: Yet was not their Power absolute, or unlimited, it being wisely order'd, that; that upon the Expiration of their Command, they should be liable to render an Account of their Administration: Only, on some extraordinary Occasions, it seem'd fit to exempt them from this Refraining, and send them with full and uncontrollable Authority, and then they were stil'd Αυτοκράτες (a): Which Title was conferr'd on Aristides, when he was General at the famous Battle of Plataea; upon Nicias, Alcibiades, and Lamachus in the Sicilian Expedition, and several others (b). These Commanders were Ten, according to the Number of the Athenian Tribes, and all called Στρατηγοί, being invested with equal Power; and about the first Times of their Creation frequently dispatch'd all together in Expeditions of Concern and Moment, where every one enjoy'd the supreme Command by Days. But, lest in controverted Matters, an Equality of Voices should retard their Proceedings, we find an eleventh Person join'd in Commission with them, and call'd Πολέμαρχος, whose Vote, added to either of the contesting Parties, weigh'd down the Balance, as may appear from Herodotus's Account of the Athenian Affairs in the Median War. To the same Person the Command of the left Wing of the Army belong'd of Right (c).

But afterwards it was look'd on as unnecessary, and perhaps not very expedient, for so many Generals to be sent with equal Power to manage Military Affairs: Wherefore, tho' the ancient Number was elected every Year, they were not all oblig'd to attend the Wars; but one, two, or more, as Occasion required, were dispatch'd to that Service: The Polemarchus was diverted to civil Business, and became Judge of a Court, where he had Cognizance of Law-suits between the Natives, or Freemen of Athens, and Foreigners: The rest of the Generals had every Man his proper Employment; yet none were wholly free from Military Concerns, but determin'd all Controversies that happen'd amongst Men of that Profession, and order'd all the Affairs of War that lay in the City (d). Hence they came to be distinguish'd into two Sorts, one they term'd, τὰς ἐν τῇ διοικήσει, because they administred the City Business; the other τὰς ἐν τῷ ὅπλῳ, from their Concern about Arms. The latter of these listed and disbanded Soldiers as there was Occasion (e); and, in short, had the whole Management of War devolv'd upon them during their Continuance in that Post, which seems not to have been long, it being customary for the Generals who remain'd in the City, to take their Turns of serving in the War (f).

Ταξιάρχαι were likewise ten, (every Tribe having the Privilege of electing one) and commanded next under the Στρατηγοί. They had the Care of Marshalling the Army, gave Orders for their Marches, and what Provisions every Soldier should furnish himself with, which were convey'd to the Army by public Cryers. They had also Power to cashier any of the common Soldiers, if convicted of Misdemeanours. Their Jurisdiction was only over the Foot (g).

Ἰππάρχοι were only two in Number (a), and had the chief Command of the Cavalry under the Στρατηγοί (b).

Φυλαρχοί were ten; one being nominated for every Tribe. They were subordinate Officers to the Ἰππάρχοι, and invested with Authority to discharge Horsemen, and to fill up the Vacancies, as Occasion required (c).

Thus much of the general Officers. The Inferiors usually derived their Titles from the Squadron, or Number of Men under their Command: As λοχαγοί, χιλίαρχοι, εκατόνταρχοι, δεκάταρχοι, πεμπάταρχοι, &c. Proceed we then in the next Place, to the Commanders of the Spartan Army.

The supreme Command was lodged in one Person; for the Lacedæmonians, however fond of Aristocracy in civil Affairs, found by Experience, that in War a Monarchical Government was on several Accounts preferable to all others (d): For it happening that once upon a Difference in Opinion between their two Kings, Demaratus and Cleomenes, the former withdrew his Part of the Army, and left his Colleague expos'd to the Enemy, a Law was hereupon enacted, that for the future they should never command the Army together, as had been usual before that Misfortune (e). Yet upon extraordinary Occasions, when the Safety and Honour of the State was in Dispute, they had so much Prudence, as rather by transgressing the Letter of the Law to secure their Country, than by insisting on Niceties to bring it into Danger: For we find that, when Agis was engaged in a dangerous War with the Argians and Mantineans, Plistonax, his Fellow-King, having raised an Army out of such Citizens, as by their Age were at other Times excused from Military Service, went in Person to his Assistance (f).

The General's Title (as some say) was Βασις (g), which others will have common to all other Military Officers. He was ordinarily one of the Kings of Sparta; it being appointed by one of Lycurgus's Laws, that this Honour should belong to the Kings: But in Cases of Necessity, as in their King's Minority, a Protector, or Viceroy, called ἐπὶ πόλις, was substituted for the Management of military, as well as civil Affairs (h). 'Twas under this Character, that Lycurgus reform'd and new-modell'd the Lacedæmonian Polity, and commanded their Armies during the Infancy of King Charilaus (i). Pausanias also was Tutor to Plistarchus, when he led the Lacedæmonians, and the rest of the Grecians, against Mardonius, Xerxes's Lieutenant at Plataeæ (k).

This only concern'd their Land Armies, for the Laws made no Provision for their Fleets, the Law-giver having positively forbidden them to meddle with Marine Affairs. Wherefore when they became Masters of a Navy, they confined not their Elections of Admirals to the Royal House, but rather choie to commit that great Trust to their most able and experienced Seamen ; as may appear from the Instances of Lyfander, and several others, who commanded the Spartan Fleets, tho' never invested with Royal Power. Nor was it ordinarily permitted their Kings, when entrusted with Land-Armies, to undertake the Office of Admiral : The only Person honour'd with those two Commands at the same Time, was the Great Agesilaus (a).

The King, however lim ted and restrain'd when at Home, was supreme and absolute in the Army, it being provided by a particular Precept of the Law, that all others should be subordinate to him, and ready to obey his Commands (b). Notwithstanding this, he was not always left wholly to himself, and the Prosecution of his own Measures ; it being customary for some of the Magistrates call'd Ephori, to accompany him, and assist him with their Advice (c). To these, on some Occasions, others were joined. When Agis had unadvisedly enter'd into a League with the Argians, at a Time when it lay in his Power to have forc'd them to accept of Terms far more honourable to his Country, the Spartans highly resented his Imprudence, and enacted a Decree, that he should never again command an Army, without ten Counsellors to go along with him. Whether the succeeding Kings were hereby obliged, does not fully appear ; but it seems probable, they were not sent to the Wars without a Council, consisting, if not of the same, however of a considerable Number of the wisest Men in Sparta. Agesipolis was attended with not less than thirty (d) : And tho' the Tendernefs of his Age might occasion that extraordinary Provision, yet in Wars of great Concern, or Danger, and such as were carried on in remote Countries, Kings of the greatest Experience, and most eminent for Conduct, were not trusted without a great Number of Counsellors : For we are told, that Agesilaus himself, when he made his Expedition into Asia, was obliged by a Decree of the People to take thirty along with him (e).

Besides these, the General was guarded by three hundred valiant Spartans, called ἵππης, or Horse-Men, who fought about his Person (f), and were much of the same Nature with Romulus's Life-Guards, call'd Celeres, or Light-Horse, as Dionysius of Halicarnassus reports. Before him fought all those that had obtained Prizes in the Sacred Games, which was look'd upon as one of the most honourable Posts in the Army, and esteem'd equivalent to all the glorious Rewards conferr'd on those Victors in other Cities (g).

The chief of the subordinate Officers was call'd Πολίμαρχος. The Titles of the rest will easily be understood from the Names of the Parties under their Command, being all deriv'd from them : Such as Δοξαγωγοί, Πιπτηκοῦντες, Ενωμοτάρχαι, &c.

Of the several Divisions, and Forms of the Grecian Army, with other Military Terms.

THE whole Army, as compounded of Horse and Foot, was called στρατία. The Front μύτωποι, or πρώτοι ζυγός; the Right-hand Man of which, as in other Places, was πρωτεύων: The Wings, κίελα, of which some make Pan, Bacchus's General in his Indian Expedition, to have been the first Inventor: The Soldiers herein, and their Leader, παρατάται: Those in the middle Ranks επιστάται: The Rear, ίσχατοι, or ὀπισθόφυλαξ (a); which seem to have been common Names for any others that obtain'd the like Places in smaller Bodies.

Πεμπάς was a Party of five Soldiers; its Leader, Πεμπάδαρχος.

Δεκάς of ten; its Leader, Δεκάδαρχος. And so of the rest.

Λόχος, consisted of eight, as others of twelve, or as some, of sixteen, which was a compleat λόχος, tho' some make that to contain no less than twenty-five. It is sometimes term'd εἰς, or δικανία, and its Leader Λοχαγός.

Διμοιρία, or Ημιλοχία, was an half λόχος; its Leader, Διμοιρίτης, or Ημιλοχίτης.

Συλλοχισμός was a Conjunction of several λόχοι: Sometimes 'tis term'd ζύγασις, which consisted of four half, or two compleat λόχοι, containing thirty-two Men.

Πετηκοταρχία, however the Name imports only fifty, was usually a double ζύγασις, consisting of four λόχοι, or sixty-four Men: Whence its Leader was not only term'd Πετηκώταρχος, but Τετραρχος, and, for πυρηνόταρχος, we sometimes find τετραρχία.

Εκατοταρχία, sometimes call'd τάξις, consisted of two of the former, containing an hundred and twenty-eight Men. Its Commander was antiently call'd Ταξιάρχος, but afterward the Name of Εκατόνταρχος generally prevail'd. To every Εκατοταρχία were assign'd five necessary Attendants, call'd ἑκτακτοί, as not being reckon'd in the Ranks with the Soldiers. These were,

1. Στεφάνος, the Cryer, who convey'd by Voice the Words of Command. He was usually a Man of strong Lungs: The most remarkable of any in Story was Homer's Stentor, who, he tells us, was able to shout as loud as any fifty (b).

"Εἶθε

(a) Orbitius.

(b) Iliad. l. v. 784.

Ἔθα γὰρ ἥσι διὰ λευκῶνος ἦν
 Ἐπίλοι, ἰσαμένη μεγαλήτορι, χαλκοφαίη,
 Ὃς τόσον αὐδήσασχ', ὅσον ἄλλοι παντηκίη.

*Thus there clamours with imperious Sway,
 Like bawling Stentor, when his Lungs gave way,
 Whose Voice would open in a mighty Shout
 As loud as fifty Men's.*————

2. Σημειόφορος, the Ensign, remitted by Signs the Officers Commands to the Soldiers; and was of use in conveying Things not to be pronounced openly, or discover'd; and when the Noise of War drown'd the Cryer's Voice.

3. Σαλπικτής, or Trumpeter, was necessary, as well to signify to the Soldiers the Will of their Commanders, when Dust render'd the two former useless, as to animate and encourage them, and on several other Accounts.

4. Ὑπηρέτης, was a Servant, that waited on the Soldiers to supply them with Necessaries. These four were placed next to the foremost Rank.

5. Οὐράγος, the Lieutenant, brought up the Rear, and took care that none of the Soldiers were left behind, or deserted.

Σύνταγμα, παρατάξις, ψιλαγία, and, according to some, ξιναγία, was compounded of two τάξις, being made up of two hundred fifty-six Men. The Commander Συνταγματάρχης.

Πηλοκοσιαρχία, or ξιναγία, contain'd two Συνάγματια, i. e. five hundred and twelve Men. The Commander's Name was Πηλοκοσιάρχης, or Ξιναγός.

Χιλιαρχία, Ὑστρεμμα, and (as some think) ξιναγία, was the former doubled, and consisted of a thousand and twenty-four. The Commander, Χιλίαρχος, Χιλιόσις, or Ὑστρεμματάρχης.

Μιραρχία, by some call'd τέλος, by others ἐπιξιναγία, contain'd two of the former, i. e. Two thousand forty-eight. The Commander, Μιράρχης, Τελεάρχης, or Επιξιναγός.

Φαλαγγαρχία, sometimes call'd μέρος, ἀποτομή κέραιος, εἶφος, and by the Antients γραττηγία, was compounded of two τέλη; and contained four thousand fourscore and sixteen, or four thousand thirty-six, according to others. The Officer, Φαλαγγάρχης and Στρατηγός.

Διφαλαγγία κέραις, ἐπιτάγμα, (and as some think) μέρος, was almost a Duplicate of the former, for it consisted of eight thousand one hundred and thirty-two. The Commander's Title was Κεράρχης.

Τετραφαλαγγαρχία, contain'd about two διφαλαγγίαι, or sixteen thousand three hundred fourscore and four. The Commander, Τετραφαλαγγάρχης.

Φαλαγξ, is sometimes taken for a Party of twenty-eight Men, sometimes of eight thousand; but a compleat φαλαγξ is said to be the same with Τετραφαλαγγαρχία. Several other Numbers are signify'd fy'd by this Name, it being frequently taken for the whole Body of Foot, and as often in general for any Company of Soldiers. Indeed the Grecian Battles were usually rang'd into an Order peculiarly term'd Phalanx; which was of such Strength, that it was able to bear any Shock with what Violence soever charg'd upon them. The Macedonians were the most famous for this Way of Imbattell'ing; their Phalanx is describ'd by Polybius to be a square Battail of Pike-Men, consisting of sixteen in Flank, and five hundred in Front; the Soldiers standing so close together, that the Pikes of the fifth Rank were extended three Feet beyond the Front of the Battail: The rest, whose Pikes were not serviceable by reason of their Distance from the Front, couch'd them upon the Shoulders of those that stood before them, and so, locking them together in File, press'd forward to support and push on the former Ranks, whereby the Assault was render'd more violent and irresistible. The Commander was call'd Φάλαγγάρχης.

Μήκος Φάλαγγος was the Length or first Rank of the Phalanx, reaching from the farthest Extremity of one Wing to that of another. 'Tis the same with μέτωπον, πρόσωπον, ζόμενα, παράταξις, πρωτολογία, πρωτοστάται, πρωτος ζυγός, &c. The Ranks behind were call'd, according to their Order, δευτερος, τρίτος ζυγός, &c.

Βάθος or πάχος Φάλαγγος, sometimes call'd τοιχος, was the Depth, consisting in the Number of Ranks from Front to Rear.

Ζυγοὶ Φάλαγγος, were the Ranks taken according to the Length of the Phalanx.

Στίχοι or λόχοι, were the Files measur'd according to the Depth.

Διχόρομία Φάλαγγος, the Distribution of the Phalanx into two equal Portions, which were term'd πλευραὶ κέρατα, &c. or Wings: The Left of these was κέρας ἐνώνυμον, and εὐρά: The Right, κέρας δεξιόν, κεφαλὴ δεξιὸν ἀκρωτήριον, δεξιὰ ἀρχὴ, &c.

Ἄραρος, ὀμφαλός, Συστοχὴ Φάλαγγος, the Body, or Middle Part between the Wings.

Λεπίσμος Φάλαγγος, the lessening the Depth of the Phalanx by cutting off some of its Files.

Ορβία, ετερομήκης, or παραμήκης Φάλαγγε, acies recta, or the Horse, wherein the Depth exceeded the Length.

Πλαγία Φάλαγγε differ'd from the former, being broad in Front, and narrow in Flank; whereas the other was narrow in Front, and broad in the Flank (a).

Δοξὴ Φάλαγγε or obliqua acies, when one Wing was advanc'd near the Enemy's, to begin the Battle, the other holding off at a convenient Distance.

Ἀμφίστομος Φάλαγγε, when the Soldiers were placed Back to Back, that they might every way face their Enemies: Which Form of Battalia was used when they were in danger of being surrounded.

Ἀντίστομος Φάλαγγε differ'd herein from the former, that it was form'd Lengthways, and engag'd at both Flanks; whereas the former engag'd at Front and Rear.

Ἀμφίστομος διφάλαγία, when the Leaders were placed in both Fronts, but the Οὐραγοὶ, who followed the Rear, transplanted into the Middle, so that their Enemies were confronted on all Sides.

Ἀντίστομος διφάλαγία was contrary to the former, having the Οὐραγοὶ and their Rear on the two Sides, and the rest of the Commanders, who were placed at other Times in the Front, in the Midst, facing one another: In which Form, the Front, opening in two Parts, so clos'd again, that the Wings succeeded in its Place, and the last Ranks were transplanted into the former Place of the Wings.

Ὁμοίστομος διφάλαγία, was, when both the Pbalanxes had their Officers on the same Side, one marching behind the other in the same Form.

Ἐτερόμοτος διφάλαγία, when the Commanders of one Pbalanx were plac'd on the Right-Flank, and the other on the Left.

Πεπλεγμένη φάλαγξ, when its Form was changed, as the Way requir'd, thro' which it march'd.

Ἐπικαμπής φάλαγξ represented an Half-moon, the Wings turn'd backwards, and main Body advanced toward the Enemy, or on the contrary.

The same was call'd κυρτή and κοίλη, being convex and hollow.

Ἐσκαρμένη φάλαγξ, when the Parts of the Battalia stood at an unequal Distance from the Enemy, some jetting out before others.

Ἐτεροφάλαγγις, when both Wings were extended beyond the adverse Army's Front; when only one, υπερκίρωςις.

Ρομβοειδής φάλαγξ, call'd likewise Σφηνοειδής, a Battalia with four equal, but not rectangular, Sides, representing the Figure of a Diamond. This Figure was us'd by the Thessalians, being first contriv'd by their Country-Man Jason. Indeed most of the common Forms of Battalia in Greece, in Sicily also, and Persia, seem to have been devis'd after this, or some other Square (a).

Ἐμφόλοι Rostrum, or Cuneus, was a Rhombus divided in the Middle, having three Sides, and representing the Figure of a Wedge, or the Letter Δ. The Design of this Form was to pierce, and enter forcibly into the Enemies Body.

Κοιλιόμολοι, or Forfex, was the Cuneus transvers'd, and wanting the Basis: It represented a Pair of Sheers, or the Letter V; and seems to have been design'd to receive the Cuneus.

Παυδίον, Plaudiva, laterculus, an Army drawn up in the Figure of a Brick or Tile, with four unequal Sides; its Length was extended towards the Enemy, and exceeded the Depth.

Πύργος, Turris, was the Brick inverted, being an oblong Square, after the Fashion of a Tower, with the small End towards the Enemy. This Form is mention'd by Homer (b);

*Οἱ δὲ τὴν πυργίδον ὤψατο αὐτὰς ἀπ' ὑψους.

Wheeling themselves into a Tower's Form.

Πλαί-

(a) Ælianæ Tactici, qui ubique in hoc capite consulendus. (b) Iliad. μ'. v. 43.

Πλάσις had an oblong Figure, but approaching nearer to a Circle than Quadrangle.

Τερηδών, was an Army extended at Length with a very few Men in a Rank, when the Ways they march'd thro' could not be pass'd in broader Ranks: The Name is taken from a Worm that insinuates itself into little Holes in Wood. On the same Account we find mention of φάλαγξ ξιφοειδής, so rang'd, as it were, to pierce thro' the Passages.

Πυκνωσις φάλαγγος, was the ranging Soldiers close together, so that whereas in other Battalies every Man was allow'd four Cubits Space on each Side, in this he took up only two.

Συνασπισμός was closer than the Former, one Cubit's Room being allow'd to every Soldier: 'Tis so call'd from Bucklers, which were all joined close to one another.

Several other Forms of Battalia may occur in Authors, as those drawn in all the Sorts of Spherical Figures. One of these was call'd ἴλη, first invented by Ilion of Thessaly, representing the Figure of an Egg, into which the Thessalians commonly rang'd their Horse (a). 'Tis commonly taken for any Party of Horse of what Number soever; but sometimes in a more limited Sense for a Troop of sixty-four.

ἑκταρχία contained two ἴλαι, i. e. One hundred and twenty-eight.

Ταρανταρχία was a Duplicate of the Former, consisting of two hundred fifty-six: For they commonly us'd a Sort of Horsemen, call'd Ταραντοί, or ἱππαγονισαί, who annoy'd their Enemies with missive Weapons, being unable to sustain a close Fight by reason of their light Armour. There was likewise another Sort of Tarentine Horsemen, who, having discharg'd their missive Weapons engag'd their Enemies in close Fight. Their Name was deriv'd from Tarentum in Italy, which us'd to furnish out Horsemen of these Sorts: But whether the Name of this Troop was taken from the Sort of Horsemen, or the Numbers being the same with that us'd by the Tarentines, is not certain.

ἱππαρχία contained two of the former, i. e. Five hundred and twelve.

Εφίππαρχία was a double ἱππαρχία, being made up of one thousand and twenty-four.

Τίλος was the former doubled, containing two thousand forty-eight.

Επίταγμα was equal to two τίλοι, being compos'd of four thousand ninety-six.

The Lacedæmonian Divisions of their Army had peculiar Names.

The whole Army was divided into Μόραι, or Regiments. What Numbers of Soldiers were rang'd in each is uncertain. Some make them five hundred, others seven, and some nine (b); but, at the first Reformation of the Common-wealth, they seem not to have exceeded ceeded four hundred, who were all Footmen. The Commander was call'd πολίμαρχος (a); to whom was added a subordinate Officer call'd συμφορεύς (b): The former was a Colonel, the latter his Lieutenant.

(a) Ælianus loc. citat.

(b) Plutarchus Pelopida.

Λόχος was the fourth Part of a Μόρα: And tho' some affirm there were five Λόχοι in every Μόρα (c), yet the former Account seems more agreeable to the antient State of the Spartan Army: For we are assur'd by Xenophon, that in every Μόρα there were four Λοχαγωγοί.

Πυρρηγοὺς was the fourth Part, or, as others, half of a Λόχος, and contain'd fifty Men, as appears from the Name. The Commander thereof was styl'd Πυρρηκοστής, Πυρρηκιστάτης, or Πυρρηκοστῆρ: Of these there were eight in every Μόρα, as the fore-mention'd Author reports.

Ενωματία was the fourth Part, or, as others, the half of πυρρηγοὺς, contain'd twenty-five Men, and so call'd because all the Soldiers therein were ἐνωμένοι διὰ Φυγίων (d), or bound by a solemn Oath upon a Sacrifice to be faithful and loyal to their Country. The Commander was term'd ἐνωμοταρχης, or ἐνωμοτάρχος. Of these Xenophon affirms there were sixteen in every Μόρα; which, together with his Account of the Λόχοι, and Πυρρηκοὺς, makes it evident that the primitive Μόραι consisted only of four hundred: The Disagreement of Authors herein seems to have been occasion'd by the Increase of the Lacedæmonian Army; for in succeeding Ages the Spartans, having augmented their Forces, still retain'd their antient Names, so that the eighth Part of a Μόρα, tho' perhaps containing several Fifties, was still term'd πυρρηκοὺς. The Roman Battalions, in like manner, however increased by new Additions, were still call'd Legiones; which, tho' at first they contain'd no more than three thousand, were afterwards vary'd as Necessity requir'd, and consisted of four, five, or six thousand. The same may be observ'd of their Cohortes, Manipuli, Ordines, &c.

There are several other Military Terms, an Explication of some of which may be expected in this Place.

Πρόταξις is the placing of any Company of Soldiers before the Front of the Army; as πρόταξις ψιλῶν, when the light-arm'd Men are drawn before the rest of the Army, to begin the Fight at a Distance with missive Weapons.

Επίταξις is contrary to the former, and signifies the Ranging of Soldiers in the Rear.

Πρόσταξις, when to one, or both F'anks of the Battle, Part of the Rear is added, the Front of those that are added being plac'd in the same Line with the Front of the Battle.

Υπόσταξις, when the Wings are doubled, by bestowing the light-arm'd Men under them in embow'd Form, so that the whole Figure resembles a three-fold Door.

Ἐσίσταξις, παρῆσταξις, or προσῆσταξις, the Placing together of different Sorts of Soldiers; as when light-armed Men are order'd to fill up void Spaces between the heavy-armed Companies.

Παρεμ-

Παρεβολή is distinguish'd from the former, as denoting the Completion of vacant Spaces in the Files by Soldiers of the same Sort.

Επαγωγή is a continued Series of Battalions in Marches drawn up after the same Form behind one another, so that the Front of the latter is extended to the Rear of the former: Whence this Term is sometimes taken for the Rhetorical Figure Inductio, where certain Consequences are inferr'd, in a plain and evident Method, from the Concession of some Antecedents (a).

Παραγωγή differs herein from επαγωγή, that the Phalanx proceedeth in a Wing not by File, but by Rank, the Leaders marching not directly in the Front, but on one Side: When toward the Left, 'twas call'd εὐώνυμος παραγωγή: When toward the Right, δεξιὰ παραγωγή.

Επαγωγή and παραγωγή are distinguish'd into four Sorts; for when they expected the Enemy, and march'd on prepar'd for him only on one Side, they were call'd επαγωγή, or παραγωγή μονόπλευρος: When on two Sides, διπλευρος: When on three τρίπλευρος: When every Side was ready for an Assault, τετράπλευρος.

The Motions of the Soldiers at their Officers Command were term'd κλίσεις.

Επανακλίσις, the Retrograde Motion.

Μεταβολή is a double Turn to the same Hand, whereby their Backs were turn'd on what before lay to their Faces. There were two Sorts of it.

1. Μεταβολή ἐκ' ἑρᾶς, whereby they turn'd from Front to Rear, which is term'd ἑρᾶς, so that their Backs were toward their Enemies; whence 'tis called μεταβολή ἀπὸ τῶν πολεμίων. It was always effected by turning to the Right.

2. Μεταβολή ἀπ' ἑρᾶς, or ἐκ' ἀσπίδων, from Rear to Front, whereby they turn'd their Faces to their Enemies, by moving twice to the Left.

Επιστροφή, when the whole Battalion, close join'd Man to Man, made one Turn, either to the Right or Left, Αναστροφή is oppos'd to επιστροφή, being the Return of such a Battalion to its former Station.

Περὶσπασμός, a double επιστροφή, whereby their Backs were turn'd to the Place of their Faces, the Front being transferred to the Place of the Rear.

Εκπερισπασμός a treble επιστροφή, or three Wheelings.

Εἰς ὄρθον ἀποδύναι, or ἐκ' ὄρθων ἀποκαταστῆσαι, to turn about to the Places they were in at first.

Εξίλιγμός, Εξίλισμός, or Εξίλισις, Counter-march, whereby every Soldier, one marching after another changed the Front for the Rear, or one Flank for another: Whence there are two Sorts of Counter-marches, marches, κατὰ λόχον, and κατὰ ζυγά, one by Files, the other by Ranks; both are farther divided into three Sorts.

1. Εξιλιγμός Μακεδων κατὰ λόχον, invented by the Macedonians, was thus: First the Leaders of the Files turn'd to the Right, or Left about, then the next Rank pass'd thro' by them on the same Hand, and, being come into the distant Spaces, placed themselves behind the Leaders of their Files, then turn'd about their Faces the same Way: In like manner the third Rank after them, with the fourth, and all the rest, till the Bringers up were last, and had turn'd about their Faces, and again taken the Rear of the Battle. Hereby the Army was remov'd into the Ground before the Front, and the Faces of the Soldiers turn'd backward. This appear'd like a Retreat, and was for that Reason laid aside by Philip of Macedon, who us'd the following Motion in its stead.

2. Εξιλιγμός Λακευ κατὰ λόχον, invented by the Lacedæmonians, was contrary to the former: That took up the Ground before the Phalanx, this the Ground behind it, and the Soldiers Faces turn'd the contrary Way; In that the Motion was from Rear to Front, in this from Front to Rear. Ælian (a) describes it two Ways; One was, when the Bringers-up first turn'd about their Faces, the next Rank, likewise turning their Faces, began the Counter-march, every Man placing himself directly before his Bringer-up; the third did the like, and so the rest, till the Rank of File Leaders were first. The other Method was, when the Leaders of Files began the Counter-march, every one in their Files following them orderly: Hereby they were brought nearer to their Enemies, and represented a Charge.

3. Εξιλιγμός Περισικός, or Κρητικός, κατὰ λόχον, was us'd by the Persians and Cretans; it was sometimes term'd χορευτός because managed like the Grecian Chori, which, being order'd into Files and Ranks, like Soldiers in Battle-Array, and moving forward toward the Brink of the Stage, when they could pass no farther, retir'd one thro' the Ranks of another; the whole Chorus all the Time maintaining the same Space of Ground they were before possess'd of; wherein this Counter-march differ'd from the two former, in both which the Phalanx chang'd its Place.

Εξιλιγμός κατὰ ζυγά, Counter-march by Rank, was contrary to the Counter-march by File: In the Counter-march by File the Motion was in the Depth of the Battalia, the Front moving toward the Rear, or the Rear toward the Front, and succeeding into each other's Place: In this the Motion was in Length of the Battalia flank-wise, the Wing either marching into the Midst, or quite thro' the opposite Wing: In doing this, the Soldiers that stood last in the Flank of the Wing, mov'd first to the contrary Wing, the rest of every Rank following in their Order. It was likewise perform'd three Ways.

1. The Macedonian Counter-march began its Motion at the Corner of the Wing nearest the Enemies, upon their appearing at either Flank, and remov'd to the Ground on the Side of the contrary Wing, so resembling a Flight.

2. The

(a) Tacit. Cap. xxviii. cum. Binhani notis.

2. The Lacedæmonian Counter-march, beginning its Motion in the Wing farthest distant from the Enemy, seiz'd the Ground nearest to them, whereby an Onset was represented.

3. The Chorean Counter-march maintain'd its own Ground, only removing one Wing into the other's Place.

Διπλασιάζει is to double, or increase a Battalia, which was effected two Ways. Sometimes the Number of their Men was augmented, retaining still upon the same Space of Ground; sometimes the Soldiers, continuing in the same Number were so drawn out by thinning their Ranks, or Files, that they took up a much larger Space than before. Both these Augmentations of Men, or Ground, being made either in Length or Depth, occasion'd four Sorts of διπλασιασμοί, which were made by Counter-marches.

1. Διπλασιασμός ἀνδρῶν κατὰ ζυγὰ, or κατὰ μῆκος, when fresh Men were inserted into Ranks, the Length of the Battalia being still the same, but the Soldiers drawn up closer and thicker than before.

2. Διπλασιασμός ἀνδρῶν κατὰ λόχους, or κατὰ βάθος, was when the Files were doubled, their Ground being of no larger Extent than before, by ranging them close to one another.

3. Διπλασιασμός τόπου κατὰ ζυγὰ, or κατὰ μῆκος, when the Length of the Battalia was increas'd, without the Accession of the new Forces, by placing the Soldiers at greater Distances from one another.

4. Διπλασιασμός τόπου κατὰ λόχους, or κατὰ βάθος, when the Depth of Ground taken up by an Army was render'd greater, not by adding new Files, but separating the old to a greater Distance.

To conclude this Chapter, it may be observ'd, that the Grecians were excellently skill'd in the Method of embattling Armies, and maintain'd public Professors call'd τακτικοί from τάττω, who exercis'd the Youth in this Art, and render'd them expert in all the Forms of Battle, before they adventur'd into the Field.

C H A P. VII.

Of their Manner of making Peace, and declaring War ; their Embassadors, &c.

BEfore the Grecians engag'd themselves in War, it was usual to publish a Declaration of the Injuries they had receiv'd, and to demand Satisfaction by Embassadors : For however prepar'd or excellently skill'd they were in the Affairs of War, yet Peace, if to be procur'd upon honourable Terms, was thought more eligible : Which Custom was observ'd even in the most early Ages, as appears from the Story of Tydeus, whom Polixenes sent to compose Matters with his Brother Æneocles King of Thebes, before he proceeded to invest that City, as we are inform'd by Statius (a), and several others.

The Council then vote it expedient,
That to the King a Legate should be sent,
Who might to prove his Faith the Oath declare,
And stop the Ferment of intestine War:
This Treaty Tydeus bravely undertook.

Nor was the Trojan War prosecuted with so great Hazard and Loss to both Parties till these Means prov'd ineffectual; for we find that Ulysses and Menelaus were dispatch'd on an Embassy to Troy to demand Restitution: Whence Antenor thus bespeaks Helen (a):

Ἡδὴ γὰρ κ' ἐδῆρ' ποτ' ἤλυθε δῖος Ὀδυσσεύς
Σεῦ ἔνε' αἰγυλίας σὺν ἀρηϊφίλῳ Μινελάῳ.

With stout Atrides sage Ulysses came Hither as Envoys, Helen, thee to claim.

The same Poet in another Place acquaints us, that their Proposal was rejected by the Trojans over-ruled by Antimachus, a Person of great Repute amongst them, whom Paris had engag'd to his Party by a large Sum of Money (b):

—*Ἀντιμάχῳ δαΐφρονος, ὃς ἔα μάστιγα

Invasions without Notice were look'd on rather as Robberies than lawful Wars, as designed rather to spoil and make a Prey of Persons innocent and unprovided, than to repair any Losses, or Damages sustain'd, which, for aught the Invaders knew, might have been satisfied for an easier Way. 'Tis therefore no Wonder, what Polybius (c) relates of the Ætolians, that they were held for the common Out-laws and Robbers of Greece, it being their Manner to strike without Warning, and make War without any previous and public Declaration, whenever they had opportunity of enriching themselves with the Spoil and Booty of their Neighbours. Yet there want not Instances of Wars began with-without previous Notice, even by Nations of better Repute for Justice and Humanity: But this was only done upon Provocations so great and exasperating, that no Recompence was thought sufficient to atone for them. Whence it came to pass, that such Wars were of all others the most bloody and pernicious, and fought with Excess of Rage and Fury; the contesting Parties being resolved to extirpate each other, if possible, out of the World.

Embassadors were usually Persons of great Worth, or eminent Station, that by their Quality and Deportment they might command Respect and Attention from their very Enemies; and what Injuries or Affronts soever had been committed, yet Embassadors were held sacred by all Sides. Gods and Men were thought to be concern'd to prosecute with utmost Vengeance all Injuries done to them. Whence (to omit several other Instances) we read that the Lacedæmonians having inhumanly murder'd Xerxes's Embassadors, the Gods would accept none of their Oblations and Sacrifices, which were all found polluted with direful Omens, till two Noblemen of Sparta were sent as an expiatory Sacrifice to Xerxes, to atone for the Death of his Embassadors by their own. That Emperor indeed gave them leave to return in Safety, without any other Ignominy, than what they suffered by a severe Reflection on the Spartan Nation, whose barbarous Cruelty he profess'd he would not imitate, however provok'd by them: Yet Divine Vengeance suffer'd them not to go unpunish'd, but inflict'd what those Men had assum'd to themselves, upon their Sons, who, being sent on an Embassy into Asia, were betray'd into the Hands of the Athenians, and by them put to Death; which my Author concludes to have been a just Revenge from Heaven for the Lacedæmonian Cruelty (a).

Whence this Holiness was deriv'd upon Embassadors, has been Matter of Dispute: Fabulous Authors deduce it from the Honour paid by the Antients to the κέρυκας, or Heralds, who were either themselves Embassadors, or, when others were deputed to that Service, accompany'd them, being held sacred on the Account of their Original, because descended from Ceryx, the Son of Mercury, who was honour'd with the same Employment in Heaven these obtain'd upon Earth. 'Tis true that these Men were ever had in great Esteem, and their Persons held sacred and inviolable; whence, as Eustatbius observes, Ulysses in Homer, when cast upon foreign and unknown Coasts, usually sends an Herald to protect the Men deputed to make Discovery of the Country and its Inhabitants, Persons of that Character being revered even in barbarous Nations, except some few, such as the Læstrygones, or Cyclopes, in whom all Sense of Humanity was extinguish'd (b). They were likewise under the Care and Protection of Mercury, the President God of their Occupation, and Jupiter (c); whence Achilles calls them the Messengers not of Men only, but of Jupiter (d).

But these Honours seem not to have been conferr'd upon them so much because they were descended from Mercury, (several other Families, to whom no such Respect was due, bearing themselves much higher on their Original) as upon account of their Office, which, being common to them with other Embassadors, seems to have challenged an equal Reverence to both. Licence, indeed, being once granted to treat Persons of that Character injuriously, all Hopes of Peace and Reconciliation amongst Enemies must be banish'd for ever out of the World; and therefore in the most rude and unpolish'd Ages all Sorts of Embassadors were civilly entertained, and dismiss'd with Safety: Whence Tydeus's Lady in Stasius (a) is prevail'd with to let her Husband go Embassador to Thebes, because that Title would afford him Protection in the Midst of his Enemies;

The Athenian Heralds were all of one Family, being descended from Ceryx the Son of Mercury, and Pandrosus Daughter to Cecrops King of Athens.

The Lacedæmonian Heralds were all descended from Talibytius, Aganemnon's Herald, who was honour'd with a Temple, and Divine Worship at Sparta (b)

They carried in their Hands a Staff of Laurel, or Olive, called καρυίσιον, round which two Serpents, without their Crests erected, were folded, as an Emblem of Peace and Concord (c) Instead of this the Athenian Heralds frequently made use of the εἰρησίων, which was a Token of Peace and Plenty, being an Olive Branch cover'd with Wool, and adorn'd with all Sorts of Fruits of the Earth.

Κήρυκες, or Heralds, are by some thought to differ from πρεσβυται, or Embassadors, in this; that Embassadors were employ'd in Treaties of Peace, whereas Heralds were sent to declare War (d). But this Dis-tion is not constant or perpetual, the κρήναις being frequently taken for Persons commission'd to treat about accommodating Differences, which may appear, as from some of the fore-cited Places of Eusebiius, so from several Passages in Homer, and other Authors.

Embassadors were of two Sorts, being either sent with a limited Commission, which they were not to exceed, or invested with full Power of determining Matters according to their own Discretion. The former were liable to be call'd in question for their Proceedings; the latter were subject to no After-reckoning, but wholly their own Masters, and for that Reason stiled Πρόξεναι αὐτοκράτορες, Plenipotentiaries (a).

It may be observ'd that the Lacedæmonians, as in most other Things their Customs were different from the rest of the Greeks, so likewise in their Choice of Embassadors had this Peculiar, that for the most part they deputed Men, between whom there was no very good Correspondence; supposing it most improbable, that such Persons should so far trust one another, as to conspire together against the Commonwealth. For the same Reason it was thought a Piece of Policy in that State to raise Diffensions between their Kings (b).

Their Leagues were of three Sorts: 1. A bare πρόδη, ἑσθία, εἰρήνη, or Peace, whereby both Parties were oblig'd to cease from all Acts of Hostility, and neither to molest one another, nor the Confederates of either.

2. ἔμπραχια, whereby they oblig'd themselves to assist one another in case they should be invaded.

3. συμπράχια, whereby they covenanted to assist one another as well when they made Invasions upon others, as when themselves were invaded, and to have the same Friends and Enemies (c).

All these Covenants were solemnly confirm'd by mutual Oaths, the Manner of which I have already describ'd in a former Book (d). To the end they might lie under a greater Obligation to preserve them inviolate, we find it customary to engrave them upon Tables, which they fix'd up at Places of general Concourse, that all the World might be Witnesses of their Justice and Fidelity: Thus we find the Articles of Treaty between Athens and Sparta not only publish'd in those Cities, but at the Places where the Olympian, Pythian, and Isthmian Games were celebrated (e). Others exchange'd certain Tessera, in Greek, σύμβολα, which might be produc'd on any Occasion, as Evidences of the Agreement. The Covenant itself was also call'd by the same Name (f). Farther, to continue the Remembrance of mutual Agreements fresh in their Minds, it was not uncommon for States thus united, interchangeably to send Embassadors, who, on some appointed Day, when the People assembled in great Numbers, should openly repeat, and by mutual Consent confirm their former Treaty: This we find practis'd by the Athenians and Spartans after their fore-mentioned League, League, the Spartan Embassadors presenting themselves at Athens upon the Festival of Bacchus, and the Athenians at Sparta on the Festival of Hyacinthus.

Their Manner of declaring War was to send an Herald, who bad the Persons who had injur'd them to prepare for an Invasion, and sometimes in token of Defiance cast a Spear towards them. The Athenians frequently let loose a Lamb into their Enemies Territories; signifying thereby, that what was then an Habitation for Men, should be laid waste and desolate, and become a Pasture for Sheep (a). Hence ἀγία προβάλλειν came to be a proverbial Phrase for entering into a State of War.

This was rarely done without the Advice and Encouragement of the Gods; the Soothsayers and all Sorts of Diviners were consulted, the Oracles enrich'd with Presents, and no Charge or Labour spar'd to engage Heaven (so they imagin'd) to their Party: Instances of this Kind are almost as common as the Declarations of War, which was never undertaken before the Gods had been consulted about the Issue. Nor was the Verdict of a single Deity thought sufficient; but in Wars of great Moment and Consequence, whereon the Safety of their Country and Liberties depended, they had recourse to the whole Train of prophetic Divinities, soliciting all with earnest Prayers lifted up to Heaven on the Wings of costly Offerings and magnificent Presents, to favour them with wholesome Counsel. A remarkable Example whereof we have in Cræsus, before he declar'd War against the Persians; when not content with the Answers of his own Gods, and all the celebrated Oracles in Greece, in consulting which he had lavishly profus'd vast Quantities of Treasure, he dispatch'd Embassadors as far as Lybia loaden with Wealth, to ask Advice of Jupiter Hammon (b).

When they were resolv'd to begin the War, it was customary to offer Sacrifices, and make large Vows to be paid upon the Success of their Enterprize. Thus when Darius invaded Attica, Callimachus made a Vow to Minerva, that if she would vouchsafe the Athenians Victory, he would sacrifice upon her Altars as many He-goats as should equal the Number of the Slain among their Enemies. Nor was this Custom peculiar to Greece, but frequently practis'd in most other Countries: Many Instances occur in the Histories of Rome, Persia, &c. The Jews us'd the same Method to engage the Divine Favour, as may appear from Jephthab's Vow, when he undertook to be Captain over Israel against the Ammonites (c).

After all these Preparations, tho' the Posture of Affairs appear'd never so inviting, it was held no less impious than dangerous to march against their Enemies, till the Season favour'd their Enterprize: For being extremely superstitious in the Observation of Omens and Days, till those became fortunate, they durst not make any Attempts upon their Enemies. An Eclipse of the Moon, or any other of those they esteem'd unlucky Accidents, was enough to deter them from marching:

And

And if all other Things promis'd Success, yet they deserr'd their Expedition till one of the Days, they look'd on as fortunate, invit'd them to it. The Athenians could not be perswaded to march πρὸς ἑξήμερον, before the Seventh (a); which gave Occasion to the Proverb, whereby Persons, who undertook any Business unseasonably, and before the proper Time, were said to do it πρὸς ἑξήμερον (b). But the Lacedæmonians were of all others the most nice and scrupulous in these Observations; their Lawgiver having commanded them to pay a critical and inviolate Obedience to the celestial Predictions, and to regulate all their Proceedings, as well in Civil as Military Affairs, by the Appearances of the Heavenly Bodies: Amongst the rest they were obliged by a particular Precept never to march before the Full Moon (c): For that Planet was believ'd to have a particular Influence upon their Affairs, to bless them with Success, when it self was in the Height of its Splendor, but till it was arriv'd there, to neglect, or suffer them to be blasted for want of Power to send Assistance. So constant a Belief of this they had entertained, that the greatest Necessity could not prevail upon them to alter their Measures; for when the Athenians were like to fall into the Hands of Darius, and sent to implore their Assistance, they agreed, indeed to send them a Supply of Men, but, rather than march before the Full Moon, forced them to run the Hazard of a decisive Battle, and with a small Force to encounter an hundred thousand Medians (d).

C H A P. VIII.

Of their Camps, Guards, Watches, and Military Course of Life.

OF the Form of the Grecian Camp nothing exact and constant can be delivered, that being not always the same, but vary'd, as the Custom or Humour of different States, or the Conveniencies of Place and Time requir'd. The Lacedæmonians, indeed, are said to have been prescrib'd a constant Method of building Towns and Encamping, by their Law-giver, who thought a spherical Figure the best fitted for Defence (e); which was contrary to the Custom of the Romans, whose Camps were Quadrangular; but all Forms of that Sort were rejected by Lycurgus, the Angles being neither fit for Service, nor defensible, unless guarded by a River, Mountain, Wall, or some such Fortification. It is farther observable of the Lacedæmonians, that they frequently mov'd their Camps, being accustomed vigorously to prosecute all their Enterprizes, impatient of Delays, and tedious Procrastinations, crassinations, and utterly averse from passing their Time without Action: Wherefore the Reason of this being demanded of Lycurgus, he reply'd, " 'Twas that they might do greater Damage to their Enemies (a)." To which Xenophon adds a second, " That they might " give more early Relief to their Friends (b)."

Of the rest of the Grecian Camps it may be observ'd, that the valiantest of the Soldiers were plac'd at the Extremities, the rest in the Middle; that the Stronger might be a Guard to the Weaker, and sustain the first Onsets, if the Enemy should endeavour to force their Entrenchments. Thus we find Achilles and Ajax posted at the Ends of the Grecian Camp before Troy, as Bulwarks on each Side the rest of the Princes, who had their Tents in the Middle, as we learn from Homer (c):

Στῇ δ' ἐπ' Ὀδυσσῆος μεγακῆτι νηὶ μίλῳ,
 Ἡ δ' ἐν μισσάτῳ ἴσκι, γιγνώμην ἀμφοτέρωσι,
 Ἡ μὲν ἐπ' Αἰανὶος κλισίης Τηλαμωνιάδου,
 Ἡ δ' ἐπ' Ἀχιλλῆος τοί εἰ ἴσχατος ἦεν ἵσας
 Εἵρυσαν, ἠγορή σίσυνοι, καὶ κάρλι χερσῶν.

Atrides stood i'th' Midst o'th' Fleet, hard by Where th' high-built Odyssean Ship did lie,
 That all his Orders equally might hear,
 As far as Ajax's on one Side, as far
 As Peleus' Sons o'th' other; for they were
 At each Extremity, like Fortresses.

When they design'd to continue long in their Encampments, they contriv'd a Place, where Altars were erected to the Gods, and all Parts of Divine Service solemnly perform'd. In the same Place public Assemblies were call'd together, when the General had any Thing to communicate to his Soldiers; and Courts of Justice were held, wherein all Controversies among the Soldiers were decided, and Criminals sentenced to Punishment: Which Custom was as antient as the Trojan War, and is mentioned by Homer (d);

κατὰ τῆας Ὀδυσσῆος θεοῖο
 Ἰξί θύων Πατροκλῶ, ἵνα σφ' ἀγορή τι, θέμις τε ἦεν, τῇ δὲ καὶ σφί θύων ἰτέλιυχατο βωμοί.

Sweating to th' Ulyssean Ships he came,
 Where their Assemblies and their Courts were held,
 And the Gods worshipp'd.

When they were in danger of having their Camp attack'd, it was usual to fortify it with a Trench and Rampire, or Wall, on the Sides whereof they erected Turrets not unlike those upon the Walls of Cities, out of which they annoy'd their Enemies with missive Weapons.

Thus the Grecians in Homer were forc'd to defend themselves in the ninth Year of the Trojan War, when Achilles refus'd to assist them; whereas till that Time they had wanted no Fortifications, but immur'd the Trojans within their own Walls: The Poet has thus described their Works (a):

— τείχε' ἰδιμῶν,
 Πύργος θ' ὀψήλας, εἴλας πᾶντι, καὶ αὐτῶν,
 Ἐν δ' αὐτοῖσι πύλας ἐπιποιεῖν εὐ ἀραρυίας,
 Ὅφρα δι' αὐτῶν ἰκπηλασίη ὁδὸς εἴη,

 They rais'd with Turrets, as a Muniment
 To them and th' Fleet: And, that there might a Way
 Be for their Cavalry upon Survey,
 They fram'd great Gates, the Wall too they intrench'd
 With Stakes infix'd. —

The manner of living in Camps depended upon the Disposition of their Generals; some of which allow'd their Soldiers in all Sorts of Excess and Debauchery; others obliged them to the strictest Rules of Temperance and Sobriety; a remarkable Instance whereof we have in Philip of Macedon, who (as Polyænus reports) condemn'd two of his Soldiers to Banishment for no other Offence, than because he had found them with a Singing-woman in his Camp. But the Grecian Discipline was not always so severe and rigid, as may appear from Plutarch (b), who tells us, that the Lacedæmonians alone of all the Grecians had no Stage-players, no Jugglers, no Dancing or Singing-women attending them, but were free from all Sorts of Debauchery and Looseness, of gaudy Pomp and Foppery; the young Men when commanded nothing by their General, were always employ'd in some Exercise, or manly Study; the old were busied in giving Instructions, or receiving them from Persons more skilful than themselves; and their looser Hours were diverted with their usual Drollery, and rallying one another facetiously after the Laconic Fashion: Yet their Law-giver allow'd them greater Liberty in the Camp than at other Times, to invite them to serve with Delight in the Wars; for, whilst they were in the Field, their Exercises were more moderate than at Home, their Fare not so hard, nor so strict a Hand kept over them by their Governors; so that they were the only People in the World, to whom War gave Repose. They were likewise allow'd to have costly Arms, and fine Cloaths, and frequently perfum'd themselves, and curl'd their Hair: Whence we read that Xerxes was struck with Admiration, when the Scouts brought him Word, the Lacedæmonian Guards were at Gymnical Sports, and curling their Hair (c).

It was also customary at Athens for Horsemen to nourish their Hair. Hence the following Words of Aristophanes (a) ;

And, in another Place, of the same Poet, there is an Allusion to this Practice (b) :

Νῶς ἂν ἐν ταῖς κόμαις
Τυμῶν. —

The Custom seems to have been derived from the primitive Times, there being scarce any Expression so frequent in Homer, as that of κα-ρπομόωιες Ἀχαιοί. Afterwards Cynas and Phrynis, besides several other Changes in the Athenian Discipline of Soldiers, procured a Law to be enacted, which forbade them κομᾶν, καὶ ἀερόδαιτες εἶναι : To nourish their Hair, and to live delicately (c).

Their Guards may be distinguished into Φυλακαὶ ἡμεριναί, and νυκτεριναί : The first were upon Duty by Day, the other by Night. At several Hours in the Night certain Officers, called περιπολοί, did περιπολεῖν, or walk round the Camp, and visit the Watch. To try whether any of them were asleep, they had a little Bell, term'd κωδων, at the Sound of which the Soldiers were to answer (d) : Whence to go this Circuit was call'd κωδωνίζειν, and κωδωνοφορεῖν :

— κωδωνοφορεῖται, πανταχῇ
Φυλακαὶ καλεῖσθῃσιν. —

Hence also κωδωνίζειν is used for πειράζειν, to try, to prove (e) ; and ἀκωδωνίς for ἀπίστευτος, untry'd, or unprov'd (f). This Custom furnish'd Brasidas with an Advantage against Potidaea in the Peloponnesian War ; for, having observ'd the Sounding of the Bell to be over, he took his Opportunity, before the Bell's Return, to set up Ladders in an unguarded Place of the Wall, and so enter'd the City (g).

The Lacedæmonian Watch were not permitted to have their Bucklers, that, being unable to defend themselves, they might be more cautious how they fell asleep. To which Custom Æschylus alludes in one of his Historical Chiliads (h) :

Ποτε καὶ τὶς τῶν στρατηγῶν μάλλον φρονέτωι πάντας
Τυμῶν; ἀσπίδων ἀνυθε τὸς φυλακὰς ἔωσιν,
Ὅπως ἰσπαγνυσιότερα τὴν φυλακὴν ποιῶνται,
Καὶ μὴ θαρσύνουσι αὐταῖς εἰς ὕπνον ἐκτραπῶσιν.

With Bucklers, to secure them vigilant,
 Left they supinely negligent should sleep.

The rest of the Spartan Soldiers were obliged to take their Rest arm'd, that they might be prepar'd for Battle upon any Alarm (a).

It may be farther observ'd of the Spartans, that they kept a double Watch; one within their Camp, to observe their Allies, lest they should make a sudden Defection; the other upon some Eminence, or other Place, whence there was a good Prospect, to watch the Motions of their Enemies (b).

How often the Guards were reliev'd doth not appear; as neither whether it was done at set and constant Times, or according to the Commander's Pleasure. Φυλακή indeed, which signifies a Watch, is frequently taken for the fourth Part of the Night, answering to the Roman Vigilæ; as appears from several Places of the New Testament, as well as other Authors: But it seems to have this Signification rather from the Roman than Grecian Watches, those being changed four Times every Night, that is, every third Hour, (computing the Night from Six to Six, or rather from Sun to Sun) for the Time between the two Suns was divided into twelve equal Parts, which were not always the same, like our Hours, but greater or less, according to the Season of the Year; and are therefore by Astronomers term'd unequal and Planetary Hours.

BEfore they join'd Battle, the Soldiers always refresh'd themselves with Victuals, eating and drinking plentifully: Which Custom with its Reasons we have largely accounted for in Ulysses's elegant Oration to Achilles (c), where he advises the young General by no Means to lead out the Army fasting:

Μηδ' ὅπως ἀγαθὸς περ ἰὼν, θεοίκελ' Ἀχιλλεῦ,

Noble Achilles, tho' with martial Rage
 Thy gen'rous Mind is fir'd thy Foes t'engage,
 Let not thy valiant Troops to Troy repair,
 There to sustain the great Fatigues of War,
 Before brisk Wines and Viands animate
 Their Souls with Vigour to repel their Fate ;
 That Troy to their embattled Force may yield,
 And with amazing Terror quit the Field ;
 For such is th' Energy of sparkling Juice,
 With such Heroick Zeal it warms, such Prowess doth infuse ;
 No Man hath Puissance the whole Day to fight,
 'Till the Phæbean Carr brings on the Night,
 Unless rich Wine and wholesome Food prepare
 His Courage for the Dust and Din of War :
 His strenuous Limbs then Marches undergo,
 And he with dauntless Rage assails the Foe ;
 Inflaming Wine incites his Fury on,
 And thus he'll venture 'till the Battle's won.

We are told also by Livy, that the Romans thought this a Preparative absolutely Necessary, and never omitted it before Engagements (a).

This done, the Commanders marshall'd the Army in order to an Engagement: In which Art the Grecians were far inferior to the Romans; for drawing up their whole Army, as it were, into one Front, they trusted the Success of the Day to a single Force; whereas the Romans, ranging their Hastati, Principes, and Triarii in distinct Bodies behind one another, were able, after the Defeat of their first Body, twice to renew the Battle, and could not be entirely routed till they had lost three several Victories. Yet something not unlike this we find practised as long since as the Trojan War, where old Nestor is said to have placed a Body of Horse in the Front;

(a) Lib. IX.

Front; behind these the most infirm of the Foot, and last of all, such of them as surpass'd the rest in Strength and Valour (a):

J. A.

Where tho' some interpret τὸ πρῶτον and τὸ ὅπιον of the right and left Wings, and others several other Ways, yet the most natural and genuine Sense of the Poet seems to be, that they were drawn up behind one another (b).

At this Time the General made an Oration to his Soldiers, wherein, with all the Motives suitable on such Occasions, he exhorted them to exert their utmost Force and Vigour against the Enemy: And so wonderful was the Success that attended these Performances, that many Times, when Affairs were in a declining and almost desperate Condition, the Soldiers, animated with fresh Life and Courage, have instantly retriev'd them, and repuls'd those very Enemies, by whom themselves had before been defeated: Several of these Instances may be found in the Grecian and Roman Histories, few of which are more remarkable than that of Tyrtaeus the lame Athenian Poet, to whom the Command of the Spartan Army was given by the Advice of an Oracle in one of the Messenian Wars. The Spartans had at that Time suffer'd great Losses in many Encounters, and all their Stratagems prov'd ineffectual, so that they began to despair almost of Success, when the Poet by his Lectures of Honour and Courage, delivered in moving Verse to the Army, ravish'd them to such a Degree with the Thoughts of dying for their Country, that, rushing on with a furious Transport to meet their Enemies, they gave them an entire Overthrow, and by one decisive Battle put an happy Conclusion to the War (c).

Before they adventur'd to join their Enemies, they endeavour'd by Prayers, Sacrifices, and Vows, to engage Heaven to their Assistance, and sung an Hymn to Mars, call'd παιὼν ἰμωλήριον; as that, sung to Apollo after a prosperous Battle, was term'd παιὼν ἱπνικόν (d).

The

The Lacedæmonians had a peculiar Custom of sacrificing to the Muses; which was either design'd to soften and mollify their passionate Transports, it being their Custom to enter the Battle calm and sedate (a); or to animate them to perform noble and heroical Exploits deserving to be transmitted by those Goddesses to Posterity (b.). The Soothsayers inspected all the Sacrifices to presage the Success of the Battle; and, till the Omens prov'd favourable, they rather chose tamely to resign their Lives to the Enemy, than to defend themselves. The Spartans especially were above measure addicted to this Superstition: For in the famous Battle at Plateæ, when Mardonius the Persian General had fallen upon the Grecians, Pausanias the Spartan, who at that Time commanded the Grecian Army, offering Sacrifice, found it not acceptable to the Gods, and thereupon commanded his Lacedæmonians, laying down their Bucklers at their Feet, patiently to abide his Commands: The Priests offer'd one Sacrifice after another, but all without Success, the Barbarians all the Time charging upon them, and wounding and slaying them in their Ranks; till at length Pausanias turning himself towards the Temple, with Hands lifted up to Heaven, and Tears in his Eyes, besought Juno of Cithæron, and the rest of the tutelar Deities of the Plateans, that, if the Fates would not favour the Grecians with Victory, they would grant at least, that by some remarkable Exploit they might demonstrate to their Enemies, that they waged War with Men of true Courage and Bravery. These Prayers were no sooner finished, when the Sacrifices appearing propitious, the Signal was given, and they fell with such Resolution upon the Persians, that in a short Time they entirely defeated their whole Army (c).

Their Signals are commonly divided into Σύμβολα, and Σημεία, which Words sometimes, indeed are us'd promiscuously, but in Propriety of Speech are distinguish'd.

Σύμβολα. were of two Kinds, either φωναῖα, or ὄρατα. i. e. pronounced by the Mouth, or visible to the Eye: The first term'd ὀρθήματα, the latter παρασυνθήματα.

Συνθήμα, in Latin Tessera, or the Word, communicated by the General to the subordinate Officers by them to the whole Army, as a Mark of Distinction to know Friends from Enemies (d). It commonly contain'd some good Omen, or the Name of some Deity worshipped by their Country, or General, and from whom they expected Success in their Enterprizes. Cyrus, for Example, us'd Ζεὺς Συμμαχος, ἡγεμὼν, or Ὠτήρ (e); Cæsar, Venus, genitrix (f); Augustus, Apollon (g): But this Custom often prov'd of fatal and pernicious Consequence; for by frequently questioning one another they bred Confusion among themselves, and (which was no less dangerous) discovered the Word to the Enemies: As we find happening in the Fight between the Athenians and the Syracusans, spoken of by Thucydides (h). It became likewise the Occasion of several mischievous Stratagems, one of which we find practis'd by an Arcadian Captain in

(a) Plutarchus περὶ αλεξάνδρου. (b) Idem, Lycurgo. (c) Idem, Aristide.

in a War with Lacedæmon; when engaging in the Night all the Tessera he gave his Soldiers was, That they should forthwith kill whoever demanded the Word; whereby they easily distinguish'd and slew the Spartans, themselves being undiscover'd, and therefore secure (a).

Παροίσθημα was a visible Character of Distinction, as nodding their Heads, waving their Hands, clashing their Weapons, or such like (b).

Σημεῖα were Ensigns, or Flags, the Elevation whereof was a Signal to join Battle, the Depression to desist (c). Of these there were different Sorts, several of which were adorn'd with Images of Animals, or other Things bearing peculiar Relations to the Cities they belong'd to; the Athenians, for Instance, bore an Owl in their Ensigns (d), as being sacred to Minerva, the Protectress of their City: The Thebans a Sphinx (e), in Memory of the famous Monster overcome by Oedipus: The Persians paid Divine Honours to the Sun, and therefore represented him in their Ensigns (f).

The Σημεῖον was frequently a Purple Coat upon the Top of a Spear, as appears from Conon's in Polyænus, and Cleomenes's in Plutarch: Nor was it uncommon to use other Colours. Polybius, speaking of the Fight between Antigonus and Cleomenes (g), tells us, "That the Illyrians, having Orders to begin the Battle, were to receive a Signal by a white Flag, that should be spread from the nearest Post to Olympus: But the Signal to be given to the Megalopolitans and the Cavalry, was a Purple Coat, which was to be advanced in the Air, where Antigonus himself was posted."

The antient Grecian Signals were lighted Torches thrown from both Armies by Men call'd συσφόροι or συσφοροί, who were Priests of Mars, and therefore held inviolable; and, having cast their Torches, had safe Regress (h): Whence of Battles fought with Transport of Fury, wherein no Quarter was given, it was usual to say, ὡς ἰσφύοντες, i. e. Not so much as a Torch bearer escaped. To this Custom there are frequent Allusions in Greek and Latin Poets: Lycophron, speaking of the Phœnicians, who by stealing Io began the Quarrel between Europe and Asia, saith, Ἐχθρα δὲ συσφόν ἦσαν ἡπίροις διπλάζεις (i).

They rais'd envenom'd Discord, who then shook
Her baleful Torch within two Continents.

Hence also Statius (k);

*Prima manu rutilam de vertice Larissæo
Ostendit Bellona facem.* —

Bellona first from the Larissæan Tow'r
Shakes the dire Torch. —

Claudian likewise, with others, whom I shall forbear to mention, takes notice of this Custom (a) ;

*Tisiphone quatiens infesto lumine pinum,
Armatus ad castra vocat pallentia manes.*

Tisiphone summons the Ghosts t' appear,
Shaking a livid Flame as Signal of the War.

These being laid aside, Shells of Fishes succeeded, which they sounded in the manner of Trumpets, which in those Days were not invented (b). Hence Theognis's Riddle may easily be interpreted,

Ἦδη γὰρ μὲ κίχλην θαλάτῃσι· οἰκαδὲ νεκρὸς,
Τιθνηκᾶς ζῶν φησιγόμεν· Τρόματι.

A Sea-Inhabitant with living Mouth Spoke to me to go Home, tho' dead it was.

Triton's Shell-Trumpet is famous in Poetical Story : Whence Ovid speaking of Neptune (c),

—— *supraque profundum
Extantem, atque humeros innato murice testum
Cæruleum Tritona vocat, conchæque sonaci
Inspirare jubet, fluctusque et flumina signo
Jam revocare dato, cava buccina sumitur illi
Fertilis, in latum quæ turbine crescit ab imo.*

Already Triton at his Call appears
Above the Waves, a Tyrian Robe he wears,
And in his Hand a crooked Trumpet bears.
The Sovereign bids him peaceful Sounds inspire,
And give the Waves the Signal to retire :
His writhen Shell he takes, whose narrow Vent
Grows by degrees into a large Extent.

Mr. Dryden.

And most of the Poets mention this Custom in their Description of the primitive Wars ; Whence Theocritus in his Poem about the Exploits of Cæstor and Pollux (d),

Ἡ δ' Ἀμυκῶν, καὶ κόχλων ἰδὼν μυκάσασθαι κοῖλον,
Οἱ δὲ θεῶς συνάγεσθαι ὑπὸ χριτᾶς παλαίνεσθαι,
Κόχλω φουσαθῆναι, αἰὲν βίβρυκες κομώοντες.

This said, Amycus did his Trumpet sound,
The Valleys rung, and echo'd all around.

Metamorph. Lib. I. (d) Idyll, αβ'. v. 75.

Thro' every distant Field the Noise was heard,
And Crouds of stout Bebrycians soon appear'd. Mr. Creek.

Lycophron also, speaking of the Trojan War (a),

Καὶ δὴ καλαΐθαι γαῖαν ὀρχηστῆς Ἀρης,
Στρόμβω τὸν αἵματηρὸν ἐξάρχων νόμον.

Great Mars, that nimble God of War,
Invigorates the Youth by Sound of Shell
Twining and circling into various Rounds ;
Thus was the Land laid waste, thus rag'd the fiery God.

Where tho' the Scholiast falls foul upon the Poet for introducing Shells at a Time when Trumpets were in use, which he tells us may be made appear from Homer ; yet herein he seems to be too audacious, it being observable (b), that, tho' Homer mentions Trumpets, yet they never make any Part of the Description of his heroical Battles, but only furnish him with a Simile, or Allusion ; as happens in the Place cited by Tzetzes (c),

Ὡς δ' ὅτ' ἀριζήλη φωνὴ, ὅτε τ' ἴαχε Καλπιγξ,
Ἄστυ περιπλομένων δηίων ὑπὸ θυμοφρίσεων·
Ὡς τότε ἀριζήλη φωνὴ γύνειτ' Αἰακίδαο.

When Foes encamp'd around a City lie,
And wait Surrender from the Enemy,
Great Fear runs thrilling thro' their Breast with in
The Walls, when echoing Trumpets do begin ;
Such was Achilles' Voice, such Dread appear'd
In all the Dardan Host, 'twas so distinctly heard. J. A.

Whence it may be presum'd, that Trumpets were indeed used in Homer's Time, being then only a late Invention, and not so antient as the Trojan War, as the old Scholiast hath also observ'd (d). Virgil indeed appears to give some Countenance to Tzetzes's Opinion, when he speaks of Misenus, whom he makes to have serv'd Hector in the Trojan War, and afterwards Aeneas, in the Office of a Trumpeter (e) ;

— illi Misenum in littore sicco,
Ut venere, vident indigna morie peremptum ;
Misenum Æoliden, quo non præstantior alter
Ære ciere viros, Martemque accendere cantu :
Hectoris hic magni fuerat comes ; Hectora circum
Et lituo pugnas insignis obibat & basta.

Misenus, dead by some untimely End,
The brave Misenus, above all renown'd
To make with swelling Notes the chearful Trumpets sound.
New Vigour would encourage on the War,
Whene'er his Trumpet eccho'd from afar.
He was th' illustrious Hector's Intimate,
The Ranks he'd traverse in Heroic State,
With Spear he'd exercise, with Trumpet animate;
But when Achilles Hector overcame,
And slew him in the Field, as great a Name

J. A.

But here the Braxen Trumpet and Lituus are taken from the Practice of the Poet's own Age, by a Figure familiar to Men of his Profession; for Misenus was never acquainted with so rare a Contrivance; and though we find him so proud of his Art, as to challenge the Gods of the Sea, yet 'twas not to a Contention on the Trumpet, but on a Shell, the Instrument us'd by these Deities: Whence the same Poet, who may be suppos'd to be the best Interpreter of his own Words, speaks thus in the Verses immediately following:

*Sed tum forte, cava dum personat æquora concha
Demens, & cantu vocat in certamina Divos,
Æmulus exceptum Triton, si credere dignum est,
Inter saxa virum spumosa immerferat unda.*

But whilst the Sea-Gods proudly he defy'd,
Sounding a Writhen Shell by th' Ocean's Side,
As his due Fate for his ambitious Sound,
Him, if Report deceive not, Triton drown'd.

Nevertheless, in the most Eastern Countries Trumpets were us'd several Ages before. They are several Times mention'd in the Sacred History of the Jews, whose Priests Office it was to sound the Alarm upon that Instrument (a).

There were six several Sorts of Trumpets (b), which have occasioned the Disagreement in ancient Writers concerning the first Authors of the Invention; it being common for them to ascribe to the Inventor of any one Sort the Honour of the first Contrivance.

1. The first Trumpet was contriv'd by Minerva, the common Mother and Patroness of almost all Arts and useful Inventions: Whence she was honour'd with the Title of Σάλπιγξ, mention'd in Lycophron (a).

Αὐτὴ γὰρ ἄρεα ἄρδιν εὐθυνοῖ χροοῖν
Σάλπιγξ

Under this Name she was worshipp'd in a Temple dedicated to her at Argos (b): But Pausanias is rather of Opinion, that this Trumpet was the Invention of one of Hercules's Sons, called Tyrrhenus, whose Son Hegelaus (having communicated it to a Party of Dorians, the Subjects of Temenus) in Memory of the Invention, and out of Gratitude to the Goddess for her Assistance therein, gave her this Surname (c).

2. The second was the Egyptian Trumpet, call'd χυμν, Osiris's Contrivance: It was round, and us'd at Sacrifices to call the Congregation together (d).

3. The third was invented in Gallia Celtica, where it was term'd παρυξ: It gave a very shrill Sound, but was not very large: It was cast in a Mould, and had its Mouth adorn'd with the Figure of some Animal. They had a Pipe of Lead, thro' which they blew into the Trumpet when they sounded.

4. The fourth was first us'd in Paphlagonia, and call'd βόιον, from βς, or the Figure of an Ox upon it's proper Orifice; it had a deep Bass Sound.

5. The fifth was invented in Media, had also a deep Note, and was founded by the Help of a Pipe compos'd of Reeds.

6. The sixth was call'd Σάλπιγξ Τυρρηνική, because invented by the Tyrrhenians, from whom it was communicated to the Grecians by one Archondas, who came to assist the Heracleidae, or Posterity of Hercules (e). Others attribute the first Contrivance of it to Tyrrhenus, Hercules's Son (f). It's Orifice was cleft, and sent forth an exceeding loud and shrill Sound, not unlike the Pbrygian Flute; whence it became of all the rest the most proper for Engagements: Ulysses, in Sophocles compares it to the Goddess Minerva's Voice (g).

Ω φθίγμ' Αθάνας φιλτάτης ἱμοῖ διων,

Leaves an Impression of its echoing Notes.

J. A.

Where the Scholiast observes, that Minerva's Voice is resembled to the Tyrrhene Trumpet, because it was easily known by reason of it's Loudness, as that Trumpet excell'd all others, and was at the first Hearing easy to be distinguish'd from them.

These were the most common and remarkable Sorts of Trumpets; others may perhaps now and then occur in Authors; such as the Lybian mention'd by Suidas, and one of Sophocles's Scholiasts (a), but seem to be of less Note, and not so frequently us'd.

Several other Instruments were us'd in sounding Alarms; the σὺγγυξ, or Pipe in Arcadia; the ωνάρις sometimes term'd μαγάρις, in Sicily (b). The Cretans were call'd to Battle by the Sound of αὐλὸς, or Flutes (c); as others, of Cithara, Lutes or viols (d); but, as most of the ancient Writers affirm, of Lyra, or Harps (e), which, Plutarch tells us, were not laid aside for many Ages (f): The Person that sounded the Alarm, the Cretans call'd ἰσχυρὸς, and others term'd him ἰσχυρὸς (g), from a Sort of Trumpet call'd ἰσχυρὸς.

The Lacedaemonians are particularly remarkable for beginning their Engagements with a Concert of Flutes (b); the Reason of which Practice being demanded of Agessilaus, he reply'd, "That it was to distinguish Cowards;" such being unable, by reason of their Consternation, to keep Time with their Feet to the Musick, as was their Custom. This Answer is indeed facetious, and not wholly without Truth; yet seems not fully to comprehend the Design of this Custom. Valerius Maximus is yet farther from the Truth, and stands in direct Opposition to it, when he supposes it intended to raise the Courage of the Soldiers, that they might begin the Onset with greater Violence and Fury; for Thucydides, with whom the rest of the ancient Historians agree, assures us, that the Design of it was rather to render them cool and sedate, Trumpets and other Instruments being more proper to inspire with Heat and Rage; but these Passions they thought rather apt to beget Disorder and Confusion, than to produce any noble and memorable Actions; Valour being not the Effect of a sudden and vanishing Transport, but proceeding from a settled and habitual Firmness and Constancy of Mind: Wherefore they endeavour'd not with Noise and Haile, but with compos'd Minds and settled Countenances, to advance in a majestick and deliberate Pace towards their Enemies. The Manner of it is describ'd by Plutarch (i), who tells us, "That the Army being drawn up in Battle-Array, and the Enemy

For (proceeds my Author) Men thus dispos'd were not likely to be possess'd with Fear, or transported with Fury; but they proceeded with a deliberate Valour, full of Hope and good Assurance, as if some Divinity had sensibly assisted them.” Maximus the Tyrian attributes to this Method those great Successes and numerous Victories, that have render'd the Spartan Name famous in all succeeding Ages; but it seems peculiarly calculated and adapted to the Discipline and Temper of that State; and scarce to be imitated, till the old Lacedæmonian Resolution and unparallel'd Firmness of Mind shall be recall'd.

The rest of the Greeks advanc'd with eager Haste and Fury, and in the Beginning of their Onset gave a general Shout to encourage and animate themselves, and strike Terror into their Enemies: This was call'd ἀλλαλαγὴ, from the Soldiers repeating ἀλλὰ. Suidas makes them to have cry'd also ἰαλῶν. The first Author of it was Pan, Bacchus's Lieutenant General in his Indian Expedition; where, being encompass'd in a Valley with an Army of Enemies far superior to them in Number, he advis'd the God to order his Men in the Night to give a general Shout, which so surprized the opposite Army, that they immediately fled to their Camp: Whence it came to pass, that all sudden Fears impress'd upon Mens Spirits without any just Reason, were call'd by the Greeks and Romans, Panick Terrors (a).

This Custom seems to have been us'd by almost all Nations, barbarous as well as civil; and is mention'd by all Writers that treat of Martial Affairs: Homer has oblig'd us with several elegant Descriptions of it, too numerous to be insert'd in this Place: I shall however give you one out of the fourth Iliad (b), where he resembles the Military Noise to Torrents, rolling with impetuous Force from Mountains into the subjacent Vallies:

Ὡς δ' ὅτι χυμᾶρ' ἔρριπον ποταμῶν, κατ' ὄρεσσι ῥέοντες,
 Ἐς μισγαγκίαν συμβαλλεται ὄμβριμον ὕδωρ

J. A.

Some may infer from the Beginning of Homer's third Iliad, that this Noise was only a barbarous Custom; practis'd indeed by the Trojans, but laugh'd at by the more civiliz'd Grecians (a):

Αὐτὰρ ἔπει κόσμηθαι ἄμ' ἡγυμόνοισιν ἱεῖται,
Τρῶες μὲν κλαγγὴ τ', ἱοὺ καὶ ἴσαν δριδύς ὥς,

As, when the nipping Winter's Season's past,
To a Pygmean Combat Cranes make haste,
In cheartful Flights they blacken from afar
The Clouds, and gladly meditate a War;
With Noise and Clangor eagerly they fly:
Such were the clam'rous Shouts of th' Trojan Enemy.
Silent and wise the Argian Legions move,
Fix'd and united by a mutual Love,
Auxiliary Aid resolv'd to show,
If an impending Loss came threat'ning from the Foe. J. A.

But this is only to be understood of their March; as appears likewise from another Passage in the fourth Iliad, where the Poet has admirably represented the Order and regular March of the Grecians, with the Confusion and disorderly Motion of the Barbarians (b):

(b) V. 427.

Ἀρχὴς μακρυῖται, ἀκούσσαι ὅσα ἀρῶν·

With stern and awful Visage Chiefs bear Sway,
 While all their Forces silently obey :
 In thick Battalions they march along :
 But who wou'd think that such a num'rous Throng
 Shou'd fill the Plains, and scarce e'er use a Tongue ;
 Such pow'ful Chiefs the Grecian Heroes were,
 Thus did their Conduct gracefully appear :
 And thus they march ; their burnish'd Arms afar
 Display the Lustre of a future War.
 Not in such State advanc'd the Trojan Rout,
 With thund'ring Peals of Noise and pompous Shout
 A Tumult they did raise, and th' Air did rend.
 Thus, when a Swain large Flocks of Ewes hath penn'd,
 To milk their burthen'd Dugs, they doleful bleat
 Hearing their Lambkins bleating for the Teat. J. A.

Where 'tis manifest he only speaks of their March, because a few Verses after, where he comes to describe the Engagement of the two Armies, he does it in the Words before cited ; and in all other Places he mentions the great Noise and Clamour of both Parties in their Encounters. Thus in the sixteenth Iliad he speaks of Achilles's Myrmidons (a),

Εἰ δ' ἴπισσιν Τρῳέσσιν ἀλλήλῃς ἀμφὶ δὲ νῆις
 Σμυρδαλίῳ κοῖαζεν αὖσαντων ὅπ' Ἀχαιοῶν.

The Grecians press o' th' Trojans with a Noise,
 The Ships reflect the Echo of their Voice.

And a little before (b) ;

Εκ νηῶν ἰχίοντο, βοῇ δ' ἀσέβητο ἑρῶμεν.

They throng out of their Ships with joyful Shout.

Nay so necessary, and almost essential, was this Shout to a Battle, that φύλοπις, αὐτῆ, and βοῇ, are us'd by the Poet as equivalent Terms for μάχη : And when he commends his Heroes for being βοῇ ἀγαθοί, he often means no more than μάχη ἀγαθοί, excellent Warriors. 'Twas also one Part of a good Soldier's and Commander's Character, to have a strong Voice, not only because it was the Custom to signify their Orders by Word of Mouth before Trumpets were invented, but for the Terror wherewith it surpriz'd and astonish'd their Enemies (c) : Instances of this Nature are very frequent in Homer, where Hector,
Achilles,

(a) V. 279. (b) V. 267. (c) Eustath. Iliad. B. p. 187. Iliad. γ. p. 305. Iliad. κ. p. 799, &c. Ed. Basil.

Achilles, and several others strike a Consternation into the adverse Party with a Shout: And later Authors give this good Quality it's peculiar Commendation; Plutarch in particular, in his Character of Martius Coriolanus the Roman General, observes, that he was not only dreadful to meet in the Field by reason of his Hand and Stroke, but (what he tells us Cato requir'd in an accomplish'd Warrior) insupportable to an Enemy for the very Tone and Accent of his Voice, and the sole Terror of his Aspect.

In the heroical Wars the Generals fought at the Head of their Armies, as appears in all Homer's Battles: Whence they are frequently term'd πρωμαχοι, and πρόμοι, because they did πρωμαχίζειν τῷ στρατῷ, fight before their Armies: Thus when he led up the Trojans (a):

Τρωσὶν μὲν πρωμαχίζειν Ἀλέξανδρον Διοιτῆα.

At th' Head o' th' Trojans God-like Paris fought.

And when Achilles sends out his Soldiers to defend the Grecian Ships, having allotted to the rest of his Officers their several Posts, he places Patroclus and Automedon, as chief Commanders before the Front (b):

Πάτρων δὲ πρωμαχοῖσι δὲ αἰεὶ θυρήσσοισι,
Πάτροκλος τε ἢ Ἀντιμῆδων, ἵνα θυμὸν ἴχωσι,
Πρόσθ' Μυρμιδόνων πελαμιζέμεν.

Before the rest two well-arm'd Chiefs appear'd,
Patroclus and Automedon, prepar'd
With equal Courage to begin the Fight
At the Head o' th' Myrmidons,————

To heap up more Instances in a Thing so well known, would be to no Purpose. In wiser Ages this Practice was laid aside, and Generals, considering how much the Event of the Battle depended upon the Preservation of their Persons, usually chose safer Posts, and were more cautious how they adventur'd themselves into Danger.

The Retreat, and other Commands, seem usually to have been sounded upon the same Instrument wherewith the Alarm was given: Yet in those Places where the Alarm was sounded by soft and gentle Musick, the Retreat and other Orders we find sometimes signify'd upon louder Instruments: Which may be observ'd of the Lacedæmonians, who seem to have us'd Trumpets, in signifying the General's Orders, as appears from Polybius (c), who reports that Cleomenes commanded a Party of his Army to change their Posts by Sound of Trumpet.

The Lacedæmonians, when their Enemies fled out of the Field, were not allow'd to prosecute their Victory, or make long and eager Pursuits suits after them (a) : While they made Opposition, and were able to fight for Mastery, they contended with invincible Courage and Resolution to bear them down ; but when they ceas'd to make Resistance, and yielded the Day, they gave them Liberty to provide for their Safety by Flight, pursuing them only a very short Space, and that by slow and easy Paces : The Reason of which Custom Pausanias (b) accounts for, from their strict and inviolate Observance of Order and Discipline, which made them rather chuse to let their Enemies escape, than by breaking their Ranks to overtake them. Plutarch's Relation seems also rational, and well suited to the old Spartan Temper ; " That the Spartans, having routed an Enemy, pursued him " till they had compleated their Victory, and then sounded a Retreat ; thinking it base, and unworthy of true Grecians, to cut " Men in Pieces that had ceas'd from resisting them, and left them " the Field : Which Manner of Dealing with those they had conquered, did not only shew their Magnanimity and Greatness of " Soul, but had a politic End in it too : For their Enemies, knowing that they kill'd only those who made Resistance, and gave " Quarter to the rest, generally thought it their best Way to consult their Safety by an early Flight (c)."

One Thing farther remains before the Conclusion of this Chapter, viz. That it was frequent amongst the ancient Grecians to put their Cause upon the Issue of a single Combat, and to decide their Quarrels by two, or more Champions on each Side ; and their Kings and great Commanders were so eager in their Pursuit after Glory, and so tender of the Lives of their Subjects, that they frequently sent Challenges to their Rival Princes, to end their Quarrel by a single Encounter, that by the Death of one of them they might prevent the Effusion of more Blood. Remarkable Instances hereof we have in Xanthus, King of Bæotia, who, challenging the King of Attica, was slain by him, and so ended a dangerous War between those States (d) ; and in Pittacus the famous Mitylenian, who slew Phryno the Athenian General in a single Combat. Ancient Histories are full of such Examples, as likewise of Wars happily concluded by a small Number commission'd by mutual Agreement to decide the Controversy : The Lacedæmonians furnish us with one memorable Instance in their Wars with Argos about the Title to Thyrea, which was determin'd by three hundred on each Side : Nor was the Conclusion of the War between the Tegeans and Pheneans, two small States in Arcadia, less remarkable, being effected by a Combat of three Brothers on each Side (e), all the Circumstances of whose Story run exactly parallel to that of the Horatii and Curiatii, so famous in Roman Histories. The Eastern Countries were acquainted with the same Custom, as may appear from Goliath's challenging the Israelitish Host to give

C H A P. X.

Of their Sieges, with the most remarkable of their Inventions, and Engines us'd therein.

THERE are no Footsteps of any Siege among the primitive Grecians; their Cities were not fortify'd with Walls, but lay open to all Invaders; and their Inhabitants, once vanquish'd in open Field, became an easy Prey to the Conquerors. Wherefore 'tis not to be wonder'd, that the People of those Times enjoy'd no fix'd and settled Habitations, but frequently remov'd from one Part of the Country to another, being forced to quit their Seats, whenever they were coveted by a Power superior to their own (a).

This moving and unsettled Condition, wherein they continued for some Ages, caus'd them to attempt several Methods to secure themselves: Some built their Cities upon the Tops of inaccessible Rocks and Mountains, whence they could easily repel a greater Force of Enemies: Others, whose Situation was not so defensible, were driven to seek other Ways for their Safety; till at length some Heads of no vulgar Understanding brought forth an amazing Contrivance to inclose their Houses and Possessions within Walls: This at first was look'd on as a Work so wonderful, so far above human Capacity, that the Gods were frequently call'd from their blessed Mansions to undertake it. The Walls of Troy (to mention no more) were of divine Workmanship, and rais'd by no meaner Persons than Neptune and Apollo: But, if Mortals had the Happiness to project and finish so great a Design, they seldom fail'd of being translated to Heaven, and having their Names enroll'd among the exalted Beings, to whom they were thought to make near Approaches, whilst on Earth.

And, since it was their Custom to immortalize the first Author of every little Contrivance, 'tis no Wonder if they conferr'd the same Honours on those great Benefactors to whom they were obliged for the Security and quiet Possession of whatever the rest of their Deities had gratify'd them with. Once, indeed, inclosed within Walls, they look'd upon themselves safe from all Assaults; and, had not a weak Opposition within been sufficient to repel much greater Forces of Invaders, such a Town as Troy could never have held out ten Years against an hundred thousand Besiegers.

Nor were the Grecians of later Ages, however renown'd for Knowledge in Military Affairs, very willing to undertake, or expert in managing Sieges; but rather chose to end their Quarrels, if possible, by one

(a) Thucydides Initio, Lib. I.

one decisive Battle, than to undergo the Fatigue and other Inconmodities of so tedious, so dangerous, and expensive a Method.

Of all the Grecians, the most averſe from undertaking Leaguers, and the moſt unſuſful in carrying them on to Advantage, were the Lacedæmonians; inſomuch, that after Mardonius's Deſeat at Platæa, when a Body of Persians had taken Refuge in ſome wooden Fortifications, they could find no Means to drive them thence, but muſt have been forced to retire, had not the Athenians and ſome other Grecians advanced to their Aſſiſtance (a). For we are told by Plutarch, That their Law-giver oblig'd them by a ſpecial Injunction not eaſily to engage in beſieging Towns; and to loſe their Lives in ſuch Undertakings was accounted inglorious, and unworthy a Spartan, as we learn from the ſame Author (b), who, ſpeaking of Lyſander's being ſlain before the Gates of a little Bæotian Town call'd Haliartus, tells us, "That like ſome common Soldier, or one of the Forlorn Hope, he caſt away his Life ingloriouſly, giving Teſtimony to the ancient Spartans, that they did well to avoid Storming of Walls, where the ſtoutest Man may chance to fall by the Hand not only of an abject Fellow, but of a Boy or Woman; as they ſay Achilles was ſlain by Paris at the Scean Gate of Troy (c);" Pyrhus alſo, the great King of Epirus, fell by the Hand of a Woman at Argos (d).

When they endeavour'd to poſſeſs themſelves of a Town or Caſtle, it was uſual firſt to attempt it by Storm, ſurrounding it with their whole Army, and attacking it in all Quarters at once, which the Greeks call'd συνίσις, the Romans, coronâ cingere. When this Method prov'd ineffectual, they frequently deſiſted from their Enterprize: But, if reſolved to proſecute it, they prepared for a longer Siege; in carrying on which they ſeem not to have proceeded in any conſtant and ſettled Method, but to have varied it according to the Direction of their Generals, as well as the Difference of Time, Place, and other Circumſtances.

When they deſigned to lay cloſe Siege to a Place, the firſt Thing they went about was ἀποτειχιſμὸς, or περιειχιſμὸς, the Works of Circumvallation, which we find ſometimes to have conſiſted of a double Wall or Rampire, raiſed up of Turfs, called in Greek ἐλπίδοι, and ελπίδια, in Latin, Ceſpites. The interior Fortification was deſign'd to prevent ſudden and unexpected Sallies from the Town, and to deprive it of all Poſſibility of Succour from without; the exterior to ſecure them from Foreign Enemies, that might come to the Relief of the Beſieged. Thus, when the Peloponneſians inveſted Platæa, Thucydides reports, they raiſed a double Wall, one towards the City, the other towards Athens, to prevent all Danger on that Side: The Middle Space, which was ſixteen Feet, was taken up with Lodges for Guards and Centinels, built at due Diſtances one from another; yet ſo cloſe, that at a diſtant View the whole Pile appeared to be one broad Wall, with Turrets on both Sides, after every Tenth of which was a larger Tower extended from Wall to Wall.

Engines

(a) Herodotus, Lib. IX. cap. LXIX. (b) Plutarch, Sylla. (c) Homer, Iliad. χ'. v. 360. (d) Plutarchus Pyrhus.

Engines were call'd by the ancient Greeks μάχματα, and afterwards μάχματα. The first Invention of them the Grecians claim to themselves, being not easily induced to allow the Contrivance of any Art to other Nations; for it was their Custom to travel into Egypt, India, and other Eastern Countries, to furnish themselves with Sciences and Inventions, which afterwards they made public in Europe, and vented as Productions of their own: Hence was deriv'd most of the Grecian Philosophy: and as for Engines used in Sieges, it appears they were invented in the Eastern Nations many Ages before Greece had the least Knowledge of, or Occasion for, them: Moses's Times seem not to have been unacquainted with them (a); several of the Jewish Kings likewise appear to have known the Use of them; whereas the Grecians, till Homer's Time, are not found to have had the least Hint of any such Thing: Statius indeed carries them as high as the Trojan War, and, speaking of the various Presents sent to Achilles by the Grecians, in order to carry on the War, reports, that Pylos and Messene furnish'd him with Engines to batter the Walls;

Murorum tormenta Pylos Messenaeque tradunt.

Large batt'ring Engines are from Pylos sent,
And from Messene.——

But the Poet seems to have forgotten the rude and unskilful Age of this Hero, and to have form'd his Description from the Practice of his own Times; since Authors of better Credit have no Mention of any such Thing. Homer indeed speaks of κρόσσαι, which some ancient Interpreters take for κλίμακες, Scaling Ladders (b);

——— οἱ μὲν ἔπειτα

κρόσσαι ἐπέβαινον, ἀκαχμέναι δ' ἄρα τ' ἔχοντες.

Bearing well-pointed Spears, these straight ascend
The Scaling-Ladders.——

But it may with no less Propriety be taken for the Pinnacles of Towers, as we find it us'd in the following Verse (c):

Κρόσσας μὲν ἀπὸ γυναι ἔρυσσι καὶ ἔρειπον ἐπαλξίαις.

The Tower's lofty Pinnacles they raz'd,
Demolish'd all their Bulwarks.——

Others again will have them to have been as ancient as the Theban War, and to have been the Contrivance of Capaneus, one of the seven Champions; the Story of whose being knocked down with Thunderbolts was ground'd on no better a Foundation, than that, attempting to scale scale the Walls of Thebes with Ladders, he was beaten down and slain with Stones: And since the Contrivance is so easy and obvious, it may not be wholly improbable, that even those Ages were acquainted with it: However, the different Sorts of Ladders were invented afterwards, when some of them were πηκταί (a), plicatiles, folded; others διαλυσταί, solutiles, to be taken in Pieces (b), for the Convenience of Carriage. The Matter they were composed of was likewise very different, being not only Wood, but Ropes, Leather, &c.

The rest of the Engines seem however to have been later: The Ram indeed is said by Pliny to have been invented in the Trojan War, and to have given Occasion to the Fable of the Wooden Horse, built by Epeus; it being the constant Practice of those Times to wrap up the Original of every Invention in Fables: But this is only Conjecture, and may with the same Ease be deny'd, as asserted. Athenaus indeed speaks of this Engine as very ancient (c), but doth not fix it's Invention to any determinate Time, only observes that the Romans were obliged for it to the Grecians; and since Vitruvius gives the Honour of its Contrivance to the Carthaginians in their Siege of Gades, and neither Homer nor any Greek Writer for many Ages after has the least Mention thereof, there seems little Reason to credit Pliny's Report. 'Tis probable, however, that those Ages might have some small Helps in Taking Towns contriv'd, as by several others, so particularly by Epeus, who is famous in poetical Story for being an Artificer, and (as Lycophron reports) was very serviceable on that Account to the Grecian Army:

Πόρτην μὲν ἰσθλὸν, πλοῦκα δ' ἐν κλίῳ δορὺς, καὶ πλοῖστα τέχναι; ὑφιλήσαντα στρατὸν (d).

Dauntless in boxing, but dismay'd at th' Sound
Of clashing Arms; yet by his famous Art
He was most useful to the Grecian Fleet,

But these Devices seem to have been exceeding contemptible, and unartificial; and therefore were wholly laid aside in wiser Ages, and, it may be, never practis'd but at their first Invention. The only constant Instruments used by the ancient Grecians in demolishing Walls, were (for aught appears to the contrary) those they call'd τρύπανα, in Latin, Terebræ, which were long Irons with sharp Ends. Wherefore 'tis reasonable to conclude that most of their famous Engines were invented about the Time of the Peloponnesian War, wherein 'tis plain from Thucydides, they were used. Diodorus and (e) Plutarch (f) will have Pericles to have contriv'd several of them by the Assistance of Artemon, an Artificer of Clazomenæ, as Rams, Tortoises, &c. yet Cornelius Nepos reports, that some of them were used in the Age before by Miltiades, when he besieged Paros. Plutarch also himself, when he reports out of Ephorus, that battering Engines were first employ'd in the Samian War, by Pericles, and compos'd at that Time by Artemon, being then a strange and surprizing Sight, presently after adds, that Heraclides of Pontus will have that Engineer to have flourish'd several Years before the Samian War; so that nothing of Certainty can be expected in this Matter. The Principal of the Grecian Inventions were these which follow:

Χελωνη, testudo, a Tortoise, a defensive Invention, so call'd from covering and sheltering the Soldiers, as a Tortoise is covered by it's Shell. Several Sorts we find of it; as,

1. Χελωνη στρατιωτικη, testudo militaris, termed sometimes συνασπισμός, when the Soldiers drawn up close to one another, and the hindermost Ranks bowing themselves, placed their Targets above their Heads; as if we suppose the first Rank to stand erect, the rest to stoop lower and lower by Degrees, till the last Rank kneel'd upon the Ground; the Men in the Front and on the Sides holding their Targets before their Bodies, the rest covering the Heads of those that were placed before them; so that the whole Body resembled a Pent-House or Roof cover'd with Tiles, down which the Enemy's missive Weapons easily glided without Prejudice to the Soldiers underneath. This Invention was us'd in Field-Battles, but more frequently in surprizing Cities, before the Besieged were prepared for Defence; and serv'd to protect the Besiegers in their Approach to the Walls.

2. Χελωνη χωσρίς was four-square: The chief Design thereof was (as the Name imports) to guard the Soldiers in filling Ditches, and casting up Mounts.

3. Χελωνη οβυς was triangular, with its Front shelving downwards, for the Protection of the Pioneers, who undermin'd Walls.

4. To these may be added Testudo arietaria, wherewith those that battered the Walls were protected; of which afterwards.

Γιγάραι, Wicker-Hurdles, resembling the Roman vineæ, which the Soldiers held over their Heads. The Word came at length to signify Trifles, from the Siege of Syracuse, where the Athenians calling continually for Hurdles to cover them, the Besiegers in Derision cry'd γίγάραι, γίγάραι.

Another Engine compos'd of Boards, and like the Roman Pluteus, was us'd by Alexander's Soldiers, as we read in Curtius.

Χωμα. agger, a Mount, which was rais'd so high as to equal, if not exceed, the Top of the besieged Walls: The Sides were walled in with Bricks or Stones, or secured with strong Rafter to hinder it from falling; the Fore-part only, being by Degrees to be advanced nearer the Walls, remained bare. The Pile itself consisted of all Sorts of Materials, as Earth, Timber, Boughs, Stones, &c. as Thucydides reports in the Siege of Plataeæ: Into the Middle were cast also Wickers, and Twigs of Trees, to fasten, and, as it were, cement, the other Parts. The whole Fabrick is thus described by Lucan (a).

Πύργοι, Turres, moveable Towers of Wood, usually placed upon the Mount: They were driven upon Wheels, which were fix'd within the Bottom-Planks to secure them from the Enemies. Their Size was not always the same, but proportion'd to the Towers of the City they besieg'd; the Front was usually cover'd with Tiles, and in later Times the Sides were also guarded with the same Materials; their Tops were cover'd with raw Hides, and other Shrowds, to preserve them from Fire-Balls and missive Weapons: They were form'd into several Stories, which were able to carry not Soldiers only, but several Sorts of Engines; whence Silius (a);

The first Contrivance is attributed to some Artificers of Sicily about the Time of Dionysius the Tyrant; by some to Polyidus a Theſſalian, Philip of Macedon's Engineer (b); by others to Diades and Chiræas (c), who were Polyidus's Scholars, and entertain'd by Alexander in his Eastern Expedition: The last of these seem rather to have been Improvers of the former Invention, for we find mention of Wooden Towers in the elder Dionysius's Reign (d): It may be the Device of making πύργους φορητούς, portable Turrets, to be taken in Pieces and carry'd along with the Army, may be owing to them.

Κρίδις, Aries, the Ram, was an Engine with an Iron-Head, call'd in Greek κεφαλὴ or ἰμῶν, resembling a Ram's Head, wherewith they batter'd the Enemies Walls. Of this there were three Kinds:

1. The first was plain and unartificial, being nothing but a long Beam with an Iron-Head, which the Soldiers drove with main Force against the Wall.

2. The

(a) Lib. XIV. (b) Athenæus Mechanicis apud Turned. Vitruvius, Lib. X. cap. XIX. (c) Heron. cap. XIII. (d) Diodorus Siculus.

2. The second was hung with Ropes to another Beam, by the Help of which they thrust it forward with much greater Force.

3. The third differ'd only from the former, as being cover'd with a χλαμ, or Shroud, to guard the Soldiers, whence 'tis call'd Tefudo aristaria.

The Beam was sometimes no less than an hundred and twenty Feet in Length, and cover'd with Iron Plates, lest those who defended the Walls should set it on Fire; the Head was arm'd with as many Horns as they pleased: Josephus reports that one of Vespasian's Rams, the Length whereof was only fifty Cubits, which came not up to the Size of several of the Græcian Rams, had an Head as thick as ten Men, and twenty five Horns, each of which was as thick as one Man, and plac'd a Cubit's Distance from the rest; the Weight hung (as was customary) upon the Hinder-Part, weigh'd no less than one thousand and five hundred Talents; when it was remov'd from one Place to another, if it was not taken in Pieces, an hundred and fifty Yoke of Oxen, or three hundred Pair of Horses and Mules labour'd in drawing it; and no less than fifteen hundred Men employ'd their utmost Strength in forcing it against the Walls. At other Times we find these Rams driven upon Wheels.

Ελιπτολις was first invented by Demetrius, Son to Antigonus, who, having taken Rhodes, with several other Towns, by the Help of this Engine, was honour'd with the Surname of ελιπορητής. We have several Descriptions of it left by Vitruvius (a), Plutarch (b), and Diodorus (c), who, tho' differing in other Points, are thus far agreed, That it was a Machine of prodigious Bulk, not unlike the Ram cover'd with the Shroud, but vastly bigger, and of far greater Force; that it was driven both with Ropes and Wheels, and contain'd several other smaller Engines, out of which Stones and other missive Weapons were cast.

Καταβόλαι, are used in different Senses, sometimes for Arrows, sometimes for Engines, out of which Arrows were cast; in the latter of which Signification they were term'd ὀξύβελαι, and βολοσάσεις. They are likewise, tho' not very properly, taken for Engines to cast Stones; and we find them sometimes used to throw great Pieces of Timber. The Invention of them is ascribed to the Syrians by Pliny; but Diodorus (d) and Plutarch report, they were first contriv'd in Sicily, about the Time in which the elder Dionysius engag'd in the War with Carthage.

Engines to cast Stones were of several Sorts; some only for smaller Stones; such as οφιδόμοι, Slings; others for those also of a larger Size, call'd sometimes only by the general Names of μέγιστα and μαγχαναὶ ὄργανα, or απειρία ὄργανα, the former of which seem to signify all Sorts of Engines, the latter all those design'd to cast missive Weapons; sometimes by more peculiar Titles, as πίθεςτοι, πυρεβότοι, πυρεβὸς καὶ ὄργανα, which Names are yet so general, as to comprehend all Engines that cast Stones: Nor is there any proper Term, that I know.

know of for that famous Engine, out of which Stones, of a Size not less than Mill-stones, were thrown with so great Violence as to dash whole Houses in Pieces at a Blow ; 'Twas call'd indeed by the Romans Balista ; but this Name, tho' of Grecian Original, appears not to have been us'd in Greece : This Engine however was known there, and was the same with that us'd by the Romans, the force of which is thus express'd by Lucan (a) ;

*At saxum quoties ingenti verberis ictu
Excutitur, qualis rupes, quam vertice montis
Abscidit impulsu ventorum adjuncta vetustas ;
Frangit cuncta ruens, nec tantum corpora pressa
Exanimat, totos cum sanguine dissipat artus..*

Such is the Force, when massy Stones are thrown,
As when from some Mount's Top a Rock falls down,
Which now worn out with Age can't longer bear
The Shock of Winds, and Fury of the Year ;
They break through all that in their Passage lie,
And do through Walls and Houses force their Way,
Not only kill the Man, but spread all o'er
The Ground his scatter'd Limbs and reeking Gore. H. H.

These were the most remarkable Engines the Grecians used in taking Towns. It will be expected in the next Place, that some Account be given of the Methods by which the Besieg'd defended themselves.

Upon the Enemy's Approach, they gave Notice to their Confederates (if they had any) to hasten to their Assistance : In the Day this was done by raising a great Smoke ; in the Night by Fires, or lighted Torches, call'd φρυκτοὶ and φρυκτωρία, whence to signify the coming of Enemies was call'd φρυκτωρία (b). These Torches were term'd πυλῖμοι φρυκτοὶ, to distinguish them from those they call'd φρυκτοὶ φίλοι, which were lighted upon the Approach of Friends : They differ'd in this, that the latter were held firm and unmov'd, the former toss'd and wav'd to and fro in the Air.

They seem not to have had any constant Method of defending themselves ; but thus much may be observ'd in general, that the Walls were guarded with Soldiers, who, with Stones, and all Sorts of missive Weapons, assaulted the Invaders ; and the καταπέλται, with other Engines of that Kind, were planted within the Town, and play'd upon them. Several other Methods were practis'd against them, as when the Tyrians heating Bras Bucklers red hot, and filling them with Sand and Lime, pour'd it upon Alexander's Soldiers, which, getting between their Armour and Flesh, burnt vehemently, and caus'd them to fling off their Armour, so that the Besieged wounded them at Pleasure, without without receiving any Hurt. Several Ways they had to elude the Force of their Engines, and defeat their Stratagems: Their Mines they render'd ineffectual by Countermines; their Mounts they let fall to the Ground by Undermining their Foundations: Their Towers and all their Engines they burn'd with Fire-balls; themselves they defended with Skins, Wool-packs, and other Things proper to ward off Stones, and other missive Weapons: The Heads of Battering-Rams they broke off with Stones of a prodigious Size from the Walls; or (as we read of the Tyrrians) render'd them useless by cutting the Ropes, whereby they were govern'd, with long Scythes: And, if there remain'd no Hope of defending their Walls, they sometimes rais'd new ones with Forts within. Many other Contrivances were us'd, as the Posture of Affairs requir'd, and as the Besieged were ingenious in finding out Methods for their own Preservation.

The Manner of treating the Cities they had taken, was not always the same, depending upon the Temper of the General, who sometimes put all, at least all that were in Arms, to the Sword, demolish'd the Walls and Buildings, and made the rest Slaves; sometimes graciously receiv'd them into Favour, requiring only some tributary Acknowledgment. The Athenians had a Custom of sending Colonies to inhabit the Places they had depopulated, which they divided by Lots among some of the Commonalty, when met together in a public Assembly (a).

When they demolish'd a City, it was frequent to pronounce direful Curses upon whoever should endeavour to rebuild it; which some imagine was the Reason that Troy could never be rais'd out of its Ashes, tho' several Persons attempted it, being devoted to eternal and irreparable Ruin by Agamemnon (b): This seems to have been a very antient Custom, and deriv'd from the Eastern Nations; for (to omit other Instances) we find Josbua, at the Destruction of Jericho, to have fix'd an Imprecation upon the Person that should rebuild it (c), which was accomplish'd in Hiel the Bethelite many Ages after, in the Reign of Abab (d).

Of the Slain, and their Funerals.

THE antient Grecians seem to have treated the Bodies of their dead Enemies in a very indecent and inhuman Manner, basely revenging the Injuries they had receiv'd from them whilst living, by disfiguring, and stabbing their Carcases, and exposing them to Scorn and Ignominy: Which cruel and barbarous Practice was not thoroughly reform'd in the Trojan War, as appears from divers Instances in the Iliad, where dead Enemies are dismember'd by insulting Conquerors; none of which is more remarkable than that of Heſtor, who lay unburied many Days, was dragg'd round Troy's Walls, and Patroclus's Sepulchre, and suffer'd all Sorts of Indignities. This indeed might be imputed to Achilles's extravagant Rage for the loss of Patroclus, or (as the Scholiaſt (a) affirms) to a peculiar Custom of Theſſaly, his native Country, where it was their constant Practice to drag at their Chariots the Murderers of their near Friends; did it not appear that the rest of the Grecians us'd him in a Manner no less brutish and barbarous, insulting over him, and stabbing his dead Body (b).

Ἡ ῥὰ κ' ἐκ νεκρῶ ἐρύσσατο χαλκίῳ ἔγχος, καὶ τὸ γ' ἀνυθεὶς ἔβηχ'· ὃδ' ἀπ' ὤμων τοῦ χι' ἰσύλα

Thus having said, with unrelenting Force
He rends his vengeful Spear from Heſtor's Corſe; Too small the Recompence one Death cou'd give,
But, Heſtor dead, his Manes still muſt grieve:
He then the bloody, lifeleſs Corps deſpoil'd;
And Soldiers, with avenging Fury fill'd,
With eager Haſte about his Body preſs,
Admire his Stature, and his Comelineſs;
Each vents his Rage upon th' already Slain,
As tho' they meant to kill him o'er again:
Then thus one pointing to his Neighbour ſaid,
With vaunting Words insulting o'er the Dead,
“Is this the Heſtor, whoſe tremendous Name “Brought Fear and Terror whereſo'er it came?
“Gods! How he's chang'd ſince when he threw his Fire “Amidſt our Ships, and made whole Greece, retire?” H. H.

Tydeus has no better Treatment in Statius (c);

*Ducitur hoſtili (proh dura potentia Fati!)

At God-like Tydeus (wretched Turn of Fate!)
Th' avenging Tyrians level all their Hate;
At God-like Tydeus, whose commanding Sway
Thro' Theban Troops did propagate Dismay;
Whether he mounted on his Horse appear'd,
Or for destructive War on Foot prepar'd,
Th' opposing Squadrons dar'd not long to stay,
But, where he led, submissively gave Way;
Yet he, brave Chief, is drag'd along the Field,
And bears what Foes, with Pow'r and Fury fill'd, Cou'd e'er inflict; his dreadful Arms they seize;
All stab his Corps, and tear his manly Face;
The most opposing Minds in this conspire,
The Timorous and Brave alike desire
To stab the Body of their Foe, when slain,
And with his Blood their glutted Blades to stain:
These they as Marks of highest Honour prize,
And keep to shew their Wives, and blooming Boys. H. H.

Whence it appears to have been their constant Practice, and look'd on as very consistent with Virtue and Honour; as Servius hath likewise observ'd when Virgil's Mæcenas was us'd in the same Manner. The Poet indeed does not expressly affirm any such Thing, which notwithstanding plainly appears; for whereas he only receiv'd two Wounds from Æneas (a), we find his Breast-plate afterwards pierc'd thro' in twelve, i. e. a great many Places, a determinate Number being put for an indefinite (b);

— *bis sex thoraca petiit
Perfossamque totis.*

Thro' twice six Places was his Breast-plate pierc'd.

The barbarous Nations were not less guilty of this inhuman Practice Leonidas King of Sparta, having valiantly lost his Life in fighting against Xerxes, had his Head fix'd upon a Pole, and his Body gibbeted (c): But the Grecians were long before that Time convinc'd of the Villany and Baseness of such Actions; and therefore when Pausanias the Spartan was urg'd to retaliate Leonidas's Injury upon Mardonius, Xerxes's General overcome at Platæa, he refused to be concern'd in, or to permit a Revenge so barbarous and unworthy unworthy a Grecian: Even in the Times of the Trojan Wars the Grecians were much reform'd from the Inhumanity as well of their own Ancestors, as other Nations; it had formerly been customary for the Conquerors to hinder their Enemies from interring their Dead, till they had paid large Sums for their Ransom; and some Footsteps of this Practice are found about that Time; Hector's Body was redeem'd from Achilles (a); Achilles was again redeem'd from the Trojans for the same Price he had received for Hector (b);

Λαβὼν δὲ ταύτην τὴν σιφασμένην δαΐδα
Σκιδρῶν ταλαίῳ τρυαίῃ; ἡρτημένοι,
Αἴθρις τὸν ἀτιποῖνον ἐκχέαις ἴσαν,

That Royal Hector's mangled Corps might have
The happy Priv'lege of a decent Grave,
By Argian Chiefs shall be repaid to Troy,
And then the slain Achilles shall enjoy
That honourable Urn the grateful God
Upon his Mother Thetis had bestow'd.

H. H.

Nisus is introduc'd by Virgil, dissuading his Friend Euryalus from Accompanying him into Danger, lest, if he were slain, there should be no Person that would recover by Fight, or redeem his Body (c):

Sit, qui me raptum pugna, pretiove redemptum
Mandet humo jolita. ———

Let there be one, who, mov'd with pitying Care,
Wou'd me redeem made Pris'ner of the War.
Or, ransom'd, decently my Corps interr.

Whence it appears that the Redemption of the Dead was practis'd in those Days, and if neglected, they were frequently suffer'd to lie unbury'd; which Misfortune happen'd to many of Homer's Heroes, as we learn from the very Entrance of the first Iliad, where he thus speaks of Achilles's Anger,

Πολλὰς δ' ἰφθίμους ψυχὰς αἶδ' προΐαψεν
Ηρώων, αὐτὰς δ' ἰλέωρια τεύχε' κυνέσσει
Οἰωνοῖσι τε πάσι. ———

And num'rous Crowds of valiant Heroes Ghosts
Sent mournful down unto the Stygian Coasts,
Whilst uninterr'd on Earth their Bodies lay,
Expos'd to Dogs, and rav'nous Birds of Prey.

But

(a) Iliad, 8. (b) Lycophron's Cassandra, v. 269. (c) Æneid, IX. v. 213.

But this was not so common as in more early Ages, for we find Achilles himself celebrating the Funeral of Eetion King of Thebes in Cilicia, and the Father of Andromache, whom the Poet introduces, speaking thus (a);

Ἦτοι γὰρ πατὴρ' ἀμὼν ἀπύκτανι δῖος Ἀχόλλευς,
 Ἐκ δὲ πόλει σείρειν Κιλίκῳ εὖ καὶ τάσσει,
 Θύβηι ὑψίφυλοι, κατὰ δ' ἔκτανι Νηϊάδα·
 Οὐδὲ μιν ἔξι· ἀριξί, Λιβύσσας γὰρ τό γε θυμῷ,
 Ἀλλ' ἄρα μιν κατέκει· ὅνι ἴτισι δαιδαλέοισιν,
 Ἢδ' ἐπὶ ἤμ' ἔχουσιν. ———

Then when the Walls of Thebes he overthrew,
 His fatal Hand my Royal Father slew,
 He slew Eetion, but despoil'd him not,
 Nor in his Hate the Fun'ral Rites forgot;
 Arm'd as he was he sent him whole below,
 And reverenc'd thus the Mans of his Foe;
 A Tomb he rais'd. ———

Mr. Dryden.

And Agamemnon granted the Trojans free Leave to perform the Funeral Rites of all their Slain, promising upon Oath to give them no Disturbance (b);

Ἀμφὶ δὲ νεκροῖσιν κατακνήμιεν τι μεγίστην
 ὅσ' γὰρ τις φειδῶν κείων κατατιθεῖται
 Γένε', ἐπὶ καὶ θάψουσιν, πύρρ' ἐμυλίσσιν ἄκα·
 Ὅπρια δὲ Ζεὺς ἴστω ἐρίγδυσθ' ὅσας Ἡρῆς.

I envy not the Priv'lege of the Dead,
 I grant, that they upon the Pile be lay'd:
 Let Jove be Witness to the Vows I make,
 Nor will I e'er the binding Cov'nant break.

H. H.

Not long before the Grecians were perfect Strangers to this Piece of Humanity, for we are told that Hercules was the first that ever gave Leave to his Enemies to carry off their Dead (c); and others report, that the first Treaty made for the recovering and burying the Bodies of the Slain, was that of Theseus with the Thebans to inter the Heroes that lost their Lives in the Theban War (d). In succeeding Ages it was look'd on as the greatest Impiety to deny what they thought a Debt to Nature, and was rarely, or never done to lawful Enemies, except upon extraordinary and unusual Provocations; for it was thought below a generous Temper, and unworthy Grecians to vent their Malice, when their Enemies were depriv'd of all Power to defend themselves.

The Athenians seem to have been careful to Excess and Superstition in procuring an honourable Interment for the Bodies of their own Soldiers that had valiantly lost their Lives; insomuch that the ten Admirals that gain'd that famous Victory over the Lacedæmonians in the Sea-fight at Arginusæ, were put to Death chiefly on this Pretence, that they were said not to have taken due Care in gathering the Bodies that floated on the Waves; when yet they alledg'd, that they were hindered by a Tempest which might have been dangerous to the whole Fleet, had they not provided for their Safety by a timely Retreat (a). This, no doubt, was one Cause why, after a Battle upon the Corinthian Territories, Nicias the Athenian General, finding that two of his Men were left by an Over-sight, when they carry'd off their Dead, made an Halt, and sent an Herald to the Enemy for Leave to carry them off, hereby renouncing all Title to the Victory, which belong'd to him before, and losing the Honour of erecting a Trophy; for it was presum'd that he who ask'd Leave to carry off his Dead could not be Master of the Field (b). After that, Chabrias having put to Flight the Lacedæmonians at Naxos, rather than leave any of his Soldiers, or their Bodies, to the Mercy of the Waves, chose to desist from prosecuting his Victory, when he was in a fair Way to have destroy'd the Enemies whole Fleet (c).

When they carried their Arms into distant Countries, they reduc'd the Bodies of the Dead to Ashes, that those at least might be convey'd to their Relations, and repositied in the Tombs of their Ancestors: The first Author of which Custom (they say) was Hercules, who having sworn to Lycymnius to bring back his Son Argius, if he would give him leave to accompany him in his Expedition against Troy; the young Man dying, he had no other Expedient to make good his Oath, but by delivering his Ashes to his Father (d): However, we find it practis'd in the Trojan War, where Nestor advis'd the Grecians to burn all their Dead, and preserve them there till their Return into Greece (e);

Αὐτοὶ δ' ἀγχομένοι κυκλῶμεν ἰσθαδὶ νεκρῶ;
Βασὶ καὶ ἡμιόνοισι πᾶσι κατακήμεν αὐτῶ;
Τυτθὸν ἀπὸ πρὶνέω, ὃς κ' ὄγ' αὖ παρσιὶ ἱκασθῶ;
Οἶκαδ' ἀγνῆ, ὅταν αὖτις νημεῖδα πατρίδα γαίην;

To us assembled here, shall bring our Dead,
That we their Bodies near our Ships may burn,
And save their snowy Bones till we to Greece return. H. H.

The Lacedæmonians thought this an unprofitable Labour, and therefore bury'd their Dead in the Country where they died; only their Kings they embalm'd with Honey, and convey'd them Home, as we learn from Plutarch (a), who reports, that when Agæfilaus resign'd his Life at the Haven of Mendelaus, a desert Shore in Africa, the Spartans, having no Honey to embalm his Body, wrap'd it in Wax, and so carry'd it to Lacedæmon.

The Soldiers all attended at the Funeral Solemnities with their Arms turned upside down, it being customary for Mourners in most of their Actions to behave themselves in a Manner contrary to what was usual at other Times: In those Places where it was the Fashion to wear long Hair, Mourners were shav'd; and where others shav'd, Mourners wore long Hair: Their Conjecture therefore is frivolous, who imagined the Soldiers turn'd the Heads of their Shields downwards, lest the Gods, whose Images were engraven upon them, should be polluted with the Sight of a Corps (b); since not the Gods only, but any other Figures, were frequently represented there; nor some few only, but the whole Company held them in the same Posture: Besides, not the Shields alone, but the other Arms were pointed downwards: Thus Evander's Arcadians, with the rest of Æneas's Soldiers in Virgil (c), follow Pallas's Herse.

— Tum mæssa Phalanx, Teucrique sequuntur,

Next went the mournful Tropp, Captains from Troy,
Tyrrenia, and from pleasant Arcady,
With Arms turn'd downward.

The Grecian Princes in Statius (d) observe the same Custom;

— versis ducunt insignibus ipsi
Grajungæ reges. —

The Grecian Chiefs the sad Procession led
With Ensigns downwards turn'd. —

Their Tombs were adorn'd with Inscriptions shewing their Names, and sometimes their Parentage, and Exploits, which Honour the Spartan Lawgiver granted to none beside Women who dy'd in Child-bed, and Soldiers (e) that lost their Lives in Battle: These were bury'd with green Boughs, and honour'd with an Oration in their Praise: Such of them as had excell'd the rest, and were judg'd compleat and perfect Warriors, had a farther Honour of being interr'd in their Red-Coats, which were the Soldiers Habit at Sparta (f). Their Arms were likewise fix'd upon their Tombs; whence Leonidas the Spartan

 " My Tomb thus honour'd, I'll triumphant go
 " Like some brave Spartan to the Shades below." H. H.

This Custom was not peculiar to Sparta, but practis'd over all Greece; where, besides their Arms, it was usual to add the Badge of whatever other Profession they had borne. Elpenor appearing in the Shades below to Ulyſſes, intreats him to fix the Oar he us'd to row with, upon his Tomb, and to cast his Arms into the Funeral Pile (a):

Ἀλλὰ μὲ κακῆκεσι σὺν τύχῃσιν ἄσσα μοι ἴσιν
 Σῆμα τέ μοι χύσαις ποδῶν ἐπὶ διπλῇ θαλάσσης
 Ἀνδρὸς δυστήνοιο καὶ ἰσοσμένισι συνθίσθαι.
 Ταῦτά κ' ἐμοὶ τιλίσθαι, πῆξαι τ' ἐπὶ τύμβῳ, ἵεσθαι
 Τῷ καὶ ζωὸς ἔρισσοι, ἰὼν μετ' ἱμοῖς ἱπποῖσιν.

Whatever Arms remain to me, when dead,
 Shall with my Corps upon the Pile be laid;
 Then o'er my Grave a lasting Mon'ment rear,
 Which to Posterity my Name shall bear;
 This do, then fix the Oar upon my Tomb,
 With which I us'd to cut the Silver Foam. H. H.

Misernus,

Misenus, Aeneas's Trumpeter, has both his Arms, Oar, and Trumpet fix'd upon his Grave (a):

*At pius Aeneas ingenti mole sepulcrum
Imponit, suaque arma viro, remumque, tubamque.*

A Tomb of vast Extent Aeneas rear'd,
Where the dead Corps was decently interr'd,
And on't his Arms, his Oar, and Trumpet fix'd.

It was customary for the Spartan Matrons, when there had been a Fight near Home, to examine the Bodies of their dead Sons; and such as had received more Wounds behind than before, they conveyed away privately, or left them in the common Heap; but those who had a greater Number of Wounds in their Breasts, they carried away with Joy and Triumph, to be repositèd amongst their Ancestors (b): They were carry'd Home upon their Bucklers; whence that famous Command of the Mother to her Son relatèd in Plutarch (c), ἡ τὰς, ἡ τὰ τὰς, i. e. either bring this (meaning his Buckler) Home with you, or be brought upon it: To which Custom Aulus alludes (d):

Arma super ueberis quid Thrasybule, tua?

Why are you thus upon your Buckler borne,
Brave Thrasybulus?

The Athenians used to place the Bodies of their Dead in Tents three Days before the Funeral, that all Persons might have Opportunity to find out their Relations, and pay their last Respects to them: Upon the fourth Day a Coffin of Cypress was sent from every Tribe, to convey the Bones of their own Relations; after which went a covered Herse in Memory of those whose Bodies could not be found: All these, accompany'd with the whole Body of the People, were carry'd to the public Burying-place, call'd Ceramicus, and there interr'd: One Oration was spoken in Commendation of them all, and their Monuments adorn'd with Pillars, Inscriptions, and all other Ornaments usual about the Tombs of the most honourable Persons. The Oration was pronounc'd by the Fathers of the deceas'd Persons, who had behaved themselves most valiantly. Thus after the famous Battle of Marathon, the Fathers of Callimachus and Cynagirus were appointed to make the Funeral-Oration (e). And upon the Return of the Day, upon which the Solemnity was first held, the same Oration was constantly repeated every Year (f). This was their ordinary Practice at Athens (g), but those valiant Men who who were slain in the Battle of Marathon, had their Bodies interr'd in the Place where they fell, to perpetuate the Memory of that wonderful Victory.

It may be observ'd farther, that in their Lists the Names of the Soldiers deceas'd were mark'd with the Letter θ , being the Initial of Θάσις i. e. Dead; those of the living with τ , the first in τῶν ζώντων, i. e. Preserv'd: Which Custom was afterwards taken up by the Romans (a).

Of their Booty taken in War; their Gratitude to their Gods after Victory; their Trophies, &c.

THEIR Booty consisted of Prisoners and Spoils. The Prisoners that could not ransom themselves, were made Slaves, and employ'd in the Service of their Conquerors, or sold.

The Spoils were distinguish'd by two Names, being either taken from the Dead, and term'd Κύματα; or from the Living, which they call'd λαύρη: They consisted of whatever Moveables belonged to the Conquer'd, whose Right and Title by the Law of Arms passed to the Conquerors (b).

Homer's Heroes no sooner gain a Victory over any of their Rivals, but without farther Delay they seize their Armour; Instances of this are as numerous as their Combats. But however this Practice might be used among the great Commanders, who rode in Chariots to the Battle, fought by themselves, and encounter'd Men of their own Quality in single Combat; yet inferior Soldiers were not ordinarily permitted such Liberty, but gather'd the Spoils of the Dead, after the Fight was ended: If they attempted it before, they were even then looked upon to want Discipline. Nestor gives the Grecians a particular Caution in this Matter (c);

Νέστωρ δ' Ἀργείοισιν ἐκίχλαιο μακρὸν αὔσας.
 Ω φίλοι ἦρωες Δαῖταί, θιράποιλες Ἄργεο,
 Μή τις ὅν τιναρ' ἐπιβαλλόμενος, μετόπισθε

Auspicious Sons of Mars, let no Delay,
 No Hope of fordid Booty cause your Stay;
 But with united Force rush on the Foe,
 Add certain Death to each becoming Blow;
 'Twill then be Time enough for to prepare
 To seize the Booty of the horrid War,
 To drag your mangled Foes along the Plain,
 When weltring in their Blood they lie all slain. H. H.

This Method was taken in succeeding Ages; for no sooner were their Battles ended, but they fell to stripping and rifling the dead Carcases of their Enemies: Only the Lacedæmonians were forbidden to meddle with the Spoils of those they had conquer'd (a); the Reason of which Prohibition being demanded of Cleomenes, he reply'd; "That it was improper to offer the Spoils of Cowards to the Gods, and unworthy a Lacedæmonian to be enrich'd by them (b)." But this seems only a Pretence, since there are several Instances of their dedicating Part of their Booty to the Gods; the true Reason perhaps may be collected from the Constitution of their State, whereby an Equality was maintained amongst them, and nothing more severely prohibited, or more repugnant to the very Foundation of their Government, than to acquire and possess large Estates: Wherefore, to prevent the Soldiers from seizing upon the Spoils, they had always three hundred Men appointed to observe their Actions, and to put the Law in Execution against Delinquents (c).

The whole Booty was brought to the General, who had the first Choice, divided the Remainder amongst such as had signaliz'd themselves according to their Quality and Merits, and allotted the rest equal Portions: Thus in the Trojan War, when the captive Ladies were to be chosen, Agamemnon in the first Place took Astynome, Chryses's Daughter, next Achilles had Hippodamia, Daughter to Brises, then Ajax chose Tecmessa, and so on (d); whence Achilles complains of Agamemnon, that he had always the best Part of the Booty; himself who sustain'd the Burden of the War, being content with a small Pittance (e);

Οὐ μὲν σοὶ πολὺ ἴσον ἔχω γέρας, ὑπὲρ Ἀχαιῶν
 Τρώων ἐκτίσας· ἰναιόμηναι πρὸ λαῶν.
 Ἀλλὰ τὸ μὲν ὧλ' οὐ πλουτίζω· σπυλίζω

 That to each Greek th' allotted Portion gives,
 Laden with Spoils you haste into your Tent,
 Whilst I, with Fighting quite fatigu'd and spent,
 Come to the Navy with a grateful Heart,
 For that small Pittance they to me impart.

H H.

And whenever any Booty of extraordinary Value was taken, we find the Soldiers reserving it for a Present to their General, or the Commanders of their Party: Instances of this Sort are frequent, as in other Writers, so especially in Homer; Ulysses's Company always honour'd him with the best and choicest Part of what they took. Herodotus (a) reports, that after the Victory over Mardonius, Xerxes's Lieutenant, Pausanias, the Spartan, being at that Time General of all the Grecian Forces, was presented with a great Booty of Women, Money, Horses, Camels, &c. over and above what was given to any other: This Practice indeed was so universal, that to be a Commander, and to have the first Share of the Booty, are used by the Poets as equivalent Expressions: Whence Lycophron (b),

Πολλὰς δ' ἀριστῆς, πρωτόλειά δ' Ἑλλάδα
 Αἰχμὴν φέροντας, καὶ κυραῖς ἀγκυρῆντας
 Αἰ σὰι κλαζανῶσιν ὄμβριμοι χεῖρες.

Thy Hands shall mighty Potentates subdue,
 And brave Commanders that the Prize first share,
 Chiefs too, that so much boast their Pedigree.

But before the Spoils were distributed, they look'd on themselves oblig'd to make an Offering out of them to the Gods, to whose Assistance they were indebted for them all; those separated to this Use were term'd ἀεροθῖνα, either γ. ἀεροθῖνα παρὰ τὸ καταστῆναι ἐν μάχῃ πολλῇ, because the War, wherein they were collected, had destroy'd many (c); or, ἀπὸ τοῦ θινός, because after Sea-Engagements they were expos'd upon the Shore (d); or rather, from their being taken ἀπὸ τοῦ θινός, from the Top of the Heap; because all the Spoils being collected into one Heap, the First-Fruits were offer'd to the Gods (e): In Allusion to which Custom, Megara in Euripides, telling what Choice of Wives she had for her Sons out of Athens, Sparta, and Thebes, thus expresseth it,

Εγὼ δὲ νύμφας ἀεροθινιαζόμενη.

The Gods, to whom this Honour was paid, were not only those whom they look'd on as having a peculiar Concern in all Affairs of War, such as Mars, Minerva, &c. but several others, as Jupiter, Juno, and any to whom they thought themselves obliged for Success; those especially that were Protectors of their City, or Country, &c.

They had several Methods of consecrating Spoils: Sometimes they collected them into a Heap, and consum'd them with Fire; sometimes they made Presents, which were dedicated and hung up in Temples: So Pausanias the Spartan is reported to have consecrated out of the Persian Spoils a Tripod to Delphian Apollo, and a Statue of Brass seven Cubits long to Olympian Jupiter (a).

It was very frequent to dedicate their Enemy's Armour, and hang it in Temples; but the Lacedæmonians were forbidden this Custom: which perhaps may be the Meaning of Cleomenes's foremention'd Reply; for that they were allow'd to offer their other Spoils appears as from that of Pausanias, so from several other Instances. This Custom was very ancient (b), and universally receiv'd, not in Greece alone, but most other Countries: Hence Heſtor promises to dedicate his Enemy's Armour in Apollo's Temple, if he would vouchsafe him Victory (c):

Εἰ δὲ κ' ἰγὼ τὸν ἔλῳ δῶν δέ μοι εὖχῃ Ἀπόλλωνι,
Τένεια σιδήσας, ὅσω ποτὶ Ἴλιον ἰρήν,
Καὶ πρὸς ποτὶ ἰνὸν Ἀπόλλωνι ἐκάτοιο.

If kinder Phæbus my Proceedings bleſs,
And crown my bold Attempt with good Success,
Make Heſtor conquer, whilst his Foe shall bleed,
And give me th' Honour of so brave a Deed;
When I've despoil'd my Foe, his Arms I'll bring,
And there devote them in his Temple.——— H: H.

Virgil alludes to this Custom in his Description of the Temple, where Latinus gave audience to Aeneas's Ambassadors (d):

*Multaque præterea sacris in postibus arma,
Captivi pendent currus, curvæque secures,
Et cristæ caputum, & portarum ingentia claustra,
Spiculaque, clypeique, creptaque rostra carinis.*

Axes and Arms did sacred Posts adorn,
And chariots from their conquer'd Nations borne,
Crests too, and massy Bars of Gates and Spears,
And Beaks of Ships, and Bucklers.———

Many other Instances to the same Purpose occur in Authors. This Custom seems to have been deriv'd into Greece from the Eastern Nations, where, no doubt, it was practis'd; what else can be the Meaning of Goliath's Sword being repositd in the Jewish Place of Worship (a)?

Nor was it customary only to dedicate to the Gods Weapons taken from Enemies, but their own likewise, when they retir'd from the Noise of War to a private Life; which seems to have been done, as a grateful Acknowledgment to the Gods, by whose Protection they had been delivered from Dangers. Horace alludes to this Custom (b); — Vejanus, armis.

Herculis ad pestem fixis, latet abditus agro.

Vejanus now consults his private Ease,
Desists from War, and seeks retir'd Peace,
Having hung up his Arms to Hercules.

Ovid also speaks to the same Purpose (c);

Miles ut emeritis non est satis utilis annis,

Ponit ad antiquos, quæ tulit, arma Laræ.

The batter'd Soldier, harass'd out with Age,
Not able longer in the War t' engage,
Devotes the Arms which formerly he bore,
To's Household-Gods for their assisting Pow'r.

But lest these Arms should furnish Male-contents in sudden Tumults and Insurrections, they seem to have been usually some Way or other render'd unfit for present Service: The Bucklers, for Instance, were Hung up without Handles; whence a Person in one of the Poets seeing them otherwise, cries out in a Fright, Οἱ μὲν ἄλλα, ἔχουσιν γὰρ ὠρπακας.

Unhappy Wretch! the Bucklers Handles have.

The Reason may be collected from the foregoing Verses, where another saith,

Οὐ γὰρ ἔχρη, εἴπερ φιλεῖς τὸν δῆμον, ἐκ προοίῳ ταύτας ἐμὲ αὐτοῖς ὠρπαξιν ἀναλίσθῃαι.

If you sincerely wish the public Good,
You should not suffer any to devote Bucklers with Handles.———

As a farther Expression of their Gratitude to the Gods, it was customary to offer solemn Sacrifices, and return public Thanks to them. Here it may be observ'd, that the Lacedæmonians, for their greatest Successes by Force of Arms, offer'd no more than a Cock to the God of War; but when they obtain'd a Victory by Stratagem, and without Blood, they sacrific'd an Ox (a); whereby they gave their General to understand, that Policy as well as Valour was requir'd in a compleat Warrior, and that those Victories were to be preferr'd, whereby they suffer'd the least Damage; excelling herein the Roman Constitution, which rewarded with greater Honours the Victors in open Field, than those who gain'd a Conquest by Policy, which was esteem'd less noble and becoming Romans; wherefore those were permitted to enter the City in Triumph, but the latter were only honour'd with an Ovation (b). It may not be improper in this Place to add, that the Grecians had a Custom which resembled the Roman Triumph; for the Conquerors used to make a Procession thro' the middle of their City, crown'd with Garlands, repeating Hymns and Songs, and brandishing their Spears; the Captives were also led by them, and all their Spoils expos'd to public View, to do which they call'd Στάσις (c).

Trophies were call'd by the ancient Athenians Τροπαῖα, by succeeding Ages Τρόπαια (d): They were dedicated to some of the Gods, especially Jupiter, surnamed Τρόπαιος, and Τροπαιῶχος, (e) and Juno, who shar'd in her Husband's Title, being call'd Τροπαῖα (f); whence Lycophron (g),

The Manner of adorning Trophies, was hanging up all Sorts of Arms taken from the Enemy, according to Euripides (h),

Hence also Juvenal (i) speaking of the Roman Triumphal Arches:

To these they usually added the Names of the God they were dedicated to, of the Conquerors also, and of those overcome by them, with an Account of all the Spoils, and other remarkable Occurrences in the War; this Inscription was call'd ἐπιγραφή, or ἐπιγράμμα; and was frequently engrav'd, whence Lucian saith ἐπὶ τῷ τροπαίῳ ἴκτο λαΐαι; sometimes written with Ink, whence Osbryades the Lacedæmonian, just surviving his Victory over the Argians, caused a Trophy to be erected, upon which, being supported by his Spear, he inscribed with his own Blood, instead of Ink, Διὶ Τρωαίῳ (a).

The Spoils were hung upon the Trunk of a Tree; the Olive was frequently put to this Use, being the Emblem of Peace, which is one of the Consequents of Victory: Several other Trees also had the same Honour, especially the Oak, as being consecrated to Jupiter, who had a peculiar Right to these Respects. There is frequent mention of this in the Poets: Sidonius (b),

————— quercusque tropæis
Curva gemit ———

The bended Oak beneath the Trophies groans.

Statius describes the same Custom (c);

*Quercus erat teneræ jamdudum oblita juventæ,

 Injerit arma.*

There stood an ancient Oak, whose sprightly Juice
 Decay'd by Age, could not like Life infuse
 Thro' ev'ry Part; on this bright Helmets hung,
 And batter'd Arms. ———

Virgil also concurs herein with them in several Places, and adds farther, that Æneas's Trophy was upon a Hill; whence it may seem probable, that it was customary to set them upon eminent Places, to render them more conspicuous: His Words are these (d):

Vota

 Bellipotens ; aptat rorantes sanguine cristas,
 Telaque trunca viri, & bis sex thoracæ petulum
 Perforsumque locis, clypeumque ex ære sinistræ
 Subligat, atque ensẽ collo suspendit eburnum.*

Soon as the Morn her weaker Beams display'd,
 His Vows to Heav'n the pious Victor pay'd :
 A stately Oak, whose Branches all around
 Were first lopt off, he plac'd on rising Ground,
 With glitt'ring Arms the hallow'd Trunk he grac'd,
 The Spoils of King Mœnenti decess'd ;
 Which Trophy, mighty Arbiter of War,
 The grateful Prince did to thy Honour rear ;
 He hung his nodding Plume besmear'd with Blood,
 And broken Spears upon the leafless Wood ;
 Then round the Stock his much pierc'd Corset bound,
 The sad Remembrance of each ghastly Wound ;
 And on the left Side fix'd the brazen Shield,
 With which Mœnenti lost the fatal Field ;
 Then round his Neck the Leathern Belt he cast,
 And in't his Iv'ry-hilted Sword he plac'd, H. H.

In the same Manner Pompey having subdued the Spaniards, erected a Trophy on the Top of the Pyrenean Mountains.

Instead of Trees, succeeding Ages erected Pillars of Stone, or Brass, to continue the Memory of their Victories ; to raise these they term'd ισμῶν τροπῶν, which Expression was likewise apply'd to the Erection of Trees ; for if the Place they pitch'd upon was void of Trees, fit for their Purpose, it was usual to supply that Defect by fixing one there, as appears from the fore-mention'd Passage of Virgil.

To demolish a Trophy was look'd on as unlawful, and a kind of Sacrilege, because they were all consecrated to some Deity : Nor was it less a Crime to pay divine Adoration before them, or to repair them when decay'd, as may be likewise observ'd of the Roman Triumphal Arches : This being a Means to revive the Memory of forgotten Quarrels, and engage Posterity to revenge the Disgrace of their Ancestors : For the same Reason those Grecians who first introduc'd the Custom of erecting Pillars for Trophies, incurr'd a severe Censure from the Ages they liv'd in (a),

(a) Plutarchus Romanis Questionibus.

The Macedonians never erected Trophies, obliged hereto by a Prescription, observ'd from the Reign of Caranus, one of whose Trophies was demolish'd by Wolves (a), which was the Reason that Alexander the Great, however vain-glorious in other Instances, never rais'd a Trophy: As for those erected by the Macedonians of succeeding Ages in their Wars with the Romans, they were inconsistent with the ancient Custom of their Country. In some Ages after this, they seem to have been wholly laid aside.

Yet they were not still wanting to raise Monuments to preserve the Memory of their Victories, and to testify their Gratitude to the Gods; some of which are likewise mentioned in Authors before the Disuse of Trophies. Sometimes Statues were erected to the Gods, especially to Jupiter, as appears from that which Pausanias dedicated out of the Persian Spoils (b), and several others: There is frequent Mention of this Custom in Euripides (c);

— Διὸς τρόπαιον ἱστᾶται βριτᾶς,
Again,
— Τρόπαιον Ζηνὸς ὀβῶσσαι βριτᾶς.

Several other Instances may be produc'd: Sometimes the same God was honour'd with a Temple on such Accounts, as appears from the Story of the Dorians, who, having overcome the Acbaians, rais'd a Temple to Jupiter Τρόπαιος (d).

Sometimes they erected Towers, which they adorn'd with the Spoils of their Enemies; which was likewise a Roman Custom, and practis'd by Fabius Maximus, and Domitius Aenobarbus, after the Victory over the Allobroges (e).

It was also customary to raise Altars to the Gods; an Instance whereof we have in Alexander, who, returning from his Indian Expedition, erected Altars, in Height scarce inferior to the most lofty Towers, and in Breadth exceeding them (f).

If a Fine was inflicted, the Criminal was kept in Bonds till he made Payment (b). To these are to be reckon'd ῥιψασκίδαι, they who lost their Bucklers, which was accounted a Token of extreme Cowardice. Hence a Law came to be enacted, That whoever should object this Crime to any Person undeservedly, should be fin'd (c). But of all others the Lacedæmonians inflicted the heaviest Punishments on all such Offenders: for their Laws oblig'd them either to conquer, or to die upon the Place; and such as quitted their Bucklers, laid under as great Disgrace as if they had forsaken their Ranks. Runagates were not only depriv'd of all Honours, but it was likewise a Disgrace to intermarry with them; whoever met them in the Streets, had Liberty to beat them, nor was it permitted them to resist in their own Defence; and to make them more remarkable, whenever they went abroad, they were oblig'd to wear a nasty Habit, their Gowns were patch'd with divers Colours, and their Beards half shav'd, half unshav'd (d). Their Scandal was likewise extended to their whole Family, and therefore their Mothers frequently aton'd for their Crime, by stabbing them at their first Meeting; which was a common Practice, and frequently alluded to in the Greek Epigrams, in one of which a Spartan Matron having run her Son through, thus insults over him:

Εἴρε, κακὸν φύττυμα, διὰ σκότος, ἢ διὰ μῖσος

To pawn their Arms was also accounted a Crime, and seems to have been forbidden by a Law at Athens, as the Greek Scholiast hath observ'd in his Explication of the following Passage of Aristophanes (b):

Ποῖαν γὰρ ἢ θώρακα, ποῖαν ἀσπίδα,
 Οὐκ ἐνίχυρον τίθουσιν ἢ μαρμαίτην,

Where the Poet describes the Misfortune to which Men are expos'd by Poverty. Among the Romans, any Soldier who pawned his Shoulder-piece, or any other of the less considerable Parts of his Armour, was corrected with Stripes: But such as pawn'd their Helmet, Buckler, Coat of Mail, or Sword, were punish'd as Deserters (c).

Besides the Rewards of Valour already mention'd in the foregoing Chapters, there were several others. The private Soldiers were put into Office, and the subordinate Officers were honoured with greater Commands. It was likewise customary for the General to reward those that signaliz'd themselves with large Presents; whence Telemachus being the first that gain'd the Top of Troy's Walls, when it was besieged by Hercules, had the Honour to have Hefione the King's Daughter for his Captive; Theseus was presented by the same Hero with Antiope the Amazonian Queen, for his Service in the Expedition against the Amazons. The Poets frequently introduce Commanders encouraging their Soldiers with Promises of this Nature: Thus Agamemnon animates Taucaer to behave himself courageously, by assuring him of a considerable Reward, when the City should be taken (d):

Πρῶτον τοι μὲν ἐμὲ περιστήσον ἐν χειρὶ θήσω,
 Ἡ τρίποδ', ἢ δὴν ἵππων; αὐτῶν δ' ἄριστον,
 Ἡ γυναιχ' ἢ εἰν τοι ἐμὸν λίχθ' ἰστανεβαῖον.

Next after mine, your's is the best Reward,
 A Tripod, or a Chariot stands prepar'd

For your Acceptance; else some captive Maid
Shall, big with Charms, ascend your joyous Bed. H. H.

Ascanius in Virgil makes no less Promises to Nisus (a);

*Bina dabo argento perfecta, atque aspera signis
Pecula, dovista Genitor quæ cepit Arisba,
Et tripodas geminos, auri duo magna talenta;
Cratæ antiquum, quem dat Sidonia Dido:
Si viro capere Italiam sceptrisque potiri
Contigerit victori, & prædæ ducere sortem;
Vidisti quo Turnus equo, quibus ibat in armis
Aureus, ipsum illum clypeum, cristasque rubentes
Excipiam sorti, jam nunc tua præmia, Nise:
Præterea bis sex genitor lætissima matrum
Corpora, captivosque dabit, suaque omnibus arma.
Insuper id campi quod rex habet ipse Latinus.*

Your common Gifts shall two large Goblets be
Of Silver wrought with curious Imag'ry,
And high imboss'd, which, when old Priam reign'd,
My conqu'ring Sire at sack'd Arisba gain'd:
And more, two Tripods cast in Antic Mold,
With two great Talents of the finest Gold;
Beside, a costly Bowl engrav'd with Art,
Which Dido gave, when first she gave her Heart:
But if in conquer'd Italy we reign,
When Spoils by Lot the Victor shall obtain,
Thou saw'st the Courser by proud Turnus prest;
That, Nisus, and his Arms, and nodding Crest,
And Shield from Chance exempt shall be thy Share,
Twelve lab'ring Slaves, twelve Handmaids young and fair,
All clad with rich Attire, and train'd with Care;
At last, a Latian Field with fruitful Plains,
And a large Portion of the King's Domains. Ms. Dryden.

Several other Promises they encourag'd them with, according to every Man's Temper or Condition: Wherefore Ascanius thus proceeds to Euryalus, Nisus's Companion in Danger:

*Te vero, mea quem spatiis propioribus ætas
Insequitur, venerande puer, jam pectore toto
Accipio, & comitem casus complector in omnes;
Nulla meis sine te quaeretur gloria rebus.*

*Seu pacem, seu bella geram, tibi maxima rerum,
Vestrorumque fides.*————

But thou, whose Years are more to mine ally'd,
No Fate my vow'd Affection shall divide
From thee, Heroick Youth; be wholly mine,
Take full Possession, as my Soul is thine.
One Faith, one Fame, one Fate shall both attend,
My Life's Companion, and my Bosom Friend;
My Peace shall be committed to thy Care,
And to thy Conduct my Concerns in War. Mr. Dryden.

Sometimes Crowns were presented, and inscrib'd to the Person's Name and Actions that had merited them, as appears from the Inscription upon the Crown presented by the Athenians to Cimon, Κομης ἀπὸ τῆς δημοκρατίας τῆς πρὸς Ἀσιασίαν.

Others were honoured with Leave to raise Pillars, or erect Statues to the Gods, with Inscriptions declaring their Victories; which Plataarch supposeth to have been a Grant rarely yielded to the greatest Commanders: Cimon indeed was favour'd therewith, but Miltiades and Themistocles could never obtain the like; nay, when Miltiades only desired a Crown of Olive, one Socbares stood up in the Midst of the Assembly, and reply'd, When thou shalt conquer alone, Miltiades, thou shalt triumph so too; which Words were so agreeable to the Populace, that his Suit was rejected. The Reason why Cimon was more respected than the rest, our Author (a) thinks, was, because under other Commanders they stood upon the Defensive; but by his Conduct they not only repulsed their Enemies, but invaded them in their own Country. But perhaps a more true and real Account may be taken from the Change of Times; for the primitive Ages seem not to have been so liberal in the Distribution of Rewards as those that succeeded; for later Generations degenerating from their Ancestors, and producing fewer Instances of Magnanimity and true Valour, the Way to Honour became easier, and Men of common Performances without Difficulty obtain'd Rewards, which before were only paid to Persons of the first Rank for Virtue and Courage (b).

Another Honour conferr'd at Athens upon the Valiant, was to have their Arms placed in the Citadel, and to be call'd Cecropidae, Citizens of the true old Blood; to which Custom the Poet alludes, Οὐ καλλινίκας Κροπίδας ἔθνε' ἴγω.

Some were presented with a πανοπλία, or compleat Suit of Armour; as we find of Alcibiades, when he was very young, and return'd from the Expedition against Potidaea (c).

Others

(a) Plutarchus Cimonis.

(b) Æschines in Ctesiphontem.

(c) Plutarch. Alcibiadis.

Others were complimented with Songs of Triumph, the first of which were compos'd in Honour of Lyfander the Spartan General (a).

They who lost any of their Limbs in the War, whom they call'd ἀσπυνοί, were maintain'd at the publick Expence, provided they had not an Estate of three Attick Pounds yearly. On which account they were examined by the Senate of Five Hundred. Their Allowance was an Obolus by the Day. Some affirm they had two Oboli every Day. Others relate, that they received nine Drachmæ, that is fifty-four Oboli every Month. And it is probable, that their Maintenance was rais'd or diminish'd according to the Exigency of Affairs, as hath been elsewhere observ'd concerning the Military Stipend. This Custom of maintaining disabled Soldiers was introduc'd by Solon, who is said to have given an Allowance to one Thersippus: Afterwards it was established by a Law during the Tyranny of Pisistratus (b).

Many other Honours were paid to such as deserved well of their Country; but I shall only mention one more, which consisted in the Care of the Children of such as valiantly sacrific'd their Lives for the Glory and Preservation of the Athenian Commonwealth (c): They were carefully educated at the publick Charge, till they came to Maturity, and then presented with a compleat Suit of Armour, and brought forth before the People, one of the publick Ministers proclaiming before them; "That hitherto, in Remembrance of their Fathers Merits, the Commonwealth had educated these young Men; but now dismiss'd them so arm'd, to go forth and thank their Country by imitating their Fathers Examples". For their farther Encouragement, they had the Honour of ἀγοδεία, or having the first Seats at Shews and all publick Meetings.

The Laws of Solon made a farther Provision for the Parents of those that died in the Wars, it being extremely reasonable that they should be maintained at the publick Expence, who had lost their Children, the Comfort and Support of their declining Age, in the Service of the Publick (d).

It may not be improper to add something concerning their Way of sending Intelligence. This was done several Ways, and by several Sorts of Messengers; such were their ἡμιπεδρόμοι, who were lightly arm'd with Darts, Hand-granadoes, or Bows and Arrows (e); one of these was Phidippides, famous in the Story of Miltiades, for his Vision of Pan (f).

But the Contrivance of all others the most celebrated for close Conveyance of Intelligence, was the Lacedemonian σκευτάνη, which was a white Roll of Parchment wrap'd about a black Stick; it was about four Cubits in Length (g), and so call'd from σκεύος, i. e. Skin. The Manner and Use of it was thus; when the Magistrates gave Commission to any General or Admiral, they took two round Pieces of Wood exactly equal to one another; one of these they kept, the other was deliver'd to the Commander, to whom when they had any Thing of Moment to communicate, they cut a long narrow Scroll of Parchment, and rolling it about their own Staff, one Fold close upon another, they wrote their Business upon it; then taking it off, dispatched it away to the Commander, who applying it to his own Staff, the Folds exactly fell in one with another, as at the Writing, and the Characters, which, before 'twas wrapp'd up, were confusedly disjoin'd, and unintelligible, appear'd very plain (a).

Of the Invention, and different Sorts of Ships.

MOST of those useful Arts, and admirable Inventions, which are the very Support of Mankind, and supply them with all the Necessaries and Conveniencies of Life, have at first been the Productions of some lucky Chance, or from slight and contemptible Beginnings, have been, by long Experience, curious Observations, and various Improvements, matur'd and brought to Perfection: Instances of this Kind are every-where frequent and obvious, but none can be produc'd more remarkable than in the Art of Navigation, which, tho' now arriv'd to a Pitch of Perfection beyond most other Arts, by those successful Additions it has received from almost every Age of the World, was in the Beginning so mean and imperfect, that the Pleasure or Advantage of those who first apply'd themselves to it, was very small and inconsiderable.

Those who adventured to commit themselves to the liquid Element, made their first Essays in shallow Waters, and trusted not themselves at any considerable Distance from the Shore; but, being embolden'd by frequent Trials, proceeded farther by Degrees, till at length they took Courage, and launch'd forth into the main Ocean: To this Purpose Claudian (b):

*Inventa secuit primus qui nave profundum,
Et rudibus remis sollicitat it aquas,
Fœanquillis primum trepidus se credidit undis,
Littora securo tramite summa legens;
Mox longos tentare sinus, & linquere terras,
Et leni caput pandere vela Noto:
Ast ubi paulatim præceptis audacia crevit,
Cordæque languentem dedidicere metum,*

Whoever first with Vessels cleav'd the Deep,
And did with uncouth Oars the Waters sweep,
His first Attempt on gentle Streams he made
And near the Shore affrighted always staid;
He launch'd out farther next, and left the Land,
And then erected Sails began to stand;
Till by Degrees, when Man undaunted grew,
Forgetting all those Fears before he knew,
He rush'd into the Main, and harmless bore,
Guided by Stars, the Storms that loudly roar
In the Ægean and Ionian Seas.——

To whom the World is oblig'd for the Invention of Ships, is, like all things of such Antiquity, uncertain: there are divers Persons, who seem to make equal Pretensions to this Honour; such are Prometheus, Neptune, Janus, Atlas, Hercules, Jason, Dædalus, Erythraeus, &c. but by common Fame it is given to Minerva, the happy Mother of all Arts and Sciences. Some, who leaving these antiquated Fables of the Poets, pretend to something more of Certainty in what they deliver, ascribe it to the Inhabitants of some of those Places that lie upon the Sea-coasts; and are by Nature designed, as it were, for harbouring Ships, such as the Eginetians, Phœnicians (a), &c. The Reason of this Disagreement seems to have proceeded partly from the different Places where Navigation was first practised (for it was never peculiar to any one People, and from them communicated to the rest of the World, but found out in Countries far distant from one another) and in part from the various Sorts of Ships, some of which being first built by the Persons above-mention'd, have entitl'd them to the whole Invention.

The first Ships were built without Art or Contrivance, and had neither Strength nor Durableness, Beauty nor Ornament; but consisted only of Planks laid together, and just so compacted as to keep out the Water (b): In some Places they were nothing else but Hulks of Trees made hollow, which were called σκάια κενήματα, as consisting only of one Piece of Timber; of these we find Mention in Virgil (c):

*Tunc alnos fluvio prima senpere carvatas,
Navita tum sellis numeros, & nomina fecit.*

Then hollow Alders first on Rivers swam,
Then to the Stars both Names and Numbers came,
Impos'd by Mariners.——

In later Ages also they were made use of at some Places, being the same with those called σκάφη in the strict and most proper Acceptation of that Word (a), from σκάλλω, as made by hollowing, and, as it were, digging in a Tree. Nor was Wood alone apply'd to this Use, but any other Materials that float upon the Water without sinking, such as the Egyptian Reed Papyrus, or (to mention no more) Leather, of which the primitive Ships were frequently compos'd, and call'd πλοῖα διφθέρια, or διμύρτια. These were sometimes begirt with Wickers, and frequently us'd in that manner upon the Rivers of Ethiopia, Egypt, and Sabæan Arabia, even in later Times; but in the first of them we find no Mention of any thing but Leather, or Hides sew'd together: In a Ship of this Sort Dardanus secured his Flight to the Country afterwards call'd Troas, when by a terrible Deluge he was forced to leave Samothrace, his former Place of Residence (b). Charon's Infernal Boat was of the same Composition, according to Virgil (c):

Gemit sub pondere cyma
Semitis, Et multam accepit rimosa paludem.

Under the Weight the Boat of Leather groan'd,
And leaky grown, th' impetuous Water found
An easy Passage thro.

When Ships were brought to a little more Perfection, and increased in Bigness, the Sight of them struck the ignorant People with Terror and Amazement; for it was no small Surprize to behold great floating Castles of unusual Forms, full of living Men, and with Wings (as it were) expanded flying upon the Sea (d): What else could have given Occasion to the Fiction of Perseus's Flight to the Gorgons, who, as Aristophanes (e) expressly tells us, was carry'd in a Ship?

Περσεύς πρὸς Ἀργεὺς ναυστολῶν τὸ Γοργόνος παρακομίζων.

What other Original could there be for the famous Story of Triptolemus, who was feign'd to ride upon a wing'd Dragon, only because in a Time of Dearth at Athens he sail'd to more fruitful Countries to supply the Necessities of his People; or to the Fable of the wing'd Horse Pegasus, who, as several Mythologists (f) report, was nothing but a Ship of that Name with Sails, and for that Reason feign'd to be the Offspring of Neptune, the Emperor of the Sea (g)? Nor was there any other Ground for the Stories of Gryffons, or of Ships transform'd into Birds and Fishes, which we frequently meet with in the antient Poets. World were Inventions of this Nature, that whoever made any Improvements in the Art of Navigation, built new Ships of Forms better fitted for Strength or Swiftneſs than thoſe before us'd, render'd the old more commodious by an additional Contrivance, or diſcovered Countries untrac'd by former Travellers, were thought worthy of the greateſt Honours, and (like other common Benefactors to Mankind) aſcrib'd into the Number of the deify'd Heroes. They had their Inventions alſo conſecrated, and fix'd in the Heavens: Hence we have the Signs of Aries and Taurus, which were nothing but two Ships; the former transported Phryxus from Greece to Colchis, the latter Europa out of Phœnicia into Crete. Argo likewise, Pegasus, and Perſeus's Whale, were new Sorts of Ships, which being had in great Admiration by the rude and ignorant Mortals of thoſe Times, were in Memory of their Inventors, tranſlated amongſt the Stars, and metamorphos'd into Conſtellations by the Poets of thoſe, or the ſucceeding Ages. Thus much concerning the Invention of Ships.

At their firſt Appearance in the World, all Ships, for whatever Uſe deſign'd, were of the ſame Form; but the various Ends of Navigation, ſome of which were better answer'd by one Form, ſome by another, ſoon gave Occaſion to fit out Ships, not in Bigneſs only, but in the Manner of their Conſtruction and Equipment, differing from one another. Not to trouble you with a diſtinct Enumeration of every little Alteration, which would be endleſs, they were chiefly of three Sorts; Ships of Burden, of War, and of Paſſage. Ships of Paſſage were diſtinguiſh'd by ſeveral Names, taken uſually from their Carriages; thoſe that ſerv'd for the Transportation of Men, being call'd by the general Names of ωρίεα and ιπικάδες, or, when fill'd with arm'd Men, by the particular Titles of ιπλιταγωγίδες and κρατιώτιδες; thoſe in which Horſes were transported, were named ιππηγοί, ιππαγωγίδες, and Hippagines, to mention no more.

Ships of Burden were call'd όλκαδες, φορηγοί, and ωλίκα, to diſtinguiſh them from Ships of War, which were properly term'd νέες: They were uſually of an orbicular Form, having large and capacious Bellies to contain the greater Quantity of Victuals, Proviſions, and other Neceſſaries with which they were laden; whence they are ſometimes call'd επιφυλάδες; as on the contrary, Ships of War we find nam'd μικρά (α), being extended to a greater Length than the former, wherein they agreed in Part with the Transport-Veſſels, which were of a Form betwixt the Ships of War and Burthen, being exceeded by the latter in Capaciouſneſs, by the former in Length. There was likewise another Difference amongſt theſe Ships; for Men of War, tho' not wholly deſtitute of Sails, were chiefly row'd with Oars, that they might be the more able to tack about upon any Advantage, and approach the Enemy on his weakeſt Side; whereas Veſſels govern'd by Sails, being left to the Mercy of the Winds, could not be managed by ſo ſteady a Conduſt; hence the Ships of War are uſually ſil'd επιχωροί, and κοπήρη. Ships of Burden den were commonly governed with Sails, and those of Transport often tow'd with Cords, not but that in both these all the three Ways of Government, viz. by Sail, Oar, and Cords, were upon Occasion made use of.

Ships of War are said to have been first rigg'd out by Parbalus, or Samyres, as others by Semiramis, but according to some (a) by Egeon. They were farther distinguished from other Sorts of Ships by various Engines, and Accessions of Building, some to defend their own Soldiers, others to annoy Enemies, an Account of which shall be inserted in the following Chapters; and from one another in later Ages by several Orders, or Ranks of Oars, which were not, as some vainly imagine, placed upon the same Level in different Parts of the Ship; nor yet, according to others, directly, and perpendicularly above one another's Heads; but their Seats, being fix'd one at the Back of another, ascended gradually in the Manner of Stairs. The most usual Number of these Banks was three, four, and five; whence there is so frequent Mention of τρίηρης, τετρήρης, and πεντήρης, i. e. trireme, quadrireme, and quinquereme Gallies, which exceeded one another by a Bank of Oars, and consequently were built more high, and row'd with greater Strength. In the primitive Times the long Ships had only one Bank of Oars, whence they are sometimes term'd μονήρης, and κλάης, from the Name of a single Horse; and therefore when we find them call'd πεντακόσιοι, and upwards as far as εξακόσιοι, we are not to suppose they were row'd with fifty, or an hundred Banks, but only with so many Oars: One of these was the Ship Argo, which was row'd with fifty Oars, being the first of the long Ships, and invented by Jason, whereas till that Time all Sorts of Vessels had been of a Form more inclining to Oval: Others (b) carry the Invention of long Ships something higher, referring it to Danaus, who they tell us, sail'd from Egypt into Greece in a Ship of fifty Oars; and however Jason should be allowed to have introduced them into Greece, yet he cannot be thought the first Contriver, but rather imitated the Egyptian or African Model, the latter of which was some time before composed by Atlas, and much used in those Parts. The first that us'd a double Bank of Oars were the Erythræans (c); which was farther enlarged by Aminocles of Corinth with the Accession of a third, as Herodotus, Thucydides, and Diodorus the Sicilian report; but Clement of Alexandria (d) will have this Invention to belong to the Sidonians: To these Aristotle, a Cartbaginian, added a Fourth; Nesitbon of Salamis (according to Pliny) or Dionysius the Sicilian (according to Diodorus) a Fifth; Xenagoras the Syracusan a Sixth; Nesigiton increased the Number to ten, Alexander the Great to Twelve, Ptolemy Soter to Fifteen; Philip Father to Perseus had a Ship of sixteen Banks (e); then (it being easy to make Additions, the Methods of erecting one Bank above another once found out) Demetrius the Son of Antigonus built a Ship of thirty Banks, and Ptolemy Philopator, out of a vain-glorious Humour of out-doing all the World besides, farther enlarg'd the Number to Forty (a), which (all other Parts bearing a just Proportion) rais'd the Ship to that prodigious Bigness, that it appear'd at a Distance like a floating Mountain, or Island, and upon a near View seem'd like a huge Castle upon the Floods; it contain'd four thousand Rowers, four hundred Mariners employed in other Services, and almost three thousand Soldiers. But this, and such-like Fabricks, serv'd only for Shew and Ostentation, being by their great Bulk render'd unweildy, and unfit for Use. Athenæus tells us the common Names they were known by, were Cyclades or Ætna, i. e. Islands or Mountains, to which they seem'd almost equal in Bigness, consisting as some report, of as many Materials as would have been sufficient for the Construction of at least fifty Triremes.

Besides those already mention'd, there were other Ships with half Banks of Oars; such as ἡμιπλῆξ or ἡμιπλοῦς, which seems to have been betwixt an Unireme and Bireme, consisting of a Bank and an half: Likewise τετραημιπλῆξ, betwixt a Bireme and Trireme, having two Banks and an half: These, tho' perhaps built in other Respects after the Model of the long Ships, or Men of War, are seldom comprehended under that Name, and sometimes mention'd in opposition to them. Several other Ships are mention'd by Authors, which differ'd from those already enumerated, being fitted for particular Uses, or certain Seas, employ'd upon urgent Necessities in Naval Fights, but more commonly as ἐπιπλοῖκα, Tenders, and Victualling Ships to supply the main Fleet with Provisions, and sometimes built for Expedition to carry Expresses, and observe the Enemy's Motions without Danger of being seiz'd by the heavier, and arm'd Vessels. These were distinguished from the former by the Manner of their Construction and Equipment, being in part like the Men of War, partly resembling the Ships of Burden, and in some things differing from both, as the various Exigencies they serv'd in, seem'd to require.

CHAP XV.

Of the Parts, Ornaments, &c. of Ships.

HAVING treated of the different Sorts of Ships us'd amongst the ancient Greeks, I shall in the next Place endeavour to describe the principal Parts whereof they consisted, the Ignorance of which has occasion'd many Mistakes, and much Confusion in those who have convers'd with Authors of Antiquity. Herein I shall chiefly follow follow the Account of Scheffer, who hath so copiously treated on this Subject, and with such Industry and Learning collected whatever is necessary to its Illustration, that very little Room is left for farther Enlargement.

Now the principal Parts of which Ships consisted, were three, viz. the Belly, the Prow, and the Stern: These were again composed of other smaller Parts, which shall be briefly describ'd in their Order.

1. In the Belly, or middle Part of the Ship, there was τρώπις, Carina, or the Keel, which was compos'd of Wood, and therefore from its Strength and Firmness, call'd στύπη: It was placed at the Bottom of the Ship, being design'd to cut, and glide thro' the Waves (a), and therefore was not broad, but narrow and sharp; whence it may be perceiv'd that not all Ships, but only the μακραι, whose Bellies were strait, and of a small Circumference, were provided with Keels, the rest having usually flat Bottoms (b). Round the Keels were placed Pieces of Wood to save it from receiving Damage, when the Ship was first launch'd into the Water, or bulg'd against Rocks; these were call'd χλιδόμαλα, in Latin, Cunei, according to Ovid (c):

*Jamque labant cunei, spoliataque tegmine cera
Rima patet.* ———

The Wedges break, and loosing all its Wax,
A Hole lets in the Water. ———

Next to the Keel was φάλαξ (d) within which was contained the σηλία, or Pump, through which Water was convey'd out of the Ship (e).

After this was δευτέρα τρώπις, or second Keel, being plac'd beneath the Pump, and call'd λίσθιον, χαλχρητη, κλισιπόδιον (f): By some it is falsely suppos'd to be the same with φάλαξ.

Above the Pump was an hollow Place, call'd by Herodotus κοιλία της ηρης, by Pollux κύτθ and γάστρα (because large and capacious, after the Form of a Vessel or Belly) by the Latins testudo. * This was surrounded with Ribs, which were Pieces of Wood rising from the Keel upwards, and call'd by Hesychius ημῖς, by others ἰγκυδία (the Belly of the Ship being contained within them) in Latin, costæ: Upon these were placed certain Planks, which Aristophanes calls ἰσηρωτίαις, or ισηρωνίδα.

Hence proceed we to the πλαυραὶ, latera, or Sides of the Ship, which encompass'd all the former Parts on both Hands: These were compos'd of large Rasters extended from Prow to Stern, and called ἐποζώμαλα (g), ζωγῆρες (h), and ζωματάματα (i), because by them the whole Fabrick was begirt or surrounded.

In both these Sides the Rowers had their Places, call'd τοῖχοι, and ἰδωλῶν, in Latin fori and transfora, plac'd above another: The lowest was call'd θαλάμη, and those that labour'd therein θάλαμοι: The Middle ζυγὰ, and the Men ζῦγοι: The Uppermost θράσιον, whence the Rowers were term'd θράσιαι (a). In these were Spaces thro' which the Rowers put their Oars: These were sometimes one continued Vacuity from one End to the other, call'd τραφὴξ, but more usually distinct Holes, each of which was design'd for a single Oar; these were stil'd τρήματα, τρυπήματα, as also ἰσθαλμοί, because not unlike the Eyes of living Creatures: All of them were by a more general Name term'd ἵγκυπα, from containing the Oars (b); but ἵγκυποι seems to have been another thing, signifying the Spaces between Banks of Oars on each Side, where the Passengers seem to have been plac'd: On the Top of all these was a Passage, or Place to walk in, call'd παράδο, and παραδραν, as joining to the θράσιον, or uppermost Bank of Oars.

2. Πῖρα, the Prow, or Fore-deck, whence it is sometimes call'd μίτωπον, the Fore-head, and commonly distinguish'd by other metaphorical Titles taken from human Faces. In some Ships there is mention of two Prows, as likewise of two Sterns; thus was Danaus's Ship ador'd by Minerva, when he fled from Egypt. It was customary to beautify the Prow with Gold, and various Sorts of Paint and Colours: In the primitive Times Red was most in Use, whence Homer's Ships were commonly dignify'd with the Titles of μιλωπαροι and φοινικοπαροι, or Red-fac'd: The Blue likewise, or Sky-colour, was frequently made use of, as bearing a near Resemblance to the Colour of the Sea; whence we find Ships call'd by Homer κυανόπρωροι, by Aristophanes κυανίμβλοι. Several other Colours were also made use of, nor were they barely varnish'd over with them, but very often anneal'd by Wax melted in the Fire, so as neither the Sun, Winds or Water were able to deface them. The Art of doing this was call'd from the Wax, κηρογραφία; from the Fire ἵγκυστική; it is described by Vitruvius (c), and mentioned in Ovid (d):

——— Piṛa coloribus ustis
Ceruleam matrem concava Puppis habet.

The painted Ship with melted Wax anneal'd,
Had Tethys for its Deity. —

In these Colours the various Forms of Gods, Animals, Plants, &c. were usually described, which were often added as Ornaments to other Parts also of the Ships, as plainly appears from the ancient Monuments presented to the World by Bayfus.

The

(a) Pollux. (b) Athenæus, Lib. V. (c) Lib. VII. Cap. IX. (d) Falcorum, Lib. IV.

The Sides of the Prow were term'd πτερά, or Wings, and παρία according to Scheffer, or rather παρεια; for, since the Prow is commonly compar'd to an human Face, it will naturally follow that its Sides should be called Cheeks. The Top of these, as likewise of the Stern, was call'd παριξυρισία (a), because void of Rowers.

3. Πρύμναι, the Hind-deck or Stern, sometimes call'd ὑέρα, the Tail, because the hindmost Part of the Ship: It was of a Figure more inclining to round than the Prow, the Extremity of which was sharp, that it might cut the Waters; it was also built higher than the Prow, and was the Place where the Pilot sat to steer: The Bow of it was call'd πρὸς ἰώ; the Planks of which that was compos'd, τα πρὸς ἰώ. There was another Place something below the Top, call'd ἀσπίδιον, the interior Part of which was term'd ἰσθμίου.

Some other Things there are in the Prow and Stern that deserve our Notice; as those Ornaments wherewith the Extremities of the Ship were beautify'd, commonly call'd in general ἀκρότεζα (b) or καὶ κορυμίδες (c), in Latin, Corymbi; which Name is taken from the Greek κόρυμβος, used in Homer:

— νῆες ἀποκόψουσιν ἀκρὰ κορυμβοῖς

Tho' this Word in Greek is not, as in the Latin, apply'd to the Ornaments of both Ends, but only those of the Prow (d): These are likewise call'd ἀκροτόλια, because plac'd at the Extremity of the ῥόλος, which was a long Plank at the Head of the Prow, and therefore sometimes term'd ὑπερφύλαξ (e). The Form of them sometimes resembled Helmets, sometimes living Creatures, but most frequently was winded into a round Compass, whence they are so commonly named Corymbi and Coronæ.

To the ἀκροτόλια in the Prow answer'd the ἄσπερα in the Stern, which are often of an orbicular Fashion, or fashion'd like Wings, to which a little Shield call'd ἀσπίδιον, or ἀσπίδιοσκη, was frequently affix'd: Sometimes a Piece of Wood was erected, whereon Ribbands of divers Colours were hung, and serv'd instead of a Flag (f) to distinguish the Ship, and of a Weather-cock to signify the Quarters of the Wind.

Χνίσκος was so call'd from χῆν, a Goose, whose Figure it resembled, because Geese were looked on as fortunate Omens to Mariners, for that they swim on the Top of the Waters, and sink not. This Ornament, according to some, was fix'd at the Bottom of the Prow, where it was join'd to the foremost Part of the Keel; and was the Part to which Anchors were fasten'd when cast into the Sea; But others carry it to the other End of the Ship, and fix it upon the Extremity of the Stern (g).

Παράσημον was the Flag whereby Ships were distinguish'd from one another: It was plac'd in the Prow, just below the ῥόλος, being sometimes

(a) Thucydædis *Scholias*tes. (b) Suidas. (c) Hæmerus. (d) Etymologicæ Αἰτίας.
(e) Pollux. (f) Pollux, Eustatbius. (g) Etymologicæ Αἰτίας.

Sometimes carv'd, and frequently painted, whence it is in Latin term'd Pisana, representing the Form of a Mountain, a Tree, a Flower, or any other Thing wherein it was distinguish'd from what was call'd Tutela, or the Safe-guard of the Ship, which always represented some of the Gods, to whose Care and Protection the Ship was recommended; for which Reason it was held sacred, and had the Privilege of being a Refuge, and Sanctuary to such as fled to it; Prayers also and Sacrifices were offer'd, and Oaths confirm'd before it, as the Mansion of the tutelar and presiding Deity of the Ship: Now and then we find it taken for the παράσημον (a), and perhaps some few Times the Image of the God might be represented upon the Flags: By some it is placed also in the Prow (b), but by most Authors of Credit assigned to the Stern: Thus Ovid, (to omit more Instances) in his Epistle of Paris, Accipit Upsilonos puppis adunca Deos.

The Stern with painted Deities richly shines.

Farther, the Tutela and παράσημον are frequently distinguish'd in express Words; that being always signify'd by the Image of a God; this usually of some Creature, or feign'd Representation: Hence the same Author (c),

Est mihi, sitque, precor, flava tutela Minerva, Navis & à picia casside nomen habet.

Minerva is the Goddess I adore,
And may she grant the Blessings I implore;
The Ship its Name a painted Helmet gives.

Where the tutelar Deity was Minerva, the παράσημον the Helmet. In like manner the Ship wherein Europa was convey'd from Phœnicia into Crete, had a Bull for its Flag, and Jupiter for its tutelar Deity; which gave Occasion to the Fable of her being ravish'd by that God in the Shape of a Bull. It was customary for the Antients to commit their Ships to the Protection of those Deities, whom they thought most concern'd for their Safety, or to whom they bore any sort of Relation or Affection: Thus we learn from Euripides (d), that Theseus's whole Fleet consisted of sixty Sail, was under the Care of Minerva, the Protectress of Athens; Achilles's Navy was committed to the Nereids, or Sea-Nymphs, because of the Relation he had to them on the Account of his Mother Thetis, who was one of the Number; and (to mention no more) the Bœotian Ships had for their tutelar God Cadmus, represented with a Dragon in his Hand, because he was the Founder

(a) LeBantini, Lib. I. cap. I. Servius Æneid. V. Glossa veteres. (b) Procopius in Æsaiæ cap. II. Cyrillus in Catena ad eundem Prophetam. (c) De Tristibus. (d) Iphigenia.

Founder of Thebes, the principal City in Bœotia. Nor were whole Fleets only, but single Ships, recommended to certain Deities, which the Antients usually chose out of the Number of those who were reputed the Protectors of their Country or Family, or presided over the Business they were going about: Thus Merchants committed themselves and their Ships to the Care of Mercury, Soldiers to Mars, and Lovers to Venus and Cupid; so Paris tells his Mistress in Ovid.

*Quatamen ipse vehor, comitata Cupidine parvo
Sponsor conjugii stat Dea picta sui.*

Venus, who has betroth'd us, painted stands
With little Cupid on my Ship.—

On the Prow of the Ship, about the ῥόλον, was placed a round Piece of Wood call'd πρυξίς, and sometimes ὀφθαλμός, the Eye of the Ship, because fix'd in its Fore-deck (a); on this was inscrib'd the Name of the Ship, which was usually taken from the Flag, as appears in the fore-mention'd Passage of Ovid, where he tells us his Ship receiv'd its Name from the Helmet painted upon it: Hence comes the frequent Mention of Ships call'd Pegasi, Scyllæ, Bulls, Rams, Tygers, &c. which the Poets took Liberty to represent as living Creatures that transported their Riders from one Country to another; nor was there (according to some) any other Ground for those known Fictions of Pegasus, the wing'd Horse of Bellerophon, or the Ram that is reported to have carried Phryxus to Colchus, with several others, that occur every-where in the Poets.

The whole Fabrick being compleated, it was fortified with Pitch to secure the Wood from the Waters; whence it came that Homer's Ships are every-where mention'd with the Epithet of μελανναι, or black. The first that made use of Pitch, were the Inhabitants of Phœacia (b), called afterwards Coryra. Sometimes Wax was employ'd in the same Use; whence Ovid (c), Cœrula ceratas accipit unda rates.

The azure Sea receives the waxy Ships.

Now and then it was apply'd with a Mixture of Rosin, and other Materials fit for the same Purpose; whence the Colour of Ships was not always the same, and the Epithets ascrib'd to them in the Poets are various.

After all, the Ships being bedeck'd with Garlands and Flowers, the Mariners also adorn'd with Crowns, she was launch'd into the Sea with loud Acclamations, and other Expressions of Mirth and Joy (d); and being being purify'd by a Priest with a lighted Torch, and Egg and Brimstone (a), or, after some other Manner, was consecrated to the God whose Image she bore.

Of the Tackling, and Instruments required in Navigation.

THE Instruments us'd in Navigation were of divers Sorts, being either necessary to all sorts of Navigation, or only some Form of it, as that by Sails, by Oars, &c. The chief of the former Sort were as follow:

Πηδαλιον, gubernaculum, the Rudder, placed in the hindmost Deck, whereby the Pilot directed the Course of the Ship. The smaller Sort of Ships had only one Rudder, but those of greater Bulk, as often as Occasion required, had more, insomuch that sometimes we read of four Rudders in one Vessel: The Places of these are uncertain, being perhaps not always the same; but it seems probable, that when there were only two Rudders, one was fixed to the Fore-deck, the other to the hindmost; whence we read of ἡνὶ σφιγερῶν, or, Ships with two Sterns: When there were four Rudders, one seems to have been fixed to each Side of the Vessel.

Ἄγκυρα, an Anchor, the first Invention of which some ascribe to the Tyrrhenians (b); others to Midas the Son of Gordius, whose Anchor, Pausanias tells us, was preserv'd in one of Jupiter's Temples till his Days: Since there were divers Sorts of Anchors, it is not improbable that both these may justly lay claim to Part of the Invention. The most ancient Anchors are said to have been of Stone (c), and sometimes of Wood, to which a great Quantity of Lead was usually fixed: In some Places, Baskets full of Stones (d), and Sacks fill'd with Sand, were employ'd to the same Use: All these were let down by Cords into the Sea, and by their Weight stay'd the Course of the Ship. Afterwards Anchors were compos'd of Iron, and furnished with Teeth, which, being fastened to the Bottom of the Sea, preserv'd the Vessel immoveable; whence ἰδόντες, and Dentes, are frequently taken for Anchors in the Greek and Latin Poets. At first there was only one Tooth, whence Anchors were called ἰσπόρομοι (e); but in a short Time a second was added by Eupalamus (f), or Anacharsis the Scythian Philosopher (g): The Scholiast upon Apollonius (h) confidently affirms, that this Sort of Anchors was used by the Argonauts; yet herein he seems to deserve no great Credit, for that he runs contrary to the Testimonies of other Writers, and his own Author Apollonius makes mention of none but those of Stone. The Anchors with two Teeth were called ἀμφίβολοι, or ἀμφιγμοί, and from antient Monuments appear to have been much what the same with those used in our Days, only the transverse Piece of Wood upon their Handles is wanting in all of them. Every Ship had several Anchors, one of which, surpassing all the rest in Bigness and Strength, was peculiarly term'd ἱερά, in Latin, sacra, and was never used but in extreme Danger; whence sacram anchoram solvere is proverbially applied to such as are forced to their last Refuge.

Ερμῶν, θιμίλιος, ἱρισμα, saburra, Ballast, wherewith Ships were poised, whence it is called ἀσφάλισμα πλῆν; it was usually of Sand, but sometimes of any other ponderous Matter. Diomedes, in his Voyage from Troy, is said to have employ'd the Stones of that City's Walls for this Use (a). It is sometimes called κίφαλος and κίφαλον (b).

Βίλι, called by Herodotus κλάπις, κληρίη (c), by Lucilius Catapirates (d), was an Instrument wherewith they sounded the Depth of the Sea, and discover'd whether the Bottom was firm and commodious for anchoring, or dangerous by reason of Quick-sands, or other Obstructions. It was commonly of Lead or Brass, or other ponderous Metals, and let down by a Chain into the Deep (e).

Καντοί, called by Sophocles ἀγκύρα (f), in Latin, Conti; long Poles used to sound the Depth of shallower Waters, to thrust the Ship from Rocks and Shelves, and to force her forward in Fords and Shallows, where the Waters had not Strength enough to carry her.

Αποβαθρεῖ, ἐπιβαθρεῖ, or κλίμακες, were light Bridges or Stairs joining the Land to Ships, or one Ship to another.

Βιτλίο, αἰτλος, in Latin, bauftrum, tolleno, or tollena, &c. a Swipe or Engine to draw up Water.

To some of the above-mentioned Instruments certain Ropes were required, and distinguished according to their several Uses; as Πίσματα, ancoralia, or ancorarii, the Cables wherewith Anchors were cast into the Sea called sometimes κάρμιλοι (g), or κάρμηλοι (h): Whence in the Place of St. Matthew, where Christ, speaking of the Difficulty of a rich Man's entering Heaven, tells his Disciples, it is harder than for a Camel to pass thro' the Eye of a Needle; Theophylact, and some others, interpret the Word κάρμηλος, not of the Animal called a Camel, but a Cable (i).

Ριμάλι, ὀλεῖ, or Πεῖραι, parekones, remulci, Ropes by which Ships are towed.

Αἰγύα, ἰ γύα, πεισμάλα, retinacula, Cords wherewith Ships were ty'd to the Shore. In most Harbours Stones were erected for this Purpose, being bored through like Rings, and thence called δακτυλός; to these the Cords cast out of the Stern were bound: This Custom was always observed when Ships came into Port; and therefore therefore when they put to Sea, it is usually said they did solvere funes, loose their Cords: Instances of this are every-where frequent, but I shall only give you one out of Ovid (a), who speaks thus of Æneas's Followers:

(a) Lycophronis Cassandr. v. 618. (b) Hesychius. (c) Euterpe. (d) Lib. XIX. cap. IV. (e) Glossæ in Act. Apost. cap. XXVII. (f) Pollux. (g) Aristophanis Scholæstis. (h) Phavorinus. (i) Matthæi Evangel. cap. XIX.

*Æneadæ gaudent, casoque in littore tauro,
Torta coronatæ solvant retinacula navis.*

A Bull the joyful Trojans sacrific'd
Upon the Shore, then loos'd the Rope that ty'd
The Ship all crown'd with Garlands. —

The End of doing this was, that the Ships might be secured from the Violence of the Winds and Waves; for which Reason, in those commodious Harbours that lay not exposed to them, Ships remain'd loose and untty'd; whence Homer (b); ἢ δὲ λιμὴν εὐορμῶ, ἢ ἔχρω πνέσματος ἴσιν.

So still the Port, there was no need of Ropes.

I proceed to the Instruments, which were only necessary to some sort of Navigation; where I shall first treat of those required in Rowing, which were as follow:

Κῶπαι, remi, Oars, so called from one Copas, by whom, 'tis said, they were first invented. Πάλη, in Latin, Palmula, or Tonja, was the Blade, or broad Part of the Oar, which was usually cover'd with Brass, that it might with greater Strength and Force repel the Waves, and endure the longer. There were several Banks of Oars placed gradually above one another; the Oars of the lowest Bank were shorter than the rest, and call'd θαλαμικαί, or θαλαμίδαι: Those of the middle Banks were termed ὄγραι; those of the uppermost δρανητικάι and δρανήτιδες, and were the longest, being at the greatest Distance from the Water; wherefore, that the Rowers might be the better able to wield and manage them, it was customary to put Lead upon their Handles (c), lest the Bottom should out-poise the Top.

Σκαλμι, were round Pieces of Wood, whereon the Rowers hung their Oars when they rested from their Labours: Hence τὸν τρι-σκαλμῶ, i. e. a Ship with three Rows of Scalmi, or a Trireme.

Τρόποι, τροπῶναι, stropbi, or struppi, were Leathern Thongs (d), wherewith the Oars were hung upon the scalmi; those also, with which the Rudder was bound. Leather and Skins of Beasts were apply'd also to several other Uses; as to cover the scalmi, and the Holes thro' which the Oars were put forth, to preserve them from being worn (e). There were Skins under the Rowers, called ὀππῶναι, and sometimes,

Sometimes, ὑπαγκώνια, ὑποπύγια τῶν ἱππέων, from saving the Elbows or Breeches of the Rowers.

Ἐδάλια, ζιγμάτα, ζυγά, in Latin, transstra and juga, were the Seats of the Rowers.

The Instruments used in Sailing were as follow:

Ἰστία, φασσῶνις αἶμα, vela, Sails, which are by some thought to have been first invented by Dædalus, and to have given Origin to the Fable of his using Wings: Others refer this Invention to Icarus, making Dædalus the Contriver of Masts and Sail-yards (a). At first there was only one Sail in a Ship, but afterwards a greater Number was found convenient; the Names of which were these:

Ἀστῖμων, by some taken for supparum, or the Top-sail, which hung on the Top of the Mast.

Ἀκώτις, the great Sails (b).

Δόλων, the Trinket, or small Sail in the Fore-deck (c): Others make ἀκάτις and δόλων the same.

Ἐπίδρομος, the Misen-sail, which was larger than the former, and hung in the Hind-deck (d).

Sails were commonly of Linen, sometimes of any other Materials fit for receiving and repelling the Winds: In Dio (e) we have mention of Leathern Sails; it was likewise used for want of other Sails to hang up their Garments; whence came the Fable of Mercurus, who is feign'd to have fail'd with the Back of a Lion, because he used no other Sail but his Garment, which was a Lion's Skin (f).

Κεραία, κέρατα, antenna, the Sail-yards, Pieces of Wood fix'd upon the Mast, to which the Sails were ty'd (g): The Name signifies an Horn, whence its Extremities are called ἀκροκεραία; its Arms inclining to an orbicular Figure, are term'd ἀγκύλαι. The Latin Poet hath used cornua in the same Sense (h),

———— Veloque superba capaci

Cum rapidum bauriret Boream & cornibus omnes

Colligeret status.————

Other Parts it had close to the Mast call'd ἄμβελος, and Σύμβελος, being those by which it was moved.

Ἰστὶς, malus, the Mast. Every Ship had several Masts, but we are told by Aristotle, that at first there was only one Mast, which being fix'd in the Middle of the Ship, the Hole into which the Foot of it was inserted, was named μισοδμή (i), in Latin, modius. When they landed, the Mast was taken down, as appears every-where in Homer, and placed on a Thing called ἱσδόκη, which, according to Suidas, was a Case, wherein the Mast was reposit; but Eustathius will have it to be nothing but a Piece of Wood, against which it was reared. The Parts of the Mast were these: Πτέρω, or the Foot. Ἀνάς, or, according according to Athenæus, λιδοι, or τεράχλος, to which the Sail was fixed, Καρχήσιοι, the Pulley, by which the Ropes were turn'd round, Θωράσιοι, built in the Manner of a Turret for Soldiers to stand upon, and cast Darts: above this was a Piece of Wood call ικρίοι, the Extremity of which was term'd ἡλεκάτη, on which hung a Ribband call'd, from its continual Motion, ιπισίον, turning round with the Wind.

The Names of the Ropes, requir'd to the Use of the above-mention'd Parts, were these that follow, as enumerated by Scheffer :

Επίτονοι were the Ropes call'd in Latin, anguinae, wherewith the Sail-yards were bound to the Main-Mast (a): Others will have them to be the same with the Latin rudentes, which were those that govern'd the Sail-yards, so as one Part of the Sails might be hoisted, the other lower'd (b), according to the Pleasure of the Pilot. Others will have the Cord wherewith the Sail-yards were ty'd to the Mast, to be term'd καλων, cerubus, anchonis, and rudens; that whereby they were contracted or dilated, ὑπέρτα (c), in Latin, opifera (d).

Πόδες, in Latin, pedes, were Cords at the Corners of the Sails (e), whereby they were manag'd as Occasion requir'd. Πρόπιδες were small Cords below the pedes, which were so contriv'd as to be loosed and contracted by them: The Use of both these was in taking the Winds, for by them the Sails were contracted, dilated, or changed from one Side to another, as there was Occasion.

Μισυρίαι were those whereby the Mast was erected, or letdown (f); others will have them to belong to the Sails.

Πρότονοι were Cords, which, passing thro' a Pully at the Top of the Mast, were ty'd on one Side to the Prow, on the other to the Stern, to keep the Mast fixed and immoveable.

The Materials of which these and other Cords were composed, were at first seldom any Thing but Leathern Thongs; afterwards they used Hemp, Flax, Broom, Palm-leaves, Philyry, the Bark of Trees, as the Cherry, Teal-tree, Vine, Maple, Carpine, &c.

Of the Instruments of War in Ships..

WH A T I have hitherto delivered concerning the Parts and Construction of Ships, has been spoken of in general without respect to any particular Sort of them; it remains therefore, that in the next Place I give you a brief Account of what was further necessary to equip a Man of War.

Εμβολοι, restum, was a Beak of Wood fortify'd with Brass, whence it is call'd χαλκωμα νῆω in Diodorus (g), and Ships have sometimes

the

(a) Suidas. (b) Phavorinus. (c) Suidas. (d) Isidorus. (e) Aristophan. Schol. Equit. Aët. I. Scen. I. Apollonii Scholiastes. Vide meum, & Mauris Comment in Lyophronis Cassander. v. 1035. (f) Apollonii Scholiastes. (g) Lib. XX

the Epithet of χαλκίμολοι: One or more of these was always fasten'd to the Prow to annoy the Enemy's Ships, and the whole Prow was sometimes covered with Brags to guard it from Rocks and Assaults. The Person that first used these Beaks is said to have been one Pisæus an Italian (a); for it will not be allowed that the primitive Greeks had any Knowledge of them, since no such Thing is mentioned in Homer, which could scarce have happened, had they been invented at the Time of the Trojan War: Yet Æschylus (b) gives Nestor's Ship the Epithet of δελτιόμολος, or armed with ten Beaks, and Iphigenia in Euripides speaks of Brazen Beaks:

Μη μοι χαλκίμολαδων
Περύπλεος ἐπὶ Αὐλῆς διξασθαι
Τησὶ δὲ ὄρεσσι.

O! that these Ships with Brazen Beaks
Had never enter'd Aulis Ports.

But it may be justly question'd, whether these Poets do not take their Description from the Practice of their own Times, a Thing frequent enough with Men of that Profession. These Beaks were at first long and high, but afterwards it was found more convenient to have them short and firm, and placed so low as to pierce the Enemy's Ships under Water. This was an Invention of one Aristo a Corinthian, against whom it prov'd a considerable Advantage; for by these new Beaks several of the Athenian Men of War were overturn'd, or torn in Pieces at the first Shock (c). Above the Beak was another Instrument call'd περίμολος, and it appears from antient Medals, that the Beaks themselves were usually adorn'd with various Figures of Animals, &c. Ἐπώλιδες were Pieces of Wood placed on each Side of the Prow (d), to guard it from the Enemy's Beaks; because Prows are usually compar'd to Faces, these were thought to resemble Ears, whence their Name seems to have been deriv'd: For those are mistaken that would have them belong to the Hind-deck (e).

Κατασφραγίς. Σανδύματα, or Hatches, sometimes call'd καταφραγμάτα, whence we meet with καταφραγμέναι, καταφραγῆς, and τεβέα, cover'd Ships, or Men of War; which are frequently oppos'd to Ships of Passage or Burden, which were ἀφραγτοί and ἀπερία, uncover'd, or without Hatches: This Covering was of Wood, and erected on Purpose for the Soldiers, that they standing, as it were, upon an Eminence, might level their missive Weapons with greater Force and Certainty against their Enemies. In the primitive Ages, particularly about the Time of the Trojan War, we are told by Thucydides, that the Soldiers us'd to fight upon the foremost and hindermost Decks (f), and therefore whenever we find Homer speak of ἰκρία πῆξ, which his Scholiasts interpret Hatches, we are only to understand him of these Parts, which alone us'd to be cover'd in those Days. Thus he tells us of Ajax defending the Grecian Ships against the Attack of the Trojans (a), —, ἦν δ' ἐν τῷ πρῶτῳ μακρὰ βίβασθον.

He march'd upon the Hatches with long Strides,

And of Ulysses preparing himself for the Encounter with Scylla, he speaks thus (b):

Πρῶτος —

Upon the Hatches of the foremost Deck

He went. —

The other Parts of the Ship are said to have been first covered by the Trojans (c).

Beside the Coverings of Ships already mention'd, and call'd καταφράγματα, there were other Coverings to guard the Soldiers from their Enemies, call'd παραφράγματα, περιφράγματα, παραπίλασματα, παραθήματα, περιπλάσματα, in Latin, Plutes; and sometimes Propugnacula: These were commonly Hides, or such-like Materials, hung on both Sides of the Ship, as well to hinder the Waves from falling into it, as to receive the Darts cast from the adverse Ships, that under these, as Walls on both Sides, the Soldiers might without Danger annoy their Enemies.

Διὰ πρῶτον, a certain Machine, which being usually a Part of these Ships, cannot be omitted in this Place: It was a vast and massy Piece of Lead or Iron, cast in the Form of a Dolphin, and hung with Cords and Pullies to the Sail-yards or Mast, which being thrown with great Violence into the adverse Ships, either penetrated them, and so open'd a Passage for the rising Floods, or by it's Weight and Force sunk them to the Bottom of the Sea (d).

Another Difference betwixt Men of War and other Ships was, that the former commonly had an Helmet engraved on the Top of their Masts. (e).

Of the Mariners and Soldiers.

WE are told by Thucydides, that amongst the Antients there were no different Ranks of Seamen, but the same Persons were employ'd in those Duties, which were in later Ages executed by divers, to whom they gave the several Names of Rowers, Mariners and Soldiers; whereas at first all these were the same Men, who laid down their Arms to labour at the Oar, and perhaps what was farther necessary to the Government of the Ships, but, as often as Occasion requir'd, resum'd them to assault their Enemies: This appears every where in Homer, out of whom I shall observe this one Instance:

——— ἰρίται δ' ἐν ἱκανῇ πινυμένους ἐμπίθεσθαι τόξῳ ἰδιδότες.

Each Ship had fifty Rowers that were skill'd
Well in the shooting Art.——

These were term'd ἰρίται (a). This was the Practice of those Times, wherein no great Care was taken, no extraordinary Preparations made for equipping Men of War, but the same Vessels were thought sufficient for Transportation and Fight: Afterwards, when the Art of Naval War began to be improv'd, it was presently understood that any one of the fore-mentioned Occupations was enough to require the whole Time and Application of the Persons employ'd therein; whence it became customary to furnish their Ships of War with the three following Sorts of Men.

ἑρίται, κωπηλάται, call'd by Polybius (b) οἱ ὑπάρχοντες, and by the same Author (c), with Xenophon (d), τὰ πλερώματα, tho' we are told by the Scholiast upon Thucydides that this is a Name of very large Extent, comprehending not only those that row'd, but all other Persons in the Ship, and sometimes apply'd to any Thing else contain'd therein, when Ships had several Banks of Oars, the uppermost Rowers were call'd θρανῖται and their Bank θρανῖον (e): The lowest θαλάμιοι, θαλαμῖται, and θαλάμῃαι, and their Bank θαλαμοί: Those in the Middle ζυγῖται and μισοζυγῖοι, and all their Banks, how many soever in Number, ζυγά. Every one had a distinct Oar, for, except in Cases of Necessity, one Oar was never manag'd by above one Person, as Scheffer hath prov'd at large; yet their Labour and Pay were not the same; for such as were plac'd in the uppermost Banks, by reason of their Distance from the Water, and the Length of their Oars, underwent more Toil and Labour than those in the inferior Banks, and therefore were rewarded with greater Wages. The Rowers in Ships of Burden were call'd εργολοιῦνται (a), those in Triremes τριηρίται, and the rest seem to have had different Appellations from the Names of the Ships they labour'd in. Those that were foremost in their respective Banks, and sat nearest the Prow, were call'd πρώτοι; and on the other Side, those who were plac'd next the Stern were term'd πίπυτοι, as being behind their Fellows. Their Work was esteem'd one of the worst and most wretched Drudgeries, and therefore the most notorious Malefactors were frequently condemn'd to it; for, beside their incessant Toil in rowing, their very Rest was uneasy, there being no Place to repose their weary'd Bodies, beside the Seats wherein they had labour'd all the Day; therefore whenever the Poets speak of their ceasing from Labour, there is Mention of their lying down upon them: Thus Seneca (b):

—— credita est vento ratis,
Fususque transitis miles. ——

Under the Wind the Ship was left,
The Soldiers lay along their Seats.

To the same Purpose Virgil (c):

—— placida laxant membra quiete
Sub remis fusi per dura sedilia nautæ.

And now along their Seats the Rowers laid,
Had eas'd their weary'd Limbs with Sleep.

The rest of the Ship's Crew usually took their Rest in the same Manner, only the Masters (d), or Persons of Quality, were permitted to have Clothes spread under them; so we read of Ulysses in Homer (e)

Καὶ δ' ὁ δὲ Ὀδυσσεὺς ἔριπται ἔπηρος τι, λίνοισι
Νηὸς ἐν' ἐκρίβῳ γλαφυρῇ (ἵνα νήγετοισι εὐδῇ)
Πνεύματα, αἱ δὲ καὶ αὐτὸς ἐβήσατο, καὶ κατέλατο Στήν.

But Clothes the Men for great Ulysses spread,
And plac'd an easy Pillow for his Head;
On these he undisturb'd securely slept,
Lying upon the Stern.——

Such as would not be contented with this Provision, were look'd upon as soft and delicate, and unfit to endure the Toils and Hardships of War; which Censure the Athenians pass'd upon Alcibiades, because he had a Bed hung on Cords, as we read in Plutarch (a).

Naῦται, Mariners, were exempt from drudging at the Oar, but perform'd all other Duties in the Ship; to which End, that all Things might be carried on without Tumult and Confusion, every one had his proper Office, as appears from Apollonius and Flaccus's Argonauticks, where one is employ'd in rearing the Mast, another in fitting the Sail-yards, a third in hoisting the Sails, and the rest are bestowed up and down the Ship, every one in his proper Place: Hence they had different Titles, as from ἄγκυρα, Saile, the Persons appointed to govern them were call'd ἄγκυραὶ; those that Climb'd up the Ropes to descry distant Countries or Ships, were term'd οὐρανόβαται, and the rest in like Manner: There were a Sort of Men inferior to the former, and call'd πυρρῆται, who were not confin'd to any certain Place or Duty, but were ready on all Occasions to attend the rest of the Seamen, and supply them with whatever they wanted (b). The whole Ship's Crew were usually wicked and profligate Fellows, without any Sense of Religion or Humanity, and therefore reckon'd by Juvenal (c) amongst the vilest Rogues:

*Invenies aliquo cum percussore jacentem,
Permixtum nautis, aut furibus, aut fugitivis.*

You'll surely find his Company, some Tarrs,
Cut-throats, or rogue Vagabonds. —

The Soldiers that serv'd at Sea, were in Latin term'd Classarii, in Greek ἰνέται, either because they did ἐνέβαινον τὰς νῆας, Ascend into Ships; or ἀνὰ τὰ ἰνέματα τὰ καταρράματα, from ascending the Hatches where they fought. They were arm'd after the same Manner with those design'd for Land Service, only there seems always to have been a greater Number of heavy-arm'd Men than was thought necessary by Land; for we find in Plutarch (d), that, of Themistocles's Ships, only four were light-arm'd. Indeed it highly import'd them to fortify themselves in the best Manner they could, since there was no Possibility of retiring, or changing Places; but every Man was obliged to fight Hand to Hand, and maintain his Ground till the Battle was ended; wherefore their whole Armour, though in Form usually the same with that employ'd in Land-Service, yet exceeded it in Strength and Firmness. Besides this we find also some new Instruments of War never us'd on Land, the principal of which are these that follow:

Δρεῖα ναύμαχα (a), Spears of an unusual Length, sometimes exceeding twenty Cubits, whence they are call'd in Latin (b) balæ longa, and by Homer ξυστὰ ναύμαχα, and μακρὰ (c) :

Οἱ δ' ἀπὸ νηὶν ὑψιμελαινῶν ἰπιδαντες
Μακροῖσι ξυστοῖσι, τὰ ῥ' αὖθ' ἰπὶ νηυσὶ κειτο

These strove to make the Enemy give Way :
Long Spears, for Sea-fights only made, compos'd
Of sev'ral Pieces.—

That was full two and twenty Cubits long.

Δρεῖπαια (e) call'd by Appian δευδερίπανον, by Diodorus (f) δειπαιφόρος κρηαία, was an Engine of Iron, crooked like a Sicle (g), and fix'd to the Top of a long Pole, wherewith they cut in sunder the Cords of the Sail-yards, and thereby letting the Sails fall down, disabled the light Ships. Not unlike this was another Instrument, arm'd at the End with a broad Iron Head, edg'd on both Sides, wherewith they cut the Cords that ty'd the Rudder to the Ship.

Κρηαῖα (b) were Engines to cast Stones into the Enemies Ships.

We find another Engine mention'd by Vegetius, which hung upon the Main-mast, and resembled a Battering-Ram ; for it consisted of a long Beam, and an Head of Iron, and was with great Violence push'd against the Sides of adverse Ships.

Καὶ εὐσθηρὰ, in Latin manus ferrea, was a Grappling-Iron, which they cast out of an Engine into the Enemies Ship : It is said to have been first us'd in Greece by Pericles the Athenian (i) at Rome by Duilius (k). Different from these were the ἀρπαγίαι, harpagines, said to be invented by Anacharsis (l) the Scythian Philosopher ; which, as Scheffer collects out of Athenæus, were Hooks of Iron hanging on the Top of a Pole, which, being secur'd with Chains to the Masts, or some other lofty Part of the Ship, and then cast with great Force into the Enemies Vessel, caught it up into the Air. The Means used to defeat these Engines was to cover their Ships with Hides, which cast off, or blunted the Stroke of the Iron (m).

The Dominion of the Seas was not confin'd to any one of the Grecian States; they were continually contending for Empire, and by various Turns of Fortune sometimes possess'd, and again in a few Months or Years were dispossest of it: The Persons that enjoy'd it longest, and maintain'd it with the greatest Fleet, after Greece had arriv'd at the Height of it's Glory, were the Athenians, who first began seriously to apply themselves to Naval Affairs, about the Time of Xerxes's Invasion: The first that engag'd them in this Enterprize was Themistocles, who considering their Inability to oppose the Persians by Land, and the Commodiousness of their Situation for Naval Affairs, interpreted the Oracle that advis'd to defend themselves with Walls of Wood to this Purpose, and prevail'd upon them to convert their whole Time and Treasure to the building and fitting out a Fleet. The Money employ'd on this Design, was the Revenue of the Silver-Mines at Laureotis, which had formerly been distributed among the People, who, by Themistocles's Persuasion, were induc'd to part with their Income, that Provision might be made for the publick Security. With this an hundred Triremes were rigg'd out against Xerxes's numerous Fleet, over which, by the Assistance of their Allies, they obtain'd an entire Victory. Afterwards the Number of their Ships was increas'd by the Management of Lycurgus the Orator to four hundred (a); and we are told by Isocrates (b), that the Athenian Navy consisted of twice as many Ships as all the rest of the Grecians were Masters of: It was made up of two Parts, one being furnish'd out by the Athenians themselves, the other by their Confederates.

The Fleet equip'd at Athens was maintain'd after the Manner prescrib'd by Themistocles till the Time of Demosthenes, who, to ingratiate himself with the Commonalty, restor'd to them their antient Revenues, and devis'd a new Method to procure Money for the Payment of Seamen, and the Construction of new Men of War: This he effected by dividing the richer Sort of Citizens into symplochai, or Companies, which were oblig'd, according to their several Abilities, to contribute largely out of their own Substance; and in Times of Necessity it was frequent for Men of Estates to rig out Ships at their own Expence, over and above what was requir'd of them, there being a generous Contention between the leading Men in that Commonwealth, which should out-do the rest in serving his Country.

The remaining Part of the Fleet was compos'd of Allies; for the Athenians, understanding how necessary it was to their Affairs to maintain their Dominion of the Seas, would enter into no Leagues or Confederacies with any of their Neighbours, but such as engag'd themselves to augment their Navy with a Proportion of Ships; which became a double Advantage to the Athenians whose Fleet was strengthen'd by such Accessions, whilst their Allies were held in Obedience, as it were, by so many Hostages, all which upon any Revolt must needs fall into the Hands of the Athenians: Those States that that were remote from Sea, or unable to fit out Vessels of War, were oblig'd to send their Proportion in Money (a). These Customs were first brought up after the second Persian War, when it was agreed by the common Consent of all the Grecians, that they should retaliate the Injuries received from the Barbarians, by carrying the War into their own Country, and invading them with the whole Strength of Greece, under the Conduct of the Athenians, who at that Time rais'd themselves a very high Reputation by their mighty Naval Preparations, and the singular Courage, Wisdom, and Humanity of their two Generals Themistocles and Aristides. Afterwards being grown great in Power, and aiming at nothing less than the Sovereignty of all Greece, they won some by Favours and specious Pretences, others by Force of Arms to comply with their Desires; for their Manner of treating the Cities they had conquer'd, was to oblige them either to furnish Money, paying what Tribute they exacted, or to supply them with Vessels of War, as Thucydides reports of the Gibians, when subdued by the Athenians (b); Xenophon also (c), and Diodorus (d) mention the same Custom: Thus by one Means or other the greatest Part of the Grecian Cities were drawn in to augment the Athenian Greatness.

Of Naval Officers.

T H E R E were two Sorts of Officers in all Fleets; one govern'd the Ships and Mariners, the other were entrusted with the Command of the Soldiers, but had likewise Power over the Ship-Masters and their Crew; these were Στράτηγοι, ναύαρχοι, or πραιποσίτοι, Præfatus classis, the Admiral, whose Commission was different according to the Exigency of Times and Circumstances, being sometimes to be executed by one alone, sometimes in Conjunction with other Persons, as happened to Alcibiades, Nicias, and Lamachus, who were sent with equal Power to command the Athenian Fleet in Sicily: Their Time of Continuance in Command was likewise limited by the People, and, as they pleas'd, prolong'd or shorten'd. We read of Epaminondas (e) that, finding his Country like to be brought into great Danger upon the Resignation of his Office, he held it four Months longer than he was commission'd to do; in which Time he put a new Face upon the Theban Affairs, and by his wise Management dispell'd the Fears they lay under; which done, he voluntarily laid down his Power, but was no sooner divested thereof, than he was call'd to Account for holding it so long, and narrowly escap'd being condemn'd to Death; for it was fear'd that such a Precedent might some Time or other be a Pretence to ambitious Spirits, having so great Power entrusted in their Hands, to enslave the Commonwealth. The same Reason seems to have been the Cause of the Lacedæmonian Law, whereby it was forbidden, that any Person should be Admiral above once (a), which nevertheless stood them in no good stead, it thereby often happening that they were forced to commit their Fleet to raw and unexperienced Commanders.

Επιστολεύς (b) sometimes call'd ἐπιστάτης, was Vice Admiral, or Commander in Chief under the Admiral.

Τήνερξ, Captain of a Trireme, who commanded all the other Soldiers therein. The Captains of other Men of War were dignify'd with Titles taken from the Vessels they commanded, as πικροτάτης, &c.

The Officers that had Care of the Ships, were the following;

Ἀρχικυβερνήται, those who were entrusted with the Care and Management of all Marine Affairs, to provide commodious Harbours, to direct the Course of the Fleet, and order all other Things concerning it, except those which related to War.

Κυβερνήτης, the Master or Pilot had the Care of the Ship, and Government of the Seamen therein, and sat at the Stern to steer: All Things were managed according to his Direction, 'twas therefore necessary that he should have obtain'd an exact Knowledge of the Art of Navigation, which was call'd κυβερνήτικὴ τέχνη, and chiefly consisted in these three Things. 1. In the right Management of the Rudder, Sails, and all the Engines used in Navigation. 2. In the Knowledge of the Winds and Celestial Bodies, their Motions and Influences. 3. In the Knowledge of commodious Harbours, of Rocks, Quick sands, and other Occurrences on the Sea. All these Acates in Ovid tells us he furnish'd himself with, in order to become an accomplish'd Pilot (c):

*Mox ego, ne scopulis hærerem semper in iisdem,
Addidici regimen, dextra moderante carinam
Fluere; & Oleniæ fidus pluviale capellæ,
Taygetemque, Hyadasque oculis, Arctumque notavi, Ventorumque domos, & portus puppibus aptos.*

Left, struck against a Rock, I there should stay,
Of steering well I learnt the usual Way,
Observ'd the Arctos and the Hyades too,
The Stars that round Taygetes glitt'ring shew;
Have mark'd th' Olenian Goat that Rain portends,
And how a noisy Wind each Quarter sends;

R. D.

As to the heavenly Bodies, they were observ'd by Sailors upon a two-fold Account being of use to them in prognosticating the Seasons, and Guides which way to shape their Course. The principal of those us'd in foretelling, were Arcturus, the Dog-star, Aræ, Orion, Hyades, Hædi, Castor and Pollux, Helena, &c. It was likewise customary to take notice of various Omens offer'd by Sea-Fowls, Fishes, and divers other Things, as the Murmuring of the Floods, the Shaking and Buzzing Noise of Trees in the Neighbouring Woods, the Dashing of the Billows against the Shore, and many more in all which good Pilots were nicely skill'd. As to the Direction in their Voyage, the first Practitioners in the Art of Navigation, being unacquainted with the rest of the celestial Motions, steer'd all the Day by the Course of the Sun, at Night betaking themselves to some safe Harbour, or resting on the Shore, and not daring to venture to Sea till their Guide was risen to discover their Way: That this was their constant Custom may be observ'd from the ancient Descriptions of those Times, whereof I shall only observe this Instance (a) :

*Sol ruit interea, & montes umbrantur opaci,
Sternimur optatæ gremio telluris ad undam,
Sortiti remos, passimque in littore sicco
Corpora curamus, fessos soper irrigat artus.*

The hast'ning Sun had reach'd his wat'ry Bed,
And Night the gloomy Mountains had o'erspread,
When Lots resolving who should Rowers be,
Upon the Shore we lie just by the Sea,
With Sleep our drooping Eyes we quickly close,
And give our weary'd Bodies sweet Repose.

E. D.

Afterwards the Phœnicians, who some will have to be the first Inventors of Navigation, discover'd the Motions of some other Stars, as may be observ'd in Pliny (b), and Propertius (c) :

Quæritis & cælo Phœnicum inventa sereno, Quæ sit stella homini commoda, quæque mala.

—led by the Art,

The wise Phœnicians found, and did impart,
You mind, what Stars are Signs of Good or Harm.

The Phœnicians we find to have been directed by Cynosura, or the lesser Bear-star, (d) which was first observed (as some are of Opinion)

by Thales the Milesian, who was originally a Phœnician (a); where the Mariners of Greece, as well as other Nations, steer'd by the greater Bear, call'd Helice; whence Aratus,

— Ἑλίκη γὰρ μὲν αἰδοῖται Ἀχαιοὶ
Εἰς ἀλὶ πτερυγίσσας ἵνα χερσησὶς ἀγνοῖ.

Helice always is the Grecians Guide,
Whene'er they take a Voyage.

For the first Observation of this they were obliged to Nauplius, if we may believe Theon, or according to the Report of Flaccus (b), to Tiphys, the Pilot of the famous Ship Argo. But of these two, we are told by Theon, the former was the securer Guide, and therefore was follow'd by the Phœnicians, who for Skill in Marine Affairs outstript not only all the rest of the World, but even the Grecians themselves.

Πρωτοῦ, or πρωτατης, was next under the Master, and had his Place in the Head of the Ship, as his Name imports. To his Care was committed the Tackling of the Ship (c), and the Rowers, who had their Places assign'd by him, as appears of Pheax, who perform'd this Office in Theseus's Ship (d). We find him every-where assisting the Master at Consultations concerning the Seasons, Places and other Things (e).

Κελευστής, porticulus, agitator, or hortator remigum, is by some interpreted the Boatswain; his Office was to signify the Word of Command to the Rowers (f), and to distribute to all the Crew their daily Portion of Food (g).

Τροχαιδης was a Musician, who by the Harmony of his Voice and Instrument, rais'd the Spirits of the Rowers, when weary with Labour (h), and ready to faint, as we read in Statius (i);

Acclinis malo mediis intersonat Orpheus
Remigiis, tantoque jubet nescire labores.

Against the Mast the tuneful Orpheus stands,
Plays to the weary'd Rowers, and commands
The Thought of Toil away. —

Another, it may be, the chief Use of this Musick was to direct the Rowers, that they, keeping Time therewith, might proceed in a regular and constant Motion, lest by an uncertain Impulse of their Oars the Course of the Ship should be retarded (k): Hence Flaccus, in his Argonautics:

E. D.

This Musick was call'd νίγηλον (b), or τὸ τριηρικὸν μέλον (c).

Δίεπαι, ναυφύλακες, custodes navis, were oblig'd to take care that the Ship receiv'd no Damage by bulging upon Rocks, or otherwise; whence, in the Night especially, we find them employ'd in sounding and directing the Ship with long Poles;

Τοιχαρχοί were either those who had the Charge of the τοῖχοι τῆς πρὸς, or Sides of the Ship, according to Turnebus (e); or of the τοῖχοι, τοῖχοι τῶν ἱερῶν, i. e. the Bank of Rowers.

Several other Names of Officers occur in Authors; as ταμίαι, who distributed to every Man his Share of Victuals, being usually the same with the κίλευσῃ, but sometimes it may be distinct from him. Homer mentions this Officer (f);

Καὶ ταμίαι περὰ νηυσὶ ἔσαν σίτοιο δοτῆρες.

And Officers embark'd, whose Care it was

Of their Voyages, Harbours, &c.

WHEN it was design'd the Fleet should put to Sea, the Signal being given by the Admiral, the Mariners hal'd the Ships into the Water; for it was customary, when they came into Harbour, to draw the Sterns to dry Land, to prevent their being toss'd and dissipated by the Waves. Hence Virgil;

——— Stant littore puppes.

The Sterns stand on the Shore.

It was frequent also for Seamen, underpropping their Ship with their Shoulders, to thrust them forwards into the Sea; so we read of the Argonauts in Valerius Flaccus (b),

*At ducis imperiis Minyæ monituque frequentes
Puppem humeris subeunt, & tento poplite proni
Decurrunt.*———

The Prince commands that they no longer stay
His Orders strait the Minyæ obey:
And kneeling down, their Shoulders heave the Ship
Into the Main———

This was sometimes perform'd by Leavers and Spars of Wood, over which Ships were roll'd into the Deep; these were call'd φαλαγίς, φαλάγισα (c) and according to Homer μοχλοῖ (d):

Μοχλοῖσι δ' ἄρα τῶγε καθίσρυσιν εἰ; ἄλα δῖον.
The heavy Ship into the Sea they thrust
With Leavers———

But, to remedy the great Trouble and Difficulty of these Methods, Archimedes the Syracusan obliged his Countrymen with the Ingenious

ous Contrivances of an Engine called Helix, whereby the Ships were with great Facility remov'd from the Shore (a). To do this they call'd τὰς ἐρύμας κίνησιν, or ἡμὰς; κατερύμασι; ἅλα.

Before they embark'd, the Ships were adorn'd with Flowers and Garlands, which were Tokens of Joy and Mirth (b), and Omens of future Prosperity: Hence Virgil:

——vocat jam carbasus auras,
Puppibus & lati nautæ imposuere coronas.

Now's a fair Wind, and all the Seamen crown
The Ship with Garlands.——

Because no Success could be expected in any Enterprize without the Divine Blessing and Assistance, they invok'd the Protection of their Gods by solemn Prayers and Sacrifices, which as they offered to other Deities, so more especially to those who had any Concern or Command in the Sea: To the Winds and Tempests, the whole Train of marine Gods and Goddesses, but above all to Neptune the great Emperor of the Sea. Thus Achilles in Virgil (c) dares not adventure himself to Sea, till he has first address'd himself to Neptune and Apollo;

——meritos aris mastravit honores,
Taurum Neptuno, taurum tibi, pulcher Apollo.

A Bull to Neptune, and a Bull to you
He sacrific'd, Apollo, as your Due.

A great Number of Instances to the same Purpose may be met with in antient Writers. Nor was it enough for themselves alone to petition the Gods for Safety and Success, but all the Multitudes that throng'd on such Occasions to the Shore, earnestly recommended them to the Divine Protection, and join'd their fervent Prayers for their Deliverance from all the Dangers they were going to encounter (d).

This done, we are told by the Scholiast upon Apollonius, that it was usual to let fly a Dove; which, no doubt, was look'd on as an Omen of safe Return, because the Bird is not easily forced to relinquish its Habitation, but, when driven away, delights to return. Then they put to Sea, the Signal being given by a Shout, by Sound of Trumpet, and several other Ways; in the Night it was usually given by Torches lighted in the Admiral-Gally; an Instance whereof we have in Seneca's Agamemnon (e):

Signum recursus regia ut fulsit rate,
Et clara lentum remigem emovit tuba,
Aurata primas prora secavit vias.

E. D.

The Ships were usually rang'd in this Order: In the Front went the lighter Vessels; after these followed the Men of War led on by the Admiral, which was commonly distinguished from the rest by the Richness of her Ornaments; thus we find Agamemnon's Ship in the fore-mention'd Place of Seneca going before the rest:

*Aurata primas prora secavit vias,
Aperitque cursus, mille quos puppes secant.*

The Admiral went first, and cut the Waves,
Prepar'd the yielding Deep, which afterwards
A thousand Vessels cleav'd.

Last of all the Vessels of Burden came up. If the Winds were high, or Seas dangerous, they were extended out at length, sailing one by one: But at other Times they went three or more a breast.

When they arriv'd at any Port where they design'd to land, the first Thing they did was to run their Ships backwards upon their Hind-decks in order to tack about: this they call'd ἐπὶ πρύμναις, or πρὶμναν κερύεθαι (a), which Phrase is by Thucydides elegantly applied to those that retreat fighting, and still facing their Enemies: Then they tack'd about, which they term'd ἐπιστρέφειν (b), turning the Heads of their Ships to the Sea, according to Virgil:

Obvertunt pelago proras ———

To th' Sea they turn'd their Prows.

Now the Rowers ceased from their Labours, and rested their Oars, which the Greeks call'd ἐπιχῆαν τὸν ἄνδρ, the Latins, inbibere remos: These they hung upon Pins, as we find in Statius (c):

*Quinquaginta illi trabibus de more revinctis
Eminus abrupto quatiant nova littora saltu.*

Their fifty Oars hung up, they rudely leap'd
Upon the new found Shore. ———

For Fear their Oars should be in danger of being broken by the Floods, they hung them not so as to reach the Water, but upon the Sides of their Ships: whence Ovid (a);

Obvertit lateri pendentes navita remos.

To the Ships Sides the Seamen hung their Oars.

Being safely landed, they discharg'd whatever Vows they had made to the Gods, besides which they usually offer'd a Sacrifice call'd ἀποβατήριον, to Jupiter firmam'd ἀποβατήριον, for enabling them ἀποβαίνειν ἀπὸ τῶν ἡνῶν, to quit the Ships, and recover the Land. Their Devotions were sometimes paid to Nereus, Glaucus, Ino, and Melicertes, the Cabiri, and other Gods of the Sea, more especially to Neptune, who was thought to have a peculiar Care of all that travell'd within the Compas of his Dominions: Thus the Heroes in Homer (b):

Αἱ δὲ Πύλον. Νηληϊῶν ἱκέτιμ' ἐπὶ Πηλεΐδῳ,
Ἰξον τοὶ δ' ἐπὶ Διὶ Σαλαῖσσι; ἱέρα ῥέζον
Τάφους παμμίλ' ἀνα, Εὐσιχθὺν κυανόχαιτον:

Landed at Pylus, where King Neleus reign'd,
With blackest Bulls they sev'ral Altars stain'd,
A Sacrifice to Neptune.—

They who had escap'd a Shipwreck, or any other Danger at Sea, were more particularly oblig'd to offer a Present to the Gods as a Testimony of their Gratitude. To this they sometimes added the Garment in which they had escap'd, and a Tablet containing an Account of their Deliverance. To which there is the following Allusion in Horace (c);

— me tabula sacer
Votiva paries indicat uvula
Suspendisse potenti
Vestimenta muris Deo.

If nothing else remain'd, they did at least shave their Hair, and consecrate it to their Protectors. Thus Lucilius affirms of himself in the Epigram (d);

Γλαύκῳ, καὶ Νηηΐῳ καὶ Ἰνῶ, καὶ Μελικέρτῃ,
Καὶ Βυθίῳ Κρονίδῃ, καὶ Σαμῶτιξί, Διοΐ;
Σωθὺς ἐκ πλάγους Ἀσκιλλῶ, ὅδ' ἐπὶ πικάρμῳ

Hence Petronius Arbitrator calls shaving their Hair naufragorum ultimum votum, the last Vow of Men in Shipwreck (a). It was also customary for those who had escaped any other Danger, particularly in μάχῃσιν οὐδὲν ἴσσω, for such as had recovered from any dangerous Sickness, to shave off their Hair (b). The Egyptians used to shave their own Hair when they paid their Acknowledgements to the Gods for the Recovery of their Children (c).

Harbours were Places render'd, either by Art or Nature, commodious for the Entertainment of Ships, and to defend them against the Insults of Winds and Waves: The former Sort were usually at the Mouth of a River, or in a Creek of the Sea, under the Cover of some lofty Promontory: The latter were vast Piles, or Heaps of Earth and other Materials cast up in the Form of a Semicircle, with Arms of a vast Length extended into the Sea; these were call'd χηλαί (d) from their Resemblance to Crabs-Claws; or ἀραι τῷ λιμένι (e); or αἰται, as in Homer, who speaks thus of the Phocynian Harbour (f):

— δύο δὲ προέλθοντες ἐν αὐτῇ
 Αἰταὶ ἀποξέωντες, λιμένι πολλῷ περιουσίαι,

— There two great Piles stood out,
 Which made a Haven —

Cicero terms them Cornua (g). For the Security of the Ships inclos'd therein, we find it usual to fix to the two Ends vast Chains or Booms, as appears in the Syracusan Harbour mention'd in Frontinus (b): Nor was it unfrequent to guard them with great Pales fortify'd against the Water with Pitch: Hence Havens are sometimes term'd in Latin Clausura, in Greek κλείσις, (i). On both Sides of the Mole were strong Towers (k), which were defended in the Night, and all Times of Danger, by Garrisons of Soldiers (l). Not far Distance from hence was a Watch-tower with Lights to direct Mariners; this was called Pharos, which Name originally belonged to a little Island in the Mouth of the River Nile, where the first of these Towns was built, but afterwards was naturaliz'd both in Greece and at Rome.

The second Part of the Harbour was term'd σίμα, in Latin, Ofium and fauces, being the Mouth or Entry between the Arms of the Semicircle.

Μυχὴς was the inmost Part of the Harbour nearest to the Shore, and most secure from the Waves, insomuch that their Ships were often suffer'd to lie loose, whereas in other Parts of the Harbour they were usually either chained to the Land, or lay at Anchor: It was was distinguished into several Partitions by Walls, erected for the most part of Stone, under the Covert of which the Vessels had Protection: These Places were called ορμῶι (a), whence Homer (b):

— ἤσθη δ' αὖτις δισμοῖο μένους
Νῆις ὑποσθημοῖ, οὔτις, ὅρμῶι μέτρῳ ἵκνεται.

The Ships that far within the Harbour lodge,
Without a Chain are safe. —

They were also termed ναυλῶχοι, and altogether composed what was call'd ναυσταθμός. Here were likewise the Docks in which Ships were built, or careen'd, and dragged to Land; these were named νῶν Κοίκοι (c), ἐπίστια (d), κώριξ (e), &c.

The adjacent Places were usually filled with Inns and Stews (f), well stock'd with Females, they prostituted themselves to the Mariners, Merchants, and Artificers of all Sorts, who flock'd thither in great Numbers. Most Harbours were adorn'd with Temples, or Altars, where Sacrifices were offered to Tutelar Deities of the Place, and Presidents of the Sea; Mention of which we find, as in other Places, so particularly in Homer (g), who speaks of a Cave in the Haven of Ithaca dedicated to the Naiades.

Scheffer will have stationes navium to differ from the former in this, that here Ships were not laid up for any considerable time, but remain'd only till they were supply'd with Water or other Necessaries, or on some other short Occasions. They had several Names, being call'd ὄρμῶι (b), ὑφορμῶι (i), ἰσορμισμαλῶι (k), Γαλι (l), κντάρσις (m); and frequently at some Distance from the Shore; whence ὄρμῶι in Plutarch (n) is term'd ἀποσπλύνειν, which imports their being among the Waves; and by Thucydides ἀγῶν ἐπ' ἀγκυρῶν, which answers in some Measure to the Latin Phrase in Liwy, in anchoris stare, to ride at Anchor.

In Times of War they defended themselves with Fortifications on both Sides, but made after a different Manner; towards the Land they fortify'd themselves with a Ditch and Parapet, or Wall built in the Form of a Semi-circle, and extended from one Point of the Sea to another: This was sometimes defended with Towers, and beautify'd with Gates, thro' which they issued forth to attack their Enemies. Homer hath left us a remarkable Description of the Grecian Fortifications in the Trojan War (o):

— πῶλ δ' αὐτὸν ταῖχος ἰδοίμαν,
Πύργους ὑψηλούς, εἰλαρηνῶντι, καὶ αὐτῶν.

E. D.

Toward the Sea, or within it, they fix'd great Pales of Wood, like those in Harbours; before these the Vessels of Burden were placed in such Order, as they might be instead of a Wall, and give Protection to those within; in which Manner Nicias is reported by Thucydides to have encamp'd himself: But this seems only to have been practis'd when the Enemy was thought superior in Strength, and rais'd in them great Apprehensions of Danger. At other Times all they us'd to do, was to appoint a few of their Ships to observe their Enemies Motions: These were termed προφυλακίδες (a), and the Soldiers πύρραι, or πυρραῖδες, from πυρρός, a Torch wherewith they signified the Approach of their Enemies (b). When their Fortifications were thought strong enough to secure them from the Assault of their Enemies, it was frequent to drag their Ships to Shore, which the Greeks called ἰσολαίη, the Romans, subducere (c). Around the Ships the Soldiers plac'd their Tents, as appears every-where in Homer, Thucydides (d), and others; but this seems only to have been practis'd in Winter, when their Enemies Fleet was laid up, and could not assault them; or in long Sieges, and when they lay in no Danger from their Enemies by Seas as in the Trojan War, where the Defenders of Troy never once attempted to encounter the Grecians in a Sea-fight: At other Times the Ships only lay at Anchor, or were tied to the Shore, that upon any Alarm they might be ready to receive the Enemy.

CHAP XXI.

Of their Engagements, &c. by Sea.

IN preparing for an Engagement at Sea, the first Business was to disburthen their Ships of War of all Provisions, and other Lumber not necessary in the Action, lest by too heavy a Load they should be render'd unwieldy, and unfit for Service, being neither able with Force and Vigour to assail their Enemies, nor by lightly tacking about

(a) Thucyd. Lib. I. (b) Polyænus, Lib. III. (c) Livius, Lib. XXII. cap. 28.
Cicero de Offic. Lib. III. (d) Lib. VI.

about to avoid their Onsets. This done, when the Enemy appeared in View, they took down their Sails, lower'd their Masts, and secur'd whatever might expose them to the Winds, chusing rather to be govern'd by Oars, which they could manage at their Pleasure. On this Account we read (a) that Hanno the Carthaginian being pursued by a Fleet of Dionysius the Sicilian, to which he was much inferior in Strength and Number, and having no Way to make his Escape, took down his Sails as preparing to fight; whereby decoying the Sicilians to do the like, whilst they were busy and observ'd him not, he unexpectedly hoisted again his Sails, and made away.

As to their Order of Battle, that was vary'd as Time, Place, and other Circumstances requir'd; being sometimes form'd like an Half-moon, and call'd εὐλαμπισμός, the Horns jutting out towards the Enemy, and containing the ablest Men and Ships; sometimes, on the contrary, having its Belly nearest the Enemy, and its Horns turn'd backwards, whence it was term'd κυρτή παραταξις: Nor was it unusual to range them in the Form of a Circle, which they called κύκλος τάξις or (to mention no more) in the Figure of the Letter V. (b), with the Horns extended in a direct Line, and meeting at the End; which Order was named ἰσικομπής παραταξις, in Latin, Forceps; and was usually encountered by the Enemies rang'd into the same Order inverted, whereby they resembled the Figure of a Wedge or Beak, whence it was call'd cuneus or rostrum; this enabled them to penetrate into the Body of the adverse Battle.

Before they join'd Battle, both Parties invoked the Gods to their Assistance by Prayers and Sacrifices; and the Admirals going from Ship to Ship in some of the lighter Vessels, exhorted their Soldiers in a set Oration, to behave themselves like Men: Then all Things being in Readiness, the Signal was given by hanging out of the Admiral's Galley a gilded Shield, as we read in Plutarch; or a red Garment or Banner (c); which was term'd αἶψαν σημεῖα. During the Elevation of this the Fight continued, and by its Depression, or Inclination towards the right or left, the rest of the Ships were directed in what Manner to attack their Enemies, or retreat from them (d). To this was added the Sound of Trumpets, which was begun in the Admiral's Galley (e), and continued round the whole Navy (f); it was likewise usual for the Soldiers before the Fight to sing a Pæan, or Hymn to Mars (g), and after the Fight another to Apollo.

The Fight was usually begun by the Admiral-galley as we find done at the Battle of Salamis (h), and another Time by Attalus's Ship (i): It was carried on in two different Manners, for not only the Ships engag'd one another, and by their Beaks and Prows, and sometimes their Sterns, endeavour to dash in Pieces, or over-set and sink their Opposers; but the Soldiers also annoy'd their Enemies with Darts and Slings, and upon their nearer Approach with Swords and Spears: Thus Lucan (k);

E. D.

Afterwards he goes on in this Manner,

*Jam non excussis torquentur tela lacertis,
Nec longinqua cadunt jaculato vulnera ferro;

They throw no longer Darts, no longer try
With missive Arms to kill the Enemy;
But, close together come, their Swords they draw,
Each stoutly keeps his Post.——

Nor can it be wonder'd how they approach'd so near one another, when we find it usual to link their Vessels together with Chains or Grappling-Irons, of which I have spoken in one of the foregoing Chapters; whence Silius (a):

——*Injuncta ligant hinc vincula ferri
Atque illinc naues, steteruntque ad prælia nexa;
Nec jaculo, aut longe certatur arundine fusa,
Cominus & gladio terrestria prælia miscent.*

Chain'd fast with Irons both the Navies stand,
No Blood the Darts and flying Weapons spill,
With Swords they, closely join'd, begin to kill.

Sometimes for Want of Irons they so fix'd their Oars, as thereby to hinder their Enemies from retreating; so we read in Lucan (b);

Seque tenent remis, toto stetit æquore bellum.

The Ships they hold with Oars, and all around
The Face of horrid War appears.——

This Sort of Combat was not unlike a Siege, where the stronger Party, prevailing over their Enemies, enter'd their Vessels by laying Bridges

(a) Lib. XIV.

(b) Lib. III.

Bridges between them, and having kill'd, or taken Prisoners, all they found in Arms, seiz'd and dragg'd away their Ships.

When a Town was besieg'd by Sea, they us'd to environ it's Walls and Harbour with Ships, rang'd in Order from one Side of the Shore to the other, and so closely join'd together by Chains and Bridges on which arm'd Men were plac'd, that, without breaking their Order, there could be no Passage from the Town to the Sea; this Leaguer Diodorus calls ζυγία (a). The better to prevent any Attempts of the Besieg'd, Demetrius is said to have invented a Sort of Boom arm'd with Spikes of Iron which swam upon the Waters: this he plac'd at the Mouth of the Harbour of Rhodes, when he besieg'd that City (b). Sometimes they block'd up the Harbour, or made a Passage to the Town by raising a vast Mole before it, as we read of Alexander in the Siege of Tyre (c); or by sinking Ships filled with Stones and Sand, as we find practis'd by the Romans.

The Attacks were usually carried on by Men standing upon Bridges between the Ships, and thence with Darts and Stones, forcing the besieged from their Walls: Thus Alexander in the Siege of Tyre so ordered his Gallies, that two of them being join'd at the Heads, and the Sterns somewhat distant, Boards and Planks were laid over in the Fashion of Bridges, for Soldiers to stand upon, who were in this Manner row'd close to the Wall, where without any Danger they threw Darts at their Enemies, being sheltered behind the Foredecks of their own Gallies (d). Here also, that they might throw their missive Weapons with greater Advantage, and batter the Walls with their Rams and other Engines, they erected Towers so high as to command the City Walls, from which having repelled the Defenders, they by this Means had Opportunity to descend by Ladders.

The Besieged were not at a Loss for Ways of defeating these Stratagems; the Ships link'd together, they pull'd asunder with Iron Hooks, the Passage to the Town they block'd up in the same Manner the Enemies had done that of the Harbour, or otherways (e); if they could not hinder their Approach, they fail'd not to gall them with Darts, Stones, Fire-balls, melted Pitch or Metals, and many other Things; and lastly, to trouble you no farther, it was frequent for those in the Town to destroy the Vessels and Works of the Besieged by Fire-ships, as we find done by the Tyrians (f), who, taking a large Vessel, put a great quantity of Ballast into the Stern, covered the Head with Pitch, Tar, and Brimstone, then by the help of Sails and Oars brought her close to the Macedonian Fortrefs, where having set the combustible Matter on Fire, they retreated into Boats prepar'd for that Purpose; the Fire immediately seiz'd the Towers of the Fortification, and by the Help of Torches and Fire-brands cast by those in the Boats, the Work itself took Fire, and that vast Pile, on which so much Time and Labour had been bestow'd, was in a few Moments quite demolish'd. The Use of Fire-ships we likewise meet with amongst the Rhodians in Diodorus the Sicilian (g).

Of the Spoils, Military Rewards, Punishments, &c.

VICTORY being obtain'd, the Conquerors rode home triumphant, laden with the Spoils of their Enemies, and dragging after them the captive Ships, as appears from the Instance of Alcibiades in Plutarch, and Lyfander in Xenophon (a): The latter of these had Crowns or Garlands presented him by all the confederate Cities of Sparta, as he pass'd by them, which Custom was constantly practised by the Grecians, from whom it seems to have been deriv'd to Rome: Nor was the Admiral, or the Soldiers and Mariners (b), only adorn'd with Garlands, but their Ships were likewise bedeck'd with them (c); whereby the Rhodians were once reduc'd to extreme Danger; for their Enemies having made themselves Masters of their Ships, crown'd them with Laurel, and entering them, were receiv'd with great Joy into Rhodes (d); which Stratagem was frequently practis'd in Greece (e). Nor were they beautified with Garlands only, but hung likewise about with Wrecks and broken Pieces of the Ships destroy'd in Battle, especially the ἀρλαγες, ἀκρωτήρια κόρυμβες, and other ornamental Parts, which the Conquerors were industrious in procuring to grace their Triumphs; whence of Hector threatening the Grecian Fleet with Destruction, Homer says,

Σταῖται γὰρ νῆες ἀποκόψιν ἅκρα κόρυμβες.

These they call'd ἀκρωτήρια, and to deprive a Ship of them ἀκρωτήριαζον. In this Manner the Victors return'd home, filling the Sea with their Shouts, Acclamations, and Hymns; which were sweetened by the Harmony of Musical Instruments, as appears from the Example of Lyfander in Plutarch.

Being received into the City, they went straitway into the Temples of the Gods, where they dedicated the choicest of their Spoils: Thus we read, that the Syracusians, having defeated the Athenians and the Rhodians after a Victory over Demetrius, fill'd the Temples of their Gods with Wrecks of Ships. Nor was it unusual to present entire Vessels to them; for we find that Phormio, having overcome the Lacedæmonians, consecrated a Ship to Neptune (g); and the Grecians, after their great Victory over the Persians at Salamis, are reported to have dedicated three Phœnician Triremes (b).

Having paid their Compliment to the Gods, the Remainder of their Spoils they bestow'd in the Porticos, and other publick Places of their City, to preserve the Memory of their Victory: To which End they were likewise honoured with Statues, Inscriptions, and Trophies; the last of which were sometimes erected in their own Country, but more frequently near the Place where they had overthrown their Enemies, and were adorned with Arms, and broken Wrecks of Ships, which for that Reason were looked on as a Sign and Testimony of Victory: Thus we are told by Thucydides (a), that in a Fight between the Athenians and Corinthians, where both Parties made Pretensions to Victory, the former were by most esteemed to have the just Title to it, as having possessed themselves of their Enemy's Wrecks; and King Philip, tho' worsted by Attalus, yet because he made a shift to keep his Fleet amongst the adverse Party's Wrecks, would have persuaded the World that the Day was his own (b).

These were the Principal of the Rewards peculiar to those who had serv'd their Country by Sea; others they seem also to have been frequently honour'd with, which being common to those who had been useful in other Stations, may be more properly referred to other Places, where I have already treated of them. The chief of their Punishments was Whipping with Cords, which was sometimes inflicted on Criminals having their lower Parts within the Ship, and their Heads thrust out of Port-holes, and hanging into the Sea. Thus one Scylax, Master of a Myndian Vessel, was treated by Megabates, for not being careful to keep Watch and Ward (c).

There seems to have been a Punishment by which Offenders were tied with Cords to a Ship, and dragg'd in the Waters till they were drown'd; in which Manner Scylla was treated by Minos, after she had betray'd to him her Father and Kingdom.

Others were thrown alive into the Sea, as we read of Jonas the Prophet.

Αναμάρχοι, or such as refuse to serve at Sea after a lawful Summons, were at Athens themselves and their Posterity condemned to ατιμία, Ignominy or Disfranchisement (d), of which Punishment I have spoken in one of the former Books.

Λιποναύται. Deserters were not only bound with Cords and whipp'd, as Demosthenes reports, but had their Hands likewise cut off, as we are inform'd by Suidas.

Of the Care the Grecians had of Funerals, and of Persons destitute thereof.

PLUTO was the first who instructed the Grecians (a) in the Manner of Performing their last Offices to the Deceased, which gave Occasion to the Inventors of Fables to assign him a vast and unbounded Empire in the Shades below, and constitute him supreme Monarch of all the Dead. And since there is scarce any useful Art, the Inventor whereof was not reckon'd amongst the Gods, and believed to patronise and preside over those Artificers he had first instructed; no Wonder if he who taught the rude and unciviliz'd Ages what

that Respect, what Ceremonies were due to the Dead, had the Honour to be number'd amongst the Deities of the first Quality, since the Duties belonging to the Dead were thought of far greater Importance, and the Neglect of them a Crime of a blacker Character than those requir'd by the Living; for the Dead were ever held sacred and inviolable even amongst the most barbarous Nations; to defraud them of any due Respect was a greater and more unpardonable Sacrilege, than to spoil the Temples of the Gods; their Memories were preserved with a religious Care and Reverence, and all their Remains honour'd with Worship and Adoration; Hatred and Envy themselves were put to Silence, for it was thought a Sign of a cruel and inhuman Disposition to speak evil of the Dead, and prosecute Revenge beyond the Grave; no Provocation was thought sufficient to warrant so foul an Action; the highest Affronts from themselves whilst alive, or afterwards from their Children, were esteem'd weak Pretences for disturbing the Peace. Offenders of this kind were not only branded with Disgrace and Infamy, but by Solon's Laws incurr'd a severe Penalty (a).

But, of all the Honours paid to the Dead, the Care of their Funeral Rites was the greatest and most necessary; for these were look'd upon as a Debt so sacred, that such as neglected to discharge it, were thought accursed; hence the Romans call'd them justi, the Grecians δίκαιοι, τίμιμοι, κομισόμενοι, ἱεῖμα, ὄσιος, &c. all which Words imply the inviolable Obligations which Nature has laid upon the Living to take care of the Obsequies of the Dead. And no Wonder if they were thus solicitous about the Internment of the Dead, since they were strongly possess'd with an Opinion, that their Souls could not be admitted into the Elysian Shades, but were forced to wander desolate and without Company, till their Bodies were committed to the Earth (b); and if they never had the good Fortune to obtain human Burial the Time of their Exclusion from the common Receptacle of the Ghosts was no less than an hundred Years; whence in most of the Poets we meet with passionate Requests of dying Men, or their Ghosts after Death, for this Favour: I will only give you one out of Homer (c), who introduces the Soul of Epenor earnestly beseeching Ulysses to perform his Funeral Rites;

Νῦν δὲ σὺ τῶν ὀπίθου γυναιζέμεναι, ἢ παρ' ὄβλου,
Πρὸς τ' ἀλόχῳ, καὶ πατρί, δὲ ἱερεφὶ τυτθῷ ἰώτα,

Μὴ μ' ἀκλυτοί, ἀδαπὼν ἰὼν ὄνειρον καλὰ λίσπειν
Νέσφιοθις, μὴ τοι τι θεῶν μή τιμα γένηται.

When homewards bound th' infernal Shades you quit,
Don't me, unhappy Wretch, my Friend, forget.
If aught of dear Concern you've left behind,
With Zeal tow'rd me, let that affect your Mind:
If aged Sire, your Wife, or hopeful Heir can bind,

Let Dirge and Burial solemnize my Fate,
 Left I shou'd prove to th' Gods a Reprobate:
 This, this I beg, this earnestly implore;
 Thus will my Soul to Bliss be wafted o'er.

J. A.

This was the Reason why, of all Imprecations, the greatest was to wish that a Person might ἀναφθιμις ὁδοῖς, i. e. die destitute of Burial; and of all Forms of Death the most terrible was that by Shipwreck, as wherein the Body was swallowed up by the Deep; whence Ovid, tho' willing to resign his miserable Life, yet prays against this Death:

Demite naufragium, mors mihi munus erit.

Death would my Soul from anxious Troubles ease,
 But that I fear to perish by the Seas.

Wherefore, when they were in danger of being cast away, it was customary to fasten to some Part of the Body the most precious of all their Stores, with a Direction to the first that found their dead Corpses, if the Waves chanced to roll them to the Shore, entreating of him the Favour of an human Burial, and proffering what they carry'd about them as a Reward, or desiring him to expend some Part of it upon their Funeral (a) Rites and accept the rest himself. But though the Carcase brought no Reward along with it, yet was it not therefore lawful to pass it by neglected, and deny it what was look'd on as a Debt to all Mankind; for not only the Athenian Laws forbade so great an Act of Inhumanity (b), but in all Parts of Greece it was look'd upon as a great Provocation to the Infernal Gods, and a Crime that would call up certain Vengeance from the Regions below (c): nor could the guilty Person be freed from the Punishment of his Offence, or admitted to converse with Men, or worship the Gods, but was look'd upon as profane and polluted, till he had undergone the accustom'd Purifications, and appeas'd the incens'd Deities. Yet it was not always requir'd that all the Funeral Solemnities should be nicely perform'd, which the Haste of Travelers that should light upon the Carcase might oftentimes not permit; but it was sufficient to cast Dust or soft Earth upon it three Times together, according to Horace (d):

*Quamquam festinas, non est mora longa, licebit
 Injeto ter pulvere curras.*

— Over the Corpse thrice sprinkle Sand,
 Th' officious Deed will not retard your Haste.

Of these three Handfuls, one at least was thrown upon the Head.

This, in Cases of Necessity, was look'd upon as enough to gain the Ghost's Admission into Pluto's Dominions, and to free such as happen'd

pen'd upon their Bodies from the Fear of being haunted, yet was far from affording them entire Satisfaction; wherefore, such as had been interr'd clandestinely, or in haste, and without the customary Solemnities, if afterwards good Fortune discover'd them to any of their Friends, were honour'd with a second Funeral; as appears from the Story of Polydorus in Virgil; who, being murder'd and interr'd by Polynestor, does yet make his Complaint to Æneas at his Arrival in Thrace, that his Soul could not rest till his Obsequies were celebrated according to Custom; wherefore the pious Hero

Nor was it sufficient to be honour'd with the solemn Performance of their Funeral Rites, except their Bodies were prepar'd for Burial by their Relations, and interr'd in the Sepulchres of their Fathers; the Want of which was look'd upon by themselves, and their surviving Friends, as a very great Misfortune; and not much inferior to Death itself, as appears from innumerable Testimonies, of which I shall only trouble you with the following; the first taken from the Epitaph of Leonidas the Tarentine, which runs thus (b);

Πάλλον ἀπ' Ἰταλῆς κείμαι χθονὶς, ἢ τι Τάραντος·

Πάτρης, τὴν δέ μοι μακρότερον θανάτου.

I from Tarentum far remote lie,

My native Soil, than Death oh worse Anxiety!

The second from Electra in Sophocles, who having preserv'd Orestes from Clytemnestra, by sending him into a foreign Country, and many Years after, hearing he had ended his Days there, wishes he had rather perished at first, than after so many Years Continuance of Life have dy'd from Home, and been destitute of the last Offices of his Friends. Her Words are these (c):

Δόμων δὲ σ', ὦ παῖ, λαμπρὸν ἐξέτιμαψ' ἰγὺ,

Ὡς ἄφελον, παροῦθι ἡλιπύϊν βίον,

Πρὶν ἢς ζήνῃ σι γαῖαν ἐκτίμῃσαι χερσὶν

Then

(a) Æneid. III. v. 62 & 67.
Ep. LXXV. (c) V. 1634.

(b) Antholog. Epigram. Lib. III. cap. 23.

Then thou had'st ne'er these doleful Mis'ries felt,
But dy'd in th' Innocence of Infancy:
Then thou had'st had one common Sepulture
With thy dear Father; then thy Sister's Love
And Pity ne'er wou'd thus have heap'd up Woe:
Now thou art in a foreign Land depriv'd
Of those blest Rites thy Friends could once bestow
And as thy Life unhappy was, so is alike thy Death. J. A.

For this Reason, such as dy'd in Foreign Countries had usually their Ashes brought Home, and interr'd in the Sepulchres of their Ancestors, or, at least, in some Part of their native Country; it being thought that the same Mother, which gave them Life and Birth, was only fit to receive their Remains, and afford them a peaceable Habitation after Death. Whence ancient Authors afford us innumerable Instances of Bodies convey'd, sometimes by the Command of Oracles, sometimes by the Good-will of their Friends, from foreign Countries to the Sepulchres of their Fathers, and with great Solemnity deposited there. Thus Theseus was remov'd from Scyrus to Athens; Orestes from Tegea, and his Son Tisamenus from Helice to Sparta, and Aristomenes (to mention no more) from Rhodes to Messene. How far this Custom extended to Soldiers, and by whom it was first introduc'd into Greece, has been related in the precedent Book.

Nor was this pious Care limited to Persons of free Condition, but Slaves also had some Share therein; for we find the Athenian Lawgiver commanding the Magistrates call'd Demarcti, under a severe Penalty, to solemnize the Funerals not so much of Citizens, whose Friends seldom fail'd of paying the last Honours, as of Slaves, who frequently were destitute of decent Burial; (a).

But if any Person was backward in paying his dead Friends due Respect, or but sparing in his Expences upon their Obsequies and Monuments, the Government look'd upon him as void of Humanity and natural Affection, and thereupon excluded him from bearing any Office of Trust and Honour; for one special Enquiry concerning the Lives and Behaviour of such as appear'd Candidates for the Magistracy at Athens, was, whether they had taken due Care in celebrating the Funerals, and adorning the Monuments of their Relations (b). Farther, to appear gay and pleasant before the ordinary Time of Mourning expired, was Matter of no small Scandal; for we find it objected by Æschines to Demosthenes as a Crime of a very heinous Nature, that after the Death of his only Daughter he sacrific'd to the Gods in white Apparel, and adorn'd with Garlands, before due Respect was paid to the Memory of such a Relation.

The great Concern they had about Funerals may farther appear from the Respect paid to Persons officiating therein: For we find the Cretan οὐκ ἀλλοτρίαι, who had the Care of Funerals, to have been reverenc'd equally with their Priests; and when the Laws permitted to steal from others, as was likewise customary at Sparta, those Men were exempted from the common Calamity, to convey away any Part of their Goods being look'd on as a kind of Sacrilege (a).

(a) Demost. Orats in Mucart.

(b) Xenophon de Dict. Socratis, lib. II.

Notwithstanding all this, there were some so unhappy as by their Actions whilst alive, or the aggravating Circumstances of their Death, to be unworthy of all Title to the common Funeral Rites, and some to any Funeral at all: Such were these which follow.

1. Publick or private Enemies; for tho' it was look'd upon as inhuman to deny an Enemy the common Privilege of Nature; yet upon some extraordinary Provocations we find it practis'd by the ancient Grecians. Homer has introduc'd Ulysses threatening Socus therewith (b); Hector likewise promising the same Treatment to Patroclus (c), and Achilles revenging his Cruelty by the like Usage of him (d). The same Poet hath furnish'd us with several Instances of Heroes made κυνὶ μάστιγι, and κύνισσιν ἐσθλῇσι τε ἰσθμῖσι, a Prey to Birds and Beasts. No better Treatment had the Bones of Pyrrhus, Achilles's Son, treacherously murder'd by Orestes (e):

Sparsa per Ambracias quæ jacuere vias.

Which lay dispers'd about th' Ambracian Roads,

And however this may be thought the Practice of those primitive and unciviliz'd Mortals, yet there want not Instances hereof, in more refin'd Ages; for Lyfander, the Spartan Admiral, having routed the Athenian Fleet, caus'd Philocles, one of their Commanders, and to the Number of four thousand Athenian Prisoners, to be put to Death, and refus'd to give them human Burial (f).

2. Such as betray'd, or conspir'd against their Country (g). On which account Aristocrates, being convicted of Treason against the Arcadians, was ston'd to Death, and cast out of the Bounds of their Country unbury'd (h); for it was thought but reasonable that Villains, conspiring the Ruin of their Country, should be depriv'd of all Privilege in it. Pausanias likewise, after he had deliver'd Greece from the Persians, being found upon some Discontent to maintain a Correspondence with them, was pin'd to Death, and deny'd Burial (i); and the famous Phocion being unjustly condemn'd by the Athenians, as conspiring to deliver the Piræus into their Enemies Hands, had his Body cast out of Attica, and a severe Penalty was decreed against any that should honour it with Interment (k). So exact were they in the Observation of this Custom, that when the Pestilence rag'd at Athens, and the Oracle gave out, that the only Remedy was to fetch Themistocles's Bones from Magnesia, they refus'd to do it publicly, but convey'd them privately, and, as it were by Stealth hid them in the Ground. Amongst the Betrayers of their Country, we may reckon those who were not active in defending it; for they were likewise frequently deny'd human Burial. Hence Hektor is introduc'd by the Poet, threatening this Punishment to all who would not help him in destroying the Grecian Fleet (a).

Οἱ δ' ἂν ἔγὼν ἀπάνευθε ἰὼν ἰτέρωδε νοήσω,
 Αὐτὲς οἱ θάλασση μὴλισσομαι· ἔδῃ τοι τὸν γὰρ
 Τρωτοί τε γυνταί τε φῦρες λιλαίχουσι θάνατον,
 Ἀλλὰ πότις ἱρῆσαι ἐπὶ ἄνθε· ἡμετέρωδε.

He that for Spoil and Plunder of the War
 Dares lag behind, and not in haste repair
 To th' Argive Fleet, as soon as known shall die;
 His Carcase, deny'd Fun'ral Rites, shall lie
 A Prey for rav'nous Curs, a Mark of Infamy.

J. A. }

Some Scholiasts would have this the first Example of the Practice I am speaking of; but Homer sufficiently refutes this Opinion by making Agamemnon threaten the same Punishment to the Greeks in the second Iliad (b) :

Οἱ δὲ κ' ἰγὼν ἀπάνευθε μάχης ἰδύσθαι νοήσω
 Μιμνάειν παρὰ νηυσὶ κορωνίσιν, ἃ οἱ ἐπίστα
 Ἀρκίαι ἰσοῦνται θυγίην κύνας, ἢ δ' οἰωνύς.

When to the Fight brisk Cornets sound Alarms,
 That sneaking Soul who then lays down his Arms,
 And skulks about the Navy out of Fear
 Of any Danger from th' impending War,
 Shall be an Outcast for the Birds of Prey,
 And hungry Dogs as merciless as they.

J. A.

Before this Instance, Palamedes, being condemn'd as a Traytor by the Treachery of Ulysses, had wanted Burial, had not Achilles and Ajax adventur'd to pay him that Office in opposition to Agamemnon's Commands. Nor was the Custom begun here, for in the former Age we find Antigone bury'd alive by Creon for interring her Brother Polynices, by whose Means the famous War against Thebes was carry'd on, which is the Subject of Sophocles's Antigone.

3. To these we may subjoin Tyrants, who were always look'd on as Enemies of their Country, and us'd in the same Manner with those that endeavour'd to betray it to foreign Powers, there being no Difference between a Domestick and Foreign Slavery. So the Pharians having

(a) Iliad. c. v. 348.

(b) V. 391.

having slain Alexander, who had cruelly oppress'd them, threw his Carcase to the Dogs; and Plutarch observes that this was not a late or modern Custom, but practis'd in the most early Ages: Speaking of the Passage of Homer (a), where Nestor tells Telemachus, that had Menelaus found Ægisthus alive after his Murder of Agamemnon, and Tyranny over the Mycenæans, he would not have vouchsafed him Burial (b):

Εἰ ζώντ' Αἴγισθον ἐν μεγάροισιν ἔτι τιν
 Ἀτρεΐδης Τροίηθεν ἰδὼν, ἐκείνης Μυῖα λαιτῶ καὶ ἐν δόξῳ χυλὴν ἐπὶ γαίαν ἔχουσιν,
 Ἀλλ' ἄρα τὸν γὰρ κῆρυξ τίς ἢ οἰωνὸς κατέδραψεν
 Κόρυμβον ἐν σπείρῳ ἰκὰς ἄγειν, ἰδὲ καὶ τίς μιν
 Κλαύσαςτ' Ἀχαιῶαδεν.

If the bold Murd'rer had his Fate surviv'd,
 When Menelaus from Troy's Siege arriv'd,
 What Ills would then attend his Ghost and Name,
 When Menelaus swoln with Vengeance came?
 None e'er his Fall should mourn, his Fate lament,
 But, lest his Body shou'd the City taint,
 Remote on some wide Plain it should be cast
 For Dogs and Vultures to regale and feast.

J. A.

The Mycenæans were not insensible of the Wrongs they had suffer'd by him, and, thinking him unworthy of an honourable Funeral, cast him with the Adulteress Clytemnestra out of the City, and there interr'd them (c).

4. On the same Account, such as were guilty of Self-murder forfeited their Right to decent Burial, and were clancularly deposited in the Ground without the accusom'd Solemnities; for they were look'd on as Enemies to their Country, whose Service they deserted (d). For which Reason Ajax, the Son of Telamon, was not reduc'd to Ashes, as the Custom was, but privately interr'd; it being declar'd by Calchas to be a Profanation of the holy Element, to consume in it the Bodies of such as had occasion'd their own Death (e). After the Battle of Plataeæ, when the Bodies of the Slain were honour'd with the accusom'd Solemnities, Aristodemus alone, who was generally confessed to have acquitted himself in the Fight with the greatest Valour of any Man in the Army, lay unregarded because he seem'd resolv'd to sacrifice his Life as an Atonement for the Disgrace he had contracted by surviving his Fellow-Soldiers at Thermopylae (f). Yet to put a Period to their Lives on just Occasions, seems rather to have been the reputed Effect of a necessary and laudable Courage, than any way criminal or blame-worthy. Demosthenes and Hannibal are said to have been constantly provided of an effectual Poison to dispatch themselves with, before they should fall into their Enemies Hands. Cato, Cleopatra, Brutus, Otho, and several others, have not at all lessen'd their Esteem and Character in the Heathen World by becoming their own Executioners. Plato himself, when he commands those only, who out of Cowardice and unmanly Fear butcher'd themselves, to be interr'd in lonesome and desolate Places without the ordinary Solemnities, seems to excuse others whom he thought compell'd to it by a great Disgrace, or any unavoidable and incurable Misfortune (a); and 'tis no wonder if Epicureans, who expected no future State, and Stoicks, who thought all Things to lie under an irresistible Necessity, pursuant to their Principles, abandon'd themselves over to such fatal Courts. Many other Instances may be produc'd not only from the Grecians and Romans, but the Indian Philosophers, and almost the whole Heathen World.

5. To these we may add Villains guilty of Sacrilege (b), to inter whom was an Affront to the Deities they had robb'd. The Gods were sometimes thought to inflict this Punishment on such Malefactors; wherefore Archidamus the Spartan King being slain in Italy, and depriv'd of Burial, Paulinias (c) concludes it was a Judgment upon him for assisting the Phocians in pillaging the City and Temple of the Delphians.

6. Persons kill'd with Lightning, who being thought hateful to the Gods, were bury'd apart by themselves, lest the Ashes of other Men should receive Pollution from them. Whence Adrastus in Euripides, speaking of Capaneus, saith;

Ἡ χερσὶ, ἱερὸν ὧς κερδοῖ, δάψας θίλει;

Shall he apart be bury'd as accurs'd?

Some will have them to be interr'd in the Place where they dy'd (d); others collect out of Plutarch's Symposiacks, that they had no Interment, but were suffer'd to rot in the Place where they fell, to which it was unlawful for any Man to approach: Whence Perfius (e), Triste jace lucis, evitandumque bidental.

A direful Instance of Jove's Wrath you lie,
And whom, being Thunder-struck, none dare come nigh.

For this Reason the Ground was hedg'd in, lest any Person should unawares contract Pollution from it. It may be observ'd in general, That all Places struck with Thunder were avoided (f), and fenced round round, out of Fancy, that Jupiter, having taken some Offence, fix'd upon them the Mark of his Displeasure.

7. Those who waisted their Patrimony, forfeited their Right of being bury'd in the Sepulchres of their Fathers. Whence we find Democritus to have been in danger of wanting a Burial-place, for spending his paternal Inheritance in Travel to foreign Countries, and searching after the Mysteries of Nature (a).

8. To these we may subjoin such as die in Debt, whose Bodies belong'd at Athens to their Creditors, and could not claim any Right to human Burial, till Satisfaction was made. Whence 'tis reported, That Cimon had no other Method, to redeem his Father Miltiades's Body, but by taking Debt and Fetters upon himself.

9. Some Offenders who suffer'd capital Punishment, were likewise depriv'd of Burial; those especially who dy'd upon the Crofs, or were impaled, whom they frequently permitted to be devour'd by Beasts and Birds of Prey. To which Custom there is an Allusion in Horace (b):

Non hominem occidi; non pasces in cruce corvos.

With impious Hands I ne'er slew th' Innocent:
Therefore to feed the Crows is not your Punishment.

Juvenal also mentioneth the same Custom (c),

*Vultur jumento, & canibus, crucibusque relictis,
Ad factus properat, partemque cadaveris affert.*

Where Croffes and contagious Murrain are,
Vultures in Flocks most greedily repair,
And to their craving Young thence Food they bear. }

The Interpreters of Fables will have Prometheus's Punishment to be an Emblem of this. If the Carcase was spar'd by the Beasts, it commonly remain'd upon the Crofs or Pale, till the Weather consum'd and putrify'd it. Thus Silius reports of the Scythians (d):

*At gente in Sythica suffixa cadavera truncis
Lenta dies sepelit, putri liquentia tabo.*

Delinquents Carcases in Scythia were Impal'd, until corrupted by the Air,
The putrid Flesh did drop and shrink away,
And the Bones moulder'd by a long Decay.

J. A.

Nor

(a) Diogenes Laertius Democrito. (b) Lib. I. Epist. XVI. (c) Sat. XVI. v. 77.
(d) Lib. XIII.

Nor was this inhuman Custom practis'd in that barbarous Nation only, but by those who made greater Pretensions to Civility and good Manners, as may appear from the Dream of Polycrates's Daughter, who fancy'd she saw her Father's Face wash'd by Jupiter, and anointed by the Sun; which was accomplish'd not long after, when he was hung upon the Cross and expos'd to the Rain and Sun-beams (a). Hither also may be referr'd the Answer of Theodorus the Philosopher, who being threatened Crucifixion by King Lyfimachus, reply'd, That it was all one to him to be above or beneath the Ground (b).

10 In some Places it was customary to inter the Bodies of Infants who had no Teeth, without consuming them to Ashes (c); to which Custom Juvenal has this Allusion (d):

*Naturæ imperio geminus, cum funus adultæ
Virginis occurrit, vel terra clauditur infans
Et minor igne rogi. —*

When a young Lady, brisk and gay is dead,
As soon as ripe she seems for th' nuptial Bed,
And when an Infant, not yet fit to burn,
Is bury'd, who relents not, who forbears to mourn? J. A.

If Persons who had incurr'd publick Hatred, had the good Fortune to obtain human Burial, it was customary to leap upon their Tombs, and cast Stones at them, in Token of Detestation and Abhorrence: Which Practice is mention'd by Euripides (e):

——— *ἐνθρόνισκε τάφος,
Πίτροις τε λυγρὸν μῦθον ἀξίον πατρὸς.*

——— He leaps upon his Parent's Tomb,
And in Derision batters it with Stones.

Nor was it unfrequent to punish notorious Offenders, by dragging their Remains out of their Retirement, and depriving them of the Graves to which they had no just Pretension; as may appear from several Instances.

Sacrilegious Persons were commonly thus treated. A remarkable Instance whereof we find at Athens, where Cylo, an ambitious Nobleman, having seiz'd the Citadel, and being there straitly besieg'd, found Means to escape with his Brother, leaving his Accomplices to the Mercy of the Besiegers; they fled therefore for Protection to the Altars, whence there was no Method to draw them, but by promising them Pardon: But no sooner had they left their Sanctuaries, when the Magistrates, gistrates, contrary to their Covenant, put them to Death; upon which Fast themselves were afterwards arraign'd and banish'd, the Deities so commanding: Nor was this alone satisfactory to Divine Vengeance, till their Graves were rifled, and their Remains, which had been convey'd into Attica, cast out of the Country (a).

Traitors were condemn'd to the same Punishment; which appears, as from several other Instances, so from Phrynichus the Athenian, who being arraign'd, and condemn'd for Treason, some time after his Funeral, his Tomb was open'd, and his Reliques thrown out of Attica (b).

The same was sometimes practis'd upon Enemies, when their Malice and Fury were extended beyond the ordinary bounds of Martial Law, and hurried them on to despoil the sacred Temples, and commit unsufferable Villanies. Otherwise, thus to treat a lawful and honourable Enemy, was always censur'd, as barbarous and inhuman.

But above all it seems to have been the Fate of Tyrants, who were esteem'd of all other savage Beasts the most hurtful and pernicious to Mankind: Wherefore we are told by Plutarch (c), that Dio was extremely censur'd for hindering the Syracusans from breaking up the Tomb of the Elder Dionysius, and scattering his Bones. Periander the Corinthian Tyrant (by some reckon'd amongst the seven Wise Men) to prevent his incens'd Subjects from venting their Fury upon his Reliques, contriv'd this Method: He commanded two young Men to walk in the Depth of the Night in a certain Path, and killing the first Man they met, to bury him privately; to dispatch and inter these he commission'd four, after whom he sent others, and after these a greater Force, to treat the former in the same Manner; whereby it came to pass that the Tyrant himself, meeting the first Pair, was interr'd in a Place unknown to any Man (d).

Other Methods were likewise used to secure Peace to their Ashes, the Disturbance whereof was look'd on as the highest Affront, and the greatest Misfortune in the World: To instance, we find Medea in Euripides resolving to bury her Sons in Juno Acrae's Temple, hoping that the Holiness of the Place would protect them from the Malice of her Enemies (e);

— ἐπὶ (φας τῷ ἴσῳ θαψῶ χεῖρ,
Θίμω' ἔς Ἥρας τίμω' Ἀχραιας Διῶ·
Ὅτι μὴ τις αὐτὸς πολέμῳ καθυβρίσῃ,
Τυμῶς ἀνὰ πῦρ.

Affronts and Contumelies to prevent,
And that their Sepulchres mayn't be defac'd,
I will myself give Burial to my Sons
In Juno's Temple at th' Acropolis

Of the Ceremonies in Sickness, and Death.

WHEN any Person was seiz'd with a dangerous Distemper, it was usual to fix over his Door a Branch of Rhamn and Laurel Trees: Which custom is mention'd by Laertius, in his Life of Bion the Boristhenite:

Ράμνοι τι, καὶ κλάδον δάφνης
Υπὲρ ὕψην θύεται·
Ἀπαστα πολλοί, ἢ θανάτῳ,
Εὐτοίμῳ ἐν σπυργίῳ.

Bion the Post of 's Door doth grace
With Rhamn and Daphne's Plant;
For fear of Death in his sad Case,
He nothing now will want.

J. A.

The former of these Plants seem'd design'd to keep off evil Spirits; against which it was reputed a sovereign Amulet; and on that account sometimes join'd with the Epithet ἀλξίκακον, as in this Fragment of Euphorio:

— ἀλξίκακον φύς ῥάμνοι.

Produc'd the Rhamn, against mischievous Ills
An Antidote. —

The Laurel was join'd to it to render the God of Physic propitious, who, they thought, could design no Harm to any Place where he found the Monument of his beloved Daphne. These Boughs they term'd αἰθήνη (a).

It may not be improper to observe in this Place, that all sudden Deaths of Men were imputed to Apollo; whence Heztor having lain unburied twelve Days, and being by the special Favour of Heaven preserv'd fresh and free from Corruption, Heztor resembles him to one dead, not of a ling'ring and wearying Distemper, but by a sudden Death; the former being thin and consum'd away, the latter fat and fleshy (b):

Νῦν δὲ μετ' ἑσπέρης καὶ πρόσφατον ἦν μεγάρῳ
Κεῖσθαι τῷ ἱκέτῳ, ὅτ' ἀργυρότοξον Ἀπόλλων
Οἷς ἀγατοῖς βιβλίσσει ἱπποχόμῳ κατέπιφνον.

Now fresh and glowing e'en in Death thou art,
And fair as he who falls by Phœbus' Dart,

The sudden Death of Women was attributed to Diana: whence Glaucus in the same Poet, speaking of Hippodamia (a):

Τὴν δὲ χλωσαμένην χερσὶν Ἀρτέμις ἔκτα.

Incens'd Diana her depriv'd of Life.

Again Achilles wishes that Briseis had been snatch'd away by a sudden Death, rather than have been the Occasion of any Disension between him and Agamemnon (b):

Τὴν ἔφαλ' ἐν νῆσσι καταλάμει Ἀρτέμις ἰὼ,
Ἡματι τὸ ἐν ἑγὼς ἰδόμεν' Ἀνεμῶσιν ἐλίσσας.

Oh that Diana had her kill'd on Board,
When first I carry'd her, Lyrnessus overthrow'd.

The Poet has explain'd his own Meaning in another Place (c); where Eumæus reports, that in the Isle of Syria the Inhabitants never die of lingering Distempers, but, being arriv'd to a good old Age, drop into their Graves without any previous Torment:

Πόντῳ δ' ὕπνῳ δὴ μὲν ἰστέχεται, ὅδ' τις ἄλλη
Νῦσ' ἢ ἰὼ συγερῇ πύλαται δαίμοσι βροτοῖσιν.
Ἀλλ' ὅτι γηράσκουσιν πόλιν κατὰ φύλ' ἀνδρῶπων,
Ἐλδοὶ ἀργυρότιξ' Ἀπόλλων Ἀρτίμιδι ξύν,
Οἷς ἀγανὺς βίβισσιν ἐποιχόμεν' ἀλκιπέφνῃ.

No Plague, no Famine does their Lives impair,
No pois'nous Ills these happy Mortals fear;
Healthy and strong they see the Verge of Age,
Then venerably old they quit the Stage;
Apollo and Diana stop their Breath,
Shooting unerring Shafts well fraught with Death. J. A.

Again; Ulysses enquires of his Mother in the Regions below, whether she resign'd her Life under a tedious Distase, or Diana's Hand (d):

Ἀλλ' ἄγε, μοι τόδε εἰπὲν, καὶ ἀρεσκίως καλῶλίζον,
Τίς νύ σε κῆρ ἰδαμασσι ταννηγί' θανάτοιο,
Ἡ δολιχὴ νόσος, ἢ Ἀρτέμις ἐσχίσαιρα

This I desire, dear Mother, you'd relate,
By what unhappy Destiny, what Fate,
You posted hither to this gloomy Coast,
And all the Endearments of the World have lost :
Whether Diana with relentless Dart,
(That sportful Deity) transfix'd your Heart,
Or else you did your vital Breath expire
By ling'ring Pain, or Pestilential Fire?

J. A.

Other Instances may be produc'd to the same Purpose : The Ground of this Opinion was Apollo's being usually taken for the Sun, and Diana for the Moon ; which Planets were believed to have a great Influence on human Life (a).

All dead Persons were thought to be under the Jurisdiction of the infernal Deities, and therefore no Man could resign his Life, till some of his Hairs were cut to consecrate him to them : Hence Euripides introduces Death with a Sword going to cut off some of the Hair of Alceſtis, whom the Fates had adjudg'd to die instead of her Husband Admetus (b) :

Ἡ δ' ὅτε γυνὴ κάρτισσιν εἰς αἶδον δόμους,
Σταίχων δ' ἐν αὐτῇ, ὡς κατὰ βέλους ἔφει· ἱερὸν γὰρ ὄντα τῷ κατὰ χροῶς Διῷ, ὅτε τὸ δ' ἔγχυτο κείνῳ ἀγνόντι τέλει.

I'm come to loose the brittle Tie of Life
And send her to th' infernal Mansions hence ;
This Sword is to initiate the Rites,
By cutting off the fatal Lock, on which Lies the last Struggle of her panting Breath.

J. A.

Which Passage is imitated by Virgil (c), where he tells us that Dido, ridding herself out of the World before her Time, had not her Hair cut off by Proserpina, and therefore struggled some Time, as unable to resign her Life, till Iris was commission'd from Juno to do her that kind Office (d) :

Tum Juno omnipotens, longum miserata dolorem,
Difficileſque obitus, Irim demisit Olympo,
Quæ luſtantem animam, nexoque resolveret artus ;
Nam quia nec ſato, merita nec morte peribat,
Sed miſera ante diem, ſubitoque accenſa furore,
Non dum illi flavum Proſerpina vertice crinem Abſtulerat, Stygioque caput damnaverat Orco :

" Sacrum iussa fero, teque isto corpore solvo."
Sic ait, & dextra crinem secat; omnis & una Dilapsus calor, atque in ventos vita recessit.*

Then Juno, grieving that she should sustain
A Death so ling'ring, and so full of Pain,
Sent Iris down to free her from her Strife
Of lab'ring Nature, and dissolve her Life;
For since she dy'd, not doom'd by Heav'n's Decree,
Or her own Crime, but human Casualty,
And Rage of Love, that plung'd her in Despair,
The Sisters had not cut the topmost Hair,
(Which Proserpine and they can only know)
Nor made her sacred to the Shades below;
Downward the various Goddesses took her Flight,
And drew a thousand Colours from the Light;
Then stood above the dying Lover's Head,
And said, "I thus devote thee to the Dead;
" This Off'ring to th' infernal Gods I bear."
Thus while she spoke she cut the fatal Hair,
The struggling Soul was loos'd, and Life dissolv'd in Air.

Mr. Dryden.

What was the Ground of this Opinion, cannot be certainly defined; but it seems not improbable that it proceeded from a Ceremony at Sacrifices, wherein they cut some of the Hairs from the Victim's Forehead, and offer'd them to the Gods, as First Fruits of the Sacrifice; whence some imagine the same was thought to be done by Death upon Men sent as Victims to the infernal Gods.

When they perceived the Pangs of Death coming upon them, they made Supplication to Mercury, whose Office it was to convey the Ghosts to the Regions below. An Instance whereof we have in a Cean Matron, who, being about to rid herself of Life by a Draught of Poison, first call'd upon Mercury to grant her a pleasant Journey, and convey her to a commodious Habitation in Plato's Dominions (a). These Prayers, whether offered to Mercury, or to any other God, were term'd ἐξίτησις ψυχῆς, which is a general Name for all Prayers before any Man's Departure, whether by Death, or only to take a Journey (b).

Their Friends and Relations, perceiving them at the point of resigning their Lives, came close to the Bed where they lay, to bid them farewell, and catch their dying Words, which they never repeated without Reverence. The Want of Opportunity to pay this Compliment to Hector,

(a) Valerius Maximus, lib. II. cap. 6.

(b) Etymologici Anctor.

Hector, furnishes Andromache with Matter of Lamentation, which she thus expresses (a):

Οὐ γὰρ μοι δ' ἤρπων λήξων ἐν χερσὶ δρεξας,
Οὐδ' ἐπεὶ μοι ἴππερ στυγεροὶ ἔπ' οἶ, ἢ τί πιν αἰὶδὼ
Μιμήμενος, νύκτας τε καὶ ἡμέρας δακρυχέστα.

I saw him not when in the Pangs of Death,
Nor did my Lips receive his latest Breath.
Why held he not to me his dying Hand?
And why receiv'd not I his last Command?
Something he would have said; had I been there,
Which I shou'd still in sad Remembrance bear;
For I cou'd never, never Words forget,
Which Night and Day I wou'd with Tears repeat. Mr. Congr.

They kiss'd and embrac'd the dying Person, so taking their last Farewel; which Custom was very ancient, being deriv'd from the Eastern Nations; for we find in the Holy Writings, that Joseph fell upon his Father Jacob's Neck, when he lay upon his Death-bed, and kiss'd him (b). They endeavour'd likewise to receive in their Mouth his last Breath, as fancying his Soul to expire with it, and enter into their Bodies: And at the Time of its Departure it was customary to beat brazen Kettles, which was thought an excellent Method to drive away evil Spirits and Phantasms, whose airy Forms were not able to endure so harsh a Noise (c): Thus they imagin'd the dead Man's Ghost secur'd from Furies, and quietly convey'd to a peaceful Habitation in the Elysian Fields. For 'twas an old Opinion, that there being two Mansions in the Infernal Regions, one on the Right-hand pleasant and delightful, the other on the Left appointed for the Souls of wicked Wretches, the Furies were always ready to hurry departed Souls to the Place of Torment: Virgil has an Allusion to this Fancy (d):

*Hic locus est, partes ubi se via findit in ambas,
Dextera, quæ Ditis magni sub mœnia tendit,
Hac iter Elysium nobis, at læva malorum
Exercet pœnas, & ad impia Tartara mittit.*

'Tis here in different Paths the Way divides,
The Right to Pluto's Golden Palace guides,
The Left to that unhappy Region tends,
Which to the Depth of Tartarus descends,
The Seat of Night profound, and punish'd Fiends.

Mr. Dryden.

Death, and all Things concerning it, were ominous and ill-boding, and therefore frequently express'd in softening Terms: To die is commonly term'd ἀποκύεσθαι, to which the Latin, denasci, answers.

Sometimes 'tis call'd ἀποθαναι, to depart; and the Dead, οἰχόμενοι;
So also Clio in an Epistle to Plato saith, ἐξ ἀνθρώπων ἀπαλεύσομαι, I will depart out of the World. In the same Sense we find the Latin Word abitis, which is a synonymous Term for Death (a); and abijt; as when Pliny writes, that Virginius Rufus plenus annis abijt, plenus honoribus (b), departed full of Years and Honours: Thus also the Greeks use βίβιωκε, i. e. he once lived; and the Romans, vixit and suavit; thus Virgil;

— Fuit Ilium, & ingens
Gloria Teucrorum——

Glory did once attend the Dardan State.
It's Spires then glitter'd, and it's Chiefs were great,

Tibullus, with several others, hath us'd the same Expression (c);

Vixite felices, memores & vivite nostri,
Sive crimis, seu nos fata fuisse velint.

In a bless'd Series may your Lives glide on,
If while I live, or when I'm dead and gone,
One transient Glance you'll on my Mem'ry cast,
And in soft Accents say, He's gone and past.

J. A.

Sometimes they us'd κίεμνος, and καμίνος. Thus Homer (d),

— Οἱ ὑπὸ γῆρι καμίνος
Ἀνδρώωνι τιτυσθῶν, ὃς, τις κ' ἐπὶ ὄρεα ἠμέσσει.

Ye dire Avengers of all perjur'd Slaves,
When once they're dead, and cover'd in their Graves,

Again (e),

— βράων ἰδούλα καμίντων,
—— The Ghosts o' th' Dead.

But the most frequent are Names taken from Sleep, to which Death bears a near Resemblance; whence the Poets feign them to be Brothers, and κοιμάσθαι, or υῖδαι are commonly us'd for dying;
thus Callimachus (f);

— Τῇδε ἑάων, ὃ Δίκου, Ἀκαάδου, ἱερὸν ὕπνου

Orpheus hath us'd the same Metaphor in his Argonauticks :

Εὐδεις, Ἀγνιάδην, γλυκερῷ βεβολουμένῳ ὕπνῳ.

Agniades, thou art in soft Repose
Lock'd up.

Many other like Passages occur both in profane and inspir'd Writers ; and so common was this Way of speaking with the primitive Christians, that their Burying-places were call'd κοιμητήρια, which is a Term of the same Sense with Lycophron's ἐνασθήρια (b) :

Σίθωνος εἰς θυγατρὸς ἐνασθήριον.

C H A P. III.

Of the Ceremonies before the Funeral.

AS soon as any Person had expir'd, they clos'd his Eyes ; to do which they term'd καθαίρειν, συναμύττειν, συγκλείειν τὰς ὀφθαλμούς, or τὰ βλεφάρα, &c. Which Custom was so universally practis'd, that no Person who has the least Acquaintance with ancient Writers, can be ignorant of it. Hence καταμύειν came to be us'd for θάψαι. The Design of this Custom seems to have been not only to prevent that Horror, which the Eyes of dead Men, when uncover'd, are apt to strike into the Living ; but also for the Satisfaction of dying Persons ; who are usually desirous to die in a decent Posture. Thus Polyxena in Euripides is said to have order'd herself in such a Manner, that nothing unfit to be seen should appear in her Fall (c) :

igram, XXII.

(b) Cassander, v. 583.

(c) Euripid. Hecuba, v. 568.

— ἡ δὲ, καὶ θήσκεισ' ὅμως
Παλλὰν ἀνέοιαν εἴχον ὑσυχέως φασίην,
Κρύπτειν δ' αὖ κρύπτειν ὀφθαλμοὺς αἰσάνων χρεῖν.

And Augustus Caesar, upon the Approach of his Death, call'd for a Looking-glass, and caus'd his Hair to be comb'd, and his fallen Cheeks decently compos'd (a). For the same Reasons the Mouth of the dead Person was clos'd. Hence the Ghost of Agamemnon in Homer complains that his Wife Clytemnestra had neglected to perform this Ceremony (b) ;

— ἄδ' μοι ἔτλη ἰότης περ εἰς Αἴδαο
Χερσὶ κατ' ὀφθαλμοῦς ἰλέειν, σὺν δὲ γόμ' ἱεῖσθαι.

This done, his Face was cover'd : Whence Hippolytus in Euripides, being at the Point to expire, calls upon his Father Theseus to do him that Office (c) ;

Κρύψω δέ με πρόσωπον ὡς τάχος στίβλοισι.

Veil my Face over quickly with a Sheet..

Indeed almost all the Offices about the Dead were perform'd by their nearest Relations ; nor could a greater Misfortune befall any Person, than to want these last Respects : Electra in Sophocles seems to prefer Death itself before it. Infinite Numbers of Instances might be produced to the same Purpose, were it not too commonly known to need any farther Confirmation. All the Charges expended on Funerals, and the whole Care and Management of them, belong'd also to Relations, saving that Persons of extraordinary Worth were frequently honour'd with public Funerals, the Expences whereof were defray'd out of the Exchequer ; thus we find Democritus at Abdera, Zeno and Aristides at Athens, Epaminondas at Thebes, Gryllus, Xenophon's Son, at Mantineæ, with many others, that have had their Funerals celebrated at the public Expence.

To return : Before the Body was cold, they compos'd all the Members, stretching them out to their due Length ; this they term'd ἐκτίειν, or ὀρεῖν : Whence the Maid in Euripides's Hippolytus, as soon as Phædra had expir'd her last, cries out to some of her own Sex to perform this Office (d) :

ὀρθώσατ' ἐκτείνετε αἶθροι νέευν,
Πατρὸν τὸδ' οἰκέρημα διασπύταίς ἡμοῖς.

Tho' 'tis a Service that will bitter prove,
And grieve the Souls of my most wretched Masters,

Not long after the Chorus saith,

Ἦδη γὰρ ὡς παρὸν τοῖς ἑταίροις δῆ.

As it is usual, they lay her out.

After this the dead Body was wash'd; hence Alektis in Euripides (a), upon the Approach of the fatal Day, wherein she was to lay down her Life for her Husband Admetus, wash'd herself in the River;

Ἐπὶ γὰρ ἡαδιθ' ἡμέραν τὴν κυρίαν ἤκυσαν ὕδασι ποταμίοις λευκὸν χροῖα ἐλῶσιν'.

The pious Dame did in the River wash
Her beauteous Body, when the fatal Day
Of her own Exit did approach.

Plato tells us, that Socrates wash'd himself before his Execution, to save the Women a Trouble (b); for this Office was commonly perform'd by Women related to the Party deceas'd; only in Cases of Necessity others were employ'd therein: So we find that poor Theagenes having neither Wife, nor Child, nor any near Relation of his own, was wash'd by the Cynicks (c). At some Places there were Vessels in the Temples design'd for this Use; these were call'd in Latin labra, whence some derive the Word delubrum (d).

This done, the Body was anointed; Pliny reports, that the Grecians never us'd Ointment, till the Time of Alexander the Great, when they had it convey'd out of Persia (e); and Homer, tho' frequently mentioning the Custom of anointing the Dead, yet useth no other Materials beside Oil: Thus they anointed Patroclus (f):

Καὶ τότε δὴ λίσσασθε, καὶ ἡλυσαν λίπ' ἰλαίρ.

As soon as wash'd, they 'nointed him with Oil.

But Athenæus will by no means allow Homer's Oil to have been distinguish'd from μύρον, or Ointment properly so called (g); and we find that Solon allow'd his Citizens the Use of Ointments, forbidding only Slaves to perfume themselves therewith (b). Whence it seems probable, that however the Grecians might not have any Knowledge of those costly Ointments the Persians furnish'd them with, yet they were not unacquainted with the Use of another Sort.

After the Body was wash'd and anointed, they wrapp'd it in a Garment, which seems to have been no other than the common pallium, or or Cloak they wore at other Times (a), as we find the Romans made use of their Toga. Thus Misenus in Virgil, being first wash'd and anointed, then (as the Custom was) laid upon a Bed, was wrapp'd in the Garments he had usually worn (b):

*Pars calidos latices, & abena undantia flammis
Expediunt, corpusque lavant frigentis, & unguent:
Fit gemitus: Tum membra toro defleta reponunt,
Purpureasque super vestes velamina nota
Conjiciunt.*————

Some, being mov'd with Pity tow'rs their Friend,
Water to boil in Caldrons do attend,
Then wash his cold and stiffen'd Limbs all o'er,
To try if quick'ning Heat they can restore;
With Essences and Oils they scent the Dead,
And then repose him on his Fun'ral Bed:
Their glowing Passion in deep Sighs they vent,
And full of Sorrow dolefully lament;
On him the Robes they cast he us'd to wear,
Which having done, they heave him on the Bier. J. A.

After this the Body was adorn'd with a rich and splendid Garment: Hence we find that, before Socrates took the fatal Draught, Apollodorus brought him a Cloak, with a Garment of great Value (c), it being the Philosopher's Desire to prepare himself for his Funeral before he died, 'Tis reported also, that Philocles the Athenian Admiral being overcome, and sentenc'd to Death by Lyfander the Spartan, wash'd himself, and put on his best Apparel, before he was executed (d). The same we read of Alceſtis in Euripides:

*Ενὶ γὰρ ἡσθεῖ ἡμέραι τὴν κυρίαν ἤενται, ὕδασι ποταμίοις λευκὸν χροῶ ἐλίσσας, ἐκ δ' ἰλῦσα κιδρύων δέμων

The pious Dame, before the fatal Day
Of her own Exis, bath'd her beauteous Limbs
In gentle Rivulet; then she put on A splendid Vest, and decent Ornaments
Of rich Attire. —————

The whole Body was cover'd with this Garment. It's Colour was commonly white, as we find in Homer speaking of Patroclus (e):

In a white Linen Shroud from Head to Foot.
 They put the Corpse, when on a Bed laid out.

Whence Artemidorus reckons it an unlucky Omen, and presaging Death, for a sick Person to have white Apparel (a): This Colour seems to have been used to denote the Simplicity and Harmlessness of the Dead (b). So concern'd were they about this Garment, that, as some think, they frequently prepar'd it for themselves and Friends during Life: Thus Penelope is introduc'd by Homer speaking to her Courtiers (c);

Κῦροι, ἱμοὶ μνηστῆρες, ἱκεὶ δαίη δίδ᾽ Ὀδυσσεύς,
 Μίμνεντ' ἐπειγόμενοι τὸν ἱμὸν γάμον, εἰσέκει φάρει
 Ἐκτελίσω (μή μοι μελαμάλια νήματ' ὀλῆται)
 Λαίρκῃ ἤρω ταφῆϊον, εἰς ὃ τε κεν μιν
 Μοῖρ' ὅλοη καθέλκοι ταυδεγύοι θανάτοιο.

Since my Ulysses, as 'tis said, is slain,
 And clotted Gore won't circulate again,
 Gentlemen, you that vig'rous Rivals are
 In courting me, your hot Pursuit forbear,
 Till I have spun this Web against grim Death
 With his cold Hands shall stop Laertes' Breath.

I. A.

Thus likewise Euryalus being slain, his Mother is brought in complaining (d);

—Nec te tua funera mater
 Produxi, pressive oculos, aut vulnera lavi,
 Veste regens, tibi quam noctes festina dieque
 Urgebam, & tela curas solabar aniles

What Pangs of Grief my throbbing Breast invade
 To think thy mangled Carcase was not laid
 Forth on its Pile by me; oh, sad Surprise!
 That I wa'n't by to close thy beauteous Eyes,
 Just as th' expiring Soul did take her Flight
 Into the Regions of Infernal Night;
 Oh! had I wash'd each Wound, each fever'd Vein,
 When thou scarce cold laidst weltring on the Plain;
 And had the Vest spread o'er thee, Day and Night
 Which I have spun, my Dotage to delight.

But it may be disputed whether these were made on Purpose for Funeral-Garments, or only designed to be worn, and apply'd to the former Use, in case the Person should die; it being usual (as hath been already observ'd) to wrap dead Bodies in the Garments they had used when alive: The latter Opinion seems more probable from the Words which Penelope adds:

Μένει μοι κατὰ δῆμον Ἀχαιῶντι νηυσὶν,
Λίην αἶτις (πύρι κῆται, πολλὰ κλισίσσας.

Left, if my Sire without a Coat shou'd lie,
Shame and Reproach I might incur thereby
From Grecian Ladies, since this Duty he,
Having such large Revenues, claims of me.

And it bears no great Shew of Reason, that a Mother should comfort herself by weaving a Winding-Sheet for her young Son, who at that Time was likely to have lived many Years. However that be, it is observable that the Lacedæmonians, as in most other Things, so here also ran counter to the rest of the Grecians; for whereas in other Places the Dead were clothed with costly Apparel, which none, except the poorer Sort, ever wanted, the Spartan Law-giver ordered, that Persons of the greatest Valour and Merit should be bury'd in nothing but a red Coat, which was the common Habit of Soldiers: To the rest even this was deny'd (a); for he thought it wholly absurd and unreasonable, that those who through the whole Course of their Lives had been accusom'd to contemn Riches and superfluous Ornaments, should be decked therewith when dead. Nor were any Ointments, or costly-Perfumes us'd there, being looked on as conducing nothing to the Felicity of the Dead, and unworthy of the Lacedæmonian Gravity.

The next Ceremony was the bedecking the dead Body with Chaplets of Flowers, and green Boughs. Thus Talibychus puts on He-cuba to adorn her Grandson Astyanax (b), ——— Πίσποισιν ὡς περιεὶλος νεκρῶ,

Στεφάνους δ', ὅση σοι δύναμις ὡς ἔχει τα Ἰα.

That you adorn the Corpse with costly Robes,
With Chaplets, and what other Pomp you can.

When Persons of Worth and Character died in foreign Countries, their Remains, being brought home in Urns, were honour'd with the Ceremonies customary at other Funerals, but more especially with this I am speaking of. Plutarch reports, that all the Cities thro' which Demetrius's Ashes were convey'd, sent Mourners to meet the sacred Urn, with others to perform the Rites usual on such Occasions, or at least they crown'd it with Garlands (a). The same Author reports, that Philopamen's Relicks were attended by Captives in Chains, and his Urn so covered with Ribbands and Chaplets, that scarce any Part of it was to be seen (b). This Ceremony was either taken from the Games, wherein the Conquerors were rewarded with Crowns of Leaves, as signifying that the Dead had finish'd their Course (c); or was design'd to express the unmix'd and never-fading Pleasures the Dead were to enjoy, upon their Removal out of this painful and troublesome World (d); for Garlands were an Emblem of Mirth and Joyfulness, and therefore usually worn at Banquets and Festivals. The same may be observ'd of Ointments and Perfumes, the constant Attendants of Gaiety and Pleasantness. To both these Ceremonies we have an ingenious Allusion of an old Poet in Stobæus:

Οὐ μὲν γὰρ ὅπως αἶψ' ἔσθ' ἐσθλα: σφόδρα
 Πενκτίμεθ' ἄρθρ' ἔδδ' καλὰ κίχρισμάσιν,
 Ἐὶ μὴ καλὰ βάλαν' ὑβίως πίνωμεν ἰδίαι.
 Διὰ ταῦτα γὰρ τοῖς κ' καθύστα μακάριοι,
 Πᾶς γὰρ λόγος τις ὁ μακάριτος οἴχεται.

Not that we less compassionate are grown,
 Do we at Funerals our Temples crown,
 Or with sweet Essences adorn our Hair,
 And all the Marks of pleasing Transport wear:
 But 'cause we're sure of that more happy State
 To which kind Death doth ev'ry Soul translate,
 Which here by drinking we anticipate:
 For soon as Death his fatal Shaft hath hurl'd,
 And us transmitted to the other World,
 We drinking sing th' immortal Beverage,
 And in sweet Joys Eternity engage;
 Hence they by ev'ry one are only said
 To be right happy, that are truly dead.

H. H.

This done, they proceeded ἀπορθεοῦσαι, collocare, to lay out the dead Body; sometimes they placed it upon the Ground, sometimes upon a Bier, called λέκτρον, φίετρον, or φίσιπρον, which they bedecked with various Sorts of Flowers. Some are of Opinion the Corpse was first laid out upon the Ground, afterwards lifted upon a Bier. This Office, as most of the former, was performed by the nearest Relations; whence Lyfias (e) among other aggravating Circumstances which attended the Death of Erastobenes, who was condemned by the Thirty Tyrants of Athens, reckons this as none of the least, that they laid him out, assuming thereby an Office belonging of Right only to the nearest and and most tender Relations. Tiberius Cæsar is likewise censur'd by Dio, not only as neglecting to visit Livia when sick, but because he laid her not out with his own Hands, when she was dead (a). The Place where the Bodies were laid out, was near the Entrance of the House, which being sometimes term'd προσώπιον, it came to pass that dead Men were called προσωπῆς. Hence Euripides (b), Ἡ δὲ προσώπῃς ἐστὶν ψυχοῦργον.

The Reason of this Ceremony was, that all Persons might have Opportunity to search whether the Party deceas'd had any Wounds, or other Marks of an untimely and violent Death (c). It may be further observ'd, that the Feet were always turned towards the Gate. Hence Persius (d),

— Tandemque beatulus ulio
Compositus lecto, crassisque latus amomis,
In portam rigidos calces extendit. —

Our dear departed Brother lies in State,
His Heels stretch'd out, and pointing to the Gate.

Achilles in Homer speaks of Patroclus as laid out in the same Manner (e):

— ἐν κλισίῃ διδαιγμένον ἐξὶν χαλεῶ
Κεῖται αἰὶα πρόθυρον τέτραμμένον.

Slain at the Ent'rance of the Tent he lies.

Where we are told by the Scholiast, that by this Ceremony they signified that they were never to return after their being carry'd out. Whilst the Body lay in this Place, 'twas customary to give it constant Attendance, to defend it from any Violence or Affront that might be offered. Whence Achilles adds in the fore-cited Place,

— ἀμφὶ δ' ἵταῖροι
Μύρονται.

Round the dead Corpse his sad Companions mourn.

And a little before we find him so passionately concern'd lest Rhes and Vermin should pollute the Corpse, that he could not be drawn from it to the Battle, till Thetis had promis'd to guard it (f). When any Person died in Debt at Athens, there was something more to be fear'd, for the Laws of that City gave Leave to Creditors to seize the dead Body, and deprive it of Burial till Payment was made; whence the Corpse of Miltiades,

(a) Lib. LVIII. (b) Alceſtides. (c) Pollux, Lib. VIII. cap. 7. (d) Sat. III. l. 103. (e) Iliad. τ. v. 211. (f) Ibid. v. 23.

Miliades, who deceas'd in Prison, being like to want the Honour of Burial, his Son Cimon had no other Means to release it, but by taking upon himself his Father's Debt and Fetters.

Some Time before Interment, a Piece of Money was put into the Corpse's Mouth, which was thought to be Charon's Fare for wafting the departed Soul over the infernal River. This was by some term'd παρμήδοια (a), by others δανάη (b), δάνακη, or δανάκης, from δάνος, a Price; or because it was given τοῖς δανοῖς, to dead Men, so called from δανᾶ, or dry Sticks (c). It was only a single ὀβολός. Aristophanes indeed introduces Hercules telling Bacchus he must pay two Oboli (d):

Εἰ πλοιαρίῳ τυπῶταί σ' ἀπὸς γέρον
Νυῦτης δαΐξῃ δὺ ὀβολῶ μισθὸν λαΐων.

Th' old Ferryman of Hell will waft you o'er
In this small Skiff for poor two Oboli.

But the Comedian seems to speak this only by way of Jeer to the Judges in some of the Athenian Courts, who were presented with two Oboli at the End of their Session: Whence Bacchus presently subjoins, Φῦ, ὡς μέγα δύνασθαι πωλαχῦ δὺ ὀβολῶ.

I find two Oboli can much prevail
In either World.——

Meursius therefore, interpreting this Place of the common Custom towards the Dead, and adding out of the Scholiast, that the Price was afterwards rais'd to three Oboli, seems not to have reach'd the Author's Meaning: For nothing can be more plain than that the Scholiast is to be understood of the δικαστικὸς μισθός, or Reward allow'd the Judges, which was two Oboli, and afterwards increas'd to three. This Ceremony was not us'd in those Places which they fancy'd situate in the Vicinity of the Infernal Regions, and to lead thither by a ready and direct Road (e); Strabo particularly mentions that the Hermionians pleaded Exemption (f).

Besides this, the Corpse's Mouth was furnish'd with a certain Cake, compos'd of Flour, Honey, &c, and therefore called μυλῖταια (g). This was design'd to appease the Fury of Cerberus the Infernal Door-keeper, and to procure of him a safe and quiet Entrance. We have an Allusion to this in the Comedian (b),

—— Coro ὠνήσι,
Μυλῖταια ἔγω κ' δὴ μείζω.

A Cake for Cerberus—

Virgil has oblig'd us with a larger Account of this Custom, when he describes the Sibyl and Aeneas's Journey to the Infernal Shades (a);

*Cerberus hæc ingens latratu regna trisauce
Personat, adverso recubans immanis in antro :
Cui vates, horrere videns jam colla colubris,
Melle soporatum & medicatis frugibus offam
Objicit ; ille, fame rabida tria guttura pandens,
Corripit obiectam, atque immania terga resolvit
Fusus humi, totoque ingens extenditur antro :
Occupat Aeneas aditum, custode sepulto,
Evaditque celer ripam irremeabilis undæ.*

—In his Den they found
The triple Porter of the Stygian Sound,
Grim Cerberus, who soon began to rear
His crested Snakes, and arm'd his bristling Hair ;
The prudent Sibyl had before prepar'd
A Sop in Honey steep'd to charm the Guard,
Which, mix'd with pow'rful Drugs, she cast before
His greedy grinning Jaws, just op'd to roar :
With three enormous Mouths he gapes, and strait,
With Hunger prest, devours the pleasing Bait ;
Long Draughts of Sleep his monstrous Limbs enslave,
He reels, and falling fills the spacious Cave.
The Keeper charm'd, the Chief without Delay
Pass'd on, and took th' irremeable Way. Mr. Dryden.

Before we conclude this Chapter, it may be observ'd, that the whole Ceremony of laying out, clothing the Dead, and sometimes the Interment itself, was call'd ὑγκομιδή (b) : In the same Sense antient Writers use ὑγκομιζω, with its Derivatives ; thus Sophocles (c) :

οὐτὸς ἔστι φωνὴ τόδε τοῖς νεκροῖς χριστοῖς
Μὴ ὑγκομιζέω, ἀλλ' ἱερὸν ὅπως ἔχουσιν.

Do not presume th' accursed Corpse t'inter,
But let it lie expos'd to open View.

It may farther be observ'd, that during this Time the Hair of the deceas'd Person was hung upon the Door, to signify the Family was in Mourning. And, till the House was deliver'd of the Corpse, there stood flood before the Door a Vessel of Water called ἀρδάνιον (a), ἀρδανία, γάρφα (b), and from the Matter it was frequently made of, ὄγρακτος, as in Aristophanes (c) :

Υδατὸν τι καθαρὸν ὄγρακτον πρὸ τῆς θύρας.

An earthen Vessel full of Water place
Before the Door.————

Part of a Chorus in Euripides, seeing neither of these Signs, could scarce be induc'd to believe Akestis dead (d) ;

Πυλῶν ἀπαροῖδον δ' ὄχ' ὄρῳ
Πηγαῖον, ὡς νομίζεται
Γι, χέρι' ἐπὶ φθιτῶν σύλαις·
Χαῖτά τ' ἔτις ἐπὶ πρὸθυρα τεμαίας, ἃ δὲ νεύων σάουσι σινιῖ.

I see no purifying Water plac'd
Before the Doors, a Custom us'd of old ;
Nor Lock of Hair is in the Entrance fix'd,
To shew the House in Mourning.————

H. H.

The Design of this was, that such as had been concern'd about the Corpse might purify themselves by Washing, which was called λῦ-σθαι ἀπὸ νεκρῷ. For not the Jews only (e), but the greatest Part of the Heathen World thought themselves polluted by the Contact of a dead Body, Death being contrary to Nature, and therefore abhorr'd by every thing endued with Life. Hence the Cœlestial Gods, those especially who were thought to give or preserve Light or Life, would not endure the Sight of a Corpse. Diana in Euripides professes it unlawful for her to see Hippolytus, her Favourite, when dead :

Καὶ χαῖρ', ἰμοὶ γὰρ ὃ δέμας φθιτὸς ὄρᾷ,
Οὐδ' ὄμμα χραίνην θανάσιμοισιν ἐκπνοαῖς.

Farewel, for 'twere in me a sinful Act
To view the Dead, or to defile mine Eyes,
With the sad Sight of an expiring Soul.

Nor was the House where the Corpse lay free from Pollution, as appears from the Words of Helena in Euripides (f) :

Καθαρὰ γὰρ ἡμῖν δέμας, ὃ γὰρ ἐνθάδε
Τυχὴν ἀφ᾽ ἡμῶν Μυτίλιος.————

The Air proceeding from the dead Body was thought to pollute all Things into which it enter'd ; whence all uncover'd Vessels which stood in the same Room with the Corpse, were accounted unclean by the Jews. Hence 'twas customary to have the whole House purified, as soon as the Funeral Solemnities were over ; of which Ceremony I shall have occasion to discourse in one of the following Chapters.

CH A P. IV.

Of their Funeral Processions.

THE next Thing to be observ'd is their carrying the Corpse forth, which is in Greek term'd ἐκπορεύειν, and ἐκφορά, in Latin elatio, or exportatio ; whence the Latin, efferre, exportare, and the Greek, ἐκφέρειν, and ἐκπορεύειν, are Words appropriated to Funerals. Kirchman would have παράκομιζεν to be used in the same Sense ; but the Place he produces out of Eunapius (a) to that Purpose, seems rather to denote the Prætervection of the Body, by some Place, than its Elation from the House wherein it was prepared for Burial ; or παράκομιζεν, is usually spoken with respect to a Place in the middle Way of any Motion ; ἐσκομιζεν belongs to the End, or Place where the Motion ceases ; but ἐκπορεύειν, or ἐκφέρειν, are only proper when we speak of the Place whence the Motion begins, being the same with ἐξ φέρειν, carrying forth, which Words are taken by Thucydides in the Sense I am speaking of (b) ;

Ἀΐδιον δ' ἄμμεν νῦν ἄμα δρόμον αἰθρῆας ἵξεν
Οἰσεύμεν ποτὶ κύματ' ἐν αἰὼνι κλυτότα.

I' th' Morn when pearly Dew has overspread
The bending Grass, we will bring forth our Dead
Down to the River's Side.——

Plautus likewise, for efferre, has foras ferre (c) :

Quæ cras veniat perendie foras feratur soror.
To-morrow's Sun shall see my Sister carry'd forth.

The Time of Burial seems not to have been limited. The Author of the Geniales Dies (a) tells us, That Bodies were usually kept seventeen Days, and seventeen Nights, before they were interred; which he seems to have out of Homer, who reports, that Achilles's Body, after seventeen Days and as many Nights of Mourning, was committed to the Flames (b):

Επτακαίδεκα μὲν σε ὁμῶς νύκτας τε καὶ ἡμέρας
Κλαίοντες ἀθάνατοί τε θεοὶ, θεοὶ τοὶ τ' ἀνθρώποι;
Οκτωκαίδεκάτῃ δ' ἔδομον πυρὶ. —————

Seventeen long Days were in sad Mourning spent,
As many Nights did Gods and Men lament,
But on the Eighteenth laid you on the Pile.

Servius was of Opinion, that the Time of burning Bodies was the eighth Day after Death, the Time of burying the Ninth (c); but this must only be understood of the Funerals of great Persons, which could not be duly solemnized without extraordinary Preparations; Men of inferior Rank were committed to the Ground without so much Noise and Pomp. The antient Burials seem to have been upon the third or fourth Day after Death: Thus the Author of the Argonautics (d);

*At vera ornantes supremo funus honore,
Tres totos condunt lugubri murmure soles,
Magnifice tumultant quarto.* —————

With three Days Mourning they the Fun'ral grac'd,
(The last good Office due to the Deceas'd)
But on the fourth they o'er his Body rear'd
A stately Tomb. —————

H. H.

Nor was it unusual to perform the Solemnities, especially of poor Persons, upon the Day after their Death; which appears from an Epigram of Callimachus:

Δαίμονα τίς δ' εἴ οἶδε τὸν αὖριον; ἥνικα καὶ σε,
Χάρμης, τὸν ὀφθαλμοῖς χριζὼν ἐν ἡμέλεισι,
Τῇ ἰτέρῃ κλαύσαρτις ἰδάπτομαι. —————

Who knows what Fortunes on To-morrow wait,
Since Charmis one Day well to us appear'd,
And on the next was mournfully interr'd?

Pherecydes alludes to this Custom in his Epistle to Thales preserv'd by Laert-

(a) Lib. III. cap. 7. (b) Odys. α. v. 63. (c) Æneid. V. (d) Lib. II.

Laertius (a) telling him he expected every Minute to breathe his last, and had invited his Friends to his Funeral the Day following.

The Ceremony was perform'd in the Day, for Night was look'd on as a very improper Time; because then Furies and evil Spirits, which could not endure the Light, ventur'd abroad. Hence Cassandra in a Quarrel with Talthybius foretels, as one of the greatest Mischiefs that could befall him, that it should be his Fortune to be buried in the Night (b);

Η κακὸς κακῶς ταφίσῃ νυκτός, ἐν ἡμέρᾳ.

An evil Fate attends thy Obsequies,
Thy Fun'ral Rites shall be perform'd at Night.

Young Men only, that dy'd in the Flower of their Age, were bury'd in the Morning Twilight; for so dreadful a Calamity was this accounted, that they thought it undecent, and almost impious, to reveal it in the Face of the Sun. Whence (as the Expounders of Fables tell us) came the Stories of Youths stolen into Aurora's Embraces; for, when beauteous and hopeful young Men suffered an untimely Death, it was customary to alleviate the Disaster, by giving it a more pleasant and agreeable Name; whence instead of calling their Departure Death, they term'd it Ἥμῃρας ἀπαγωγή (c): Because these Funerals were celebrated by Torch-light, it became customary to carry Torches at all other Burials, tho' perform'd in the Day; whence came that proverbial Speech, whereby old Men are said to approach ἐπὶ τῇ δάδᾳ τοῦ βίου, to the Torch of their Life (d). The Athenians went counter to the rest of the Grecians, for their Laws enjoin'd them to celebrate their Funerals before Sun-rise: Which Command (e) Cicero will have to be no antienter than Demetrius the Phalerean; but Demosthenes makes Solon the Author thereof (f). 'Tis not improbable that it might be first instituted by Solon, and afterwards reviv'd by Demetrius: The Design seems to have been to moderate the expensive Extravagance in Funerals which a more open and public Celebration seem'd to require.

The Bearers usually mounted the Corpse upon their Shoulders; which Euripides calls ἄρδην φέρειν, speaking of Alceſtis (g):

——— προσπίλοι

Φέρειν ἄρδην πρὸς τάφῳτι, καὶ πυρίαν.

The Servants to the Grave the Corpse do bear Upon their Shoulders.

The Body was sometimes placed upon a Bier, instead of which the Lacedæmonians commonly used their Bucklers; whence that remarkable markable Command of one of their Matrons to her Son, ἢ τὰς ἱ ἐν τῷ, i. e. either bring this (pointing to his Buckler) back, as be brought upon it. Nor was this Custom unknown in other Places.

Virgil hath mentioned it in his tenth Æneid (a) :

—Socii muko gemitis lacrymisque
Impositum scuto referunt Pallanta frequentes.

In doleful Complaints his dear Companions mourn
Their dead Friend Pallas on his Target borne.

But the most ancient Grecians seem to have conveyed their dead Bodies to their Funerals without any Support; whence (as Eustathius observes) Patrocclus being carry'd forth by the Myrmidons, Achilles went behind to support his Head (b) :

Ὀπίσθω δὲ κάρη ἔχων Ἰδὼ Ἀχιλλεύς.

Behind Achilles did bear up his Head.

This seems to be the Meaning of Euripides's φοράδην ὤμῳ, when speaking of Rhesus's Funeral, he introduces the Chorus uttering these Words (c) :

Τίς ὑπὲρ κεφαλῆς θιγὼς ὁ βασιλεῦ,
Τὸν νεκρὸν ἐν χερσίν
Φοράδην ὤμῳ.

What God, O King, mov'd with becoming Care,
Shall with his Hand behind support thy Head?

The Persons present at Funerals were the dead Man's Friends and Relations, who thought themselves under an Obligation to pay this last Respect to their deceas'd Friend. Beside these, others were frequently invited to increase the Solemnity, where the Laws restrain'd them not from it; which they did at some Places, either to prevent the Disorders which often happen'd at such promiscuous Meetings, or to mitigate the excessive Charges of Funerals. Thus we find that Pittacus establish'd a Law at Mitylene, that none but the Relations of the Deceas'd should appear at Funerals; Solon also laid some Restraint upon his Athenians, wholly excluding all Women under threescore
Years of Age from these Solemnities; yet Relations were admitted whilst under that Age, as appears from Lyfias's Oration in Defence of Eratosthenes, who had murder'd his Wife's Gallant, whose first Acquaintance with her, he tells us, proceeded from seeing her at a Funeral. Yet they seem not to have gone promiscuously among the Men, but in a Body by themselves; as may be collected from these Words in Terence's Andria ;

Effertur

(a) V. 506.

(b) Iliad. v.

(c) Euboe. v. 226.

*Effertur, imus : Interea inter mulieres,
Quæ ibi aderant, forte unam adspicio adolescentulam.*

The Corpse is carry'd forward, and we follow,
But 'mongst the Women 'twas my Chance to see
A beautiful young Creature.——

The Habit of these Persons was not always the same ; for though they sometimes put on Mourning, and in common Funerals as frequently retain'd their ordinary Apparel ; yet the Exequies of great Men were commonly celebrated with Expressions of Joy for their Reception into Heaven. Thus Timoleon's Hearse was follow'd by many thousands of Men and Women in white Garments, and bedeck'd with Garlands, as in Festival Solemnities (a) ; Aratus's Funeral was likewise celebrated with Pæans, or Songs of Triumph and Dances (b).

When the Body was convey'd out of the House, they took their last Farewel, saluting it in a certain Form of Words, as appears from Admetus's Speech to the Phæaci present at the Funeral of his Wife (c) ;

Τμῆς δὲ τῆς θανούσας, ὡς νομίζεται,
Προσέπατ' ἐχέουσας, ὑσάτην ὁδόν.

Do you, since ancient Custom so requires,
Salute the Corpse, and take your last Farewel.

The Procession was commonly made on Horseback, or in Coaches ; but at the Funerals of Persons to whom more than an ordinary Reverence was thought due, all went on Foot : Which Respect the Athenians paid to the Memory of Theophrastus, as an Acknowledgment of his excellent Virtue (d). The Relations went next the Corpse ; the rest walk'd some Distance off : Sometimes the Men went before it with their Heads uncover'd, the Women following it. Patroclus was carry'd to his Funeral, surrounded by the Grecian Soldiers :

Πρόθε μὲν ἰππήεις, μετὰ δὲ ἕρθε· ἔπειτα οἱ αἰζῶν
Μυῖοι, ἐν δὲ μέσσοισι φέρον Πάτροκλον ἱταῖροι (e).

The sad Procession by the Horsemen led,
The thronging Footmen in the Rear succeed,
And in the midst his Friends Patroclus bear.

But the ordinary Way was for the Body to go first, and the rest to follow ; which appears, as from many other Instances, so from that of Terence (f) :

——— Funus.

(a) Plutarchus Timolonte. (b) Idem. Arato. (c) Euripid. Alcest. v. 608.
(d) Diogenes Laertius Theophrasto. (e) Homer. Iliad. v. (f) Andria.

— Funus interim
Procedit, sequimur. —

The Fun'ral marches first, we follow it.

Whereby the Survivors were put in mind of their Mortality, and bid to remember they were all following in the Way the dead Person was gone before (a). At the Funerals of Soldiers, their Fellow-Soldiers attended with their Spears pointed towards the Ground, and the uppermost Part of their Bucklers turned downwards, as has been formerly observ'd (b). This was not done so much (as some fancy) because the Gods were carv'd upon their Bucklers, whose Faces would have been polluted by the Sight of a dead Body, as that they might recede from their common Custom; the Method of Mourning being to act quite contrary to what was usual at other Times; and therefore not only their Bucklers, but their Spears, and the rest of their Weapons were inverted. Nor was this only a Martial Custom, but practis'd likewise in Peace; for, at the Funerals of Magistrates, their Ensigns of Honour were inverted, as appears from the Poet (c);

*Quos primum vidi fasces, in funere vidi,
 Et vidi versos, indiciumque mali.*

The Fasces first I at a Fun'ral saw,
 With Heads turn'd downwards, the sad Badge of Woe.

To perform this Ceremony they term'd ἐκτίσις, παρτίσις, and ἐπιτίσις; the first with respect to the House, out of which the Body was carried forth; the second with respect to the Places by which it pass'd; and the last, to the Place whither it was convey'd.

CHAP. V.

Of their Mourning for the Dead.

THE Ceremonies by which they us'd to express their Sorrow upon the Death of Friends, and on other Occasions, were various and uncertain: But it seems to have been a constant Rule amongst them to recede, as much as possible, in Habit and all their Behaviour, from their ordinary Customs; by which Change they thought it would appear, that some extraordinary Calamity had befallen them.

(a) Donatus in locum Terentii, Alexand. ab Alex. Lib. III. cap. 8. (b) Lib. III. cap. 11. (c) Ped. Albinovan. Eleg. ad Livium.

them. Hence it was, that Mourners in some Cities demean'd themselves in the very same Manner with Persons who in other Places design'd to express Joy : For, the Customs of one City being contrary to those of another, it sometimes happen'd, that what in one Place pass'd for an Expression of Mirth, was in others a Token of Sorrow. The most ordinary Ways of expressing Sorrow, were these that follow :

1. They abstain'd from Banquets and Entertainments, and banish'd from their Houses all musical Instruments, and whatever was proper to excite Pleasure, or bore an Air of Mirth and Gaiety. Thus Admetus in Euripides upon the Death of Alceſtis (a) ;

Πάσσω δὲ καὶ μεν, συμποτῶν δ' ὁμιλίαις,
Στιφαίνω τε, μῦσαι δ' ἢ κατιῶχε πρὶν δόμους.

No more to pleasing Banquets will I run,
All Conversation with my Friends I'll shun ;
No more my Brow shall fragrant Chaplets wear,
But all the Marks of Joy shall disappear ;
No more I'll Musick hear, too weak to save
My dear Alceſtis from the conqu'ring Grave.

H. H.

They frequented no publick Solemnities, nor appear'd in Places of Concourse, but sequestered themselves from Company, and refrain'd even from the Comforts and Conveniencies of Life. Wine was too great a Friend to Cheerfulness to gain Admission into so melancholy Society ; the Light itself was odious, and nothing courted but dark Shades and lonesome Retirements, which they thought bore some Resemblance to their Misfortunes (b) ; Whence Artemidorus lays it down as a certain Forerunner of Death, for any one to dream of a Fire's being extinguish'd, during the Sickness of any in the same Family (c).

2. They divested themselves of all Ornaments, and laid aside their Jewels, Gold, and whatever was rich and precious in their Apparel. Thus Lycophron describes the Women that mourn'd for Achilles's Death (d) :

Γυναιξὶ δ' ἴσαι τιμὸς ἐγγύρεος αἰὶ
Πωθεῖν τὸν εἰσάπηχυν, Αἰακῷ τρίτῳ
Καὶ Δωρίδῳ, πρηστῆρα δα.ν μάχης·
Καὶ μέτε χρυσῶ φαιδρὰ καλλυννὴν ῥέθνη,
Μηδ' ἀβροπίνης ἀμφοβάλλεσθαι σίπλους
Κάλην φορυκτῆς, ———

This to the Women shall a Custom be,
To mourn Achilles, third from Æacus,

Grandchild to Doris, and of largest Size;
To mourn Achilles, frightful in the War,
Not cloth'd with rich Attire of Gems and Gold,
With glitt'ring Silks or Purple——

The Custom is frequently mention'd in the Poets, but was not peculiar to Mourners for the Dead; being likewise, with several other Ceremonies, noted in this Chapter, practis'd by all that lamented for any great Calamity. Whence Hecuba had no sooner heard the Fortune assign'd to herself and Cassandra, but she cry'd out,

——— ῥίπτέ, τέκνον, ζαδύας
Κληῖδας, καὶ πὸ χροῶς ἰνδύτων γυφίων ἱερὰς στολμὰς (a).

Throw off these rich, these consecrated Robes,
And hallow'd Crowns———

Their mourning Garments were always black; whence Progne, having Notice of Philomela's Death, is thus describ'd by Ovid (b):

——— velamina Progne
Diripit ex humeris auro fulgentia lato,
Induiturque atras vestes.———

From off her Back th' embroider'd Robes she tears,
And Progne now in mournful Blacks appears.

Thus likewise Althæa, when her Brethren were slain by Meleager (c):

——— plangore dato mastis ululatus urbem
Implet, & auratas mutavit vestibus atris.

She fills with piteous Plaints the spacious Town,
And 'stead of glitt'ring Robes puts Sable on.

To which Custom Pericles had respect when he boasted, "That he had never given any Citizen Cause to put on Black (d)." Hence Artemidorus will have it to be a Prefage of Recovery, for a sick Person to dream of black Clothes, since not those that die, but those who survive to mourn, were apparell'd in Black (e). The Egyptians are reported by Servius to have introduc'd this Custom, when they mourn'd for the Death of Liber, otherwise call'd Osiris, who was treacherously circumvented and murder'd by his Brother Typho. Farther, mourning Garments differ'd not from their ordinary Apparel in Colour only, but likewise in Value, as being of cheap and coarse Stuff; which may be observ'd from this Example of Terence (f); beside many others:

Teren-

Ejus annus causa opinor, quæ erat mortua.*

We found her busy at the Loom, attir'd
In a cheap mourning Habit, which she wore
For the old Woman's Death, as I suppose.

3. They tore, cut off, and sometimes shav'd their Hair; nor was it sufficient to deprive themselves of a small Part only, for we find Eleära in Euripides finding fault with Helena for sparing her Locks, and thereby defrauding the Dead (a). This Custom is too well known to need any Confirmation by Examples. They had several Ways of disposing of their Hair: It was sometimes thrown upon the dead Body, as we learn from Patroclus's Funeral, where the Grecians, to shew their Affection and Respect to him, cover'd his Body with their Hair (b);

Θριξὶ δὲ πάντα νικῶν καλαινύου, ὡς ἐπιβάλλον
Κεϊρόμενος. —

They shav'd their Heads, and cover'd with their Hair
The Body. —

Statius hath likewise observ'd the same Practice (c);

——— *tergoque & pectore fusam
Cæsariem ferro minuit, scissisque jacentis
Obnubit tenuia ora comis* ———

He cut off all the Hair that from his Head
Down to the Back and Breast was comely spread,
And cover'd with it the dead Face. ———

It was likewise frequent to cast it into the Funeral Pile to be consum'd with the Body of their Friend; as Achilles appears to have done at Patroclus's Funeral (d);

Ἐτὰς ἀπάνυθι πυρὸς ξαθὴν ἀπαιρίτο χεῖτην,
Τὴν ἔκ Σπερχιῶν ποταμῶ τριφὶ τελεθόωσαν.

Standing hard by the Pile, the comely Hair
Which for Sperchius was before preserv'd,
He now cut off, and cast into the Flames.

(a) Orest. 128. (b) Iliad. ψ. v. 135. (c) Tib. VI. (d) Iliad. ψ

Sometimes it was laid upon the Grave, as we find in Æschylus (a) ;

Ὅτ' ἂν τομαῖον τόδ' ἐβόρυσχον τὰ φέμ.

See this Hair upon the Grave.

Canace in Ovid bewails her Misfortune, because she was debarr'd from performing this Ceremony to her beloved Macareus ;

*Non mihi te licuit lacrymis perfundere iustis,
In tua non tonsas ferre sepulchra comas.*

'Twas not permitted me with briny Tears
To bathe thy lifeless Corpse, or bring my Hairs
Unto thy Sepulchre, ———

Some restrain this Practice to Sons, or very near Relations ; but it appears, by many Instances, to have been common to all that thought themselves oblig'd to express their Respect, or Love to the Dead ; inasmuch that, upon the Death of great Men, whole Cities and Countries were commonly shav'd.

This Practice may be accounted for two Ways ; for the Scholiast upon Sophocles observes, that it was us'd partly to render the Ghost of the deceas'd Person propitious, which seems to be the Reason why they threw Hair into the Fire to burn with him, or laid it on his Body ; partly that they might appear disfigur'd, and careless of their Beauty ; for long Hair was look'd on as very becoming, and the Greeks prided themselves in it ; whence they are so frequently honour'd by Homer with the Epithet of καρηκομῆστις.

It may be farther observ'd, that in solemn and public Mournings it was common to extend this Practice to their Beasts, that all Things might appear as deform'd and ugly as might be. Thus Admetus, upon the Death of Alceſtis, commands his Chariot Horses to be shorn (b) ;

Τιβρίππ' αὖτε Ζεύγροσθι, καὶ μονάμπυκας
Πῶλος σιδῆρ' αἰχμῶν τέμν' αἰχμῶν φύσιν.

My Chariot-Horses to my Grief shall share,
Let them be shorn, cut off their comely Manes.

Thus likewise the Thessalians cut off their own Hair and their Horses Manes at the Death of Pelopidas (c) : When Masſſius was slain in a Skirmish with the Athenians, the Persians shav'd themselves, their Horses, and their Mules (d) : But Alexander, as in the rest of his Actions, so here-in he went beyond the rest of Mankind ; for at the Death of Hephaestion, tion, he did not only cut off the Manes of his Horses and Mules, but took down the Battlements of the City Walls, that even Towns might seem Mourners; and, instead of their former beauteous Appearance, look bald at the Funeral (a).

It may be objected indeed to what I have been speaking, that Shaving was a Sign of Joy; whereas to let their Hair grow long, was the Practice of Persons in Affliction: Hence Joseph is said to have been shav'd when he was deliver'd out of Prison; and Mephibosheth, during the Time David was banished from Jerusalem, let his Hair grow, but on his Return shav'd himself: Thus likewise Mariners, upon their Deliverance from Shipwreck, us'd to shave themselves: To which Practice Juvenal hath this Allusion (b):

————— gaudens ibi vertice raso
Garrula securi narrare pericula nautæ.

And there shorn Sailors boast what they endur'd.

Whence Artemidorus will have Mariners that dream of having their whole Head shav'd, to be forewarn'd by the Gods, that they are to undergo very great Hazards, but to escape with Life (c). Pliny also in one of his Epistles interprets his Dream of cutting off his Hair, to be a Token of his Deliverance from some imminent Danger; and the Poets furnish us with several Examples to our Purpose: Lycebron, for Instance, thus describes a general Lamentation (d);

————— ωᾶς δὲ λυγαίαν λαὸς
Εοθῆτα προσρόπαιω ἐγγλαυέμαθ',
Αὐχμῶ πινυδης λυπρὸν ἀμπερῖουσι βίω·
Κρατὸς δ' αἰερεῖ νῦτα καλλινοῖ φόβω,
Μήμην παλαιῶν τεμνέουσ' ὀδυρμάτων.

In mournful Blacks shall ev'ry Soul appear,
Each shall with loathsome Dirt his Face besmear;
Neglected Hair shall now luxuriant grow,
And by its Length their bitter Passion show;
Incessantly they shall their Loss complain,
And all their Life be one sad mournful Scene;
Thus they the never-dying Names shall save
Of antient Patriots from the conquer'd Grave. H. H.

Plutarch, undertaking to resolve this Difficulty, reports that the Men let their Hair grow, but the Women were shav'd; it being the Fashion for Men to wear their Hair short at other Times, and for Women to suffer theirs to grow (e): But, on the contrary, it plainly appears from the Instances already produced, and many others, that the 200 Of the Miscellany Customs of Greece.

Men frequently wore long Hair, which they cut off upon any great Calamity; nor can it be doubted that the Women frequently wore long Hair in Sorrow, since 'tis remark'd as a Badge of a Woman in Mourning, that she has her Hair dishevelled, and carelessly flowing about: Thus Ariadne bespeaks Thejus:

*Aspice demissos lugentis more capillos,
Et tunicas lacrymis sicut ab imbre graves.*

See, like a Mourner's, my dishevell'd Hair,
Wet, as with Rain, with Tears my Robes appear,

Terence likewise, the Scene of whose Fable is laid in Greece, has thus describ'd a Woman in Mourning (a);

*Texentem telam studiose ipsam offendimus,
Mediocriter vestitam veste lugubri,
Ejus annus causa, opinor, quæ erat mortua;
Sine auro tuâ ornata, ita uti quæ ornantur sibi,
Nulla mala re esse expositam muliebri,
Capillus passus, prelixus, circum caput
Reiectus negligenter.*————

We found her at the painful Loom employ'd,
Drest in a Mourning Habit, which she wore
For the old Woman's Death, as I suppose:
She was not trick'd up in a gaudy Sute,
Nor dress'd in Robes of Velvet, or of Gold,
Nor patch'd or painted to attract the Eyes
Of her Gallants, but with dishevell'd Hair
Carelessly o'er her Shoulders thrown.————

Wherefore two Things may be observ'd for the Solution of this Difficulty:

First, The Manner of being shav'd: For tho' to be shav'd, or trimmed by Barbers, was a Token of Chearfulness, yet those that cut off their own Hair, and that in a negligent and careless Manner, were look'd on as Mourners: Whence tho' Artemidorus reports, that no Man under the Pressure of Misfortunes was ever shav'd (b); yet he adds in the same Chapter, that for a Man to dream of shaving himself, was a Presage of some great Calamity; because Men in such Circumstances were wont to shave themselves.

Secondly, The different Fashions of several Nations are to be considered: For where it was customary to wear short Hair, there the Length of Hair was a Token of Mourning; but where long Hair was in Fashion, there Mourners shav'd themselves. 'Tis reported by Herodotus (c), and others (d), that the Argians having lost Thyrea to the

(a) Heautontimorumenos, Act II. Scen. 3. (b) Lib. I. cap. 23. (c) Lib. I. cap. 82.

the Spartans, made a Decree that their whole City should cut their Hair, and never permit it to grow again to its accustomed Length, till they recover'd that Place. The Spartans, on the contrary, using to wear their Hair short, put forth a Decree, that from that Time they should nourish their Hair, in reproach to their Enemies. Now in these Cities, when the Fashion was to wear short Hair, then Mourners were distinguish'd by long Hair; but, long Hair coming into Fashion, Mourners were thav'd.

4. 'Twas frequent for Persons overwhelm'd with Grief, and unable to bear up under it, to throw themselves upon the Earth, and roll in the Dust; and the more dirty the Ground was, the better it serv'd to defile them, and to expreis their Sorrow and Dejection. Thus Oeneus behaves himself upon the Death of his Son Meleager (a);

*Pulvere canitiem genitor, vultusque seniles
Fardat bumi fufus, spatiosumque increpat ævum.*

His hoary Head, and furrow'd Cheeks besmeared
With noisome Dirt, and chides the tedious Years.

Priam in Homer represents his lamenting of Hector in the same Posture (b);

Οὐ γὰρ σὺ μύσας ὄσσε ὑπὸ βλεφάροισιν ἱμοῖσιν,
Ἐξ ἧς ὑπὸ χερσὶν ἱμὸς παῖς ὤλεσε θυμῶν.
Ἀλλ' αἰὶν γυνῆκιν, ἢ κούδρα μυρία πύσσω,
Αὐλῆς ἐν χορτοῖσι κυλιόμενος κατὰ κόπρον.

Soft Sleep has never clos'd these watchful Eyes,
Since my dear Son became your fatal Prize;
But Day and Night I mourn my wretched Fate,
And on my countless Suff'rings ruminates,
Welt'ring in ev'ry filthy Place.——

H. H.

5. They cover'd their Heads with Ashes. Thus Achilles upon the News of Patroclus's Death (c), Ἀμφόληρσι δὲ χερσὶν ἱλὼν κόιν αἰθαλίσσαν,

Χιῶαλο κακκεφαλῆς.——

Then taking Ashes up with both his Hands,
He threw them on his Head.——

These Customs were likewise practis'd in the Eastern Countries, whence we find so frequent Mention of Penitents lying upon the Ground, and putting on Sackcloth and Ashes.

6. When

(a) Ovid. Metamorph. li. VIII. v. 528. (b) Iliad. v. 637. (c) Iliad. vi. V. 23.

6. When any Occasion requir'd their Attendance abroad, their Heads were muffled up, as appears from these Verses in the Epigram (a);

——— φᾶρ' γὰρ ἐπικρυμὰς ἀμφὶ πρόσωπα
Πήματα καὶ δίκνυσιν. ———

Her Face wrap'd in a Veil declar'd her Woes.

Whence Orestes, persuading Eleära to leave off Mourning, bids her be unveil'd;

——— ἀνακάλυπτε, ὦ κασίγνητον κάρτα,
Ἐκ δακρύων τ' ἀπιλθ' . ———

Pull off your Veil, dear Sister, and forbear
This Grief. ———

Nor was this the Fashion of Women only; for Adrastus came to Thebes after his Loss at Thebes, κατ' ὅρας χλαυδίου, wherefore Thebes speaks thus to him (b);

Αἰγ', ἐκκάλυψαι κράτα, παρὶς γόω.

Speak out, unfold your Head, refrain your Tears.

Thus likewise Haman, upon the Defeat of his Plot against Mordecai, is said to have basted to his House, mourning, and having his Head covered (c); and the Jews are represented by Jeremy as being ashamed and confounded, and covering their Heads in the Time of a grievous Famine (d).

7. Another Token of Dejection was, to decline their Heads upon their Hands. Whence Helen speaks thus of the calamitous Trojans (e);

Ἐπὶ δὲ κρατὶ χεῖρας ἴθνηκαν.

They with their Hands support their drooping Head.

8. They went softly, to express their Faintness, and Loss of Strength and Spirits. Thus Abab, King of Israel, being terrify'd by the Judgment Elias denounc'd against him, fasted, and lay in Sackcloth, and went softly (f): And Herzekiab, King of Judab, being told by the Prophet, that he was never to recover of a Distemper he then lay under, amongst other Expressions of Sorrow hath this: I shall go softly all my Years in the Bitterness of my Soul (g).

9. They

(a) Antholog. lib. V. cap. 33. (b) Eurip. Supplic. 110. (c) Esther, cap. vi. 12. (d) Cap. xiv. 3, 4. (e) Euripid. Helen. 377. (f) 1 Reg. xxi. 27. (g) Isaiah, cap. xxxviii. 15.

9. They beat th in Breasts and Thighs, and tore their Flesh, making Furrows in their Faces with their Nails; which Actions, tho' practis'd sometimes by Men, were more frequent among Women, whose Passions are more violent and ungovernable. Thus Nomus represents them (a),

—Φιλῶνται δὲ γυναῖκες
Στυγίῳ, ἐρεθίσαντες ὅντι ἄμυσσιν ὤματα.
Καὶ πόδεσσι ἐκόρυσσαν ἰκυσία δάκτυλα μαζῶν.

Women with Nails their Breasts and Faces tear,
And thus their boundless headstrong Grief declare.

In the same Manner Anna bewails her Sister Dido's unexpected Death (b);

*Audiit exanimis, trepidoque exterrita cursu,
Unguibus ora soror scedans & pectora palmis.*

Her Sister hearing, speeds with frightful Haste,
Tears her soft Cheeks, and beats her panting Breast.

Many Instances of this Nature occur in both Languages, the Custom being generally practis'd both in Greece and at Rome. Solon thought fit, amongst other Extravagancies at Funerals, to forbid this (c). The Lacedæmonians bore the Death of their private Relations with great Constancy and Moderation; but, when their Kings dy'd, had a barbarous Custom of meeting in vast Numbers, where Men, Women, and Slaves, all mix'd together, tore their Flesh from their Foreheads with Pins and Needles. The Design of this was not only to testify their Sorrow, but also to gratify the Ghosts of the Dead, who were thought to feed upon, and to delight in nothing so much as Blood, as Servius has prov'd from Varro (d).

10. They accus'd and curst their Gods: Hence Statius (e):

—*injustos rabidis pulsare querelis
Cælicolas solamen erit.*—

T' inveigh against the Gods with justest Rage,
And call them envious, may our Grief assuage.

Nor was this the Effect of extravagant Passion, or practis'd only by Persons of weaker Understandings in the Extremity of their Sorrow, but frequently done by Men of all Qualities, and that in the most grave and solemn Manner that could be, as appears from the same Poet (f):

—primæ—

Cicero de Legibus. (d) Æn. lib. III. Conf. Idem in Æn. Lib. XII. (e) Sylv.
lib. V. (f) Tib. III.

—primævique senes, & longo examine matres
Invidiam planxere Deis,—

The aged Sires, and Dames in num'rous Crouds
 Bewail, and curse the Envy of the Gods.

For, the Gods being thought subject to human Passions, 'twas very easy and natural for Men under Misfortunes to impeach them of Cruelty or Envy. Thus, when Hylas, Hercules's Darling, perish'd in the Waters, the Deities residing there were said to have been enamour'd with him, and to have stol'n him; and when any great and publick Blessing was taken away, the immortal Beings were said to envy Mankind to great Felicity. Many Instances might be produc'd to this Purpose, whereof I will only set down that remarkable one of Marcellus in Virgil (a):

Offendent terris hunc tantum Fata, neque ultra
Esse sinent: Nimum vobis Romana propago
Vija potens, superi, propria hæc si dona fuissent.

This Wonder of the World the Gods but show,
 Heav'n were impoverish'd, shou'd he stay below:
 Bless'd to Excess had been the Roman State,
 Had Heav'n these Gifts as lasting made as great. H. H.

Sometimes their impious Rage against the Gods proceeded to the pulling down their Altars, and sacking their Temples; an Example whereof we have in Neoptolemus, who being inform'd that Apollo was accessary to his Father's Death, took up a Resolution to demolish the Delpick Temple, and perish'd in the Attempt (b).

11. Another Custom they had of drawling out their Words, and with Tears repeating the Interjection, i, i, i, i. Hence (if we may credit the Scholiast (c) upon Aristophanes) Funeral Lamentations were called ἰαγῶι, Elegies.

12. When publick Magistrates, or Persons of Note dy'd, or any publick Calamity happen'd, all publick Meetings were intermitted, the Schools of Exercise, Baths, Shops, Temples, and all Places of Concourse were shut up, and the whole City put on a Face of Sorrow: Thus we find the Athenians bewailing their Loss of Socrates, not long after they had sentenc'd him to Death (d).

13. They had Mourners and Musicians to increasè the Solemnity: Which Custom seems to have been practis'd in most Parts of the World. The Roman Practice are remarkable enough, and the Eastern Countries observ'd the same Practice; whence we find mention of Mourners going about the Streets, and Mourning Women, in several Places of the Sacred Writings. Jeremy, having foretold the Calamity of the Jews, advises wives to consider, and call for the Mourning Women, that they may make haste, and take up a Wailing for us, that our Eyes may run down with Tears, and our Eye-lids gush out with Waters (a). These Homer calls Θρηνην εξαρχας, because they endeavoured to excite Sorrow in all the Company by beating their Breasts, and counterfeiting all the Actions of the most real and passionate Grief. They are likewise termed ἀοιδοί, πρῶσοιδοί, &c. from the Songs they sung at Funerals; of these there seem to have been three, one in the Procession, another at the Funeral-Pile, a third at the Grave: These were commonly termed ὀλοφύρμοι, λοιδοί, ἀλνιστοί, tho' the two last seem not peculiar in Funeral-Songs, but applicable to others: We find them sometimes call'd τάλιμοι, from Iakemus, one of Clio's Sons, and the first Author of these Compositions; for the same Reason Songs at Marriages were termed ὕμνιοι, from his Brother Hymenæus: Funeral Dirges were also called τάλιμοι, whence τηλιμίζω is expounded in Hesychius by Θρηνῆν, to mourn; and τηλιμίστρια is another Name for Mourning Women: Hence τὰ ταλιμῶδη signify empty and worthless Things, and ταλήμων ψυχρότερος is proverbially applied to insipid and senseless Compositions (b); for the Songs used on these Occasions were usually very mean and trifling: whence that Saying of Plautus (c):

(a) Æn. VI. 805.

(d) Diogenes

Hæ non sunt nugæ, non enim mortuaria.

These are no Trifles, since they're not compos'd
For th' hideous Chanting of a Funeral.

What the Design of their Musical Instruments was, is not agreed; some will have them intended to affright the Ghosts and Furies from the Soul of the deceas'd Person; others, agreeably to Plato and Pythagoras's Notions, would have them to signify the Soul's Departure into Heaven, where they fancied the Motion of the Spheres made a Divine and Eternal Harmony; others say, they were design'd to divert the Sorrow of the dead Man's surviving Relations: Lastly, the most probable Opinion seems to be, that they were intended to excite Sorrow, which was the Reason that the Lyra was never used at such Solemnities, as being consecrated to Apollo, and fit only for Pæans and chearful Songs. Admetus indeed commands the Flute likewise to be banish'd out of his City upon the Death of Alcestis (d):

Αὐλαὶ δὲ μὴ κατ' αἴγυ. μὴ λυρας πτύπῳ ἔγω, σιλήνας δώδιχ' ἐκπληρυμένας, οὐ γὰρ τιν' ἄλλοι φίλτεροι δάψω νεκρῶν τῶδ'.

Let not the pleasing Flute, nor sprightly Lyre,
Till Phæbe twelve Times has repair'd her Horns,

But hence we are only to collect, that the Antients had different Sorts of Flutes, some of which were proper in Times of Mirth, others in Times of Mourning; for it appears by many Examples, that some of their αὐλοί, or tibiae, were of all other Instruments the most common at Funerals. Hence Statius in his Description of young Archemorus's Funeral (a):

*Tum signum luctus cornu grave mugit adunco
Tibia, cui teneros suctum traducere manes
Lege Phrygum mœsta: Pelopem monstrasse ferebant
Exequiale sacrum, carmenque minoribus umbris
Utile.*—

In doleful Notes the Phrygian Flute complains,
And moves our Pity with its doleful Strains:
The Phrygian Flute of old us'd to convey
'The Infant Souls on their unerring Way;
Which Custom into th' World first Pelops brought,
And th' unknown Use of Fun'ral Dirges taught;
Dirges, whose pow'rful Sounds were thought to speed,
And smoothe the Passage of the younger Dead. H. H.

Some indeed will have the Lydian Flutes more suitable to Funerals, the Phrygian, of which Statius speaks, to agree better with Mirth, and Cheerfulness, and to be used only at Funerals of Infants or Youths, which were ordinarily solemnized in a manner quite different from those of grown Persons, which they think confirm'd by Statius's Words; but as these may bear a quite different Sense, not the Instruments, but the Song whereof he there speaks, being proper for the Funeral of Persons under Age; so it appears farther, that the most common Flutes used at these Solemnities were of the Phrygian Fashion, tho' perhaps neither the Lydian, nor some others might be wholly excluded: Hence nēnia, which is the Latin Word for Funeral Dirges, seems to have been deriv'd from the Greek νenia, which is used by Hipponax; and (however Scaliger deduces it from the Hebrew) affirm'd by Pollux to be of Phrygian Original; νευρίζουσαι is of the same Descend, and expounded by Θερμύδ. The Carian Flute was likewise used on these Occasions, whence the Musicians and Mourners were termed Kapivai (b), and Καρινὴ μῦσα is a Funeral-Song; now this was the very same with that used by the Phrygians, from whom Pollux tells us it was first convey'd into Caria (c). I shall only mention two more; the first is the Myfian Flute, an Instrument likewise fit for Sorrow: Hence, Æschylus (d):

(d) Pasf.

Καὶ σπῖ ἀποδόν, καὶ σπῖ τὸ Μυσίον.

He beats his Breasts, and sounds the Myfian Flute.

The last is the Lydian Flute, which, as Plutarch reports out of Aristoxenus, was first applied to this Use by Olympus at Python's Death (a).

C H A P. VI.

Of their Manner of Interring and Burning the Dead.

IT would be needless to prove that both Interring and Burning were practis'd by the Grecians; yet whether of these Customs has the best Claim to Antiquity, may perhaps admit of a Dispute. But it seems probable, that however the latter Grecians were better affected to the Way of Burning, yet the Custom of the most primitive Ages was to inter their Dead. 'Tis plain the Athenians, however afterwards addicted to Burning, us'd Interment in Cecrops's Reign, if any Credit may be allow'd to Cicero (b); and the Scholiast upon Homer (c) positively affirms, that Interring was more antient than Burning, which he reports to have been first introduced by Hercules. However it appears that the Custom of Burning was receiv'd in the Trojan War, and both then and afterwards generally practis'd by the Grecians: infomuch that when Lucian enumerates the various Methods used by different Nations in disposing of their Dead, he expressly assigns Burning to Greece, and Interment to the Persians (d). But this is not so to be understood, as if the Grecians in the Ages he speaks of never interr'd their Dead, or thought it unlawful so to do, but only that the other Custom was more generally receiv'd by them. Socrates in Plato's Phædon speaks expressly of both Customs; and it appears that some of them look'd on the Custom of Burning as cruel and inhuman; whence a Poet cited by Eusebius (e) introduces a Person exclaiming against it, and calling out upon Prometheus to haste to his Assistance, and steal, if possible, from Mortals the Fire he had given them. The Philosophers were divided in their Opinions about it; those who thought human Bodies were compounded of Water, Earth, or the four Elements, inclin'd to have them committed to the Earth: But Heraclitus with his Followers, imagining Fire to be the first Principle of all Things, affected Burning. For every one thought it the most reasonable Method, and most agreeable to Nature, so to dispose of Bodies, as they might soonest be reduc'd to their first Principles.

Eu-

(a) De Musica. (b) De Legib. lib. II. (c) Iliad. a'. (d) De Lucu.
(e) Iliad. a'. p. 32.

Eustathius (a) assigns two Reasons why Burning came to be of so general Use in Greece: The first is, because Bodies were thought to be unclean after the Soul's Departure, and therefore were purified by Fire; whence Euripides speaks of Clytemnestra:

——— οὐρὴ καθήγυρας δίμας.

The Body's purify'd by Fire.———

The second Reason is, That the Soul, being separated from the gross and unactive Matter, might be at Liberty to take its Flight to the Heavenly Mansions (b). Wherefore the Indian Philosophers, out of Impatience to expect the Time appointed by Nature, us'd to consume themselves in a Pile erected for that Purpose, and so loose their Souls from their Confinements. A remarkable Example hereof we have in Calanus, who followed Alexander out of India, and, finding himself indisposed, obtain'd that King's Leave to prevent the Growth of his Distemper, by committing himself to the Flames (c). Hercules was purified from the Dregs of Earth by the same Means before his Reception into Heaven. And it seems to have been the common Opinion, that Fire was an admirable Expedient to refine the Cœlestial Part of Man, by separating from it all gross and corruptible Matter, and the impure Qualities which attend it. Thus Scylla, being slain by Hercules, was rais'd from the Dead, and rendered immortal by her Father Phorcys (d):

——— ἦν ἀδὴς πατὴρ
Σάρκας καλὰιβων λοφρίσιν δομήσατο,
Λίπλυνι ἔ τρέμσαν ὑδαίναι θιάν.

——— into whose stiffen'd Limbs
Phorcys by quick'ning Flames new Life inspir'd,
And rais'd her high above the Fears of Death.

The Piles whereon they burnt dead Bodies were called συσταί. They seem not to have been erected in any constant Form, or to have consisted of the same Materials; these being vary'd as Time and Place, and other Circumstances requir'd.

The Body was plac'd upon the Top of the Pile, but was rarely burn'd without Company; for, besides the various Animals they threw upon the Pile, we seldom find a Man of Quality consumed without a Number of Slaves or Captives: Besides these, all Sorts of precious Ointments and Perfumes were poured into the Flames. Many Instances of this Nature might be produced out of the antient Poets, but I shall only set down the following one out of Homer's Description of Patroclus's Funeral (e):

Ποίνσας

A spacious Pile the mournful Grecians made,
 And on the Top his comely Body laid;
 Next stripp'd the Sheep and Oxen there, that stood
 In solemn Ranks before the flaming Wood.
 But, brave Achilles, as above the rest
 Concern'd, more Signs of Care and Love express'd;
 Straight off the Victims all the Fat he flay'd,
 And over all the much-lov'd Corpse it spread:
 Then plac'd their Carcasses around the Pile,
 And Vessels fill'd with Honey and with Oil;
 Next deeply groaning, with becoming Haste,
 Four sprightly Courtiers on the Pile he cast;
 Nine lovely Dogs he at his Table fed,
 And two of these upon the Pile he laid;
 Twelve valiant Trojan Captives next he slew,
 And on the Pile the mangled Bodies threw. H. H.

The Reason why the Body was cover'd with the Fat of Beasts was, that it might consume the sooner (a); for it was look'd on as a singular Blessing to be quickly reduced to Ashes: Wherefore in Funerals, where Numbers of Bodies were burnt on the same Pile, they were so dispos'd that those of moist Constitutions, and easy to be inflam'd, being proportion'd to Bodies of contrary Tempers, should increase the Vehemence of the Fire; whence Plutarch (b) and Macrobius (c) have observed, that for ten Men it was the Custom to put in one Woman.

Soldiers usually had their Arms burnt with them: Wherefore Egeonor in Homer begs this Favour of Ulysses (d):

Ἄλλα

(a) Eustatius. (b) Sympos. Lib. III. Quæst. IV. (c) Saturn. Lib. VII. cap. 7. (d) Odys. N. v. 74.

Ἀλλὰ με κακῆται ἐν τύχῃσιν ἅσσα μοι ἴσιν.

Let all the Arms I have be with me burnt.

It seems likewise to have been the Custom for the Garments they had worn in the Time of their Lives, to be thrown into the Pile. Some were so solicitous about this, that they gave Orders in their last Wills to have it done: And the Athenians were, as in all other Observances which related any way to Religion, so in this the most profuse of all the Grecians; insomuch that some of their Law-givers were forced to restrain them, by severe Penalties, from defrauding the Living by their Liberality to the Dead. Lycurgus allow'd nothing to be bury'd with Bodies beside one red Garment, or, at the most, a few Branches of Olive (a); nor these neither, except the Person had been eminent for Virtue and Fortitude. Solon allow'd three Garments and one Ox (b). At Chæronea those that were convicted of Extravagance at Funerals, were punish'd as soft and effeminate by the Censors of Women (c).

The Pile was lighted by some of the dead Person's nearest Relations or Friends, who made Prayers and Vows to the Winds to assist the Flames, that the Body might quickly be reduc'd to Ashes. Thus Achilles, having fir'd Patroclus's Pile, intercedes with Boreas and Zephyrus to fly to his Assistance with their Joint-forces (d);

Οὐδὲ πῦρ Πατρόκλου καίετο τιθιμιάτο,
 Ἐνδ' αὐτ' ἄλλ' ὠνόησε ποδάρεος δῖος Ἀχιλλεύς,
 Σταῖς ἀπ' αὐτοῦ πύρης δοιοῖς ἤρ' ἀνέμοισι
 Βορέη κ' Ζεφύρου, κ' ἐπίσχιλλο ἱερά καλὰ,
 Πολλὰ δὲ κ' ἐπύδων χρυσίῳ δῖκαϊ λιταίνων
 Ἐλθίμην, ὅφρα τάχιγα πυρὶ φλογισθῇατο κερὸν,
 Ὡς τ' ἰσοσύοιτο καήμεναι.

When we perceiv'd the Flames t'abate their Force,
 Unable to consume th'unhappy Corse,
 Some Distance from the Pile the Hero stands,
 The golden Chalice fills his royal Hands,
 And there to Boreas and to Zeph'rus pray'd,
 And with each Deity solemn Cov'nants made,
 That grateful Victims should their Altars stain
 And choicest Off'rings load the joyful Fane,
 If with their kinder Blasts they'd fan the Fire,
 And with new Force the languid Flames inspire,
 That they to Earth the Corps might soon reduce. H. H.

At the Funerals of Generals and great Officers, the Soldiers, with the rest of the Company, made a solemn Procession three Times round the Pile, to express their Respect to the Dead. Thus Homer's Grecians (e);

Οἱ

(a) Plutarchus Lycurgo. (b) Idem Solone. (c) Idem ibidem. (d) Iliad. ψ.

Lamenting. ———

This Action was called in Greek μυρμήνη, in Latin, decurſio; we find frequent Mention of it in the Poets. Statius has elegantly deſcrib'd it in his Poem on the Theban War (a):

*Tunc ſeptem numero turbas (centenus ubique Surgit eques) verſis ducunt inſignibus ipſi
Grajugenæ reges, luſtrantque more ſiniſtro
Orbe regum, & ſtantes inclinant pulvere flammæ:
Ter caruus egere ſinus, illiſque telis
Tela ſonant; quater horrendum pepulere fragorem
Arma, quater mollem ſamularum brachia plantum.*

Seven goodly Troops the ſad Decurſion made,
In each of which an hundred Horſe appear'd,
And theſe (a Poſture fitting thoſe that mourn'd)
The Captains led with Enſigns downwards turn'd:
Towards the Left they march; on th' Pile they gaze,
Whileſt Clouds of Duſt the thronging Horſes raiſe,
Whoſe much-prevailing Force depreſs the riſing Blaze: }
Three Times they all the burning Pile ſurround, Whileſt Darts ſtrike Darts, and make a frightful Sound;
Four Times the Din of claſhing Arms invades
The ſuff'ring Air, four Times the mournful Maids
Loudly lament, each ſtrikes her panting Breaſt,
And Pity in us moves for the Deceas'd. H. H.

Where it may be obſerv'd, that in this Decurſion the Motion was towards the Left-hand, by which they expreſſed Sorrow; as, on the contrary, Motion to the Right was a Sign of Joy. Thus the ſame Author (b);

———*Hic luctus abolere, novique
Funeris auſpiciũ vates, quanquam omnia ſentit
Vera, jubet, dextro gyro, & vibrantibus baſtis
Huc redeant.* ———

The Prieſt, tho' by the boding Signs he knew

These Motions were accompany'd with Shouts and Sound of Trom-pet, as we learn from Valerius Flaccus (a) :

*Inde ter armatos Minyis referentibus orbes
Concussi tremuere rogi, ter inborruit æther
Lueticum clangente tuba, jecere supremo
Tum clamore facis.*—————

Three Marches round the Pile the Minyæ make ;
Their weighty Strides the well-pil'd Structure shake :
Thrice doleful Sounds from hollow Tubes are sent ;
The Clanger wounds the troubled Firmament ;
With Torches next accompany'd with Shouts,
They light the Pile.—————

H. H.

Which last Words seem to intimate the Decarfon's being made before the Pile was lighted ; whereas it appears from other Authors to have been made whilst the Pile was burning : Thus Virgil tells us in express Words (b) ;

*Ter circum accensos cincti fulgentibus armis
Decurrere rogos, ter mæstum funeris ignem
Lustravere in equis, ululatusque ore dedere.*

Well-arm'd thrice round the Pile they march'd on Foot,
Thrice round it rode, and with a dismal Shout
Survey'd the rolling Flames.—————

During the Time the Pile was burning, the dead Person's Friends stood by it pouring forth Libations of Wine, and calling upon the De-ceas'd. Thus Achilles attended all Night at Patroclus's Funeral (c) :

————— Καὶ πάνυχον ὥκους Ἀχιλλεύς
Χρυσὴν ἐκ κρητῆρος ἔχων δόπας ἀμφικύπελλον·
Οἶνον ἀφυσσάμενος χάμαδις χεῖρ, δῖον δὲ γαῖαν,

When the Pile was burnt down, and the Flames had ceas'd, they extinguish'd the Remains of the Fire with Wine; which being done, they collected the Bones and Ashes. Thus Homer relates of the Trojans at Heclor's Funeral (a) :

Πρῶτον μὲν κατὰ πυρκαϊὴν ἦσαν αἶθροι οἶον
Πᾶσαν, ποσσαν ἔπεσχε πυρὸς μὲν· αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ
Ὀΐα λευκά λεγόντο κασίγνητοι ἑταροί τε.

About the Pile the thronging People came,
And with black Wine quench'd the remaining Flame ;
His Brothers then, and Friends search'd every-where,
And gather'd up his snowy Bones with Care.

Mr. Congreve.

From which Words it appears, that this Office was perform'd by near Relations. To which Practice Tibullus likewise alludes :

— Non hic mihi mater,
Quæ legat in mæstos ossa perusta sinus.

Nor was my dear indulgent Mother by,
Who to her Breast my mould'ring Bones wou'd lay.

The Bones were sometimes wash'd with Wine, and (which commonly followed Washing) anointed with Oil. Agamemnon is introduc'd by Homer informing Achilles how this Ceremony had been perform'd to him (b) :

Αὐτὰρ ἐπεὶ δὴ ἔϕλοξ ἦνυσιν Ἡφαίστιο
Ἡῶθεν δὴ το λίσσεται λευκὰ ὄσ'· Ἀχιλλεῦ,
Ὅν ἔν ἀκρήτω κ' ἀλειφαί.—

But when the Flame your Body had consum'd,
With Oils and Odours we your Bones perfum'd,
And wash'd with unmix'd Wine.——

Patroclus's Remains were inclosed in Fat (c) :

Κλαίοντες δ' ἑτάροιο ἐπέσ' ὄσ'· Ὀΐα λευκὰ
Ἐλλογον ἐς χρυσὴν φιάλην κ' δίπλακα δμῶν.

His mournful Friends in Fat his Bones inclos'd,
Then in a Golden Urn they them repos'd.

It may here be demanded, how the Reliques of the Body were distinguish'd from those of the Beasts and Men burnt with it? In Answer to this Enquiry (omitting those groundless Stories of the Stone Amiantus, and Indian Hemp, which could not be consumed by Fire) I shall produce two Instances, whereby it appears the Method they took to effect this, was by placing the Body in the Middle of the Pile, whereas the Men and Beasts burnt with it lay on the Sides. Thus Achilles tells the Grecians, it would be easy to discover the Remains of Patroclus (a) :

Πρῶτον μὲν κατὰ πυρκαϊῇν (βίσσας' αἶθερος θύω
Πάσαι, ὅπως οὖν ἴσχυς πυρὸς μὲν αἶτάρ ἱππία
Ὅσα Πατρόκλοιο Μυοῖτιάδαο λήγῃ.
Εὖ διαγιγνώσκουσιν, ἀριφραδία δὲ τίττεται,
Εν μίσσει γὰρ ἱκίλο πυρῇ, τοὶ δ' ἄλλοι ἀμυθῇ
Ἐσχατὴ καίοντ' ἱππὶ μὲν ἴπποι τε καὶ ἄνδρες.

First with black Wine extinguish all the Flames,
Quench ev'ry glowing Cinder that remains ;
Then let us gather up, 'tis eas'y done,
The unmix'd Bones of brave Menestius' Son.
Your nicer Care need not be here express'd ;
You'll soon distinguish his from all the rest :
For in the midst o'th' Pile his Corpse was plac'd
Whilst Men and Beasts, promiscuously cast,
Lay frying on the outward Parts. —————

H. H.

Achilles's Bones are said to have been distinguish'd the same Way (b) :

Δὲ τότε πυρκαϊῇ οἶνω (βίσσας, ὅσα δ' αὐτῷ
Φάνειν' ἀριφραδίας· ἱππὶ ἔχ' ἱτίστοισιν ὅμοια
Ἦν, ἀλλ' οἷα γίγαντο αἰτίαι. ὅδ' μὲν ἄλλα
Σὺν κείνοις ἱμῖμιλλο, ἱππὶ βόας, ἠδὲ καὶ ἴπποι
Καὶ παῖδες Τρώων μίγδα κταμένοισι καὶ ἄλλοις
Βαῖον ἄπ' αὐτοῦ κίοντο περὶ ἱκίλον· ὅς δ' ἐν μίσσει
Ριπῇ ὅφ' Ἡφαίστιο διδμημένῳ οἶον ἱκίνο.

When the remaining Flames they'd quench'd with Wine,
Which were the Hero's Bones was plainly seen ;
Not like the rest which fell his Sacrifice,
But of a larger and gigantick Size ;
Nor could his Bones be with the Vulgar mixt,
Since his rich Corpse remote from them was fixt ;
The captive Trojans, Beasts and Horses slain,
Upon the Out-works of the Pile were lain,

The Bones thus discover'd, they seem to have gather'd the Ashes which lay close to them; nor does it appear there was any other Way to distinguish the Remains of the Men from common Ashes.

The Bones and Ashes, thus collected, were reposit'd in Urns, call'd κάλπαι, φιαλαι, κρυσσοί, λαρνακες, ὀροθήκαι, ὀροδοχίαι, σοφοί, &c. The Matter they consist'd of was different, either Wood, Stone, Earth, Silver or Gold, according to the Quality of the Deceas'd. When Persons of eminent Virtue died, their Urns were frequently adorn'd with Flowers and Garlands; but the general Custom seems to have been to cover them with Cloths till they were deposited in the Earth, that the Light might not approach them. This is particularly remark'd in Homer's Funerals, as when he speaks of Hector's Bones (a):

Καὶ τὰ γι χρυσοῖν εἰς λάρνακα θῆκαν ἰλόντες,
Πορφύρεοις πέπλοισι καλυψάμεν μαλακοῖσιν.

—An Urn of Gold was brought Wrapt in soft Purple Palls, and richly wrought;
In this the sacred Ashes were interr'd.

The same Ceremony was perform'd towards Patroclus's Urn in the preceding Iliad:

Εν πλοίσῃσι δὲ θύλῃς ἱανῶ λιτὴν κάλυψαν.

Within the Tent his costly Urn was laid,
And over it a Linen Cloth was spread.

Concerning their Interment it may be observ'd, that their Bodies lay in their Coffins with the Faces upwards, it being thought more proper, and perhaps more conducive to the Welfare of the Deceas'd, to have their Faces towards Heaven, the Abode of the Cælestial Gods, and Fountain of Light, than the dark Mansions of the Infernal Deities: Whence Diogenes the Cynick, being ask'd in what Posture he would be interr'd, answer'd, εἰς πρόσωπον, with my Face downwards; the Reason of which being demanded of him, he reply'd, that in a short Time the World would be turn'd upside down (b); which Answer seems design'd to ridicule the Grecian Superstition in this Point.

It may be observ'd farther, that the Heads of the deceas'd Persons were so plac'd in the Grave, that they might look towards the Rising Sun (c). Plutarch informs us indeed, that the Megarensians placed their Dead towards the East; and the Athenians, whose Custom seems herein

(a) Iliad. ὡ. fine.

(b) Laertius Diogene.

(c) Thucydides Scholias.

herein to be the same with the rest of the Greeks, towards the West (a); and Ælian, as far as concerns the Athenians, agrees with him (b): But it must be consider'd, that to situate the Face so as it should look toward the Rising Sun, 'twas necessary the Head should lie towards the West; whence also the Head, or uppermost Part of the Sepulchre, being to face the Rising Sun, was likewise placed at the West-End.

Before I conclude this Chapter, it will not be improper to add, that the Megarensians commonly put two, three, or four Carcasses into the same Sepulchre; but at Athens one Sepulchre, much less one Casket or Urn, seldom contain'd above one Carcase (c); which seems to have been commonly observ'd by the rest of the Greeks; only those that were join'd by near Relation or Affection, were usually bury'd together, it being thought inhuman to part these in Death, whom no Accidents of Life could separate. Many Examples of this Nature occur in ancient Writers. Hence Agathia's Epigram concerning two Twins:

Εἰς δὲ ἀδελφὸς ὅδ' ἐνέχει τάφος ἑνὶ γὰρ ἐπίσχεον
 Ἡμεῖς καὶ γυνὴς οἱ ὅσοι καὶ Σαυάτα.

Two Brothers lie interr'd within this Urn,
 Both dy'd together, as together born.

Lovers thought this no small Accession to their Happiness: Thisbe's last Request was, that she might be interr'd with Pyramus (d):

Hoc tamen amborum verbis estote rogati,
 O multum miseri meus illiusque parentes;
 Ut, quos certus amor, quos hora novissima junxit,
 Componi tumulo non invidetis eodem.

At length our thrice unhappy Parents, hear,
 And grant us this our last most earnest Pray'r;
 That we, whom Love and Death together join'd,
 As both one Fate, one common Tomb may find. H. II.

Admetus in Euripides declares his Resolution to lie in the same Coffin with his Wife Alceis (e):

Εν ταῖσιν αὐταῖς γὰρ μ' ἐπισκήψω κείροισι
 Σὺ τε Σῆμα παύσῃς.

Close by thy Side I'll in thy Urn be laid.

Patroclus, appearing after Death to Achilles, begs of him, that he would reposit his Bones in the same Urn he design'd for his own (f):
 And

(a) Solone. (b) Var. H. A. Lib. VII. cap. 19. (c) Plutarchus Solone. (d) Ovid, Me. am. IV. v. 154. (e) Alcegid. v. 365. (f) Iliad. 4.

And when Achilles was dead, we find the Grecians put the Ashes of his Friend Antilochus in the same Urn with his; but those of Patroclus they not only reposit in the same Vessel, but mingled them together. Thus the Oracle of Agamemnon tells him at their Meeting in the Shales below (a);

Εν τῇ τοι κείται δαυέδρια Φαίδιμ' Ἀχιλλεύ,
Μίγδα δὲ Πατρόκλοιο Μυρτιάδαο θ' ὅμιλον.
Χωρὶς δ' Ἀντιλόχοιο, τὸν ἔχοντα τις ἀπαρτῶν
Τὰν ἄλλων ἱστᾶν μετὰ Πατρόκλῳ γι' ὁμοῖα.

Within this Urn your sad Remains are laid,
Mixt with the Bones of your Patroclus dead;
In the same Urn Antilochus doth lie,
His Bones not mix'd with yours, but plac'd hard by;
For much you did that worthy Chief esteem,
Only Patroclus was preferr'd to him.

Halcyone's Love carry'd her still farther; for, her Husband Ceyx having perish'd in a Tempest at Sea, she comforts herself in this, that, tho' his Body could not be found, yet their Names should be inscrib'd upon the same Monument, and, as it were, embrace each other (b);

—Crudeliior ipso

Sit mihi mens pelago, si vitam ducere nitar
Longius, & tanto pugnam superesse dolori.
Sed neque pugnabo, nec te, miserande, relinquam;
En tibi nunc solum veniam comes, inque sepulchro
Si non urna, tamen junget nos litera, si non Ossibus ossa meis, at nomen nomine tangam.

But I more cruel than the Sea should be,
Could I have Thoughts to live depriv'd of thee?
Could I but dare to struggle with my Pain,
And fondly hope behind thee to remain?
Ah! no, dear Ceyx, I'll not leave thee so,
I'll not contend with my too pressing Woe,
Where-e'er you lead Halcyone will go:
And now at length, my dearest Lord, I come,
And though we are deny'd one common Tomb,
Though in one Urn our Ashes be not laid,
On the same Marble shall our Names be read:
In am'rous Folds the circling Words shall join,
And shew how much I lov'd, how you was only mine.

C H A P. VII.

Of their Sepulchres, Monuments, Cenotaphia, &c.

THE primitive Greeks were bury'd in Places prepar'd for that Purpose in their own Houses (a). The Thebans had once a Law, that no Person should build a House without providing a Repository for his Dead. It seems to have been very frequent, even in later Ages, to bury within their Cities; the most publick and frequented Places whereof seem to have been the best stored with Monuments: But this was a Favour not ordinarily granted, except to Men of great Worth, and publick Benefactors; to such as had rais'd themselves above the common Level, and were Examples of Virtue to succeeding Ages, or had deserv'd by some eminent Service to have their Names honour'd by Posterity. The *Magnesian*s rais'd a Sepulchre for Themistocles in the Midst of their Forum (b); Euphron had the same Honour at Corinth (c); and it appears to have been common for Colonies to have buried their Leaders, under whose Conduct they possess'd themselves of new Habitations, in the Midst of their Cities (d).

Temples were sometimes made Repositories for the Dead, whereof the primitive Ages afford us many Instances; insomuch that some have been of Opinion, that the Honours paid to the Dead were the first Cause of erecting Temples (e). Nor were later Times wholly void of such Examples, for the Platæans are said to have bury'd Euclides in the Temple of Diana Euclia, for his pious Labour in going a thousand Stadia in one Day, to fetch some of the hallow'd Fire from Delpbi (f): From which, with many other Instances, it appears that this was look'd on as a very great Favour, and granted as a Reward to publick Services. Sometimes it was desir'd for Protection, as we learn from Medea's Case, who interr'd her two Sons in Juno Acræa's Temple, to secure them from the Malice of her Enemies (g), as hath been already observed.

But the general Custom in later Ages especially, was to bury their Dead without their Cities, and chiefly by the Highways: Which seems to be done, either to preserve themselves from the noisome Smells wherewith Graves might infect their Cities, or to prevent the Danger their Houses were expos'd to, when Funeral Piles were set on Fire: Or, it may be, to fill the Minds of Travellers with the Thoughts of Mortality; or to excite themselves to encounter any Dangers, rather than permit an Enemy to approach their Walls, and despoil the Monuments, or disturb the Peace of the Dead. Lastly, to trouble trouble you with no more different Opinions; others think it most probable, that this Custom was first introduc'd by a Fear of contracting Pollution from the Dead, of which I have already treated in a foregoing Chapter.

But Lycurgus, as in most of his Institutions, so herein too differ'd from the rest of the Grecian Law-givers; for, to cut off the Superstition of Burying-places, he allow'd his Lacedæmonians to bury their Dead within their City, and even round about their Temples, to the end their Youth, by being us'd to such Spectacles, might not be afraid to see a dead Body; and withal to rid them of the Conceit, that to touch a Corpse, or tread upon a Grave, would defile a Man (a).

Every Parish was wont to have their proper Burying-place, to be deprived whereof was reputed one of the greatest Calamities that could befall them: Wherefore when the Lacedæmonians were resolv'd to conquer the Messenians, or lose all their Lives in the Attempt, we read that they bound Tickets to their right Arms, containing their own and their Fathers Names; that if all should perish in the Battle, and their Bodies be so mangled as not to be distinguished, those Notes might certify what Family they belong'd to, that so they might be carried to the Sepulchres of their Ancestors (b). The rest of the Grecians had the same Custom; whence (to trouble you with only one Instance more) there being a Law, that such as preserv'd not their Inheritance, should be depriv'd of the Sepulchre of their Fathers, Democritus, having spent his Estate in the Study of Philosophy, was in danger of incurring that Penalty (c).

The common Graves of primitive Greece were nothing but Caverns dug in the Earth (d), and call'd κύματα; but those of later Ages were more curiously wrought; they were commonly pav'd with Stone, had Arches built over them, and were adorn'd with no less Art and Care than the Houses of the Living, insomuch that Mourners commonly retir'd into the Vaults of the Dead, and there lamented over their Relations for many Days and Nights together, as appears from Petronius's Story of the Ephesian Matron.

Kings and great Men were anciently buried in Mountains, or at the Feet of them (e). Thus Aventinus Sylvius was interr'd in the Hill which receiv'd its Name from him (f). Virgil reports the same of Dercennus (g);

— Fuit ingens monte sub alto
Regis Dercenni terreno ex aggere bustum.

A Tomb beneath a mighty Mount they rear'd
For King Dercennus.

Whence likewise appears the Custom of raising a Mount upon the Graves of great Persons, which Lucan has thus express'd, speaking of the Egyptians (h):

(a) Plutarchus Lycurgo. (b) Iustinus, Lib. III. (c) Laertius Democrito.
(d) Etymologici Auctor. vpla. (e) Seruius Æn. XI. (f) Aurelius de Orig.
Genit. Roman. (g) Loc. cit. (h) Lib. VIII.

Ei ragum cineres extraxerō monte quiescunt.

Beneath a Mount their Monarch's Ashes rest.

This consisted sometimes of Stone ; whence Theseus in Euripides tells Hercules, the Athenian would honour his Corpse ——— Λαίνοισι τ' ἐξογκάμασι.

With high-built Monuments of Stone.———

But the common Materials were nothing but Earth ; whence 'tis usually call'd χῶμα, Thus Euripides (a) ;

——— Ὀρθὸν χῶμ' Ἀχιλλεὺς τάφω.

The Mount which o'er Achilles' Tomb was rais'd.

To cast it up Homer calls χεῖν σῆμα, speaking of Hector's Tomb (b) :

Χεῖαντες τὸδε σῆμα, πάλιν κίον,

Having a Tomb of Earth rais'd o'er his Grave,
They all departed.———

The same Words he us'd before in the Description of Patroclus's Funeral (c). Antipater terms it χωμινοθαί τάφος :

Ἡρώε Πριάμω Βαίδε τάφω· ὅτι τοῖς
Λεῖον, ἀλλ' ἐχθρῶν χερσὶν ἐχωμιύμεθα (d).

Under this fordid Tomb doth Priam rest,
Not that his Worth did not deserve the best,
But 'cause his Enemies it rais'd.

'Tis sometimes express'd by the more general Names of ὀγκῶσαι, ἐψῶσαι, &c. Thus Euripides, ——— Μητέρ' ἐψῶμεν τάφω,

O'er my dead Mother's Corpse a Tomb I rais'd.

The Author of the following Epigram has such another Expression (e) :

Λοκρίδ' ἐν νέμῳ σμικρῷ νέκυν Ησίοδοιο
Νύμφαι κρηναῶν λῶσαι ἀπὸ σφίσιων,
Καὶ τάφον ἐψῶσαίη.

What Care and Love the Nymphs to Hesiod shew'd?

They bath'd his lifeless Corpse, and o'er't a Tomb they rear'd.

Whence the Latin Tumulus, which in its proper Sense imports no more than a Hillock, came to signify a Grave.

Whatever the Materials were, they were usually laid together with Care and Art: Thus Homer witnesseth of Patroclus's Tomb (a):

Τορυσσάτο δὲ σῆμα, θυμὸν δὲ τι πορδαλόν
Ἀμφὶ περιήν, εἶθαρ δὲ χυλὴν ἐπὶ γαίαν ἔχουσιν,

They inclos'd the Ground wherein the Grave was made,
And cast in Earth upon it.—

Where by θυμὸν some understand the lorica, or inclos'd Ground round the Grave, sometimes term'd by the metaphorical Names of Θυρῖνος, γυῖος, &c. and called by Pausanias περιοικεδομή, and πρηπίς, by others σκιπη, &c. For the antient μνημεῖα were composed of two Parts, one was the Grave or Tomb, which was likewise term'd μνημεῖον in a strict Sense of the Word, and is known by several other Names, mostly taken from its Form, as σπηλαιον, τύμβος, &c. The second Part was the Ground surrounding the Grave, which was fenced about with Pales or Walls, but usually open at the Top, and therefore sometimes call'd ὑπαιθρον. Tombs of Stone were polish'd and adorn'd with greater Art, whence there is so frequent mention of ἐπὶ τάφῳ:

Τύμβον κατέψαξε ξέρων:— (b)

And see the polish'd Tomb.—

And again (c):

— Ἐπὶ ξισῶ τάφῳ.

— Upon the polish'd Tomb.

The Ornaments wherewith Sepulchres were beautified, were numerous. Pillars of Stone were very antient, as appears, from the Story of Ida's striking Pollux with a Pillar broken from his Grandfather Amyclas's Monument (d):

— Τῷ δὲ δευτέρῳ ἔτι
Πληγὴν ᾠδασμῶς κριὸς ἔγκασ' ὑψίσαι,

Pindar calls it ἀγαλμ' αἶδας, ἐξὸν σείτρος (a), and Theocritus takes Notice of the same Accident (b).

The Pillars were term'd στήλαι, and frequently contain'd Inscriptions declaring the Family, Virtues, and whatever was remarkable in the Deceas'd, which were commonly describ'd in Verse. The Sicyonians had no such Inscriptions (c); Lycurgus also would by no means allow of Talkative Grave-stones, nor suffer so much as Names to be inscribed, but only of such Men who died in the Wars, or Women in Child-bed (d). Nor was it unusual at other Places to omit the Names of the Deceas'd, writing instead of them some moral Aphorism, or short Exhortation to the Living, such as this,

ΤΟΥΣ ΑΓΑΘΟΥΣ ΚΑΙ ΘΑΝΟΝΤΑΣ ΕΥΕΠΤΕΤΕΙΝ ΔΕΙ.

The Virtuous even when dead ought to be respected.

Besides this, especially where there was no Inscription, they commonly added the dead Man's Effigies, or some other Resemblance pertinent to the Occasion, and signifying his Temper, Studies, Employment, or Condition. Virgins had commonly the Image of a Maid with a Vessel of Water upon their Tombs (e); the former to represent the Deceas'd, the latter to denote a Custom the young Men had of carrying Water to the Sepulchres of unmarried Maids. A careful House-keeper was represented by such Figures as are mentioned in the following Epigram of Antipater upon Lyfidice:

Μαγεῖν τίς σὺ, τίς ἐπὶ γαλήνῃδ' σείτρον,
Λυσιδίκα, γλυπτοῖν τὸν δ' ἰχάραξί τοι;
“ Τὰ μὲν ἀνέδρομαιας μὲ ποτ' εἴρια νύκτις ὄρεται.

I've often sought, tell me, Lyfidice,
What is the Meaning of this Imag'ry?
What mean these curious Figures round thy Tomb?
What are they all design'd for, and by whom?
“ I tell you, Sir; and first that Bird of Night

Diogenes the Cynick had a Dog engraven upon his Monument, to denote the Temper of his Sect, or his own. Isocrates's Tomb was adorn'd with the Image of a Siren; Archimedes's with a Sphere and Cylinder; whereby the charming Eloquence of the former, and the Mathematical Studies of the latter were signified. Nor was it unusual to fix upon Graves the Instruments which the Deceas'd had used. The Graves of Soldiers were distinguished by their Weapons; those of Mariners by their Oars; and, in short, the Tools of every Art and Profession accompanied their Masters, and remain'd as Monuments to preserve their Memory. Hence Elpenor is introduc'd by Homer (a) begging of Ulysses to fix the Oar he us'd to row with upon his Tomb, as has been already observ'd (b). Aeneas in Virgil performs the like Office to his Trumpeter Misenus (c).

These, with many other Ceremonies, were designed to perpetuate the Memory of the Deceas'd; whence their Graves were term'd σήμαλα, μνημεία, μνήματα, &c. Agamemnon reckons it a great Happiness to Achilles, that he was honoured with a Monument, which would continue his Name to Posterity (d):

Ολβιος, Πηλεΐδ' υἱὸς, θεοῖς ἐπείκειλ' Ἀχιλλεύ,
Ὅς δ' αὖτις ἐν Τροίῃ, &c.

You are thrice happy, God-like Peleus's Son,
Who did at Troy resign your Breath. —

And afterwards,

A large and never-fading Sepulchre.
And this they plac'd upon a rising Mount
Impending o'er the spacious Helle's pont;
That so both Ages present and to come,
From distant Shores, might see the sacred Tomb. H. H.

But later Ages grew so extravagant in these Structures, that their Law-givers were forc'd to keep them within Bounds, by inflicting severe Penalties upon such as exceeded their Prescriptions; Solon in particular particular is reported to have ordered that no Statues of Mercury (as had been customary, because Mercury was an infernal God) or arch'd Roofs, should be made in the Athenian Monuments, and that they should never be greater than ten Men were able to erect in three Days; and Demetrius the Phalerian enacted a Law, that not above one Pillar, and that not exceeding three Cubits in Height, should be plac'd upon any Monument (a).

(a) Odys. κ'. v. 75. (b) Lib. III. c. xi. p. 114. (c) Æn. IV. (d) Odys. α'. v. 36.

It may not be improper to mention their Custom of praying for their Friends, and Men of Piety and Virtue, that the Earth might lie light upon them; for their Enemies, and all wicked Men, that it might press heavy upon them; for they thought the Ghosts that still haunted their Shrowds, and were in love with their former Habitations, had a very acute Sense of the Accidents which befel their Bodies. Hence the Chorus prays for Akestis (b),

————— Κεφα σοι
Χθονι παύω πίεσιν, γύναι.

I wish the Earth may fall upon you light.

Menelaus is introduced by the same Poet (c) arming himself against Death by this Consideration, that the Gods took care that such who died with Honour should have no Sense of any Pressure from the Earth; whereas Cowards should be crush'd under it:

————— Εἰ γὰρ εἶσιν οἱ θεοὶ σοφοὶ
Εὐψυχον ἄνδρα πολέμιον θανάθ' ὕπο
Κεφῇ καταμπίσχωσιν ἐν τύμβῳ χθονί.
Κακοῖς δ' ἐφ' ἔρμα στεῖρον ἐμβαλ्लाσι γῆς.

For if the Gods (and sure they all Things know)
Have due Regard for Mortals here below,
They will not, cannot suffer those that die
By the too pow'rful Force o' th' Enemy,
If they with Courage have maintain'd their Post,
And for the Public Good their Lives have lost,
'To be o'erburthen'd with the heavy Weight
Of Earth; but such as stand aghast at Fate,
Base dastard Souls that shrink at ev'ry Blow,
Nor dare to look on a prevailing Foe;
These shall (nor is the Punishment unjust)
Be crush'd and tortur'd by avenging Dust.

H. H.

Theseus prays this Punishment may be inflicted upon wicked Phædra (d):

And may the Earth that is upon her laid
Lie heavy on her Corpse, and crush her curst Head.

Amianus has ingeniously inverted this Order in the following Epigram (a);

Εἴη σοι κατὰ γῆς κεύθε κύνες, οἵ κε τὴ Νέερχε,
Ὀφρα θὲ ἐνιδίως ἐξεύρωσι κύνες.

Which Martial translates thus (b);

*Sit tibi terra levis, mollique tegaris arend;
Ne tua non possint eruere ossa canes.*

Let there be one, who lighter Dust, or Sand
Shall sprinkle o'er your Corpse with sparing Hand,
So to the Dogs you'll be an easier Prey.

Pass we now to the Monuments erected in Honour of the Dead, but not containing any of their Remains, and thence call'd κνυτάφια, κνύρια.

Of these there were two Sorts: One was erected to such Persons as had been honour'd with Funeral Rites in another Place; of which we find frequent Mention in Pausanias (c), who speaks of such honorary Tombs dedicated to Euripides, Aristomenes, Achilles, Damon, Tiresias, &c.

The second Sort was erected for those that had never obtain'd a just Funeral; for the Ancients were possess'd with an Opinion, that the Ghosts of Men unbury'd could have no Admittance into the blessed Regions, but were forced to wander in Mist'ry 100 Years; and that when any Man had perish'd in the Sea, or any other Place where his Carcase could not be found, the only Method of giving him Repose, was to erect a Sepulchre, and by repeating three Times with a loud Voice the Name of the Deceased, to call his Ghost to the Habitation prepared for it; which Action was term'd ψυχάγωγα.

This Practice seems to have been very ancient: Pelias is introduced in Pindar (d) telling Jason he must recal the Soul of Phryxus, who died in Colchis, into his native Country. Aeneas in Virgil performs the same Office to Deiphobus (e),

*Tunc exomet tumulum Rhæteo in littore inanis

Ausonius has elegantly describ'd, and assign'd the Reason of this Custom (a);

*Hoc satis & tumulis, satis & telluris egenis ;
Voce ciere animas funeris instar habet :
Gaudent compositi cineres sua nomina dici ;
Frontibus hoc scriptis & monumenta jubent :
Ille etiam mæsti cui defuit urna sepulchri,
Nomine ter dicto pene sepultus erit.*

This is the Privilege the Unbury'd crave,
No Grave, or decent Burial they have ;
Only instead of pompous Funeral,
Aloud upon their wand'ring Ghosts we call ;
This they command, with this they most are pleas'd,
And empty Mon'ments with Inscriptions rais'd :
For he, whose Manes have been so recall'd,
Though his dead Corpse of fit Interment fail'd,
Is nigh as happy, and as fully blest,
As he whose Bones beneath a Tomb-stone rest.

H. H.

Many other Instances of this Nature may be met with in the Poets. The Sign whereby honorary Sepulchres were distinguish'd from others, was commonly ἔριον, or a Wreck of a Ship, to signify the Decease of a Person in some foreign Country.

It may be expected, that I should add something concerning the Sacredness of Sepulchres : These, with all other Things belonging to the Dead, were had in so great Esteem, that to deface, or any way violate them, was a Crime no less than Sacrilege, and thought to intail certain Ruin upon all Persons guilty of it. Examples of this Nature are too common to be enumerated in this Place, wherefore I shall only set down that of Idas, who upon breaking one of the Pillars in Aphareus's Sepulchre, was immediately Thunder-struck by Jupiter (b) ;

*Ἡ γὰρ ὅδ' ἑάλαι' Ἀφαρήν' ἐξανέχουσιν

 He fell, and in no common Destiny expir'd.

Mr. Creech.

It has been a Question, whether the Cenotaphia had the same religious Regard, which was paid to the Sepulchres where the Remains of the Deceased were reposit'd ; for the Resolution hereof it may be observ'd, that such of them as were only erected for the Honour of the Dead, were not held so sacred as to call for any Judgment upon such as profan'd them ; but the rest, wherein Ghosts were thought to reside, seem to have been in the same Condition with Sepulchres, the want whereof they were design'd to supply.

C H A P. VIII.

Of their Funeral Orations, Games, Lustrations, Entertainments, Consecrations, and other Honours of the Dead, &c.

BEFORE the Company departed from the Sepulchre, they were sometimes entertained with a Panegyric upon the dead Person. Such of the Athenians as died in War, had an Oration solemnly pronounced by a Person appointed by the public Magistrate, which was constantly repeated upon the Anniversary-Day (a). These Customs were not very ancient, being first introduc'd by Solon, or (as some say) by Pericles, but were generally receiv'd, not in Greece only, but at Rome. It was thought no small Accession to the Happiness of the Deceased to be eloquently commended ; whence we find Pliny compleating his Account of Virginus Rufus's Felicity in this, that his Funeral Oration was pronounced by one of the most eloquent Tongues of that Age (b).

It was farther customary for Persons of Quality to institute Games, with all Sorts of Exercises, to render the Death of their Friends more remarkable ; this Practice was generally received, and is frequently mention'd by ancient Writers. Miltiades's Funeral in Herodotus, Brasidas's in Thucydides, Timoleon's in Plutarch, with many others, afford Examples hereof. Nor was it a Custom of latter Ages, but very common in the primitive Times ; Patroclus's Funeral Games take up the greatest Part of one of Homer's Iliads (c), and Agamemnon's Ghost is introduc'd by the same Poet, telling

In the Age before we find Oedipus's Funeral solemniz'd with Sports, and Hercules is said to have celebrated Games at the Death of Peleus (b). The first that had this Honour was Arcas, the Son of Arcas the Father of the Arcadians, whose Funeral, as Pausanias reports (c), was celebrated with Horse-Races. The Prizes were of different Sorts and Value, according to the Quality and Magnificence of the Persons that celebrated them. The Garlands given to Victors were usually of Parsly, which was thought to have some particular Relation to the Dead, as being feign'd to spring out of Archemorus's Blood, whence it became the Crown of Conquerors in the Nemean Games, which were first instituted at his Funeral (d).

'Twas a general Opinion, that dead Bodies polluted all Things about them ; this occasion'd purifying after Funerals, which Virgil has thus described (e) ;

The superstitious Tricks and Niceties
Of strict Diana's Worship I dislike,
Since of departed Friends the farewell Touch,
All Murder done in Passion, or otherwise,
And Acts of Venery she doth reject,
As great Pollutions of her sacred Rites,
Autors herein proscribing from her Gifts.

J. A.

Nor was it Diana alone, of whom the Poet speaks, that had such an Aversion to these Pollutions, but the rest of the Gods and Goddesses were of the same Temper. Lucian, in his Treatise concerning the Syrian Goddess, tells us, that when any Person had seen a Corpse, he was not admitted into her Temple till the Day following, and not then, except he had first purified himself; and the general Use of this Custom (b) shews that the rest of the Celestial Beings were equally afraid of Defilement. This may farther appear, from its being unlawful for those Persons to enter into the Temples, who were call'd ὑπερόπιοι, or δυσχερόπιοι (c), i. e. such as were thought dead, but after the Performance of their Funeral Rites recovered; or such who were reputed to be dead in some foreign Country, and unexpectedly return'd; these Men were prohibited from worshipping any of the Gods; Hesychius mentions only the Eumenides, but others speak of the Gods in general; whence Aristinus was forced to send Messengers to consult the Delphian Oracle, what Method he should use to be freed from Pollution, where he receiv'd this Answer;

Ὅσσα μὲν ἐν λαιαῖσι γυνὴ τίκτωσα τιλιῖται,
Τόσσα μὲν αἰ τιλίσσῃσιν ὄντι μακάρισσι θεοῖσι.

All Forms and Customs which Child-birth attend, as my Author (a) proceeds, others make this Custom much ancients than Aristinus, carrying it up as high as the primitive Ages. And 'tis certain, the Opinion that dead Bodies polluted all Things about them, was very ancient, as appears from the Jewish Laws.

The House was also purified, an Instance whereof we have in Homer (b), where Ulysses having slain Penelope's Courtiers, and carried them out of his House, thus bespeaks his old Nurse :

Οἷσι δῖσιν, γῆν, κακῶν ἄπο, οἷσι δὲ μοι αὖτε,
Οἶρα δῖσιν μίγαρον. —————

Fetch Brimstone hither, Nurse, and Fire, that I
My tainted Dwelling-House may purify,

Afterwards the Poet adds (c) ;

Οὐδ' ἀπίθῃσι φίλη τροφὸς Εὐρύκλεια,
Ηἰκεῖν δ' ἄρα αὖτε καὶ θῆτον' αὐτὰρ Οδυσσεύς
Εὐ διθείωσιν, μίγαρον καὶ δῆμα, καὶ αὐλήν.

Strait trusty Eurycle perform'd his Will,
Then he with sulph'rous Smoke the House doth fill,
And chas'd th' Infection from polluted Rooms.

But the Lacedæmonians were taught by their Lawgiver to contemn these superstitious Follies, and to think it unreasonable to fancy, that such as liv'd a virtuous Life, and conformable to their Discipline, should contract any Pollution by Death ; on the contrary, they esteem'd their Remains worthy of Respect and Honour, and therefore thought no Places so fit to reposit them in, as those adjoining to the Temples of their Gods (d).

After the Funeral was over, the Company met together at the House of the deceased Person's nearest Relations, to divert them from Sorrow ; here there was an Entertainment provided (e), which was term'd περιδιντον, περὶδιντον, τάφος, in Latin circumpotatio, according to Cicero, who informs us, that the Attick Laws prohibited the Use of this Ceremony at the Funerals of Slaves (f). The Custom was very ancient ; the Trojans, having celebrated Hector's Funeral, were splendidly entertain'd at King Priam's House (g) ;

Χεῖρτες δὲ τὸ σῆμα, πάλιν κίων' αὐτὰρ ἱκίτα

The same may be observ'd in the Grecian Camp, with this Difference, that Achilles entertain'd them before Patroclus's Funeral (a);

Καὶ δ' ἔχον παρὰ νηὶ ποδάμῃσι Αἰακίδαο
Μυρία, αὐτὰρ ὁ τοῖσι τάφῳ μασσικία δαῖτον
Πολλοὶ μὲν βόεις ἀργοὶ ἐρίχθιοι ἀμφὶ σιδήρῳ
Σφαζόμενοι, πολλοὶ δ' οἷες καὶ μηκάδεις αἴγες
Πολλοὶ δ' ἀργυρόθυες ὡς θαλάσσιες αἰολίῃ

Πάνη δ' ἀμφὶ νέκυν πολυλήρητον ἔρπον αἶμα.

While great Achilles doth prepare and fit
The Fun'ral Banquet, thronging Grecians sit
About the Hero's Ship; whole Herds he kills
Of huge fat Oxen, roaring while he spills
Their Lives, that issue from their reeking Wounds;
Whole Flocks of Sheep he kills; the Air resounds,
While Goats and fatted Swine make hideous Roar,
When purple Streams from their gash'd Throats do pour.
These having kill'd, he roasts, the while the Blood
Around the Corpse in a great Current flow'd.

By which last Words it appears, that the dead Person had some Interest in these Entertainments; and as the Blood of the Beasts was design'd for Patroclus's Ghost, so even in latter Ages we are told, the broken Morsels which fell from the Tables were look'd on as sacred to the departed Souls, and not lawful to be eaten (b). To this Fancy Pythagoras's Aphorism, tho' perhaps containing a more mystical Sense, was an undoubted Allusion (c), Τὰ πτωέια μὴ ἀναιρεῖσθαι, i. e. Take not up Things fallen down; or, as others express it, Μηδὲ γνύσθαι ἄτ' ἢ ἐν τῷ τραπέζῃ καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς, i. e. Do not so much as taste Things fall'n under the Table. These Fragments were carried to the Tomb, and there left for the Ghost to feast upon; whence to denote extreme Poverty, it was usual to say, that a Person stole his Meat from the Graves. To this Tibullus's Curse alludes,

*Ipse fame stimulant furens, escaesque sepulchro
Quærat, & a sœvis ossa relicta lupis.*

May she want Bread so much, as ev'n to crave
The Scraps and mussy Morsels of a Grave;
May she be glad to pick a Carcase Bone
Which Wolves and Vultures once have fed upon.

The

(a) Iliad. Ψ. v. 23. (b) Albenæi Διονυσίου. lib. X. (c) Laertius Pythagor.

The Entertainments of latter Ages consisted not, like Homer's, of Flesh only, but all Sorts of Pulse (a), Beans, Pease, and Lettuces, Parsly, Eggs, and many other Things. The chief Subject of Discourse at these Meetings were the Praises of the Dead, especially if they had been eminent for any Virtue, or commendable Quality; otherwise so great was the Simplicity of primitive Ages, that they look'd upon it most expedient to say nothing, when by speaking they must unavoidably offend the dead Man, or transgress the Rules of Truth, both which were thought equally criminal. But afterwards they grew more lavish of their Commendations, distributing them to all Persons without Distinction; whence came the Proverb Οὐκ ἵπαινεῖς ἐδὲ ἐν περικλείῳ, which was only apply'd to Villains of the first Rate, and such as had not the least Shadow of a good Quality to recommend them.

There was a Custom at Argos, obliging those that had lost any of their Kindred or Acquaintance, to sacrifice to Apollo presently after Mourning, and thirty Days after to Mercury, out of an Opinion, that as the Earth received their Bodies, so their Souls fell into Mercury's Hands; the Barley of the Sacrifice they gave to Apollo's Minister, the Flesh they took themselves; and having extinguish'd the sacrificial Fire, which they accounted polluted, kindled another, whereon they boil'd the Flesh, calling it ἱγνισμα (b), from the Fumes ascending from the burning Sacrifice, which were term'd in Greek κνίσσα.

The Honours paid to the Sepulchres and Memories of the Deceased were of divers Sorts: It was frequent to place Lamps in the subterraneous Vaults of the Dead, whither such as would express an extraordinary Affection for their Relations, retir'd, and cloyster'd themselves up; an Example whereof we have in Petronius's Ephefian Matron.

They had a Custom of bedecking Tombs with Herbs and Flowers, amongst which Parsly was chiefly in Use, as appears from Plutarch's Story of Timoleon, who marching up an Ascent, from the Top of which he might take a View of the Army, and Strength of the Carthaginians, was met by a Company of Mules loaden with Parsly; which (saith my Author) his Soldiers conceived to be a very ill-boding and fatal Occurrence, that being the very Herb wherewith we adorn the Sepulchres of the Dead. This Custom gave Birth to that despairing Proverb when we pronounce of one dangerously sick δίδοθαι σελίνω, that he has need of nothing but Parsly; which is in effect to say, he's a dead Man, and ready for the Grave. All Sorts of purple and white Flowers were acceptable to the Dead, as Amaranthus, which was first used by the Thessalians to adorn Achilles's Grave (c); κόκκος λευκός (d), which I me will have to be the jessamin, with Lillies, and several others: Hence Virgil (e),

He having purple Flowers strew'd, thus spoke.

In the subsequent Book he alludes to the same Custom (a);

Hæu, miserande puer, siqua fata aspera rumpas,
Tu Marcellus eris: manibus date lilia plenis,
Purpureos spargam flores, animamque nepotis
His saltem accumulæ donis.—————

Ah! could'st thou break thro' Fate's severe Decree,
A new Marcellus shall arise in thee:
Full Canisters of fragrant Lillies bring,
And all the curious Drap'ry of the Spring;
Let me with purple Flowers his Body strow,
This Gift which Parents to their Children owe,
This unavailing Gift at least I may bestow.

The Rose too was very grateful, whence Anacreon has these Verses in his Ode upon that Flower;

Τόδε κ' ἰοῦσιν ἀρκεῖ,
Τόδε κ' πῆροϊς ἀμύνη.

When Age and Vigour do decay,
The Rose their Strength repairs,
It drives all Maladies away,
And can prolong our Years;
The Dead too in their Graves do lie,
With peaceful Slumbers blest,
This is the Amulet, hereby
No Ills their Tombs molest.

J. A.

Nor was the Use of Myrtle less common, whence Euripides introduces Electra complaining that Agamemnon's Tomb had never been adorn'd with Boughs of that Plant;

Ἀγαμέμνωνος δὲ τύμβος ἡ τιμασμίνος
Οὐ πάποτε εἰς χροῖας, εἰ κλῶνα μυρσίνης ἔλαβεν.—————→

With no Libations, nor with Myrtle Boughs,
Were my dear Father's Manes gratify'd.

In short, Graves were bedeck'd with Garlands of all Sorts of Flowers, as appears from Agamemnon's Daughter in Sophocles (b);

Ἐπει

(a) Æneid, VI. v. 883

(b) Electra, v. 886,

Ἐπὶ γὰρ ἦλθοι πατρὸς ἀρχαῖον τάφος,

 Πηλᾶς γάλακτι, καὶ περιγεφῆ κύκλω
 Πάσιων ὅσ' ἐστὶν ἀνδῶν θήκη πατρός.

No sooner came I to my Father's Tomb,
 But Milk fresh pour'd in copious Streams did flow,
 And Flow'rs of ev'ry Sort around were strew'd.

These were commonly call'd ἱρώεις (a), either from their Design to express Love and Respect to the deceas'd Person, or from ἱρα, because they were usually compos'd of a Collection of several Sorts of Flowers; or from ἱρα, as being laid upon the Earth; tho' neither of these last Reasons are constant; for the Garlands were sometimes compos'd of only one Sort of Flowers, and frequently hung upon the Pillars, and not laid upon the Grave-stone. Several other Things were frequently laid upon the Graves, as Ribbands, whence 'tis said, that Epaminondas's Soldiers being disanimated at seeing the Ribband that hung upon his Spear, carry'd by the Wind to a certain Lacedæmonian Sepulchre, he bid them take Courage, for that it portended Destruction to the Lacedæmonians, it being customary to deck the Sepulchres of their Dead with Ribbands (b). Another Thing dedicated to the Dead, was their Hair. Eleëra in Sophocles says, that Agamemnon had commanded her and Chrysothemis to pay him this Honour,

Ἡμεῖς δὲ πατρός τέμνον ὡς ἴφιστο,
 Λοιβάσιν σφῶνται καὶ παρατόμοις χλιδαῖς
 Στέψομεν.

With Drink-Off'rings and Locks of Hair we must,
 According to his Will, his Tomb adorn.

Canace in Ovid (c) bewails her Calamity, in that she was not permitted to adorn her Lover's Tomb with her Locks, as has been already observed.

It was likewise customary to perfume the Grave-stones with sweet Ointments, to which Practice Anacreon has this Allusion,

Τί σε διὲ λίθον μυρίζων,
 Τί δὲ γῆ χεῖν ματαία;
 Ἐμὲ μᾶλλον, ὡς ἐστὶ ζῶ,
 Μύρισον, ῥόδοις δὲ κράτα
 Πύκασον.

Why do we precious Ointments show'r,
Noble Wines why do we pour,
Beauteous Flowers why do we spread
Upon the Mon'uments of the Dead?

Or Bones that hasten to be so,
Crown me with Roses while I live.

Mr. Cowley.

Whence Leonidas seems to have borrow'd the Sense of this Epigram,

Μὴ μύρα, μὴ εἴφανες λιθναὶς σήλαισι χαρίζε,
Μηδὶ τὸ σὺρ Πλάτھے, εἰς κινὸν ἡ δαπάνη.
Ζῶντι μοι, εἴτε θύλῃς χαίρισαι· τέφρῃ δὲ μεθύσκων
Πηλὸν ποιήσεις, ὃχ δ' θανάτῳ τίεται.

When cold and lifeless in my Grave I'm laid,
No fragrant Oil then pour, no Chaplets spread :
All expiatory Fires, all Rites are vain,
Wine only can my fruitless Ashes stain :
Come let's carouse, let's revel while we live,
'Twill elevate our Souls, 'twill Ease to Troubles give.

J. A.

To these Practices we find another added, viz. running naked about Sepulchres ; for Plutarch (a) tells us, that Alexander arriving at Troy, honour'd the Memories of the Heroes bury'd there with solemn Libations, anointed Achilles's Grave-stone, and (according to ancient Custom) together with his Friends, ran naked about his Sepulchre, and crowned it with Garlands.

Beside the forementioned Ceremonies, there remain several others, especially their Sacrifices and Libations to the Dead : The Victims were black and barren Heifers, or black Sheep, as being of the same Sort with those offered to the infernal Gods, to denote the Contrariety of those Regions to Light and Fruitfulness : whence Homer introduces Ulysses making a Vow to the Ghosts after this manner (b) :

Πολλὰ δὲ γυμνῶνι νικύων ἀμνητὰ κάρηνα,
Ελθὼν εἰς Ἰθάκην, εὖραν βῶν, ἥτις ἀρίστη,
Ρίξιν ἐν μεγάροισι, σურὴν τ' ἱμνησέμεν ἰοβλῶν.
Τειρεσίῃ δ' ἀπάνευθεν οἷν ἱερυσέμεν οἶον

 Their Altars then I likewise swore to load

 But the best of our black Rams I cou'd chuse, Tirefias I promis'd with chaste Vows.

J. A.

Besides their offering these Sacrifices in Ditches, and some other Customs spoken of in one of the former Books (a), it may be observ'd farther, that the first Thing they offered was the Hair upon the Victim's Forehead, which for that Reason was term'd ἀπαρχαί, and to offer it ἀπαρχισθαί. But however these Terms are sometimes used for the Sacrifices of the Ghosts, yet the Custom of offering these First-fruits was common to the Sacrifices of the Celestial and other Deities, as appears from several Instances: Homer mentions it at one of Minerva's Sacrifices (b);

Πολλὰ δ' Ἀθήνη
 Εὖχετ' ἀπαρχόμενος κεφαλῆς τρίχας ἐν πυρὶ βάλλον.

Having invok'd Minerva with his Pray'rs,
 He on the Altar threw the Forehead Hairs.

In another Place he speaks of it as acceptable to the Gods (c);

Ἄλλ' ὅγ' ἀπαρχόμενος κεφαλῆς τρίχας ἐν πυρὶ βάλλον
 Ἀγριόδοιόν· ὅς, καὶ ἐπήνυχτο πᾶσι θεοῖσι.

Of the Sow's Forehead having burn'd the Hairs,
 'To all the Gods he offers fervent Pray'rs.

But their ordinary Offerings were nothing but Libations of Blood, Honey, Wine, Milk, Water, &c. Solon forbid the Athenians ἐπαγίξω βῶν, to offer an Ox on this Occasion (d). Upon the Sacrifice they commonly sprinkled Barley-flour. Some of these are mentioned in Homer (e),

Χοὰς χέμεν πᾶσι νέκυισσιν·
 Πρῶτα μελικρήτω, μέλιτι δὲ ἡδὲι οἶνω,
 Τὸ τρίτον αὖθ' ὕδατι, ἐπὶ δ' ἄλφιλα λευκὰ παύμεν.

We did with Reverence the Shades adore,
 We first did Honey mix'd with Water pour,
 Then Wine, then simple Water, and next Barley-flour.

Honey was rarely omitted, being accounted θανάτου σύμβολον, a Symbol or Emblem of Death (f). Hence, as some think, the Ghosts of the Deceas'd came to be term'd μέλισσαι, the infernal Gods, μελίχοι, and their Oblations μελιγμαία.

They were design'd to render the Ghosts kind and propitious, and therefore term'd χοαὶ ἰδυήριοι, or θιακήριοι. Iphigenia in Euripides thus describes them (a),

Ω, τάσδε
Χοαὶς μέλλω πρατῆρ' αὖτε
Τῶν φθιμένων
Υδραίνω γαίης ἐν ἰώτοις,
Πηγὰς τ' ἔριων ἐκ μίσχων,

Ἐκδοῦν τε νόσημα μελισσῶν, τ'.

To whom I in this sacred Chalice bear
These solemn Liquids as an Offering,
This Blood in Crimson Streams shall stain the Ground,
With Wine and th' Product of the sed'ulous Bee,
The common Peace-Atonement for the Dead.

J. A.

These were sometimes offer'd upon Altars, which were commonly plac'd near the ancient Sepulchres, with Tables for the sacrificial Feasts; sometimes they were pour'd forth upon the Ground, or Grave-stone, and, together with a certain Form of Words, offered to the Deceased. Thus Helena desires Hermione to address Clytemnestra in her Name (b);

ὦ τέκνον ἱέλιθ', Ἑρμιόνη, θέμων πάρος, καὶ λάβοι χοαὶς τάσδ' ἐν χερσίν, κόμας τ' ἱμαῖς, ἐλθῶσα δ' ἄμφ' τὸν Κλυταίμνης τῶν τάφον μελίκρατ' ἄφες γαλακτὶ οἶνον τ' ἄχνην, καὶ γαστ' ἐπ' ἄκρ' ἡρώματι λέξον τάδε,
" ἔλθῃ σ' ἀδελφὴ ταῖσδε δωρεῖται χοαῖς."

Daughter Hermione, come forth and take
These Offerings to thy dear Aunt's Sepulchre,
These Locks of my Hair, and this Honey mix'd
With Milk, and this Wine to pour o'er her Grave,
Which having done, stand on its Top, and say,
" Thy Sister Helen to declare her Love,
" Offers these Rites to thy dear Memory."

The Water thus employ'd was term'd λυτρὸν χόριον λουτρὸν & and at Athens ἀπηνιμμά (c). When Persons died who had been marry'd,

(a) Iphigen. Tauric. v. 159. (b) Euripid. Oreste v. 112. (c) Enstatb. Odys. α'.

marry'd, there was a Custom for Women to carry Water to their Graves, who from pouring it forth were termed ἰσχυρίστριαι (a). When a young Man or Maid died, the Water was carried by a Boy (b), or (which appears to some more probable) by a Boy to the Sepulchres of young Men, by a Maid to the Sepulchres of Maids; whence came the Custom of erecting Images representing Maids with Vessels of Water upon the Sepulchres of such as died in their Virginity, as was observ'd in the foregoing Chapter, tho' I have there interpreted this Custom so as to agree with the former Opinion. As for those that died in their Infancy, they were honoured with no Libations, nor had any Right to the rest of the Funeral Solemnities (c).

These Honours were paid the Dead the ninth and thirtieth Days after Burial (d), and repeated when any of their Friends arrived that had been absent at the Solemnity, and upon all other Occasions which required their surviving Relations to have them in Memory. But some part of the Month Antibisterion seems to have been especially set apart for these Ceremonies in several of the Grecian Cities. Athenæus reports in particular of the Apolloniæ (e), that they paid the Dead the customary Honours in this Month. Hesychius (f) likewise reports that the same Custom was observ'd at Athens, and that they termed the Days appointed for these Solemnities μαρὰν ἡμέραν, which were by others called ἀποφράδις (g), as being polluted by their Dedication to the Dead, whose Ghosts were thought to ascend from their subterraneous Habitations, to enjoy the kind Entertainment of their Friends (h); the want hereof was thought a great Calamity, and therefore is reckoned by Cassandra among the manifold Misfortunes of the Trojans, that they should have no surviving Friends to offer Sacrifices at their Tombs.

— Οὐδὲ πρὸς ταύροις ἔσθ' ὅς τις αὐτῶν αἷμα γῇ δαρήσεται.

— Nor shall one Friend remain
To stain their desert Sepulchres with Blood.

Upon these publick Days they called over the Names of their dead Relations one by one, excepting such as died under Age, or forfeited their Title to these Honours, by dissipating their Paternal Inheritances, or other Crimes. There was likewise another time when they call'd over the Names of the Dead, which being omitted in the foregoing Chapters, I shall speak of it in this place; it was when they lost their Friends in foreign Countries, whence before they departed they called the Names of all that were missing out of their Company three-times. Thus Ulysses in Homer declares he did, when he lost some of his Men in Battle with the Cicones (i);

Hercules in Theocritus calls Hylas three times (a) ;

Τρεῖς μετὰ Ὑλαν αὔσει ὅσοι βαθὺς ἔργῳ λαιμός,
His much lov'd Hylas perish'd in the Flood
He call'd on Thrice as loud as e'er he cou'd.

The Reasons of this Custom were, according to John Tzetzes (b), partly, that such as were left behind might upon hearing the Noise, repair to their Ships, and partly to testify their Unwillingness to depart without their Companions ;

Τὸ πρότερον τοὺς θήσκοιτας εἰς γῆν τῶν ἀλλοτρίων
Ἀποδημιῶτες οἱ αὐτῶν τρισσαῖς ἀνπαύων,
Ὡς Ὀμηρὸς ἰδίδασκε βίβλῳ τῆς Ὀδυσσεύας·
Τῷτο δ' ἔδρων ὡς μνημόνους τυχεράνοις φίλιας·
Καὶ ὡς δ', εἰ ἀπολείφθῃ τις, πρὸς τὴν φωνὴν συνδράμοι.

It was a Custom 'mong't all ancient Greeks,
That he who trav'ling into foreign Parts
Did die, should by surviving Friends be call'd
Thrice, as a Token of their mutual Love.
Hence all that were alive then join'd their Voice,
As Homer in his Odyssey attests.

To return : They had anniversary Days, on which they paid their Devotions to the Dead ; these were sometimes term'd Νεμίσια, as being celebrated upon the Festival of Nemesis, who was thought to have especial Care for the Honours of the Dead (c) ; sometimes Θραϊα (d), as also Γενίσια (e) ; the Reason of which Name seems to be, that it signifies the anniversary Day of Man's Nativity, which after his Death was solemnized with the same Ceremonies that were us'd upon the Anniversary of his Death (f), which were properly term'd Νεκύσια ; hence it is that these two Words are commonly thought to signify the same Solemnity.

The

(d) Hesychius, Phavorinus. (e) Suidas, &c. (f) Suidas, Hesychius, Phavorinus,

The Honours of the Dead were distinguished according to the Quality and Worth of the Person they were conferred on. Such as by their Virtues and Public Services had raised themselves above the common Level, had ἡρώϊκας τιμὰς, the Honours of Heroes; the Participation hereof was termed ἀνιεῖσθαι, or τελευτῆσαι τιμῶν ἡρώϊκων, ἰσοδίων, ἢ ἰσολυμπίων. Others, who had distinguished themselves from the former, were rais'd a Degree higher, and reckoned among the Gods, which Consecration was termed θεοποιεῖν, and was very different from the former, to worship the former Persons being only termed εὐαγίζειν, but the latter θύειν. The latter Honour was very rare in the heroic Times, but in subsequent Ages, when great Examples of Virtue were not so frequent, and Men more addicted to Flattery, it became more cheap, insomuch that those Persons, whom former Ages had only worshipped as Heroes, were afterwards accounted Gods; an Instance whereof we have (to omit several others) in Lampface one of Plutarch's Heroines (a). The Athenians were especially remarkable for immoderate and profuse Distributions of those Honours, and it is generally observed that that Nation exceeded all the rest of the Grecians in the Arts of Flattery and Superstition, as appears from several Instances in the precedent Books.

I shall observe in the last place, that these and the rest of the Honours of the Dead, were thought most acceptable when offered by their nearest Friends; when by their Enemies, they were rejected with Indignation; whence Sophocles introduces Eleatra advising her Sister Chrysothemis, that she should by no means offer Clytemnestra's Gifts to Agamemnon (b)

Ἀλλ', ὦ φίλη, τέτοιον μὲν, ὃν ἔχεις περὶ
 Τύμβῳ, προσάψης μηδὲν· ἢ γὰρ σοὶ δέμας,
 Οὐ δ' εἰσὶν ἐχθρὰς ἀπὸ γυναικὸς ἰστάται
 Κτερίσματα, εἰδὲ λυγρὰ προσφέρειν πάλοι.

Dear Sister, don't attempt his Tomb t'approach
 With a Design of offering those Gifts,
 Since the infernal Manes do detest,
 As heinous, Rites paid by an Enemy.

For Men were thought to retain the same Affections after Death which they had entertained when alive. This appears farther from the Story of Eteocles and Polynices, Oedipus's Sons, who having kill'd each other in single Combat, and being burned in the same Pile, the Flames of their Bodies would not unite, but by parting from each other demonstrated the irreconcilable and immortal Hatred of the Brethren, as we are inform'd by Bianor's following Epigram;

Οἰδίποδος παῖδων Θήκη τάφος, ἀλλ' ὁ πανώλης
 Τύμβος ἔτι ζῶντων αἰσθάνεται δαράτων.

Of their Love of BOYS.

WHO it was that first introduced the Custom of loving Boys into Greece, is uncertain ; however (to omit the infamous Amours of Jupiter, Orpheus, Laius of Thebes, and others) we find it generally practis'd by the ancient Grecians, and that not only in private, but by the public Allowance and Encouragement of their Laws ; for they thought there could be no Means more effectual to excite their Youth to noble Undertakings, nor any greater Security to their Common-wealths, than this generous Passion. This the Invaders of their Liberties so often experienced, that it became a receiv'd Maxim in the Politics of Tyrants, to use all their Endeavours to extirpate it out of their Dominions ; some Instances whereof whereof we have in Athenæus (a). On the contrary, free Commonwealths, and all those States that consulted the Advancement of their own Honour, seem to have been unanimous in establishing Laws to encourage and reward it. Let us take a View of some few of them.

(a) Cassand. v. 443.

First we shall find it to have been so generally practised, so highly esteem'd in Crete, that such of their well-born and beautiful Youths as never had any Lovers, incurred the public Censure, as Persons some way or other faulty in their Morals; as if nothing else could hinder, but that some one's Affections would be placed upon them. But those that were more happy in being admired, were honoured with the first Seats at public Exercises, and wore, for a distinguishing Badge of Honour, a sort of Garment richly adorned; this they still retained after they arrived to Man's Estate, in memory they had once been καλοί, eminent (b), which was the Name the Cretans gave to Youths that had Lovers. The Lovers themselves were called Φιλότροποι. One thing was remarkable in this Place, that the Lovers always took their Boys by Force; for having placed their Affections upon any one, they gave notice of it to his Relations, and withal certified them what Day they designed to take him: If the Lover was unworthy of the Boy, they refused to yield him up; but if his Quality and Virtues were answerable, they made some slight Opposition, to satisfy the Law, and pursued him to his Lodgings, but then gave their Consent. After this the Lover carried the Boy whither he pleased, the Persons that were present at the Rape bearing him company. He entertained him some time, two Months at the farthest, with Hunting, and such Diversions, then returned him Home. At his Departure it was ordered by Law that the Boy should receive a Suit of Armour, an Ox, and a Cup, to which the Lover usually added out of his own Bounty several other Presents of Value. The Boy being returned Home, sacrificed the Ox to Jupiter, made an Entertainment for those that had accompanied him in his Flight, and gave an Account of the Usage he had from his Lover; for in case he was rudely treated, the Law allowed him Satisfaction (c). 'Tis further affirmed by Maximus the Tyrian, that during all the time of their Converse together, nothing unseemly, nothing repugnant to the strictest Laws of Virtue passed between them (d); and however some Authors are inclined to have hard Thoughts of this Custom, yet the Testimonies of many others, with the highest Characters given by the Ancients of the old Cretan Constitutions, by which it was approved, are sufficient to vindicate it from all false Imputations. The same is put beyond dispute by what Strabo tells us (e), that 'twas not so much the external Beauty of a Boy, as his virtuous Disposition, his Modesty, and Courage, which recommended him.

From the Cretans pass we to the Lacedæmonians, several of whose Constitutions were derived from Crete. Their Love of Boys was remarkable remarkable all over Greece, and for the whole Conduct and excellent Consequences of it every where admired. There was no such thing as Presents passed between the Lovers, no foul Arts were used to intinate themselves into one another's Affections; their Love was generous, and worthy the Spartan Education; it was first entertained from a mutual Esteem of one another's Virtue; and the same Cause which first inspired the Flame, did alone serve to nourish and continue it; it was not tainted with so much as a Suspicion of Immodesty. Agésilas is said to have refused so much as to kiss the Boy he loved (a), for fear of Censure; and if a Person attempted any thing upon a Youth besides what consisted with the strictest Rules of Modesty, the Law (however encouraging a virtuous Love) condemned him to Disgrace (b), whereby he was deprived of almost all the Privileges of free Denizens. The same Practice was allowed the Women towards their own Sex, and was so much in fashion among them, that the most staid and virtuous Matrons would publicly own their Passion for a modest and beautiful Virgin (c), which is a farther Confirmation of the Innocency of this Custom. Maximus the Tyrian (d) assures us the Spartans loved their Boys no otherwise than a Man may be enamoured with a beautiful Statue, which he proves from what Plutarch (e) likewise reports, that tho' several Men's Fancies met in one Person, yet did not that cause any Strangeness or Jealousy among them, but was rather the Beginning of a very intimate Friendship, whilst they all jointly conspired to render the beloved Boy the most accomplish'd in the World; for the End of this Love was, that the young Men might be improved in all virtuous and commendable Qualities, by conversing with Men of Probity and Experience; whence the Lover and the Beloved shared the Honour and Disgrace of each other; the Lover especially was blamed if the Boy offended, and suffered what Punishment was due to his Fault (f). Plutarch has a Story of a Spartan fined by the Magistrates, because the Lad whom he loved cried out effeminately whilst he was fighting (g). The same Love continued when the Boy was come to Man's Estate; he still preserved his former Intimacy with his Lover, imparted to him all his Designs, and was directed by his Counsels, as appears from another of Plutarch's Relations concerning Cleomenes, who before his Advancement to the Kingdom, was beloved by one Xenares, with whom he ever after maintained a most intimate Friendship, till he went about his Project of new modelling the Common-wealth, which Xenares not approving, departed from him, but still remained faithful to him, and concealed his Designs (h).

If we pass from Sparta to Athens, we shall find that there Solon forbade Slaves to love Boys, making that an honourable Action, and as it were inviting (these are Plutarch's (i) Words) the Worthy to practise what he commanded the Unworthy to forbear. That Lawgiver himself is said to have loved Pisistratus (a), and the most eminent Men in that Common-wealth submitted to the same Passion. Socrates, who died a Martyr for disowning the Pagan Idolatry, is very remarkable for such Amours, yet seems not whilst alive to have incur'd the least Suspicion of Dishonesty; for what else could be the Cause, that when Callias, Thrasymachus, Aristophanes, Antus and Melitus, with the rest of his Enemies, accused him of teaching Critias to tyrannize, for Sophistry, for Contempt of the Gods, and other Crimes; they never so much as upbraided him with impure Love, or for writing or discoursing upon that Subject? And tho' some Persons, especially in later Ages, and perhaps unacquainted with the Practice of the old Greeks, have called in question that Philosopher's Virtue in this Point, yet both he and his Scholar Plato are sufficiently vindicated from that Imputation by Maximus the Tyrian (b), to whom I refer the Reader. The Innocency of this Love may farther appear from their severe Laws enacted against immodest Love, whereby the Youths that entertained such Lovers were declared infamous, and rendered incapable of public Employments, and the Persons that prostituted them, condemned to die; several other Penalties were likewise ordered, to deter all Men from so heinous and detestable a Crime, as appears from the Laws of Athens, described in one of the foregoing Books (c).

There are many other Examples of this Nature, whereof I shall only mention one more; it shall be taken from the Thebans, whose Law-givers Plutarch tells us (d) encouraged this excellent Passion, to temper the Manners of their Youth; nor were they disappointed of their Expectation, a pregnant Evidence whereof (to omit others) we have in the ισα φάλαγξ, sacred Band; it was a Party of 300 chosen Men, composed of Lovers and their Beloved, and therefore called sacred; it gained many important Victories, was the first that ever overcame the Spartans (whose Courage till then seemed irresistible) upon equal Terms, and was never beaten till the Battle at Cheronea; after which King Philip taking a View of the Slain, and coming to the Place where these 300, who had fought his whole Phalanx, lay dead together, he was struck with Wonder, and understanding that 'twas the Band of Lovers, he said weeping, Let these perish who suspect that these Men either did, or suffered any thing base.

Before I conclude this Chapter, it may be necessary to observe, that the Lover was called by the Spartans ἱσπνίλος, ἱσπνίλος, or as others write it, ἱσπνίλης; the Beloved was termed by the Thebans αἴτης. Thus Theocritus (e);

Διὶ δὲ τινι τῷδε μετ' ἀμφοτέροισι γυναικῶν
Φαθ' ὅ μιν ἦν ἱσπνίλος, φαίη χῶ' μυχαίσδων
Τὸν δ' ἑτέρον πάλιν, ὡς κεν ὁ Θεσσαλὸς ἱπποί, αἴταν.

The Greek Scholiast derives both the Names παρά τὸ πρὸν ἐρώμενον ἐστὶν ἐκ τῆς ἐρώσεως τὸν ἱρώτα τῷ ἀγαπῶντι, from the Lover's being inspired with Affection for his Beloved; and other ancient Grammarians agree with him herein.

CHAP. X.

Of their Customs in expressing their Love, their Love-Potions, Incantations, &c.

LOVERS had several Ways of discovering their Passions and expressing the Respect they had for their Beloved. Every Tree in the Walks they frequented, every Wall of their Houses, every Book they used, had inscribed upon it the Beloved's Name, with the Epithet of καλὸς or καλός. Whence Lucian (a) relating a Story of one desperately in Love with Venus Cnidia, after other Expressions of his Passion, adds, that there was never a Wall or Tree but what proclaimed Ἀφροδίτη καλὴ, Venus fair. Callimachus's Lover has the same Fancy, only that he wishes his Mistress's Name written on Leaves, if we may credit the Scholiast upon Aristophanes (b),

Ἀλλ' ἐν δὲ φθλλοῖσι κειόμενα τόσσα φέροιεν
Γράμματα, Κυδίππῳ ὡς ἐβίβου κελήν.

May the kind Trees on Leaves such Letters bear,
As shall proclaim my dear Cydippe fair.

'Twas in Allusion to this Practice, that one in Euripides declared, he should never entertain a good Opinion of the Female Sex, tho' the Pines in Mount Ida were filled with the Names (c). Aristophanes had an Eye to the same Custom, when jesting upon an old Athenian that was mightily in love with deciding Causes, he says, that upon every Place he writ κηρὸς καλός, which Word signifies the Cover of the judiciary Urn (d).

— Ἀς ἴδῃ γι πα γιγραμμένον
Τὸν Πυριλαΐμῳ ἐν θυρᾷ Δῆμον καλόν,
Τὸν παρὰ γράφῃς πλεσιον Κηρὸς καλός.

Lovers usually deck'd the Doors of their Beloved with Flowers and Garlands; for thinking the Persons their Affections were plac'd upon, to be the very Image of the Deity of Love, their House could be no less than Cupid's Temple (a), which was accustomed to receive those Honours. From the same Original they seem to have derived the other Custom of making Libations before their Mistresses Doors, and sprinkling them with Wine, of which we have Mention in the Scholiast upon Aristophanes (b), where he reports, that many of the Theſſalian Gentlemen were in love with the beautiful Nais, and publicly own'd their Passion, by sprinkling the Doors of her House with Wine.

When a Person's Garland was unty'd, it was taken for a Sign of being in love (c); and for a Woman to compose a Garland, was another Indication of her Passion (d).

————— 'Εάν τις ὧλκεν
Γύνην γίφῳρον, ἱερὸν δοκεῖ.

*The Wreathing Garlands in a Woman is
The usual Symptom of a Love-sick Mind.*

They had several Methods of discovering whether their Love would prove successful; that of the κόταξος was very frequent at Entertainments, which is hereafter described. Two other Ways we have in Theocritus (e);

Εγὼν πρὶν ὅκα μιν μεμαμὲν ἢ φίλιν με,
'Οὐδὲ τὸ τάλειφον σπείμαζ' αὖ τὸ πλάγισμα,
'Αλλ' αὐτὸς ἀπαλὸν ποτὶ παχὺ ἱξίμαρ' αἶθ'·
Εἴπω κ' Ἀγροῖδ' ἑ' ἀλαθία κοσκινομάειν,
'Α πρὶν ποιολογίσαι, παραισάτις, ὅππ' ἐγὼ μὴ
Τὴν ἄλ' εἴκημαι, τὴν δὲ μιν λόγον ἔδνα ποιῶ.

All this I knew, when I design'd to prove
Whether I should be happy in my Love;
I press'd the Long-life, but in vain did press,
It gave no lucky Sound of good Success:
To Agris too I made the same Demand,
A cunning Woman she, I cross'd her Hand,
She turn'd the Sieve and Sheers, and told me true,
That I should love, but not be lov'd by you.

Mr. Creech.

Both these Customs I have already described in one of the precedent Books (f), which the Reader may consult.

When their Love was without Success, they had several Arts to procure the Affections of their Beloved. The Theſſalian Women were famous in their Skill in this, as well as other Magical Practices. The Means whereby it was effected were of divers Sorts;

it

it was sometimes done by Potions called φάρμακ, which are frequently mentioned in Authors of both Languages. Juvenal speaks thus (a).

Hic Magicos affert cantus, hic Theffala vendit Philtrea, quibus valeant mentem vexare mariti.

This Pedlar offers Magic Charms, the next
Philtres, by which the Husband's Mind's perplex.

Their Operations were violent and dangerous, and commonly deprived such as drank them of their Reason. Plutarch and Cornelius Nepos report, that Lucullus the Roman General first lost his Reason, and afterwards his Life by one of them. Lucretius the Poet, ended his Life the same way; and Caius Caligula (as Suetonius reports) was driven into a Fit of Madness by a Philtre given him by his Wife Cæsonia, which Story is mention'd by the same Poet (b),

——— *Tamen hoc tolerabile, si non
Et furere incipias, ut avunculus ille Neronis,
Cui totam tremuli frontem Cæsonia pulli
Infudit*———

Some nimbler Juice would make him foam and rave,
Like that Cæsonia to her Caius gave,
Who plucking from the Forehead of the Fole
His Mother's Love, infus'd it in the Bowl. Mr. Dryden.

Ovid likewise assures us, that this was the usual Effect of these Potions.

*Nec data profuerint pulchritia philtrea puellis,
Philtrea nocent animis, vimque furoris habent.*

All pois'nous Drugs, and necromantic Arts
Ne'er move the scornful Maids relentless Hearts,
They but distract the Senses, seize the Brain,
And Venus' Rites and Mysteries profane. J. A.

The Ingredients they were made up of were of several Sorts, divers of which applied by themselves were thought effectual. Some of the most remarkable were these that follow;

Hippomanes, a Piece of Flesh upon the Forehead of Colts new foal'd, of a black or brown Colour, in Bigness and Shape like a Fig, which the Mares bite off as soon as they have foal'd, but if they be prevented, forsake their Off-spring; whence it was thought a prevalent Medicine to conciliate Love, especially when reduced to Powder,

Powder, and swallow'd with some Drops of the Lover's Blood. 'Tis frequently mention'd by the Writers of Natural History. Aristotle, Pliny, Solinus, Columella, with many others, have thought it worth their Notice. The Poets are full of its Effects; whence Dido in Virgil (to omit other Instances) has Recourse to it, when pretending to recall Aeneas to her Affection (a),

*Quæritur & nascentis equi de fronte revulsus,
Et matri præreptus amor.*————

She from the Forehead of a new-foal'd Colt
Th' excrescent Lump doth seek.————

The same Word is frequently taken in another Sense, and is described by Pliny to be virus distillans ab inguine equæ coitum maris appetentis, & in furorem agens. This was no less powerful than the former, as appears from Pausanias's Story of a Horse's Statue dedicated by one Phormis an Arcadian, which being infected by a Magician with the Hippomantis I am speaking of, so enraged all the Stone-Horses that passed that Way, that they would break their Bridles in Pieces, and throw their Riders, to come at it (b), and could not without great Difficulty and many Stripes be forced from it. Several of the Poets speak of its Effects; Ovid (c),

*Scit bene quid gramen, quid torto concita rhombo
Licia, quid valeat viras amantis equæ.*

She knows the Virtue of each Herb to move
The latent Seeds of a coy Lady's Love:
She knows the Rhomb, what Feats in Magic are,
From pois'nous Issue of a lustful Mare.

Virgil will have it to proceed from Lusitanian Mares impregnated by the Wind (d),

*Continuoque avidis ubi subdita flamma medullis

When at the Spring's Approach their Marrow burns,
(For with the Spring their genial Heat returns)
The Mares to Cliffs of rugged Rocks repair,
And with wide Nostrils puff the Western Air;
When (wond'rous to relate) the Parent Wind,
Without the Stallion, propagates the Kind;
Then fir'd with am'rous Rage they take their Flight
Through Plains, and mount the Hills unequal Height;
Nor to the North, nor to the rising Sun,
Nor Southward to the rainy Regions run,
But bearing to the West, and hov'ring there,
With gaping Mouths they draw prolific Air,
With which impregnate, from their Groins they shed
A slimy Juice by false Conception bred.
The Shepherds know it well, and call the same
Hippomanes, to note the Mother's Flame;
This gather'd in the Planetary Hour,
With noxious Weeds, and spell'd with Words of Pow'r,
Dire Stepdames in the Magic Bowl infuse,
And mix for deadly Draughts the pois'nous Juice.

Mr. Dryden.

The same Story is attested by Aristotle. Others make Hippomanes to be a Plant in Arcadia, which also was powerful in producing the forementioned Effects (a),

Ἱππομανὲς φύλον ἰσὶ παρ' Ἀρκασί· τῷ δ' ἴσιν πᾶσαι καὶ πᾶλοι μαινέσθαι αἰν' ἄρ' αὖ καὶ θοαὶ ἵπποι.

Ἰνυξ, is the Name of a small Bird, the Latin of which is not agreed on; some translate it passerculus, others will have it the same with torquilla, frutilla, or with Regulus. This Bird the Writers of Fables tells us (b) was once the Daughter of Pan and Pisbo, or Ecbo, and having inveigled Jupiter into Io's Love, was transformed by Juno; upon this she became the Darling of Venus, and retaining the same Inclinations she had formerly, still served to promote the Affairs

Affairs of Love: The first time the Goddess made use of her was in the Argonautic Expedition, when she invented Love-magick with Charms and Potions, a chief Ingredient whereof was this Bird, which she communicated to Jasen, to gain his Access to Medea's Affections. Hence Pindar (a),

Μαυδὸν ὄρνι Κουτρογόνια φέρει
 Πρῶτον ἀνδράποισι, λυταίς τ' ἔκκεσι·

 To Jasen first the Magic Charm display'd,

 And glowing Love into her Breast infuse;
 Nor Duty, nor Parental Love should bind,
 Too weak and feeble is that Force;
 When Iynx steers the Lover's Course,
 A safe Admittance he is sure to find.

H. H.

The Part most valued by Enchanters was the Tongue, which they looked on as having a sovereign Virtue in Love-potions: Sometimes they fasten'd the whole Bird to a Wheel of Wax, which they turn'd over the Fire till both were consumed, thus inflaming the Party in whom they had a mind to create Love. Others there are that will have ῥογὴ to signify nothing but a Musical Instrument; and some take it for all Sorts of Allurements.

To these may be added several Herbs, and Insects bred out of putrid Matter, with other Animals, such as the Fish called ἰχθυόεσσα, or remora; the Lizard, with another not much unlike it, called stellio and stincus; the Brains of a Calf, the Hair upon the Extremity of a Wolf's Tail, with some of his secret Parts; the Bones of the left Side of a Toad eaten by Ants, for these were thought to generate Love, whereas those on the right Side caused Hatred. Others took the same Bones, when the Flesh was devoured by Ants, and cast them into a Vessel of Water, wherein those that sunk, being wound up in a white Linen Cloth, and hung about any Person, inflamed him with Love, the others with Hatred. Other Parts of the Toad were used in poisonous Compositions; whence Juvenal (b),

At nunc res agitur tenui pulmone rubetæ.

But now with pois'nous Entrails of a Toad
 They urge their Husband's Fate.

To

To these others add the Blood of Doves, the Bones of Snakes, Scritch-Owls Feathers, Bands of Wool twisted upon a Wheel, (which were very much used on these Occasions, for their Resemblance to the soft Ties of Love) especially such as had been bound about one that hang'd himself; some of these are mentioned by Propertius (a),

*Improba non vicit me moribus illa, sed herbis,
Staminea rhombi ducitur ille rota;
Illum surgentis ranae portenta rubeta,
Et læta exsecris anguibus ossa trahunt;
Et strigis inventæ per busta jacentia plumæ,

Were there no Merit but a due Regard,
I should not fear my Rival's being prefer'd;
But she, too conscious of my pow'rful Charms,
By Spells and Magick tears him from my Arms;
The pois'nous Bones of swelling Toads she takes,
And mingles them with those of crested Snakes;
Then strait where Owls frequent she doth repair,
And picks their scatter'd Feathers up with Care;
Next she procures some fatal woollen Band
'That late bound him that dy'd by his own Hand.

H. H.

Several other Ingredients of Love-potions are mentioned in Latin's Verses cited by Apuleius (b).

*Philtæ omnia undique eruunt,
Antipathes illud quæritur,
Trochisci, iuges, tæniæ,
Radiculæ, herbæ, furculi,
Auræ ilicis, bicbordilæ,

From ev'ry Part they Magic Draughts procure,
For that much-fam'd Antipathes they seek,
Pills, Fillets, and those Love-enforcing Birds,
Roots too, and baneful Herbs, and sappy Sprigs,
With Scarlet Oaks, and with Hippomanes.

Other Sorts of Ingredients were Rags, Torches, and, in short, all Relics, and whatever had any Relation to dead Corpses, or Funerals. Sometimes a Nest of young Swallows was placed in a convenient Vessel, and bury'd in the Earth till they were famish'd; then

(b) Apolog.

then they open'd the Grave, and such of them as were found with Mouths shut, were thought conducive to allay the Passion of Love; but the rest, which perish'd with Mouths gaping for Food, were thought to excite it. To the same end they used Bones snatched from hungry and ravenous Bitches, which were believed to derive some Part of the eager Desire of those Animals into the Potion: Hence Horace give us this elegant Description of an Enchantress's Practices (a),

*Canidia brevibus implicata viperis
Crines & incompertum caput,
Jubet sepulchris caprificos erutas,
Jubet cupressos funebres,
Et uncta turpis ova ranæ sanguine,
Plumamque nocturnæ strigis,
Herbasque, quas & Iolchos, atque Iberia
Mittit venenarum ferax,
Et ossa ab ore rapta jejunæ canis,
Flammis aduri Colchicis.*

Canidia then does for the Charm prepare,
And binds with Snakes her uncomb'd Hair;
Maid, speed she cries, and pillage ev'ry Tomb;
Bring Cypress and wild Fig-tree home;
Let Eggs first steep'd in Blood of Toads be sought,
And Feathers from the Scritch-Owl brought;
Bring ven'mous Drugs, such as Iolchos yields,
And Poison from Iberian Fields;
Bring Bones from Jaws of hungry Bitches torn,
And those I'll seethe, and those I'll burn,
As first Medea did inform.

H. H.

To these they added another Ingredient more powerful than any of the rest, which the Poet has thus described in the same Ode (b);

*Abacta nulla Veja conscientia,
Ligomibus duris humum
Exhauriebat ingemens laboribus;
Quo posset infossus puer
Longo die bis terve mutatae dapis
Inemori spectaculo,
Cum promineret ore, quantum extant aqua
Suspensa mento corpora;
Exsucta uti medulla, & aridum jecur
Amoris esset poculum,
Interminato cum semel fixæ cibo
Intabuissent pupulæ.*

Vespa, who ne'er Remorse of Conscience felt,
Nor blush'd at her own horrid Guilt,
Toils at the Spade, and digs the fatal Pit,
In which th' unhappy Lad she set,
Where choicest Dainties, while his Life should last,
Or feast his Eyes, deny'd his Taste;
Just o'er the Brim appears his sickly Head,
As theirs who in the Rivers wade;
That there his Marrow drain'd and Liver dry,
Might with Love-potions her supply,
As soon as e'er his fainting Eye-balls shew'd Approaching Death for want of Food.

H. H.

Let us pass now to some other Arts they had of exciting Love : Some thought the Udder of an Hyæna tied about their left Arm, a good Expedient to entice to their Affections any Woman they fixed their Eyes on : others took πίτυρα, a sort of small and hard Olives, or (as others interpret it) Barley-bran, which either by itself, or made up in Paste, they cast into the Fire, hoping thereby to inspire the Flame of Love : Hence Simartha in Theocritus (a),

Νῦν θυσὴν τὰ πίτυρα ———

Now will I strew the Barley-bran.

Sometimes they used ἄλφιτα, or Flour, which the Scholiast upon Theocritus will have termed θυλήματα. That Poet has described this Custom, where he introduces his Enchantress thus calling out to her Maid (b) ;

Ἀλφίτ' αἰ τοὶ πρῶτον πυρὶ τάχιστα, ἀλλ' ἐπίπασσε,
Θίσυλι διδαίᾳ, πᾶ τὰς φρίδας ἐκπιπύσασαι ;
Ἡ γὰρ γέ τοι, μυσαρὰ, καὶ τὴν ἐπὶ χαρμα τίτυγμαί,
Πάσσ' ἄμα, καὶ λίσι ταῦτα, τὰ Δελφίδ' ἐστὶν πάσσον.

First burn the Flour, then strew the other on,
Strew it ; how ? where's your Sense and Duty gone ;
Bafe Thestylis, and am I so forlorn,
And grown so low, that I'm become your Scorn ?
But strew the Sakt, and say in angry Tones,
I scatter Delphid's perjur'd Delphid's Bones. Mr. Creech.

Instead of Bran or Flour, 'twas usual to burn Laurel, as we learn from the same Enchantress, who proceeds thus :

Δέλφιδ' ;

(a) V. 33.

(b) Ibid. v. 18.

Διφκίς ἔμ' ἀΐασεν, ἐγὼ δ' ἐπὶ Διφκίδι δάφην
 Αἶθω· ἥ' εἰς αὐτὰ λακίην μέγα κακωρύσσασα,
 Κηξακίης ἀφθῆν, πρὸς σκοπὸν εἶδομαι αὐτῆς,
 Οὕτω τοί κ' Διφκίς ἐν φλογὶ σάρα' ἀμαθύνει.

First Delphid injur'd me, he rais'd my Flame,
 And now I burn this Bough in Delphid's Name;
 As this doth blaze, and break away in Fume;
 How soon it takes! let Delphid's Flesh consume.

Mr. Creech.

'Twas likewise frequent to melt Wax, thereby to mollify the Person's Heart whom they desired: Hence she goes on,

Ὡς τῷτ' τὸν καρπὸν ἰγὺ σὺν δαίμονι τάκω,
 Ὡς τάκωιδ' ὅω' ἔρω· ὁ Μύνδιος αὐτίκα Διφκίς.

As the devoted Wax melts o'er the Fire,
 Let Myndian Delphis melt with soft Desire.

Sometimes they placed Clay before the Fire, together with Wax; that as one melted whilst the other hardened, so the Person that then rejected them, might have his Heart mollified with Affection, and inflamed with Desire, whilst their own became hard and unrelenting; or that his Heart might be rendered incapable of any Impression from other Beauties, but easy of Access to themselves. This seems to be Virgil's Meaning in the first of the following Verses: the latter two contain some of the Customs before described out of Theocritus.

*Limus ut hic durescit, & hæc ut cera liquefcit,
 Uno eodemque igni; sic nostro Daphnis amore;
 Sparge molam, & fragiles incende bitumine lauros;
 Daphnis me mahus urit, ego hanc in Daphnide laurum (a).*

As Fire this Figure hardens made of Clay,
 And this of Wax with Fire consumes away,
 Such let the Soul of cruel Daphnis be,
 Hard to the rest of Women, soft to me.
 Crumble the sacred Mole of Salt and Corn,
 Next in the Fire the Bays with Brimstone burn,
 And whilst it crackles in the Sulphur say,
 Thus I for Daphnis burn, thus Daphnis burns away.

Mr. Dryden.

It was customary to imitate all those Actions they had a mind the Person they loved should perform. They turn'd a Wheel round, praying praying he might fall down before their Doors, and rowl himself on the Ground. Thus Theocritus's Enchantress,

Ἵς δὲ δουρὶ ἰδὲ ῥόμβῳ ὁ χαλκῶς, ἐξ Ἀφροδίτας
'Ὡς κινῶ δουρὶ περὶ ἀμύληταισι θυγατρὶν.

And, Venus, as I whirl this brazen Wheel,
Before my Doors let perjur'd Delphid rowl.

We are told that it has been usual to compose an Image of Wax, and calling it by the Name of the Person to be inflam'd with Love, to place it near the Fire, the Heat whereof affected the Image, and the Person represented by it, at the same time (a) Virgil's Enchantress speaks of drawing it three times round the Altar.

terque hæc altaria circum
Effigiem duco.

Thrice round this Altar I the Image draw.

She had before taken care to have it bound, thereby to intimate the tying his Affections;

Terna tibi hæc primum triplici diversa colore
Licia circundo.

Three Threads I of three different Colours bound
About your Image.

It was not unfrequent to sprinkle enchanted Medicaments upon some Part of the House where the Person resided. Thus Theocritus's Enchantress commands;

Θίγυλι, νῦν δὲ λαβοῖσα τὸ τὰ θύρα ταυθ', ὑπόμαζον
Τὰς τῶν φθίας λαθυστρίων, ὥς ἔτι κ' νῦν
'Εκ θυμῷ δίδουμαι· (ὁ δὲ μου λόγον ἔδνα ποιεῖ)
Καὶ λόγ' ἐπιφθύσδουσα, τὰ Δελφιδῶ ὀγία πάσσει.

Now take these Poisons, I procure you more,
And strew them at the Threshold of his Door,
That Door where violent Love hath fix'd my Mind,
Tho' he regard not, cruel and unkind!
Strew them, and spitting say in angry Tones,
I scatter Delphid's, perjur'd Delphid's Bones. Mr. Creech.

If they could get into their Hands any thing that belonged to the Person whose Love they desired, it was of singular Use. The same Enchantress

(a) Wierns, lib. V. c. XI.

256 Of the Miscellany Customs of Greece.

Enchantress burns the ~~Border of Delphid's~~ Garment, that the Owner might be tortur'd with the same Flame;

Τὴν ἀπὸ τῆς χλαίρας τὸ κράσιδος ὄλισι Δελφίς,
Ὡγὼ τὴν τιλλοῖσα κατ' ἀγρίῳ ἐν πυρὶ βάλλω.

This Piece from dear false Delphid's Garment torn,
I tear again, and am resolv'd to burn.

Virgil's Enchantress deposits her Lover's Pledges in the Ground, underneath her Threshold,

*Has olim exuvias mihi perfidus ille reliquit,
Pignora cara sui; quæ nunc ego limine in ipso,
Terra, tibi mando; debent hæc pignora Daphnin.*

These Garments once were his, and left to me,
The Pledges of his promis'd Loyalty;
Which underneath my Threshold I bestow,
These Pawns, O sacred Earth, to me my Daphnis owe.

Mr. Dryden.

The Design of which Action seems to be the retaining her Lover, and securing his Affections from wandering.

Virgil has thus described another Method in the Nymph's Command to her Woman,

*Fer cineres, Amarylli, foras, rivoque fluenti,
Transque caput jace; ne respexeris: His ego Daphnin
Aggrediar, nihil ille Deos, nil carmina curat.*

Bear out these Ashes, cast them in the Brook;
Cast backwards o'er your Head, nor turn your Look;
Since neither Gods, nor God-like Verse can move,
Break out ye smother'd Fires, and kindle smother'd Love.

Mr. Dryden.

I shall only trouble you with one Expedient more, which was their tying Veneral Knots, to unite the beloved Person's Affections with their own:

*Necte tribus modis ternos, Amarylli, colores;
Necte, Amarylli, modo; & Veneris, dic, vincula necto.*

Knit with three Knots the Fillets, knit them streight;
And say, These Knots to Love I consecrate.

Her Caution about the Number of Knots is observable, for most of their Actions in these Rites were confin'd to the Number Three. Theocritus's Enchantress is no less exact in this Circumstance;

Σ

Ἐ; τρεῖς ἀκούσινδω, καὶ τρεῖς ταῖς νότια φωνῶ.

Thrice, thrice I pour, and thrice repeat my Charms.

Virgil has assigned the Reason hereof to the Pleasure the Gods were thought to take in that Number,

—Numero Deus impari gaudet.

Unequal Numbers please the Gods.

Whether this Fancy owes its Original to the supposed Perfection of the Number Three, because containing a Beginning, Middle, and End, it seems natural to signify all Things in the World; or whether to the Esteem the Pythagoreans, and some other Philosophers had for it, on the account of their Trinity; or lastly (to mention no more Opinions) to its Aptness to signify the Power of all the Gods, who were divided into three Classes, Celestial, Terrestrial, and Infernal, I shall leave to be determined by others. Thus much is certain, that the Ancients thought there was no small Force and Efficacy in unequal Numbers; whence we find Vegetius advising, that the Ditches round Encampments should be at the least nine Feet in Breadth, at the most seventeen, but always of an unequal Number (a): Shepherds are likewise advised to take care that the Number of their Sheep be not even (b): but the Number Three was acceptable to the Gods above all others; whence we find three fatal Sisters, three Furies, three Names and Appearances of Diana, according to the Poet:

—Tria virginis ora Dianæ.

Three different Forms does chaste Diana bear.

The Sons of Saturn, among whom the Empire of the World was divided, were three; and for the same Reason we read of Jupiter's fulmen trifidum, Neptune's Trident, with several other Tokens of the Veneration they had for this Number.

Many of their other Practices were the same with those used at common Incantations: The Charm, or Form of Verbes, had little Difference besides the proper Application to the present Occasion: Virgil's Nymph speaks of her Verbes as of the same Sort, and endued with the same Efficacy as Circe's;

—Nil hic nisi carmina desunt:

Ducite ab urbe domum, mea carmina, ducite Daphnin;

Carmina vel celo possunt deducere Lunam,

And in the winding Cavern splits the Snake.

Mr. Dryden.

And the Herbs and Minerals used in other magical Operations, were no less sought for in this, there being in them (as 'twas thought) some wonderful Powers, which were equally prevalent in all supernatural and miraculous Effects ; whence we find Virgil's Nymph alluring Daphnis to her Love by the very same Medicaments which Mæris had found effectual in performing other magical Feats :

*Has herbas, atque hæc Ponto mibi læsa venena
Ipse dedit Mæris ; nascuntur plurima Ponto ;
His ego sæpe lupum fieri, & se condere silvis
Mærin, sæpe animas imis exire sepulchris,
Atque satas alio vidi traducere menses.*

These pois'nous Plants for Magic Use design'd,
(The noblest, and the best of all the baneful Kind)
Old Mæris brought me from the Pontic Strand,
And cull'd the Mischief of a bounteous Land ;
Smear'd with the pow'ful Juices on the Plain
He howls a Wolf among the hungry Train ;
And oft the mighty Necromancer boasts,
With these to call from Tombs the stalking Ghosts ;
And from the Roots to tear the standing Corn,
Which whirl'd aloft, to distant Fields is borne.

Mr. Dryden.

The Gods likewise (to mention no more Instances of their Agreement) were the same that superintended all magical Arts, as we learn from Theocritus Simætha, who is introduced invoking the Moon and Hecate to her Assistance ;

——— Ἀλλὰ Σιλάνη
Φαῖν κελὼν, τὴν γὰρ ποταίσσομαι ἄσυχ'α, δαῖμον,
Τὰ χθονία θ' ἑκάτα, τὰν καὶ σκύλακις τρομοῦν

——— Μουσ.

— Moon, shine bright and clear,
To thee I will direct my secret Pray'r;
To thee and Hecate, whom Dogs do dread,
When stain'd with Gore she stalks amidst the Dead,
Hail, frightful Hecate, assist me still,
Make mine as great as fam'd Medea's Skill. Mr. Creech.

Thus far concerning their Arts in exciting Love. It may be enquired in the next Place, whether they had any Means to allay the Passion, when once rais'd? Now it appears, that it was common to set the Patient at Liberty by the Help of more powerful Medicaments, or Dæmons superior to those that had bound him; whence we find Canidia in Horace complaining, that all her Enchantments were render'd ineffectual by Arts superior to her own;

*Quid accidit? cur dira barbaræ minus
Venena Medæ valent,
Quibus superba fugit ulta pellicem,
Magni Cræonius filiam,
Cum palla, tabo munus imbutum, novam
Incendio nuptiam abstulit?
Atqui nec herba, nec latens in asperis
Radix fefellit me locis.
Indormit unctis omnium cubilibus
Oblivione pellicum.
Ab, ab, solutus ambulat venistæ
Scientiæ carmine.*

Am I so serv'd? my base degrading Charms,
Shall Colchus foster greater Harms?
What! shall the Present spell'd with Magic Rage,
Medea's vengeful Breast assuage?
Since the fallacious Gift to Flames is turn'd,
And her unhappy Rival burn'd:
Then what am I? There's not an Herb doth grow;
Nor Root, but I their Virtues know,
And can the craggy Places show;
Yet Varus flights my Love, above my Pow'r,
And sleeps on rosy Beds secure;
Ah! much I fear some Rival's greater Skill
Defends him from my weaker Spell. H. H.

But Love inspir'd without the Assistance of Magic, scarce yielded to any Cure; Apollo himself could find no Remedy against it, but is introduced lamenting in these Words (a);

Inventum

(a) Ovid. Metam. l. 7. 52.

*Inventum medicina meum est, opiferaque per orbem

Hæc mihi! quod nullis amor est medicabilis herbis,
Nec profunt domino, quæ profunt omnibus, artes.*

Med'cine is mine, what Herbs and Simples grow
In Fields and Forests, all their Pow'rs I know,
And am the great Physician call'd below;
Alas! that Fields and Forests can afford
No Remedies to heal their Love-sick Lord!
'To cure the Pains of Love no Plant avails,
And his own Physic the Physician fails.

Mr. Dryden.

The same Poet professes, in another Place, that no Art was ever able to set a Lover at Liberty (a);

*Nulla recantatas deponent pectora curas,
Nec fugiet vivo sulphure visus amor.
Quid te Phasiacæ juverunt gramina terræ,
Cum cuperes patria, Colchi, manere domo?
Quid tibi profuerunt, Circe, Perseides herbæ,
Cum tibi Neritias abstulit aura rates.*

Not all the Pow'r of Verse with Magic join'd
Can heal the Torture of a Love-sick Mind;
Altars may smok with expiatory Fire,
Too weak to make a well-fix'd Love retire,
Love by Repulse still works the Passion higher.
What Help, Medea, did thy Potions yield?
Not all the Drugs that stock'd the Colchian Field,
Cou'd Ease to your distracted Breast afford,
When forc'd from home, you lov'd the foreign Lord.
Nor greater the Relief that Circe found,
When left by her Ulysses homewards bound;
Nor Herbs nor Poisons could her Grief allay,
When envious Blasts had stol'n her Dear away.

H. H.

But notwithstanding the Difficulty of this Cure, there is not wanting Variety of Prescriptions adapted to the several Causes and Occasions of the Malady; as appears from the old Nurse's Words to Myrrha desperately in Love (b);

*Sen furor est, habeo quæ carmine sanet, & herbis;
Sive aliquis nocuit, magico lustrare ritu.
Ira Deum sive est, sacris placabilis ira.*

Madness

Madness by sacred Numbers is expell'd,
And Magic will to stronger Magic yield;
If the dire Wrath of Heav'n this Fury rais'd,
Heav'n is with Sacrifice and Pray'r appeas'd.

Mr. Hopkins.

The Antidotes may be reduced to two Sorts; they were either such as had some natural Virtue to produce the designed Effect; such are Agnus Castus, and the Herbs reputed Enemies to Generation (a). Or, secondly, such as wrought the Cure by some occult and mystical Power, and the Assistance of Dæmons; such are the Sprinkling of the Dust wherein a Mule had roll'd herself (b), the tying Toads in the Hide of a Beast lately slain (c), with several others mentioned by Pliny; amongst which we may reckon all the Minerals and Herbs, which were looked on as Amulets against other Effects of Magic, for those were likewise proper on such Occasions; whence the Poets usually mention Caucasus, Colchis, and other Places famous for magical Plants, as those which alone could furnish Remedies and Antidotes against Love; I shall only set down one Instance, wherein the Poet enquiring what should be the Cause his Mistress had so forsaken him, puts this Question among others (d);

————— An quæ
Letæa Prometheis dividit herba jugis.

What! do those odious Herbs, the Lover's Bane,
Growing on Caucasus, produce this Pain?

By Prometheus's Mountain he means Caucasus, which was remarkable for Herbs of sovereign Power, that sprung out of Prometheus's Blood.

The Infernal Gods were call'd upon for Assistance, as may be learn'd from Virgil's Dido, who signifies her pretended Design to dispel the Remains of her Love for Aeneas in these Words (e);

Sacra Jovi Stygio, quæ rite incepta paravi,
Persicere est animus, finemque imponere curis,
Dardaniique rogam capitis permittere flammæ.

Thus will I pay my Vows to Stygian Jove,
And end the Cares of my disastrous Love;
Then cast the Trojan Image on the Fire,
And as that burns my Passion shall expire.

Not long before the same Person, relating how the Diviners assay'd to restore Dido to her right Mind, says, they invok'd the Gods of Night (whereby she means the Shades below) to aid them;

*Heu! Sacri vatum errores, dum numina Noctis

J. A.

I shall only mention one Expedient more, whereby they cured themselves of Love; 'tis the Water of Selemnus, a River that falls into the Sea near Argyra in Achaia. The Story is thus: Selemnus, a beautiful young Shepherd in those Parts, was belov'd by Argyra, the Nymph, from whom the Town and Fountain of that Name were called; but the Flower of his Age being over, the Nymph deserted him, upon which he pined away, and was transformed into a River by Venus; after this he still retain'd his former Passion, and (as the Patrensiens report) for some Time convey'd his Waters, through a subterraneous Passage, to Argyra's Fountain, in the same Manner that Alpheus was said to join himself with Arethusa, till by Venus's Favour, the Remembrance of her was caus'd to vanish quite out of his Mind. Hence it came to pass, that as many as wash'd themselves in this River, were made to forget that Passion. Thus Pausanias (b).

Thus much concerning their Love. I am not ignorant, that Enlargements might be made in every Part of this Chapter; but what has been said will (I hope) be sufficient to satisfy the Reader's Curiosity, without treipassing too far upon his Patience.

CH A P. XI.

Of their MARRIAGES.

THE first Inhabitants of Greece liv'd without Laws and Government, no Bounds were prescribed to their Passions, their Loves (like the rest of their Desires) were unconfin'd, and promiscuous Mixtures, because forbidden by no Human Authority, were publickly allowed. The first that restrained this Liberty was Cecrops, who having rais'd himself to be King over the People, afterwards called Athenians, amongst many other useful Institutions, introduced that of Marriage (a). Others refer the Honour of this Institution, together with the Invention of Dancing, to Erato, one of the Muses; but (some rather understand that Story of the Marriage-Solemnity, the regular Conduct whereof, they say, was first ordered by Erato. However that be, it was in some Time received by all the Grecians; for no sooner did they begin to reform their savage and barbarous Course of Life, and join themselves in Towns and Societies, but they found it necessary to confine the unruly Lusts of Men, by establishing lawful Marriage, with other Rules of good Manners.

Marriage was very honourable in several of the Grecian Commonwealths, being very much encouraged by their Laws, as the abstaining from it was discountenanced, and in some Places punished; for the Strength of States consisting in their Number of People, those that refused to contribute to their Increase, were thought very cold in their Affections to their Country. The Lacedæmonians are very remarkable for their Severity against those that deferred marrying, as well as those who wholly abstained from it (b). No Man amongst them could live without a Wife beyond the Time limited by their Lawgiver, without incurring several Penalties; as first, the Magistrates commanded such once every Winter, to run round the publick Forum naked; and to increase their Shame, they sung a certain Song, the Words whereof aggravated their Crime, and exposed them to Ridicule. Another of their Punishments was, to be excluded from the Exercises, wherein (according to the Spartan Customs) young Virgins contended naked (c). A third Penalty was inflicted upon a certain Solemnity, wherein the Women dragg'd them round an Altar, beating them all the Time with their Fists (d). Lastly, they were depriv'd of that Respect and Observance which the younger Sort were obliged to pay to their Elders; and therefore saith Plutarch (e), no Man found fault with what was said to Derpyllidas, a great Captain, and one that had commanded Armies, who coming into the Place of Assembly, a young Man, instead of rising and making room, told him, Sir, you must not expect that Honour from me being young, which cannot be returned to me by a Child of yours, when I am old. To these we may add the Athenian Law (a), whereby all that were Commanders, Orators, or intrusted with any public Affair, were to be married, and have Children, and Estates in Land; for these were looked on as so many Pledges for their good Behaviour, without which they thought it dangerous to commit to them the Management of public Trusts.

Polygamy was not commonly tolerated in Greece, for Marriage was thought to be a Conjunction of one Man with one Woman; whence some will have γάμος derived, κατὰ τὸ δύο ἀνὰ ἑκάστην, from two becoming one. When Herodotus reports that Anaxandrides the Spartan had two Wives, he remarks, that it was contrary to the Custom of Sparta (b). The rest of the Grecian Cities did, for the most part, agree herein with the Lacedæmonians; only upon some emergent Occasions, when their Men had been destroyed by War, or other Calamities, Toleration was granted for marrying more Wives; an Instance whereof we have at Athens in Euripides's Time, who, as some say, conceived an Hatred against the whole Sex, for which he is famous in Story, by being harraßed with two Wives at once (c). Socrates is said to have been married to Xantippe, and Myrto, at the same time (d), and Athenæus concludes it was then reputed no Scandal, because we never find any of his Enemies casting it in his Teeth (e); but some think the Matter of Fact may be justly called in question, and in Plutarch's Opinion, Panætius of Rhodes, ἱκανῶς ἀνελπίσται has fully confuted it in his Discourse concerning Socrates (f).

The Time of Marriage was not the same in all Places: The Spartans were not permitted to marry till they arrived at their full Strength (g); and though I do not find what was the exact Number of Years they were confined to, yet it appears from one of Lycurgus's Sayings, that both Men and Women were limited in this Affair; which that Lawgiver being asked the Reason of, said, his Design was that the Spartan Children might be strong and vigorous. The Athenian Laws are said once to have ordered, that Men should not marry till above 35 Years of Age; for Human Life being divided by Solon into 10 Weeks (ἑβδομάδικ), he affirmed, in barum hebdomadam quinta maturitatem ad stirpem reliquendam homini inesse; that in the fifth of these Weeks Men were of Ripeness to multiply their Kind (h); but this depended upon the Humour of the Law-giver, nothing being generally agreed to in this Matter. Aristotle (i) thought 37 a good Age, Plato 30; and Hesiod was much of the same Judgment, for thus he advises his Friend:

The Time to enter on a marry'd Life
Is about Thirty, then bring home a Wife;
But don't delay too late, or wed too young,
Since Strength and Prudence to this State belong. J. A.

Women married sooner than Men; some of the old Athenian Laws permitted them to marry at 26, Aristotle at 18, Hesiod at 15.

Ἡ δὲ γυνὴ τέτορξεν, ὥμαρτι δὲ γαμοῖτο (β).

A Wife when fifteen chuse, then let her wed,
I'th' Prime for Hymen's Rites, for th' Joys of th' Marriage-bed.

Where the Poet advises that Women be permitted to grow to Maturity in four Years, i. e. four after ten, and marry in the fifth, i. e. the fifteenth. Others think he means they must continue unmarried four Years after their Arrival at Woman's Estate, i. e. at fourteen Years, and marry in the fifth, i. e. the nineteenth. But as the Women were sooner marriageable than Men, so their Time was far shorter, it being common for Men to marry much older than Women could expect to do, as Lyfistrates complains in Aristophanes (c);

ΑΥ. Περὶ τῶνδε κορῶν ἐν τοῖς θαλάμοις γηρασκυῶν ἀνῆρμαι,
ΠΡ. Οὐκὲν γ' ἀνδρὲς γηρασκυῶσιν; ΑΥ. Μὰ Δι' ἀλλ' ἐκ εἴπας ὁμοίον,

Οὐδὲς ἰδέσθαι γῆμαι ταύτην, ὅττι μὲν δὲ καθῆλαι.

LY. 'Tis some Concern to me, when I reflect
On the poor Girls, that must despair of Man,
And keep a stale and loathed Celibacy.
PR. What? ha'n't the Men the same hard Measures then?
LY. Oh! no, they have a more propitious Fate,
Since they at Sixty, when their Vigour's past,
Can wed a young and tender Spouse to warm
Their aged Limbs, and to repair their Years;
But Womens Joys are short and transient;
For if we once the golden Minutes miss,
There's no recalling, so severe's our Doom;
We must then long in vain, in vain expect,
And by our Ills forewarn Posterity. J. A.

266 Of the Miscellaneous Customs of Greece.

The Times or Seasons of the Year most proper for Marriage were, according to the Athenians, some of the Winter Months, especially January, which for that reason was called γαμηλιόν (a). Hence the Person in Terence, the Scene of whose Fable is laid in Greece, affirms the Soothsayers had forbidden to enter upon Matrimony till Winter (b) ;

*Aruspex vetuit ante brumam autem quid novi
Negotii incipere*—————

Until the seasonable Time of Year,
When frosty Weather binds all Things, the Priest
Counsell'd us by all means to put off Marriage.

The most convenient Season was when there happen'd a Conjunction of the Sun and Moon, at which Time they celebrated their Festival called Θιουγάμια, or Marriage of the Gods (c). Clytemnestra in Euripides having ask'd Agamemnon when he design'd to give Iphigenia in Marriage to Achilles, he answers, that the Full-Moon was the fittest Time ;

Ὅταν σιλήνης εὐτυχῆς ἔλθῃ κύκλῳ (d).

When the Full-Moon darts forth her lucky Rays.

Themis in Pindar advises that Thetis be married to Peleus in the same Season (e) ; for by διχορμίδις ἰσπέραι he means the Full-Moon, which happens in the middle of Lunar Months, which were used in the old Grecian Computations. The Poet's Words run thus :

————— Ἐν διχορμίδισσι
Δὶ ἰσπέραις, ἰρατὸν
Λύοι καὶ χαλινὸν ὕ-
-φ' ἤρωϊ παρθενίας.

When crescent Phæbe is about to shine
In a full Orb with radiant Light,
Then may he marry, then may she invite
The Hero, both their Loves to join,
Then let them blend, and tie, their Joys, their All combine.

This Custom seems to have proceeded from an Opinion they had of the Moon's Power in Generation. Some prescribe other Days :
Hesiod

(a) Olympiodorus in Meteora Aristotelis, Eustathius in Iliad. c'. (b) Pharmiore.
(c) Hesiodi Scholastes Hæsiop. (d) Iphigenia in Aulid v. 717. (e) Iphigenia.
Od. 4. p. 751. Edit. Benedicti.

Hesiod thinks the fourth most convenient, because (as one of the Scholiasts observes) it was dedicated to Venus and Mercury (a).

Ἐν δὲ τετάρτῃ μηνός ἀγισθαὶ ἐς οἶκον ἀκοῖσιν,
Οἰωνὸς κρείσας οἱ ἐπ' ἑγγυάλι τάττω ἀρίστοι.

On the fourth Day of the Moon's Age your Wife
Bring home, to enter on the Cares of Life ;
But first take heed yourself to certify
In the respective Signs of Augury.

J. A.

The sixteenth, or, as some, the eighteenth, is mentioned as most unfit of all others (b) ;

Ἐκτῇ δ' ἡ μέσση μάλ' ἀσύμφορός ἐστι φιλοῦσιν,
Ἀνδρογόνου τ' αγαθῇ, κέρη δ' αὖ συμφορός ἐστι
Οὔτε γινέσθαι πρῶτ', ἢ τ' ἀρ' γάμου ἀνιέσθωσαν.

Whatever Trees you plant the sixteenth Day,
They'll never thrive, but wither and decay ;
But if your Wife's deliver'd of a Son,
His Life with lucky Prospects is begun ;
But Girls, if born, or marry'd now, will see
Their Years annoy'd with Woe and Misery.

J. A.

Several other Days were look'd on as favourable, or otherwise, in this and all other Affairs, which it would be too tedious to enumerate in this Place.

Most of the Greeks look'd on it as scandalous to contract within certain Degrees of Consanguinity. Hermione in Euripides speaks of the Custom of Brethren's marrying their Sisters, with no less Detestation than of Sons marrying their Mothers, or Fathers their Daughters (c) ;

Ταῦτ' οἱ πάνι τὸ βάρβαρον γένος
Πατρὸς τε θυγατρὶ παῖς τε μητρὶ μέγνυται,
Χόρη τ' ἀδελφῷ, διὰ φύου δ' οἱ φίλτατοι
Χαρῶσι, καὶ τῶν ἐόντων γ' ἐνξείρδει νόμος.

Such Things Barbarians act, such Villainies
Are the Result of Lust, or perverse Will,
Where no Laws cement, and no Right confines,
Fathers their Daughters, Sons their Mothers force
To an incestuous Bed, and hurry'd on
By boiling Lusts Brothers with Sisters join ;
All Things are free, the most exalted Love
Can't 'gainst incentive Lust secure your Life.

Several of the barbarous Nations seem to have overlook'd the Rules of Decency, and allowed unlawful and incestuous Mixtures ; the Persians are especially remarkable for such Practices ; for their Magi, the most sacred Persons among them, were the Off-spring of Mothers and their Sons : Hence Catullus (a),

*Nascetur Magus ex Gelli matrisque nefando
Conjugio, & discat Perficum aruspicium :
Nam Magus ex matre & gnato gignatur oportet,
Si vera est Persarum impia religio.*

The Lacedæmonians were forbidden to marry any of their Kindred, whether in the direct Degrees of Ascent and Descent, but a collateral Relation hindered them not, for Nephews married their Aunts, and Uncles their Nieces ; an Instance whereof Herodotus gives us in Anaxandrides, who married his Sister's Daughter (b). The Marriages of Brothers and Sisters were utterly unlawful, tho' countenanced by several Examples of their Gods ; an ample Account hereof may be seen in Byblis's Words, when in love with her Brother Cannus, where notwithstanding the Greatness of her Passion, she confesses that no Examples were sufficient to license her incestuous Desires (c) ;

*Dii melius ! Dii nempe suas habuere sorores
Sic Saturnus Opim junctam sibi sanguine duxit, Oceanus Tethyn, Junonem Rector Olympi.
Sunt superis sua jura. Quid ad cœlestia ritus
Exigere humanos, diversaque fœdera tento ?
Aut nostro vetitus de corde fugabitur ardor ;
Aut, hoc si nequeo, peream precor ante, toroque
Mortua componar, positæque det oscula frater :
Et tamen arbitrium quæris res ista duorum.
Finge placere mihi, scelus esse videbitur illi ;

 Have lov'd like me, have their own Sisters took.
 Great Saturn, and his greater Off-spring Jove,
 Both stock'd their Heaven with incestuous Love ;
 Gods have their Privilege, why do I strive
 To strain my Hopes to their Prerogative ?
 No, let me banish this forbidden Fire,
 Or quench it with my Blood, or with't expire ;
 Unstain'd in Honour, and unhurt in Fame,
 Let the Grave bury both my Love and Shame ;
 But when at my last Hour I gasping lie,
 Let only my kind Murderer be by ;
 Let him, while I breathe out my Soul in Sighs,
 Or gaze't away, look on with pitying Eyes ;
 Let him (for sure he can't deny me this)
 Seal my cold Lips with one kind parting Kiss :
 Besides 'twere vain should I alone agree
 To what another's Will must ratify,
 Could I be so abandon'd to consent
 What I have past for good and innocent
 He may, perhaps, as worst of Crimes resent.
 Yet we amongst our Race Examples find
 Of Brothers, who have been to Sisters kind ;

 Cou'd crown her Wishes in a Brother's Love.
 But whence could I these Instances produce ?
 How came I witty to my Ruin thus ?
 Whither will this mad Phrenzy hurry on ?
 Hence, hence you naughty Flames, from hence be gone,
 Nor let me e'er the shameful Passion own.

Mr. Oldham.

Yet 'twas not reputed unlawful in several Places for Brothers to marry their Half-sisters ; and sometimes their Relation by the Father, sometimes by the Mother, was within the Law. The Lacedæmonian Lawgiver allowed Marriages between those that had only the same Mother, and different Fathers (a). The Athenians were forbidden to marry Sisters by the same Mother, but not those by the same Father, as we are told by Philo the Jew (b). An Instance here-of we have in Archeptolis, Themistocles's Son, who married his Sister Mnesiptolema (c) ; as likewise in Cimon, who being unable thro' his extreme Poverty to provide a suitable Match for his Sister Elpinice, married her himself. Nor was this contrary to the Laws or Customs of Athens, as Athenæus (d) is of Opinion ; for, according to Plutarch's (e) Account, it was done publicly, and without any Fear of the Laws :

(a) Philo Judeus, lib. de specialibus legibus ad præceptum vii. contra machos.

(b) Libro de legibus specialibus.

(c) Plutarchus, Themistocles.

(d) Lib. XII.

(e) Cimon.

Laws: Cornelius Nepos likewise (a) assures us, it was nothing but what the Custom of their Country allowed. We find indeed that Cimon is sometimes taxed for his Familiarity with Elpinice; but this is only to be understood of his taking her after she had been married to Callias; for it appears from the forecited Authors, that Cimon first married her himself, then gave her to Callias a rich Athenian; after which he again became familiar with her, which indeed was look'd on as Adultery, she being then another Man's Wife.

Most of the Grecian States, especially those that made any Figure, required their Citizens should match with nothing but Citizens; for they look'd upon the Freedom of their Cities as too great a Privilege to be granted upon easy Terms to Foreigners or their Children. Hence we find the Athenian Laws sentencing the Children of such Matches to perpetual Slavery; an Account whereof has been given in one of the foregoing Books (b). This was not all, for they had a Law, that if a Foreigner married a Free-woman of Athens, it should be lawful for any Person to call him to account before the Magistrates called Thesmothetæ, where, if he was convicted, they sold him for a Slave, and all his Goods were confiscated, and one third part of them given to his Accuser. The same Penalty was inflicted upon such Citizens as gave foreign Women in Marriage to Men of Athens, pretending they were their own Daughters, save that the Sentence of Slavery was changed into Ignominy, whereby they were deprived of their Voices in all public Assemblies, and most other Privileges belonging to them as Citizens. Lastly, if any Man of Athens married a Woman that was not free of that City, he was fined 1000 Drachms (c). But these Laws were not constant and perpetual. Sometimes the Necessity of the Times so far prevailed, that the Children of strange Women enjoyed all the Privileges of freeborn Citizens. The old Law, which prohibited the Men of Athens to marry Strangers, having been some time disused, was revived by Pericles, and afterwards, at the Instance of the same Person, abrogated by a Decree of the People (d), but again renewed in the Archonship of Euclides, at the Motion of Aristophan, when it was enacted, that no Persons should be free Denizens of Athens, unless both their Parents were free (e).

Virgins were not allowed to marry without the Consent of their Parents; whence Hero in Musæus (f) tells Leander, they could not be honourably joined in Marriage, because her Parents were against it.

Ἀμφαδὲν ἐ δὴν αἰετὰ γαμοῖς ὁρίοισι πιλάσσαι
Οὐ γὰρ ἰμοῖς τοκίσσω ἱπυαδὲν

My Parents to the Match will not consent,
Therefore desist, it is not pertinent.

Hermione

Hermione in Euripides (a) professes she had no concern about her Marriage, but left that wholly to her Father;

Νυμφιυμάτων μὴ τῶν ἰμῶν παλὴρ ἰμὸς
Μιζήματα ἔξω, καὶ ἰμὸν φρονεῖν ταῖς.

I'm not concern'd, my Father will take care
Of all Things that respect my Nuptials.

The Mother's Consent was necessary as well as the Father's; and therefore Iphigenia, in Euripides, was not to be given in Marriage to Achilles till Clytemnestra approv'd the Match (b). Nor were Men permitted to marry without consulting their Parents; for even the most early and ignorant Ages were too well acquainted with the Right which Parents have by Nature over their Children, to think these had Power to dispose of themselves without their Parents Consent. Achilles, in Homer, refuses Agamemnon's Daughter, and leaves it to his Father Peleus to chuse him a Wife (c);

Ὡ γὰρ δὴ με σώσει θεοὶ, καὶ ἔτι καὶ ἔκωμαι,
Πηλεὺς δὴν μοι ἑκάστα γυναῖκα γαμήσσειαι αὐτός.

If by Heaven's Blessing I return a Bride,
My careful Father will for me provide.

And Pamphilus, in Terence, is betroth'd by his Father Simo, who is introduced thus speaking (d);

— bac fama impulsus Chremes
Ultro ad me venit, unicam gnatam suam
Cum dote summa filio uxorem ut daret;
Placuit; despondi; hic nuptiis dictus est dies.

When Virgins had no Fathers, their Brothers disposed of them. Thus we find Creon promising his Sister Jocasta to any Person who should destroy the Sphinx that infested Thebes; and Orestes gave his Sister Electra to his Friend Pylades. When they had neither Parents nor Brethren, or if their Brethren were not arrived to Years of Discretion, they were disposed of by their Grandfathers, those especially by the Father's Side; when these failed, they were committed to the Care of Guardians, called πίτροποι, or κύριοι (e). Sometimes Husbands betrothed their Wives to other Persons upon their Death-beds; as appears from the Story of Demostrhenes's Father, who gave his Wife Cleobule to one Apobus with a considerable Portion. When he was dead, Apobus took the Portion, but refused to marry the Woman; whereupon Demostrhenes made his Complaint to the Magistrates,

(a) Andromache. (b) Iphigen. in Aulide. (c) Iliad. i. v. 39. (d) Andria, Act I. Scen. 1. (e) Demostrhenes in Stephanum testem.

Magistrates, and accused him in an elegant Oration (a). And that this Custom was not unusual, appears from the same Orator's Defence of Phormio, who being a Slave, and faithful in his Business, his Master gave him both his Liberty and his Wife.

They had several Forms of betrothing, such as this cited by Cle-mens the Alexandrian (b) out of Menander, Παῖδός σου ἐγὼ τὴν ἡγουμένην δίδωμι σοι τὴν ἑαυτοῦ θυγατέρα ; i. e. I give you this my Daughter to make you Father of Children lawfully begotten. The Dowry was sometimes mentioned, as we find in Xenophon (c), where Cyaxares betrothes his Daughter to Cyrus, Δίδωμαι σοι, ὦ Κύρῃ, αὐτὴν ταύτην τὴν γυναῖκα θυγατρὸς ἑσθαι ἑμῆν, ἐπιδιδωμαι δ' αὐτῇ ἑγὼ καὶ πάντα τὰ Μῆδων παῖδας, i. e. I give you, Cyrus, this Woman who is my Daughter, with all Media, for her Dowry. The Persons to be married plighted their Faith to one another, or to their Relations. Thus Clitophon and Lucippe swear to each other (d), the former to be constant and sincere in his Love, the latter to marry him, and make him Master of all she had. Ovid makes the next Ceremony after betrothing, to be the Virgin's Oath to her Lover ;

Promisit pater hanc, hæc & juravit amanti.

Her Father promis'd, she an Oath did take
Her faithful Lover never to forsake.

The Ceremony in promising Fidelity was kissing each other, or giving their Right-hands, which was the usual Form of ratifying all Agreements. Hence Clytemnestra in Euripides calls for Achilles's Right-hand, to assure her of his sincere Intention to marry her Daughter (e) ;

— Δέξιαι γ' ἑμῶν χεῖρα
Σύναψον, ἀέχην μακαρίαν νεμεφυνμάτων.

Join your Right-hand to mine, a sacred Tye
Of this our Compact——

The Thebans had a Custom for Lovers to plight their Faith at the Monument of Iolaus, who was a Lover of Hercules, and assisted him in his Labours (f), and was therefore believed to take care of Love Affairs when advanced into Heaven.

In the primitive Ages Women were married without Portions from their Relations, being purchased by their Husbands, whose Presents to the Woman's Relations were called her Dowry. Thus we find Shachem bargaining with Jacob and his Sons for Dinah: Let me find grace in your Eyes (saith he) and what ye shall say unto me, I will give: Ask me never so much Dowry and Gift, and I will give according as ye shall say unto me; but give me the Damsel to Wife (g).

Several Instances may be produced to the same Purpose, were not this Custom too well known to need further Confirmation; only thus much must be observed, that when Civility and good Manners came to be established in any Place, it was usually laid aside; for Aristotle makes it one Argument to prove that the ancient Grecians were an unciviliz'd People, because they us'd to buy their Wives (a). No sooner therefore do we find them beginning to lay aside their barbarous Manners, but this Practice was left off; insomuch that Medea in Euripides complains that Women were the most miserable of all rational Creatures, because lying under a Necessity of purchasing their own Masters at a dear Rate (b). So frequent became the Custom for Women to bring Portions to their Husbands, that some make the most essential Difference between γυνή and πόρνη, i. e. Wife and Concubine, to consist in this, that Wives had Dowries, whereas Concubines were usually without; whence one in Plautus, the Scene of whose Action is laid in Greece, speaks thus (c);

— Sed ut inops,

*Infamis ne sim, ne mihi hanc famam differant, ne
Germanam meam sororem in concubinatum tibi
Sic sine dote dedisse magis, quam in matrimonium.*

Tho' I am low i' th' World, and am but mean,
I'll offer some small Matter for her Dowry,
Lest this Asperſion should be thrown abroad,
That she as Mistress, not as Wife, is to you.

Hence Men who were content to marry Wives who had no Fortune, commonly gave them ποικίλα, an Instrument of Writing, whereby the Receipt of their Dowry was own'd. The rest of their Distinction was chiefly founded upon this; for she that had a Dowry, thought it a just Title to a greater Freedom with her Husband, and more Respect from him, than such as ow'd their Maintenance to him. Hence Hermione in Euripides is enraged, that the Captive Andromache should pretend to be her Rival in Pyrrhus's Affection.

Κόσμος μὲν ἀμφὶ πρᾶλ' χρυσίας χλιδῆς,

So sensible was Lycurgus of this, and some other Inconveniencies attending this Custom, that partly for fear Wives should domineer over their Husbands, and partly out of a Desire that Men should chuse Wives more for the sake of their Persons than their Money, and that no Woman's Poverty should hinder her of an Husband, he quite banish'd it out of Sparta (a). Solon agreed herein with Lycurgus for all the Dowry he permitted the Athenian Wives to have, was a little inconsiderable Household-stuff, and three Suits of Clothes : " For " (says Plutarch) he would not have Marriages for Gain, or an " Estate, but for pure Love, kind Affection, and to get Children (b)." But some are of Opinion that this Ordinance had no Relation to Dowries, but only to those Gifts which the Bride brought with her, called παύλα, of which an Account will afterwards be given. And that Solon did not prohibit other Dowries, appears hence, that Men who had no Sons, were allowed to entail their Estates upon Daughters ; and every Heiress (the Athenians called them κληρονομία) was obliged to marry her nearest Relation, lest her Estate should go out of the Family ; but in Consideration of her Dowry, she had the Privilege, when her Husband was impotent, to lie with his nearest Kinsman ; which Law was contrived against those who, conscious of their own Inability, would match with Heiresses for the Portion's sake, and make use of Law to put a Violence upon Nature ; yet (saith my Author) 'twas wisely done to confine her to her Husband's nearest Kinsman, that the Children might be of the same Family. A farther Privilege Heiresses had above other Women was, that their Husbands were obliged to lie with them thrice a Month (c). When there were any Orphan Virgins without Inheritance, whom they term'd ἑήσοι (d), he that was next in Blood was oblig'd to marry her himself, or settle a Portion on her, according to his Quality ; if he was πρωτοκλιμύριος, one of the first Rank, five minæ, or 500 Drachms ; if ἑκτοκλιμύριος, of the second Rank, 300 ; if τρίτοκλιμύριος, of the third Rank, 150 : But if she had many Relations equally allied, all of them contributed their their Proportions to make up the Sum : If there were more than one Virgin, their nearest Kinsman was only obliged to marry, or give a Portion to one of them ; and upon his Refusal to do this, any Person was allowed to indict him before the Archon, who was obliged to compel him to his Duty ; and if he refused to put the Law in Execution, was fined 1000 Drachms, which were consecrated to Juno, the Goddess of Marriage (a). Terence has several Hints at these Customs ; for his Scenes being laid in Athens, he frequently describes the Usages of that City. Thus in Phormio (b) ;

*Lex est, ut orbæ, qui sint genere proximi,
Eis nubant, & illos ducere eadem hæc lex jubet.*

'Tis an establish'd Form in Attic Laws,
That the next Male Kinsman without Demur,
Must be t'an Orphan Girl in Wedlock join'd.

In the same Comedy (c) he expressly mentions the five Mina given by the Men of the first Quality ;

*Est mihi facta injuria est, verumtamen
Potius quam lites sceler, aut quam te audiam,
Itidem ut cognata si sit, id quod lex jubet
Dotem dare, abduce hanc, minas quinque accipe.*

Tho' I've been herein bubbled here's the Sum,
Five Mina, as the Law enjoins, and take her
As my Kinswoman ; this I'll rather do
Than sacrifice my Patience to your Talk,
Or enter once the Clutches of the Law.

J. A.

It may be observed farther, that afterwards, when Money became more plentiful, the Relations of these Virgins increased their Dowries ; for we are told by Eustathius (d) that the Πυλαγοισιομίδειοι gave ten Mina, and Men of inferior Quality without doubt rais'd their Contributions proportionably. When Virgins had no Relations to provide for them, and were descended from Men that had been serviceable to their Country, it was common for the State to take care of them ; a remarkable Instance hereof we have in Aristides's two Daughters, to each of which the City gave 300 Drachms for her Portion (e). Nor is it to be wonder'd (saith my Author) that the Athenians should make Provision for those that lived in their City, when hearing that the Grand-daughter of Aristogiton (a famous Patriot that opposed Pisistratus's Sons) was in a low Condition in the Isle of Lemnos, and like to want an Husband, because without a Portion, they sent for her to Athens, married her to a Person of great Quality, and gave her a Farm belonging to the City for a Dowry. Indeed however generous the Love, of the more ancient Athenians was, their Successors commonly made Money the chief Tie of their Affections; and the later Spartans were of the same Humour, even whilst the Laws of Lycurgus were still in being; for we find that whilst Lyfander was in a flourishing Condition, and pass'd for a wealthy Man, several Persons engaged themselves to his Daughters, who seeing afterwards how poor and honest he died, broke off their Contract. 'Tis true the Spartans punished them severely for their Perfidiousness; but that seems rather done out of respect to Lyfander's Memory (a), than to their ancient Constitution, which, as soon as Riches began to be possessed and admired at Sparta, seems to have been laid asleep. The Grecians, indeed, notwithstanding the Prohibition of some of their Laws, were generally Lovers of Money, and seem to have match'd rather for the sake of that, than other more commendable Qualifications. Nor was this a late Corruption, but entertained even in the primitive Times; for we find Andromache called by Homer (b) Πολυδώρη, i. e. according to Eusebius, Πολυπλοκή, possessed of a large Dowry; and before the Use of Money was common, Virgins increased their Husbands Estates, by adding Sheep and Oxen to their Flocks and Herds, wherein the Richer of those Ages chiefly consisted; whence (as the same Author observes) they are sometimes honour'd with the Epithet of ἀλφεισβίαι. And from the Expende Fathers were at on this Account, came the Proverb, Παῖς μοι τρωδωδὸς ἦν, μὴ τριλογυῖα.

Which is nothing but a Father's Wish, that his Children might rather be Boys than Girls. As to the Quantity of Dowries, nothing can be determined, the Humours of Persons, and their particular Exigences, being the Laws they were usually directed by in such Cases; only it may be observed, that in Crete Sisters were put off with half the Share of the Brothers (c). The Dowry was named προίξ, sometimes μέλιν, κατὰ το μέλισσιν τὸν ἄνδρα, or ἰδίᾳ, q. ἡδονή, παρὰ τὸ ἡδύ, as designed to procure the Favour and Good-will of the Person they were given to; sometimes φέρη, from φέρω, because brought by the Wife to her Husband. Some of the same Names are used for the Man's Dowry or Portion, as Eusebius has observed. When the Wife had a Dowry, it was commonly expected her Husband should make her a Settlement, to be a Maintenance for her in case he should happen to be parted from her by Death or Divorce; this was usually an House or Land, and was anciently called ἀντίδομα (d), being a Return equivalent to the Dowry; afterwards it was frequently termed ἀντιφέρη, i. e. a Recompence for her Dowry, or υποβολή from υποβάλλω, because it was υποβάλλομενοι τῷ φερῇ, given instead of her Dowry. But where no such Security was given, Husbands bands that divorced their Wives were obliged to return their Dowry. The same Obligation reached their Heirs, upon Refusal to maintain the Wives of those whose Estates they inherited: Hence Telemachus, in Homer, having suffered many Affronts, and sustained great Losses by his Mother Penelope's Gallants, yet thinks it not prudent to dismiss her to her Father Icarus, because that could not be done without returning her Portion (a);

Καὶνὸν δὲ με πῶλλ' ἀνδάνειον
 Ἰκαρίῳ, αἶν' αὐτὸς ἔχει ἀπὸ μητέρα πέμψω.

I could not now repay so great a Sum
 To the old Man, should I dismiss her home, Against her Will—

Which Words seem to intimate farther, that if the Woman departed of her own Accord, the forementioned Obligation became void. Yet, in case the Woman departed from her Husband in the manner which was allowed by the Laws, her Dowry was restored to her. This we find to have been the Practice at Athens.

In the same City it was the Custom, when any Man's Estate was confiscated, that the Wife's Dowry should be assigned to her.

In the same City it was decreed, that he who did not restore to his Wife when divorced, her Dowry, should pay nine Oboli every Month whilst it was detained for Interest. If this was neglected, an Action termed οἰσὶ δίκη, was preferred against him in the Odeum by the Woman's (ἐπίτροπος) Guardian (b). This is to be understood of the Dowries of those of the lowest Class of Citizens, to whom, as hath been before observed, Solon allotted 150 Drachmæ; for it being the Custom for one μᾶ, which is equivalent to 100 Drachmæ, to bring in an Interest of six Oboli every Month, the Interest of 150 Drachmæ must amount to nine Oboli.

Hence the Payment of the Dowry was also attested by sufficient Witnesses, and also by a written Instrument called ποικίλα. If these could not be produced, the Husband was not obliged to allow his Wife a separate Maintenance. If the Woman deceas'd without Children, her Dowry was repaid to the Person by whom she had been endow'd (c); for the Dowry was intended as a Maintenance to the Children, and therefore when the Woman's Sons came to be of Age, they enjoy'd the Mother's Dowry whilst she was living, only allowing her a competent Maintenance (d). What other Things Wives brought to their Husbands above their Portions were called παράφορα, ἐπίτροικον, ἐπιμήλια, and by the latter Greeks ἐξέτροικα.

Before Men married 'twas customary to provide themselves an House to settle in; to which Practice Hesiod's Advice is an Allusion.

Οἶκον μὲν ἀνέτισα, γυναῖκά τε (a) ; ———

First see you have a Settlement, and Wife.

The Woman in Theocritus asks her Lover whether he was making an House for her.

Τύχῃς μοι θαλάμῳ, τύχῃς κὶ δῶμα κὶ αὐλῃς ;

What? are you furnishing an House! Have you Provided Beds?

To which he replies,

Τύχῃ σοι θαλάμῳ. ———

Beds I procure, don't fear. ———

Protefilaus, in Homer, being called to the Trojan War soon after his Marriage, is said to have left δόμον ἡμιτελῆ, his House half finished (b) ;

Τὸ δὲ κὶ ἀμφιδρυφῆς ἄλοχον Φυλάκῃ ἐλέλειπτο,
Καὶ δόμος ἡμιτελής. ———

At Phylace he left behind his Spouse,
There to lament in an half-finish'd House.

Some indeed will have Ὀἶκος to be meant of his Family, which is called ἡμιτελής, because he left it before he had any Children (c). The same Ambiguity is found in Valerius Flaccus, who has thus imitated Homer (d) ;

——— Conjux miseranda Caico
Linquitur, & primo domus imperfecta cubili.

Nigh where Caicus in clear Streams doth glide,
His solitary House and Wife abide,
Unblest with th' Off-spring of the Bridal Night,
Who might solace the Thoughts, the pensive Mind de-

Catullus has express'd the same Thought thus (e) ;

Had e'er appeas'd the heav'nly Deities.

J. A.

But the former Sense seems more agreeable to the Way of speaking in those Times, it being then the constant Custom to build an House before Marriage. Hence Women, whose Husbands died soon after Marriage, are said to be left Widows in a new-built House; as the Greek Scholiast observes upon that Verse of Homer (a) :

Χερῶσας δὲ γυναῖκα μυχῷ θαλάμοιο νέοιο,

The Athenian Virgins were presented to Diana before it was lawful for them to marry. This Ceremony was performed at Brauron, an Athenian Borough; it was called ἀρκλία; the Virgins themselves ἀρκτοι, and the Action ἀρκλία, the Custom being instituted to appease the Goddess, who had been incensed against some of the Athenians for killing a Bear; the Story whereof is described at large in one of the precedent Books (b). Another Custom there was for Virgins, when they became marriageable, to present certain Baskets full of little Curiosities to Diana, to gain Leave to depart out of her Train (Virgins being looked on as that Goddess's Peculiar) and change their State of Life. To which Custom Theocritus has this Allusion (c) ;

Ἡδ' αἰ Εὐβόλοιο Καναφόρος ἄμμιεν Ἀναξή
' Ἄλσος ἐπ' Ἀρήμιδος. —————

Anaxo, Eubul's Daughter, full of Love,
Came to me with a Basket for Diana's Grove.

The Action was called κανηφορίῳ, and the Virgins κανηφόροι, from the Basket they carried. The Bœotians and Locrians had a Custom, for Persons of both Sexes before their Nuptials, to offer Sacrifices to Euclia, who had an Image and Altar in their Market-place. This Euclia some will have to be the Daughter of Menætius, and Sister of Patroclus; others rather think her the same with Diana (d); 'tis not improbable that Diana received this Surname from Patroclus's Sister, or that she was worshipped by the Name of Diana Euclia; for Diana being the Goddess of Virginity, 'tis not to be wonder'd that one honour'd for the Preservation of her Virginity, should be worshipped under her Name, since 'tis common to attribute to those that were first eminent for any Sort of Virtue or excellent Quality, the Actions of all that afterwards imitated them. Hence we have several Jupiters, Minervas, Bacchuses, Herculeses, &c. the famous Exploits of many Persons distant as well in Time as Place, being ascribed to one Hero. To return, we find Diana concerned in the preparatory Solemnities before all Marriages; for a married Life being her Aversion, 'twas thought necessary for all that enter'd upon it, to ask her Pardon for dissenting from her. This was done by Prayers and several Sorts of Sacrifices; whence Agamemnon in Euripides, pretending he was going to match Iphigenia with Achilles, speaks thus to Clytemnestra (a);

Ἐκπιπὶ παῖδα δωμάτων πατρὸς μέτα,
Ὅς χερσὶν παρῖσι νύτρεπισμέναι,
Προχύται τι βαλθεὶν πῦρ καθάρσιον ἐκ χερσὶν,

Send Iphigenia quickly forth with me,
Hymen is now propitious; all Things wait
To grace the solemn Gladness of this Day;

Whose Blood in grateful Vapours must arise,

J. A.

These were called γαμήλιοι εὐχαι, προγάμια, προλείδιοι εὐχαι, or προλείδια, for τέλος and γάμος are Terms of the same Signification (b), the former denoting Marriage, either as a general Name for all Sorts of Rites and Ceremonies; or (as some say) because the long-ing Expectations of married Persons are thereby consummated, and brought to an End; or because Persons that are married become complete and perfect Men, and renounce all the Customs and Desires of Childhood; whence γήμιαι, to marry, is termed τέλειεσθαι, to be made perfect (c). Married Persons are called τέλειοι (d), are said to be ἐν βῶ τέλει. The same Epithet is commonly given to the Gods that had the Care of Marriage; whence we read of Jupiter τέλειος, Juno τέλεια (e), &c. These Gods were likewise render'd propitious before their Nuptials, and the Sacrifices with other Devotions offered them, were all known by the same Names with those offered to Diana; Juno's were called (besides their general Name) Ἡρατέλεια, from her own Name, which in Greek is Ἥρα. Several other Deities had their Share in these Honours. Minerva, firnamed παρθένα the Virgin, had a peculiar Title to them at Athens, upon the same Account they were paid to Diana; and 'twas not permitted a Virgin to marry till she had paid her Devotion to this Goddess's Goddeſs's Temple in the Citadel (a) Venus likewiſe, and all the reſt of the γαμηταὶ θεοὶ, Gods ſuperintending Marriage, were invoc'd (b). The Lacedæmonians had a very ancient Statue of Ἀφροδίτη Ἥρα, i. e. Venus Juno, to which all Mothers ſacrificed when their Daughters were married (c). The moſt ancient Athenians paid the ſame Honour to Heaven and Earth, which were believed to have a particular Concern in Marriages, the latter of theſe being rendered fruitful by the benign Influence of the former, and therefore a fit Emblem of Marriage (d). The Fates and Graces being thought firſt to join, and then preſerve the Tie of Love, were Partakers of the like Reſpect (e); and 'tis probable that ſeveral other Deities at different Places, and for different Reaſons, claimed a Share therein. The Day wherein this Ceremony was performed, was uſually that which immediately went before the Marriage (f); 'tis commonly called γαμνλία κρηῶν, (g), from the Cuſtom they had of ſhaving themſelves on this Occaſion (h), and preſenting their Hair to ſome of the fore-mentioned Deities, or other Gods, to whom they had particular Obligations. Pollux (i) mentions ſome, who offered their Hair to Diana, and the ſatral Siſters. At Træzén the Virgins were obliged to conſecrate their Hair to Hippolytus, the Son of Theſeus, who died for his Chaſtity, before they entered into Marriage-Bonds (k). The Megarenſian Virgins offered their Hair, with Libations, at the Monument of Iphince, Daughter of Alcathous, who died a Virgin; the Delians to Hecæerge and Opis (l); the Arginians and Athenians (to trouble you with no more Inſtances) to Minerva. Statius has mentioned this Ceremony (m), ſpeaking of that Goddeſs's Temple.

J. A.

But theſe Names (γαμνλία and κρηῶν) were at Athens peculiar to one Day of the Solemnity, called Apaturia, wherein Fathers had their Children entered into the public Register, at which Time they offered Sacrifices for their Proſperity, with a particular Reſpect to to their Marriages, and commonly shaved off some of their Hair to be dedicated to some of the Deities, especially her to whose Honour that Festival was celebrated. But tho' the Time of presenting their Hair might not be constantly the same, yet the Custom itself seems to have been universally observed, not only by Women, but Men, who rarely failed of performing this Ceremony upon their Arrival to Years of Maturity. Some of their Locks were carefully preserved for this Use; and therefore when Pentheus in Euripides threatens Bacchus to shave his Hair, the young God tells him it would be an impious Action, because he designed it for an Offering to some Deity (a); ἱερὸς δ' ὠλόκαμος, τῇ Διὶ δ' αὐτὸν τρέφω.

This Lock is sacred, this I do preserve
As some choice votive Off'ring for the God.

The Hair was called ὠλόκαμος θρηνητικός, because presented to a God, as an Acknowledgment of his Care in their Education. The Deity thus honour'd was commonly Apollo, as Plutarch reports, when he tells us, that Theseus, according to the Custom of the Grecian Youth, took a Journey to Delphi, to offer the First-fruits of his Hair to the God of that Place (b). But this could not concern the poorer Sort, to whom such Journeys would have been too expensive. Nor were those of better Quality under any strict Obligation to pay this Honour to Apollo, it being not unusual to do it to other Gods, such especially as were thought to have protected their Infancy from Danger, and preserved them to Manhood. Instances are needless in a Thing so well known, only it may be necessary to observe, that the Deities of Rivers were commonly thought to have Title to this Respect; which Conceit seems to have proceeded from the Opinion of some Philosophers, who thought all Things were first produced out of Water, and still nourished and rendered fruitful by it; whence the Poets took occasion to give the Epithet καρσιόφρος to watery Deities, as well as Apollo, these being no less instrumental in the Growth and Increase of living Creatures than the Sun, whose Influences, without Moisture, can contribute nothing to the Production or Preservation of Life; hence both were looked on as deserving their Returns of Gratitude for the first Gift, as well as Continuance of Life (c). I shall only trouble you with the following Example of Hair presented to Rivers, whereby what I have said concerning the Reason of this Custom, will be confirmed; for Achilles his preserving his Hair as a Present to Sperchius, on condition he should return home in Safety, and afterwards shaving it when he found the Fates had decreed that he should be slain before Troy, plainly shews that they used to preserve their Hair to the Gods, as a grateful Acknowledgment

(a) Bacch. v. 594. (b) These. (c) Eusebius Ilind. ψ'. ubi hanc rem fusius enarrat.

ment of their Care in preserving them. Homer's Words run thus, when he speaks of Patroclus's Funeral (a);

Ενθ' αὐτ' ἀλλ' ἰνόησι ποδάρεκς δῖος Ἀχιλλεύς,
 Σταῖς ἀπάνευθε πυρῆς ξανθὴν ἀπικαίρειο χαίτην,
 Τὴν γὰρ Σπέρχειω πόσιμα τρίφε τιλεδύωσας
 Ὀχθήσας δ' ἄρα εἶπεν, ἰδὼν ἐπὶ εἴνοπα νόστον.
 "Σπέρχει, ἄλλως σοι γι παῖδε ἤρσατο Πηλεΐδης,
 "Σοί τε κόμην κερμεν ῥίξεν δ' ἱερὸν ἱκατόμβην,
 "Πολύκοιλα δ' ἰορχα παρ' αὐτόθι μῆλ' ἱερόσιν
 "Ες πηγὰς, ὅθι τοι τίμας, βωμός τε θυήεις
 "Ὡς ἤραθ' ὁ γέρον, σὺ δὲ οἱ νόον ἐκ ἱτελισσας
 "Νῦν δ' ἐπιὶ εἰ νόμοι γι φίλῃ ἐς πατρίδα γαῖαν,
 "Πατρόκλῳ ἦροί κόλῃ ὀπάσαιμι φέρεσθαι.

Then did Achilles, that brave Prince, prepare
 For other Rites, he shav'd his golden Hair,
 While at a Distance from the Pile he stood,
 That Hair, he'd nourish'd, Sperchius, for thy Flood;
 Then, as he look'd upon the Stream, he said,
 (While Grief and Anguish did his Soul invade)
 "My loving Father made a Vow (in vain)
 "That when I see my native Soil again,
 "I should my Hair in pious Duty shave
 "To thee, and thou an Hecatomb should have;
 "That fifty Rams I to thy Source should bring,
 "And pay them at thy Shrine a thankful Offering:
 "Thus, thus old Peleus vow'd; but since I can't "Return, and you'll his Wish by no means grant,
 "My dear Patroclus, I'm resolv'd shall have
 "These Locks, it is for him I do 'em shave. J. A.

And the Custom of nourishing Hair on religious Accounts seems to have prevailed in most Nations. The Jeus had their Nazarites. Osiris the Egyptian consecrated his Hair to the Gods, as we learn from Diodorus (b). And to mention no more, we find in Arrian's Account of India, that it was a Custom there κομᾶν τῷ θεῷ, to preserve their Hair for some God, which they first learnt (as that Author reports) from Bacchus.

To return: Before the Marriage could be solemnized, the other Gods were consulted, and their Assistance implor'd by Prayers and Sacrifices, which were usually offer'd to some of the Deities that superintended these Affairs, by the Parents, or other Relations of the Person to be married. Nor can these Offerings be thought the same with those already mentioned, and called προσέλεια, since we find them plainly distinguished by Euripides in a Dialogue between Agamemnon

(a) Iliad, ψ. v. 140.

When the Victim was open'd, the Gall was taken out and thrown behind the Altar (b), as being the Seat of Anger and Malice, and therefore the Aversion of all the Deities who had the Care of Love, as well as of those who became their Votaries. The Intrails were carefully inspected by Soothsayers, and if any unlucky Omen presented itself, the former Contract was dissolved, as displeasing to the Gods, and the Nuptials prevented. The same happened upon the appearing of any ill-boding Omen without the Victim ; thus we find in Achilles Tatius, that Clitophon's designed Marriage with Calligone was hindered by an Eagle, that snatch'd a Piece of the Sacrifice from the Altar (c). The most fortunate Omen which could appear, was a Pair of Turtles, because of the inviolable Affection those Birds are said to have for each other. The same may be observed of κορώναι, which were thought to promise long Life or Happiness, by reason of the Length of their Lives, which is proverbially remarkable, and the Perpetuity of their Love ; for when one of the Mates is dead, the other remains solitary ever after (d) ; for which Reason the Appearance of those Birds single, boded Separation or Sorrow to the married Couple ; whence (as we are told by Horapollo) it was customary at Nuptials to sing Κόρον ἐκκόρει κορώνην, whereby the Maids were put in mind to watch, that none of these Birds coming single should disturb the Solemnity ; or perhaps it might be done to avert the pernicious Influences of that unlucky Omen, if it happen'd to appear. Another Remedy against evil Omens was this, they wrote over their House-doors, ΜΗΔΕΝ ΕΙΣΙΤΩ ΚΑΚΟΝ, LET NO EVIL ENTER. To this Sentence they sometimes joined the Master of the House's Name, as appears from a new-married Person, who wrote thus upon his House ;

Ο ΤΟΥ ΔΙΟΣ ΠΑΙΣ ΗΡΑΚΛΗΣ ΚΑΛΑΙΝΙΚΟΣ
ΕΝΘΑΔΕ ΚΑΤΟΙΚΕΙ ΜΗΔΕΝ ΕΙΣΙΤΩ ΚΑΚΟΝ.

This gave Occasion to Diogenes's Jest ; for seeing upon the Door of a vicious Fellow the fore-mentioned Prayer, then (said he) let not the Master of the House enter (a).

The Bridegroom's Garments were all dy'd, as Suidas (b) has observed out of Aristophanes. However that be, both the married Persons and their Attendants were richly adorned, and according to their Quality.

Σοὶ δὲ γάμος· σχίδον ἦν, ἵνα χρη καλὰ κ' αὐτὴν

The Time was nigh compleated, when a Bride
You was to be, and richly dress'd in Clothes,
With your Attendants on that solemn Time.

They were likewise deck'd with Garlands of various Herbs and Flowers ; whence Clytemnestra in Euripides speaks thus to Achilles about her Daughter Iphigenia (c) ;

Ἄλλ' ἄμυνον, ὃ δῖας παῖ, τῇ τ' ἱμῇ δυσπραξίᾳ,

Tho' I had crown'd her to be wedded to thee.

J. A.

The Herbs were usually such as some way or other signified the Affairs of Marriage, as those sacred to Venus, or (which are mentioned by the Scholiast (d) upon Aristophanes) σισυμβέριον, μήκων, σήσαμον, &c. Cakes made of Sesame were likewise given at Marriages, that Herb being πολυγόρον, remarkable for its Fruitfulness according to the same Author. The Bæotians used Garlands of wild Asparagus, which is full of Prickles, but bears excellent Fruit, and therefore was thought to resemble the Bride, who had given her Lover some Trouble in courting her and gaining her Affections, which she recompensed afterwards by the Pleasantness of her Conversation. The House where the Nuptials were celebrated was likewise deck'd with Garlands ; a Pessle was tied upon the Door, and a Maid carried a Sieve (e), the Bride herself bearing φρύγιον, φρύγιον, φρύγιον (f), an earthen Vessel, wherein Barley was parched to signify her Obligation to attend the Business of her Family.

The Bride was usually conducted in a Chariot from her Father's House to her Husband's in the Evening (a), that time being chosen to conceal her Blushes. Thus we find in Catullus's Epithalamium ;

*Vesper adest, juvenes consurgite, vesper Olympo
Exspectata diu vix tandem lumina tollit :
Surgere jam tempus, jam pingues linquere mensas :
Jam veniet virgo, jam dicetur Hymenæus.*

She was placed in the Middle, her Husband sitting on one Side, and one of his most intimate Friends on the other, who for that Reason was called πάροχος. This Custom was so frequent, that when the Bride went to her Husband's House on foot, the Person who accompanied her retained the same Name. The same was called νμφιωτής, παρανυμφός, and παρανυμφός (b), tho' this is more commonly used in the Feminine Gender, and signifies the Woman that waited upon the Bride, sometimes called νμφεύτρια. When the Bridegroom had been married before, he was not permitted to fetch the Bride from her Father's House, but that Care was committed to one of his Friends, who was termed νμφαγωγός (c), or νυμφόγωγος, which Words are likewise taken for the Persons that assisted in making up the Match, and managing the Concerns which related to the Marriage, who, if Women, were called προμνήστριαι, προμνήστριαι, &c. One thing farther may be observed in the Bride's Passage to her Husband's House, viz. that Torches were carried before her, as appears from the Messenger in Euripides, who says he called to mind the Time when he bore Torches before Menelaus and Helena (d) ;

Νῦν ἀναμῆμαι τὸν σὲν ὕμναιον παλιν,
Καὶ λαμπάδων μεμνήμεθ' ἄς, τετραέροισι

I call to mind as Yesterday the Pomp
Of your Procession on the Wedding-day,
How you was carried in a Coach and four,
While I with Torches blazing in the Air
Drove foremost on from your dear Parents House,
That happy Nurs'ry of your tender Years.

These Torches were usually carried by Servants, as appears from the following Words of Hesiod (e) ;

The Servants then did flaming Torches bear,
Which darted forth a quiv'ring Light from far.

They were sometimes attended with Singers and Dancers, as Homer acquaints us in his Description of Achilles's Shield (a) ;

Ἐν δὲ δύν ωίοισι πόλεις μερόπων ἀνθρώπων

With nice and curious Touchees next appear
Two stately Cities, in one Nuptials are ;
Here polish'd Art with Nature doth agree
In framing Figures of Festivity,
Faests, Revels, Balls, the Sculpture represents,
With various Sorts of Music-Instruments,
Lamps shine with Brightness on the solemn State,
While the brisk Bridegroom leads his charming Mate ;
Measures young Men observe with active Feet,
While the Pomp does advance along the Street ;
The Music plays, Hymen, Hymen, they cry,
While Aged Matrons stand admiring by.

The Song they were entertained with in their Passage was called ἀεμάτιος μῦθος, from ἄεμα, the Coach they rode in, the Axle-tree whereof they burnt when arrived at their Journey's end, thereby signifying that the Bride was never to return to her Father's House. The Rhodians had a peculiar Custom of sending for the Bride by a public Cryer. When the Bridegroom entered the House with his Bride, it was customary to pour upon their Heads Figs, and divers other sorts of Fruits, as an Omen of their future Plenty (b). The Day of the Bride's Departure from her Father was celebrated in manner of a Festival, and called Προσχαίρησις (c). It seems to have been observed at her Father's House before she departed, being distinct from the Nuptial Solemnity, which was kept at the Bridegroom's House, and began at Evening, the usual Time of the Bride's Arrival there.

The Bride being come to the Bridegroom's House, was entertained with a sumptuous Banquet, called by the same Name with the Marriage, viz. γάμος, as Pollux hath observed from the following Verse in Homer ;

Ἐλάτῳ

(a) Iliad c. v. 490. (b) Aristophanis Scholia, in Plutum. p. 78. (c) Harporation, Suidas.

Εἰλαπὶν' ἢ γάμον, ἐπεὶ ἐκ ἱερῶν τάδε γ' ἔστιν.

A Shot-free Banquet, or a Marriage-feast,
Not such as is by Contribution made.

Whence δαίειν γάμον is to make a Nuptial Entertainment. Thus Homer (a);

—— Δαίσειν δὲ γάμον μετὰ Μυρμιδόνεσσιν.

To make a Marriage-Feast for th' Myrmidons.

The same Poet has this Expression in other Places (b);

—— Δαίνεῖα γάμον πολλοῖσιν ἔτησιν.

Making a Nuptial-Banquet for his Friends.

What was the Design of this Entertainment we learn from Athenæus, who (to pass by the Joy and Mirth it was intended to promote) tells us there were two Reasons for it; the first was, the Respect due to the Gods of Marriage, who were involved before the Feast, and had no small Share in it; and 'tis thought by some that most of the Græcian Festivals were first observed on this Ground. The second End of this Entertainment was, that the Marriage might be made public (c), for all the Relations of the married Couple were invited as Witnesses of their Marriage, and to rejoice with them; whence the young Man in Terence concludes, the Marriage he there speaks of could not be presently consummated, because Time was required to invite Friends, and to make necessary Preparations (d);

*Ducenda est uxor, ut ais; concedo tibi:
Spatium quidem apparandis nuptiis,
Vocandi sacrificandi dabitur paululum.*

That he's oblig'd to marry her I grant;
But then some Time before must be allow'd
For the procuring of all Requisites;
His Friends must be invited to the Wedding,
And he address the Gods with Sacrifice.

H. H.

During the Solemnity the Company diverted themselves, and honoured the Gods of Marriage with Music and Dancing; we seldom read of a Marriage without them. All the Songs were called ὑμναῖοι, or ὑμνῆες. Thus both Homer and Hesiod.

The Romans used the same Term (a);

Hymenæum, turbas, lampadas, tibicinas.

Your Hymens, Hubbubs, Flambeaus, and Strappers.

This Name was taken from the frequent Invocations of Hymen, or Hymenæus, the God of Marriage always made in these Songs; as in this Verse of Catullus, Io Hymen, Hymenæe Hymen ades, O Hymenæe.

This Hymenæus, we are told, was an Argian, whom (b) they received to the Number of their Gods, and thus remembered for a generous Action, in delivering certain Athénian Virgins from the Lust and Cruelty of some Pelasgians. Others derive the Words ἀπὸ τῆ ἡμῶ νάϊου from the married Couple's inhabiting together; others, lastly, from ὑμῶ, which signifies the membrana virginalis.

About the Time of their Entertainment there were several significant Ceremonies relating some way or other to the State of Marriage. One at Athens was this: There came in a Boy cover'd with Thornboughs and Acorns, carrying a Basket full of Bread, and singing Ἐφ' ὅς τις κακὸν, εὖρος ἄμεινον, i. e. I have left the worse, and found the better. Which Saying was used at one of their Festivals, when they commemorated their Change of Diet, from Acorns to Corn; but seems at this Time to have signified all the Happiness which the married Persons were entering upon, and that Marriage was preferable to a single Life. The Boeotæmonians had a Custom of carrying about a Sort of Cakes, made in various Figures, and called χοῦρις, whilst they danced and commended the Bride in Songs (c).

When the Dances were ended, the married Couple were conducted to the Marriage-Bed, called in Latin, lectus genitalis, in Greek, ἀδων τομφοδία, or γαμικὴ, or (when the Persons were first married, and in their Youth) κορίδιος λίκος. It was richly adorn'd, as the Quality of the Person would bear, the Covering was usually Purple, whence the Poet (d), Purpureumque tuum consterneus veste cubile.

Spreading a Garment o'er thy purple Bed.

Apollonius speaks of the same Colour, and Flowers wherewith they used to strow it (e);

Then richly they adorn'd the Marriage-Bed.
 A costly purple Skin they o'er it spread ;
 And that the Nuptials they might celebrate
 With more magnificent and pompous State,
 The beauteous Nymphs brought in their snowy Breasts
 Flowers of various Colours. ————— H. H.

In the same Room there was commonly placed a Side-Bed, called κλίνη παραδουρος (a), ὑπὲρ τῆ τῶν σαῖδα μὴ ἀδυμῆσαι, as Pollux accounts for the Custom (b). But before they went to Bed, the Bride bath'd her Feet, whence Trygaeus in Aristophanes (c) intending to marry Opera, no sooner brings her to his House, but commands his Servants to provide a Vessel of Water, then to make ready the Bed.

Ἄλλ' ἔστω γ' ὡς τάχιστα ταύτῃ λαβών,
 Καὶ τὸν σκεῖλον καὶ ἀκλυεὶ κ' ἴδμεν ἵδμεν,
 Στέρψθι μοι κ' τῇδε κερδίδι λίχῃ.

Bring home my Bride as soon as possible,
 Then wash the Vessel, and the Water warm,
 And next prepare for us the Nuptial Bed.

This Water the Athenians always fetch'd from the Fountain Callirrhoe, afterwards called Εμάκρυνος, from nine Cisterns supplied by it with Water ; the Person that brought it was a Boy nearly allied to one of the married Couple, whom they termed παιδοφόρος from his Office (d). This being done, the Bride was lighted to Bed with several Torches, for a single Torch was not enough, as may be observed from the Miser in Libanius (e), that complains he could not light the Bride to Bed with one Torch. Round one of the Torches the married Person's Mother tied her Hair-lace, which she took from her Head for this Use. Seneca alludes to this Custom (f) ;

————— *Non te duxit in thalamos parens
 Comitata primos, nec sua festas manu
 Ornavit ades, nec sua letus facies
 Vittæ revinxit.* —————

The Relations of the married Persons assisted in the Solemnity, and it was looked on as no small Misfortune to be absent; the Mothers especially were assiduous in lighting Torches when their Sons Wives entered the Houses. Jocasta in Euripides severely chides Polynices for marrying in a foreign Country, because she, with the rest of his Relations and Friends, were deprived of their Offices at his Nuptials (a);

Σὶ δ', ὦ τέκνον, ἢ γάμοισι δὴ κλέω

Are join'd in Wedlock in a foreign Land,
There taste the Pleasures of a genial Bed,
And on a Stranger propagate your Kind;
This, this is Matter of most killing Grief
To me, and your good Grandfire Laius,
When we reflect upon those coming Ills,
That must undoubtedly attend the Match;
For neither I, as well becomes the Care
Of happy Mothers, lighted up the Torch,
And blest'd the Nuptials by that pious Act;
Nor old Ismenus, rich in rowling Streams,
Furnish'd out Water for your Nuptial Washings.
Nor was the Entrance of your Bride proclaim'd
Through Theban Streets; but all as unconcern'd
As when no Native does bring home his Bride. H. H.

The Bride's Mother had no less a Right to this Office, for we find Clytemnestra, tho' professing all due Submission to Agamemnon, when desired by him to absent herself from Iphigenia's Marriage; redoubtfully refusing it, as a Thing against all Justice, notwithstanding his Promise to perform her Part of the Ceremony (a);

The married Couple being shut together in the Chamber, the Laws of Athens obliged them to eat a Quince, whereby was intimated, that their first Conversation ought to be pleasing and agreeable (b). The Husband then loos'd his Wife's Girdle, whence ἄνω ζώνη is to deslower, and γυνὴ λυσιζώνη, a Woman who has lost her Virginity. This Girdle was not (as some seem to fancy) worn by Maids only, but used as well after Marriage as before, being designed to secure the weaker Sex from the sudden Attempts of Men inflamed with Lust, whence Nonnus calls it σαῶφρον, and when he introduces the Satyrs endeavouring to embrace certain Virgins, we find their Honour secured by it (c). The same appears farther from the Mention which Authors make of untying Women's Girdles in Child-birth, and from calling such Girls only ἀπάρτοι, i. e. not having a Girdle, as were not arrived to Maturity.

At this Time the young Men and Maids stood without the Door, dancing, and singing Songs, called ἑπιθαλάμια, from θαλάμη, the Bride-chamber, and making a great Noise by shouting and stamping with their Feet, which was termed κτύπος, or κτύπος (a); and design'd to drown the Maid's Cries. Left the Women should go to her Assistance, one of the Bridegroom's Friends stood Centinel at the Chamber-door, and from his Office was called θυρωρός (b). This Song, as likewise all the rest, was termed ὑμῶν, and consisted of the Praises of the Bridegroom and Bride, with Wishes for their Happiness, as may appear (to pass by other Instances) from Theocritus's Epithalamium of Helena, which begins thus:

Εἰ ποῦς' ἄρα Σπάρτῃ, ξανότριχί παρ Μυηάμ,

At Sparta's Palace twenty beauteous Maids
The Pride of Greece, fresh Garlands crown'd their Heads
With Hyacinth and twining Parsly drest,
Grac'd joyful Menslaus' Marriage-Feast,
When lovely Helen, great in conqu'ring Charms,
Resign'd her willing Beauty to his Arms:
They danc'd around, Joy flow'd from ev'ry Tongue,
And the vast Palace sounded with the Song. Mr. Creech.

They return'd again in the Morning, saluted the married Couple, and sung ἑπιθαλάμια ἡμέρινα, for that was the Name of the Morning Songs, which were design'd to awake and raise the Bridegroom and Bride; as those sung the Night before were intended to dispose them to Sleep, and are on that account termed ἑπιθαλάμια κοιμητικά. This Custom appears from Theocritus's Chorus of Virgins, who conclude the forecited Epithalamium, with a Promise to return early in the Morning;

Ἐδδὲν' ἵ· ἀλλὰ λαντί· τῆς φιλότιμα πόλιν

The Solemnity lasted several Days. The Day before the Marriage was termed προαυλία, as preceding that whereon the Bride did αὐλιζεσθαι τῷ νυμφίῳ, lodge with the Bridegroom. The Marriage-day was called γάμοι; the Day following, according to Pindar, ἐπιθῆς, which Word signifies a Day added to any Solemnity; Hesychius (a) calls it παλία, which may perhaps be derived from παλιν, because the former Day's Mirth was as it were repeated, whence the Romans called it repotia; unless for παλία we might be allowed to read παλαιά, and then it would be the same with Athenæus's ἰῶλος ἡμίρα (b), for ἰῶλος denotes any Thing that has ceased to be new, whence Tully calls a Book ἰῶλος, when Mens first and eager Enquiry after it is cool'd; and Athenæus in another Place has oppos'd ταῖς ἀκμαίαις γάμοις ἡμίρας to the τὸ ἰῶλος τῆς συμποσίας (c); others call the second Day ἱταύλια, or ἱπαύλια. The third Day was termed ἀπαύλια, or rather ἀπαύλια, because the Bride returning to her Father's House, did ἀπαυλιζεσθαι τῷ νυμφίῳ, lodge apart from the Bridegroom, tho' some place this upon the seventh Day after Marriage; others will have it so called, because the Bridegroom lodg'd apart from his Bride at his Father-in-Law's House; 'tis possible both may be in the right, and that both Bridegroom and Bride might lie at her Father's House; but in different Beds. Others make ἀπαύλια to be the same with ἱπαύλια, whence a seeming Difficulty arises, since those two Words import Contraries, one seeming to denote the Bride's lodging apart from the Bridegroom, the other with him; but this may be easily solv'd by applying ἱπαύλια to her lodging with her Husband, and ἀπαύλια to her Departure from her Father's House (d). On the Day called ἀπαύλια, (whenever that was) the Bride presented her Bridegroom with a Garment called ἀπαυλήρια. Gifts were likewise made to the Bride and Bridegroom by the Bride's Father and Friends, called sometimes ἀπαύλια, sometimes ἱπαύλια; these consisted of golden Vessels, Beds, Couches, Plates, Ointment-boxes, Combs, Sandals, and all Sorts of Necessaries for House-keeping, which were carried in great State to the House by Women, who followed a Person called κατηφόρος, from carrying a Basket in the manner usual at Processions, before whom went a Boy in white Apparel with a Torch in his Hand. It was also customary for the Bridegroom and his Friends to give Presents to the Bride, which they called ἀνακαλυπτήρια (e); and Hesychius will have the third Day to be called ἀνακαλυπτήριον, because then the Bride first appear'd publicly unveil'd unveil'd. Suidas tells us the Gifts were so called, because she was then first shewn to her Bridegroom. For the same Reason they are sometimes called δωρίσματα, ἐπὶθήρια, ἀδελφάματα and προσφθιζήρια, because the Bridegroom had then Leave to converse freely with her; for Virgins before Marriage were under strait Confinement, being rarely permitted to appear in Publick, or converse with Men; and when allowed that Liberty, wore a Veil over their Faces; this was termed καλύπτρον, or καλύπτρα, and was not left off in the Presence of Men till this Time; whence some think the Bride was called νύμφη ἀπὸ τῆς νύκτος, i. e. πρώτης φανεσθαι, that being the first Time she appeared in a publick Company unveil'd (a): Hence the Poets speak of Plato's Gifts to Proserpina, when she unveil'd herself, as we read in those Verses of Euphorion cited by the *Scholias*t upon Euripides (b);

Τῇ δ' αὖ πάλιν Κρονίδης δῶρον πῶρ' Περσιφονίῃ ἔειπ' γάμοις, ὅτε πρῶτον ἐπαπείσασθαι ἔμμελλε,
Νυμφιδίῳ σπείροισι παρκαλύψασα καλύπτραν.

Pluto to Proserpine a Present gave,
When first she laid aside her Maiden Veil,
And at the Marriage shew'd herself uncover'd.

There is a Story of the Sophister Hermocrates relating to this Custom, that having a Woman not very agreeable imposed upon him by Severus the Roman Emperor, and being asked his ἀνακαλύπτρια when she took off her Veil, he replied, ἰσκαλύπτρια μὲν ἢ τοιαύτων λαμβάνειν, It would be more proper to make her a Present to keep her Veil on, unless her Face was more agreeable.

The Ceremonies of the Spartan Marriages being different from all others, I have reserved them for this Place, and shall set them down in Plutarch's own Words (c): "When the Spartans had a mind to marry, their Courtship was a sort of Rape upon the Persons they had a Fancy for, and those they chose not tender and half Children, but in the Flower of their Age, and full ripe for an Husband. Matters being agreed between them, the Νυμφιδίῃ, or Woman that contrived or managed the Plot, shaved off the Bride's Hair close to her Skin, dress'd her up in Man's Clothes, and left her upon a Mattress; this done, in comes the Bridegroom in his every-day Clothes, sober and composed, as having supped at his Ordinary in the Common-Hall, and steals as privately as he can into the Room where the Bride lay, unties her Virgin-Girdle, and takes her into his Embraces; thus having stayed a short time with her, he returns to the rest of his Comrades, with whom he continues to spend his Life, remaining with them as well by Night as by Day, unless he steals a short Visit to his Bride, and that could not be done without a

Of their Divorces, Adulteries, Concubines, and Harlots.

THE Grecian Laws concerning Divorces were different ; some permitted Men to put away their Wives on slight Occasions ; the Cretans allowed it any Man that was afraid of having too great a Number of Children ; the Athenians likewise did it upon very small Grounds, but not without giving a Bill, wherein was contained the Reason of their Divorce, to be approved (if the Party divorced made an Appeal) by the chief Magistrate (a). The Spaniards, tho’ marrying without much Nicety in Choice, seldom divorced their Wives ; for we read that Lyfander was fined by the Magistrates called Ephori on that Account ; and tho’ Aristo, one of their Kings, put away his Wife with the Approbation of the City, yet that seems to have been done rather out of an earnest Desire to have a Son to succeed in his Kingdom, which he could not expect by that Woman, than according to the Custom of his Country (b). But whatever Liberty their Men took, their Wives were under a greater Restraint, for it was extremely scandalous for a Woman to depart from her Husband ; Hence we find Medea in Euripides complaining of the hard Fate of her Sex, who had no Remedy against the Men’s Unkindness, but were first under a Necessity of buying their Husbands with large Portions, and then to submit to their ill Usage without Hopes or Redress (c).

The Athenians were somewhat more favourable to Women, allowing them to leave their Husbands upon just Occasions; only they could not do it without making Appeal to the Archon, and presenting him a Bill of their Grievances with their own Hands. Plutarch was a virtuous Lady, and fond of her Husband, but at last growing impatient of the Injuries done to her Bed by his continual entertaining of Courtesans, as well Strangers as Athenians, she departed from him, and retired to her Brother Callias's House.

Alcibiades seemed not at all concerned at it, living on still in his former lewd Course of Life; but the Law requiring that she should deliver to the Archon in Person, and not by a Proxy, the Instrument whereby she sued for a Divorce, when in Obedience to it she presented herself before him, Alcibiades came in, took her away by Force, and carried her home thro' the Forum, no Man daring to oppose him, or take her from him, and she continued with him till her Death. Nor was this Violence to be thought a Crime; for the Law, in making her who desires a Divorce, appear in Publick, seems to design her Husband should have an Opportunity of discoursing with her, and endeavouring to retain her."
 Persons that divorced their Wives, were obliged to return their Portions, as has been observed in the foregoing Chapter; if they failed to do that, the Athenian Laws obliged them to pay her nine Oboli a Month for Alimony, which the Woman's Guardian was impowered to sue for at the Court kept in the Odeum (b). It may be observed lastly, that the Term expressing Men and Womens Separation from each other were different, Men were said ἀποπίπτειν, αποπίπτειν, dimittere, to dismiss their Wives, or looke them from their Obligation; but Wives, ἀπολύειν, divertere, discedere, to leave or depart from their Husbands.

It

It was not unusual to dissolve the Marriage-Tie by Consent of both Parties, and that done, they were at Liberty to dispose of themselves how they pleased in a second Match; an Instance hereof we find in Plutarch, who reports, that when Pericles and his Wife could not agree, and became weary of one another's Company, he parted with her, willing and consenting to it, to another Man (a). There is somewhat more remarkable in the Story of Antiochus the Son of Selencus, who falling desperately in love with Stratonice his Mother-in-law, married her with his Father's Consent (b). The Romans had the same Custom, as appears from Cato's parting with his Wife Martia to Hortensius, which, as Strabo assures us, was a thing not unusual, but agreeable to the Practice of the old Romans (c), and some other Countries.

What may appear more strange, is, that it was frequent in some Parts of Greece to borrow one another's Wives. At Athens, Socrates lent his Wife Xantippe to Alcibiades (d), and the Laws of that City permitted Heiresses to make use of their Husband's nearest Relation, when they found him deficient. And we have the following Account of the Practice of the Spartans from Plutarch (e): "Lycurgus the Spartan Lawgiver, he tells us, thought the best Expedient against Jealousy was to allow Men the Freedom of imparting the Use of their Wives to whom they should think fit, that so they might have Children by them; this he made a very commendable Piece of Liberality, laughing at those who thought the Violation of their Bed such an insupportable Affront, as to revenge it by Murders and cruel Wars. He had a good Opinion of that Man, who being grown old, and having a young Wife, should recommend some virtuous, handsome young Man, that she might have a Child by him to inherit the good Qualities of such a Father, and should love this Child as tenderly as if begotten by himself. On the other side, an honest Man, who had Love for a married Woman upon the Account of her Modesty, and the well-favouredness of her Children, might with good Grace beg of her Husband his Wife's Conversation, that he might have a Cyon of so good a Tree to transplant into his own Garden; for Lycurgus was persuaded that Children were not so much the Property of their Parents as of the whole Commonwealth, and therefore would not have them begotten by the first Comers, but by the best Men that could be found. Thus much (proceeds my Author) is certain, that so long as these Ordinances were observed, the Women were so far from that scandalous Liberty, which hath since been objected to them, that they knew not what the Name of Adultery meant." We are farther told by others, that Strangers, as well as Citizens of Sparta, were allowed the same Freedom with their Wives, provided they were handsome Men, and likely to beget lusty and vigorous Children (f); yet we find their Kings were were exempt from this Law, that the Royal Blood might be preserved unmixed, and the Government remain in the same lineal Descent.

Notwithstanding this Liberty, which was founded upon mutual Consent, they accounted all other Adulteries the most heinous Crimes in the World, and whilst they kept to their ancient Laws, were wholly Strangers to them; for we are told by Plutarch (a), "That Geradas, a primitive Spartan, being asked by a Stranger, "What Punishment their Law had appointed for Adulterers? replied, There were no Adulterers in his Country: But, returned the Stranger, suppose there were one, and the Crime were proved against him, how would you punish him? He answered, That the Offender must pay to the Plaintiff a Bull with a Neck so long as that he might reach over the Mountain Taygetus, and drink of the River Eurbotas, that runs on the other Side. The Man surprised at this, said, Why, 'tis impossible to find such a Bull. Geradas smilingly replied, 'Tis just as possible to find an Adulterer in Sparta."

The Punishments inflicted upon Adulterers in Greece were of divers sorts, some of which are these that follow:

To begin with the heroic Ages: If the Rapes of Women may be allowed room in this Place, we shall find they were revenged by many cruel and bloody Wars. Herodotus makes them to have given the first Occasion to that constant Enmity that was kept up for many Ages between Greece and Asia, and never allayed till the latter was conquered, and become subject to the former (b). Lycophron agrees with Herodotus, and makes the Rape of Io by the Phœnicians to have incensed the Greeks against the Inhabitants of Asia, and after frequent Injuries committed, and Wars waged on both Sides, to have reduced the Asian Empire, under the Dominion of the Europeans, under Alexander of Macedon; the Poet's Words run thus (c):

Οὐλοῖτο αὐτὰς πρῶτα Καρῖται κύνη,
Οἱ τῇ βρώτῃ ταυροπαθῆνοι κόρη
Λέρης ἀνδρείφαιλο, φοβητοὶ Λύκω,
Πλάτῃ παρῖσαι κῆρα Μυμφίτῃ πρόμος,
Ἐχθρας δὲ πύρρον ἔσαν ἡπείροις διπλάϊς..

May those Phœnician Sailors be accurst
That Io did convey from Lerna first,
Those savage Mariners that forc'd the Maid
To be the Partner of Ophiu's Bed,
And the two Empires thus embroil'd in War.

H. H.

He goes on to enumerate the continual Quarrels between the two Continents, till Alexander's Time. But however the Truth of this may be questioned, there being in those early Ages no Distinction of the World into Greeks and Barbarians, nor any common Affociation tion of those amongst themselves, or against the others; yet we have a remarkable Instance (to omit several others) of a long and bloody War, occasioned by Paris's Rape of Helen. But to bring some Instances, which may seem more pertinent to our present Design; what Sentences the heroic Ages put upon Adultery may appear, as from the Revenge of Atræus upon his Brother Thyestes, who was entertained at a Banquet with the Flesh of his own Son, for defiling Atræus's Wife; and other Examples of the Cruelty of the Men of those Times, against such as committed Adultery with their Wives, or other near Relations, appear more clearly from the Punishments inflicted by Laws or Magistrates upon such Offenders, who were usually stoned to Death; whence Hector in Homer tells Paris, his Crime in stealing another Man's Wife deserves no less a Punishment than Λεῖον χυτῶν, a Stone Cast, which, if he had received his Demerits, he should have put on, meaning that nothing but this Death could expiate so black an Action;

Λεῖον ἰσοο χυτῶν, κακῶν ἥν' ἔσθ' ἄρ' ἄρ' (a).

For these your Crimes you had been ston'd to death,

The same Punishment seems to have been frequent in more eastern Countries; the Jews were particularly obliged to inflict it both on Men and Women, as appears from the express Words of their Law (b). Rich Adulterers were sometimes allowed to redeem themselves with Money, which was called μοιχαλῆρα, and paid to the Adulteress's Husband; whence Mars being taken with Venus, Homer's Gods all agree that he must pay his Fine to Vulcan (c);

Οὐκ ἀρὶς κακὰ ἔργα, κυχῶν τοι βραδὺ δύνει.
Ὅς κ' ἐν Ἡφαιστῷ ἰὼν βραδὺς εἴλω Ἀρης,
Ὡκυτόεις αὖτ' ἰόλα δαῖτ' οἱ Ὀλυμπὸν ἔχεται,
Κυλῶς ἰὼν, τίττησι τὸ κ' μοιχαλῆρ' ἀφίλλυ.

An ill Event does still on Ills depend,
Not Mars his Swiftneſs cou'd the God defend
From limping Vulcan's moſt unerring Snare,
But in it he surpriz'd th'adult'rous Pair.
Therefore a greater Fine Mars ought to pay.

H. H.

Nor would Vulcan consent to ſet his Priſoner at Liberty till Neptune had engaged for the Payment of it (d);

Τὸ δ' αὖτ' ἀποστίλμι Παισιδάων ἡρώχδων,
Ἡφαι' αἰνέει γὰρ κιν Ἀρης χρεῖ' ὑπελόμεν ὀχέεται φεύγων, αὐτὸς τοι ἐγὼ τήν τε τιμῶ.

Then Nepheus, who the well-fix'd Earth doth shake,
In answer to distrustful Vulcan spake ;
" If you're afraid that Mars will play the Cheat,
" That he'll abscond, and never pay the Debt,
" I'll it discharge.——

It appears from the same Place to have been customary for the Woman's Father to return all the Dowry he had received of her Husband ; whence Vulcan is introduced threatening to secure both Mars and Venus in Chains till that was done (a) ;

—— Σφῆς δόλῳ καὶ δεσμῷ ἰούσιν
Εἰσὶναι μοι μάλα πάντα πάλαι ἀποδόσαι ἴδας
Οὐσα οἱ ἰχθυόεσσι κενώσιδ' ἰνικα κέρως,
Οὐκ αἱ οἱ καλὴ θυγάτηρ, ἀτὰρ ἐκ ἰχθυόων.

I'll not release them from the binding Chain,
Till I that Dowry have receiv'd again,
Which I for Venus to her Father paid
'Cause she was handsome, tho' a Jilt.——

H. H.

Some think this Sum was refunded by the Adulterer, because it was reasonable he should bear the Woman's Father harmless, since it appears not that Mars's Mule was a distinct Sum ; for upon Nepheus's becoming Security for it, Vulcan loosed him from his Bonds without farther Scruple.

Another Punishment was putting out the Eyes of Adulterers, which seem to have been no less antient than the former, and may be thought just and reasonable, as depriving the Offender of that Member which first admits the Incentives of Lust. Fabulous Writers tell us, that Orion having defiled Candice, or Merope, had his Eyes put out by Oenopion, whom some will have to be the Lady's Husband, others her Father (b). Phaon, Achilles's Guardian, suffered the same Punishment for defiling Chrysis, his Father's Concubine (c), which is thus expressed by Lycophron (d) ;

Τὸν πατρὶ παῖδ' οὐκ ἐργαζόμενος ἔφατον,
Ὀμφρον ἔς τοι θῆναι τρέφεται λόγους,
Ὅτ' αἱ γὰρ γένοιτο κινέσθην λόφους.

He most inhumanly depriv'd of Sight.

Homer indeed has no Mention of this Punishment, but only informs us, that his Father having discovered him, prayed that he might never have any Children (a), which Tacticus (b) thinks is meant by losing his Eyes, because Children are dearer to Parents, and afford them greater Comfort than their most necessary Members; but this Interpretation is forced, and contrary to the Sense of Mythologists ancient as well as modern, who relate the Story agreeably to the literal Meaning of Lycophron's Words. The Locrians observed this Custom in later Ages, being obliged thereto by Zaleucus their Lawgiver, whose Rigour in executing this Law is very remarkable; for having caught his Son in Adultery, he resolved to deprive him of Sight, and remained a long time inexorable, notwithstanding the whole City was willing to remit the Punishment, and requested him to spare the Youth; at length, unable to resist the People's Importunity, he mitigated the Sentence, and redeemed one of his Son's Eyes by another of his own (c), so at once becoming a memorable Example of Justice and Mercy.

At Gortyn in Crete there was another Method of punishing Adulterers; they were covered with Wool, an Emblem of the Softness and Effeminacy of their Tempers, and in that Dress carried thro' the City to the Magistrate's House, who sentenced them to Ignominy, whereby they were deprived in a manner of all their Privileges, and their Share in managing public Business (d).

It would be endless to enumerate all the Penalties ordered for these Offenders. I shall therefore pass to the Athenian Laws, when I have first acquainted you, that if Credit may be given to Pausanias (e), the first who made a Law, and constituted Punishments against Adulterers, was Hyettus, an Inhabitant of Argos, who having caught Molurus, the Son of Arisbas, too familiar with his Wife, slew him, and fled to Orchomenus, the Son of Minyas, then King of that City of Boeotia, which bore his Name; the King receiv'd him kindly, and gave him part of his Territories, where he called his Village Hyettus, after his own Name, and established severe Laws against Adultery.

The Athenian Punishments seem to have been arbitrary, and left to their supreme Magistrate's Discretion; whence we find Hippomenes, one of Cedrus's Posterity, and Archon of Athens, pronouncing a very odd Sentence upon his own Daughter Limone, and the Man caught in Adultery with her; he yoked them to a Chariot till the Man died, and afterwards shut up his Daughter with an Horse, and so starved her to Death (f). Some time after Draco being invested with Power to enact Laws, left Adulterers at the Mercy of any Man that caught them in the Act, who had free Licence to dismember, murder, or treat them in what other manner he pleased, without being called to account for it; which Punishment was the same that had been before appointed for this Crime by Hyettus (g), and and was continued afterwards by Solon (a). Several other Punishments were ordered by Solon against the same Crime, when proved by Evidence in lawful Judicature. A Man that ravished a free Woman was fined 100 Drachms, one that enticed her 20 (b), or (as some say 200, it being a greater Injury to a Woman's Husband and her Family to corrupt her Mind than her Body;) but he that forced a free Virgin, was to pay 1000, and whoever deflowered one, was obliged to marry her; whence Plautus introduces one who had corrupted a Man's Daughter, speaking to her Father thus (c):

*Siquid ego erga te imprudens peccavi, aut gnatam tuam,
Ut mihi ignoscas, eamque uxorem des, ut leges jubent.*

If, Sir, I have injur'd you, I crave your Pardon;
And if I've wrong'd your Daughter's Chastity,
The Laws command it, and I'll marry her.

But if the Virgin, or her Mother, had accepted any Present from her Gallant, he was not obliged to make her his Wife, but she was looked on as a common Scumpet; whence Sofrata in Terence has these Words, after her Daughter had been defiled (d):

*Pejore res loco non potis est esse quam in hoc, quo nunc sita est;
Primum indotata est; tum præterea, quæ secunda ei dos erat,
Perit, pro virgine dari nuptum non potest: hoc reliquum est,
Si infestus ibit, testis mecum est annulus, quem amiserat:
Postremo, quando ego conscia mi sum, a me culpam esse hanc procul,
Neq; pretium, neq; rem ullam intercessisse illa, aut me indignam, Geta, Experiar.*——

Matters were never worse than now they are;
For first she has no Portion; and for that,
Which might have been instead of one, she's lost;
So that she can't pass for a Virgin now;
I have but this one thing now that gives me Hopes,
If he deny't, the Ring he lost will prove it:
And, Geta, since I know my Conscience clear,
Since I no By-ends had in this Mischap,
Nor took a Bribe, that I might blush to own,
I'd stand a Tryal with him at the Law.

H. H.

When a Man was clapt up on Suspicion of Adultery, he was allowed to prefer his Appeal to the Magistrates called Thesmobetae, who referred the Cause to proper Judges, and these, in case the Crime was proved against him, had Power to lay on him, Death only only excepted, what Punishment they pleased (a). There was another remarkable Punishment for Adulterers, called ωπαριαίς, or ωπαριδωρίς, the Part being put for the whole; for having plucked off the Hair from their Privities, they threw hot Ashes upon the Place, and thrust up a Radish, Mullet, or some such Thing, into their Fundament, whence they were ever after termed ωπαριδοί. Juvenal mentions this Usage (b); — Quosdam mæchus & mugilis intrat.

And some Adulterers a Mullet bores.

But poor Men were only thus dealt with, the Rich being allowed to bring themselves off with paying their Fine, as the Great Scholiast hath observ'd from the following Passage of Aristophanes, wherein Chremylus upbraids Poverty for exposing Men to this disgraceful Punishment.

Ὁ δ' ἀδελφὲς γὰρ ποῦ ποῦ δὲ καὶ ἐν ὡπαριδωρίᾳ (c).

Women thus offending were treated with great Severity. Platarch tell us, that if any Person discovered his Sister or Daughter, whilst unmarried, in this Crime, he was allowed by Solon's Laws to sell her for a Slave. Adulteresses were never after permitted to adorn themselves with fine Clothes; and in case they appeared to do so, were liable to have them torn off by any that met them, and likewise to be beaten, tho' not so as to be killed or disabled; the same Liberty was permitted to any that found them in the Temples, which were thought polluted by the Admission of Persons so infamous and detestable. Lastly, their Husbands, tho' willing to do it, were forbidden to cohabit any longer with them, upon pain of Ignominy, ἀτιμία (d); but Persons that prostituted Women, were adjudged to die (e).

We have seen what the Greeks thought of Adultery; but they appear to have had a more favourable Opinion of Concubinage, it being permitted every where, and that without Scandal, to keep as many Concubines as they pleased; these they stiled παλλακίδες, they were usually Women taken Captives, or bought with Money, and always inferior to lawful Wives, whose Dowry, or noble Parentage, or some other Excellency, gave them Pre-eminence. There is continual Mention of them in Homer; Achilles had his Briseis, and in her Absence Diomedes, Patroclus his Iphigeneia, Menelaus and Agamemnon, and to mention no more, the wisest, gravest, and eldest of them all, such as Philoctetes and Nestor, had their Women. Nor is it to be wondered that Heathens should run out in such Excesses, when the Hebrews, and those the most renowned for Piety, such as Abraham and David, allowed themselves the same Liberty. Yet the Grecian

Wives always envy'd their Husbands this Freedom, looking on it as an Encroachment upon their Privileges; whence we find in Homer, that Laertes, tho' having a great Respect for his Slave Euryclea, never took her to his Bed for fear of his Wife's Displeasure (a);

Ἰσα δὲ μιν πατρὶ ἀλόχῃ τινι ἐν μιγάροισιν,

Not his own Wife he lov'd above the Maid,
Yet never her admitted to his Bed,
The better to prevent domestick Strife.

Phœnix's Mother persuaded him to defile his Father's Concubine, to free her of so troublesome a Rival, as himself relates the Story (b);

——— Λίπον Ελλάδα καλλιγύναικα,
Φύγων νίκη πατρός· μόντερος Οἰμειδάο,
Ὃς μοι παλλακίδος περὶ χρωτάλο καλλικρίματο.

H. H.

More Instances may be collected, but it will suffice to add that of Clytemnestra, who having slain her Husband Agamemnon, wreak'd her Malice upon Cassandra, his Concubine; whence Seneca has introduced her speaking these Words (c);

At ista pœnas capite persolvat suo
Captiva conjux, regis pellex tori;
Trabite, ut sequatur conjugem ereptum mihi.

My Rival too, his Concubine, shall share
The sad Effects of Rage for injur'd Love;
Drag out the captive Harlot, she that dar'd
Lewdly to violate the Royal Bed,
That she may follow him to th' Shades below.

H. H.

Harlots were no less common than Concubines, being tolerated in most of the Grecian, and other Commonwealths. Nor was the Use of them thought repugnant to good Manners; whence the Latin Comedian, speaking of Athens, saith;

Non est flagitium scortari hominum adolescentulum.

For Youth to wench and whore is not a Sin.

The wisest of the Heathen Sages were of the same Mind. Solon allowed common Whores to go publickly to those that hired them (a), and encouraged the Athenian Youth to empty their Lust upon these, to hinder them from making Attempts upon the Wives and Daughters of his Citizens. Philemon has elegantly expressed that Lawgiver's Design in the following Fragment (b);

Εὖ δ' εἰς ἀπαιτίας εὖρις ἀνθρώπους, Σόλων
 Σε γὰρ λέγουσι τῆτ' ἰδιῷ παῖτιος βροτῶν,
 Δημοδικόν, ὃ Ζεὺς, παῖτμα, καὶ σωτήριον.
 (Καὶ μοι λέγουσι τῆτ' ἔστιν ἄρμος, Σόλων)
 Μισθὸν δὲ πῶστα τὴν πόλιν νεώτερον,

 Ἀλλ' εὖθις εἰ βάλῃ σὺ, καὶ συγχὼν τρέπον.
 Ἐξήλθεις; οἰμῶζιν λέγ', ἀλλότρια ἔστι σοι.

Cato, the Roman Censor, was of the same Opinion, as appears from the known Story, that meeting a young Nobleman of Rome coming out of the common Stew, he commended him for diverting himself in that Place, as we read in Horace (c);

*Quidam notus homo, cum exiret fornice, παῖτε
 Virtute esto, inquit, sententia dia Catonis,
 Nam simul ac venas inflavit tetra libido,
 Huc juvenes equum est descendere.*—

When from the Stews a certain Noble came,
 This, says he, was the heav'nly Cato's Theme,

I forbear to mention other Instances, the Testimony of Cicero being sufficient to confirm what I have said, when he challenges all Persons to name any Time wherein Men were either reprov'd for this Practice, or not countenanced in it (a). Nor can it be wonder'd that Heathens allow'd themselves this Liberty, when the Jews look'd on it as lawful; they were indeed forbidden to commit Adultery, and Fornication was also prohibited under severe Penalties, but these (as Grotius (b) observes) were thought to concern only Women of their own Nation, their Law not extending to Foreigners; and we find accordingly that publick Stews were openly tolerated amongst them, and Women residing there taken into the Protection of the Government, as appears from the two Harlots that contended about a Child, and were heard in open Court by King Solomon (c). But the Jewish Women were not permitted to prostitute their Bodies; and therefore strange and foreign Women are sometimes taken for Harlots, as when Solomon advises his Son to embrace Wisdom and Understanding, that they may keep him from the strange Woman, from the Stranger, which flattereth with her Words (d); and to arm him against the Allurements of Harlots, he tells him, The Lips of a strange Woman drop as a Honey-comb, and her Mouth is smoother than Oil, but her End is bitter as Wormwood, sharp as a two-edged Sword (e). The Athenians, as in many other Things, so here had the same Custom with the Jews; for tho' severe Penalties were laid on such as defiled Women that were Citizens of Athens, yet Foreigners had the Liberty of keeping publick Stews, and their Harlots were for that Reason, like those amongst the Jews, called ἑταῖραι, strange Women.

The Harlots of the primitive Ages were not so wholly divested of Modesty as afterwards, for they never went abroad bare-fac'd, but, as was the Custom of other Women, cover'd themselves with Veils or Masks; nor were they allow'd (as some think) to prostitute themselves within the Cities (f); which Custom seems to have been derived from the Eastern Nations, for we find Tamar in Genesis (g), when she had a mind to appear like a Harlot, covering herself with a Veil, and sitting in an open Place by the Way to Timnath; but it may be her Design in placing herself there, was only that she might meet with Judah, or his Son, whom she desired to entice to her Embraces. We find however, that in After-ages, when Harlots were certainly permitted to reside in Cities, they used to posit themselves in the Highways as Places of Resort. In Solomon's Reign they frequented the Cities; for speaking of a Harlot, he saith, She is loud and Subborn, her Feet abide not in her House; now is she without, now in the Streets, and lieth in wait in every Corner (h). Yet some Ages after, after, when 'tis certain they were no more restrained from abiding in Cities than in Solomon's Days, they resorted to Places of general Concourse out of them, such as Highways, especially where several Ways met, and had Tents erected to wait in for Custom; hence (to omit other Instances) these Words of Ezekiel, Thou hast built thy high-place at every Head of the Way, and hast made thy Beauty to be abhorred, and hast opened thy Feet to every one that passed by, and multiplied thy Whoredoms (a). Again, Thou buildest thine eminent Place in the Head of every Way, and makest thy High-place in every Street (b). At Athens the Harlots chiefly frequented the Ceramicus, Sciro, and the old Forum, in which stood the Temple of Venus Παρθένω, where Solon permitted them to prostitute themselves. They also very much frequented a certain Forum in that Part of the Haven Piræus which was called (στοά μακρά) the long Portico, the Parts whereof are thus described by Julius Pollux, δῶγμα, ἐμπόριον ἐμπορίας δὲ μέγα, καπηλαία, καὶ πορνεία. And in other Ports there were commonly great Numbers of Stews, as hath been observed in the precedent Book.

In some Places Harlots were distinguished from other Women by their Apparel, whence these Words of Solomon (c), There met him a Woman with the Attire of an Harlot; and subtil of Heart. What Sort of Habit this was is not certain; but if the Athenian Custom was in this, as in many other Things, taken from the Jews, we may conclude that their Whores wore flower'd Garments; for the Athenian Lawgiver thinking it necessary to distinguish Women of innocent Conversation from Harlots by some open and visible Mark, order'd that those should never appear abroad but in grave and modest Apparel, and that the rest should always wear flower'd Garments. Hence Clemens of Alexandria hath remark'd, that as fugitive Slaves are known by their Stigmata, ὅσα τὴν μοιχαλίδά δεικνύσι τα ἀντιπάλα, so flower'd Garments are an Indication of an Harlot (d). The same Law was enacted among the Locrians by Zaleucus, as we are told by Diodorus the Sicilian, and was also observed at Syracuse, as we learn from Phylarchus in Athenæus (e). For tho' Harlots were tolerated in the Grecian Commonwealth, yet they were generally infamous, and consisted chiefly of Captives and other Slaves. Hence it was forbidden by the Laws of Athens to derive the Name of an Harlot from any of the sacred Games, as Athenæus hath observed from Polemo's Description of the Acropolis; whence that Author seems to wonder how it came to pass that a certain Harlot was called Nemea from the Nemean Games (f).

Corinth is remarkable for being a Nursery of Harlots, there being in that City a Temple of Venus, where the readiest Method of gaining the Goddess's Favour, was to present her with beautiful Damsels, who from that Time were maintained in the Temple, and prostituted themselves for Hire. We are told by Strabo (g), that there there were no less than a thousand there at that time. Hence κορινθιάζειν, to act the Corinthian, is ἱταίρειν, to commit Fornication, according to Hesychius, Λισβιάζειν, λισβιάειν, and φοινικίζειν are used in the same Sense, the Lesbians and Phœnicians being infamous for this Vice. Λισβιάζειν, also signifies an impure Way of kissing, whence it is interpreted by the same Author, πρὸς ἄνδρα τομαλύνειν, and λισβιάειν, is expounded λαϊκάδεια, an Harlot. The Corinthians were a genteeler sort of Harlots, and admitted none to their Embraces but such as were able to deposit a considerable Sum, as we learn from Aristophanes (a);

Καὶ ταῖς ἱταίρας φασὶ τὰς Κορινθίας,
Ὅταν μὴ αὐτὰς τις πώης ὡς τυχῇ,
Οὐδὲ προσίχουσιν τὸν ἴον. ἰὼν δὲ πλῆσιθε,
Τὸν πρῶτον αὐτὰς ἐνθὺς ὡς τῶτων τρίπων.

This gave Occasion to the Proverb,

Οὐ παντὸς ἀνδρός ἐς Κόρινθον ἴσθ' ὁ πῶλς.

Which Horace has thus translated,

Non cuius hominum contingit adire Corinthum.

To Corinth ev'ry Person cannot fail.

Some rather refer it to the famous Corinthian Strumpet Lais, and others assign other Reasons. Their Occupation indeed was very gainful, inasmuch that those whom Beauty and Parts recommended, frequently raised great Estates. A remarkable Instance hereof we have in Phryne, who offered the Thebans to rebuild the Walls of their City, when demolished by Alexander, on condition they would engrave on them this Inscription;

ΑΛΕΞΑΝΔΡΟΣ ΑΝΕΣΚΑΥ.Ν ΑΝΕΣΤΗΣΕ ΔΕ ΦΡΥΝΗ Η ΕΤΑΙΡΑ.

i. e. These Walls were demolished by Alexander, but raised by Phryne the Harlot.

To render their Conversation more agreeable to Men of Parts and Quality, they frequently employed their vacant Hours in the Study of Mathematicks, and other Sciences, frequenting the Schools and Company of Philosophers. Aspasia, Pericles's beloved Mistress, used to converse with Socrates, and arrived to such a Pitch in Learning, that many of the Athenians resorted to her on account of her Rhetorick and Abilities of Discourse; the most grave and serious amongst them frequently went to visit her, and carried their Wives with them, as it were, to Lecture, to be instructed by her Conversation. Pericles himself used her Advice in the Management of publick Affairs; and after his Death, one Lyficles, a silly and obscure Clown, by keeping her company, came to be a chief Man at Athens (a). Several other Examples of this Sort occur in Authors, as of Archianassa the Colophonian, who was Plato's Mistress; Hepyllis, who conversed with Aristotle till his Death, and bore him a Son called Nicomachus; lastly (to mention no more) Leontium, who frequented Epicurus's Gardens, there prostituting herself to the Philosophers, especially to Epicurus (b).

Of the Confinement and Employment of their Women.

THE barbarous Nations, and amongst them the Persians especially, saith (c) Plutarch, were naturally jealous, clownish, and morose towards their Women, not only their Wives, but their Slaves and Concubines, whom they kept so strictly, that never any one saw them beside their own Family; when at home, they were cloyster'd up; when they took a Journey, they were carried in Coaches or Waggon, close cover'd at the Top, and on all Sides: Such a Carriage, my Author tells us, was prepared for Themistocles, when he fled into Persia, to keep him secret; so that the Men who convey'd him, told all they met and discoursed with upon the Road, that they were carrying a young Grecian Lady out of Ionia to a Nobleman at Court.

By the Manner of Plutarch's relating this Story, it may be perceived that neither he, nor his Countrymen the Greeks, approved of the Severity used by barbarous Nations towards their Women; yet themselves, tho' remitting something of the Persian Rigor, kept their Women under strict Discipline, and were no less excelled by the Romans in their Behaviour to them, than themselves surpassed the Barbarians; for whereas the Roman Women were allowed to be present at publick Entertainments, and to converse with the Guests, and were complimented by their Husbands with the best Rooms in their Houses; those of Greece rarely or never appeared in strange Company, but were confined to the most remote Parts of the House (d).

To this End the Grecian Houses were usually divided into two Parts, in which the Men and Women had distinct Mansions assigned. The Part wherein the Men lodged was towards the Gate, and called called ἀνδρῶν, or ἀνδραῖτις. The Part assigned for the Women was termed γυναικῶν, γυναικαῖτις, or γυναικαῖτις, it was the farthest Part of the House, and behind the αὐλή, before which there were also other Parts, called προδομῶν, and τρωαῦλιον. The Sons of Priam in Homer were all placed by themselves, and separated from his Daughters, who lived in more remote Places (a);

Αλλ' ὅτι δὴ Πριάμοιο δῶμον περικαλλιῖκαν,
Ξεῖνος' αἰθέσῃσι τίθυγμένον, αὐτὰρ ἐν αὐτῷ
Πυθῆκοι' ἦσαν θάλαμοι ξιστοῖο λίθοιο,

At Priam's Royal Palace he arriv'd,
In which were fifty beauteous Rooms contriv'd
Of polish'd Stones, by one another join'd,
And these were for his marry'd Sons design'd;
Twelve gaudy Rooms were built with equal Art
O'th' other Side, but these were set apart
For Priam's Daughters——

H. H.

Where it may be observed that the Womens Chambers are called τέγιοι θάλαμοι, as being placed at the Top of the House; for the Womens Lodgings were usually in the uppermost Rooms, as Eustathius remarks upon this Passage (b), which was another Means to keep them from Company. Hence Helen is said to have had her Chamber in the loftiest Part of the House (c);

Ἡ δ' εἰς ὑψόροφον θάλαμον κίε διὰ γυναικῶν.

Into the upper Chamber Helen went.

Penelope appears to have lodged in such another Place, to which she ascended by a κλίμαξ; whence the same Poet,

Κλίμακα δ' ὑψηλὴν κατεβήσατο οἷο θάλοιο.

By a long Ladder came down from her Room.

This Word signifies a Stair-case, but in this Place may as well denote a Ladder, which seems to have been used in those Days, when Architecture was not much understood; whence Antigone in Euripides calls out to her Guardian to help her up (d).

These upper Rooms were sometimes, especially at Lacedæmon, call'd αἶα, αἶα, or υπερῶα, which Words being distinguish'd only by the Accent, (the Υἱ whereof seems not to have been known by the ancient Grecians) from αἶα. Eggs, are thought by some to have ministr'd Occasion to the Inventors of Fables to feign that Cæstor, Pollux, Helena and Clytemnestra, were hatched out of Eggs, when they were born in one of these Lofts, or upper Chambers.

The Women were straitly confin'd within their Lodgings, such especially as had no Husbands, whether Virgins or Widows (a), whereof the former were more severely look'd to, as having less Experience in the World. Their Apartment, which was call'd παρθένον, was usually well guarded with Locks and Bolts, whence Agamemnon in Euripides desiring Clytemnestra to go home, and look after the Virgins, which, he tells her, were by no means to be left in the House alone, receives this Answer (b);

Οχυροῖσι παρθενῶσι φρουρεῖται καλῶς.

They're close kept up in their well-guarded Lodgings.

Sometimes they were so straitly confin'd, that they could not pass from one Part of the House to another without Leave; whence Antigone in Euripides obtains her Mother's Leave to go to the Top of the House to view the Argian Army that besieged Thebes; notwithstanding which her Guardian searches the Passage, for fear any Person should have a Sight of her, which, he says, would be a Reflection upon her Honour, and his own Fidelity. The old Man's Words are thus address'd to the young Princess (c);

ὦ κλεινὸν ὄικοι, Ἀντιγόη, δάλλω παῖρι, ἐπεί σε μήτηρ παρθενίας ἐκλιπῶν
 Μιδήκει, μιλαθῶσι, δ' εἰς διῆρες ἴσχατος

For that would much reflect upon my Care,
And from your Royal Honour derogate.

New married Women were almost under as strict a Confinement as Virgins. Hermione is severely reproved by the old Woman that waits on her for appearing out of Doors, which was a Freedom, she tells her, like to endanger her Reputation (a) ;

Αλλ' εἰσεῖ' εἰσω, μὴδὲ φασίαιζε δόμον
Πάροιθε τῶνδε, μὴ τιν' αἰσχυνῇ λαῶν
Πρόσθει μελαίθρων τῶν δ' ὀρωμένη, τέκνον.

Go in, nor stand thus gazing at the Doors,
Lest you lament the Scandal you'll procure,
Should you be seen before the Hall t'appear.

Menander, as cited by Stobæus (b), says expressly, that the Door of the αὐλή was the farthest a marry'd Woman ought to go, and reproves one for exceeding those Limits ;

Τὴς τῶν γαμπτῶν ὅπως ὑπερβαίνεις, γύναι,
Διὰ τῶν αὐλαῖν· πέρας γὰρ ἀλλήθ' οὐρα
Ελευθέρα γυναικὶ νόμιμ' οἰκίας.

You go beyond the marry'd Womens Bounds,
And stand before the Hall, which is unfit ;
The Laws do not permit a free-born Bride
Farther than to the Doors o'th' House to go.

But when they had once brought a Child into the World, they were no longer under so strict a Confinement, whence μήτηρ, a Mother, is by some derived ἀπὸ τοῦ μὴ τηρεῖσθαι, for her being no longer under Keepers (c) ; yet what Freedom they then enjoy'd was owing wholly to the Kindness of their Husbands, for such as were jealous kept their Wives in perpetual Imprisonment ; whence a Woman in Aristophanes makes this Complaint of the severe Treatment the Athenian Wives met with (d) ;

——— Ταῖς γυναικῶνίτισιν
Σφραγίδας ἐπιβάλλωσιν ἥδη, καὶ μοχλῶν,
Τηρεῖας ἡμᾶς καὶ προσέτι Μολοτικὰς

H. H.

However Husbands might be of a better Temper, yet it was look'd on as very indecent for Women to gad abroad; whence we find several proverbial Speeches and Allusions, intimating the Duty of Wives to stay at home. Such is that cited by Eustathius out of Euripides (a);

Εὐδὸν γυναικῶν καὶ παρ' οἰκίταις λόγῳ.

Women should keep within Doors, and there talk.

To the same purpose was Phidias's Emblem, representing Venus treading upon a Tortoise (b), which carries its House upon its Back.

When they went abroad, or appeared in publick, they covered their Faces with Veils; as we find of Penelope, when she descended from her Apartment, to converse with the young Gentlemen that courted her (c);

Ἡ δ' ὅτε δὴ μνηστῆρας ἀφίκετο διὰ γυναικῶν,
Στῆ ῥα παρὰ γαθμὸν τίγχι πύκα σαιηλοῖο,
Ἀλλὰ παρειαῶν σχομένη λιπαρὰ κρήδεμνα.

Then from her Lodgings went the beauteous Dame,
And to her much expecting Courtiers came,
There veil'd before the Door she stood.

The Veil was so thin, as that they might see through it, which appears from these Words of Iphigenia (d);

Εγὼ δὲ λεπτὸν ὄμμα διὰ καλυμμάτων
Εἶχεσ', ἀδελφὸν τῦτον εἰδόμεν χερσὶν,
Ὅς νῦν ὄλωλεν.——

Seeing my Brother through my thinnest Veil,
I took him by the Hand, who now is dead.

To prevent all private Assignations, Solon enacted, that no Wife or Matron (for he took not so much Care of Virgins, who were always strictly confin'd) should go from home with more than three Garments, nor should carry with her a larger Quantity of Meat and Drink than could be purchased for one Obolus, nor a Basket of more than a Cubit in Length. He farther ordered, that she should should not travel in the Night without a lighted Torch before her Chariot. Afterwards it was decreed, at the Instance of Philippides, that no Women should appear in Public undress'd, under the Penalty of paying 1000 Drachms. This Law was carefully put in Execution by the Officers called γυναικονόμοι, and γυναικακόσμοι, and a Tablet, containing an Account of the Mulcts thus incurr'd, was publickly expos'd in the Ceramicus (a), upon a Plane-tree (πλατάνη) which stood there.

It was likewise customary for Women to have Attendants. Penelope has two Maids with her (b) in Homer;

Ὡς φασίν, καλίσαν' ὑπερῖτα σιγγλόνηα, οὐκ οἷη' ἄμα τῇ γε καὶ ἀμφίπολοι δν' ἰπνίω.

She said, and from her Chamber strait descends,
Two Maids upon her Person wait. —————

These seem to have been Women of Age and Gravity; whence Homer presently subjoins, ἀμφίπολος δ' ἄρα οἱ κεδνὴ ἐκείτρῃσι παρέστη.

A Maid, whose Years a riper Judgment shew'd,
On either Side t' attend the Lady stood.

Nor did these Women attend their Ladies when they went abroad only, but kept them company at home, and had the Care of their Education when young, and are therefore called Τροφοί. Nor were Women only appointed to this Charge, for Antigone, in the forecited Tragedy of Euripides, has an old Man for her Governor. It was likewise frequent to commit Women to Eunuchs, who performed all the Offices of Maids, and were usually entertain'd by Persons of Quality; whence Pbædria speaks thus to his Mistress (c):

—— Eunuchum porro dixi velle te,
Quia solæ utuntur his reginæ.

An Eunuch Boy was your peculiar Choice,
Since on great Ladies they do chiefly wait.

The first that made Eunuchs was Semiramis (d). The barbarous Nations were ordinarily much fonder of them than Greeks (e), who looked upon it as an inhuman Piece of Cruelty to use Men after that Manner. Phocylides has left a particular Caution against it (f);

Nor ever castrate a brisk vig'rous Youth.

The primitive Ages used their Women agreeably to the Simplicity of their Manners, they accustomed them to draw Water, to keep Sheep, and feed Cows, or Horses. The Rich and Noble were taken up with such Employments as well as those of inferior Quality. Rebecca, the Daughter of Bethuel, Abram's Brother, carried a Pitcher, and drew Water (a). Rachel, the Daughter of Laban, kept her Father's Sheep (b). Zipporah, with her six Sisters, had the Care of their Father Jethro's Flock, who was a Prince, or, which in those Times was an Honour scarce inferior, Priest of Midian (c). The like may be observed of Andromache, Hector's Lady, in Homer (d), where that Hero thus bespeaks his Horses ;

Εἰσὶν τε καὶ Πόδαργε, καὶ Αἴθων, Λάμπει τε δὴ,
 Νῦν μοι τὴν κομιδὴν ἀποτίνεις, ἥ μάλα πολλὰ
 Ἀνδρομάχῃ, θυγάτηρ μεγάλτορος Ἡλίου,

 Since my dear Wife, when you inclin'd to eat,
 Hath mingled strength'ning Liquor with your Meat. J. A.

The most common Employments of Women were spinning, weaving, and making all Sorts of Embroidery or Needle-work : Instances of this Nature are too numerous to be recited in this Place, for so constantly were they taken up in these Busineses, that most Houses, where there was any Number of Women, had Rooms set apart for this End, which seem to have been near the Women's Apartments, if not the same ; for Pollux enumerating the different Rooms in Houses, after he has mentioned γυναικίον, presently adds, ἱερὸν δαίματος, θαλασσιγυρὸς οἶκος, &c.

Women had likewise several other Employments, the Provision of all Necessaries within Doors being usually committed to them. I shall not insist on Particulars, but only observe in the last Place, that their Usage was very different, according to the Temper of their

their Husbands or Guardians, the Value of their Fortune, and the Humour of the Place or Age they lived in.

The Lacedæmonian Women observed Fashions quite different from all their Neighbours, their Virgins went abroad barefaced, the married Women were covered with Veils, the former designing (as Charilus replied to one that required the Reason of that Custom) to get themselves Husbands, whereas the latter aimed at nothing more than keeping those they already had (a). We have a large Account of the Spartan Women's Behaviour in the following Words of Plutarch (b). " In order to the good Education of their Youth, " which is the most important Work of a Law-giver, Lycurgus went " so far back as to take into Consideration their very Conception " and Birth, by regulating their Marriages; for Aristotle wrongs " the Memory of this excellent Person, by bearing us in hand, that " after he had tried all manner of Ways to reduce the Women to " more Modesty, and Subjection to their Husbands, he was at last " forced to leave them as they were, because that, in the Absence " of their Husbands, who spent a great Part of their Lives in the " Wars, their Wives made themselves, absolute Mistresses at home, " and would be treated with as much Respect as if they had been " so many Queens; but by his good Leave it is a Mistake, for " Lycurgus took for that Sex all the Care that was possible; for an " Instance of it, he ordered the Maidens to exercise themselves with " running, wrestling, throwing Quoits, and casting Darts, to the " end that the Fruit they conceived might take deeper Root, grow " strong, and spread itself into healthy and vigorous Bodies, and " withal that they might be more able to undergo the Pangs of " Child-bearing; and to the end he might take away their over " great Tendernefs and Nicety, he ordered they should appear naked as well as the Men, and dance too in that Condition at their " solemn Feasts and Sacrifices, singing certain Songs, whilst the " young Men stood in a Ring about them, seeing and hearing them; " in these Songs they now and then gave a satirical Glance upon " those who had misbehaved themselves in the Wars, sometimes " sung Encomiums upon those who had done any gallant Action, " and by these Means inflamed young Men with an Emulation of " their Glory; for those that were thus commended, went away " brave and well satisfied with themselves, and those that were " rallied, were as sensibly touch'd with it as if they had been formally and severely reprimanded, and so much the more, because the Kings and the whole Senate saw and heard all that passed. Now, tho' it may seem strange that Women should appear thus naked in Public, yet was true Modesty observed, and Wantonnefs excluded, and it tended to render their Conversation free and unserved, and to beget in them a Desire of being vigorous and active, " and filled them with Courage and generous Thoughts, as being " allowed their Share in the Rewards of Virtue as well as Men. " Hence

(a) Plutarchus Apophthegmat. Læconicus.

(b) Lycurgo.

“ Hence came that Sense of Honour and Nobleness of Spirit, of which we have an Instance in Gerge, the Wife of King Leonidas, who being told in Discourse with some foreign Ladies, that the Women of Lacedæmon were the only in the World who had an Empire over the Men, briskly repartee’d, that there was good Reason, for they were the only Women that brought forth Men. Lastly, these public Processions of the Maidens, and their appearing naked in their Exercises and Dancings, were Provocations and Baits to stir up and allure the young Men to Marriage, and that not upon geometrical Reasons, as Plato calls them (such are Interest and Equality of Fortune) but from the Engagements of true Love and Affection.”

Afterwards, when Lycurgus’s Laws were neglected, and the Spartans had degenerated from the strict Virtue of their Forefathers, their Women also were ill spoken of, and made use of the Freedom, which their Law-giver allowed them, to no good purposes; inso-much that they are censured of unlawful Pleasures, and branded by Euripides, as cited by Plutarch (a), with the Epithet of ἀνδρομανίς, i. e. possessed with furious Love or, and, as it were, running mad after Men.

Of the Customs in Child-bearing and managing INFANTS.

THOSE who desired to have Children were usually very liberal in making Presents and Offerings to the Gods, especially to such as were thought to have the Care of Generation. I shall not trouble the Reader with a particular Account of the Names of these Deities, and the Manner they were worshipped in; but it may be requisite to observe, that the Athenians invoked on this Account certain Gods called Τρίτωνάτορις, or Τρίποιάτορις. Who these were, or what the Origination of their Name, is not easy to determine; Orpheus, as cited by Phanodemus in Suidas, makes their proper Names to be Amacrides, Proctoles, and Proctoleon, and will have them to preside over the Winds; Demo makes them to be Winds themselves; but what Business the Winds or their Governors have in Generation, is difficult to imagine. Another Author in the same Lexicographer tells us their Names were Cottus, Briareus, and Gyges, and that they were the Sons of Οὐρανός and Γῆ, i. e. Heaven and Earth. Philochorus likewise makes Earth their Mother, but instead of Heaven substitutes the Sun or Apollo for their Father, whence he seems to account as well for their being accounted the Superintendents of Generation, as for the Name of Τρίτωνάτορις, for

(a) N. m.

for being immediately descended from two immortal Gods, themselves (saith he) were thought τῆτοι πατέρες, the third Fathers, and therefore might be well esteemed the common Parents of Mankind, and from that Opinion derive those Honours, which the Athenians paid them as the Authors and Presidents of human Generation (a).

The Goddess who had the Care of Women in Child-bed was called Εἰληθυῖα, or Εἰληθυῖα, sometimes Ελευθῖα, as in the Epigram ;

———— Μόχθον Ελευθῖα
Εκφυγῖς ————

You're past the Pangs, o'er which Eleutho reigns.

She is called in Latin Lucina. Both had the same Respects paid by Women, and the same Titles and Epithets. Elithyia is called by Nonnus (b), ———— Ἀρήγων Θελευσίαν.

The succouring Deity in Child-birth.

Ovid speaks in the same Manner of the Latin Goddess (c)

———— Gravidis facilis Lucina puellis.

Lucina kind to teeming Ladies.

The Woman in Theocritus invokes Elithyia (d) ;

• Εἴθε γὰρ Εἰληθυῖαν ἰδῶσαο λυσίζωνος.

For there thy Mother t' Elythyia prays
To ease her Throes. ————

The Roman Women called for Lucina's Assistance ; whence Ovid,

———— Tu vota parturientis audis.

You kindly Women in their Travail hear.

Several other Things are common to both. As Elithyia was stiled ὠδίου ἱπαργός, Θελευσίαν, &c. so likewise Lucina was graced with various Appellations denoting her Care of Women. Their Names indeed appear to have distinct Originals, yet both have relation to the same Action ; for Εἰληθυῖα is derived ἀπὸ τῆ ἰαυθῆαι, from coming, either because she came to assist Women in Labour

Labour, or rather from her being invoked to help the Infant ἰσχυομένης εἰς τὸ φῶς, to come into the Light, or the World. Lucina is taken from lux, Light, for the same Reason, according to Ovid, — Tu nobis lucem Lucina dedisti.

Lucina, you first brought us into Light

The Greek Name Φωσφόρος sometimes attributed to this Goddess, is of the same Import with the Latin, Lucina, being derived ἀπὸ τοῦ φῶς, φέρειν, from bringing Light, because 'twas by her Assistance that Infants were safely delivered out of their dark Mansions to enjoy the Light of this World. In Allusion to this, the Greek and Latin Goddesses were both represented with lighted Torches in their Hands; which Reason seems far more natural than that which some assign, viz. ὅτι γυναιξὶν ἐν ἰσχύϊ καὶ πῦρ εἶναι αἱ πόδες, that the Pain of bearing Children is no less exquisite than that of burning (a).

Who this Elithyia is, Authors are not well agreed: Some will have her to be an Hyperborean, who came from her own Country to Delos, and there assisted Lutona in her Labour; they add, that this Name was first used at Delos, and thence derived to other Parts of the World (b). Olen, the first Writer of divine Hymns in Greece, makes her the Mother of Cupid, whence it might be inferred she was the same with Venus, were not Pausanias, who cites this Passage of Olen, against it, when he brings this as a different Account of Cupid's Descent from that received one of his being Venus's Son (c). The same Poet, cited by the same Author (d), will have her to be more ancient than Saturn, and the self same with Περσηφονία; which is the Grecian Name for Fate. Others make her the same with Juno, Diana, the Moon, &c. What appears most probable, is, that all the θεοὶ γυναικῶν, i. e. those Deities who were thought to have any Concern with Women in Child-bed, were called Elithyia, and Lucina, for these are general Names, and sometimes given to one Deity, sometimes to another.

Juno was one of these Goddesses, whence the Women thus invoke her;

Juno Lucina, for opem. —

Juno Lucina, help, assist the Labour.

There are several remarkable Stories concerning Juno's Power in this Affair, whereof I shall only mention that about Alcmena, who having incur'd this Goddess's Displeasure by being Jupiter's Mistress, and being with Child by him, Sthenelus's Wife being likewise with Child at the same Time, but not so forward as the other,

Juno

Juno first obtained that he who should be first born should rule over the other, then alter'd the Course of Nature, caus'd Euryftheus to be born of Sthenelus's Wife, and afterwards Hercules of Alcmena, whence Hercules was always subject to Euryftheus, and undertook his famous Labours in Obedience to his Commands.

The Daughters of this Goddess were employ'd in the same Office, and dignify'd with the same Title, as we find in Homer (a) ;

Ὡς δ' ἔταν ὠδυνῶσαι ἔχῃ βίβλῳ ἑξὺ γυναικᾶς,
Δριμὺ τὸ τε προῖσι μογοτόκοι Εἰλειθυίαι,
Ἡρῆς θυγαῖρες πικρὰς ὠδῖνας ἔχουσας
Ὡς ἑστ' ὀδυῖναι δύναι μὲν Ἀλφειῶο.

Such racking Smart Atrides felt, with Pain,
As pregnant Wives in Labour do sustain,
Which Juno's Daughters th' Elisthyiæ give,
As both to Child and Mother a Relief.

The Moon was another of these Deities, insomuch that Cicero will have Luna, the Moon's Name in Latin, to be the same with Lucina ; nor was it without Reason that the Moon was thought one of the Deities that had the Care of Child-bearing, since, as several Philosophers are of Opinion, her Influences were very efficacious in carrying on the Work of Generation (b).

Diana being commonly reputed the same with the Moon, was likewise thought to bear the same Office, as we find in Horace, who having invoked celestial Diana, proceeds thus (c) ;

Rite maturos aperire partus
Lenis Ilithyia, tuere matres,
Sive tu Lucina probas vocari,
Sen Genitalis :
Diua, producas sobolem, patrumque
Prosperes decreta super jugandis
Famini, prolisque novæ feracæ
Lege marita.

Propitious Ilithyia, thou, whose Care
Presides o'er Child-birth, lend a pitying Ear ;
Prolifick Wombs defend and bless,
May they conceive, and in their Issue have Success ;
Let Laws and Statutes of the Wife
Promote, enjoin, encourage Marriage-ties,
And may our Senators agree
'T' enact good wholesome Rules for Bridal Sympathy ;
Whether we thee Lucina name,
Or whether Luna, still the same.

The same Poet, in another Place, has attributed the same Care to this Goddess, not in her celestial Capacity, and as bearing the same Character with the Moon, but as frequenting these lower Regions, and traversing the Woods (a) ;

*Montium custos, nemorumque virgo,
Quæ laborantes utero puellas
Ter vocata audis, adimisque letbo,
Diva triformis.*

Goddeſs, to whom belongs this Hill, this Brake
Where frighted Deer their Covert make,
Triple Diana, who doſt hear,
And help Child-bearing Women after the third Pray'r.

Hence ſhe is called in Theocritus μογοςόκη, the common Epithet of Erlthyia, Ἀλλὰ τὴν βασιλίαν μογοςόκη Ἀφροδίτης ἐστίν.

Orpheus gives her divers other Titles relating to this Affair (b) ;

Παισιφάης, δαδύχε, διὰ δάκρυα, λυχία,
Ὡδίνων ὑπερργή, καὶ ὠδίνων ἀμυνή,
Λυσίζωνι, &c.

The Epithets Φαισφόρος, Φερίεσις, &c. which denote the giving of Life and Light, being likewise attributed to Proserpina, make it seem that she was also thought to be concerned for Women in Labour ; which cannot appear strange, if we consider her as the same Goddess with Diana, who being in three different Capacities, as conversant in Heaven, Earth, and Hell, has three distinct Names ; in Heaven she is Σελήνη, the Moon ; upon the Earth Ἀφροδίτη, Diana ; in Hell Προσφόρη, Proserpina ; whence are those Epithets, whereby the Poets denote her threefold Character, as τρίμορφος, triformis, ter-gemina, with several others.

One End of invoking these Goddesses was, that the Women might be delivered without Pain, which was thought an infallible Token of the Divine Favour ; whence Theocritus, in his Encomium of Ptolemy, reckons it as an extraordinary Blessing that his Mother Berenice brought him into the World without Pain (c) ;

She brought great Ptolemy as great a Son;

For there thy Mother to Lucina pray'd
To ease her Throws, and found a speedy Aid;
She came, stood by, and gently loos'd her Pain,
Thy very Birth was easy as thy Reign. Mr. Creech.

Nay, so great an Opinion had they of this Favour, that the Gods were believed to vouchsafe it to none but the Chaste and Virtuous, whence it came to be looked on as a convincing Proof of a Woman's Honesty. Thus we find in Plautus (a), that when Amphytrion expresses his jealous Thoughts concerning Alcmena, this Argument is offered to allay his Passion;

BR. — Uxorem tuam

*Neque gementem, neque plorantem nostrum quisquam audivimus,
Ita profecto sine dolore peperit.*

Your Wife is brought to bed with Ease, since none
Hath heard so much as Groan or Sigh come from her.

Another Token of Divine Favour was thought to be conferred when they brought forth Twins, which happening to Alcmena, was urged as another Proof of her Innocence (b);

BR. — Ego faciam, tu idem ut aliter prædices,

Amphitruo, piam & pudicam esse tuam uxorem ut scias;

They had likewise other Means to procure an easy Delivery, one of which was, to hold in their Hands Palm-Branches, Tokens of Joy and Conquest, and used as Emblems of Persons raised from great Afflictions to Prosperity, it being observed of that Tree, that the hanging of heavy Weights upon it is a Means to cause it to branch out to a great Height. Latona, when brought to bed with Apollo, made use of this Expedient to ease her Pain; whence Theognis thus bespeaks that God (a);

——— Σὶ διὰ τίς τίς πύτνα Ληδῶ,
Φοῖνικος ῥαδιῆς χερσὶν ἰφαλαμένη.

When handling Palm Latona brought you forth.

Homer likewise mentions Latona's travelling near a Palm-Tree (b);

Χαῖρε, μάκχι; ὦ Ληδοῖ, ἐπὶ τίς τίς ἀγλαὰ τέκνα,
Ἀπὸ λλάτ' ἀνακλᾷ καὶ Ἀσπερινὸν ἰνχιαιραν.

It is observable, that the ancient Athenians used none but Man-Midwives, it being forbidden by one of their Laws that Women or Slaves should have any Concern in the Study or Practice of Physick. This proving very fatal to many Women, whose Modesty suffered them not to entrust themselves in the Hands of Men, one Agnodice disguised herself in Man's Clothes, and studied Physick under a certain Professor called Herophilus, where having attained to a competent Skill in that Art, she revealed herself to her own Sex, who agreed with one Consent to employ none beside her. Hereupon the rest of the Physicians, enraged at their Want of Business, indicted her before the Court of Areopagus, as one that corrupted Mens Wives.

(a) Geom. v. 5.

(b) Hymn. in Apollin. v. 24.

Wives. To obviate this Accusation, she discovered what Sex she was of; upon this the Physicians prosecuted her with great Eagerness, as violating the Laws, and encroaching upon the Men's Privilege; when, to prevent her Ruin, the principal Matrons of the City came into Court, and addressed themselves to the Judges, telling them, "That they were not Husbands, but Enemies, who were going to condemn the Person to whom they ow'd their Lives." Upon this the Athenians repealed the old Law, and permitted three Women to undertake this Employment (a).

No sooner was the Child brought into the World, but they washed it with Water; whence Callimachus, speaking of Jupiter's Nativity, has these Words (b);

Εὐθ' σ' ἐπὶ μήτηρ μεγάλην ἀπ' ἠέκαλο κύλπον,
 Αὐτίκα διζήτο ῥέον ὑδατος ὣ κε τόκοιο
 Λύματα χυῖναι, τὴν δ' ἐν χερσὶν ἁλίσσαι.

As soon as you was born, and saw the Light,
 Your Mother's grateful Burthen, and Delight,
 She sought for some clear Brook to purify
 The Body of so dear a Progeny.

Lycophron also designing to express the Murder of Cilla and her Son Munitus, which was effected as soon as the Child was born, says they died before the Boy was washed or suckled (c);

Ἰ' αἶμα πάππη, ἢ χαμαινῆδος μοῖροι
 Τῆς λαβρονόμφε πύρρην, μιμνημένοι
 Ἐκὼν κίχυνται, πρὶν λαρυξασθαι γένος,
 Πρὶν ἐκ λοχίης γυῖα χυῖναι δρύσω.

A stol'n Embrace sent Cilla to the Fates,
 With her Munitus, the young Bastard-brat,
 Who both were kill'd nigh unto Ilus' Tomb,
 Her Grandfather, before the Child had been Cleans'd from the Issue of the spurious Birth.

The Lacedæmonians bathed their new-born Infants, not in Water, as was the Custom of all other Countries, (saith Plutarch in his Life of Lycurgus) but Wine, to prove the Temper and Complexion of their Bodies; for they had a Conceit that weakly Children would fall into Convulsions, or immediately faint upon their being thus bathed; on the contrary, those who were of a strong and vigorous Constitution, would acquire a greater degree of Firmness by it, and get a Temper in proportion like Steel in the quenching.

The next Action observable is cutting the Child's Navel, which was done by the Nuries, and called ἡμεδαλημία (d), whence arose the proverbial Saying ὁμφαλὸς σου ὡς περιτμήθη, i. e. thy Navel is not cut; which is as much as if we say, you are an Infant, and scarce separated from your Mother. There was a Place in Crete called Oμφάλιον, from ὁμφαλός, a Navel, because Jupiter's Navel-string was cut there, whence Callimachus speaks to him thus (a) :

Y 3 the

Τετακί τοι πόσι δαῖμον, ἀπ' ὁμφαλός· ἔθνη κίχου
Ὀμφάλιον μίλιπύλα κείδον καλῶσι Κύνωνες.

Then the Nurse wrapped the Child in Swaddling-bands, lest its Limbs being then tender and flexible, should happen to be distorted; only the Spartan Nurses were so careful and experienced, that without using Swaddling-bands, their Children were strait and well proportioned. Their Management of Children differed likewise from all the rest of the Grecians in several other Instances, for “they used “them to any Sort of Meat, and sometimes to bear the Want of it,
“not to be afraid in the Dark, or to be alone, nor to be froward,
“peevish, and crying, as they are generally in other Countries, “through the impertinent Care and Fondness of those who look to “them. Upon this Account Spartan Nurses were frequently hired “by People of other Countries; and it is reported that she who “suckled Alcibiades was a Spartan (b).”

To return, new-born Infants were at Athens commonly wrapped in a Cloth, wherein was represented the Gorgon's Head, because that was described in the Shield of Minerva, the Protectress of that City, whereby, it may be, Infants were committed to the Goddess's Care. Another End of it might be to put them in mind, when arrived at Mens Estate, that they were to imitate such noble and generous Actions as were there represented; or to be an happy Omen of their future Valour; for which Reasons it was likewise customary to lay them upon Bucklers; thus Hercules, and his Brother Ipbiclus were placed by Alcmena (c);

Ἡρακλῆα δικάμηνον ἰούῳ πρὸς ἃ Μιδιάτις
Ἀλκμήνη, καὶ θυλὴν παύτερον Ἰφικλῆα,
Ἀμφελίως ἀύσασα, καὶ ἐμπλήσασα γάλακτι,

Alcmena fed, and laid him on a Shield,

On a round Buckler the Laconian Dames
Lay down their Burthen of Child-birth——

In other Places they placed their Infants on a Thing bearing some Resemblance to whatever Sort of Life they designed them for. Nothing was more common than to put them in Vans, or Conveniences to winnow Corn, in Greek λίκνα, which were designed as Omens of their future Riches and Affluence (b). This was not always a real Van, but commonly an Instrument bearing the Figure of it, composed of Gold, or other Minerals. Thus, Callimachus tells us, Nemesis placed young Jupiter in a golden Van (c);

—— Σὶ δὲ κοίμισεν Ἀθήνη
Λίκῳ ἐν χρυσῷ.

In a Gold Van Nemesis laid you to sleep.

One Thing more is to be observed concerning the Athenians before we dismiss this Head, viz. that it was a common Practice among them, especially in Families of Quality, to place their Infants on Dragons of Gold; which Custom was instituted by Minerva, in memory of Erichthonius, one of their Kings, who had Feet like those of Serpents, and being exposed to the wide World when an Infant, was committed by that Goddess to the Custody of two vigilant Dragons. Euripides has largely accounted for this Ceremony, when he speaks of Cæus's Son, whom she bore to Apollo (d):

—— Ως δ' ἦλθε χρόνῳ
Τεχῆσ' ἐν ἑκάτῃ παῖδ', ἀπήνηκε βρέφῳ

The Poet has likewise given us the same Account of this Custom towards the latter End of this Tragedy (a).

On the fifth Day after the Birth, the Midwives having first purified themselves by washing their Hands, ran round the Fire-hearth with the Infant in their Arms, thereby, as it were, entering into the Family, and putting it under the Protection of the Household Gods, to whom the Hearth served instead of an Altar ; hence the Day was called δρομιάφι ημερ, or (which was the more usual Name) αμφιδρόμια ; it was celebrated as a Festival, with great Expressions of Joy ; they received Gifts from their Friends. If the Child was a Male, their Doors were deck'd with an Olive Garland ; if a Female, with Wool, in Token of what the Workwomen were to be employ'd about. The Cheer consisted of divers Sorts of Things, among which κράμβη, Colewort, was always one, which the Athenian Midwives used to administer to Women in Child-bed, as conducing to create Milk. The whole Ceremony is described in the following Verses of Ephippus, cited by Athenæus (b), most of which, some Varieties in the reading excepted, the same Author cites in another Place out of Eubulus (c) ;

—Επιτα σῶ :

Οὐ γέφαν' ἔδ' εἰς ἐν πρόθε τῶν θυρῶν,
 Οὐ κρίσσα κρέει ἐνὸς ὑπεροχᾶς ἀκρας

The seventh Day was likewise honour'd with Festival Solemnities, that being the Time the Child was commonly named; to celebrate this Day was called ἑορτασθαι. The Reason why the Child's Name was impos'd on this Day, was, τι πιστεῖται τῇ στήνῃ, because by this Time they began to conceive Hopes that it would live; for weakly Infants, τὰ πλεῖστα ἀπαιρεῖται προ τῆς ἑορτῆς, commonly die before the seventh, as we are informed by Aristotle in Harpocration (a).

Some kept the eighth Day after the Infant's Birth, calling that the γυναικὸς ἡμέρα, natalis, Birth-day, because solemnized in memory of the Child's Nativity. The same Day was kept every Year after during the Child's Life. The same was also observed by the Jews for their Circumcision, as hath been remarked by the ancient Interpreter upon the following Passage of Terence (b);

—————porro autem Geta
Feristur alio munere, ubi hera pepererit:
Porro alio autem, ubi erit puero natalis dies.

Others nam'd their Children upon the tenth Day after their Birth, on which also they invited their Friends to an Entertainment, and offered Sacrifices to the Gods. Euripides mentions this Custom (c);

Τίς σε μήτηρ ἐν δεκάτῃ τόκῳ ὠνόμασιν;

What Mother on the tenth Day named you?

The same is also mentioned by Aristophanes (d);

—————Θεῶν τῇ δεκάτῃ ταύτην ἰγνώ
Καὶ τῶν μ' ὥσπερ παίδων οὗν δ' ἰδόμεν.

On the tenth Day I offer'd Sacrifice,
And, as a Child's, her Name impos'd.

Some will have the tenth to be the same with Αμφιδρόμια, but (however some Persons might join the two Solemnities) they were commonly distinct; to celebrate this Day was called δικάτην δεῖν, δικάτην ἀποδοῦν, δικάτην ἱσιάζεσθαι (a).

It may be observ'd, that when the Child received its Name, whether upon the tenth, or any other Day, a considerable Number of Friends were present. This Custom was not only observed by the Grecians, but at Rome, and in most other Parts of the World; the chief End whereof seems to have been to prevent Controversies that might afterwards arise, when the Child came into Business, and was under several civil Relations, if his Name was not certainly known.

The Child's Father usually imposed the Name. There was a Law at Athens whereby Fathers were authorized to give Names to their Children, and to alter them as often as they pleased (b). In imposing Names they observed no constant Rule, yet it was common to chuse some of their most eminent Ancestors, whose Name they desired should be continued to Posterity, as an Honour to themselves and their Family, and a perpetual Remembrance to stir up their Children to the Imitation of great Examples. Thus we find the Names of Pyrrhus, Philip, Ptolomy, &c. preserved in several of their Successors. Ulpian speaks of Proxenus descended from one Harmodius, and the Father of another (c). Plutarch says Tibuldides was the Son of Olorus, who derived his Name from one of his Ancestors (d). Aristophanes makes Gallias both the Father and Son of Hipponicus (e).

Ἰππόνικος Καλλίης, καὶ Ἰππόνικε Καλλίας.

Lastly, (to trouble you with no more Instances) we are assured by Eusebius, that this was a Custom of very great Antiquity (f). The same seems to have been frequent in most other Nations. Few of the Roman Families but what afford continual Instances of this Nature. Hannibal the Carthaginian bore his Grandfather's Name: And we find Zachary's Friends in St. Luke's Gospel strangely surprized when his Son the Baptist was called John, because none of his Relations were known by that Name.

The Actions of Parents were frequently perpetuated by the Names of their Children, as Eusebius observes (g). So Cleopatra, or rather Marpissa (for Eusebius and the old Scholiast are of different Opinions herein) was called Halcyone, because when she was ravished by Apollo, her Mother was no less afflicted than the Halcyon is wont to be for the Loss of her Young (h).

Hector's Son Scamandrius was nam'd by the Trojans Astyanax, because his Father was τὸ ἀσῖος ἀναξ, the Defender of the City Troy; for the Original Signification of ἀναξ is no more than a Saviour or Defender, whence the Gods are commonly call'd ἀσῖοι. The Story is in Homer (a):

——— Ἀρσ' ἀμφίπολ'· κίον αὐτῇ
 Παῖδ' ἐπὶ κόλποις ἔχουσ' ἀταλάρχοντα, νήπιον ὦπτα,
 Ἐκτορὶδ' ἀγαπητὸν, ἀλγικὸν ἡτῆρ' καλῶ,

Scamandrius was his Name, which Hector gave,

 But him Astyanax the Trojans call,
 From his great Father, who defends the Wall.

Mr. Dryden.

Ulysses was called Οδυσσεύς, διὰ τὸ οδυάσσεισθαι τὸν Αὐτόλυκον, from the Anger of his Grandfather Autolycus, as Homer reports, when he introduces Autolycus thus speaking to Ulysses's Parents (b);

Γαμβρός ἐμός, θυγάτηρ τε, τίθειθ' ὄνομ' ὅτ' ἐγὼ εἶπα·
 Πελοίοισιν γὰρ ἔγωγε οδυσσάμηνον τόδ' ἐκάλεον
 Ἀνδράσιν ἡδὲ γυναιξίν· ἀνα χθονα παλυσούτισσαν,

 Because when much enrag'd I hither came.

Mens own Actions, Complexions, or Condition, frequently gave Occasion to their Names. Thus Oedipus was named διὰ τὸ εἰδέναι τοὺς πατέρας, whence Seneca introduces an old Man thus speaking to him (c);

Achilles's Son was first called Πύρρῳ, from his ruddy Complexion, or the Colour of his Hair, afterwards Νεοπτόλεμος, from undertaking the Management of the Trojan War when very young. To mention other Instances is needless, wherefore I shall conclude this Head with Plutarch's Words, wherein we have an Account of the Roman as well as the Grecian Method in imposing Names (a). “ Hence (i. e. from “ the taking of Corioli, the chief City of the Volscians) Caius Mar- “ cus had his third Name of Coriolanus, whence it is manifest that “ Caius was a personal proper Name; that the second, or Surname “ of Marcus, was a Name in common to his Family; and that the “ third Roman Appellative was a peculiar Note of Distinction drawn “ afterwards, and imposed for some particular Action, Fortune, “ Shape, Feature, or Virtue of him that bore it. For thus also the “ Grecians in old Time were wont to fix an additional Character on “ their great Men for any famous Atchievement, such as Σῶτηρ, i. e. “ Saviour; and Καλλίνικος, renown'd for Victory or, to express “ something remarkable in their Shape or Features, as Φύσκων, “ Gorge-belly, and Γρυπὸς, Eagle-nos'd; as likewise upon account “ of their Virtue and Kindness, as Εὐεργέτης, a Benefactor, and “ φιλάδελφος, a Lover of his Brethren; or from their unusual Feli- “ city and good Fortune, as Εὐδαίμων, Happy, a Name given to the “ second Prince of Battus's Family. Several Kings had Names ap- “ propriated to them in Reproach and Mockery, as Antigonus that “ of Δωσαν, i. e. one liberal only in the future, since he was always “ promising, but never came to Performance; and Ptolemy, who “ was stiled Αἰμυρος, for the fond Opinion he had of his own Wit “ and Pleasantness. This latter kind of Denomination by way of “ Raillery the Romans did very much delight in; for one of the “ Metelli was surnamed by them Διαδηματός, because he had for a “ long Time together walked about with his Head bound up, by “ reason of an Ulcer in his Forehead. There are some who even at “ this Day derive Names from certain casual Incidents at their Na- “ tivity; one, for Instance, who happens to be born when his Fa- “ ther is abroad in a foreign Country, they term Proculus; another “ born after his Father's Decease, they stile Posthumus; and when “ Twins come into the World, whereof one dies at the Birth, the “ Survivor is called Vospicus. Nay, they use to denominate not only “ their Syllas and Nigers, i. e. Men of a pimpled Visage, or swarthy “ Complexion, but their Cæci and Claudii, i. e. the Blind and Lame, “ from such corporal Blemishes and Defects, thus wisely accusom- “ ing their People not to reckon the Loss of Sight, or any other “ bodily Misfortune, as a Matter of Ignominy and Disgrace, but “ that

“ that they should answer to such Names without Shame or Confusion, no otherwise than to the most familiar Compellations.”

Sometimes they took a more compendious Way to dispose of their Children, either killing them outright, or exposing them in some desert Place, or elsewhere, to the Mercy of Fortune. To do the latter of these they termed ἐκθισθαι, or ἀποθισθαι; nor was it accounted a criminal or blame-worthy Action, but permitted by some Lawgivers, and expressly encouraged and commanded by others. The Lacedæmonians are remarkable for their Behaviour in this Matter, for they allowed not Fathers to nourish their Children, when inclined to do it, but obliged them to carry all their new-born Infants to certain Triers, who were some of the gravest Men in their whole Tribe, and kept their Court in a Place called Λίσχην, where they carefully view'd such as were brought to them; if they found them lusty and well-favour'd, they gave Orders for their Education, and allotted a certain Proportion of Land for their Maintenance; but if weakly or deform'd, they order'd them to be cast into a deep Cavern in the Earth near the Mountain Taygetus, as thinking it neither for the Good of the Children themselves, nor for the publick Interest, that they should be brought up, since Nature had both denied them the means of Happiness in their own Particular, and of being serviceable to the Publick, by not enduing them with a sufficient Measure of Health and Strength. On this account it was that new-born Infants were bathed with Wine (a), as has been already observed. The Place into which the Lacedæmonians cast their Infants was called Ἀποθίται, whence ἀποθισθαι is usually taken for exposing with a Design to destroy; whereas ἐκθισθαι commonly bears a milder Sense, for many Persons exposed their Children, when they were not willing they should perish, only because they were unable to maintain them; Daughters especially were thus treated, as requiring more Charges to educate and settle them in the World than Sons; whence the Saying cited out of Pofidippus,

- Τὸν τρίψαι τις καὶ πῶς τις ὡς τύχη,
• Θυγαῖρα δὲ ἐκθισοὶ καὶ ἡ πλώσιος.

A Man, tho' poor will not expose his Son,
But if he's rich, will scarce preserve his Daughter.

The Thebans disliked this barbarous Custom, having a Law whereby the Practice of it was made capital; such as were not of Ability to provide for their Children, were ordered to carry them as soon as born to the Magistrates, who were obliged to take care for their Maintenance, and when they were grown up, used them as Slaves, taking their Service as a Recompence for the Charge and Trouble they had been put to (b).

Children were usually exposed in their Swaddling-cloaths, and laid in a Vessel; thus Ion was exposed by Creusa (c);

Aristophanes calls it ὄρεα, speaking of Oedipus (a) :

Ἄλτ' ἐν γούρῳ

Χαμῶτος ὄρεος ἐθέλεισθαι ὡς ὄρεα.

'Tis sometimes termed γούρῳ, whence γούρῳ is the same with ἰσθμῶς, and γούρῳ with ἰσθμῶς (b).

The Parents frequently tied Jewels and Rings to the Children they expos'd, or any other Thing, whereby they might afterwards discover them, if Providence took care for their Safety. Another Design in thus adorning these Infants was, either to encourage such as found them to nourish and educate them if alive, or to give them human Burial if dead. The last of these Reasons is assigned by Euripides, speaking of Crausa (c) :

Ἢν ἔχῃ χρυσῶν χρυδῶν

Τὴν ἀποσπῶσθαι ἴδω, ὡς θανόντας.

Her costly Robe she o'er the Infant cast,
And left it to expire.——

Terence introduces Sofrata assigning another Reason for this Practice, when she relates how she had caused her Daughter to be expos'd, to save her from her Husband Chremes, who had strictly commanded that she should be put to Death (d) :

Ut stultæ & miseræ omnes sumus

Religiosa; cum exponendum do illi, de digito anulum

Detraho, & cum dico ut una cum puella exponeret,

Si moreretur, ne expens partis esset de nostris bonis.

We are all tender superstitious Fools:
So when I first deliver'd up my Child
To be expos'd, I strait pull'd off my Ring,
And bade the Man to leave it with the Girl;
So had she there deceas'd, she still had kept
Some Pledge that would denote my former Love.

Before the Conclusion of this Chapter, it will be necessary to add something concerning the Purification of Women coming out of Childbed, for during their lying there they were looked on as polluted: whence the Athenians enacted a Law that no Woman should bring forth in Delos, an Island consecrated to Apollo, because the Gods were believed to have an Aversion to all Sorts of Pollution. Iphigenia in Euripides tells us, that no Person who was guilty of Murder, or had touch'd a Woman in Childbed, or a dead Corpse, could be admitted to Diana's Altar (a);

———Βροτῶν μὲν ἂν τις ἀψήται φόνου,
Ἡ καὶ λοχίας, ἥ νεκρῶ δίῳι χερσὶν,
Βαμὲ ἀπείργει, μυσσάρων ὡς ἡγεμένη.

They who by these Pollutions are defil'd,
By Murder, Childbed, or but touch'd the Dead,
Let them, as Things unhallowed, be deny'd
T' approach Diana's Alar.

When the fortieth Day came, the Danger of Child-birth being then over, they kept a Festival, called from the Number of the Days τ.σσαρακοθίς; at this Time the Woman, having been before purified by washing, enter'd into some of the Temples, most commonly Diana's, which from her Labour till that Time she was not allowed to do (b); here she returned Thanks for her safe Delivery, and offered Sacrifices. It was likewise the Custom to present her Garments to Diana, who acquired hence the Surname of Χλιδων (c); and Women after their first Child did farther offer their Zona to the same Goddess, who was on that account called Αυσιζών, and had a Temple at Athens dedicated to her under that Title (d).

CHAPTER. XV.

Of their different Sorts of Children, Wills, Inheritances, the Duties of Children to their Parents, &c.

THE Scholiast on Homer makes four different Sorts of Children.

1. Οἱ γνήσιοι, or ἰθαγενεῖς, Children born in lawful Marriage.
2. Οἱ νόθοι, those born of Concubines, or Harlots.
3. Οἱ σκώτιοι, whose Fathers were not known, wherein they were distinguished from the former.
4. Οἱ παρθένιαι, such as were born of Women, who, tho' violated before Marriage, were still taken for Virgins. This and other Divisions

(a) Iphigen. Taur. v. 280. (b) Censorinus de Natal. Cap. XI. (c) Callimachi Scholiastes, Hymn. I. (d) Apolloni Scholiastes.

Divisions of Children I shall pass by, only taking notice of three sorts.

1. Γέννητοι, lawfully begotten.
2. Νόθοι, born of Harlots, which Word in a large Sense may comprehend the three latter sorts of Children before mentioned.
3. Οδοι, adopted.

It will be necessary to add something more concerning every one of these. First, those were reputed lawfully begotten, who were begotten in lawful Marriage, which was measured by different Rules, as the Affairs of every State required. In some Places whoever had a Citizen for his Father, tho' his Mother was a Foreigner; in others, those also who were born of free Women, when their Fathers were Foreigners, passed for legitimate, and inherited the Freedom of the City they were born in, and all Privileges consequent thereto. Most Commonwealths at their first Constitution, and after great Losses of Inhabitants by War, Plagues, or other Ways, seem to have taken this Course to replenish and strengthen their Country with People; but when that Exigence ceased, and it became necessary to restrain the too great Increase of free Citizens, they commonly enacted that none should be esteemed legitimate but such as were descended from Parents both Citizens (a), which Order was dispensed with or abrogated as oft as fresh Occasions required. This may be observed at Athens in Pericles's Time; for when Pericles was in a flourishing Condition, and had Sons lawfully begotten, he proposed that Solon's old Law should be revived, whereby it was order'd that they only should be reputed true Citizens of Athens whose Parents were both Athenians, whereupon almost 5000 lost their Freedom, and were sold for Slaves. But Pericles himself afterwards having lost all his legitimate Sons, so far prevailed with the Athenians, that they cancell'd the Law, and yielded that he might enroll his natural Son in the Register of his own Ward by his Paternal Name, which was a Thing the Νόθοι, natural Children, were incapable of, as having nothing to do with the Name, Family (b), or Estate of their Father, as neither were they allowed to intermeddle in Sacred or Civil Affairs. For fear any Person should insinuate such Children into the City-Register, wherein all the Citizens Names were kept, they made severe Scrutinies in every Borough, which was term'd διαψήσις (c), whereby all Persons not duly qualified were ejected from the City. There was also a Court of Justice in the Cynosarges, a Place in the Suburbs of Athens, where Examination was made concerning such Persons. Nor were such as had only one Parent an Athenian, though allowed the Freedom of Athens, reputed equal to such as were Athenians of the whole Blood; for we find in Plutarch (d), that when these performed their Exercises at the Schools within the City, those of the half Blood, with the Foreigners, were only allowed to exercise at Cynosarges, where was a Gymnasium dedicated to Hercules, who who himself was illegitimate, as not being descended from two immortal Gods, but having a mortal Woman for his Mother. Themistocles, my Author tells us, offended at his Reproach, persuaded divers of the young Noblemen to accompany him to anoint and exercise themselves at Gynosarges, whereby he seemed (saith he) with some Ingenuity to take away the Distinction between the truly Noble and the Stranger, and between those of the whole and those of the half Blood of Athens. But of this Practice I have treated more largely in one of the precedent Books (a).

There was never any time that I know of (whatever some may pretend to the contrary) when Illegitimacy was not reputed a Disgrace, unless in those Ages wherein Men lived without Laws and Government, allowing promiscuous Mixtures, and all other Sorts of Uncleaness. Eusebius will have Concubines and their Sons to have been as honourable as their Wives and Sons begotten in lawful Marriage about the Time of the Trojan War (b); but the whole Course of Antiquity seems to be clearly against him, for I do not find one single Instance in any ancient Author which can countenance this Opinion. 'Tis possible, indeed, that Concubines might sometimes have greater Respect than lawful Wives, Bastards than legitimate Children, but that was owing to the partial Affections of Husbands, which Women by their superior Beauty and Arts of Infatuation might gain, but can by no means be attributed to the Practice of those Times. The chief Reason Eusebius alledges is, that Agamemnon calls Teucer νόθος, when encouraging him to fight, at which Time it would have been very improper to have given him opprobrious Language. The Hero's Words run (c):

Τευκρε, φίλη κεφαλῇ, Τηλαμῶνι πόρταν λαῶν,
Βαλλ' ἔως αἶψα τι φῶς Δαναοῖσι γίγναι,
Παῖρι τι σὺ Τηλαμῶνι ὃ σ' ἔτρεφε τοῖδ' ἐν ἰσθίᾳ,
Καὶ σὺ νόθον περ ἰσθία κομισσύνῃς ὣ' ἐν οἴκῳ.

Teucer, you much lov'd Grecian Chief, advance,
If you'd your Sire's or Country's Fame enhance;
Without delay let some exploit be done
Worthy your Country, worthy Telamon.
Who in your Nonage shew'd his gen'rous Care;
For tho' of spurious Birth, he held you dear,
At his own table brought you up, —————

H. H.

In which Words Agamemnon excites Teucer, the natural Son of Telamon, to behave himself with Courage, by two Reasons; first that so doing he would be instrumental in delivering the Grecians from their Enemies, who daily got Ground of them; the other, that such an Action would be a Credit to his Father, whose Honour he ought ought to have a more tender Concern for, since he had received such extraordinary Benefits from him, as having notwithstanding his Illegitimacy, been carefully educated, and that not in any remote Place, where he might have been neglected, but under Telamon's own Eye, and in his own House. This is so far from establishing an Equality between legitimate Children and Bastards, that it evidently shews the contrary, the Partick οὐ after Νόθον plainly implying that such Care of Bastards was something more than common in those Days. Nor can the Poet be blamed for making Agamemnon call him by such a Name, since the thing was no Secret, but known to all the Grecians, and which, no doubt, appeared every Day from Teucer's submissive Behaviour to Ajax, his Half-Brother, and the lawful Son of Telamon. As a Confirmation of what I have said, I shall add the Words of Agamemnon in Sophocles, spoken likewise to Teucer, whence it will appear what Difference there was between the Sons of lawful Wives and those of Concubines, and in particular concerning Teucer, how great a Disgrace it was to him to be the Son of a Captive and Concubine, tho' his Mother was of the Race of Kings (e):

Σὲ δὲ τὰ δεινὰ ῥήματ' ἀγγίλλωσί μοι
 Τλήναι καδ' ἡμῶν ὧδ' ἀνοικνέει χανίῃ,
 Σέ τοι τὸν ἐκ τῆς αἰχμαλωτίδος λέγω·
 Ἡ περ τροφὴς αἰ μῆτρος ἐργαίης ἀπο
 Ὑψηλ' ἐκόμπτεις, κατ' ἄκρῃσι ὠδοπόροις,
 Οὐτ' ἔδιν' ὡς τῷ μηδὲν ἀλίευσ' ὕπερ,
 Κῶτα στρατηγὸς ἔτι ναυάρχης μολεῖν
 Ἡμᾶς Ἀχαιῶν, ἔτι σε διωμόσω;
 Ἀλλ' αὐτὸς ἄρχων, ὡς σὺ φῆς, Αἴας ἱπλεῖ·
 Ταῦτ' ἐκ ἀκροῦ μεγάλα πρὸς δόδωι κακά;

I am informed that with opprobrious Speech
 You, Vassal, you born of a Slave of War,
 Have dar'd bespatter Agamemnon's Fame,
 And yet thy heinous Crime is unreveng'd:
 How hadst thou swell'd if come of nobler Birth,
 Who arrogantly now defend'st the Cause
 Of one that is no more; a lifeless Corpse;
 Darest to deny our dread Authority,
 Whilst Ajax truly must be own'd a Chief?
 Gods! do such Words become a servile Mouth?

H. H.

Some will have only the natural Children of Kings and Persons of Quality to have been equal to those who were lawfully begotten. It may be true that such Children were above the legitimate ones of private ones, but that they were of the same Dignity with the legitimate Children of Princes, does not appear; nay, the contrary is manifest from the fore-mentioned Example of Teucez, both whose Parents were Princes. The same might be proved by other Instances, whereof I shall only mention one; 'tis that of Ion, who had Apollo for his Father, and Creuza, the Wife of an Athenian King, for his Mother, and yet is introduced by Euripides complaining of his hard Fortune, in being illegitimate (a);

18

Εἰταί φασι τὰς αὐτόχθονας
Κλειῶς Ἀθήνας, ἐκ ἐπίσκαλοι γένεσθαι,
Ἰς ἰσπιοῦμαι δύο νόσω κεκλημένον·
Παῖός τ' ἐπακτὸς, καὶ τὸς ὡς νοθογενῆς;
Καὶ τὺτ' ἔχων τὴν ἰδέσθαι ἀσθύνῃ μιν ὦν,
Μὴδ' ἔτι εὖδ' ἰδᾶδ' ὡς κεκλησομαι.

'Tis rumour'd that the famous Athen's Sons
Were thus produc'd, and there have ever liv'd;
Then where shall wretched I intrude myself,
Who am on two Accounts most desperate,
A Bastard Son, and of a Stranger too?
And to compleat my most opprobrious Fate,
Am most infirm; on these Accounts shall I
Be there despis'd, and made a publick Scorn. H. H.

It may indeed be objected, that (as Servius observes) natural Children sometimes succeeded in their Father's Kingdoms; but that only happened, as the same Author tells us, for want of legitimate Issue; nor was it always allowed in such Cases. In some Places the Bastards of private Persons likewise inherited the Estates of their Fathers, having no lawful Children or Relations, as appears from an Athenian Law cited by Demosthenes (b). But where there were Relations, Bastards had no Share, as is plain from a Dialogue between Pisisthetus and Hercules in Aristophanes, where Hercules having been persuaded by Neptune that he was Heir-apparent to Jupiter, is undeceived by Pisisthetus, who tells him, that being illegitimate he had no Right of Inheritance; and to confirm what he said, repeats Solon's Law concerning this Affair. The Passage is long, but being pertinent to this Place, and containing a true Account of the Athenian Practice, must not be omitted (c);

Where tho' Pisibetarus tells Hercules that the Law would not permit him ἰσθία χρήματα, yet that must be interpreted of an equal Portion of the Inheritance, which he could not have whilst his Father had Relations, who were Heirs by Law ; for even Bastards were allowed some Share in their Father's Estate. Abraham is said to have given Portions to the Sons of his Concubines, reserving the Inheritance for his legitimate Son Isaac (a) ; and the Athenian Lawgiver allowed them 500 Drachms, or 5 Attick Pounds, which were termed ἰσθία, a Bastard-Portion (b) : This was afterwards raised to 1000 Drachms, or 10 Attick Pounds. In some Places the Fortune of Bastards depended on their Father's Pleasure,

(a) Genf. cap. xxv. 6. (b) Aristophanes Scholastes in locum citat. Suidas, v.

Pleasure, who had Liberty to take them into their own Family, and make them equal Sharers with their legitimate Children, the Privilege of dividing the Estate only reserved to the latter. An Example hereof we have in two Sons, one of which being begotten in lawful Marriage, the other of a Slave, the Division of their common Inheritance belonged to the former, who placed on one Side the whole Estate, on the other his half Brother's Mother, so reducing him to a Necessity of letting his Mother continue in Slavery, or depriving himself of his whole Portion (a).

Those who had no legitimate Sons, were obliged by the Athenian Laws to leave their Estates to their Daughters, who were confined to marry their nearest Relations, otherwise to forfeit their Inheritance, as we find to have been practised likewise by the Jews, many of whose Laws seem to have been transcribed by Solon: These Virgins, whether sole Heiresses, or only Co-heiresses, were called by Solon himself παρκληρίτιδες, by others, παρλάχοι, or (which is the most common Name of all) παιδαίροι, and sometimes, as Eustatius reports (b), μάρτυαι. These and their nearest Relations were impowered to claim Marriage from one another, which if either Party refused, the other preferred an Action, which was termed παιδικαίσιος, which Word was applied to all sorts of Law-suits; whence Inheritances, about which they went to Law, were termed κληρονομίαι παιδικαί; those which they had a quiet Possession of, ἀντιδικαί. Others report, that whether there was any Dispute or not, the nearest Relation was obliged to claim his Wife with her Inheritance in the Archon's Court, if he was a Citizen; in the Polemarchus's, if only a Sojourner; and that this was termed παιδικαίσιος, and might be done any Month in the Year, except Scirrophorion, the Magistrates being then busy in making up and returning their Accounts (c). The forementioned Law concerning the Marriages of Heiresses, gave Occasion to one of Apollodorus's Comedies, entitled Επιδικαζόμενος, or Επιδικαζομένη, as Donatus reads, understanding it of the Virgin's suing for a Husband. This was translated into Latin by Terence, and called Phormio, wherein we have these Verses, mentioning the Law we have been speaking of;

*Lex est, ut orbæ, qui sint genere proximi,
Iis nubant, & illos ducere eadem hæc lex jubet.*

The Law commands, that Orphans marry those
That nearest are ally'd, and that the Men Consent to join with these. —

Farther we find it ordered, that when Men had given a Daughter in Marriage, and after that died without Sons to heir their Estates, their nearest Relation had Power to claim the Inheritance, and to take the Woman from her Husband, which Isæus (a) reports to have been a common Practice.

Persons who had no lawful Issue were allowed to adopt whom they pleased, whether their own natural Sons, or (by Consent of their Parents) the Sons of other Men. But such as were not ἐξ ἑαυτῶν, their own Masters, were excepted; such were Slaves, Women, Madmen, Infants, that is, all such as were under 21 Years of Age; for these not being capable of making Wills, or managing their own Estates, were not allowed to adopt Heirs to them. Foreigners being excluded from the Inheritance of Estates at Athens, if any such was adopted, he was made free of the City. The Adoption being made, the adopted Person had his Name enrolled in the Tribe and Ward of his new Father; this was not done at the same time in which the Children begotten of themselves were registered, but on the Festival called Θαγγίλια, in the Month Targelion. The Lacedæmonians were very cautious and wary in this Affair, and for the Prevention of rash and inconsiderate Adoptions, had a Law that they should be confirmed in the Presence of their Kings. Adopted Children were called παῖδες θεοὶ, or σιταποῖντο, and were invested in all the Privileges and Rights of, and obliged to perform all the Duties belonging to, such as were begotten by their Fathers. And being thus provided for in another Family, they ceased to have any Claim of Inheritance or Kindred in the Family which they had left (b), unless they first renounced their Adoption, which the Laws of Salam allowed them not to do, except they had first begotten Children to bear the Name of the Person who had adopted them; thus providing against the Ruin of Families, which would have been extinguished by the Desertion of those who were adopted to preserve them (c). If the adopted Persons died without Children, the Inheritance could not be alienated from the Family into which they were adopted, but returned to the Relations of the Person who had adopted them. The Athenians are by some thought to have forbidden any Man to marry after he had adopted a Son, without Leave from the Magistrate. And there is an Instance in Tænetes (d) Chiliads of one Leogoras, who being ill used by Andocides the Orator, who was his adopted Son, desired Leave to marry. However, it is certain, that some Men married after they had adopted Sons; and if they begot legitimate Children, their Estates were equally shared between those begotten and adopted. It may be observed in this Place, that it was an ancient Custom for legitimate Sons to divide their Father's Estates by Lots, all having equal Shares, without respect to Priority of Birth, but allowing a small Pittance to such as were unlawfully begotten. Thus Ulysses in Homer tell Eumæus, that the Sons of Castor the Cretan, of whom he felgns himself one, divided what he left (e);

Such as had neither legitimate nor adopted Children, were succeeded by their nearest Relations, as appears from the forecited Dialogue between Hercules and Pisibetærus. This Custom was as ancient as the Trojan War, being mentioned in Homer, when he relates how Diomedes slew the two only Sons of Phætopus (a) :

Εἰδ' ὃ γε τοὺς ἱερέας, φίλον δ' ἐξαίνετο θυμῶν
 Ἀμφολέρον, πατέρη δὲ γόνος καὶ κήδεα λυγρὰ
 Αἰετ', ὅππῃ ἐ ζῶντι μάχης ἱεροῦ ἥσαντο
 Διέτατο, χηρῶν δὲ διὰ κλήσιν δαλέωτο.

Then both he slew, then both depriv'd of Life,
 And thus increas'd their ancient Father's Grief,
 Since he not safe receiv'd them from the War,
 Thus childless, his next Friends his Goods did share.

H. H.

Where indeed Eustathius with the old Scholiast will have χηρῶν to signify certain Magistrates, who had Right to the Estates of such as died χηρεύοντες τῶν διαδόχων, without lawful Heirs ; but it may as well be interpreted of Relations ; for that these succeeding to the the Estates of Persons without Children were called χωρῶται, is plain from ancient Grammarians (a). Hesiod has used the same Word, but in which of these Senses is equally ambiguous (b) ;

Ος κε γάμοι φύγων κ' μάματα ἴσγα γυναικῶν
Μὴ γῆμαι ἰδίῃ, ὅλιον δ' ἐπὶ γῆρας ἵκηται,

H. H.

'Tis not worth disputing whether Signification is more pertinent in these Passages, since 'tis certain that both are agreeable enough to the Practice of Antiquity ; for as Persons having Relations were usually succeeded in their Estates by them, so when any died without lawful Heirs, their Possessions belonged to the Prince, the Commonwealth, or the supreme Magistrates, as the Laws of every State directed.

The Grecian Practice concerning Wills was not the same in all Places ; some States permitted Men to dispose of their Estates, others wholly deprived them of that Privilege. We are told by Plutarch (c), that Solon is much commended for his Law concerning Wills, for before his Time no Man was allowed to make any, but all the Wealth of deceased Persons belonged to their Families ; but he permitted them to bestow it on whom they pleased, esteeming Friendship a stronger Tie than Kindred, and Affection than Necessity, and thus put every Man's Estate in the Disposal of the Possessor ; yet he allowed not all sorts of Wills, but required the following Conditions in all Persons that made them :

1. That they must be Citizens of Athens, not Slaves, or Foreigners ; for then their Estates were confiscated for the Public Use.
2. That they must be Men who have arrived to 20 Years of Age ; for Women and Men under that Age were not permitted to dispose by Will of more than one Medium of Barley (d).
3. That they must not be adopted ; for when adopted Persons died without Issue, the Estates they received by Adoption, returned to the Relations of the Man who adopted them.
4. That they should have no male Children of their own ; for then their Estates belonged to these. If they had only Daughters, the Persons to whom the Inheritance was bequeath'd, were obliged to

(d) Ἰσχυρ

to marry them (a). Yet Men were allowed to appoint Heirs to succeed their Children, in case they happened to die under twenty Years of Age (b).

5. That they should be in their right Minds; because Testaments extorted through the Phrenzy of a Disease, or Dotage of old Age, were not in reality the Wills of the Person that made them.

6. That they should not be under Imprisonment, or other Constraint, their Consent being then only forced, nor in Justice to be reputed voluntary.

7. That they should not be induced to it by the Charms and Insinuations of a Wife; for (says Plutarch) the wise Lawgiver with good Reason thought that no Difference was to be put between Deceit and Necessity, Flattery and Compulsion, since both are equally powerful to persuade a Man from Reason.

Wills were usually signed before several Witnesses, who put Seals to them for Confirmation, then placed in the Hands of Trustees, called ἐπιμεληταί, who were obliged to see them performed. At Athens some of the Magistrates, particularly the Assynomi, were very often present at the making of Wills (c). Sometimes the Archons were also present; hence we are told by Harpocration and Suidas, that when any thing was given in the Presence of the Archons, it was termed δοσις (d); for this Word, tho' commonly taken for any sort of Gift or Present, yet was by the Athenian Orators peculiarly applied to Legacies and Things disposed of by Will. Hence δοῦναι is equivalent to διαδοῦναι. Isæus (e) frequently puts them together, διαδοῦναι καὶ δοῦναι; and to succeed, κατὰ δόσιν καὶ κατὰ διαδοῖν, by Gift and Will, is opposed to Succession, κατὰ γένος, by natural Right. Sometimes the Testator declared his Will before sufficient Witnesses, without committing it to Writing. Thus Callias fearing to be cut off by a wicked Conspiracy, is said to have made an open Declaration of his Will before the popular Assembly at Athens (f). The same was done in the nuncupative Wills at Rome.

There are several Copies of Wills in Diogenes Laertius, as those of Aristotle, Lycon, and Theophrastus; whence it appears they had a common Form, beginning with a Wish for Life and Health; afterwards adding, that in case it happened otherwise, their Will was as following, in this Manner; Ἐγώ μιν εὖ, ἰὰν δέ τι συμβῇ ταῦτα διαθεῖμαι.

We have seen how Children enjoy'd the Estates of their Parents, let us now pass to their virtuous and noble Actions, the Rewards of which we find frequently inherited by their Posterity; these consisted not only in fruitless Commendations and empty Titles of Honour, or Expressions of Respect, which yet were liberally bestowed upon the whole Families of Persons eminent for serving their Country, but in more substantial Acknowledgments thought due to the Memory

Memory and Relations of such Men. Their Children were in many Places provided for, and educated suitably to their Birth at the publick Expence, when left destitute of Estates. What Regard the Athenians had of those Mens Children who lost their Lives in fighting for their Country, has been shewed in a former Book ; how they treated the Posterity of others, who had deserved well of their Commonwealth, shall now appear from one or two Instances ; the first is that of Aristides, who dying poor, the Athenian People bestowed upon his Son Lyfimachus 100 Attick Pounds of Silver, with a Plantation of as many Acres of Ground ; and upon the Motion of Alcibiades, ordered farther, that four Drachms a Day should be paid him ; furthermore, Lyfimachus leaving a Daughter named Policrite, the People voted her the same Provision of Corn, with those who obtain Victory in the Olympian Games ; the same Aristides's two Daughters had each of them 300 Drachms out of the publick Treasury for their Portions. Nor is it to be wonder'd (proceeds my Author) that the People of Athens should take care of those who resided in their City, since hearing the Grand-daughter of Aristogiton was in so low a Condition in the Isle of Lemnos, that she was like to want a Husband, they sent for her to Athens, married her to a Person of great Quality, and gave her a Farm for her Dowry ; of which Bounty and Humanity the City of Athens (saith he) in this our Age has given divers Demonstrations, for which she is deservedly celebrated and had in Admiration (a).

Mens Vices and dishonourable Actions were likewise participated by their Children ; for it was thought no more than reasonable, that those who share in the Prosperity and good Fortune of their Parents, should partake likewise of their Losses and Miscarriages. Agamemnon in Homer could be prevailed on by no Arguments to spare Antimachus's Sons, their Father having endeavour'd to procure Mene-laüs and Ulysses to be murder'd, when they were sent on an Embassy to Troy (b) ;

Εἰ μὲν δ' Ἀντιμάχοιο δαΐφρονος υἱὸς ἴσθι, ὅς ποτ' ἐν Τρώϊων ἀγορῇ Μενέλαον ἄνωγεν
Ἀγγελίην ἰλδοῖντα σὺν ἀντιβίῳ Ὀδυσῆϊ

If from the Loins of stout Antimachus
Ye are descended, I'll bespeak you thus :
Since, when the Trojans did in Council sit,
He gravely gave Advice, he thought it fit,

There are many other Instances to the same Purpose, whente it appears this Practice was not owing to the Passion and Prejudices of particular Persons, but thought agreeable to Justice and Reason. It may be sufficient in this place to mention the famous Macedonian Law, whereby it was order'd, that Men guilty of conspiring against their King, should not only suffer Death, with their Children, but all those who were nearly allied to them should share in the same Punishment; whence we find in Curius (a), that when Philotas was found guilty of Treason against Alexander, of the Noblemen and others related to him, some stabb'd themselves, others fled into Wildernesses and Deserts, till the King issued out his Pardon for them.

It remains that I add something concerning the Returns of Gratitude due from Children to their Parents, which appear from their assiduous Attendance on them in the lowest Offices; whence one in Aristophanes relates how his Daughter washed and anointed his Feet;

Καὶ πρῶτα μὲν ἡ θυγάτηρ
Ἀποίξῃ καὶ τῷ πόδι αἰεΐφῃ καὶ προκύψασα φιλήσῃ.

First my dear Child did wash her Father's Feet,
Then she anointed 'em, and bending down
Gave them a sweet endearing Kiss.——

They were zealous in vindicating the Honour, and revenging the Injuries of their Parents; whence Telemachus in Homer says, Orestes had gained the Applause of all Greece, and recommended his Name to succeeding Ages, by taking Revenge on his Father's Murderers (b);

Καλὴν κτῆσθ' μὲν ἐτίσασθ', καὶ οἱ Ἀχαιοὶ
Οἴσουσιν κλέσθ' εὖνυ, καὶ ἰσομένουσιν αἰοιδῆν.

He a brave noble Soul did then put forth,
A Soul of Prowess and heroick Worth,
When he his Father's bold Assassins kill'd,
And both his Duty and the Law fulfill'd.
This Act for ever shall in Records live,
And to his sacred Name Eternity shall give.

J. A.

Several other Instances might be produced wherein Children shew'd their Gratitude to their Parents, whereof I shall only mention their Care in providing a comfortable Subsistence for their old Age, to to do which was termed γηροδοσκίῃν, and performing their Funeral Rites when dead. Medea in Euripides expresses her earnest Desire of (a) enjoying this Happiness :

Πολλὰς ἐν ὑμῖν, γηροδοσκήσειν τ' ἑμὲ,
Καὶ καθάσθυσαι χερσὶν ἐν περιγυλῇ.

What blooming Comforts did I once presage
In your young tender Years? I thought, alas!
What blest'd Support I should receive when old
From you, the Prop of my declining Age,
How you would give me decent Obsequies,
When I should leave the World, and be no more.

J. A.

Admetus, introduced by the same Poet, tells his Father, that he being delivered over to Death by him, there would be no Man to take care of him whilst alive, or pay him due Respect after Death (b) ;

Τοὶ γὰρ φύσειν παῖδας ἐκ τῶν αἰφθάνουσιν,
Οἱ γηροδοσκήσουσι, καὶ θάψῃσιν σε
Περιγυλῇσι, καὶ προβέσσειναι παρὲν,
Οὐ γὰρ σ' ἔγωγε τῇδ' ἑμὴ θάψω χερσὶ,
Τίθῃκα γὰρ δὴ τυπὶ σ'.

You with more Offspring never will be blest,
To give Refreshment to your aged Limbs,
To keep you when disabled, and when dead
To mourn your Loss, and give you decent Burial;
For I, alas! am doom'd to lose my Life,
As much as in you lies; I ne'er will see
Your Body carry'd to the Grave, or be
A sad Attendant at the Funeral.

J. A.

They were so concerned about these Things, that when they undertook any hazardous Enterprize, it was customary to engage some of their Friends to maintain and protect their aged Parents. Thus when the Thebans, living in Exile at Athens, conspired to free their native Country from the Tyrants which the Lacedaemonians had imposed on it, they divided themselves into two Companies, and agreed that one should endeavour to get into the City, and surprise their Enemies, whilst the other, remaining behind in Attica, should expect the Issue, and provide for the Parents and Children of their Associates, if they perished in the Attempt (c). Euryalus in Virgil, when

Inque salutatam linquo ; nox & tua testis

(For this ungranted, all Rewards are vain)
Of Priam's Royal Race my Mother came,
And sure the best that ever bore the Name ;
Whom neither Troy nor Sicily could hold
From me departing, but o'erſpent and old,
My Fate she follow'd ; ignorant of this Whatever Danger, neither parting Kiss,
Nor pious Blessing taken, her I leave,
And in this only Act of all my Life deceive ;
By this Right-hand and conscious Night I swear,
My Soul so sad a Farewel could not bear :
Be you her Comfort, fill my vacant Place,
(Permit me to presume so great a Grace)
Support her Age, forsaken and distressed,
That Hope alone will fortify my Breast
Against the worst of Fortune and of Fears. Mr. Dryden.

The Provision made by Children for their Parents was termed τροφή, by the Poets τροφία, or τροφία, and sometimes τροφία, as we find in Homer (b). To be negligent in this Matter was accounted one of the greatest Impieties, and most worthy of Divine Vengeance ; whence Hesiod, enumerating the Evils of the last and Iron Age, mentions the Disobedience and disrespectful Behaviour of Children to their Parents, as one of the greatest, and which call'd to Heaven for Vengeance (c) ;

No Crime was thought to be followed with more certain and inevitable Judgments than this; for the Furies and other infernal Deities were believ'd always ready to execute the Curses of Parents injur'd by their Children. Hence Telemachus in Homer refuses to force his Mother Penelope from his House, for fear of being haunted by the Furies, and reproached by Men (a);

——— Ἀλλὰ δὲ δαίμων
Δώσει, καὶ μὲτος θυγατρὸς ἀρεσὸν ἔρως
Οἴου ἀπερχομένη, νίμεις δὲ μοι ἐξ ἀνθρώπων ἔσονται. ———

The Gods this Act with Vengeance will repay,
Furies will haunt this House, and I no Day
Shall live at Ease, but scouted and forlorn,
To all my Neighbours a By-word and Scorn.

Phœnix was remarkably punished, when his Father invoked the Furies Assistance against him (b);

——— Πατὴρ δ' ἰμὸς αὐτίκ' οἴσθεις,
Πολλὰ καίηρατο θυγατρὸς δ' ἐπικύλειτ' ἑρμῆς,
Μηκέτι γένασι ὅσω ἐφίσσισθαι φίλον υἱόν

Both Pluto and his Queen are in the Curse ally'd.

J. A.

Many other Instances occur in Authors, as those of Oedipus, Theseus, and others produced by Plato (c), where he endeavours to make out that the Gods were always prepared to hear the Prayers, and revenge the Injuries of Parents. Nor was the Punishment of this Crime only left to be executed by the Gods, but frequently inflicted by

(a) Odyss. c. v. 124.

by human Appointment. Solon ordered all Persons who refused to make due Provision for their Parents, to be punished with (ἀτιμία) Ignominy (a). The same Penalty was incurred by those who beat their Parents. Neither was this confined to their immediate Parents, but equally understood of their Grandfathers, Grandmothers, and other Progenitors.

When Persons, admitted to appear for the Office of Archon, were examin'd concerning their Life and Behaviour, one of the first Questions examin'd was, whether they had honour'd their Parents? Herein if they were found faulty, their Suit was rejected.

Yet there were some Cases wherein the Lawgiver excused Children from maintaining their Parents, as when they had been bred up to no Calling or Profession, whereby they might be enabled to subsist in the World; for the Care and Trouble of Parents in educating their Children being the main Foundation of those Duties they were to expect from them, their Default herein was thought to absolve their Children from their Allegiance. In like manner, such as were prostituted by their Parents, were not compell'd to maintain them (b). The Sons of Harlots were also declar'd to lie under no Obligation of relieving their Fathers, because they who keep Company with Harlots are not supposed to design the Procreation of Children, but their own Pleasure, and therefore have no Pretence to upbraid them with Ingratitude, whose very Birth they made a Scandal and Reproach to them (c).

As the Unkindness of Parents was made a sufficient Excuse for Children to deny them Relief in their old Age, so the Disobedience or Extravagance of Children, whether natural or adopted (d), frequently deprived them of the Care and Estate of their Parents; yet the Athenian Lawgiver allowed not Fathers to disinherit their Children out of Passion, or slight Prejudices, but required their Appearance before certain Judges appointed to have Cognizance of such Matters, where, if the Children were found to deserve so severe a Sentence, the publick Crier was ordered to proclaim, that such a Person rejected the Criminal, whose Name was then repeated, from being his Son; whence to disinherit a Son is called ἀποκληρίζαι τὸν υἱόν, and the Person so disinherited ἀποκληρυσκῶ (e). To be disinherited was likewise called ἐκπίπτειν τῷ γένει; to be received again, ἀναλαμβάνεσθαι εἰς τὸ γένος. It may be farther observed, that Parents were allowed to be reconciled to their Children, but after that could never abdicate them again, lest ἀπέρητοι τῶν πατρῶν αἱ τιμωρίαι, ἢ πόθος αἰδῶ, the Punishments of Children should become endless, and their Fears perpetual, according to Lucian (f).

to invest him with the present Possession of his Inheritance. There is an Allusion to this Law in Aristophanes, who has introduced the Son of Strepsiades thus speaking (a) :

Οἱ μοι τί δράσω παραφορνῶν τῷ πατρί ;
Πότερον παρανομίας αὐτὸν εἰσαγαγὼν, ἢ ὡ.

And there is a remarkable Story concerning Sophocles, who being accused by Jophon, and his other Sons, of neglecting his Affairs thro' Dotage, read to the Judges his Tragedy called Oedipus Coloneus, which he had then lately composed ; whereupon he was acquitted (b).

Of their Times of Eating.

THE following Account of the Grecian Entertainments may not unfitly be divided into five Parts, wherein shall be described,

First, The Times of Eating.

Secondly, The several Sorts and Occasions of Entertainments.

Thirdly, The Materials whereof those Entertainments consisted.

Fourthly, The Ceremonies before Entertainments.

Fifthly, The Ceremonies at Entertainments.

As for the Times of Eating, they, according to Athenæus (c), were four every Day. 1. Ἀκράτισμα, the Morning Meal, so termed because it was customary at this Time to eat Pieces of Bread dipt in Wine unmix'd with Water, which in Greek is called ἄκρατον. This Meal is by Homer called ἄριστον, which Name was either derived ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀρίστου, from its being first taken away ; or rather ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀριστοῦ, because the Heroes immediately went to the War from this Meal, and there valiantly behaved themselves, as we are informed by the Scholiast on that Author (d) ; who likewise tells us, that the Time of this Meal was about the rising of the Sun. Sometimes it was termed διανηρισμός, Jentaculum, Breakfast. 2. Δειπνόν, so named, as the same Scholiast was of Opinion, because after this Meal δειπνόν, it was usual to return to the War, or other Labours, whence τῷ ἄριστῳ συνωνυμαί, it sometimes is synonymous to ἄριστον, being taken for the Morning Meal, as Athenæus hath observed from the following Verse of Homer, in which the Heroes are said to have put on their Armour after the δειπνόν.

Δόπη, the Supper, τὸ κατ' ἡμᾶς λεγόμενον δειπνόν which afterwards among the latter Grecians was termed δειπνόν, according to the forementioned Scholiast; who will have δόπη to be so named from ἰανιπῶ, that Meal being eaten ὅταν εἰς τὸ ἰαυῖν παρηνύμιθα, the last before we go to Sleep. Philemon, as he is cited by Athenæus, thus enumerates the Times of Eating. 1. Ἀκράτισμα. 2. Ἄριστον. 3. Ἐσπέρισμα. 4. Δειπνόν. But the forementioned Scholiast, with whom most other Authors agree as to this Particular, reports τρισὶ τροφαῖς τὰς σαλκιὰς χεῖν, that the ancient Greeks had only three Meals a Day; and leaves out the third Meal, called δειπνόν. And they who have made δειπνόν, or ἐσπέρισμα, to be a distinct Meal from the δόπη, seem to have had no better Foundation for that Distinction than that Verse of Homer, — σὸ δ' ἔρχο δειλιήσας.

Where the Word δειλιήσας, by a mistaken Interpretation, was understood of taking Meat, whereas it was only meant of abiding or remaining in a certain Place in the Afternoon. And this Sense of that Passage was, in the Opinion of Athenæus, so certain, that in another Place (a) he pronounces those Men to be γιλοῖς, οἱ φασκοῖς ὅτι τίσσας ἐλαμδαν τροφάς, ridiculous, who say that the ancient Greeks used to eat four Meals a Day.

Others are of Opinion that the primitive Greeks had only two Meals a Day, viz. ἄριστον and δόπη, and that the rest are only different Names of these. And Athenæus (b) himself affirms, that no Man can be produced σαρὰ τὰ ποιήη τρίς λαμβάνων τροφάς, eating thrice a Day in Homer. Neither is it to be doubted but that in those early Ages the Way of Living was very frugal and temperate, and it was thought sufficient if they had a moderate Breakfast, and after the Business and Labour of the Day was over, refreshed themselves with a plentiful Meal; whence Plato wonder'd that the Sicilians and Italians should eat two plentiful Meals every Day; and among the Grecians it was accounted Extravagance to breakfast or dine to the full; neither was it thought convenient by Cicero the Roman (c) bis in die saturum fieri, twice a Day to eat to the full; and so temperate were the ancient Romans, that viles & rusticos cibos ante ipsos focos sumpserunt, eosque ipsos capere nisi ad vespervam non licuit (d), they lived upon very mean Food, and used not to allow themselves that till the Evening; whence Isidorus (e) explaining the Words cæna and vesperna, whereby the Supper or Evening Meal is signified, adds, that in usu non erant prandia, Dinners were not used.

Of the several Sorts of Entertainments.

IN the primitive Ages, if we may believe Athenæus (a), συνέσεις συναγωγή τῶν αἰτίων εἰς θεῶν ἀνέσφις, all Meetings at Entertainments were occasioned by their Devotion to the Gods; neither was it usual either to indulge themselves with the free Use of Wine or Dainties, εἰ μὴ διὰ ἵκεα τοῦτο δρῶναι, unless they did it on a religious Account, as the same Author affirms (b); for on festival Days they used to rest from their Labours, and to live more plentifully than at other times, believing, in the Words of Ovid, that the Gods were present at their Tables on such Occasions;

— mensæ credere adesse Deos (c).

And out of this Opinion, ταὶ ἱερὰς σωφρόνως καὶ κοσμίως διῆγον, they behaved themselves with Sobriety and Decency at their festival Entertainments; neither did they drink to Excess, but having moderately refreshed themselves, offered a Libation to the Gods, and then returned home, as we are informed by Athenæus (d).

Afterwards, when a more free way of Living was in use, we find mention of three Sorts of Entertainments, viz. εἰλαπίνη, γάμος, and ἱραμός, which are together enumerated in that Verse of Homer,

Εἰλαπινὴν ἢ γάμον, ἢ καὶ ἐκ ἱραμοῦ τὰ δὲ γ' ἰγί.

Whence there are commonly said to have been three distinct Sorts of Entertainments among the ancient Grecians; but these may be reduced to two, εἰλαπίνη and ἱραμός, under one of which γάμος, the Marriage Entertainment, may be comprehended. The first of these (εἰλαπίνη) is sometimes termed εὐχία, and ἀσύμβολον δῖπνον, and was an Entertainment provided at the Expence of one Man. On the contrary, ἱραμός, was an Entertainment made at the common Charge of all present, being so named ἀπὸ τῆ συνειρᾶν καὶ συμφέρειν ἵκεσθαι, because every Man contributed his Proportion, as we learn from Athenæus (e), who likewise reports that this Entertainment was sometimes termed Σέπτος; hence the Guests were called συνθιασώται, who are more commonly named ἱρανισταί. What each of the Guests contributed was termed συμφορά, εἰσφορά, καταβολή, συμβολή, &c. whence the Entertainment was named δῖπνον συμφορητὸν, συμβολιμαῖον, ἀπο συμβολῆς, καταβύλιον. Sometimes it was called τὸ ἐκ κοινοῦ, &c. At Argos they called led the Contribution by a particular Name, χῶν. The Persons who collected the Contributions were called by the same Name with the Guests, ἱρανοὶ.

Hither may be referred διῆνοι συναγῶγμοι, mentioned in the Fragments of Alexis, which is by Menander termed συναγῶγμοι. Both Names are derived from συνάγειν, which by a peculiar Use signified ματ' ἀλλήλων πόσιον, to drink together. But whether this Entertainment was the same with ἱρανοί, Athenæus has professed himself to be uncertain (a).

Here must also be mentioned διῆνοι ἐπιδόσμοι, or ἐξ ἐπιδομάτων, Entertainments, wherein some of the Guests contributed more than their exact Proportion; to do which is termed ἐπιδιδόναι.

To this Place also must be reduced τὸ ἀπὸ σφυρίδος, in Latin called e sportula cœna: ὅταν τις αὐτὸς αὐτῷ σκευάσας διῆνω, καὶ συνθῆς εἰς σφυρίδα, παρὰ τινά διπνήσων ἦν, when any Man having provided his own Supper, puts it into a Basket, and goes to eat it at another's House, as we learn from Athenæus (b). Different from this was the Roman Sportula, which was an Alms received by Clients from their rich Patrons, in a Basket of that Name, whereof we have frequent Mention in Juvenal, Martial, and the Histories of the Roman Emperors. This Custom is also mentioned by Hesychius, who tells us, that ἀπὸ σφυρίδος διπνῆν signifies τὸ ἀπὸ τῆς δειπνῆς ἀργύριον ἐν σφυρίδι λαβεῖν, to receive in a Basket a Piece of Silver, or Fragments of Meat instead of a Supper. Which Explication of that Expression, tho' rather taken from the Writers of the Roman than Grecian Affairs, gave Occasion to the Mistake of Meursius, who in his learned Commentary upon Lycophron, confounds the Grecian σφυρίς with the Sportula of Rome.

The ἱρανοί being provided at less Expence than other Entertainments, wherein one Person sustained the whole Charge, were generally most frequented, and are recommended by the wise Men of those Times, as most apt to promote Friendship and good Neighbourhood; whence Hesiod has left this Advice (c);

Μηδὲ πολυζεῖν δαίτῳ δυσπρόφιλον εἶναι.
Ἐκ κοινῆς πολίτην τι χάρις, δαπάνη τ' ἐλπίτης.

They were also for the most part managed with more Order and Decency, Φειδωλῶς ἥσθιον ὡς τὰ πολλὰ οἱ ἱρανοὶ ὡς αὖ ἴδιον ἰσθιωτικὸν ἔκαστος, because the Guests, who only eat of their own Collation, were usually more sparing than when they were feasted at another Man's Expence, as we are informed by Eusebius (d); who has also in the same Place mentioned several other Customs at the Grecian Entertainments, which do not much differ from those already described from other Authors. And so different was the Behaviour at their publick Feasts from that at private Entertainments, that Mi-

nervæ in Homer, having seen the Intemperance and unseemly Actions of Penelope's Courtiers, concludes their Entertainment was not ἱραίες, provided at the common Charge, but εἰλαπίν, or γάμος, and furnished at the Expences of a single Person (a) ;

Εἰλαπίν', ἢ γάμος· ἐπὶ ἑκ' ἱραίων τὰ δὲ γ' ἔστιν,
Ὡς μοι ὑβρίζοντες ὑπερφιάλως δοκίμοι
Δαίνυσθαι κατὰ δῶμα· νημοσῆσαι δὲ κεν ἀνὴρ
Λίσχια πολλ', ὁρώων, ὅστις πινυλὸς γὰρ μέλλοι.

They who were present without contributing towards the Entertainment were termed ἀσύμβολοι, in which Condition were Poets and Singers, and others who made Diversion for the Company ; whence that Saying of Antiphanes in Athenæus (b) ;

Ἀκαπτα γὰρ αἰὶ ἀοιδὸὶ θύομεν.

We Singers always feast without Smoke.

For ἀκαπτα θύειν, to feast or kill without Smoke, is a proverbial Phrase for such as partake of Entertainments without the Charge and Trouble of providing them ; whence in Leonidas's Epigram to Cæsar, there was this Expression ;

Καλλίοπος γὰρ ἀκαπτος αἰὶ θυέ.

Calliops always kills without Smoke.

Whereby is meant, that the Muses, and their Favourites, are always entertained at other Mens Expence : hence ἀσύμβολος is sometimes taken for an useless Person, who is maintained by other Men, and contributes nothing towards the Charge. An Example whereof we find in Plutarch (c), where he relates the celebrated Fable of Menechmus Agrippa, in which the rest of the Members are said to accuse the Belly, ὡς μόνος ἀργὸν καὶ ἀσυμβόλου καθέζομινος, that when they all had been Use or Employment, she alone remained idle, and contributed nothing to the common Service.

Lastly, it must not be omitted, that there were in many Places publick Entertainments, at which a whole City, or a Tribe, or any other Body or Fraternity of Men were present ; these were termed by the general Names of συσσίτια, πανδαισίαι, &c. or sometimes from the Body of Men who were admitted, δημοβουλία, δῆπτα δημοσία, and δημοτικά, φρατερικά, φυλικά, &c. according as those of the same Borough (δῆμος) Fraternity (φρατρία) or Tribe (φυλή) met together. And the Provision was sometimes furnished by Contribution, sometimes by the Liberality of some of the richer Sort, and sometimes out of the publick Revenue. The Design of these Entertainments, which were in some Places appointed by the Laws, was to accustom Men to Parsimony and Frugality, and to promote Peace and good Neighbourhood. They were first instituted in Italy, by King Italus, from whom that Country received its Name, as we are informed by Aristotle (a). The next to these in Order of Time were those appointed by King Minos in Crete, after whose Example Lycurgus instituted the publick Entertainments at Sparta, tho' the Name was varied; for, as Plutarch reports in his Life of the Spartan Lawgiver, τὰ εὐσσίτια Κρήτις μὲν αἰδύια, οἱ Λακεδαιμόνιοι δὲ φιιδίτια προσαγορεύουσιν, the Cretans term their Syssitia, or publick Entertainments, αἰδύια, and the Lacedæmonians φιιδίτια; yet this Difference was not primitive, if we may believe Aristotle, who affirms, that τὸ γὰρ ἀρχαῖον ἔκαστοι οἱ Λακωνικὸς ἔ φιιδίτια. ἀλλὰ αἰδύια καθάπερ οἱ Κρήτις, anciently the Lacedæmonians did not use the Name of φιιδίτια, but that of αἰδύια, which was the Cretan Word. These Entertainments were managed with the utmost Frugality, and Persons of all Ages were admitted, the younger Sort being obliged by the Lawgiver to repair hither, as to διδασκαλεῖα σωφροσύνης, Schools of Temperance and Sobriety, where by the Examples and Discourse of the elder Men, which was generally instructive, they were trained to good Manners and useful Knowledge. The Athenians had likewise their Syssitia, as particularly that wherein the Senate of 500, together with such Men, who, for the publick Services, or eminent Merit of themselves or their Ancestors, were thought worthy of this Honour, were entertained at the publick Expence; and many others, both at Athens and in other Places, are mentioned by the Greek Authors; to enumerate which would require a larger Compass than our present Design will admit.

C H A P. XVIII.

Of the Materials whereof the Entertainments consisted.

IN the primitive Times Men lived upon such Fruits as sprung out of the Earth without Art or Cultivation, and desired no Sort of Drink besides that which the Fountains and Rivers afforded; thus Lucretius has described the Food then used (b);

*Quæ sol atque imbres dederant, quod terra crearat
Sponte sua, satis id placabat pectora donum.*

Ælian describing the most ancient Food of several Nations, reports, that at Argos they fed chiefly upon Pears, at Athens upon Figs, in Arcadia upon Acorns (a); and so celebrated were the Arcadians for living upon that Sort of Diet, that they are distinguished in Lycophron (b) by the Name of βαλανφάγοι, Acorn-eaters. Most other Nations in Greece made use also of Acorns. Hence it was customary at Athens, when they kept their Marriage Festivals, for a Boy to bring in a Bough full of Acorns, and a Plate covered with Bread, proclaiming Εφυγον κακόν, εὔρον ἄμεινον, I have escaped the worse, and found the better; which was done in memory of their leaving the use of Acorns for that of Bread, and hath been elsewhere related. At Rome also the corona civica was composed fronde querna, quoniam cibus viæusque antiquissimus quernus capi solitus sit (c), of Oak Leaves, because that Tree afforded the most ancient Food; for the same Reason some of the Trees which bear Acorns were termed in Greek φάγοι, from φάγω, to eat, and in Latin Esculi, from Esca, which signifies Food (d); and as Macrobius (e) hath observed, Meminit vel fabulatur antiquitas glande prius & baccis alitos, sero de sulcis sperasse alimoniam. Ancient Authors have either delivered upon their Knowledge, or feigned, that in the first Ages Men lived upon Acorns and Berries, and were for a long Time unacquainted with the Art of ploughing the Earth for Corn; nevertheless they believed that in the Golden Age, when Men enjoy'd all Sorts of Plenty and Prosperity, the Earth produced Corn without Cultivation. Thus Hesiod reports in his Description of those happy Times (f);

—ισθὲν δὲ πάντα
τοῖσιν ἦν καρπὸν δ' ἔφερε ζείδωρος ἄρουρα αὐτομάτῃ πολλὰ τε καὶ ἄφθονα. —

But this Age being expired, the Earth (as they imagined) became unfruitful, and Men falling into extreme Ignorance and Barbarity, lived, in Macrobius's Language, non multum a ferarum asperitate dissimiles (g), not unlike to brute Beasts, till Ceres taught them the Art of Sowing, and several other useful Inventions, the Memory whereof was many Ages after celebrated on their festival Days, as has been elsewhere observed. The first whom Ceres taught to sow and to till the Ground was Triptolemus, by whom that Knowledge was communicated to his Countrymen the Athenians. Afterwards she imparted the same Art to Eumelus, a Citizen of Patræ in Acbaia, by whom it was first introduced into that Country; as it was also by Arcas into Arcadia (h). Some farther report, that the Invention of making and baking Bread is owing to Pan. And we must not omit that Barley was used before any other Sort of Corn, πρώτη γὰρ τροφήν ταύτην ἀνθρώποις διδόνθαι παρὰ θεῶν λόγῳ ἔχου, for it is reported that this was the first Fruit which the Gods imparted imparted to Mankind, as Artemidorus (a) hath observed; and that it was antiquissimum in cibis, the most ancient sort of Viſtual, Athenienſium ritu, Menandro auctore apparet, & gladiatorum cognomine, qui hordearii vocantur, appears both from the Cuſtom of the Athenians mentioned by Menander, which is elſewhere deſcribed, and from the Name of thoſe Gladiators, who are called hordearii, from the Latin Name of Barley, as Pliny (b) hath related. But in more civil Ages, to uſe the ſame Author's Words, Panem ex hordeo antiquis uſitatum vita damnavit, quadrupedum tradidit reſtitibus, Barley Bread came to be the Food of Beaſts only; nevertheleſs it was ſtill uſed by the poorer Sort, who were not able to furniſh their Tables with better Proviſion; and in the Roman Camp, as Vegetius (c) hath informed us, Soldiers, who had been guilty of any Offence, hordeum pro frumento cobeantur accipere, were fed with Barley inſtead of Bread-Corn. An Example whereof we find in the ſecond Punic War, wherein the Cohorts, which loſt their Standards, had an Allowance of Barley aſſign'd by Marcellus (d). And Augustus Cæſar, Cohortes, ſi quæ ceſſiſſent loco, decimatas hordeo pavit, commonly puniſhed the Cohorts which gave ground to the Enemy, by a Decimation, and allowing them no Proviſion but Barley, as Suetonius reports in the Life of that Emperor (e).

The firſt Ages of Men, as Plato (f) reports, σάκκῳ ἀνίχου, & ἐκ ὄσων ἐν ἱερῶν, ὑπὸ τοῦ τῶν θεῶν βουῆς ἀπαλὴ μάλιστα, wholly abſtained from Fleſh, out of an Opinion that it was unlawful to eat, or to pollute the Altars of the Gods with the Blood of living Creatures. The ſame is affirmed by Dicæarchus in Porphyrus, who hath left us a Tract concerning Abſtinance from Animals, and by many others. Swine were uſed for Food firſt of all Animals, they being wholly unſerviceable to all other Purpoſes, and having, in the Language of Cicero (g) animam pro ſale ne putreſcant, their Souls only inſtead of Salt to keep them from putrifying. As on the contrary, for ſeveral Ages after Fleſh came to be eaten, it was thought unlawful to kill Oxen, becauſe they are very ſerviceable to Mankind, and Partners of their Labour in cultivating the Ground, as has been elſewhere obſerved (b). It was alſo unuſual to kill young Animals; whence, as Athenæus is of opinion, Priamus is introduced by Homer reproving his Sons for feaſting upon young Lambs; the Reaſon whereof was, either that it favoured of Cruelty to deprive thoſe of Life which had ſcarce taſted the Joys of it, or that it tended to the Deſtruction of the Species; whence, at a Time when Sheep were ſcarce at Athens, there was a Law enacted, to forbid ἀπίκτα ἀγρὸς γίνεσθαι, the eating of Lambs which had never been ſhorn, as hath been obſerved from Philochorus. Neither did the Ancients ſeek for Dainties or Rarities, but were content with Sheep, Goats, Swine, Oxen, when it was become lawful to kill them, what they caught in Hunting, what was most easy to be provided, and afforded the most healthful Nourishment. Hence all the Grecians in Homer live upon a simple Diet; Young and Old, Kings and private Men, are contented with the same Provision. Agamemnon entertains Ajax after his Combat with Hector, with the Chine of an Ox, as a Reward of his Valour. Alcinous, King of Phæacia, who affected a more splendid and delicate Way of Living, feeds upon Beef. Meneleus sets before Telemachus a Chine of Beef at the Marriage Feast of his Son. And the Courtiers of Penelope, tho' given to all Sorts of Pleasure, are never entertained either with Fish or Fowl, or any Delicacies. This, with several other Things to the same Purpose, hath been observed by Athenæus (a); who has likewise remarked, that Homer's Heroes neither boil their Meat, nor dress it with Sauces, but only roast it. This was in most Places the ancient Way of dressing Meat; whence Servius (b) also reports, that heroicis temporibus non vescerantur carne elixa, in the heroical Ages they did not eat boiled Flesh, and observes farther out of Varro, that among the Romans the primitive Diet was Roast, then Boil'd, and last of all Broths came into Use. Nevertheless, as Athenæus hath elsewhere taken Notice, even in Homer's Time, boil'd Meat was sometimes provided; which appears both from that Entertainment in the Odyssey, where an Ox's Foot is thrown at Ulysses, it being well known, that (in that Author's Words) ὄσθα βέβιον ὠδὴς ἐπ' ἄλ', no Man ever roasts an Ox's Foot; and also from the express Words of the 21st Iliad (c):

ὣς δὲ λέβης ζεῖ ἵνδον ἰππυγόμενος περὶ πολλῶν, κρίσση μελδόμενος ἀπαλοφύϊος σταλοιο.

This was the Way of Living among the ancient Greeks; neither were the Lacedæmonians of later Ages less temperate than their Ancestors, so long as they observed the Laws of Lycurgus. They had their constant Diet at the Συσσίτια, publick Entertainments, where in the Food was extremely simple, whereof each Person had a certain Proportion allotted. The chief Part of the Provision was μέλας ζωμός, the black Broth peculiar to that Nation, which was so unpleasant, that a Citizen of Sybaris happening once to be entertain'd at Sparta, cried out, "that he no longer wonder'd why the Lacedæmonians were the valiantest Soldiers in the World, when any Man in his right Wits would rather chuse to die a thousand times than to live upon such vile Food (d)." And 'tis reported that Agésilæus distributed certain Sweetmeats, which had been presented to him by the Thasians, amongst the Slaves, saying, "that the Servants of Virtue ought not to indulge themselves with such Delicacies, it being unworthy of Men of free Birth to share those Pleasures whereby Slaves are allured." For which reason the Cooks of of Lacedæmon were ὀψοποιοὶ κρέως μόνον, ὃ δὲ παρὰ τὸ τοῦ ἐπιτάφου, ἐξηλαύνειτο Σπάρτης, ὡς τὰ τῶν ποσόνων καθαύσια, only Dressers of Flesh, and they who understood any thing farther in the Art of Cookery were cast out from Sparta, as the Filth of Men infected with the Plague (a). Hence Mithæcus, a very eminent Cook, designing to follow his Profession in that City, was immediately commanded by the Magistrates to depart (b). This Custom was not unlike that of the ancient Heroes, who kept no Cooks, but sometimes dressed their own Provision, as we find done by Achilles in Homer (c);

— τὰ μὲν δ' ἄρα διὸ Ἀχιλλεύς,
Καὶ τὰ μετὰ εὖ μετῴλη κ' ἀμφ' ὀβελόισιν ἔπειρε.

And sometimes the κήρυκες, Herald, those Servants ἀνδράσι θεῶσι, of Gods and Men, as they are called by the Poet, who were not only employed in Civil and Military Affairs, but also performed many of the holy Rites at Sacrifices, served as Cooks; whence the ancient Cooks are by some Authors reported to have been θύιακῆς ἔμπειροι, skilled in the Art of divining by Sacrifices, and ποίσις αἰσῶ γάμων κ' θυσιῶν, had the Management of Marriage-Feasts and Sacrifices (d).

But in other Cities of Greece, and in later Ages, the Art of Cookery was in better Esteem, tho' even Heraclides, and Glaucus the Lucrentian, who wrote Books concerning it, affirm, ἐχ' ἀρμόστιον τοῖς τυχεῖσιν ἰσχυρίσθαι, that it was unworthy of the meanest Person who was free-born, as we are informed by Athenæus (e). The Sicilian Cooks were prized above any others, as the same Author (f) has proved by Examples out of Cratinus and Antiphanes. Mithæcus before-mentioned, was of that Nation; and the Sicilians were so remarkable for their luxurious way of living, that Sicilicæ τραπέζα, a Sicilian Table, was a proverbial Phrase, as we are informed by Suidas, ἐπὶ τῶν πάντων πολυτέλων κ' τρυφῶν, for one furnished very profusely and luxuriously.

Next to the Lacedæmonian Tables, those of Athens are said to have been furnished most frugally, the Athenian Soil being unfruitful, and such as could supply no more Provision than was just necessary for the Support of its Inhabitants. Hence Lynceus the Samian is cited by Athenæus (g) for contemning the Athenian Entertainment;

Μάγειρ', ὃ θύων ὃ δειπνίζων τ' ἐμὲ.
Ρέδιον· ἰγὰρ δ' ὃ κικλημένον, Περὶνδιον.
Οὐδέ τι φέρον ἡμῶν ἤδεται τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις.
Διῶνις· ἀχθία γὰρ ἐστὶν Ἀττικῆ.

And the same Author goes on in his Description of the Meanness of the Provisions at Athens, which were so exceedingly parsimonious, that Dromæas, an Athenian Parasite, being asked whether the Suppers

Suppers at Athens or those at Chalcis were more magnificent? replied, that the (αγορίμων) first Course at Chalcis was preferable to the whole Entertainment at Athens. Hence to live Ἀθηναῖος, like an Athenian, is to live penuriously. An Example of which Proverb we find cited by Athenæus out of Alexis, who has there also left us a large Description of an Athenian Entertainment (a).

From the Grecian Meat let us, in the next place, proceed to their Drink. And in the primitive Times, as hath been already observed, Water was the general Drink, which they were supplied with from the nearest Fountain. Afterwards hot Fountains came into request by the Example of Hercules, who being very much fatigued with labour, refreshed himself at a hot Fountain, which (as Fables tell) was discovered to him by Minerva, or Vulcan; and this sort of Water was thought extremely beneficial on the like Occasions; whence Plato (b) commends his Atlantic Island, which he describes to be the most delightful Country in the World, on account of its hot as well as cold Fountains; and Homer, by whom we are furnished with Examples of all sorts of poetical Topicks, relates, that one of the Fountains of the River Scamander was exquisitely cold, and the other hot (c); yet, to use the Words of Julius Pollux (d), μαγεῖ Οὐκ ὁῖον τ' ὑγίαν διγεῖν ὕδαρ ἰσχυρόν, it will be difficult to infer from Homer, that hot Waters were drank in the Heroick Ages, but they seem only to be used for bathing, unless prescribed by the Physicians, as was usually done to old Men, and others who had weak Stomachs, as appears from the Example of Hippocrates produced by the same Author, who by several other Instances, yet all later than the Age of Homer, has here proved, that this sort of Drink was used by the ancient Grecians; however, 'tis certain that, at least in later Ages, hot Waters were in request amongst the Grecians, and from them came to be used at Rome; whence the Roman Authors mention the use of them as a Grecian Custom. Thus Plautus (e) speaking of the Grecians, Ubi quid surripuere, aperto capitulo caldum bibunt.

And Horace (f),

Quo Cibum pretio cadum

Mercemur? quis aquam temperet ignibus?

Where Acron explains temperet by tepesfaciat, nam tepesactis aquis solebant Græci vinum temperare. For the Greeks (saith he) used to temper their Wine with warm Water (g).

But there is more frequent mention of cold Water than of hot, both in the Grecian and Roman Authors; and in order to drink it exquisitely cold, it was customary to temper it with Ice, which they had had several Methods to preserve thro' all the Heat of Summer; there is one mentioned by Plutarch (a), who relates that it was usual to wrap it in Clothes and Straw; to which Custom St. Augustine alludes in the following Words: Quis dedit paleam tam frigidam vinis, ut obruitas nives servet; vel tam fervidam, ut poma immatura maturet? Who has endued the Straw with such a Degree of Cold as to preserve Ice; or with so much Heat as to bring unripe Fruit to Maturity? Chares the Mitylænæan, as he is cited by Athenæus (b), reports, that when Alexander the Great besieged Peira, a City of India, he filled 30 Duches with Ice, which being covered with oaken Boughs, remained a long time entire. And in the same place there are described several other Arts of making their Drink cool. The Custom of preserving Ice was so common amongst the Romans, that they had Shops wherein it was publicly exposed to Sale; whence Seneca thus inveighs against the Roman Luxury and Extravagance (c): Unguentarios Lacedæmonii expulere, & propterea cedere finibus suis jusserunt, quia oleum disperderent: quid illi si vidissent nivis reponenda officinas? The Lacedæmonians banished the Sellers of Ointment, and commanded them to be gone with the utmost Speed out of their Country; what would have been done had they seen Shops to repository and preserve Ice?

The Invention of Wine was by the Egyptians ascribed to Osiris, by the Latins to Saturn, and by the Greeks to Bacchus, to whom divine Honours were paid on that Account. 'Tis reported by Hecataeus the Milesian, that the Use of Wines was first discovered in Ætolia by Orestheus the Son of Deucalion, whose Grandson Oeneus, the Father of Ætolus, from whom that part of Greece received its Name, was so called from οἶνος, which is the old Name of Vines. Others derive οἶνος, the Name of Wine, from this Oeneus, who (as they report) was the first who discovered the Art of pressing Wine from Grapes. Thus Nicander:

Οἶνός δ' ἐν κώλοισιν ἀποδιδίπας δειπλοῖται
Οἶνον ἔκλυσται.

And to the same Purpose Melanippides the Milesian in Athenæus (d).

Ἐπὶ οἶνον, ὃ δὲ σποτ', οἶνος Οἶνός.

Others will have the Vine to have been first discovered in Olympia, near the River Alpheus; of which Opinion was Theopompus of Chios. And Hellanicus reports that it was first known at Plinthion, a Town of Egypt; hence the Egyptians are thought to derive their immoderate Love and Use of this Liquor, which they thought so necessary to human Bodies, that they invented a sort of Wine made of Barley for the poorer sort, who wanted Money to purchase that which was pressed from Grapes (e).

In Greece the Matrons and Virgins drank Wine, as appears from the Examples of Nausicaæ and her Companions in Homer (a). And because the same Freedom was rarely allowed that Sex in other Countries, the Grecian Women were ill thought of on that account (b). It was likewise customary to give it to Children, unless the Management of Achilles was different from that of other Infants; for thus Homer has introduced Phœnix speaking to him (c);

Πρὶν γ' ὅτι δὴ σ' ἐκ' ἰμοῖσιν ἐγὼ γένασσι καδίσας,
Ὀψο τ' ἄσαιμι προλαμῶν, καὶ οἶνον ἐπισχῶν.
Πολλάκι μοι καλίδιυσας ἐπὶ γένεσσι χρίῃνα
Οἶνον ἀποβλύζων ἐν νηπίῳ ἀλεγεινῇ.

The Wine was generally mixed with Water, whence Drinking-cups were called κρατήρις, παρα τὸ κεράσασθαι, from the Mixture made in them; which Derivation is mentioned both by the Grammarians and Athenæus, and there are some Allusions to it in Homer; for the Custom of drinking Wine tempered with Water obtained in the time of the Trojan War, and the most primitive Ages; hence the following Verse (d), Οἱ μὲν ἄρ' οἶνον ἱμισυγον ἐν κρατήρεσι καὶ ὕδαρ.

Some ascribe the first Use of it to Melampus (e), others to Staphylus the Son of Silenus. Philochorus is said to report (f), that Amphibion King of Athens, learned to mix Wine with Water from Bacchus himself, on which account he dedicated an Altar to that God under the Name of Ορδίας, because from that Time Men began to return from Entertainments sober and ἑρμῶι, upright. The same King enacted a Law, that only Wine tempered with Water should be drank at Entertainments, which being afterwards disused, was revived by Solon (g). There was no certain Proportion observed in this Mixture; some to one Vessel of Wine poured in two of Water; others to two of Wine mixed five of Water; and others more, or less, as they pleased (h). The Lacedæmonians εἰς τὸ πῦρ ἔωσι τὸν οἶνον, ἕως ἂν τὸ πύμπλον μί-~~κρον~~ ἀφελήσῃ, καὶ μετὰ τέσσαρα ἔτη χερῶνται, used to boil their Wine upon the Fire till the fifth Part was consumed, and then after four Years were expired, began to drink it, as we are informed by Democritus (i); and the same Custom is also mentioned by Palladius.

Nevertheless, most of the Grecians, and particularly the Lacedæmonians, sometimes did ἀκραγέειν οἶνον, drink Wine with little or no Water, which they termed ἐπισκυδίσαι, to act like a Scythian (k); for the Scythians were very much addicted to Drunkenness, and used Wine without Water (l); whence ἀκραγοπιῶν is commonly termed ed (χυθι)σιῶν, or (χυθο)σιῶν and ἀκραλοποσία is called (χυθι)σιῶσις; which Expressions came into vogue at Sparta, from the Time that Cleomenes the Spartan, by living and conversing with the Scythians, learned to drink to Excess and Madness (a). The Thracians also drank their Wine unmixed with Water, and both they and the Scythians were generally such Lovers of it, that γυναικίς τε καὶ παῖσι αὐτοὶ κατὰ τῶν ἱμαλίων (ἀκραλῶν) καλαχρόμοιοι, καλὸν καὶ εὐδαίμων ἐπιήδυμα ἐπιήδυον πομίσκασι, the Women and all the Men thought it a most happy Life to fill themselves with unmixed Wine, and to pour it upon their Garments (b). Hence also by Θρακία τρῆπος the Thracians way of drinking, was meant ἀκραλοποσία, drinking Wine not mixed with Water (c).

Some used to perfume their Wines, and Wine so used was termed οἶνος μυζῆνις, according to Ælian (d), and sometimes μυζῆνης, for that Word, according to Hesychius's Explication, signifies πόσιν ἢ ἰπικητο μυρον, a Potion mixed with Odours. Different from this was the Murrhina of the Romans, as also the ἰσχυρισμῶνος οἶνος, Wine mingled with Myrrh, mentioned in St. Mark's Gospel, wherewith the Malefactors were commonly intoxicated before they suffered. Several other Ingredients were mixed with Wine, sometimes ἄλφιζα, Meal, whence οἶνος ἀπληφισμῶνος, Wine thickened with Meal, which was very much used by the Persians (e). They had also many Sorts of made Wines, as οἶνος κριθίνος, Cerevisia, Wine made of Barley, and οἶνος ἰψήλός, Palm-Wine, sometimes termed ὕξος ἰψήλον, for ὕξος was a general Name for all made Wines.

C H A P. XIX.

Of the Customs before Entertainments.

THE Person by whom the Entertainment was provided was commonly named ὁ ἰστιάτωρ, ἰστιά, ἐνιζων, τῆς Συνουσίας ἡγεμῶν. Συμποσίῳ ἄρχων, Συμποσίαρχος, by the Tragedians οἰκοδέμων, &c.

The Persons entertained by him were termed δαίτυμῶνες, δαίτυμῶνες, Συμπόται, Συνδιπνοι, &c. also very often κληροί, Σύγκληροι, ἱπικηλοί, in which Names is expressed the immediate Cause of their meeting, which was κλησις, in Latin, vocatio, an Invitation or Calling by the Entertainer.

The Persons employed to invite the Guests were by the Romans termed Vocatores, and by the Greeks κλητορες, or διπποκλητορες. The same Men were also, though not so frequently, called ἰσαίτροι, and and ἰδιᾶσθαι, from ἰδιός, which is the Name of the Table, on which the Provision was placed in the Kitchen. Thus ἰδιᾶσθαι, according to Pamphilus in Athenæus (a), are οἱ ἐπὶ τῇ βασιλικῇ καλεῖσθαι τράπεζᾳ, they who invite to the King's Table. Sometimes to invite was termed καταγράφειν, to write down, from the Custom of inscribing the Names of the Persons to be invited upon a Tablet. The Hour was signified at the Invitation, and because they then numbered the Hours by the Motion of the Sun, there is frequent mention of छाία, the Shade of the Sun, and φοιχιών, the Letter of the Dial, on these Occasions. Thus in the following Passage of Aristophanes (b),

— Κοὶ δὲ μελήσει,
Ὅταν ἡ δικάπην φοιχιὼν λιπαρῶς χωρεῖν ἐπὶ δεῖπνον.

Relations often went without Invitation, as hath been observed by Athenæus (c) and Eustathius from that Verse of Homer, where he describes an Entertainment at Agamemnon's Tent (d);

Αὐτόματος δὲ οἱ ἦλθε βοὴν ἀγαθὸς Μενέλαος.

Valiant Menelaus came to him, αὐτόματῳ, that is, ἄνυ τῷ κληθεῖναι, without being invited, as the Scholiast explains that Word. Such as without Invitation, ἐπὶ τῶν κεκλημένων ἐπὶ δεῖπνον ἀγόμενοι, were brought to the Entertainment by some of those who had been invited (e), were termed छाίαι, Shades, from their following the principal Guests, as Shades do Bodies. The same Persons were by the Romans called umbræ. Thus in Horace (f), — quos Mæcenat adduxerat umbras.

And in another Place (g),

— locus est & pluribus umbris.

They who forced themselves into other Men's Entertainments were in Greek called μυῖαι, in Latin, Muscæ, Flies, which was a general Name of Reproach for such as insinuated themselves into any Company where they were not welcome. Thus the Parasite is described by Antiphanes,

Θύρας μαχλίειν Χειμῶς· εἰσπηδᾷ ἀκρίς·
Δειπνῶν ἀκρότης, μυῖα· μὴ ἐξελθῆναι, φράσας.

In Plautus (h) an Entertainment free from unwelcome Guests is called hospitium sine muscis, an Entertainment without Flies; and in another another place of the same Author (a), an inquisitive and busy Man, who prys and insinuates himself into the Secrets of others, is termed Musca. We are likewise informed by Horus Apollo (b), that in Egypt a Fly was the Hieroglyphic of an impudent Man, because that Insect being beaten away, still returns again; on which account it is by Homer made an Emblem of Courage (c),

Καὶ οἱ μύης θάρσος ἐν γήθεσσι ἦεν,
Ἡ τε καὶ ἐργαμένη μάλα πρὸς ἀνδράσιν,
Ἰσχανία δακνύει, λαρόν τε οἱ αἵμ' ἀνθρώπων.

The same Persons whom they termed Musce at Entertainments, were also called Μυκῆνιοι, Myconians, from the Poverty of that Nation, which put them upon frequenting other Men's Tables oftner than was consistent with good Manners; whence Pericles was reflected upon by Archilochus, ὡς ἀλλήλοισι ἐκμισθαίοισι εἰς τὰ Συμπόσια Μυκονίων δίκην, as one who intruded into other Men's Entertainments, after the Manner of the Myconians (d). But the most common Appellation of such Men, was that of παράσιτοι, Parasites; which Word, as Lucian hath observed, in its primitive Sense, signified only the Companion of Princes and Men of Quality; such were Patroclus to Achilles, and Memnon to Idomeneus, or those who had their Diet at the Tables of the Gods, of whom mention has been made in another Place (e); but afterwards came to be a Name of Reproach for those who by Flattery, and other mean Arts, used to insinuate themselves to the Tables of other Men; in which Sense it was first used by Epicarmus, and afterwards by Alexis (f); nevertheless it was common for Friends and Men of Credit to visit one another's Houses at the Times of Entertainment, without expecting a formal Invitation, as appears from that Saying cited by Eustathius (g), Ἀλλήλοισι κομᾶζουσιν εἰς φίλους φίλοι.

And that other in Plato (b),

———— εἰς ἄρα καὶ ἀγαθῶν ἐπὶ δαῖτα ἴασιν
Αὐτόματοι ἀγαθοὶ —————

Which is sometimes thus cited in one hexameter Verse,

Αὐτόματοι δ' ἀγαθοὶ ἀγαθῶν ἐπὶ δαίτης ἴασιν.

The Number of Guests was unlimited; some chose to invite three, or four, or five at the most; thus Archestratus in Athenæus (i),

Πρὸς

Conf. Athenæus, Lib. VI. cap. vii. Pollux, Lib. VI. cap. vii. (g) Commentario in Iliad. c. (b) Symposio. (i) Lib. I. sub finem cap. iv.

Πρὸς δὲ μίαν πάντες δειπνῶν ἑξοδάσις τραπέζῃ
 Ἔρωσαν δ' ἢ τρεῖς ἢ τέσσαρες οἱ ξυνάπαιδες,
 Ἡ τῶν πάντων γὰρ μὴ πλείους ἦδη γὰρ αὖ ἐστὶν
 Μισθοφόρων ἀρπαξίδων γρῆσι δῶν.

And Athenæus in another Place (a) reports, that among the Ancients μὴ συνδειπνῶν τῶν πάντων γὰρ πλείους, ὅτι δὲ γὰρ ἡμῖς ψαρμακῶσι οἱ ἴσμεν δὴλον. it was not usual for more than five to sup together, but that in his Time the Numbers were plainly infinite. Eustatbius hath observed out of Jamblichus, that in the ὑποσίτια, common Meals, not above ten were admitted; which in his Opinion was the ordinary Number of Guests at Entertainments in the primitive Times; and hence he thinks it is, that when Agamemnon in Homer (b) speaks of distributing the Grecian Army at an Entertainment, he mentions only δεκάδες, Tens;

Ἡμῖς δ' εἰς δεκάδας διακοσμηθεῖμεν Ἀχαιοί,
 Τρώων δ' ἄνδρα ἑκατον ἰλοίμεθα οἰνοχοῦσιν,
 Πολλὰ καὶ δεκάδες δινοῖστο οἰνοχόοιο.

But this must only be understood of the Entertainments of private Men, Princes often invited greater Numbers; Agamemnon in Homer entertains all the Grecian Princes together; and Alexander the Macedonian is reported, before his Expedition against Persia, (κτὴν καλῶσιν ὑπὸ σκηνῇ ἑκατοντάκλινον πρὸς ὑπὸ χίαν, to have furnished a Tent with 100 Beds for an Entertainment (c). And the same Vanity by degrees crept in amongst private Men, insomuch that in Athenæus's Time, as hath been before observed, ψαρμακῶσι, infinite Numbers, were invited. Hence it came to pass, that partly to prevent Tumults and Sedition, and partly to restrain the Expensiveness and Prodigality of their Citizens, some Lawgivers thought it necessary to limit the Number of Guests; in particular, no Person at Athens was allowed to entertain above thirty at once. In order to put this Statute in Execution, certain Magistrates, called ὑποσκόμοι, were obliged to go to Entertainments, and to expel thence such as exceeded that Number; and the Cooks who were commonly employ'd to dress the Victuals at Entertainments, were obliged to give in their Names every time they were hired (d).

This must farther be observed concerning the Guests, that Men and Women were never invited together, as we are informed by Cicero (e); wherein the Greeks differed from the Romans, amongst whom the Women were allow'd more Freedom: "For which of the Romans, to use the Words of Cornelius Nepos, was ever ashamed to bring his Wife to an Entertainment? And what Mistress

 “ ver appears at any Entertainments, besides those to which none
 “ but Relations are invited, and constantly lives in the innermost “ Part of the House, which is called γυναικωνίτις, the Womens A“ partment, into which no Man, except near Relations, had Ad“ mission (a).”

Before they went to an Entertainment, they washed and anointed themselves; ἀπειπέ; γὰρ ἢ ἤκειν εἰς τὸ συμπόσιον σὺν ἰδῶτι πολλῶν καὶ κοι-ορτῶ, for it was thought very indecent to go thither defiled with Sweat and Dust, as Athenæus (b) hath observed from Aristotle. They who came off a Journey, were washed and cloathed with Apparel suitable to the Occasion in the House of the Entertainer, before they were admitted to the Feast. Thus we find in Homer, where he describes the Reception of Telemachus and Pisistratus by Menelaus (c);

Ες δ' ἀταμίονος βαλὼν ἰϋξίγυος λύσαντο·
 Τὸς δ' ἵππῃ ἐν ὀμῶνι λῦσαν, καὶ χρίσαν ἑλαιῶν,
 Ἀμφὶ δ' αἶρα χλαῖνας ἕλας βάλλον ἡδὲ χιτῶνας,
 Ες δ' ἐν θρόνῳ ἕζοντο παρ' Ἀλκίονη Μενέλαον.

The same Persons also washed their Hands before they sat down to Meat, as appears from the Verses which follow in the same Author (d);

Χίρῃα δ' ἀμφίπλοον προχέον ἱπὶ χερσὶ φέρεσσι
 Καλῇ, χρυσίῃ, ὑπὲρ ἀργυρίου λίσσῃ,
 Νίψασθαι παρὰ δ' ἕξιν ἱταύουσι τράπεζαν·
 Σίτω δ' αἰδοῖν ταμὴν παρῆναι φέρεσσι.

And, to mention the Times of washing altogether, it was also customary to wash between every Course, and after Supper; thus Homer introduces his Heroes δειπνῶντας, ὀμιλῶντας, εἶτα ἀποπνέοντες ποιεῖν πάλιν δειπνῶντας, supping, conversing, then washing, and after that again supping. And Aristophanes (e) speaks of bringing ὕδωρ κατὰ χερσὶς μετὰ τράπεζας, Water to wash the Hands after Courses. By them who spoke accurately, to wash the Hands before Supper was termed νίπασθαι; to wash after Supper ἀπονίψασθαι. Hither are to be referred the Words ἀπομαζασθαι, ἐκτομῆξασθαι, ἀποψῆσαι, and the like, which signify to wipe the Hands. The Towel was termed ἐκμαγνῆς, χιρρόμακλον, &c. instead whereof the ancient Greeks used ἀπομαγαλάλαι, which were τὸ ἐν τῷ αἵματι μαλακὸν καὶ γαλῶδες, the soft and fine Part of the Bread, which afterwards they cast τοῖς κυσὶ, to the Dogs, ὅθι καὶ Λακεδαιμόνιοι κυνὰ ἀπὸ τῆς ἀπομαγαλάλαι καλῶσι, whence ἀπομαγαλάλια is by the Lacedæmonians called κυνάς; and, as the same

Author there adds, this Custom is mentioned by Homer in the following Verses;

Ὡς δ' ὅταν ἀμφὶ ἀνακτα κύνες δαίτηθεν ἰόβη
Σαίνωσ', αἰὶν γὰρ τι φίρην μελιγμάλα θυμῷ.

It is farther to be observed, that in the washing after Supper they used some Sort of σμήγμα, ἀπορρύψιος χεῖρι, Stuff to scour the Hands (a); for which Use Nitre and Hyssop are mentioned in the Holy Scriptures. Lastly, after washing, the Hands were perfumed with Odours, which Custom is expressed in the following Verses of Antiphanes or Epigenes in Athenæus (b);

Καὶ τότε περιπαλήσεις κάποιψι κατὰ τρόπον
Τὰς χεῖρας, εὐώδη λαβὼν τῇ γῇ θ' ἄμα.

It may not be improper in this Place to add something farther, by way of Digression, concerning the Custom of washing and anointing, which in Greece and other hot Countries was so frequent. To wash, is in the Words of Eustathius, ἀποθεῖναι μὲν ἐν πῦρ, αἰαφυχῆς δὲ τῷ αἵτιον, a Means both to cleanse the Body from Filth, and refresh it; therefore whenever they ceased from Sorrow and Mourning, it was usual to bathe and anoint themselves; whence Eurypraxia in Homer advises Penelope to leave off lamenting (c);

Κρῶτ' ἀποιψαμένη, καὶ ἐπιχρίσασα σαρμιάς, washing her Body, and anointing her Face. And, as we are informed by Artemidorus (d), the ancient Greeks commonly bathed ἢ πώλεμον κατασρεψάμενοι, ἢ μεγάλην πανσάμενοι πόνω, after the finishing of a War, or any other great Fatigue. Thus in Homer, Telemachus and Pisistratus are bathed and anointed at Menelaus's Palace, after a long Journey; Diomedes and Ulysses, after their Return from discovering the Manner of their Enemies Encampment, λοισσαμένω καὶ ἀλειψαμένω λίπ' ἑλαίῳ

Δη πῶν ἐφιζάντην.

having bathed and anointed, sat down to Supper. In the heroical Ages, Men and Women, without Distinction, bathed themselves in Rivers; this we find done by Nauficae, the Daughter of Alcinous, King of Phæacia (e), and Europa in Moschus (f).

Φαιδρύνουσι χροά προχοῇσιν Ἀναύρε,

Χρυσάμεναις ἀνδρὶ παρ' Εὐρώπῳ λοίσροϊς,
Τετράκις ἐξήκοιτα πόσαι, θῆλυς ποταμία.

Tho' the Expressions in these Verses are manifestly accommodated to the Institutions of Lycurgus, whereby the Virgins were obliged to bathe and accustom themselves to such Exercises as in that Age were only practised by the Men; whence the Poet observes, that it was done ἀνδρὶ, after the Manner of Men; which would have been a very improper Expression in the heroical Times, when it was customary for both Sexes to use this Diversion alike. But if the Sea was within a convenient Distance, they commonly bathed in it, rather than in the Rivers, the salt Water being thought, to use the Words of Athenæus (a), μάλιστα τοῖς νύροις πρόσφορος, conducive to strengthen the Nerves, by drying up superfluous Humours; thus, to forbear the Mention of other Instances, Diomedes and Ulysses in Homer, after a very great Fatigue,

——— ἰδρῶ πολλὸν ἀπυλζέω θαλάσῃ
Εσχαίης———

went into the Sea to cleanse themselves from Sweat; and they who lived at a greater Distance from the Sea, sometimes removed thither for their Health's sake. An Example whereof we find in Minutius Felix, by one of the Persons, in whose Dialogue it is resolved, Ostiam petere, amantissimam civitatem, quod esset corpori meo siccandis humoribus de marinis lavacris blanda & expedita curatio, to go to the most pleasant City Ostia, in order to enjoy the Benefit of bathing in the Sea, which is an easy and expeditious Method of drying up the superfluous Humours of the Body. Hot Baths were also very ancient. Ἡράκλειά λυτρά, the hot Baths, shewed by Vulcan, or, as others say, by Minerva to Hercules, at a Time when he had underwent a very great Fatigue, are celebrated by the Poets. Pindar (b) speaks of θερμὰ Νυμφῶν λυτρά, the hot Baths of the Nymphs. Homer commends one of the Fountains of Scamander for its hot Water, in the twenty-second Iliad. In the same Iliad Andromache provides a hot Bath for Hector, against his Return from the Battle. Nestor in the eleventh Iliad orders Hecamede to make ready θερμὰ λούτρα, an hot Bath; and to mention but one Instance more, the Phædræans are said in Homer's Odyssey to place their chief Design in

Εἵματα τ' ἐξημοιῶ, λούτρα τε θερμὰ, καὶ ὑνάι,

Changes of Apparel, hot Baths and Beds; yet hot Baths do not seem to have been then so much used as in later Ages; and those Words of Artemidorus (c), that πάλαι εἰκὸς εἶναι πονηρὰ τὰ βαλανεῖα,

Baths

(a) Lib. I. cap. xix.

(b) Olymp. XII.

(c) Lib. I. cap. lxvi.

Baths seem to have been thought hurtful by the Ancients, are probably meant of hot Baths only; and then the following Words, which have been already cited, that Baths were anciently never used but after some very great Fatigue, must be understood in the same Sense; however that be, it is plain from that Author, that the ancient Greeks βαλανίᾳ ἐκ ἡδυσαν, had no Balneos like those of latter Times, but ἐν ταῖς ἀσάμβοις ἐλούοντο, washed in certain Vessels called ἀσάμβοι; which Word, as explained by Phavorinus (a), signifies πύλος, or λυαίνη, a large Basin or Vessel to wash in, being derived παρὰ τὸ τὴν ἀσπὴν μινύθειν, from taking away the Filth of the Body; whence ἀσάμβος is mentioned by Pollux among the Vessels which belong to Balneos; and the ancient Romans had a Vessel in their own Houses, wherein they washed, called Lavatrina, or Latrina, which was afterwards termed Balneum; and when two Baths came to be used, one hot and another cold, in the Plural Balnea (b). Publick Balneos were unknown till later Times; Athenæus tells us, that in his Age προσφάτως τὰ βαλανία παρήκλει, τὴν ἀρχὴν ἔδιν ἔδον τῆς πόλεως ἰαίῃν αὐτά, they were but lately come into Use, and that formerly no such Places were allowed to be within the City (c). The Balneos commonly contained the following Rooms:

1. Αποδυτήριον, wherein ἀπεδύοντο τὰ ἱμάτια, they put off their Clothes.

2. Υπόκαυσον, or πυρραγήριον, sudatorium, a Room most commonly round, and provided with πῦρ ἀκαπνισ, Fire, so contrived that it should not smoke, for the Benefit of those who desired to sweat; it was also termed Laconicum, from the frequent Use of this Way of sweating in Laconia.

3. Βαπτιστήριον, a hot Bath.

4. Λεῖψον, a cold Bath.

5. Αλειπήριον, the Room wherein they were anointed.

After bathing they always anointed, either ἰμφρατίσθαι τὰς σωματικές πόρους, to close the Pores of the Body, which was especially necessary after the Use of hot Baths, or πρὸς τὸ μὴ ξηρανθῆναι τὸ ὑδατὶ ἀποσκληρυμμένα γίνεσθαι τὰ σώματα, lest the Skin should become rough after the Water was dried off it (d). If we may believe Pliny (e), they had no better Ointment in the Time of the Trojan War, than Oil perfumed with odoriferous Herbs, especially Roses; whence ῥοδοῖν ἐλαιον, Oil mixed with Roses, is mention'd in Homer's twenty-third Iliad (f), where Venus anoints Hector's Body.

To the same Ointments he elsewhere gives the Epithets of ἀμφοσιον, ἰδανόν, and τιθυμῶνιον (a) speaking of Junō,

Ἀμφοσίῃ μὲν πρῶτον ἀπὸ χροὸς ἰμεροῖντο
Λυματα πάντα καθήρειν ἀλειψατο δὲ λίπ' ἰδαίνῃ
Ἀμφοσίῃ ἰδαίνῃ, τὸ ῥα οἱ τιθυμῶνιον ἦν.

But Athenæus is of Opinion, that Homer οἶδε τῇ χρησὶν τῶν μύρων, ἴλαια δ' αὐτὰ καλεῖ μετ' ἐπιθέτω, was acquainted with the Use of more precious Ointments, but calls them Oil, with the Addition of an Epithet, to distinguish them from common Oil (b). The same Observation is made by the Commentators upon that Poet, when they explain those Words εὐώδεις ἴλαιον, perfumed Oil; and 'tis well known that the Ἕῃες called all Sorts of Ointments by the Name of Oil, the Reason seems to have been, that Oil was the first Ointment; however, the ancient Herces never used μύρα, costly Ointments. Athenæus himself acknowledgés, that Homer never introduces ἀλειφομένους τὰς Ἡρώας any of his Heroes anointed with any Ointment beside Oil, except Paris, a soft and effeminate Person. In more delicate Ages, when very much of the primitive Plainness was laid aside, it was still by many thought indecent for Men to anoint themselves with precious Ointments. Chrysis would have the Name of μύρον derived ἀπὸ τοῦ μετα πολλῇ μωρίᾳ καὶ πόνῳ ματαίᾳ γίνεσθαι, from the vain and unprofitable Labour of compounding it. And Socrates was of Opinion, that the Smell, as well as the Garments of Men and Women, ought to be different; that for Women it was decent enough to smell of perfumed Ointments; but that Men should rather smell of Oil, which was used in the Schools of Exercise. Solon prohibited Men from selling Ointments; and the Laws of Sparta entirely forbid any Person to sell them, as we are informed at large by Athenæus (c); nevertheless, Women, and some effeminate Men, were so curious in their Choice of Ointments, that they could tell very critically, ποῖον τι ἰκάσθω τῶν μελῶν ἴσιν ἐπιλεῖν, what Sort suited best with each Member of the Body. An Example whereof we find in the following Verses of Antiphanes, which are cited by Athenæus;

Ἐκ χρυσοκολλήτης δὲ καλπίδος μύρω
Αἴγυπτίῳ μὲν τοὺς πόδας καὶ τὰ σκέλη,
Φοινικίῳ δὲ τοὺς γάβας καὶ τὰ τιτθέα,
Σισυμάρειῳ δὲ τὸν ἴτερον βραχίονα,
Ἀμαρακίῳ δὲ τὰς ὀφρύς καὶ τὴν κόμην,
Ἐρκυλλίῳ δὲ τὸ γόνυ καὶ τὴν αὐχίαν.

Lastly, it must not be omitted, that the Feet being most exposed to Dust and Filth, were oftner washed and anointed than other Parts of the Body; on which account they are by some thought to be called λειτουργία; in Homer. Women were generally employed to wash and anoint the Feet, both in the heroical and later Ages; it was customary for them to kiss the Feet of those to whom they thought a more than common Respect was due; thus the Woman in the Gospel kisses the Feet of our blessed Saviour, whilst she anointed them. The same Ceremony was performed towards Philostratus by his Daughter, as himself relates in Aristophanes (a);

— κ' πρῶτα μὲν θυγάτηρ με
 Αἰνέει· κ' τῷ πόδ' αἰεὶ φη· κ' προσκύψασα φιλήσῃ.

Let us from this Digression return to the Entertainment; and the first Ceremony, after the Guests arrived at the House of Entertainment, was the Salutation performed by the Master of the House, or one appointed in his Place: to do this was termed by the general Name of ἀσπάζεσθαι, tho' this Word κυρίως ἐστὶ τὸ περιπλάκυσθαι τινα, in its strict Sense, signifies to embrace one with Arms around, being derived ἀπὸ τοῦ ἀγαν σπᾶσθαι εἰς ἑαυτὸν τὸν ἑταῖρον, from forcibly drawing another to one's self, as we are informed by the old Scholiast upon Aristophanes (b); but the most common Salutation was by the Conjunction of their Right-hands, the Right-hand being accounted a Pledge of Fidelity and Friendship; whence Pythagoras advised, μὴ παντὶ ἐμβαλεῖν τὴν δεξιάν, that the Right-hand should not be given to every Man, meaning, that all Persons were not fit to be made our Friends. This Ceremony was very ancient, and is mentioned in Homer (c):

Οἱ δ' ὡς ἔν ξείνης ἴδον, ἄβροιοι ἦλθον ἅπαντες,
 Χερσὶν τ' ἥσπαζοντο, κ' ἐμβαλεῖσθαι ἄνωγον.

Hence δεξιῶσθαι is sometimes joined with ἀσπάζεσθαι, and is almost synonymous to it. Thus in Aristophanes (d);

— αὐτὸν ἥσπαζοντο κ'
 Εὐδεξιώνθ' ἅπαντες ὑπο τῆς καλῆς.

Sometimes it is used figuratively for any Sort of Entertainment or Reception. Thus we find δεξιῶσθαι δαίτι, δεξιῶσθαι τραπέζῃ, δεξιῶσθαι δώροις, δεξιῶσθαι χρηστοῖς λόγοις, ἔργοις, &c.

Sometimes they kissed the Lips, Hands, Knees, or Feet, in Salutations, as the Person deserved more or less Respect. There was a particular Sort of Kiss, which is called by Suidas χύτρον, by Pollux χύτρα, the Pot, ὅπότεν τα παιδία φιλοῖη τῶν ὅτων λαμβανόμενα, when they took the Person, like a Pot, by both his Ears, which was chiefly practised by or towards Children. We find it mentioned by Ennius (e);

Τῶν ὄτων καθιλοῖσ', ἵτι οἱ τὴν φάσσαι ἰδοῦκα.

The Guests being admitted, did not immediately sit down at the Table, which was accounted ill Breeding, but spent some Time in viewing and commending the Room and Furniture. Thus the Son in Aristophanes (c) instructs his Father to do ;

Ἐπειτ' ἱπαινέσῃ τι τῶν χαλκωμάτων,
Οροφὴν δῖασσαι, κρηπίδα αὐλῆς θαύμασον.

Which Observation, with others of the same Nature, is taken Notice of by Athenæus (d).

Of the Ceremonies at Entertainments.

THE ancient Grecians sat at Meat. There are three Sorts of Seats mentioned by Homer.

1. Δίφροϙ, which contained two Persons, as the Name seems to import, and was commonly placed for those of the meanest Quality.
2. Θρόνοϙ, on which they sat upright, having under their Feet a Footstool, termed Θρήνυς.
3. Κλισμῶς, on which they sat leaning a little backwards, as the Word signifies. Of these a more full and exact Account may be seen in Athenæus (e).

Neither was it the Custom in Greece only, but in most other Countries, to sit at Entertainments ; it was practised by the primitive tive Romans, as we are informed by Isidorus (a), and Servius (b). And Philo hath observed, that Joseph ordered his Brethren κατὰ τὰς ἡλικίας καθίζεσθαι, μήπω τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐν ταῖς συμπολικαῖς συνεσίαις κατακλίσαι χρομνῶν, to sit according to their Ages, the Custom of lying at Entertainments not having then obtained (c). But afterwards ἐπεὶ τρυφᾷν ἤρξαντο κατεβύησαν ἀπὸ τῶν δίφρων ἐπὶ τὰς κλινὰς ὡς αἰμαῖνες ὄντες, when Meh began to be soft and effeminate, they exchanged their Seats for Beds, in order to drink with more Ease; yet then οἱ ἥρωες καθήμενοι οἰνοπόταζον, the Heroes who drank sitting, were still thought Praiſe-worthy; and some who accustomed themselves to a primitive and severe Way of Living, retained the ancient Posture. This was done by the Cynick Philosophers, as we find in Plantus (d):

———*Potius in subsellio
Cynice accipiemur, quam in lectis.*

In Macedonia no Man was allowed to sit at Meals till he had killed a Boar without the Help of Nets, as we are informed by Hegeſander, in Athenæus (e). And Alexander the Great sometimes kept to the ancient Way, and once τριτακοσίους ἡγίμνας ἰσίων, ἐκάθισεν ἐν τῷ δίφρῳ ἀγρυπνῶν καὶ κλυδίζων, ἀλυργοῖς περιτρώσας ἱμαθίοις, entertaining 400 Commanders, he placed them upon Silver Seats, covered with Purple Cloth, as we learn from Duris in the same Author. And in the most Luxurious and effeminate Ages, Children were sometimes not permitted to lie down, but had Seats at the End of their Fathers Beds. It was the Custom for the Children of Princes, and the rest of the Nobility of that Age, to sit at their Meals, in the Sight of their Relations, in the Time of Tacitus (f). Whence Suetonius describing the Behaviour of Augustus towards his Grandchildren, says, that neque cœnavit una, nisi in imo lecto adsiderent, they always sat at the End of the Bed when they supped with him (g). And the same Author reports, that the Emperor Claudius always supped with his Children, and some of the noble Boys and Maids, who, according to ancient Custom, sat at the Bottom of the Bed (b). The same Place was commonly assigned to Men of meaner Condition, when they were entertained with others of better Quality. Whence in Plutarch (i) the rest of the Guests lie down, only Æsop is placed upon a Seat next to Solon. And Donatus (k) reports, that Terence being ordered to repeat some Part of his Comedies to Cæcilius, went to him at the Time of Supper, and being in mean Apparel, was placed upon a Seat near the Bed; but after he had recited a few Verses, was invited to lie down to Supper.

The Manner of lying at Meat was thus; the Table was placed in the Middle, round which stood the Beds, covered with Cloth or Tapeſtry,

(a) Lib. XX. cap. ii. (b) In Æneid viii. (c) Libro de Joseph. p. 555. Edit. Franc. (d) Stich. Act. V. Sc. iv. v. 22. (e) Lib. I. cap. xiv. (f) Annal. Lib. XIII. (g) Augusti cap. lxi. (h) Claudii cap. xxxii. (i) Symposiæ Sapientum. (k) Terentii Vita.

Tapestry, according to the Quality of the Master of the House, upon these they lay, inclining the superior Part of their Bodies upon their Left-Arms, the lower Part being stretched out at length, or a little bent; their Heads were raised up, and their Back sometimes supported with Pillows. If several Persons lay upon the same Bed, then the first lay upon the uppermost Part, with his Legs stretched out behind the second Person's Back; the second's Head lay below the Navel, or Bosom of the former, his Feet being placed behind the third's Back, and in like manner the third, fourth, fifth, and the rest; for though it was accounted mean and fordid at Rome to place more than three or four upon one Bed, yet, as we are informed by Cicero (a) Græci quinque stipati in lectulis, sæpe plures fuerunt, the Greeks used to crowd five, and many times a greater Number, into the same Bed. Persons beloved commonly lay in the Bosoms of those who loved them; thus the beloved Disciple in the Gospel lies in the Bosom of our blessed Saviour at the Celebration of the Passover (b). There is another Example of the like Practice in Juvenal (c);

Cæna sedet, gremio jacuit nova nupta mariti.

At the Beginning of the Entertainment it was customary to lie flat upon their Bellies, that so their Right-hand might with more Ease reach to the Table; but afterwards, when their Appetites began to decrease, they reclined upon their Sides; in which Sense we are to understand the Words of Plutarch (d), ἵκασον ἐν ἀρχῇ μὲν ἐπὶ τῷ στήθει ἀποδύοντες πρὸς τὴν τραπέζαν, ὕστερον δὲ μετὰ στήθεα ἵκασον ἐπὶ βραχίονα καὶ πλάτης τὴν καλὰ κλισίαν, or, as it should be read, καλὰ κλισίαν, that at the Beginning every one put his Mouth forward, looking towards the Table; but afterwards changes the Posture of his Inclination from Depth to Breadth. And Horace alludes to the same Custom in the following Verses (e):

*Nec satis est cara pisces avertere mensa,
Ignarum quibus est jus aptius, & quibus affis
Languidus in cubitum sese convivia reponet.*

It was customary from the heroical Ages downwards for the Guests to be rank'd according to their Quality. It is evident, that in Homer, as Eustathius (f) hath observed, in Συμπόσιος ἄνθρωποι καθύπαικται οἱ ἀριστοὶ the chief Persons had the uppermost Seats at Entertainments. And afterwards at public Entertainments there was ὀνομακλάτωρ, Nomenclator, a Person appointed to call every Guest by Name to his proper Place. But to determine in what Order they sat, and which were accounted the chief Places, is more difficult. It seems probable that the Heroes sat in long Ranks, and that the chief Persons were placed at the Head of each Rank on both Sides of of the Table, which is the Meaning of the Word ἀκροί, uppermost, in the fore-mentioned Passage of Eustathius. Thus in the ninth Iliad (a), where Achilles entertains Agamemnon's Ambassadors, he places himself uppermost in one Rank, and Ulysses, as the principal Ambassador, in the other,

——— ἀτὰρ κρέα νῆμιν Ἀχιλλεύς,
Αὐτὸς δ' ἄντιος ἔξιν Ὀδυσσεύς θίοιο,
Τόγχε τῷ ἱτίστοιο. ———

Neptune, though coming last to an Entertainment of the Gods, yet

ἔξτε' αἶε ἐν μέσσοισι. ———

sat in the Middle, that Place being reserved, as a Right belonging to him. Jupiter was at the Head of one Rank, next to him on the same Side sat Minerva, his Daughter, who on a certain Time gave place to Thetis, probably as being a Stranger (b).

Η δ' ἄρα πᾶς Διὶ πατρὶ καθέζετο, ἔξτε δ' Ἀθῆνη.

Juno led the opposite Rank, and being Wife and Sister to Jupiter, neither gave place to Thetis, nor any other (c). The most honourable Places in Beds at Entertainments were not the same in all Nations. In Persia the middle Place was the chief, and always assigned to the King, or the chief Guest; in Greece the first or nearest to the Table; and amongst the Heracleotæ, and the Greeks who lived about the Euxine Sea, the first Place of the middle Bed was the most honourable. On the contrary, at Rome the last, or uppermost Place of the Middle, was preferred before any other (d). But they who affected a more free and easy Way of Living, were not solicitous about Places. An Example hereof we have in Timon (e), who having invited Men of all Qualities, Citizens, Strangers, Friends, and Relations, to a splendid Entertainment, desired every Man to lie down in that Place which pleased him best; nevertheless Men of proud Tempers, even on such Occasions, like the Jews on that account, reproved by our blessed Saviour, affected to have the chief Places; so it happened at Timon's Entertainment, where many of the Guests having taken their Places, one in very fine Apparel, and attended with a numerous Retinue, came to the Door of the Room, viewed all the Company, then presently retired; and being followed by several of those who were present, and desired to return, replied, there was no fit Place left for him. Some disposed their Guests in such an Order as they thought most apt to promote good Fellowship, placing Men of the same Years, of the same Profession, session, or Temper, next one another; or tempering the Variety of Humours, by placing Men of angry Dispositions nearest the Meek and Gentle, those of silent Tempers nearest the Talkative; but in things of this Nature there was no certain Rule, every Man followed his own Fancy; and 'tis propounded as a Problem in Plutarch (a), whether was best, to assign every Man his Place, or leave the Guests to take the Places which happened to them? I shall only add under this Head, that it is said to have been a very ancient Custom at Lacedæmon for the eldest Person to go before the rest to the Beds at the Common-hall, unless the King gave the Precedence to another, by calling him first. Thus Eusebius (b).

Let us, in the next place, proceed to the Table. Now the Table was accounted ἱερὸν χρέμα, δι' ἧς ὁ θεὸς τιμᾶται φίλος τε καὶ ξένος, a very sacred Thing, by means of which Honour was paid to the God of Friendship and Hospitality (c). This God was Jupiter, who from the Protection of Guests and Friends, received the Titles of ξένος and φίλος. Hercules also had some care of this Affair, whence he is called τραπίζος, and ἀποτραπίζος: neither were the rest of the Gods thought to be wholly unconcerned. It was customary to place the Statue of the Gods upon the Table; whence Arnobius (d) derides the Gentiles, quod sacras faciant mensas salinorum appositæ & simulacris deorum, for consecrating their Tables, by placing on them Salts, and Images of their Gods. They also, as will farther appear afterwards, offered Libations to the Gods upon their Tables; whence Cleodemas in Plutarch calls it φίλων θεῶν βωμὸν καὶ ξένων the Altar of the Gods of Friendship and Hospitality. And according to the Saying of Thales, "As the Destruction of the Earth" would occasion Disorder and Confusion in all Parts of the Universe, so the Table being taken away, the whole House would presently be dissolved, the holy Fire, and Hearth, and Entertainment, which are the chief Endearments of Life, or rather "Life itself, would all be destroyed." Thus Plutarch (e). Hence we may learn why so much Veneration was paid to the Tables, that to dishonour them by any dishonest or indecent Behaviour, was thought a very great Crime. Hence that Saying of Juvenal (f):

Hic verbis nullus pudor, aut reverentia mensæ.

And Complaints against such as perfidiously violated the Regard due to the hospitable Tables are very frequent in the Poets. Thus Cassandra in Lycophron (g) complains of Paris, who stole away Helena, the Wife of Menelaus, by whom he had been courteously entertained:

Εἴλας θεῶν ἀλοῖτὸς ἐξῆναι δίκην,
Λάξας τραπίζαν, κατὰκνύσας δῖμιν.

In the heroical Ages the Tables were made of Wood, polished after the best Manner of those Times, and the Feet were sometimes painted with Variety of Colours. Hence the following Epithets of Tables in Homer, ξιστή, ὑέρος, κυανόπεζα, &c. The Form was round, if we may believe Myrtaenus in Athenæus (a), who reports, that the ancient Greeks made their Tables and several other Things spherical, in Imitation of the World, which they believed to be of that Figure. But Eustathius, who is rather to be followed, observes, from several Passages in Homer, μήπω κυκλῆριϋῖ εἶναι τὰς τραπέζας, ἀλλὰ τεταυμέναις εἰς μήκωσιν, that the Tables were not then round, but extended in Length; which Figure is more agreeable to what hath been before observed concerning the Manner of their fitting in long Ranks. The Tables in those Days were not covered with Linen, but only carefully cleansed with wet Sponges. Of this Custom there are several Examples in Homer, as that in the first Book of his Odyssæa (b)

Οἱ δ' αὖτε Ἰπὸ γόισι πολυήρῃτοισι τραπέζας
Νίζον κ' ἐπὶ δέξιν, ἰδὲ κ' εἰς πολλὰ δακτύλο.

The same Thing is done in the twentieth Book of the same Poem (c), to forbear the mention of other Instances. And later Authors speak of the like Practice. Thus Arrian (d), ἀροι τὰς τραπέζας, ἰπὸ γόισιν, take away the Tables, cleanse them with Sponges. And Martial, Hæc tibi sorte datur tergendis spongia mensis.

In later Ages, the Tables of Men of inferior Quality were commonly supported by three Feet, and made of plain and ordinary Wood; but those which belonged to Men of better Condition were composed of more costly Materials. The most curious Sorts of Wood were sought, and many times fetched from foreign Countries for this Use. They were also adorned with Plates of Silver, or other Metals, and supported by one or more Feet curiously wrought, and called after the Name of some of the ancient Heroes, Atlantes, Telamones, &c. The most common Support of these Tables was an Ivory Foot cast in the Form of a Lion, a Leopard, or some other Animal. Some have thought that in Homer every Guest had a distinct Table by himself; whence Athenæus (e) reports, τὸ μοσχαγῆν εἰς χρεστοὶ τοῖς πάλαισι εἶναι, that the Antients used to eat by themselves; but as that is not sufficiently proved by the Instances which are produced for that End, so, in the following Ages, it was certainly accounted more unfociable and inhumane to eat in that manner, as we are informed by the same Author (f); which was neverthelefs practifed by fome of the barbarous Nations, and in particular, as Tacitus reports, by the Germans.

Τράπεζα in Greek, and mensa in Latin, are ambiguous Words, and fignify not only the Tables, but alfo τὰ ἑβλια τὰ ἐπ' αὐτῶν τιθίμενα, the Meat placed upon them, to ufe the Words of Julius Pollux (a). Hence by πρῶται, διῦτις, τρίται τράπεζαι, and in Latin by prima, secunda, tertia mensa, are underftood the firft, fecond, and third Courses of Meat; which Ambiguity of Signification is by fome thought to have been occafioned by the Custom then in ufe, of bringing in and taking away the Tables and the Meat upon them together; which Opinion is confirmed by the following Passage of Alexis in Athenæus (b)

Ὡς δὲ τὴν τράπεζαν ἀνδρώπῳ δὺο
Φίροντας εἶσω, ποικίλῃ παροψίδων
Κόσμος βρύσσαν. —————

There were therefore three diftinct Parts of the Supper, which was their chief Meal.

1. Δείπνῳ προοίμιον antecœnium, cœne præfatio, fometimes termed προπομα, which, as the Names import, was rather a Preparation to, than any Part of the Supper, and confifted of Herbs of the sharpeft Tafte, in particular at Athens, of Coleworts, Eggs, Oyfters, οἰνόμελις, a Mixture of Honey, and as 'tis probable of the sharpeft Wines, and other Things which were thought to create an Appetite.

2. Δείπνῳ, cœna, the Supper, which was fometimes called κεφαλὴ δείπνου, in Latin, caput cœnæ; in this Senfe the following Passage of Martial is by fome underftood;

————— mullus tibi quatuor emptus
Librarum cœnæ pompa, caputque fuit.

This Courfe was always more plentifully furnifhed out than the former; whence was that Saying of Dromeas the Parafite, who being asked, Whether the Suppers at Cbalcis or thofe at Athens were moft fplendid? replied, “ that the Preface of the Supper at Cbalcis “ was to be preferred before the whole Entertainment at Athens ;” meaning by the Preface of the Supper, the feveral Sorts of Shell-fifh, and other Provision, which was confumed before the Supper, as we are informed by Athenæus (c).

3. Δευτέρα τράπεζα, the fecond Courfe, which confifted of Sweetmeats of all Kinds, which they called τραγήματα, τραγηματισμόν, ματίνας, τραγάλια, ἐπιδόρπισμα, ἐπιδορπίσματα, ἐπιφορήματα, ἐπιδοπίνα, μελαδότης, &c. Alfo by the Dorians, who called Entertainments αἰχλα, and Corinthians, they were termed παίχλαια (d). This Courfe was furnifhed with the utmoft Splendor, efpecially in Ages addicted to Luxury; whence it was sometimes, by way of Eminence called τράπεζα, the Course, as we are informed by Albanius (a), who has left Descriptions of several of these Courses. But in this Sort of Provision the Grecians were very much excelled by the Persians, who used to say, τοὺς Ἕλληνας (ἀνεμῶν) πινῶντας παύσασθαι, ὅτι (φῶν) ἀπὸ δαίτῃς παραφρίσσειναι ἔστιν ἄξιον, εἰ δὲ τι παραφρίσσειτο ἰσθμίωνες ἢ παύσασθαι, that the Grecians leave off eating while they were hungry, because nothing of any Value is ever set before them after Supper, and yet if any Thing is produced, they still eat on (b).

Sometimes the three fore-mentioned Provisions were called πρώτη, δεύτερα, τρίτη τράπεζα, the first, second, third Course, the προοίμιον δαίτῃς being reckoned a Part of the Supper, and making the first Course; and where there was a great Variety of Dishes, that every one of the Guests might be able to chuse what pleased him best, τὸ ἔθος ἢ ἰστιάτορι καὶ ἀκλιβίῳ παραδίδεσθαι γραμματίδιον τι περιέχον ἀναγραφὴν τῶν παρεσκευασμένων, ἐφ' ᾧ εἰδέναι ὅ, τι μέλλοι ὄψον φέρειν ὁ μάγειρος, a Paper was delivered to the Master of the Feast containing a Catalogue of all the Dishes which the Cook had provided, and this was communicated by him to the Guests as Occasion required; but it must not be imagined, that the Grecian Suppers always consisted of such a Variety of Dishes or Courses; whatever might be the Custom at the Tables of Princes, and others of the first Quality, the rest were content with meaner Provision for their ordinary Diet, only upon the Festivals of the Gods, or upon other special Occasions, they allowed themselves more Freedom (c); and the heroical Ages rarely had more than one Course.

The Ancients had so great a Sense of the divine Providence, that they thought it unlawful to eat till they had first offered a Part of their Provision, as a Sort of First-fruits, to the Gods; which Custom was so religiously observed in the heroical Ages, that Achilles, tho' disturbed by Agamemnon's Ambassadors at Midnight, would not eat till an Oblation was offered.

— Οὐκ ἔστι δὲ θύσαι ἀνέμῳ

Πάτροκλον δ' ἰταίρειν, ὃ δ' ἐν χειρὶ βάλλει θυλάϊς.

And Ulysses in another Place of Homer, reports, that in Polyphemus's Den, himself and his Fellow-Soldiers were not unmindful of this Duty.

Εὐθὰ δὲ πῶρ καὶ οἷος ἰθύσαμεν, ἡδὲ καὶ αὐτοὶ

Τυφῶϊ αἰνυμένοι φα γόμεν. —

In the Entertainments of Plato and Xenophon we find Oblations made; and to forbear the mention of more Examples, the Neglect of this Duty was accounted a very great Impiety, which none but Epicurus,

(c) Conf. Albanius, Lib. XV. initio cap. x.

Epicurus, and others who worshipped no Gods at all, would be guilty of; these, with several other Observations on the same Subject, we find in Athenæus (a). The first of these Oblations was always made to Vesta, the chief of the household Gods; afterwards they worshipped some of the other Gods, and last of all, offered a Libation to Vesta, as we are informed by Homer (b):

— ἡ γὰρ ἄτις Ἔ
Εἰλαπίναι Δηλοῖσιν, ἢ ἡ πρώτη πυμάτης
Εἰρή ἀρχόμενος Ἐπιδὲ μιληθῆα οἶνον.

The Reason why this Goddess had this Honour paid her, was, either because she being Protectress of the House, was in Cicero's Language (c), rerum custos intimarum, Keeper of Things most concealed from common View; or, according to Pburnutius, because she being the same with the Earth in the Esteem of the People, was the common Principle out of which all Bodies are produced, and into which they are again resolved; or lastly, according to the Account of Aristocratus in the *Scolia*st of Aristophanes (d), this Privilege was conferred by Jupiter, for the Service done by Vesta in his War against the Giants: Hence came the Proverb used by Plato (e) and others, ἀφ' Ἑστίας ἀρχεσθαι, to begin with Vesta; whereby was intimated, that our domestic Concernments ought to be our first and chief Care.

During the Entertainment, all the Guests were apparelled in White, or some other chearful Colour; and to use Cicero's Words (f), Quis nunquam cœnavit atratus? What Person ever was found to sup in Black? That Colour was left to Times of Mourning. It was also customary to deck themselves with Flowers, or Garlands composed of Flowers, which were provided by the Master of the Feast, and brought in before the second Course, or, as some are of Opinion, at the beginning of the Entertainment (g). They not only adorned their Heads, Necks, and Breasts, but often bestrew'd the Beds whereon they lay, and all Parts of the Room; but the Head was chiefly regarded, as appears from the following Verses of Ovid (h), wherein he celebrates this Custom:

Ebrius innexis philyra convivæ capillis
Salat, & imprudens uritur arte meri.
Ebrius ad durum formosæ limen amicæ
Gantat, habent unctæ mollia ferta comæ.
Nulla coronata peraguntur seria fronte,
Nec liquidæ juncto flore bibuntur aquæ.
Donec eras mistus nullis, Acheloe, racemis,
Gratia sumendæ non erat ulla rosæ.

Garlands are by some thought to have been an Invention of Prometheus, who first prescribed the Use of them, that Men should by that Emblem of his Bonds, commemorate the Punishment which he had suffered for his Kindness to them. To this Opinion the following Verses of Eschylus, which are cited by Athenæus (a), seem to allude :

Τῶν δὲ ξίνω γε εἴφαντο, ἀρχαῖον εἶπε
Διαιμῶν ἀρετῶν ἐκ Προμηθέως λόγῳ.

In another Place (b) the same Author relates out of Draco the Cerægian, that Janus invented Garlands, Ships, Boats, and the Art of coining Money ; and thence it was customary in several Cities of Greece, and also of Italy and Sicily, for the Coin to bear on one Side the Image of two-faced Janus, and on the reverse a Boat, a Ship, or a Garland. Pliny will have the first Garlands to have been used by Bacchus, and composed of Ivy (c). And in later Ages they commonly made use of Ivy and Amygdalus, as Preservatives against Drunkenness, whence the latter of them has its Name from the privative Particle α and μήνη (d). Festus affirms, Antiquissimum genus fuisse coronarum laneum, that the most ancient Garlands were made of Wool ; with one of this Sort the Enchantress in Theocritus (e) adorns her Cup.

Στίφον τὰς καλάδας φοινικίῳ οἶδ' αὐτῷ.

Whether Garlands were commonly used at the Time of the Trojan War, is not certain. Athenæus hath observed that they are used by none of Homer's Heroes, yet that the Poet himself has several Allusions to them, some of which are the following ;

Νῆστορ ἦν περὶ πόλιν ἀπείριτον ἐρφαίνω.

And,

——— πάλιν γὰρ εἴφαντο πολέμοιο διδάσ.

Whence he concludes that Garlands were unknown in the heroical Ages, but came into use before Homer's Time (f).

The Flowers and Greens whereof Garlands were composed were various. In the primitive Times they made no Entertainments but upon the Festivals of the Gods, and then the Garlands, Hymns, and Songs, were such as the Gods were thought to delight in, as we learn learn from Athenæus (a). And in latter Ages, upon the publick Festival of any God, they seem to have used the particular Herb or Flower which was sacred to him ; but at other Times all Sorts were made use of, as the Season would allow, or they were thought most conducive to Pleasure, Refreshment (b), or Health. Some were very curious in the Choice of their Garlands, thinking them to have a very great Influence upon Mens Bodies ; whence Mæstheus and Callimachus, two Greek Physicians, wrote Books concerning Garlands, as we are inform'd by Pliny (c). I shall add nothing farther upon this Head, only that the Rose being dedicated by Cupid to Harpocrates, the God of Silence, to engage him to conceal the lewd Actions of Venus, was an Emblem of Silence ; whence to present or hold it up to any Person in Discourse, served instead of an Admonition, that it was Time for him to hold his Peace ; and in Entertaining Rooms it was customary to place a Rose above the Table, to signify that what was there spoken should be kept private. This Practice is described in the following Epigram :

*Est rosa flos Veneris, cujus quo facta laterent, Harpocrati, Matris dona, dicavit Amor.
Inde rosam mensis hospes suspendit amicis ;
Conviva ut sub ea dicta, tacenda stet.*

From the Garlands let us proceed to Ointments and Perfumes. The ancient Greeks, as Athenæus hath observed (d), anointed their Heads with some common and ordinary Sort of Ointment, thinking by that means to keep themselves cool and temperate, and to prevent Fevers, and other mischievous Consequences of the too plentiful Use of Wine ; but afterwards, as it is usual for Men to improve the Things which are used out of mere Necessity, by the Addition of others which serve for Pleasure and Luxury, they came to use precious Ointments and Perfumes. These, as also the Distribution of Garlands, and second Courses at Entertainments, with all the Arts of Luxury and Effeminacy, were first introduced into Greece by the Ionians, who, by conversing with the Asiatics, were taught to lay aside the primitive Plainness of their Manners sooner than any of the Greeks ; whence Ionicus risus and Ionicus matris became proverbial Expressions for profuse Laughter and unseemly Motions (e). The chief Part to which Ointments were applied, was the Head ; but other Parts of the Body had sometimes their Share both of Ointments and Garlands, and particularly ἱερῶντο τὰ στήθη καὶ ἰμῶντα, ὅτε αὐτόθι, ἡ καρδία, the Breast was adorned with Garlands, and anointed, as being the Seat of the Heart, which they thought was refreshed by these Applications as well as the Brain. wherein the Entertainment was made, was sometimes perfumed by burning Myrrh or Frankincense, or with other Odours. These Customs are briefly described in the following Verses of Archestratus in Athenæus (a);

Αἰὲν δὲ ρεφάνοισι κάρφα παρὰ δαίτῃ σπυγάζε
 Πανδοκμοῖς, οἷς αἱ γαῖαι σῶδον ἔλκειν αἰθῆρ
 Καὶ γαλοῖσι μύροις ἀγαθοῖς χαίτην θραπέυν
 Καὶ σμύρναν, λίβανόν τι σπυρὸς μαλακὴν ἐπὶ τέφρῃ
 Βάλλε σπασμῆρι, Συρίης ἐὼνδρα κάρπον.

The Officers and Attendants at Entertainments were these which follow.

In the first Place συμποσιαρχος, sometimes called συμποσίῳ ἐπιμελητής, τραπεζοκμορ, τραπεζοποῖος; ὁ ἐπὶ τῆς τραπέζης, ἀρχιπρὶχλῆος, and also ἰχιάφες, &c. was chief Manager of the Entertainments. This Office was sometimes performed by the Person at whose Charge the Entertainment was provided; sometimes by another named by him; sometimes, especially in Entertainments provided at the common Expence, he was elected by Lots, or by the Suffrages of the Guests.

Next, and sometimes the same with the former, was the Βασιλεύς, otherwise termed ρεφάνος, ταξίαρχος, &c. and in Latin, Rex, Modimperator, &c. the King, whose Business it was to determine the Laws of good Fellowship, and to observe whether every Man drank his Proportion, whence he was also called ὀφθαλμὸς, oculus, the Eye; he was commonly appointed by Lots; to which Custom there are several Allusions in Horace:

—quem Venus arbitrum
Dicit bibendi (b) ?

And again (c);

Et domus exilis Plutonia; quo simul mearis,
Nec regna vini fortiter talis,
Nec tenerum Lycidam mirabere.

The Guests were obliged to be in all Things conformable to the Commands of the Βασιλεύς; whence Cicero upbraids a certain Person, that qui nunquam populi Romani legibus parvisset, iis legibus quæ in poculis ponebantur, obtemperabat; he who had never submitted to the Laws of the Roman People, should yield Obedience to the Laws of Drinking (d). And Arrian (e) reports, that the King, being created by Lots, commands in this Manner: Do you drink, do you fill the Glass, do you go, do you come. The chief Magistrates were not exempted from yielding Obedience, if the Lots gave another the Pre-eminence; whence Agésilas, King of Lacedæmon, being present at at an Entertainment, was not declared Rex till the Lots had favoured him, as we are informed by Plutarch (a), who reports in the same Place, that being asked by the Cup-bearer how much Wine every Guest should drink, he made this Reply: "If there is Plenty of Wine, let every Man have what he calls for; if not, let every Man have an equal Share."

Δαίτης, Diribitor, was so termed ἀπὸ τοῦ δαίεσθαι, from dividing and distributing to every Guest his Portion; whence Entertainments were also called δαίτης. In the primitive Times the Master of the Feasts carved for all his Guests. Thus in Homer (b), when Agamemnon's Ambassadors were entertained at Achilles's Table;

—ἀτὰρ κρία νῆων Ἀχιλλεύς.

Which Verse is repeated in the last Iliad (c). More Examples would be needless, it being the Practice of those Ages for Men of the highest Quality to descend to very mean Employments. And in later Times the same Office was executed by some of the chief Men at Sparta, as appears from the Example of Lysander, who was deputed to it by Agésilas (d). This Custom of distributing to every Guest his Portion, was by some derived from the Ages wherein the Greeks left off their ancient Way of living upon Acorns, and learned the Use of Corn, which being at the first very scarce, gave Occasion to continual Quarrels, whence ἀτασθαλία, which originally signified τὰς ἀτάς ἐν ταῖς θαλάσiais, the Disorders committed at Feasts, came to be a general Name for all Sorts of Injuries and wicked Behaviour. To prevent these Disorders, it was agreed, that a Person should be named to distribute to every Man his Portion, whence, as some are of Opinion, the Phrase of δαί, ἴσον, equal Entertainment, so frequently occurs in Homer (e). Such to whom a particular Respect was due, were helped to the best Parts, and very often to a larger Share than the rest of the Guests. Thus Eumæus, in Homer's Odyssey, gives the ἰώτης, Chine, which they esteemed the chief Part, to Ulysses. The same is given by Agamemnon to Ajax, as a Reward for his Service in the War (f). Sarpedon, one of the Lycian Kings, in the same Poet is honour'd, Ἐδρ' τι, κρίασις, ἰδὲ πλείους δαΐσιον.

with the first Seat, the best Share of Meat, and full Cups. In another Place Diomedes, κρίασι καὶ πλείους δαΐσιον δέχεται, is entertained with the best Share of Meat, and full Cups. It appears from Herodotus, that the Kings of Sparta had διπλάσια παῖλα, a double Portion of every Dish. And in the Sacred Writings, the Mess of Benjamin, the beloved Brother of Joseph, was twice as large as any of the other Messes (g). They who received this Honour, ἰδού ἐξῆτο ἀπὸ τῶν αὐτῶν μοίρας ὡς ἐξέλοιο, ὡς Ὀδυσσεὺς ὡς ἀποκρίλαμ' ἢ αὐτῷ παρίθιλο, τῷ Δημοδόκῳ (a), had the Privilege of gratifying whomsoever they pleased with a Part of their Portion, as was done by Ulysses, who carved a Part of the Chine, which was set before him to Demodocus. Afterwards when Greece learned the Arts of Luxury, the primitive Way of dividing to every Man his Portion was laid aside, ὡς ἀκοινοῦσθαι καὶ ἀνιδυῖσθαι, as covetous and illiberal, and the Guests were allowed to carve for themselves in the Manner which pleased them best; nevertheless the ancient Custom was retained a long Time at the Entertainments after Sacrifices, and by some who preferred the primitive Temperance and Frugality before the modern profuse Way of Living; and it is observed, that whilst every Man had his Portion allotted, the Entertainments were managed with great Decency, and fewer Disorders were committed, as we are informed by Plutarch, where he discourses on this Question, “Whether the ancient Greeks, who allotted every Man his Portion, or the modern, who set their Provision in common before all the “Guests, were more to be commended (b).”

From the Distribution of Meat, let us proceed to the Persons employed to distribute Drink; these were commonly termed οἰνοχοῖ, and about the Hellepont πιπυχῦται, (c). In the heroical Entertainments the κέρυκες, Heralds, commonly performed this Office. Thus in Homer (d);

Κῆρυξ δ' αὐτοῖσι δάμ' ἐπύχילו οἰνοχοεύει,

In Athenæus (e) Mercury, the Herald of the Gods, is said to be introduced by Alcæus and Sappho, filling the Goblets at the celestial Entertainments; and to mention no more Examples, it is very well known, and hath been elsewhere observed, that the κέρυκες were deputed πῶσας ὑπερηλικὰς ἐπιτελεῖν πράξεις, to all Sorts of Ministrations. It was customary for Boys or young Men to fill the Cups. Thus we find in Homer (f);

Κῆροι δὲ κρήνηρας ἐπιτίψαντο ποτοῖο.

And to use the Words of Eustatius (g), φασὶν οἱ πολλοὶ παρβαίνειν εἶναι ἔργον τὸ οἰνοχοεῖν, “ancient Authors affirm that the Wine used “to be filled about by Virgins.” Which is agreeable to the Manners of those Times, wherein the Guests were attended by Virgins, without any Suspicion of Lust or Immodesty; whence the Daughter of Cocalus, King of Sicily, is said to have washed Minos, King of Crete; and the same is done by other Virgins and Women, in several Parts of Homer, as hath been observed by Athenæus (h);

(a) Athenæus loco cit. (b) Sympos. lib. II. Quest. ult. (c) Athenæus lib. X. cap. vii. (d) Odys. l. v. 142. (e) Loco citato. (f) Odys. l. v. 149. (g) In Iliad. γ. p. 533. (h) Lib. I. cap. viii.

and so common it was in the primitive Times for young Persons of both Sexes to be employed in the fore-mentioned, and all other Ministrations, that as Hesychius (a) and Eustathius (b) inform us, δούλοι, Servants, came to be termed by the Names of παῖδες ἢ παιδίσκαι, Boys and Girls, διὰ τὸ τῆς παιδικῆς ἡλικίας ὑπερβικόν, because Persons of that Age were commonly employed to serve; neither was this done only by Children of mean Fortune or Birth, but ἀποχόνη παρα τοῖς ἀρχαίοις οἱ εὐγενεῖς παῖδες, ὡς ὁ τῷ Μενελάῳ υἱός, in the primitive Times those of the highest Quality filled out Wine, as we find done by Menelaus's Son in the following Verse of Homer;

Ἀποχόνη δ' υἱὸς Μενελάου ποταλίμοιο (c).

The same Custom was in later and more refined Ages still retained at the Entertainments in the Temples, where many of the ancient Ways of Behaviour were kept up a long Time after they had been laid aside in other Places; especially at the publick Sacrifices of the Aeolians it was observed, that οἱ εὐγενεῖς παῖδων, the Boys of the chiefest Quality should perform this Office; which was also the Practice at Rome, where they used πάντα τοὺς Αἰολαῖς μιμῆσθαι, ὡς καὶ παρὰ τοὺς ῥωμαίους τῆς φωνῆς, in all Things to imitate the Aeolians, even to the very Tone of their Voice, as we learn from Athenaeus (d); whence, it may be, that Author came to be of Opinion, that the Custom of employing young Persons of liberal Birth and Education to fill the Wine, was derived from the Sacrifices of the Gods, at which οὐδὲ υἱὸς ἢ διακονῶν, no Slave was permitted to minister (e); but it is rather to be ascribed to the Plainness and Simplicity of the ancient Greeks, and other Nations; whence it came that the Sons and Daughters of Kings, and others of the first Quality, were employ'd in keeping Flocks, and almost all other Services, as hath been elsewhere observed. Another Reason why young Persons served at Entertainments rather than those in Years, was, because, by their Beauty and Sprightliness, they were thought more apt to exhilarate the Guests, whose Eyes were to be entertained as well as their other Senses; on this account the most comely Persons were deputed to this Ministration even in the primitive Times. Amongst the Gods

Whence we may learn, that in the most remote Times, which were thought the Age of the Gods, as those which followed were the Age of Heroes, this Practice was observed. And hence by the Names of Places which are said to be in use amongst the Gods, are to be understood the first and most ancient Names, as we learn from the Scholiast upon Homer, in whom there are several Examples to this Purpose; but I shall mention only that which follows (b), where the Poet tells us, that a certain Place in Troas was by the Gods, that is, most anciently, called Myrina's Tomb, but by Men, that is, in later Times, Baiea.

Τῶν ἔτοι ἀνδρες Βαίειαν κικλήσκουσιν·
 Αἰωνάτοι δὲ τι σῆμα πολυσκάρομοιο Μυρίνης.

That at the Time of the Trojan War it was customary for young Persons of beautiful Countenances, and well dress'd, to serve at Entertainments, is plain from the Answer of Eumæus to Ulysses, who then appearing in the Habit and Form of an old Beggar, intended to seize the young Gentlemen who made their Addresses to Penelope (c):

Οὐ τοι τοῖσι δ' εἰσὶν ὑποδρηστήρις ἱκίοντι,
 Ἀλλὰ ἴοι χλαῖνας εὐνίμοιοι ἦδ' ἡλιδας,
 Αἰεὶ δὲ λιπαροὶ πεφασίας καὶ καλά περόσκα,
 Οἷ σφιν ὑποδρώσων.

And in modern Ages, when the Arts of Luxury had more Esteem, it was usual to give vast Prices for beautiful Youths; which Custom is found fault with in the following Passage of Juvenal, where he speaks to an indigent Client, who is entertain'd at his Patron's Table (d):

— in Gætulum Ganymedem
 Respice, cum fuit: nescit tot millibus emtus
 Pauperibus miscere puer; sed forma, sed ætas
 Digna supercilio; quando ad te pervenit ille?
 Quando vocatus adest, calidæ gelidæque minister?
 Quippe indignatur vsteri parere clienti.

But the Customs which concern this Part of the Entertainment, are most elegantly and fully described by Philo the Jew (e), who tells us,

(a) Iliad. d. v. 292. (b) Iliad. c. v. 873. (c) Odys. lxx. 327. (d)

us, that it was usual to procure most beautiful Slaves to attend at Entertainments, not so much for any Service they were to do, as to gratify the Eyes of the Beholders; of these the young Boys (οἰο-χάραι) fill the Wine, those of riper Age (ὕδροφοῖται) serve up the Water, being washed, trimmed, and painted, with their Hair curled in various Forms, with several other remarkable Observations relating to this Custom.

The Cups and drinking Vessels came next to be considered; and in Homer every one of the Guests seemed to have a distinct Cup, out of which he drank when he pleased; hence the following Words of Agamemnon to Idomeneus (a),

— σὸν δὲ πρῶτον δέμας αἰεὶ
ἔρῃξ' ὅστις ἴμοι, αἷμα ὅτι θυμὸς ἀνέρῃ.

On which account the heroical Cups were very capacious, as Athenaeus hath proved by several Examples, and particularly that of Nestor's Cup, which was so weighty, that a young Man had scarce Strength to carry it (b); nevertheless the same Author there observes, that “tho’ Men of great Estates and Quality in his Time used large “Cups, yet that was not anciently the Practice of Greece, but lately “learned from the barbarous Nations, who being ignorant of Arts “and Humanity, indulge themselves in the immoderate Use of “Drink, and all Sorts of Dainties; whereas it does not appear, “says he, from the Testimony of any of those who lived before our “Time, that a Cup of a very large Size was ever made in any Part “of Greece, except those which belonged to the Heroes.” However, the Cups which they used after Supper were larger than those they drank in at Supper; this appears from the following Passage of Virgil (c):

*Postquam prima quies epulis, mensaeque remotæ,
Crateras magnos statuunt, & vina coronant.*

In the Houses of wealthy Men there was commonly a large κελυσ-κίον, Cupboard, furnished with Cups of all Sorts and Sizes, rather for Ostentation than Use. The Cups used by the ancient Greeks were very plain, and agreeable to the rest of their Furniture being usually composed of Wood or Earth. Afterwards, when they began to imitate the Pride and Vanity of the Asiatics, their Cups, were made of Silver, Gold, and other costly Materials, curiously wrought, inlaid with precious Stones, and otherways adorned; but the primitive Cups seem to have been composed of the Horns of Animals, which Persons of Quality tipped with Gold or Silver; these are mentioned by Pindar, Eschylus, Xenophon, and several other Authors; they were also used by some in later Ages, and particularly by Philip the Macedonian; hence, as some are of Opinion, Bacchus had the Surname of Taurus, as worshipped by the Cyziceni, in the Shape of a Bull, and painted with Horns in several other Countries; and some think the Words κραῖναι, Cups, and μίξαι, to mix Wine with Water, are derived from κίραλα, Horns; these and many other Observations concerning this Argument, may be found in Athenæus (a), and Eustatius (b).

The Cups were compassed about with Garlands, and filled up to the Brim. Both these Customs are mentioned in the following Passage of Virgil (c);

Tum pater Anchises magnum cratera corona Induit. —————

And the latter in this Verse of Homer, which occurs in the first Iliad (d), and is repeated in other Places:

Κῦροι δὲ κρήνηρας ποτήρυς ποσειδῶ.

For ποτήρυς, according to the old Scholiast, signifies ἐπλήρυναν ἄχρι τοῦ ὀφθαλμοῦ, ὃ ἐστὶ τὸ ἔχειν, they filled up to the Brim; and εἶπω commonly ἐπλήρυναν τινὰ σημαίνει, signifies a Sort of Fulness; whence they always did εἶπω κρατήρας, when Libations were offered to the Gods, ὅτι οὐδὲν πολλὸν προσφέρομεν πρὸς τοὺς θεοὺς, ἀλλὰ τίμια καὶ ὅλα, τὸ δὲ ἐπλήρυναν τίμια ἐστὶν, because we offer nothing imperfect to the Gods, but only Things whole and intire, and that which is full is intire, saith Athenæus (e) from Aristotle; and as we are informed by the same Author (f), the Cups, ποτήρυες, are crowned with Drink, that is, they are filled above the Brim, so as the Drink riseth in the manner of a Crown, for good Luck's sake.

In the heroical Times, as hath been observed concerning the unequal Portions of Meat, οἱ κῦροι διακονοῦντες, τοῖς μὲν ἱερομέντοις αἰὲν ὀλίγους παρὶ τὸν ποτήριον, τοῖς δ' ἄλλοις ἐξ ἰσῶν δίπας αἰεὶ, the young Men who ministred, always presented full Cups to Men of great Quality, and distributed Wine to the rest by equal Proportion, as we are informed by Athenæus (g). Thus Agamemnon entertains Idomeneus, King of Crete (h);

*Εἵπας γὰρ τ' ἄλλοι παρρηγοῦντες Ἀχαιοὶ
Δαίρειν σῖνυσιν, σὸν δὲ πλεῖον δίπας αἰεὶ
Εἰσὺν ὡσπερ ἱμοὶ, πίνειν ὅτι θυμὸς ἀνώγει.*

Hector in another Place reproacheth Diomedes, when he fled from him, with the Enjoyment of this Honour (i);

This Respect is also said to be paid by the Lycian to Sarpedon and Giancus, Kings of Lycia, in the same Words (a). Another Respect was paid to the most honourable Guests, by drinking first to them; for it was customary for the Master of the Feast to drink to his Guests in order, according to their Quality, as we learn from Plutarch (b). The manner of doing this was, by drinking part of the Cup, and sending the Remainder to the Person whom they nam'd, which they term'd προπίνειν; but this was only the modern way, for anciently they drank μετὰ τὸν σκύφος, the whole Cup, and not a Part of it, as was usual in Athenaeus's Time; to do which, as that Author thinks, ought rather to be termed προεπιπνῖν, than by the old Name προπίνειν (c). The Form of Salutation was various; sometimes they who drank to another, used to say, χαίρει, as in that Example χαίρει Ἀχιλλεῦ, I send you this Honey mingled with Milk; as we learn from the Scholiast upon Pindar (d). Sometimes the Person who sent the Cup saluted his Friend in this Form, προπίνω σοι καλῶς; the other replied, λαμβάνω ἀπὸ σοῦ ἰσθίως; and this being a Testimony of Friendship, to drink in this manner to another was sometimes termed προπίνειν φιλοτησίαν. Thus Ælian explains φιλοτησία to be δεξιώσεις διὰ τῆς φιλίας, a Salutation on the account of Friendship; and φιλοτησίαν προπίνειν to be εἰῆκα τις ἐν αἵματι, ἀπὸ τῆς δοθείσης αὐτῷ φιλίας πινὼν μέρος, τὸ λοιπὸν παρὰ στήν φίλην, ἐν τῇ φιλίᾳ παρὰ στήν φίλην, when any Person at Dinner drinks part of a Cup, and gives the rest to his Friend. The Person who received the Cup was said ἀντιπροπίνειν, or ἀντιπροπίνειν ὅμοια; it being required by the Rules of good Fellowship to drink off whatever remained in the Cup, or if the Cup was drank off, to take another of the same Bigness. An Example whereof we find in Athenaeus (e), where Alexander having begun a very large Vessel to Proteus a Macedonian, he drank it off, and presented his Service to Alexander in another of the same Dimensions.

This Propination was carried about towards the Right-hand, where the superior Quality of some of the Guests did not oblige them to alter that Method; hence it was termed δεξιώσεις, whence δεξιόσυνος in Homer is interpreted προπίνειν δεξιόσυνος. Thus in the first Iliad at an Assembly of the Gods,

————— χρυσίος διαίεσσι
 Διείχετ' ἀλλήλους —————

That is, according to Athenaeus, ἰδεῖν αὐτὸ προπίνοντες ἑαυτοὺς ταῖς δεξιαῖς. The same Explication is given by him upon that Verse of the ninth Iliad, where Ulysses drinks to Achilles:

Πλοῦσά μιν

(a) Iliad. μ'. (b) Sympos. Lib. I. Quest. ii. (c) Lib. V. cap. iv. (d) Nemesius. (e) Lib. X. cap. ix.

Πλησάμεν δ' οἶνοιο δέπας δίδεικ' Ἀχιλλῆα.

That is, saith he, ἰδεῖσθαι, ὅ ἐστι φέρειν αὐτῷ τῇ δεξιᾷ δαδὲς τὸ ποτήριον, he drank to Achilles, delivering the Cup with his Right-hand. The same is observed by Eusebius (a), who is beholden to Athenæus for almost all the Observations which he has on this Argument. But there is express Mention of drinking towards the Right-hand, in the following Passage of Homer (b), where Vulcan fills Wine to the Gods;

— Σίος ἀνέξια πᾶσι
 Δωροχόη —

That is, he filled, as the old Scholiast explains it, ἀπὸ τῶν δεξιῶν μερῶν, beginning from the Right-hand. Another Example of this Custom is produced from Critia's Epigram upon Anacreon:

Ἡεὺς διαπεμπύσῃ ποτόσις ἐς δεξιὴν ὤμων.

And a third, to mention no more, is cited by Athenæus (c) out of the Ἄγροικοι of Anaxandrides. The doing this therefore was commonly termed ἰδεῖσθαι σίην (d); but it was sometimes called ἐκ κύκλου πίνειν, and the Action ἐγκυκλοποσία, because the Cup was conveyed round about the Table, beginning from the uppermost Seat. To which Custom we find the following Allusion in Plautus (e):

— age, puer,
 A summo septenis cyathis committe bos ludas.

Yet the Method of drinking was not the same in all Places. The Chians and Thasians drank out of large Cups towards the Right, the Athenians out of small Cups to the Left; the Thessalian drinks large Cups to whom he pleaseth, without observing any certain Method. At Lacedæmon every Man hath a distinct Cup, which a Servant fills up as soon as any Person has drank, as we are informed by Athenæus (f).

It was also customary to drink to Persons absent. First the Gods were remembered, then their Friends, and at every Name one or more Cups of Wine, unmixed with Water, was drank off. This is termed by Cicero, Græco more bibere (g), to drink after the Greek Manner; which some interpret of drinking grandibus poculis & meracis potionibus, Draughts of unmixed Wine out of large Cups, as Asconius Pedianus (h) observes; whereas it was the Græcus mos, ut Græci dicunt, συμπίνειν κταδιζόμενος, cum merum cyathis libant, salutantes primo Deos, deinde amicos nominatim, Grecian Method to drink Wine

(a) Iliad μ'. p. 557. (b) Iliad α. v. 597. (c) Lib. XI. cap. HI. (d) Conf. Pollux lib. II. cap. IV. (e) Perfa Act. V. Sc. I. (f) Lib. VI. cap. III. (g) Orat. III. in Verram. (h) Comment. in locum Ciceronis.

Wine out of small Cups, saluting first the Gods, and then their Friends by Name; nam toties merum bibebant quoties deos & caros suos nominant, for it was their Custom to drink unmixed Wine as often as they named the Gods or their Friends; they did also ἐπιχύνειν τῇ γῇ, pour forth some of the Wine upon the Earth as often as they mentioned any Person's Name, as hath been observed by the Scholiast upon the following Verses of Theocritus (a):

Ἡδὴ δὲ ποτὶνέσθω, ἰδοὺ ἐπιχύνειν ἀκράτω
 Μῆνιν ἰδὲ λ' ἔκαστον ἴδω μοῖραν ὅττω· σιωπῶ.

Which being the Manner of offering Libations, as hath been elsewhere observed, it seems to have been a Form of Adoration when any of the Gods were named, and of Prayer for their Friends, when they mentioned them; amongst their Friends they most commonly named their Mistresses. Examples of this Custom are very common. Thus in Tibullus:

*Sed bene Messalam sua quisque ad pocula dicat,
 Nomen & absentis singula verba sonent.*

And in Horace (b):

——— dicat Opuntiae
 Frater Megillae, quo beatus
 Vulnere, qua pereat sagitta.

Sometimes the Number of Cups equalled that of the Letters in their Mistresses Name. Thus we find in Marzial (c);

Naevia sex cyathis septem Justina bibatur.

There were also several other Ways of numbering the Cups to be drank off at once; thus three were taken off, because the Graces were of that Number, and nine, according to the Number of the Muses; the former of these Customs is mentioned by Petronius, who relates, that a certain Person excusare cepit moram, quod amica se non dimisset, tribus nisi potionibus e lege exsiccatis, made this Excuse for his Delay, that his Mistress would not dismiss him till he had drank three Cups, as the Law requires; both of them are contained in the following Riddle of Ausonius (d):

*Ter bibe, vel toties ternos: sic mystica lex est,
 Vel tria potanti, vel ter tria multiplicanti,

And

(a) Idyll. xiv. v. 18. (b) Lib. I. Od. xxvii. (c) Lib. I. Epigram lxxii. (d) Crispino ternarii numeri v. 17

And more clearly of this Passage in Horace (a) ;

*Da Lunæ propere novæ,
Da noctis mediæ, da puer, auguris
Murenæ. Tribus, aut novem
Miscentur cyathis pocula commodis,
Qui Musas amat impares.
Ternos ter cyathos attonitus petet
Fates. Tres prohibet supra
Rixarum metuens tangere Gratia, Nudis juncta sororibus.*

The Greeks thus expressed this Custom ἢ τρίς, ἢ τρίς τρίς, either three, or three times three. There was another Saying, which forbade the drinking of four Cups, that being no lawful Number, ἢ τρίς ὦν, ἢ μὴ τίτληται. Yet they did not always observe the Number three, as appears from the following Epigram, which commands to fill ten Cups to Dirodice's Health, as well as nine to Euphrante's (b) ;

*Εγγὺς Διροδικῆς κυάθους δέκα, τῆς δὲ Εὐφραντῆς
Εὐφραντῆς ὡς μὴ ἥτοιο δίδου κύαθον.*

Sometimes they contended who should drink most. Alexander the Macedonian is reported to have drank a Cup containing two Congii, which contained more than one Pottle, tho' less than our Gallon, to Proteas, who commending the King's Ability, pledged him, then called for another Cup of the same Dimensions, and drank it off to him. The King, as the Laws of good Fellowship required, pledged Proteas in the same Cup, but being immediately overcome, fell back upon his Pillow, letting the Cup fall out of his Hands, and by that means was brought into the Disease whereof he shortly after died, as we are informed by Athenæus (c). There is also mention in ancient Authors of Prizes awarded to the Conquerors ; which Custom was ingeniously inverted by Anacharsis the Scythian Philosopher, who being entertained by Periander, one of the seven Sages, and King of Corinth, demanded the Prize for being first drunk, that, as he said, being the End which all aim at in drinking, as Racers press forward toward the Goal. 'Tis reported by Timæus, that Dionysius the Sicilian, at an Entertainment, promised a Crown of Gold to the Person who should first drink a Cup of Congius, and that Xenocrates the Philosopher obtained the Prize. And at the Funeral of Calanus, the Indian Philosopher, there were not only Exercises, and musical Contentions, but also drinking Matches, wherein the Prize which Alexander promised to the first Conqueror, was a Talent ; that to the second, thirty mai ; that to the third, ten mai. One Promachus obtained the first Prize, having drank four Congii of of unmixed Wine; thirty of the Combatants died on the Place, and in a short Time after six more expired in their Tents, as Athenæus (a) and Elian (b) have informed us in the very same Words. When any Person drank off a large Cup αμυρί, that is, αμυρί, αμυρί αμυρί, without Intermission, or taking Breath, the Company used to applaud him in this Form, Ζήσους, long may you live (c).

At Athens there were three publick Officers who attended at Entertainments, ἐπιστάται ἢ παρ' ἴσον αἰνῶσι οἱ συνόσιας, and observed whether every Person drank his Portion; they were called from their Business συνόσιας, and sometimes by a metaphorical Name, ὀφθαλμοί, Eyes, as hath been elsewhere observed (d). They who refused to drink, were in most Places obliged to depart by that celebrated Law of good Fellowship, ἢ πίθι, ἢ ἀπίθι, Drink, or be gone. To which Cicero has this Allusion (e), "To me, saitb be, it seems but reasonable in the Affairs of Life to observe the same Law which the Greeks keep at their Entertainments," Either let them drink, say they, or depart. "Very right, for one should either partake of the Pleasure of drinking and being merry, or leave the Company."

Hence it appears how much the Greeks were addicted to drinking; neither were the Romans more free from that Vice; Seneca himself thought it allowable to drink, even to Drunkenness, to ease the Mind of any great and tormenting Cares. We are told by Plutarch and others, that Cato of Utica sometimes spent whole Nights in drinking. And concerning the elder Cato, as also Corvinus the Stoical Philosopher, to mention no more Examples, we have the following Testimony of Horace (f);

*Descende, Corvino, jubente,
Premere languidiora vinā.
Non ille quanquam Socraticis madet
Sermonibus, te negliget horridus.
Narratur & prisca Catonis
Sæpe mero caluisse virtus.*

Yet others found Fault with the immoderate Use of Wine. Some Lawgivers enacted Laws against it, and others prohibited all Compositions where more Wine was used than what was necessary for Health. Some of the Grecian Sages allowed no more than three Cups, one for Health, a second for Cheerfulness, and a third for Sleep. Thus in the following Verses of Eubulus, which are cited by Athenæus (g);

*Τρεῖς γὰρ μόνως κρατῆρας ἐκχεράνῃ
Τοῖς ἐν φρουρῇ, τὸν μὲν ὑγίαιας ἵνα,
Οὐ πρῶτον ἰκπύσῃ· τὸν δὲ δεύτερον*

Panyasis allowed no more than the second Cup, the first to the Graces, Hours, and Bacchus, the second to Venus and Bacchus; they who proceeded to a third Cup, according to that Author, dedicated it to Lust and Strife. Lycurgus the Spartan Lawgiver, prohibited τὰς ἐκ ἀναγκαίας ποσὶς, αἱ σφάλλῃσι μὴ σφάλλῃσι δὲ γνάμας, καὶ ἑφῆκεν ὁπότῃ διψῶν ἔκαστος πίνει, unnecessary drinking, which debilitates both the Body and Mind, and ordered that no Man should drink for any other Purpose than to satisfy his Thirst, as we learn from Xenophon (a). And to lay on the Spartans a Necessity of keeping themselves within the Bounds of Sobriety, the same Law-giver enacted farther, that all Men should return from Entertainments without a Torch to shew them the Way; whence the Propinations and Methods of drinking which other Nations observed, were unheard of at Sparta; hence the following Passage of Critas (b), wherein he commends the temperate way of living in that City.

Καὶ τό δ' ἴδῃ Σπάρτῃ, μιλίταμάτι κυμῶνι ἐστὶ
 Πίνειν τὴν αἰ' τῇ εὐφορίῳ πῶλῃκα·
 Μὴδ' ἀποδουρῖσθαι προπόσις ὀνομασὶ λόγῳ, αἶμα
 Μὴδ' ἐπὶ διξίλερῳ χεῖρα κυλῶν διδάσκει,
 Καὶ προπόσις ὀρίμῃσι ἐπιδίδῃ, καὶ προκάλλισθαι
 Εὐνομακλήδην ὁ προπῶν ἴδῃται.

At Athens, an Archon convicted of being drunk, was put to Death by the Laws of Solon (c), as hath been elsewhere remarked; and others addicted to Compotations, and Lovers of Company, were punished by the Senate of Areopagus for consuming the Time in Idleness and Profuseness, which they ought rather to have employed in making themselves useful to the Commonwealth, as we are told by Phanodemas and Philochorus in Athenæus. Lastly, to mention only one Example more, the Island of Mitylene abounding with Wine, in order to restrain the Inhabitants from the immoderate Use of it, Pittacus, their Lawgiver, one of the seven Sages, νόμος ἔθηκεν τὴν μεθύσασθαι, καὶ ἀμαρτῇ, δὴ πλὴν εἶναι τὴν ζημίαν, enacted, that whoever committed a Crime being drunk, should suffer double Punishment (d).

There are some particular and solemn Cups mentioned in ancient Authors, which are next to be described; such were

Αγαθὸν Δαίμονον κρατήρ, the Cup of good Genius, by whom was understood Bacchus, the Inventor of Wine, in memory of which Benefit a Cup full of unmixed Wine was carried round the Table, which all the Guests tasted, at the same Time raising an Ejaculation to

(a) Libro de Repub. Lacædem.
 (d) Laertius Pittaco.

(b) In elegiis.

(c) Laertius Solone.

to the God, that he would preserve them from committing any Indecency thro' the immoderate Use of that Liquor; hence ἡμεῖς τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ Persons who drink very little, are Hefychius termed ἀνὰ τὸν ποτήριον. Whether this Cup was brought in before the Table, which they supped was taken away, or afterwards, is not agreed; that it was sometimes brought in before the taking away of the Table, seems probable from what is related of Dionysus the Sicilian, who being entertained in the Temple of Esculapius in Syracuse at a Table of Gold, as soon as he had tasted the Cup of good Genius, commanded the Table to be carried off.

Κρατὴρ Διὸς σωτῆρος, the Cup of Jupiter the Saviour, which was mixed with Water, and dedicated to Jupiter, President of the Air, which is the most humid Element, in Memory of the Invention of tempering Wine with Water.

Κρατὴρ ὕγινης, the Cup of Health, is by some added, which, as also that of Jupiter, is termed μετὰ πλυντρίδος or μετὰ πλυντρίων, as being drank after the washing of their Hands, the Entertainment being ended; and the same Names are for the same Reason by some given to the Cup of good Genius (a).

Κρατὴρ Ἑρμοῦ, the Cup of Mercury, to whom a Libation was offered before they went to bed, when they gave over drinking, as will be related afterwards (b).

Others report the Order of the solemn Cups in a different manner. Suidas has numbered them thus (c): Τρεῖς κρατῆρας ἱεράται ἐν τῷ δείπνῳ. α. Ἑρμῶν, β. χάριτος, γ. Διὸς σωτῆρος, three Cups were brought in at Supper, the first dedicated to Mercury, the second to Charisus, which is a Surname given to Jupiter, from χάρις, Favour and Grace, he being the God by whose Influence Men obtain the Favour and Affection of one another; wherein it is probable Respect was had to the Invention of tempering Wine with Water, as has been before observed; the third to Jupiter the Saviour.

Others mention one Cup of Wine mixed with Water dedicated to Olympian Jupiter, a second to the Heroes, a third and last to Jupiter the Saviour, so called on this Occasion, to intimate, that the third Cup might safely be taken, without any Disorder of Mind, or Body; this Cup was called τρίαινα, either because it was the last, which is one Sense of that Word, or from the Perfection of the Number Three, which having a Beginning, Middle, and End, was reputed the first compleat Number, whence it was commonly applied to divine Things, and particularly to human Souls, which, according to the Platonick Philosophy, consisted of this Number; neither must it be omitted, that the first and last Cups were sacred to Jupiter, who is the Supreme Deity, the Beginning and the End of all Things; the middle Cup to the Heroes, who were thought to be of a middle Nature between Gods and Men. These Customs are alluded to by Pindar in 14 Verses together, and more largely described described by the Greek Scholiast upon that Passage (a). This may be farther observed, that most Authors, however variously describing them in other Respects, do agree in fixing the sacred Cups to the Number Three; hence that Saying in the Myths of Antiphanes, cited by Athenæus (b);

(a) Conf. Attenetus lib. II. cap. ii. lib. XI. cap. xi. lib. XV. cap. v. & xiv. Pollux, Suidas, &c. (b) Vid. Pollux. (c) Vocē κρατῆρος.

Μίχρη γὰρ τριῶν Θεῶν τιμᾶν τοὺς Οἶνους.

The Entertainment being ended, before they went to other Diversions used at such Times, a Libation of Wine, with a Prayer, was offered, and an Hymn sung to the Gods. Thus we are told by Xenophon, that when at the Entertainment by him described (c), “the “ Tables were taken away, and they had offered a Libation, and sung
“ an Hymn to the Gods, a certain Man of Syracuse brought in a skil-
“ ful Minstrel, &c.” Virgil describes the Libation in such a manner, as it should seem to have been poured out of the Cup of good Genius, which is another Argument that this Cup was not filled till the Tables were taken away, which indeed seems to have been the Time of drinking all the three solemn Cups. The Poet’s Words contain a very particular Account of this whole Ceremony (d):

*Postquam prima quies epulis, mensæque remotæ,
Crateras magnos statuunt, & vina coronant.
Fit strepitus tectis, vocemque per ampla volutant
Atria: dependent lychni laquearibus aureis
Incensi, & noctem flammis funalia vincunt.
Hic Regina gravem gemmis auroque poposcit,
Implevitque mero pateram, quam Belus, & omnes
A Belo soliti. Tum sacra silentia tectis:
“ Jupiter (hospitibus nam te dare jura loquuntur)
“ Hunc lætum Tyriisque, diem, Trojaque profectis
“ Esse velis, nostrosque hujus meminisse minores:
“ Adsit lætitiæ Bacchus dator, & bona Juno.
“ Et vos, o Tyrii, cætum celebrate faventes.”
Dixit: & in mensa laticum libavit honorem
Primaque, libato, summo tenus attigit ore.
Tum Bitæ dedit increpitans: ille impiger hausit,
Post alii proceres.——*

This Ceremony being ended, the Company was entertained with other Diversions, with Discourses upon various Arguments, with reading Authors suitable to the Tempers and Inclinations of those who were present, which was also very often done in time of Supper, with Musick of all sorts, with Jugglers, as we find in the Description of Socrates’s Entertainment by Plato and Xenophon, with Mimicks, Buffoons, or whatever beside could be thought of for the exciting of Mirth and Cheerfulness.

(b) Lib. X, cap. x.

(c) Caricivis

(d) Sub finem Æneid. I.

From the most ancient Times, Musick and Dancing were the Diversions at Entertainments. Thus Homer (a), Μολύβη τ' ὀρχήστ' ἐν, τὰ γὰρ τ' ἀναδυσσάτω δαίτῃ.

Phemius and Demodocus, two celebrated Singers, are introduced at Entertainments by the same Poet. And at an Entertainment of the Gods, Apollo was introduced playing upon the Harp, whilst the Muses sing alternately (b). Dancing was also in use among the Gods; hence Apollo has the Title of ὀρχήστ'ς, the Dancer, in Pindar; the same God in Homer's Hymn plays upon his Harp, and at the same time dances;

Καλὰ καὶ ὕψι Βίβας. ———

And, to mention only one Instance more, Jupiter himself is said to dance in the following Verse, which some ascribe to Ennius, others to Arctianus the Corinthian;

Μίσησιν δ' ὀρχήστω παρὰ ἀνδράων Οἰῶντι.

Hence Athenæus concludes, that in those Ages they accounted ὀρχήσιν ἰσοδύναμον καὶ σοφίᾳ, Dancing a thing becoming Persons of Honour and Wisdom (c). At Rome the Custom was quite otherwise, for there, to use the Words of Cicero (d), Nemo fere saltat sobrius, nisi forte insanit; neque in solitudine, neque in convivio honesto. Intempestivi convivii, anæni loci, multarum deliciarum comes est extrema, saltatio. No Man dances unless he is either drunk or mad, either in private, or at a modest and decent Entertainment; Dancing is the very last Effect of Luxury and Wantonness. And Cornelius Nepos (e) having related that Epaminondas well understood the Art of Dancing, of playing upon the Harp and Flute, with other liberal Sciences, adds, "Though, in the Opinion of the Romans, these were trivial things, and not worthy to be mentioned, yet in Greece they were thought very commendable." The same Observation is also made by that Author in his Preface to the Lives of the illustrious Commanders. And these Arts had so great Credit among the Greeks, that, to use some of Cicero's Words (f), "they thought the Arts of singing and playing upon musical Instruments a most considerable Part of Learning; whence 'tis told of Epaminondas, who in my Judgment was the chief of all the Greeks, that he played very well upon the Flute. And some Time before, Themistocles, upon refusing the Harp at an Entertainment, passed for one unlearned and ill-bred. Hence Greece came to flourish with skilful Musicians; all Persons learned the Art of Musick, and they who were ignorant of it, were thought unaccomplished with Learning." Nevertheless wanton and effeminate Dances were thought to be indecent in Men of Wisdom and Character, whence Hippoclitides the Athenian

(a) Odyss. l. v. 152. (b) Iliad. l. v. 603. (c) Lib. I. cap. xix. (d) Orat. pro Muræna. (e) Epaminonda. (f) Tust. Quæst. lib. I.

Athenius, having been designed by Clisibæus, King of Argos, for his Daughter's Husband, and preferred before all the young Noblemen of Greece, was rejected for his light and unbecoming Dances and Gestures, as we are informed by Herodotus (a). The Ionians delighted in wanton Dances and Songs more than the rest of the Greeks, their Manners being more corrupted than those of any other Nation in Greece; their way of singing was very different from the ancient, and their Harmony more loose and wanton, as we are told by Theophrastus (b); and wanton Gestures were proverbially termed Ionici motus, Ionian Motions. Thus Horace reproving the Manners of his own Age (c);

Matur decori gaudet Ionicos

Matura virga

In the primitive Ages, the Entertainments were seldom made but on the Festivals of the Gods, as hath elsewhere been observed, and the Songs were commonly Hymns in Praise of the Gods, the singing of which was accounted a Part of divine Worship; soft and wanton Songs were then unknown; hence Athenæus was of Opinion, that Musick was not brought into Use at Entertainments for the sake of any mean and vulgar Pleasure, but to compose the Passions of the Soul, and to better Mens Manners (d). And from the Descriptions of Entertainments which we find in Homer, it appears, that the Songs used about the Time of the Trojan War, consisted chiefly of Hymns, wherein the Actions of the Gods and Heroes were celebrated; but in later Ages it was so uncommon to sing sacred Hymns at Entertainments, that Aristotle was accused by Demophilus for singing a Paean every Day at his Meals, as an Act of very great Impiety (e).

The most remarkable Songs at Entertainments were those termed σκόλια, with the Accent upon the first Syllable, whereby it is distinguished from the Adjective σκολια, which is accented upon the last Syllable, as we are informed by Eustathius (f); whence in the present Editions of Athenæus, which often call these Songs σκολια, they who will acquiesce in the Judgment of that Critick, must read σκόλια. These Scolia consisted for the most part of short Verses, whence σκόλιον is interpreted μελὸς τι ἐλιγρότερον, a certain Sonnet, consisting of short Verses, and derived from σκολιόν, crooked, difficult, and obscure, which will be ῥαδίον, κατ' ἀντίφρασιν, easy, by the Figure Antiphrasis, as we are told by the Scholiast on Aristophanes (g). Others observe, that scolia cannot be derived from σκολιόν, signifying difficult or obscure, because these Songs were commonly light and cheerful; but there being three sorts of Songs at Entertainments, of which the first was sung by the whole Company joining in a Choir, the second by all the Company in their turns, the third by some few who were best skilled in Musick, this last was termed termed σκόλια, from the Adjective σκολιός, signifying crooked, as being sung out of course, and not by every Man in his own Place, like the two former (a). The Custom was thus: After the Company had all sung in a Chorus, or one after another, a musical Instrument, most commonly a Harp or Lute, was carried round to every Person, that such as understood Musick might entertain the Company. They who would not or could not play upon the Instrument, were presented with a Branch of Laurel or Myrtle, to which, held in their Hands, they sung; this was termed πρὸς δάφνιν, or πρὸς μυρτίην ἀδιν, to sing towards the Laurel or the Myrtle; this Account is given by Hesychius in the following Words, Μυρτίνης κλάδος ἢ δάφνης παρὰ στίχων μυρτίνης ἢ σύνθεσις δίδοται τοῖς κατακλιμένοις ἐκ διαδοχῆς ὡς περ τὸ ἀσαι ἀντὶ τῷ βωβῶντι. Which Passage ought rather to be read thus: Μυρτίνης κλάδος, μυρτίνης κλάδος ἢ δάφνης παρὰ στίχων ἢ σύνθεσις δίδοται, &c. This Branch was also termed αἶσακος, or ἄσακος, παρὰ τὸ ἀσαι τὸ δέξασθαι, because the Person who received it was obliged to sing, as we are informed by Plutarch (b), who more agreeably to the former Account, and, perhaps to the Truth, observes, that the σκόλια were not sung by all who could not play upon the musical Instrument, which is Hesychius's Notion of these Songs, but only by those who were Masters of Musick, whence he derives the Name from σκολιός, difficult to sing, one of these Songs being what could not be done by any but good Proficients in the Art of Musick. He farther adds, that some were of Opinion that the Branch of Myrtle was not delivered to the Company in a direct Order, but carried from Bed to Bed, so as when the first Person in the uppermost Bed had done singing, he delivered it to the first in the second Bed, from whom it was transmitted to the first in the third Bed; that the seconds in each Bed delivered it to one another in the same Manner, and so forward, till it had passed thro' the whole Company; and that on this account the Songs were termed σκόλια, from σκολιός, as it signifies crooked, by reason of the several Windings in carrying about the Branch of Myrtle. These Scolia were chiefly used by the Athenians, neither were they unknown in other Parts of Greece, where we find several celebrated Writers of Scolia to have lived, such were Anacreon of Teos, Alcæus of Lesbos, Praxilla of Sicyon, and others (c). Their Arguments were of various kinds; some of them, to use the Words of Eustathius (d), were σκωπικὰ, τὰ δὲ ἱρὸνικὰ, πολλὰ δὲ καὶ σπουδαῖα, Indicrous and satirical, others amorous, and many of them serious; those upon serious Arguments sometimes contained παραινεῖν τινα καὶ γνῆμιν χρησῖμην εἰς τὸν βίον, a practical Exhortation or Sentence, as we learn from Athenæus (e); sometimes they consisted of the Praises and illustrious Actions of great great Men; this latter sort commonly bore the Person's Names whom they celebrated; thus Ἀρμόδιον μέλῳ the Song of Harmodius, according to Hesychius, was τὸ ἐπὶ Ἀρμόδιον ποιηθὲν σκόλιον ὑπὸ Καλλίστρατου, the Scolium composed by Callistratus upon Harmodius, the famed Patriot, who delivered Athenæ from the Tyranny of Hipparchus the Son of Pisistratus, whom he killed; the first Verse of this Scolium is preserved in Aristophanes (a):

Ἄδω δὲ πρῶτον Ἀρμόδιον, δέξι δὲ σὺ,
Οὐδὲν σῶπτον' αἰὲρ ἴγνεν Ἀθηναῖον.

Ἀδμήτου λόγος was a Scolium upon Admetus King of Theffaly; it is mentioned by the same Author:

There are many Examples of the ancient Scalia preserved in the Greek Authors, of which I shall only set down that one which was composed by Aristotle upon Hermias Tyrant of Atarneæ, which, tho' Demophilus, suborned by one Eurymedon, affirmed to be a sacred Pæan, in order to prove the Philosopher, who daily used this Song, guilty of Impiety, as hath been before related, yet it is from the very Phrase and Diction plainly demonstrated to be nothing more than an ordinary Scolium, by Democritus in Athenæus (b):

From the Songs let us pass to the Sports and Pastimes which followed Entertainments; this was the ancient Method, as we learn from Homer's Description of an Entertainment made by Alcinous, King of Phæacia, wherein the Entertainment being taken away, and the Musick ended, the Guests are invited to wrestle, leap, run Races, and to other bodily Exercises (a):

Κίκλυτε Φαιάκων ἡγήτορες ἢ δὲ μέδοις,
 Ἥδη μὲν δαιτὸς πεκορήμεθα θυμὸν ἔσσης,
 Φόρμιγγός δ', ἢ δαίη στυγερὸς ἐστὶ θαλίῃ.
 Νῦν δ' ἐξέλθωμεν, καὶ αἰθλασθ' αὖτις θώμεν
 Πάλλω, ἔσθ'.

Whence Eustathius observes, ὅτι ἐκ ἐξου τοῖς ἥρωσι ἀναπαύσθαι μὴ βίωσιν κατὰ τοὺς ὕστερον ἐπὶ σίλῳ πείψαι (b), that the Heroes did not rest after Meals, for the better Concoction of their Meat, as became customary in later Ages; on which Pretence the later Greeks laying aside the violent Exercises which were anciently used, diverted themselves with such Sports and Recreations as required less Toil and Labour. The several Sorts of Sports and Games which were practised by the Greeks, have been accurately described by the learned Meursius, and from him again by Bulengerus; they are too numerous to be recounted in this Place; however, the κοτταβία, which was more peculiar to Entertainments, and is on that Account described by Pollux, and takes up several Pages in Athenæus, must not be omitted. This Pastime was first invented in Sicily, whence it was communicated to most other Parts of Greece, especially to Athens, where it obtained very great Repute. The Form was thus: A Piece of Wood being erected, another was placed upon the Top of it, with two Dishes hanging down from each Extremity in the manner of Scales; beneath each Dish was placed a Vessel full of Water, wherein stood a Statue composed for the most part of Brass, and called μάνη. They who did κοτταβίζειν, play at the Cottabus, stood at some distance, holding a Cup of Water or Wine, which they endeavoured to throw into one of the Dishes, that the Dishes by that Weight might be knocked against the Head of the Statue under it. The Person who threw in such a manner as to spill least of his Water, and to knock the Dish with the greatest Force upon the Statue, was Conqueror, and thought to reign in his Mistress's Affections; which was the thing to be learnt by this Pastime. The Sound made by the Projection, was by a Onomatopæia, termed λαταξ, the Wine projected καίαν, and sometimes λαταξ. The Action, as also the Cup out of which the Wine was projected, was called ἀγκύλη, because τῇ δέξι μὲν χεὶρ ἀγκυλῶς, κυκλῶντις αὐτὴν ὡς τῇ περικυκλωσά, σιμυνομένοις ὡς ἐφ' ἐν τῶν καλῶν, they turned round their Right-hand with a sort of Dexterity or Art, upon which they very much valued themselves. Hence we find mention of κοτταβοὶ ἀγκυλῶν in Æschylus. The Vessels were named κότλαβοι, or κότλαβίδες; the Prizes κότλαβία, κότλαβία, and also κότλαβοι, which were Sweetmeats, Kisses, or what else the Company agreed upon. The Play itself, to distinguish it from others of the same Name, was termed κότλαβοι κωταβίος. And so much addicted they were to this Pastime; that they had not only Vessels made for it with the utmost Art and Care, but round Houses built in such a Manner, that the Cottabus being placed exactly in the Middle, the Gamesters might stand at equal Distances on all Sides.

There was another sort of Cottabus, wherein a Vessel was placed full of Water, with empty Phials swimming upon it; into this they projected Wine out of Cups, and he that had the Fortune to drown the greatest Number of the Phials, obtained the Prize.

There was also another sort of Cottabus, wherein they projected Dice.

Lastly, another sort of Cottabus is mentioned, which was a Contention who should sit up awake the longest; the Prize was commonly a Cake made of Honey and Sesame, or Wheat, as we learn from Pollux and the Greek Scholiast (a) upon Aristophanis, and thence termed συναμῆς, or συραμῆς; the latter seems to have been most common, whence it is mentioned alone by Arimidorus, ἡ δὲ ὁ συραμῆς παρὰ τοῖς παλαιοῖς ἐπὶνέμετο; the συραμῆς was anciently the Prize (b), whence that Word became a general Name for any other Prize; thus it is used by Aristophanes (c):

Τῷ γὰρ τυχεύειν ἡμέτερον δὲ συραμῆς.

And in another place (d):

Ἡ δ' ἀνιδόλια παρὰ δὲ, ἡμέτερον δὲ συραμῆς.

And these are the most usual Forms of this Pastime (e).

It was also held necessary to entertain the Guests with suitable Discourses, as well as with Sports and Pastimes. In the Opinion of the ancient Greeks, to use the Words of Athenæus (f), "it was more requisite and becoming to gratify the Company by agreeable Conversation, than with Variety of Dishes." And in the heroical Ages, it was customary to consult about Affairs of the greatest Moment at Entertainments, as hath been observed by Plutarch (g); hence Nestor in Homer (h) persuades Agamemnon to invite the Grecian Commanders to an Entertainment, in order to deliberate concerning the Management of the War:

Δαῖτυ δαῖτα γέμεοι, τίειαι τοι, ὅττοι ἀνικέες'.

It was believed that at such times Mens Invention was more quick, and fruitful, according to the Saying in Aristophanes (a) :

Ὅν γὰρ εὖροις αὖ τι παρακινῶντες ;

where the Greek Scholiast discourseth very largely on this Argument. It was also the Custom in Persia to consult at Entertainments, as we find done at that of Agamemnon, as we learn from Aibnaeus (b) ; and to use the Words of Ammianus Marcellinus (c), the Persians used to deliberate inter epulas de apparatu bellico, & seriis rebus apud eosdem, Graiorum more veterum, concerning warlike Preparations, and other serious Affairs, at Banquets, after the Manner of the ancient Greeks ; nay, if Strabo may be believed (d), they used to consult about Affairs of the highest Importance over their Wine, and what was there determined, was held more firm and inviolable than their sober Resolutions. But Herodotus's Account is more particular, that those Things which they resolved on (ἐν πόλιν) when they were sober, were canvassed over again when they had drank freely ; and the Things which they determined (ἐν θυσιάζουσιν) in their Drink, were examined again in their sober Hours (e). Not unlike this is what Tacitus (f) reports of the Germans, that their Consultations about the Reconciliation of Enemies, the contracting Affinities, Appointment of Princes, and all other Affairs, whether Military or Civil, were for the most part held at Entertainments. The way of the Syssitia in Crete was thus, according to Dofiadus (g) : Supper being ended, they first deliberate about Civil Affairs ; then the Discourse is turned to War, at which time they repeat the Praises of illustrious Persons, ἀποθνήσκοντες τοὺς νῆες εἰς ἀνδραγαθίαν, thereby to excite the young Men to Courage and Bravery. The Lacedæmonian Youth frequented the Syssitia, ὡς διδασκαλίαν σωφροσύνης, as the Schools of Temperance and Prudence, where they heard Discourses of Publick Affairs, and conversed with the most liberal and best accomplished Masters, as we are informed by Plutarch (h). The same Author has elsewhere observed (i), that the Cretan ἀνδρίαι, and the Spartan φιδρίαι, that is, their publick Places of Entertainment, Βουλευτήριον ἀποτρέτων καὶ συνδρίον ἀριστοκρατικῶν ταξὶν ἔχον, were instead of Councils, where the chief Men of the Commonwealth met to consult about the most secret Affairs ; and he adds, ὡς περ οἶμαι, καὶ τὸ ἐνθάδε σπυλαιὸν καὶ θρομβόσιον, that the Prytaneum and Thestomothesium, or publick Halls in this City, that is, in Cheronea, which was Plutarch's native Town, seem to have been put to the same Use. The same Custom seems to have obtained in several other Cities, and particularly at Albani, where the supreme Council supped every Day together gether in the Prytaneum, as hath been elsewhere related; and to use the Words of Eustathius (a), "the chief Magistrates at Rhodes were obliged by an express Law, every Day to entertain the principal Men of that City at a public Table, in order to deliberate what should be done the day following." Hence, as Plutarch was of Opinion (b), Bacchus had the Surname of Εὐβουλός, prudent Counsellor; and the Night was called νύκτιον, as being the Time of wise and prudent Councils: And as the same Author observes, "not unlike these is that Assembly of most wise and excellent Persons in Plato, where things of the greatest Concern are discussed." As they who were concerned in publick Business used to discourse of publick Affairs, so the Conversation of Philosophers was commonly upon some Argument of Philosophy; Graminarians disputed upon critical Subjects, and others conversed in their several Ways, in so much that every Art and Science was cultivated and improved on these Occasions; whence Eustathius had good Reason for his Remark, "that the Greeks did not drink to Excess at their publick Entertainments, but only to keep up their Conversation about serious Affairs." Examples of the Discourse at Entertainments may be found in Plato and Xenophon, also (had they been yet extant) in Aristotle, Speusippus, Epicurus, Hieronymus, Dio the Academick, who wrote Νύκτες ἀποεικόντων γενομένων, Books of Table Discourses, as we are informed by Plutarch (c), who imitates the forementioned Authors in his Treatise upon the same Argument.

Nevertheless it was also customary by Turns to unbend their Minds, and divert them from serious Affairs, by Discourses upon ludicrous Arguments; whence συμπόσιον, the Greek Name of an Entertainment, is defined by Plutarch (d), κωμικὰ σπουδῆς καὶ παιδίας, ἄγαν καὶ παίζων, a Mixture of Seriousness and Mirth, of Discourses and Actions. At the fore-mentioned Syssitia of the Lacedaemonians, where the most grave and important Subjects were treated on, they also παίζον ἰδιῶς, καὶ σπουδαίαν ἀνὰ ἐμπροχίαν, καὶ σπουδαίαν μὴ δυσχεραίνον, used to sport, and to jest, tho' without any of that Scurrility and Reflection which is apt to give Offence (e). And from the Table Discourses of Plutarch and others, it appears to have been the ancient Custom to contrive their Discourses in such a Manner as would both entertain and instruct the Company; nevertheless in the Time of Plutarch they rarely discoursed upon any serious Argument at publick Entertainments; whence a Discourse being begun at Nicofratus's House concerning a Subject which was to be discussed in the popular Assembly at Athens, some of the Company, who had never heard of the ancient Greek Custom, affirmed that it was an Imitation of the Persians (f). And this Question is propounded in the same Author (g), whether it were allowable to discourse Philosophy over their Cups? Some delighted to tell Stories, and to repeat ancient Fables on these Occasions: others chose to read some diverting Discourse, or to hear a Poem repeated, which was very common amongst Men of Letters; but no Diversion was more usual than that of propounding and answering difficult Questions. Such of these as were wholly design'd for Amusement, were termed αἰνιγματά, but those which farther contained something serious and instructive, were called γρίφοι, which Word, as we are inform'd by Pollux (a), in its primary Acceptation, signifies a Fishing-Net; hence to use the Words of Cladius (b), "the Griphi contained philosophical Disquisitions, wherein the Ancients used to give a Specimen of their Learning, inasmuch that this Pastime μνημα γινώσκει τὴν ἐκάστου πρὸς μαθήματα ἐπιστήμην," became a Proof of every Person's Proficiency in Learning." The Person who solved the Question propounded, was honoured with a Reward; he who was not so fortunate, underwent a certain Punishment; the Rewards were στέφανος καὶ εὐφρομία, a Garland, and the Applause of the Company, as we learn from the same Author; the Punishment was, to drink, without taking Breath, a Cup of Wine mixed with Salt, as Athenæus (c) has proved out of the Ganymedes of Antiphanes: the Reward, according to Pollux (d), was a Dish of Meat; the Penalty, a Salt Cup. Others report, that a Cup of Wine was the Prize, which was adjudged to the Person who solved the Riddle; or in case no Man could solve it, to the Person by whom it was propounded (e). The Account of Hesychius differs somewhat from all which have been hitherto mentioned; he tell us, that γρίφος is συμφορικὴ ζήτησις αἰνιγματώδης, καὶ ἀρόσιμος τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι τὸν γρίφον, ἔκπινον τὸ συγχείμιον, ἢ τοι ἀκράτου, ἢ ὕδατος, "an enigmatical Question at Computations, which whoever fails of solving, is obliged to drink that which is set before him, whether it be unmix'd Wine or Water;" and there is no doubt but the Rewards and Penalties were varied, according to the Disposition of the Company. The common Name of these, and all other Questions used on the like Occasions, was κυλίκια ζήτηματα. Theodectes, the Sophist termed them μνημόεκα ζήτηματα, because he had got a Set of them by heart, which was usually done by such as frequented publick Entertainments (f). That the Custom of propounding Riddles was very ancient, and derived from the Eastern Nations into Greece, appears from the Story of Samson in the Book of Judges, who propounded a Riddle to the Philistines at his Nuptial Feast. Neither were these Questions confined to Entertainments, but in the primitive Times were proposed on other Occasions, by those who desired to make proof of one another's Wisdom and Learning. Hence there is mention of the Queen of Sheba's (g) Question to King Solomon, of those which which passed between Hiram and Solomon, and several others, which are too long to be recounted in this Place.

Sometimes the Entertainer made Presents to all his Guests. Lyfimachus of Babylon having entertained Himerus the Tyrant of the Babylonians and Seleucians, with 300 other Guests, gave every Man a Silver Cup of four Pounds Weight (a). When Alexander made his Marriage-Feast at Susa in Persia, he paid the Debts of all his Soldiers out of his own Exchequer, and presented every one of his Guests, who were not fewer than 9000, with golden Cups (b). From these Instances it appears, that Cups were commonly presented on these Occasions. This was done because it was customary for the Company, before they parted, to pour forth Wine, as a Libation to Mercury, who was accounted the President of the Night, and believed to send Sleep and pleasing Dreams, whence he is called by Homer (c) νυκλὸς ὀπωπνήτωρ, and ἡγήτωρ ὀνείρων. To the same God they also sacrificed the Tongues of the Animals which had been killed for the Entertainment. The Reason of which Rite was by some thought to be, that Mercury being the President of Eloquence, was chiefly delighted with that Member; others rather think, that by this Sacrifice he was invoked as a Witness of the Discourse which had passed. Some are of Opinion that by burning the Tongues at the Conclusion of the Meeting, was intimated, that whatever had been there discoursed, should be kept secret. Several other Conjectures concerning the Original of this Custom, which are too long to enumerate, have been made by learned Men (d). It was chiefly observed by the Athenians, Ionians, and Megarensians. And some will have it to have been begun by one of the Kings of Megara, who having the Tongue of a Lion, which had wasted his Country, brought to him by Pelops, sacrificed it at the End of an Entertainment. It was certainly very ancient; whence Apollonius makes it to be observed by the Argonauts (e):

Οὐδ' ἐπιδὼν μέλει τίλλω· κερασσάμενοι δὲ λοιτῶας,
Ἡ δῖμος ἐστὶ τίως ἐπὶ γλώσσησι χρίοισι
Αἰδομένας, ὅταν δὲ διὰ πύφας ἱμνωοῖτο.

And it is practised by the Heroes in Homer:

Γλῶσσαι δ' ἐν πυρὶ βάλλοι, ἀντάμνοι δ' ἐπιδάσκον.

As the ancient Greeks offered Libations chiefly to Mercury, so the Greeks of latter Times made theirs to Jupiter, surnamed Παλιός, Περσεύς (f); yet several other Gods often shared in these Offerings; particularly at Entertainments which followed any solemn Sacrifice, it was customary to remember the God to whom they had before sacrificed; hence at a Sacrifice offered to Neptune in Homer (g), Minerva, who was present under the assumed Form of Mentor, ad-

Ὀφθα Ποσειδάωνι, καὶ ἄλλοις ἀθανάτοισι
Σπείσαςτε καί τοιο μέθυμιθα· τοῖο γὰρ ἔσται.

It was held unlawful to stay too long at Entertainments which followed Sacrifices, as Athenæus hath observed from the following Words of Minerva in the same Poet (a) :

Ἦδη γὰρ φάτο· οἷχ' εὔ' ὑπὸ ζοφῶν, εἰδὶ τοῖσιν
Διὰ δ' αὖτις ἐν δασὶ διασσίμην, ἀλλὰ νύκθαι.

The same Author reports; that till his Time the Company was obliged at some sacrificial Entertainments to depart before Sun-set (b); but at the common Entertainments, where more Liberty was allowed, the Company very often staid till the Morning approached; this was first done by Socrates and his Friends in Plato's Entertainment, and before that; in the heroical Times, by Pentlope's Suitors, and by the Phœnicians in Homer, as also by Dido and Æneas in Virgil. It was also customary to contend who should keep awake longest; and the Prize assigned to the Victor was most commonly a sort of Cakes called πυραυῆς, (c), which Word came hence to be a general Name for the Prize of any Victory, as hath been already observed.

CHAP XXII.

Of the Manner of Entertaining Strangers.

THE keeping of publick Inns for the Reception of Strangers, was assigned by Plato (d) to Foreigners, or the meanest Sort of Citizens, as an illiberal and mean Employment. The ancient Greeks had no publick Inns, which were an Invention of later Ages. In the primitive Times Men lived at home, neither caring to cultivate Friendship with Foreigners, nor to improve themselves and their Estates by Commerce with them. Neither was it safe to travel without a strong Guard, the Sea and Land being both exceedingly infested with Robbers, who not only spoiled all whom they caught of their valuable Goods, but treated their Persons with the utmost Cruelty, as appears from the Stories of Procrustes, Sinas, Sciron, Periphetes, riphetes, and many others. To live upon the Plunder of others was then by many thought a very honourable Way of Subsisting, and they placed a Sort of Glory in overcoming and spoiling their Neighbours, believing the Rules of Humanity and Justice to be observed by none but such as were destitute of Power (a). Hence it seems to have come, that amongst the ancient Greeks, Strangers and Enemies were both signified by the same Name ξένος, all Strangers being then accounted Enemies. And the Persians, who for several Ages waged continual Wars with Greece, are particularly signified by that Word (b). The Lacedæmonians are said to have termed the barbarous Nations, whom the Greeks took for their common Enemies by the name ξένος (c). And amongst the primitive Latins the Name hostis, which was afterwards appropriated to Enemies, signified Strangers (d).

The Sea was freed from Pirates by Minos King of Crete, who with a strong Fleet, for a long Time maintained the Dominion of all the Seas therabouts. The Land-Robbers were destroyed by Hercules, Theseus, and other primitive Heroes; from which Times Xenophon (e) reports, that till his own Age ξένος ἔστιν ἰσὺς ἀδίκῃ, no Man was injurious to Strangers. And in the earliest Ages, all who were not intirely void of Humanity, are said to have entertained all Strangers with Respect; it was then the Custom to supply them with Victuals, and other Necessaries before they enquired their Names, or asked them any other Questions. Thus Telemachus and his Company are treated by Menelaus, who thus bespeaks them upon their Arrival at Sparta (f);

Ξένος δ' ἀπὸ ποταμῶν, καὶ χαλκίδος αὐτὰρ ἰνῶνα
Δίπνους ποσσὶν ἰδὼν, εἰρησέμεν δ' οἷόν τις ἴδῃ Ἀνδρῶν —————

In the same Manner Telemachus is entertained by Nestor (g), Ulysses, by Eumæus (h), and Minerva, under the Form of Mentor, by Telemachus (i). Menelaus entertained Paris the Trojan ten days before he enquired who he was, or whence he came; and it is said to have been ἀρχαῖον ἔθος, an ancient Custom, to forbear such Enquiries till the tenth Day, if the Stranger seem'd willing to stay till that Time, as we learn from Eustathius's Comment on the Passage of Homer, where the King of Lycia is introduced demanding of Bellerophon his recommendatory Letter from Prætus, upon the tenth Day after he had come to his House (k).

In later Ages Cretan Hospitality was very much celebrated. In the συσσίτια, publick Halls, of Crete, there were constantly two Apartments, one was termed κοιμητήριον, wherein Strangers were lodg'd, the other was αἰθρία, being the Place of eating, where all the Cretans supped together; in the uppermost Part of this Room there was a constant Table set apart for Strangers, called τραπέζα ξένων, ξενική, or Διὸς ξενία: Others will have two Tables appointed for this Use (a). And in the Distribution of Victuals, the Strangers were always served before the King, or any of the Cretan Nation; and some of them were permitted to bear very considerable Offices in the State (b).

The rest of the Greeks, and especially the Athenians, were generally courteous to Strangers, except the Lacedæmonians, who are ill spoken of for Want of Hospitality; hence they are described by Pætes (c), as most opposite to the Athenians in their Behaviour to Strangers:

Τοῖς Ἀθηναίοις νόμος ἦν ἐιδοχίους τοὺς ξένους.
 Ὅθεν καὶ ἀπομαζόντο φιλόξενοι τοῖς πᾶσι
 Τοῖς Λακεδαιμονίοις δὲ νόμος, τοὺς ξένους ἀπειλαύνει.

For the same Reason they are called by Aristophanes (d) διωρονέζοντες, and by others ξυλητάι, from their imposing upon Strangers, and driving them away; which is the more to be wonder'd, because Lycurgus chiefly follow'd the Laws and Manners of Crete in the Regulations which he made at Sparta. Nevertheless it is very certain that very good Care was taken of Strangers at Sparta. It was one Part of the Royal Office to make Provision for them, as we learn from Herodotus; and M. Antoninus (e) affirms, that Strangers had a convenient Place assigned in the Shade, whereas the Lacedæmonians themselves lay down without Distinction of Places. But the Opinion of their rough and uncivil Usage of Strangers, seems to have prevailed chiefly on these Accounts:

First, because Foreigners, when they lived upon the Spartan Diet, which was extremely coarse, thought themselves ill entertained; hence a Citizen of Sybaris happening to be treated after the Spartan Fashion, profess'd, that he no longer wonder'd how it came to pass that the Spartans despised Dangers more than other Nations, since they were allowed no Pleasure for which they could desire to live (f).

Secondly, Because Strangers had Admittance into Sparta only on ἐπισημαὶ ἡμέραι, certain Days (a). This was Provision against the promiscuous and frequent Concourse of other Nations, which they avoided as much as possibly they could, either, as Archidamus in Libanius (b) reports, to prevent Foreigners from observing the Faults and Miscarriages of Sparta, which Pericles in Thucydides (c) seems also to reproach them with, or rather fearing that the Manners of their Citizens would be corrupted by a too free and unlimited Conversation with other Nations; which Account of this Appointment is assigned by Xenophon (d), Plutarch (e), and others; for the same Reason, an Edict was once put forth at Rome, whereby Strangers, in urbis prohibiti, were forbidden the Use of that City (f). And the Lacedæmonians were not allowed to travel into foreign Countries, lest they should introduce foreign Customs and Vices into Sparta (g). That these, and the like Orders were not enacted without sufficient Cause, appears from Lyfander and Agésilas, the former of which returning home from Athens, and the latter from Asia, contributed very much to the general Corruption of Mankind, which in a short Time after destroyed the ancient Lacedæmonian Discipline and Way of Living.

To return to the Grecian Hospitality: In order to excite the People to treat Strangers with Kindness and Respect, the ancient Poets and Lawgivers possessed them with an Opinion, that all Strangers were under the peculiar Care of certain Gods, who revenged all the Injuries done to them; in the Number of these Gods were reckoned Minerva, Apollo, Venus, Cæstor, and Pollux, and chiefly Jupiter, who had hence the Surname of Ξένιος, hospitable; which was also sometimes given to other Gods, who were believed to protect Strangers; hence Ulysses endeavours to mitigate Polyphemus with this Reason, that Jupiter was the Patron and Avenger of Strangers (h):

Ἀλλ' αἰδοῖο, φίλιε, θεὸς ἰκέται δὲ ται μῆνιν
Ζεὺς δ' ἐπισημαῖται ἡμετέων τε ξενίας
Ξένιος, ὃς ξένους αἶμα' αἰδοῖοσιν ὀπνδεῖ.

And Eumæus is moved by the same Reason to entertain the same Hero, as himself professeth (i);

Εἴω' ἔ μοι θεμὶς ἐστ', εἴδ' εἰ κελὶον σέθεν ἔλθοι,
Εἴηεν ἀπηνέσσαι· ἄρως γὰρ Διὸς εἰσὶν ἀπαλῆς
Ξῆνοι τε, πτωχοὶ τε.

For the same End the Gods were feigned to travel in the Habit of Strangers. Thus Jupiter speaks of himself in Ovid (a);

Et Deus humana lustro sub imagine terras.

In another Passage of that Author, the same God, accompanied by Mercury, is said to have been denied Reception by 1000 Houses, which for that Offence he turned, with the adjoining Country, into a Lake (b). Lycaon was said to be transformed into a Wolf for his injurious Treatment of Jupiter. And to mention only one Example more, when Antinous in Homer (c) treats Ulysses, who there appears like a Stranger, injuriously, he is put in mind that the Gods used to visit the Cities of Men in the Habit and Form of Strangers.

Ἀρνίῳ ἢ μὲν καλ' ἔσθλας δύνῃσι αἰλήτων,
Οὐλόμεν', εἰ δὲ πῶς τις ἱπυράνῃσι θεὸς ἔστι·
Καὶ τι θεοὶ ξένοισιν ἐκκῆτες ἀλλοδαποῖσι,
Παλοῖσι τελέθουσι, ἐπιστράφουσι πολλὰς,
Ἀνθρώπων ὄρεν τι καὶ ἐνὶ οἴκῳ θορόμεν.

The Rites of entertaining Strangers being the same with those of receiving Guests at Entertainments, which have been described in one of the preceding Chapters, need not be farther explained in this Place; only, this must be observed, that Salt was commonly set before Strangers, before they tasted the Victuals provided for them; whereby was intimated, that as Salt does consist of aqueous and terrene Particles mixed and united together, or as it is a Concrete of several aqueous Parts, so the Stranger and the Person by whom he was entertained, should from the Time of their tasting Salt together, maintain a constant Union of Love and Friendship. Others tell us, that Salt being apt to preserve Flesh from Corruption, signified, that the Friendship which was then begun, should be firm and lasting. And some, to mention no more different Opinions concerning this Matter, think, that a Regard was had to the purifying Quality of Salt, which was commonly used in Lustrations, and that it intimated that Friendship ought to be free from all Design and Artifice, Jealousy and Suspicion (d). It may be the Ground of this Custom was only this, that Salt was constantly used at all Entertainments both of the Gods and Men, whence a particular Sanctity was believed to be lodged in it; it is hence called ἁγία ἅλας, divine Salt, by Homer; and ἱερός ἅλας, holy Salt, by others; and sacrorum appositum, by the placing of Salt on the Table, a Sort of Holiness was thought to be derived to them (e). Indeed all Things which any way conduced to promote Love and Concord, especially in those early Times, when Men lived by Spoil and Rapine, were held held to be sacred; hence the Table was thought to be endowed with an inherent Holiness as well as the Salt. Το ὁμότραπεζον, to have eaten at the same Table, was esteemed an inviolable Obligation to Friendship; and ἀλα κ' τραπέζαν παραβαίνειν, to transgress the Salt and the Table, that is, to break the Laws of Hospitality, and to injure one by whom any Person had been entertained, was accounted one of the blackest Crimes; hence that exaggerating Interrogation of Demosthenes (a), Πῶ αὖτις; πῶ τραπέζαι; ταῦτα γὰρ τραγωδίᾳ παρίεν. "Where is the Salt? Where the hospitable Table? For in deed, in spite of these he has been the Author of these Troubles." And the Crime of Paris in stealing Helena is aggravated by Cassandra (b) upon this Consideration, that he had contemned the Salt, and overturned the hospitable Table:

——— εὖδ' ὅν τὸν ξένους.
 Ζύνδορπον Αἰγαίῳ αὐτῶν παῖον,
 Ἐτλῆς θεῶν ἀλοιτὸς ἐκθέσαι δίκην,
 Λάξας τραπέζαν, κρηνακρύπτας θεῖαν.

And τὸ ὁμότροπον, to converse under the same Roof, was thought to be some sort of Engagement to Love and Courtesy, as we learn from the Comment of Eustathius on that Passage of Homer, where Ajax endeavours to pacify Achilles by this Motive, that they were in the same House, and under the same Roof (c).

——— οὐδ' ἴλαον ἴθις θυμῶν,
 Αἰδεσσαί δ' ἐμείθεον, ὑπαρξίφιοι δέ τοι ἰσμήν.

The Alliance which was contracted by Hospitality was termed σφραξία, it was held very sacred, and οὕτως τῷ συγγενικῷ δεσμῷ κρείττω τῶν παλαιῶν ἦν, was rather more inviolably observed by the Ancients than the Ties of Kindred and Consanguinity. Teucer in Homer endeavoured to deprive Priamus of his Kingdom, tho' he was the Son of Hecione, the Sister of Priamus; whereas Glaucus and Diomedes laid down their Arms in the Heat of Battle, out of a pious Regard to the hospitable Alliance, which had been entered into by their Progenitors Onus and Bellerophon, as Eustathius (d) observes. Hence it appears farther, that the Alliances of Hospitality were derived by Parents to their Children; neither were they contracted only by private and single Men; but by these with whole Families and Cities. Hence Megillus in Plato (e) affirmed himself to be σφραξίτης, allied by Hospitality to the City of Athens. Nicias, the Athenian, is by Plutarch called σφραξίτης τῶν Λακεδαιμονίων, allied by Hospitality to the Lacedaemonians. Cimon the Son of Miltiades, by means of the same Alliance, became instrumental towards establishing a Peace between the Cities of Athens and Sparta (f).

And, to mention only one Instance more, Halyattes, King of Lydia, made a Covenant with the Myrians, ἵφ' ὃ τι ξίειν: ἀλλήλους εἶναι, whereby they were obliged to take one another for Guests and Allies (a).

Hence it was customary for Men thus allied to give one another σύμβολα, certain Tokens, the producing whereof was a Recognition of the Covenant of Hospitality; hence Jason in Euripides (b) promised Medea, when she departed from him, to send the Symbols of Hospitality, which should procure for her a kind Reception in foreign Countries.

Πίσις τε σίμπιον, σύμβολ', οἱ δ' αὖτις σ' εἶδ'.

These were mutual Presents and Gifts, called ξίνα, or δῶρα ξενικά, which κειμήλια τοῖς παλαιοῖς ἀπέδιδον εἰς ἀναμνήσιν παλαιῆς φιλίας τοῖς ἐπιγόνοις were repositied by the antient Greeks amongst their Treasures, to keep up the Memory of their Friendships to succeeding Generations, as we are informed by the Comment of Eustathius on that Passage of Homer (c), where Diomedes recounts to Glaucus the Gifts which their Ancestors Oeneus and Bellerophon had presented to one another:

Ἡ ἔα νύ μοι ξείν' παλῶν ἐσσι παλαιός,
Οἶνός γάρ ποτε δῖος ἀμύμονα Βιλλεροφόνῃν
Ξείνισσ' ἐν μεγάροισιν ἔειπεν ἡματ' ἐρύξας.
Οἱ δὲ καὶ ἀλλήλοισι πόρον ξεινίη καλὰ,
Οἶνός μιν ζωτῆρα δίδω φόνικι φαεινόν,
Βιλλεροφόνῃς δὲ χρύσειον δέπας ἀμφικύπελλον,
Καὶ μιν ἔγών κατέλειπον ἰὼν ἐν δώμασ' ἑμοῖσι.

The latter Greeks used to break ἀσράγχαλος, a Dye, in two Parts one of which the Guests carried away, the other remained with the Entertainer (d). The same Custom was used at Rome, where each Part of the Dye was termed teffera hospitalis; this plainly appears from the following Passage of Plautus (e).

AG. Siquidem Antidimarchi quæris adoptatitium,
Ego sum ipsus, quem tu quæris. POE. Hem! quid ego audio!

AG. Antidamæ gnatum me esse. POE. Si ita est, tefferam

Upon these teffera their Names, or some other Character of Distinction, as also the Image of Jupiter Hospitalis, were commonly engraven; hence the following Verse of the fore-mentioned Comedian (a), wherein the same thing, viz. the teffera, with Jupiter engraved upon it, seems to be expressed by two separate Names, which is a Mode of Speech very common in the Poets.

Deum hospitalem ac tefferam mecum fero.

When they renounced their hospitable Alliance, it was customary to break in pieces the hospitable Teffera; hence tefferam frangere signifies to violate the Laws of Hospitality. Thus it is used by the same Author (b):

*Abi, quære ubi tuo jussurando satis sit subsidii:
Hic apud nos jam, Alcesimarche, confregisti tefferam.*

They who entertained private Strangers were termed ἰδιωπρόξισι· they who received Ambassadors, and other Foreigners who came on any publick Account, were called πρόξισι, but the same Name is often taken for Men who entertained their own private Friends of other Nations. If the Person who received the Foreigners who came under a publick Character, did it voluntarily, he was called ἰθιλωπρόξισι, in which Sense Pitbias is called by Thucydides (c) ἰθιλωπρόξισι Ἀθηναίων, the voluntary Entertainer of the Athenians; but more commonly the πρόξισι were appointed to that Office, either by the Suffrages of the People, which was the usual way of chusing them in popular Governments, or by Designation of the King, which was the Method in monarchical Countries; thus at Sparta the Kings appointed τοὺς αἰθιλωπρόξισι τοῖς ἀνῶν, whomsoever of the Citizens they pleased to be Proxeni, as we learn from Herodotus (d); neither did the Office of Proxeni consist only in providing Lodging and Entertainment for the fore-mentioned Strangers, but it was also their Duty to conduct them to the King, or the popular Assembly, to provide for them convenient Places in the Theatre, and to serve and assist them on all other Occasions; hence καλῶ τινι, ἢ κακῶ αἰτίι, whoever was the Procurer of any Good or Evil to another Person, was termed πρόξισι. The Author of another Man's Ruin and Misery was called πρόξισι ἀπωλείας, or πρόξισι φθορᾶς; the Author of his Safety and Felicity, πρόξισι σωτηρίας, or πρόξισι ὑγιείας (e).

The Office of Proxeni was by the more modern Greeks called εὐποροχῆ, which Word is used in that Sense in one of St. Basil's Epistles. Παροχαὶ are by Hesychius interpreted χαρισματα, Presents

Presents or Gifts: and publick Entertainments are called by Cicero in one of his Epistles to Atticus (a), parochia publicæ; unless instead of these Words we read, as some learned Men have done, parochus publicus; for the Officers were called παροχοί and ἐνορχοί. The ancient Romans called them Copiarii, but Horace (b), useth the Name of parochus, which was current in his Age:

*Proxima Campano ponti quæ villula, testum
Præbuit; & parochi, quæ debent, ligna, salemq̃.*

Where under the Names of Ligna & Sal, Wood and Salt, all necessary Provisions are comprehended; these were supplied in all the Roman Towns to such as came thither upon any publick Affair by the Parochi, who were empowered to levy Taxes on the Inhabitants for this Use (c). In another Place of the same Poet, Parochus signifies the Master of a Feast.

——— vertere pallor
*Tum parochi faciem nil sic metuentis ut acres
Potiores.* ———

Whoever undertook a Journey, first implored the Divine Protection. Before their Departure into any foreign Country, it was customary to salute, and as it were take Leave of the Deities of their own Country, by kissing the Earth. Thus the Trojans in Ovid are said to do (d),

——— dant oscula terræ
Troades, & patriæ fumantia tella relinquunt.

The same Rite of Salutation was commonly practised at their Arrival in any Country. Thus Ulysses in Phæacia (e), ——— πῶς δὲ ἑίδυρον ἄρουραν.

And Cadmus in Bæotia (f);

*Cadmus agit grates peregrinæque oscula terræ
Pigit; & ignotos montes agrosque salutat.*

Hereby they paid Homage, and invoked the Assistance and Protection of ἐπιχθόνιοι θεοί, the Gods who were Patrons of that Country. They worshipped the same Gods during the Time of their Residence at that Place. This was done by the Samaritans, whom-the King of Affyria planted in the Country of Israel, as we learn from the sacred History ; and by Alexander the Great, whilst he staid in, Troas, as the Writers of his Life and Actions report. Lastly, when they returned home they saluted the Gods of their own Country in the same manner, and gave them Thanks for their safe Return. This was done by Ulysses in Homer at his Return to Ithaca (a) ;
