PREFACE.

Having had the satisfaction of introducing to the Public this very pleasing, characteristic, and original Poem, The Farmer's Boy, I think it will be agreeable to preface it with a short Account of the manner in which it came into my hands; and, which will be much more interesting to every Reader, a little History of the Author, which has been communicated to me by his Brother, and which I shall very nearly transcribe as it lies before me.

In November, 1798, I received a MS. which I was requested to read, and to give my opinion of it. It was left for me by Mr. GEORGE BLOOM-FIELD, the Brother of the Author, and he had recommended it with a very modest, sensible, and candid Letter. It had before been shown to some persons in London; whose indifference toward it may probably be explain'd when it is consider'd that it came to their hands under no circumstances of adventitious recommendation. With some, a person must be rich, or titled, or fashionable as a literary name, or at least fashionable in some respect, good or bad, before any thing which he can offer will be thought worthy of notice.

I had been a little accustom'd to the effect of prejudices: and I was determin'd to judge, in the only just and reasonable way, of the Work, by the Work itself.

At first, I confess, seeing it divided into the four Seasons, I had to encounter a prepossession not very advantageous to any writer: that the Author was treading in a path already so admirably trod by Thomson; and might be adding one more to an attempt already so often*, but so injudiciously and unhappily made, of transmuting that noble Poem from Blank Verse into Rhyme;—from its own pure native Gold into an alloyed Metal of incomparably less splendour, permanence, and worth.

I had soon, however, the pleasure of finding myself reliev'd from that apprehension: and of discovering, that, although the delineation of RURAL SCENERY naturally branches itself into these divisions, there was little else except the general

^{*} It is not meant that attempts have been often made to turn the whole Poem into rhyme: but that there have been many imitations of it in rhyme, or parts of it. C.L.

qualities of a musical ear, flowing numbers, Feeling, Piety, poetic Imagery, and Animation, a taste for the picturesque, a true sense of the natural and pathetic, Force of Thought, and Liveliness of Imagination, which were in common between Thomson and this Author. And these are qualities which whoever has the eye, the heart, the awakened and surrounding intellect, and the diviner sense of the Poet, which alone can deserve the name, must possess.

But, with these general Characters of true Poetry, "The Farmer's Boy" has, as I have said, a character of its own. It is discriminated as much as the circumstances and habits, and situation, and ideas consequently associated, which are so widely diverse in the two Authors, could make it different. Simplicity, sweetness, a natural tenderness, that molle atque facetum which HORACE celebrates in the Eclogues of VIRGIL, will be found to belong to it.

I intend some farther and more particular CRITICAL REMARKS on this charming Performance. But I now pass to the Account of the Author himself, as given me by his Brother:—a Man to whom also I was entirely a stranger:—but whose Candour, good Sense, and brotherly Affection, appear in this Narrative; and of the justness of whose Understanding, and the Goodness of his Heart, I have had many Proofs, in consequence of a correspondence with him on different occasions which have since arisen, when this had made me acquainted with him, and interested me in his behalf.

In writing to me, Mr. GEORGE BLOOMFIELD, who is a Shoemaker also, as his Brother, and lives at BURY, thus expresses himself.

"As I spent near five years with the Author, from the time he was fourteen years and a half old till he was turned of twenty*, the most interesting time of life (I mean the time that instruction is acquir'd, if acquir'd at all, I think I am able to give a better account of him than any one can, or than he can of himself: for his Modesty would not let him speak of his Temper, Disposition, or Morals.

"ROBERT was the younger Child of GEORGE BLOOMFIELD, a Taylor, at HONINGTON†. His Father died when he was an infant under a year old*. His Mother, ELIZABETH, the daughter of THOMAS MANBY, was born at Brandon, 1736. She was a schoolmistress, and instructed her own children with the others. He thus learn'd to read as soon as he learn'd to speak.

"Though the Mother was left a Widow with six small Children, yet with the help of Friends she manag'd to give each of them a little schooling.

"ROBERT was accordingly sent to Mr. ROD-WELL†, of Ixworth, to be improved in Writing: but he did not go to that School more than two or three months, nor was ever sent to any other; his Mother again marrying when ROBERT was about seven years old.

"By her second Husband, JOHN GLOVER, she had another family t.

"When Robert was not above eleven years old, the late Mr. W. Austin, of Sapiston*, took him. And though it is customary for Farmers to pay such Boys only 1s. 6d. per week, yet he generously took him into the house. This reliev'd his Mother of any other expense than only of finding him a few things to wear: and this was more than she well knew how to do.

"She wrote therefore," Mr. G. BLOOMFIELD continues, "to me and my brother NAT (then in London), to assist her; mentioning that ROBERT was so small of his age that Mr. AUSTIN said he was not likely to be able to get his living by hard labour."

Mr. G. BLOOMFIELD on this inform'd his Mother that, if she would let him take the Boy with him, he would take him, and teach him to make shoes: and NAT promis'd to clothe him. The Mother, upon this offer, took coach and came to LONDON, to Mr. G. BLOOMFIELD, with the Boy: for she said, she never should have been happy if she had not put him herself into his hands.

"She charg'd me," he adds "as I valued a Mother's Blessing, to watch over him, to set good Examples for him, and never to forget that he had lost his Father." I religiously confine myself to Mr. G. BLOOMFIELD's own words; and think I should wrong all the parties concern'd, if in mentioning this pathetic and successful Admonition, I were to use any other. He came from Mr. AUSTIN's 29 June, 1781*.

Mr. G. BLOOMFIELD then lived at Mr. Simm's No. 7, Pitcher's-court, Bell-alley, Coleman-street.
"It is customary," he continues, "in such houses as are let to poor people in London, to have light Garrets fit for Mechanics to work in. In the Garret, where we had two turn-up Beds, and five of us work'd, I receiv'd little ROBERT.

Shilling per week each, our beds were coarse, and all things far from being clean and snug, like what Robert had left at Sapiston. Robert was our man, to fetch all things to hand. At Noon he fetch'd our Dinners from the Cook's Shop: and any one of our fellow workmen that wanted to have any thing fetch'd in, would send him, and assist in his work and teach him, for a recompense for his trouble.

"Every day when the Boy from the Publichouse came for the pewter pots, and to hear what porter was wanted, he always brought the yesterday's Newspaper*. The reading of the Paper we had been us'd to take by turns; but after Robert came, he mostly read for us,—because his time was of least value.

"He frequently met with words that he was unacquainted with: of this he often complain'd. I one day happen'd at a Book-stall to see a small Dictionary, which had been very ill us'd. I bought it for him for 4d. By the help of this he in a little time could read and comprehend the long and beautiful speeches of BURKE, FOX, or NORTH.

"One Sunday, after a whole day's stroll in the country, we by accident went into a dissenting Meeting-house, in the Old Jewry, where a Gentleman was lecturing. This Man fill'd Robert with astonishment. The House was amazingly crowded with the most genteel people: and though we were forc'd to stand in the aisle, and were much press'd, yet Robert always quicken'd his steps to get into the Town on a Sunday evening soon enough to attend this Lecture.

"The preacher's name was FAWCET*. His language was just such as the Rambler is written in; his Action like a person acting a Tragedy; his Discourse rational, and free from the Cant of Methodism.

"Of him Robert learnt to accent what he call'd hard words; and otherwise improv'd himself; and gain'd the most enlarg'd notions of Providence.

"He went sometimes with me to a Debating Society at Coachmaker's-hall +, but not often; and

[†]These Debating Societies, long gagg'd and fetter'd as they have been, seem now a little reviv'd. They were at least, to say the lowest of them, far better amusements than drunkenness or gambling, boxing, cock-fighting and cock-throwing, badger-hunting or bull-baiting. They were no useless schools to some of our very celebrated speakers at the Bar and in Parliament. And what is of infinitely a few times to Covent-garden Theatre. These are all the opportunities he ever had to learn from Public Speakers. As to Books, he had to wade through two or three Folios: an History of England, British Traveller, and a Geography. But he always read them as a task; or to oblige us who bought them. And as they came in sixpenny numbers weekly, he had about as many hours to read as other boys spend in play.

"I at that time read the London Magazine; and in that work about two sheets were set apart for a Review—Robert seem'd always eager to read this Review. Here he could see what the Literary Men were doing, and learn how to judge of the merits of the Works that came out. And I observ'd that he always looked at the Poet's Corner. And one day he repeated a Song which he compos'd to an old tune. I was much surpris'd that he should make so smooth verses: so I persuaded him to try whether the Editor of our Paper would give them a place in Poet's Corner. He succeeded, and they were printed. And as I forget his other early productions, I shall copy this.

HAIL, MAY! lovely MAY! how replenish'd my pails!

The young Dawn o'erspreads the broad east, streak'd with gold!

My glad heart beats time to the laugh of the vales,
And Colin's voice rings through the wood from the fold.

The wood to the mountain submissively bends,
Whose blue misty summit first glows with the sun!
See! thence a gay train by the wild rill descends
To join the mix'd sports:—Hark! the tumult's begun.

Be cloudless, ye skies!—And be Colin but there;
Not dew-spangled bents on the wide level dale,
Nor morning's first smile can more lovely appear
Than his looks, since my wishes I cannot conceal.

Swift down the mad dance, while blest Health prompts to

We'll court joys to come, and exchange vows of truth;

And haply, when Age cools the transports of Love,

Decry, like good folks, the vain follies of youth*.

called the Sailor's Return: in which he tried to describe the feelings of an honest Tar, who, after a long absence, saw his dear native Village first rising into view. This too obtain'd a place in the Poet's Corner. And as he was so young, (his Brother proceeds) it shews some genius in him, and some industry, to have acquired so much knowledge of the use of words in so little time. Indeed at this time myself and my fellow-workmen in the garret began to get instructions from him*

"About this time there came a Man to lodge at our Lodgings that was troubled with fits. ROBERT was so much hurt to see this poor creature drawn into such frightful forms, and to hear his horrid screams, that I was forced to leave the lodging. We went to Blue Hart-court, Bell-alley. In our new Garret we found a singular character, James Kay, a native of Dundee. He was a middle-aged man, of a good understanding, and yet a furious Calvinist. He had many Books,—and some which he did not value; such as the Seasons, Paradise Lost, and some Novels. These Books he lent to Robert; who spent all his leisure hours in reading the Seasons, which he was now capable of reading. I never heard him give so much praise to any Book as to that.

"I think it was in the year 1784 that the Question came to be decided between the journeymen Shoemakers; whether those who had learn'd without serving an Apprenticeship could follow the Trade*?

"The Man by whom Robert and I were employ'd, Mr. Chamberlayne, of Cheapside, took an active part against the lawful journeymen; and even went so far as to pay off every man that worked for him that had join'd their Clubs. This so exasperated the men, that their acting Committee soon look'd for unlawful men (as they called them) among Chamberlayne's workmen."

They found out little Robert, and threatened to prosecute Chamberlayne for employing him; and to prosecute his Brother, Mr. G. Bloomfield, for

^{*} That is as journeymen: for there was no question that they could not as Masters on their own account. That a person may work as a journeyman without having served an apprenticeship, had already been determined, T. 9. G. III. Beach v. Turner. Burr. Mansf. 2449. A person also who has not served an Apprenticeship may be a partner, contributing money, or advice and attention to the accounts and general concerns of the Trade, provided that he does not actually exercise the trade, and that the acting partner has served. teaching him. Chamberlayne requested of the Brother to go on and bring it to a trial; for that he would defend it; and that neither George nor Robert should be hurt.

In the mean time George was much insulted for having refus'd to join upon this occassion those who called themselves, exclusively, the Lawful Crafts. George, who says he was never fam'd for patience, (it is not indeed so much as might be sometimes wisht, very often the lot of strong and acute minds to possess largely of this virtue), took his pen, and address'd a Letter to one of the most active of their Committee-men (a man of very bad character). In this, after stating that he took Robert at his Mother's request, he made free as well with the private character of this man as with the views of the Committee. "This," says George, "was very foolish: for it made things worse: but I felt too much to refrain."

What connects this episodical circumstance with the character of our Author follows in his Brother's words.

"Robert, naturally fond of Peace, and fearful for my personal safety, begged to be suffered to retire from the storm.

"He came home; and Mr. AUSTIN kindly bade him take his house for his home till he could return to me. And here, with his mind glowing with the fine Descriptions of rural scenery which he found in THOMSON'S SEASONS, he again retrac'd the very fields where first he began to think. Here, free from the smoke*, the noise, the contention of the city, he imbibed that Love of rural Simplicity and rural Innocence, which fitted him, in a great degree to be the writer of such a thing as ! The Farmer's Boy! when the see the to

Here he liv'd two months :... at length, as the dispute in the trade still remain'd undecided, Mr. DUDBRIDGE offer'd to take Robert Apprentice, to secure him, at all events, from any consequences of the Litigation.

He was bound by Mr. Ingram, of Bell-alley, to Mr. John Dudbridge. His Brother George paid five shillings for Robert, by way of form, as a premium. Dudbridge was their Landlord, and a freeman of the city of London. He acted most honourably, and took no advantage of the power which the Indentures gave him. George Bloomfield staid with Robert till he found he could work as expertly as his self.

^{*} But one word is altered in this Description; which reminds one of the

Mr. GEORGE BLOOMFIELD adds, "When I left London he was turn'd of twenty; and much of my happiness since has arisen from a constant correspondence which I have held with him.

"After I left him, he studied Music, and was a good player on the Violin.

"But as my Brother Nat had married a Woolwich woman it happened that Robert took a fancy to MARY-ANNE CHURCH, a comely young woman of that town, whose Father is a boat-builder in the Government yard there. He married 12th Dec. 1790*.

"Soon after he married, Robert told me, in a Letter, that 'he had sold his Fiddle and got a Wife." Like most poor men, he got a wife first, and had to get household stuff afterward. It took him some time to get out of ready-furnished Lodgings. At length, by hard working &c. he acquired a Bed of his own, and hir'd the room up one pair of stairs at 14, Bell-alley, Coleman-street. The Landlord kindly gave him leave to sit and work in the light Garret, two pair of stairs higher.

"In this Garret, amid six or seven other workmen, his active mind employ'd itself in composing 'The Farmer's Boy.'

"In my correspondence I have seen several poetical effusions of his; all of them of a good moral tendency; but which he very likely would think do him little credit: on that account I have not preserv'd them.

"ROBERT is a Ladies' Shoemaker, and works for Mr. Davies, Lombard-Street. He is of a slender make; of about 5 F. 4 I. high; very dark complexion. His Mother, who is a very religious member of the Church of England, took all the pains she could in his infancy to make him pious: and, as his reason expanded, his love of God and Man increas'd with it. I never knew his fellow for Mildness of temper and Goodness of disposition. And since I left him, universally is he prais'd by those who knew him best, for the best of Husbands, an indulgent Father, and quiet Neighbour. Mr. GEORGE BLOOMFIELD concludes this clear, affectionate, and interesting Narrative, by a very kind Address to the Writer of this preface. But pleas'd as I am with the good opinion of a Man like him, I must not take praise to myself for not having neglected or supprest such a Work when it came into my hands. And I have no farther merit than that of seeing what it was impossible for an unprejudic'd Mind not to see, and of doing what it was impossible not to do.

But I join with him cordially in his prayer, "that God, the Giver of thought, may, as mental light spreads, raise up many who will turn a listening ear, and will not despise

"The short and simple annals of the poor."

Very few words will complete what remains to be added, as to the circumstances which led to the Publication of THE FARMER'S BOY.

Struck with the Work, but not less struck with the remark, which is become a proverb, of the Roman Satirist, that "it is not easy* for those to emerge to notice whose circumstances obscure the observation of their Merits," I sent to it a Friend †, ^{*} Haud facile emergunt quorum virtutibus obstat Res angusta domi. Juv.

[†] This friend is THOMAS HILL, esq.

whom I knew to be above these prejudices: and who has deserv'd, and is deserving, well of the Public, in many other instances, by his attention to Literature and the elegant Arts. He immediately express'd a high satisfaction in it; and communicated it to the Publishers. They adopted it upon terms honourable to themselves, and satisfactory to the Author, and to me in his behalf.

My part has been this, and it has been a very pleasing one: to revise the MS., making occasionally corrections with respect to Orthography, and sometimes in the grammatical construction. The corrections, in point of grammar, reduce themselves almost wholly to a circumstance of provincial usage, which even well-educated persons in Suffolk and Norfolk do not wholly avoid: and which may be said, as to general custom, to have become in these counties almost an establish'd Dialect:-that of adopting the plural for the singular termination of verbs, so as to exclude the s. But not a line is added or substantially alter'd through the whole poem. I have requested the MS. to be preserv'd for the satisfaction of those who may wish to be satisfied on this head.*

The Proofs have gone through my hands. It has been printed slowly: because most carefully: as it deserv'd to be printed.

^{*} See the end of the Preface.

I have no doubt of its Reception with the Public: I have none of its going down to Posterity with honour: which is not always the Fate of productions which are popular in their day.

Thus much I know:—that the Author, with a spirit amiable at all times, and which would have been rever'd by Antiquity, seem'd far less interested concerning any Fame or Advantage he may derive from it to himself, than in the pleasure of giving a printed Copy of it, as a tribute of duty and affection, to his MOTHER*; in whose pleasure, should it succeed, his filial heart plac'd the gratification of which it was most desirous. It is much to be a POET, such as he will be found:—It is more to be such a MAN.

^{*} Mr. George Broomfield says in a Letter to me,—
"The late Mr. Austin's wife was a Manby (my Mother's Sister). And it may seem strange that, in the Farmer's Boy, Giles no where calls him Uncle, but Master.—
The treatment that my Brother Robert experienc'd from Mr. Austin did not differ in any respect from the treatment that all the Servant Boys experienc'd who liv'd with him. Mr. Austin was father of fourteen Children by my Aunt (he never had any other Wife). He left a decent provision for the five Children that surviv'd him: so that it could not be expected he should have any thing to give to Temper is of more importance to the Felicity of ourselves and others than Genius. When the Spirit of Christianity declares "blessed are "the meek," every heart which considers what meekness is, feels the truth of that blessedness. It may smooth the way, and prevent impediments, which a different temper raises to temporal felicity: it certainly assures that Heaven which is within: and is a pledge and anticipation of the Heaven hereafter.

It is pleasing to think on a remark of Mr. GEO. BLOOMFIELD concerning his Brother when he first went to LONDON. "I have him in my "mind's eye a little Boy; not bigger than Boys "generally are at twelve years old. When I met "him and his mother at the Inn, he strutted be-poor Relations. And I don't see a possibility of making a difference between Giles and the Boys that were not related to Mr. Austin: for he treated all his Servants exactly as he did his Sons. They all work'd hard; all liv'd well. The Duke had not a better Man Tenant to him than the late Mr. Austin. I saw numbers of the Husbandmen in tears when he was buried. He was beloved by all who knew him. But I imagine that Robert thought that when he was speaking of Benevolence that was universal, he had no occasion to mention the accidental circumstance of his being related to the Good Man of whom he sung."

"fore us, dress'd just as he came from keeping "Sheep, Hogs, &c.—his shoes fill'd full of stumps "in the heels. He looking about him, slipt up— his nails were unused to a flat pavement. I "remember viewing him as he scamper'd up:— how small he was. Little thought, that little, fatherless Boy, would be one day known and seteem'd by the most learned, the most respectived, the wisest, and the best men of the King-"dom."

And those who have shown themselves the FRIENDS of the FARMER'S BOY must excuse me if I mention some of them whose liberal and zealous attention had excited those feelings in the heart of his Brother, and have fill'd his with sentiments of thankfulness. The Duke of GRAFTON has every way shown himself attentive to the Genius, the Worth, of Mr. BLOOMFIELD. He has essentially added to his comforts. His R. H. the Duke of YORK, by Capt. BUNBURY, has made a liberal present, as an acknowledgment of the pleasure receiv'd from the perusal of his excellent Poem. This attention of his R. H. liberal and amiable in itself, has been the cause of like liberality in others. It suggested to Dr. DRAKE, and other Gentlemen at HADLEIGH, the idea of a local subscription of a Guinea each in that town and Neighbourhood. This has been carried into effect by himself and eleven other Friends: with a large proportion of those who have thus stood forth the Friends of Genius and Worth I have the pleasure of being acquainted.

Sir CHARLES BUNBURY has warmly express'd his approbation of the Poem; as not only excellent for a Farmer's Boy, but such as would do honour to any person, whatever his education: and he also has much contributed to make it early and advantageously known. Mr. GREEN of IPSWICH has spoken of it as a charming composition: reflecting in a very natural and vivid manner, the series of interesting images which touch'd the sensibility of a young, an artless, but a most intelligent observer of Nature; placed in a situation highly favourable to observation, though in fact not often productive of it. That Originality in such a subject is invaluable; and that this Poem appears to him (I know few men so qualified to judge on such a point) throughout original. And literary characters, who have earnt to themselves much of true Praise by their own Productions, Mr. Dyer, and Dr. DRAKE of HADLEIGH, have given full and appropriate encomium to the excellence, both in Plan and Execution, of this admirable RURAL POEM. My friend Mr. BLACK of Woodbridge has notic'd it in a very pleasing and characteristic Letter address'd to me in verse. I believe I shall not be just to the FARMER'S BOY if I omit to notice that the Taste and Genius of Mrs. OPIE, born to do honour to every department of the Fine Arts, have given her a high sentiment of its merits*.

I rejoice in that Fame which is just to living Merit, and wait not for the tomb to present the tardy and then unvalued Wreath: I rejoice in the sense express'd not only of his Genius, but of his pure, benevolent, amiable Virtue, his affectionate Veneration to the DEITY, and his good Will to all.—Obscurity and Adversity have not broken; Fame and Prosperity, I am persuaded, will not corrupt him.

I cannot deny myself the satisfaction of mentioning that, after an absence of twelve years, the Author of the Farmer's Boy has revisited his native Plains. That he has seen his Mother; in health

^{*} It is highly pleasing to add, that the Poetic Wreath has been given to the Farmer's Boy by the Muse of Lichtelle.

[†] Written in 1800. C.L.

^{} That Mother is since dead. And the author of the FARMER'S Boy had the consolation of soothing her last moments: after having greatly contributed to the comfort and spirits: seen her with a joy to both which even his own most expressive and pathetic language would imperfectly describe....Seen other near, affectionate, and belov'd Relatives: review'd, with the feelings of a truly poetic and benevolent Mind, the haunts of his youth; the Woods and Vales, the Cot, the Field, and the Tree, which even recollected after so many years, and at a distance, had awaken'd in such a manner the energies of his Heart and Intellect, and had inspir'd strains which will never cease to be repeated with pleasure and admiration.

I would add, that, I believe, few Works of such Nature and Extent ever were so little altered from the first as this has been: and that few indeed, have been such as to require and properly admit of so little alteration. Some few Corrections, however, and Improvements have progressively been made. They are very few: but those who possess the First Edition, and have sufficient critiof her life; and particularly of those years of it which most wanted comfort. Her Epitaph, written by the Rev. Ro-BERT FELLOWES, is in Honington Church-yard. It has been printed in BLOOMFIELD Illustrated.

cal Taste to prompt them to the Enquiry, may readily trace them; and it was proper to notice this becoming attention of the Author to his Work.

I understand there is a Prose Translation of The Farmer's Boy into French*; and it is translating into Italian. The first Book was early translated into Latin. This is one instance of its immediate celebrity. Another will be that in the latter end of the year 1802, when the seventh Edition was printed, 26,000 Copies had been printed in two years and three quarters. To which two large Impressions have since been added.

^{*} I have seen this Translation, entitled LE VALET DU FERMIER; accompanied with neat Copper-plate Copies of the Wooden Engravings. It is handsomely printed: and the Translation is spirited, easy, not unmusical in the cadence of its periods; and, except some passages which are omitted as intractable, generally correct. Proper names, as usual, suffer strange metamorphose; Rodwell into Rodwen: Bunbury into Bomberg: and, by being too literal, "O dear," in the pathetic exclamation of the poor Girl, becomes "O Cher," instead of "helas."—In the Memoirs of Dr. Priestley similar Instances as to proper Names will be found quoted by Mr. Cooper, as proofs of the manner in which they are disguised in the foreign Journals. Artor-jonge for the Editor of the Annals of Agriculture: and what less admits of a guess, Tadkos for Taylor.

When the FIRST EDITION of this POEM appear'd in March 1800, I intimated a design of accompanying it with some CRITICAL REMARKS.

The FIRST of these will naturally be that which relates to the manner and circumstances of the Composition. There is such a proof in it of Genius disregarding difficulty, and of powers of retention and arrangement, that it will be believ'd I could not overpass it: and that it would have been stated at the first if it had been then in my power to state it*.

I now pass to part of what has been fully and excellently said by Dr. Drake of Hadleigh,

^{*}The communication here introduced in the fermer edition was by Mr. Swan; and relates to the retentive memory of the Author in composing, without committing to paper, the whole of his "Winter," and great part of his "Antumn;" a fact which is perhaps still worthy of being recorded; at the same time it is the Author's express wish that the reader may, in this edition, be referred to a note in the 2d vol. page 128, of Poems by the late Hector Macneil, where it will at least be found that the boast belongs not wholly to himself. He will find that "the beautiful ballad of 'Will and Jean,'—'The Waes o' War,'—'The Links o' Forth',—and 'The Scottish Muse,' were all compos'd by memory, previously to the commitment of a single line to paper."—The same circumstance applies to Crebillon; the French Georgic Poet. C. L.

while investigating the merits of this astonishing Rural Poem.

In a letter from HADLEIGH* Dr. DRAKE has given me this distinct and vivid representation of his general idea of the poem.

"I have read THE FARMER'S BOY with a "mixture of astonishment and delight. There is "a pathetic simplicity in his sentiments and de-"scriptions that does honour to his head and "heart.

"His copies from Nature are truly original and faithful, and are touched with the hand of a Master.....His versification occasionally displays an energy and harmony which might decorate even the pages of a DARWIN.

"The general characteristics of his Style, how"ever, are sweetness and ease. In short, I have "no hesitation in declaring, that I think it, as a
"Rural and descriptive Poem, superior to any
"production since the days of Thomson.

"It wants no reference to its Author's unedu"cated poverty to render its excellence the more
"striking; they are such as would confer durable
"Fame on the first and most polish'd Poet in the "Kingdom.

March 9, 1800.

"I shall now take the liberty of extracting part of the CRITIQUE which Dr. DRAKE agreeably to his intimation to me, has made of the FARMER'S BOY in his LITERARY HOURS*.

"From the pleasing duty of describing such a "character" (meaning the personal character of Mr. Bloomfield) "let us now turn our attention to the species of composition of which his "Poem is so perfect a specimen. It has been observed in my sixteenth number that Pastoral "Poetry in this country, with very few exceptions, has exhibited a tame and servile adherence to classical imagery and costume; at the same time totally overlooking that profusion of picturesque beauty, and that originality of manner and peculiarity of employment, which our climate and our rustics every where present.

"ner and peculiarity of employment, which our climate and our rustics every where present.

"A few Authors were mention'd in that Essay as having judiciously deviated from the custom- ary plan: to these may now be added the name of Bloomfield; the Farmer's Boy, though not assuming the form of an Eclogue, being peculiarly and exclusively, throughout, a pastoral Composition; not like the Poem of Thomson, taking a wide excursion through all the phæno-

^{*} Vol. II. Ess. xxxix, p. 444.

"mena of the Seasons, but nearly limited to the rural occupation and business of the fields, the dairy, and the farm-yard.

"As with these employments, however, the "vicissitudes of the Year are immediately and "necessarily connected, Mr. Bloomfield has, with "propriety, divided his Poem into Four Books, "affixing to those Books the Titles of the Seasons.

"Such indeed are the merits of this Work, that "in true pastoral imagery and simplicity I do not "think any production can be put in competition "with it since the days of Theocritus*.

"To that charming simplicity which particu"larizes the Grecian, are added the individuality;
"fidelity, and boldness of description, which
"render Thomson so interesting to the lovers of "Nature.

"GESNER possesses the most engaging senti-"ment, and the most refin'd simplicity of manners; "but he wants that rustic wildness and naïveté in

^{*} I have heard that the opinion of no less a Judge than Dr. WATSON, Bishop of LLANDAFF, is by no means short of the encomium implied in this comparison, high and ample as it is. C. L.

"delineation characteristic of the Sicilian, and of "the composition before us.

"WARNER and DRAYTON have much to re-"commend them: but they are very unequal;

"commend them: but they are very unequal;
and are devoid of the sweet and pensive morality

" which pervades almost every page of the Farmer's

"Boy; nor can they establish any pretensions to

"that fecundity in painting the economy of rural

" life, which this Poem, drawn from actual ex" perience, so richly displays.

"It is astonishing indeed what various and striking circumstances, peculiar to the occupa-

"tion of the British Farmer, and which are

"adapted to all the purposes of the pastoral

"Muse, had escaped our Poets, previous to the publication of Mr. Bloomfield's Work.

"Those who are partial to the Country;—and where is the man of Genius who feels not a de-

"light approaching to ecstasy from the contem-

"plation of its scenery, and the happiness which

"its cultivation diffuses?—those who have paid

"attention to the process of husbandry, and who view its occurrences with interest; who are at "the same time alive to all the minutiæ of the "animal and vegetable creation; who mark

' How Nature paints her colours, how the Bee

* How Nature paints her colours, how the Bee

6 Sits on the bloom, extracting liquid sweet,'

"will derive from the study of this Poem a gratification the most permanent and pure*."

Dr. DRAKE after this well accounts for the poetic singularity that the Poetry of Thomson should have past through a mind so enthusiastically enamor'd of it, without impairing the originality of its character, when exercis'd on a subject so much leading to Imitation. This he explains, and justly, by the vivid Impressions on a most sensible and powerful Imagination in his earliest youth, anterior to the study of any Poet.

Dr. Drake expresses his astonishment at the Versification and Diction of this Poem. And says most truly, "I am well aware that smooth and flowing lines are of easy purchase, and the property of almost every poetaster of the day: but the versification of Mr. Bloomfield is of another character; it displays beauties of the most positive kind, and those witcheries of expression which are only to be acquir'd by the united efforts of Genius and Study.

"The general characteristics of his versification are facility and sweetness; that ease which is, in fact, the result of unremitted labour, and one of the most valuable acquisitions of litterature. It displays occasionally likewise a vigour and a brilliancy of polish that might endure comparison with the high-wrought texture of the Muse of DARWIN. From the nature of his subject, however, this splendid mode of decoration could be us'd but with a sparing hand: and it is not one of his least merits that his diction and harmony should so admirably correspond with the scene which he has chosen."

^{*} In the seventh Edition I inserted Dr. DRAKE'S ANALYSIS of the FARMER'S BOY. And it is not agreeably to my wish or judgment that it has been since omitted. C. L.

"To excel," Dr. Drake continues, "in rural IMAGERY, it is necessary that the Poet should diligently study Nature for himself; and not peruse her, as is but too common, 'through the spectacles of Books*.' He should trace her in all her windings, in her deepest recesses, in all her varied forms. It was thus that Lucretius and Virgil, that Thomson and Cowper were enabled to unfold their scenery with such distinctness and truth; and on this plan, while wandering through his native fields, attentive to 'each rural sight, each rural sound,' has Mr. Bloomfield built his charming Poem."

^{*} The happy illustration of DRYDEN in his admirable character of SHAKESPEARE. C. L.

" It is a Work which proves how inexhaustible the features of the World we inhabit how from objects which the mass of Mankind is daily accustom'd to pass with indifference and neglect, GENIUS can still produce pictures the most fascinating, and of the most interesting tendency. For it is not to imagery alone, though such as here depicted might ensure the meed of Fame. that the Farmer's Boy will owe its value with us and with posterity. A Morality the most pathetic and pure, the feelings of a heart alive to all the tenderest duties of Humanity and Religion, consecrate its glowing Landscapes, and shed an interest over them, a spirit of devotion, that calm and rational delight which the Goodness and Greatness of the Creator ought ever to inspire."

Dr. Drake confirms, by copious and very judicious Extracts from the various parts of the Poem, as they offer themselves to critical selection, in accompanying the Farmer's Boy through the Circle of his year, the Judgment which he has form'd with so much ability, taste, and feeling, and has so agreeably express'd, of the Merits of our English Georgic. And he speaks in his third and last Essay on it thus:

" From the review we have now taken of THE FARMER'S BOY, it will be evident, I think, that, owing to its harmony and sweetness of versification, its benevolence of sentiment, and originality of imagery, it is entitled to rank very high in the class of descriptive and pastorul Poetry."

He concludes with a highly animated and feeling anticipation of that public attention to the Poem and its Author, merited in every view, and which already has manifested itself in such extent.

In the Critical Remarks I intended I find myself so much agreeing in sentiment with Dr. Drake that I shall attempt little more than merely to offer some few observations. One of these relates to the coincidences of thought and manner in the Farmer's Boy with other writings. These, as would previously be expected from what has been said, are extremely few indeed. And almost all that are particularly of moment in appreciating the poetical excellences of the Work are most truly coincidences, and cannot be otherwise consider'd.

For the first of these which I shall mention I am indebted to WILLIAM SMITH, esq. of BURY, who had largely his share of Public Admiration, when he sustain'd, for many years, with great skill and judgment, and great hatural advantages, almost every character of our Drama which had been eminently favour'd by either Muse; and who now enjoys retirement with honour and merited esteem.

He mention'd to me in conversation, and since by Letter, a passage very closely resembling one in the IDYLLIA of AUSONIUS. It is this in Spring,

Like the torn flower the fair assemblage fly. Ah, fallen Rose! sad emblem of their doom; Frail as thyself, they perish while they bloom!

I. v. 333-40.

The passage to which Mr. Smith referr'd me is this. (It is not in my Edition of Ausonius; but he sent me a Copy.)

- "Conquerimur, Natura, brevis quod Gratia florum est;
 "Ostentata oculis illico dona rapis.
- " Quam longa una dies ætas tam longa rosarum,
 - " Quas pubescentes juncta senecta premit."

ID. xiv.

I am favor'd with a Translation made by Mr. Smith in his very early days. And hope that as a brother Etonian he allows me to quote it.

Nature, we grieve that thou giv'st flowers so gay, Then snatchest Gifts thou shew'st so swift away. A Day's a Rose's Life,—How quickly meet, Sweet Flower, thy Blossom and thy Winding Sheet! In the Procession of Spring there is a fine series of allegorical Images.

Advancing Spring profusely spreads abroad Flowers of all hues, with sweetest fragrance stor'd: Where'er she treads Love gladdens every plain; Delight on tip-toe bears her lucid train; Sweet Hope with conscious brow before her flies, Anticipating wealth from summer skies.

I. v. 271-6.

Compare now this of LUCRETIUS.

It VER, et VENUS: et Veneris prænuntius ante Pinnatus graditur Zephyrus vestigia propter. FLORA quibus Mater præspergens, ante viaï Cuncta coloribus egregise et odoribus opplet.

De NAT. RES. L. V. v. 736—9. Ed. Brindley, 1749.

There Spring, and Venus; and her Harbinger, Near to her moves the winged Zephyrus: For whom maternal Flora strews the way With Flowers of every charming scent and hue.

Or in the very words of BLOOMFIELD,

Flowers of all hues; and without thorn the Rose. P. L.

Hope here occupies the place of Zephyrus. Delight on tip-toe supporting the lucid train of Spring,—the image and attitude so full of life and beauty,—is our Poet's own. And what Poet, what Painter, would not have been proud of it?

In another passage,

The splendid raiment of the Spring peeps forth; Her universal Green.....

This of Lucretius will be found to have much similarde:

Camposque per omnes Florida fulserunt viridanti prata colore.

782, 3.

O'er every plain
The flowery meadows beam with verdant huc.

And that exceedingly fine verse,

All Nature feels her renovating sway,

calls to mind the ever-memorable exordium of the Roman Poet.

If we admire the imitative force of this line in the epic majesty of Virgilian numbers,

Quadrupedante putrem sonitu qualit ungula campum:

Shakes the resounding hoof the trembling plain:

shall we not admire the imitative harmony of this; attun'd certainly with not less felicity to the sweetness of the pastoral reed,

The green turf trembling as they bound along.

The pause on the first syllable of the verse has been an admir'd beauty in Homer and Milton.

Νυξ' εκ δ' εσπασεν εγχος.

Il.

And over them triumphant Death his dart
Shook, but delay'd to strike.

P. L.

We have this beauty,—coinciding with the best examples, though underiv'd from them,—in a cadence of most pathetic softness.

Joys which the gay companions of her prime Sip, as they drift along the stream of Time.

And this:

The beautiful Description of the Swine and Pigs feeding on fallen Acorns reminds me of a most picturesque one, not now at hand, in GILPIN on Forest Scenery.

The turn of this thought,

III. v. 241, &c.

I believe is from Scripture. Prov. iii. 28.—And so I think certainly is that,

Till Folly's wages, wounds and thorns, they reap.

But the most remarkable of all, and where I had no expectation of finding a similitude, is in near the close of the Winter.

Far yet above these wafted clouds are seen (In a remoter sky, still more serene)
Others, detach'd in ranges through the air,
Spotless as snow, and countless as they're fair;
Scatter'd immensely wide from east to west,
The beauteous 'semblance of a Flock at rest.

IV. 255-60.

In HERCULES the LION-SLAYER there is this passage:

From feed returning to their pens and fold.

And these the Kine, in multitudes, succeed;
One on the other rising to the eye:
As watery Clouds which in the Heavens are seen,
By Notus driven or Thracian Boreas:
And, numberless, along the sky they glide,
Nor cease; so many doth the powerful Blast
Speed foremost, and so many, fleece on fleece,
Successive rise, reflecting varied light.
So still the herds of Kine successive drew
A far-extended line: and fill'd the plain,
And all the pathways, with the coming troop.

Fewer Coincidences are perhaps not to be found in any poem of the same length: and Imitations, properly so called, it may be doubted whether there be any. It is pleasant to see these Coincidences with CLASSIC POETS of other days and Nations in a CLASSIC of our own, of the best School:

MR. PARK'S STATEMENT

VERBAL VARIATIONS,

Between the MS. Copy and Printed Poem of "THE FARMER'S BOY."

As it is not improbable that some of those invidious spirits who reluctantly allow to any popular writer the credit of having produced his own work, may hereafter report, to the disadvantage of Mr. Bloomfield, that his learned friend and Editor was materially concerned in composing "The Farmer's Boy," I have taken the most effectual means in my power, to counteract the injurious tendency of such report, by collating the printed poem with the author's original manuscript *, which had passed through the hands of Mr. Capel Lofft; and I transmit all the verbal variations which have been observed in the course of such collation, that they may be perpetuated on the pages of a miscellany which has been uniformly zealous in extending the well-earned reputation of our rural bard. I must also premise, what affects not the merits of the composition in any degree, that Capital Letters and Italic Characters were supplied by Mr. Lofft, as were various defects in orthography and punctuation, which arose from the Author's want of education, and of leisure fitly to supply that loss.

^{*} Now in the possession of Mr. Hill.

It will be seen, from this minute statement, that the Editor's emendations were very inconsiderable, though most of them appear highly judicious, and many of them absolutely necessary, for the purpose of removing certain grammatical inaccuracies, which may be considered as mere freckles on the natural complexion of our Farmer's Boy.

I have been indulged with a similar opportunity of inspecting the MS. copy of those admirable "Tales, Ballads, and Songs," recently published by the same interesting poet; but the Editor's hints for correction proved too few and too unimportant to authorise any public specification of them.

Mr. Editor, yours, &c.

ON REVISITING THE PLACE OF MY NATIVITY.

THOUGH Winter's frowns had dampt the beaming eye,
Through Twelve successive Summers heav'd the sigh,
The unaccomplish'd wish was still the same;
Till May in new and sudden glories came!
My heart was rous'd; and Fancy on the wing,
Thus heard the language of enchanting Spring:....

- ' Come to thy native groves and fruitful fields!
- ' Thou know'st the fragrance that the wild-flow'r yields;
- ' Inhale the Breeze that bends the purple bud,
- ' And plays along the Margin of the Wood.
- ' I've cloth'd them all; the very Woods where thou
- ' In infancy learn'd'st praise from every bough.
- 'Would'st thou behold again the vernal day?
- ' My reign is short ;....this instant come away:
- ' Ere Philomel shall silent meet the morn;

Remoter bliss within his bosom glow'd!

- ' She hails the green, but not the rip'ning corn.
- ' Come, ere the pastures lose their yellow flow'rs:
- 'Come now; with heart as jocund as the hours.'
 Who could resist the call?....that Giles had done,
 Nor heard the Birds, nor seen the rising Sun;
 Had not Benevolence, with cheering ray,
 And Greatness stoopt, indulgent to display
 Praise which does surely not to Giles belong,
 But to the objects that inspir'd his song.
 Immediate pleasure from those praises flow'd;

xlviii

Now tasted all:....for I have heard and seen The long-remember'd voice, the church, the green :.... And oft by Friendship's gentle hand been led Where many a hospitable board was spread. These would I name....but each, and all can feel What the full heart would willingly reveal: Nor needs be told; that at each season's birth, Still the enamell'd, or the scorching Earth Gave, as each morn or weary night would come, Ideal sweetness to my distant home: Ideal now no more :....for, to my view Spring's promise rose, how admirably true! The early chorns of the cheerful Grove Gave point to Gratitude, and fire to Love. O Memory; shield me from the World's poor strife; And give those scenes thine everlasting life!

I.

O COME, blest Spirit! whatsoe'er thou art,
Thou kindling warmth that hover'st round my heart,
Sweet inmate, hail! thou source of sterling joy,
That poverty itself cannot destroy,
Be thou my Muse; and faithful still to me,
Retrace the paths of wild obscurity.
No deeds of arms my humble lines rehearse;
No Alpine wonders thunder through my verse,

The roaring cataract, the snow-topt hill,
Inspiring awe, till breath itself stands still:
Nature's sublimer scenes ne'er charm'd mine eyes,
Nor Science led me through the boundless skies;
From meaner objects far my raptures flow:
O point these raptures! bid my bosom glow!
And lead my soul to ecstasies of praise
For all the blessings of my infant days!
Bear me through regions where gay Fancy dwells;
But mould to Truth's fair form what Memory tells.

Live, trifling incidents, and grace my song,
That to the humblest menial belong:
To him whose drudgery unheeded goes,
His joys unreckon'd as his cares or woes;
Though joys and cares in every path are sown,
And youthful minds have feelings of their own,
Quick springing sorrows, transient as the dew,
Delights from trifles, trifles ever new.

v. 27. Euston in Suffolk, and its neighbourhood, the Scenc.

'Twas thus with Giles: meek, fatherless, and poor:
Labour his portion, but he felt no more;
No stripes, no tyranny his steps pursu'd;
His life was constant, cheerful servitude:
Strange to the world, he wore a bashful look,
The fields his study, Nature was his book;
And, as revolving Seasons chang'd the scene
From heat to cold, tempestuous to serene,
Though every change still varied his employ,
Yet each new duty brought its share of joy.

Where noble GRAFTON spreads his rich domains, Round Euston's water'd vale, and sloping plains, Where woods and groves in solemn grandeur rise, Where the kite brooding unmolested flies; The woodcock and the painted pheasant race, And sculking Foxes, destin'd for the chace; There Giles, untaught and unrepining, stray'd Through every copse, and grove, and winding glade;

Benevolent character of Giles's Master....Spring begins. v. 45.

There his first thoughts to Nature's charms inclin'd,
That stamps devotion on th' inquiring mind,
A little farm his generous Master till'd,
Who with peculiar grace his station fill'd;
By deeds of hospitality endear'd,
Serv'd from affection, for his worth rever'd;
A happy offspring blest his plenteous board,
His fields were fruitful, and his barns well stor'd,
And fourscore ewes he fed; a sturdy team;
And lowing kine that graz'd beside the stream:
Unceasing industry he kept in view;
And never lack'd a job for Giles to do.

Fled now the sullen murmurs of the North,
The splendid raiment of the Spring peeps forth;
Her universal green, and the clear sky,
Delight still more and more the gazing eye.
Wide o'er the fields, in rising moisture strong,
Shoots up the simple flower, or creeps along

The mellow'd soil; imbibing fairer hues,

Or sweets from frequent showers and evening dews; That summon from their sheds the slumb'ring plows, While health impregnates every breeze that blows. No wheels support the diving, pointed, share: No groaning ox is doom'd to labour there: No helpmates teach the docile steed his road: (Alike unknown the plow-boy and the goad;) But, unassisted through each toilsome day, With smiling brow the plowman cleaves his way, Draws his fresh parallels, and, wid'ning still, Treads slow the heavy dale, or climbs the hill: Strong on the wing his busy followers play, Where writhing earth-worms meet th' unwelcome day; Till all is chang'd, and hill and level down Assume a livery of sober brown; Again disturb'd, when Giles with wearying strides From ridge to ridge the ponderous harrow guides:

Harrowing Giles and his Horses rest.

v. 81.

His heels deep sinking every step he goes. Till dirt adhesive loads his clouted shoes. Welcome green headland! firm beneath his feet: Welcome the friendly bank's refreshing seat: There, warm with toil, his panting horses browse Their shelt'ring canopy of pendent boughs; Till rest, delicious, chase each transient pain, And new-born vigour swell in every vein. Hour after hour, and day to day succeeds; Till every clod and deep-drawn furrow spreads To crumbling mould; a level surface clear, And strew'd with corn to crown the rising year; And o'er the whole Giles once transverse again, In earth's moist bosom buries up the grain. The work is done; no more to man is given; The grateful Farmer trusts the rest to Heaven, Yet oft with anxious heart he looks around, And marks the first green blade that breaks the ground: v. 99.

Rooks.

In fancy sees his trembling oats uprun, His tufted barley yellow with the sun: Sees clouds propitious shed their timely store, And all his harvest gather'd round his door. But still unsafe the big swoln grain below. A fav'rite morsel with the Rook and Crow: From field to field the flock increasing goes; To level crops most formidable foes: Their danger well the wary plunderers know. And place a watch on some conspicuous bough; Yet oft the sculking gunner by surprise Will scatter death amongst them as they rise. These, hung in triumph round the spacious field. At best will but a short-liv'd terror yield: Nor guards of property: (not penal law, But harmless riflemen of rags and straw;) Familiariz'd to these, they boldly rove, Nor heed such centinels that never move.

Wood Scenery.

v. 117.

Let then your birds lie prostrate on the earth,
In dying posture, and with wings stretcht forth;
Shift them at eve or morn from place to place,
And Death shall terrify the pilfering race;
In the mid air, while circling round and round,
They call their lifeless comrades from the ground;
With quick'ning wing, and notes of loud alarm,
Warn the whole flock to shun th' impending harm.

This task had Giles, in fields remote from home:
Oft has he wish'd the rosy morn to come:
Yet never fam'd was he nor foremost found
To break the seal of sleep; his sleep was sound:
But when at day-break summon'd from his bed,
Light as the lark that carol'd o'er his head.—
His sandy way, deep-worn by hasty showers,
O'er-arch'd with oaks that form'd fantastic bow'rs,
Waving aloft their tow'ring branches proud,
In borrow'd tinges from the eastern cloud,

v. 135. Various Birds....Their song and appearance....Pheasant.

Gave inspiration, pure as ever flow'd, And genuine transport in his bosom glow'd. His own shrill matin join'd the various notes Of Nature's music, from a thousand throats: The Blackbird strove with emulation sweet. And Echo answer'd from her close retreat: . The sporting White-throat on some twig's end borne. Pour'd hymns to freedom and the rising morn: Stopt in her song perchance the starting Thrush Shook a white shower from the black-thorn bush, Where dew-drops thick as early blossoms hung, And trembled as the minstrel sweetly sung. Across his path, in either grove to hide, The timid Rabbit scouted by his side; Or Pheasant boldly stalk'd along the road, Whose gold and purple tints alternate glow'd, But groves no farther fenc'd the devious way; A wide-extended heath before him lay.

Where on the grass the stagnant shower had run,
And shone a mirror to the rising sun,
Thus doubly seen to light a distant wood,
To give new life to each expanding bud;
And chase away the dewy foot-marks found,
Where prowling Reynard trod his nightly round;
To shun whose thefts 'twas Giles's evening care,
His feather'd victims to suspend in air,
High on the bough that nodded o'er his head,
And thus each morn to strew the field with dead.

His simple errand done, he homeward hies;
Another instantly its place supplies.

The clatt'ring Dairy-Maid immers'd in steam,
Singing and scrubbing midst her milk and cream,
Bawls out, "Go fetch the Cows!"....he hears no more;
For pigs, and ducks, and turkies, throng the door,
And sitting hens, for constant war prepar'd;
A concert strange to that which late he heard.

v. 171.

Order of the Cows returning.

Straight to the meadow then he whistling goes: With well-known halloo calls his lazy Cows: Down the rich pasture heedlessly they graze. Or hear the summon with an idle gaze; For well they know the cow-yard yields no more Its tempting fragrance, nor its wintry store. Reluctance marks their steps, sedate and slow; The right of conquest all the law they know; The strong press on, the weak by turns succeed, And one superior always takes the lead; Is ever foremost, wheresoe'er they stray: Allow'd precedence, undisputed sway*: With jealous pride her station is maintain'd, For many a broil that post of honour gain'd. At home, the yard affords a grateful scene; For Spring makes e'en a miry cow-yard clean. Thence from its chalky bed behold convey'd The rich manure that drenching Winter made,

^{*} I have seen a similar remark in a description of Switzerland. L.

Milking.

v. 180

Which pil'd near home, grows green with many a weed. A promis'd nutriment for Autumn's seed. Forth comes the Maid, and like the morning smiles: The Mistress too, and follow'd close by Giles. A friendly tripod forms their humble seat, With pails bright scour'd, and delicately sweet. Where shadowing elms obstruct the morning ray, Begins the work, begins the simple lay: The full-charg'd udder yields its willing streams. While Mary sings some lover's amorous dreams: And crouching Giles beneath a neighbouring tree Tugs o'er his pail and chants with equal glee: Whose hat with tatter'd brim, of nap so bare, From the cow's side purloins a coat of hair, A mottled ensign of his harmless trade. An unambitious, peaceable cockade. As unambitious too that cheerful aid The Mistress yields beside her rosy Maid;

v. 207.

The Dairy.

With joys she views her plenteous reeking store, And bears a brimmer to the dairy door; Her Cows dismiss'd, the luscious mead to roam, Till eve again recal them loaded home. And now the DAIRY claims her choisest care, And half her household find employment there: # Slow rolls the churn, its load of clogging cream At once foregoes its quality and name: From knotty particles first floating wide Congealing butter's dash'd from side to side; Streams of new milk through flowing coolers stray. And snow-white curd abounds, and wholesome whey. Due north th' unglazed windows, cold and clear, For warming sunbeams are unwelcome here. Brisk goes the work beneath each busy hand, And Giles must trudge, whoever gives command; A Gibeonite, that serves them all by turns: He drains the pump, from him the faggot burns;

I fee or board a during walk.

Suffolk Cheese.

V. 225

From him the noisy Hogs demand their food;
While at his heels run many a chirping brood,
Or down his path in expectation stand,
With equal claims upon his strewing hand.
Thus wastes the morn, till each with pleasure sees
The bustle o'er, and press'd the new-made cheese.

Unrivall'd stands thy country CHEESE, O Giles!

Whose very name alone engenders smiles;

Whose fame abroad by every tongue is spoke,

The well-known butt of many a flinty joke,

That pass like current coin the nation through;

And, ah! experience proves the satire true.

Provision's grave, thou ever-craving mart,

Dependant, huge Metropolis! where Art

Her poring thousands stows in breathless rooms,

Midst pois'nous smokes and steams, and rattling looms;

Where Grandeur revels in unbounded stores;

Restraint, a slighted stranger at their doors!

v. 943.

Suffolk Cheese.

Thou, like a whirlpool, drain'st the countries round. Till London market, London price, resound Through every town, round every passing load, And dairy produce throngs the eastern road: Delicious veal, and butter, every hour, From Essex lowlands, and the banks of Stour: And further far, where numerous herds repose. From Orwell's brink, from Waveny, or Ouse, Hence Suffolk dairy-wives run mad for cream, And leave their milk with nothing but its name; Its name derision and reproach pursue, And strangers tell of "three times skimm'd sky-blue." To cheese converted, what can be its boast? What, but the common virtues of a post! If drought o'ertake it faster than the knife, Most fair it bids for stubborn length of life, And, like the oaken shelf whereon 'tis laid, Mocks the weak efforts of the bending blade;

The procession of Spring.

v. 261

Or in the hog-trough rests in perfect spite,
Too big to swallow, and too hard to bite.
Inglorious victory! Ye Cheshire meads,
Or Severn's flow'ry dales, where Plenty treads,
Was your rich milk to suffer wrongs like these,
Farewell your pride! farewell renowned cheese!
The skimmer dread, whose ravages alone
Thus turn the mead's sweet nectar into stone.

NEGLECTED now the early daisy lies;
Nor thou, pale primrose, bloom'st the only prize:
Advancing Spring profusely spreads abroad
Flow'rs of all hues, with sweetest fragrance stor'd;
Where'er she treads, Love gladdens every plain,
Delight on tiptoe bears her lucid train;
Sweet Hope with conscious brow before her flies,
Anticipating wealth from Summer skies;
All Nature feels her renovating sway;
The sheep-fed pasture, and the meadow gay;

v. 279.

Sheep Range of Pasture.

And trees, and shrubs, no longer budding seen,
Display the new-grown branch of lighter green;
On airy downs the idling Shepherd lies,
And sees to-morrow in the marbled skies.
Here then, my soul, thy darling theme pursue,
For every day was Giles a SHEPHERD too.

Small was his charge: no wilds had they to roam;
But bright enclosures circling round their home.
No yellow-blossom'd furze, nor stubborn thorn,
The heath's rough produce, had their fleeces torn:
Yet ever roving, ever seeking thee,
Enchanting spirit, dear Variety!
O happy tenants, prisoners of a day!
Releas'd to ease, to pleasure, and to play;
Indulg'd through every field by turns to range,
And taste them all in one continual change.
For though luxuriant their grassy food,
Sheep long confin'd but loathe the present good;

Lambs at play...Pasture Scenery...Hedges in bloom.

v. 297.

Bleating around the homeward gate they meet,
And starve, and pine, with plenty at their feet.
Loos'd from the winding lane, a joyful throng,
See, o'er yon pasture, how they pour along!
Giles round their boundaries takes his usual stroll;
Sees every pass secur'd, and fences whole;
High fences, proud to charm the gazing eye,
Where many a nestling first assays to fly;
Where blows the woodbine, faintly streak'd with red,
And rests on every bough its tender head;
Round the young ash its twining branches meet,
Or crown the hawthorn with its odours sweet.

Say, ye that know, ye who have felt and seen, Spring's morning smiles, and soul enliv'ning green; Say, did you give the thrilling transport way? Did your eye brighten, when young Lambs at play, Leap'd o'er your path with animated pride, Or gaz'd in merry clusters by your side?

v. 315.

Lambs at play.

Ye who can smile, to wisdom no disgrace,
At the arch meaning of a Kitten's face;
If spotless innocence, and infant mirth,
Excites to praise, or gives reflection birth;
In shades like these pursue your fav'rite joy,
Midst Nature's revels, sports that never cloy.

A few begin a short but vigorous race,
And Indolence abash'd soon flies the place;
Thus challeng'd forth, see thither one by one,
From every side assembling playmates run;
A thousand wily antics mark their stay,
A starting croud, impatient of delay.
Like the fond dove from fearful prison freed,
Each seems to say, "Come, let us try our speed;"
Away they scour, impetuous, ardent, strong,
The green turf trembling as they bound along;
Adown the slope, then up the hillock climb,
Where every molehill is a bed of thyme;

Contrast of their near approaching fate.

v. 333.

There panting stop; yet scarcely can refrain; A bird, a leaf, will set them off again: Or, if a gale with strength unusual blow, Scatt'ring the wild-briar roses into snow, Their little limbs increasing efforts try, Like the torn flower the fair assemblage fly. Ah, fallen rose! sad emblem of their doom; Frail as thyself, they perish while they bloom! Though unoffending Innocence may plead, Though frantic Ewes may mourn the savage deed, Their shepherd comes, a messenger of blood, And drives them bleating from their sports and food. Care loads his brow, and pity wrings his heart, For lo, the murd'ring BUTCHER, with his cart, Demands the firstlings of his flock to die, And makes a sport of life and liberty! . His gay companions Giles beholds no more; Clos'd are their eyes, their fleeces drench'd in gore;

v. 351.

Conclusion of the first Book.

Nor can Compassion, with her softest notes, Withhold the knife that plunges through their throats.

Down, indignation! hence, ideas foul!

Away the shocking image from my soul!

Let kindlier visitants attend my way,

Beneath approaching Summer's fervid ray;

Nor thankless glooms obtrude, nor cares annoy,

Whilst the sweet theme is universal joy.

SUMMER.

II.

THE FARMER'S life displays in every part,
A moral lesson to the sensual heart.
Though in the lap of Plenty, thoughtful still,
He looks beyond the present good or ill;
Nor estimates alone one blessing's worth,
From changeful seasons, or capricious earth,
But views the future with the present hours,
And looks for failures as he looks for showers;
For casual as for certain want prepares,
And round his yard the reeking haystack rears;

Or clover, blossom'd lovely to the sight, His team's rich store through many a wintry night. What though abundance round his dwelling spreads, Though ever moist his self-improving meads Supply his dairy with a copious flood, And seem to promise unexhausted food; That promise fails, when buried deep in snow. And vegetative juices cease to flow. For this, his plough turns up the destin'd lands, Whence stormy Winter draws its full demands; For this, the seed minutely small, he sows, Whence, sound and sweet, the hardy turnip grows. But how unlike to April's closing days! High climbs the Sun, and darts his powerful rays; Whitens the fresh-drawn mould, and pierces through The cumb'rous clods that tumble round the plough. O'er heaven's bright azure hence with joyful eyes The Farmer sees dark clouds assembling rise;

v. 29.

Showers softening the soil.

Borne o'er his fields a heavy torrent falls, And strikes the earth in hasty driving squalls. " Right welcome down, ye precious drops," he cries; But soon, too soon, the partial blessing flies. " Boy, bring the harrows, try how deep the rain " Has forc'd its way." He comes, but comes in vain; Dry dust beneath the bubbling surface lurks, And mocks his pains the more, the more he works: Still, midst huge clods, he plunges on forlorn, That laugh his harrows and the shower to scorn. E'en thus the living clod, the stubborn fool, Resist the stormy lectures of the school, Till tried with gentler means, the dunce to please, His head imbibes right reason by degrees: As when from eve till morning's wakeful hour, Light, constant rain evinces secret pow'r, And ere the day resumes its wonted smiles.

Presents a cheerful, easy task for Giles.

Down with a touch the mellow'd soil is laid,

And you tall crop next claims his timely aid;

Thither well pleas'd he hies, assur'd to find

Wild, trackless haunts, and objects to his mind.

Shot up from broad rank blades that droop below, The nodding WHEAT-EAR forms a graceful bow, With milky kernels starting full, weigh'd down, Ere yet the sun hath ting'd its head with brown; There thousands in a flock, for ever gay, Loud chirping sparrows welcome on the day, And from the mazes of the leafy thorn Drop one by one upon the bending corn. Giles with a pole assails their close retreats. And round the grass grown dewy border beats, On either side completely overspread, Here branches bend, there corn o'ertops his head. Green covert, hail! for through the varying year No hours so sweet, no scene to him so dear.

v. 65. Scenery....full of life, and inspiring contemplation.

Here Wisdom's placid eye delighted sees His frequent intervals of lonely ease, And with one ray his infant soul inspires, Just kindling there her never-dying fires. Whence solitude derives peculiar charms, And heaven-directed thought his bosom warms. Just where the parting bough's light shadows play, Scarce in the shade, nor in the scorching day, Stretch'd on the turf he lies, a peopled bed, Where swarming insects creep around his head. The small dust-colour'd beetle climbs with pain, O'er the smooth plantain-leaf, a spacious plain! Thence higher still, by countless steps convey'd, He gains the summit of a shiv'ring blade, And flirts his filmy wings, and looks around, Exulting in his distance from the ground. The tender speckled moth here dancing seen, The vaulting grasshopper of glossy green,

And all prolific Summer's sporting train. Their little lives by various pow'rs sustain. But what can unassisted vision do? What, but recoil where most it would pursue; His patient gaze but finish with a sigh, When Music waking speaks the sky-lark nigh! Just starting from the corn, he cheerly sings. And trusts with conscious pride his downy wings: Still louder breathes, and in the face of day Mounts up, and calls on Giles to mark his way. Close to his eyes his hat he instant bends, And forms a friendly telescope, that lends Just aid enough to dull the glaring light, And place the wand'ring bird before his sight, That oft beneath a light cloud sweeps along, Lost for a while, yet pours the varied song: The eye still follows, and the cloud moves by, Again he stretches up the clear blue sky;

v. 101. Sleep and Tranquillity of Giles Corn ripening.

His form, his motion, undistinguish'd quite,
Save when he wheels direct from shade to light:
E'en then the songster a mere speck became,
Gliding like fancy's bubbles in a dream,
The gazer sees; but yielding to repose,
Unwittingly his jaded eyelids close.
Delicious sleep! From sleep who could forbear,
With no more guilt than Giles, and no more care?
Peace o'er his slumbers waves her guardian wing,
Nor Conscience once disturbs him with a sting;
He wakes refresh'd from every trivial pain,
And takes his pole, and brushes round again.

Its dark-green hue, its sicklier tints all fail,
And ripening Harvest rustles in the gale.
A glorious sight, if glory dwells below,
Where Heav'n's munificence makes all the show
O'er every field and golden prospect found,
That glads the Plowman's Sunday morning's round,

When on some eminence he takes his stand,

To judge the smiling produce of the land.

Here Vanity slinks back, her head to hide:

What is there here to flatter human pride?

The tow'ring fabric, or the dome's loud roar,

And stedfast columns, may astonish more,

Where the charm'd gazer long delighted stays,

Yet trac'd but to the architect the praise;

Whilst here, the veriest clown that treads the sod,

Without one scruple gives the praise to GoD;

And twofold joys possess his raptur'd mind,

From gratitude and admiration join'd.

Here, midst the boldest triumphs of her worth, NATURE herself invites the REAPERS forth;

Dares the keen sickle from its twelvemonth's rest,
And gives that ardour which in every breast

From infancy to age alike appears,

When the first sheaf its plumy top uprears.

w. 137.

Reapers....Gleaning.

No rake takes here what Heaven to all bestows...?
Children of want, for you the bounty flows!
And every cottage from the plenteous store for the Receives a burden nightly at its door.

Hark! where the sweeping scythe now rips along: Each sturdy Mower, emulous and strong, Whose writhing form meridian heat defies, Bends o'er his work, and every sinew tries: Prostrates the waving treasure at his feet. But spares the rising clover, short and sweet. Come, HEALTH! come, Jollity! light-footed, come; Here hold your revels, and make this your home. Each heart awaits and hails you as its own; Each moisten'd brow, that scorns to wear a frown: Th' unpeopled dwelling mourns its tenants stray'd; E'en the domestic laughing dairy-maid Hies to the FIELD, the general toil to share. Meanwhile the FARMER quits his elbow-chair,

The joy of the Farmer.

v. 155.

His cool brick floor, his pitcher, and his ease, And braves the sultry beams, and gladly sees His gates thrown open, and his team abroad, The ready group attendant on his word, To turn the swarth, the quiv'ring load to rear, Or ply the busy rake, the land to clear. Summer's light garb itself now cumb'rous grown. Each his thin doublet in the shade throws down; Where oft the Mastiff sculks with half-shut eye, And rouses at the stranger passing by; Whilst unrestrain'd the social converse flows. And every breast Love's powerful impulse knows. And rival wits with more than rustic grace Confess the presence of a pretty face.

For, lo! encircled there, the lovely MAID,

In youth's own bloom and native smiles array'd;

Her hat awry, divested of her gown,

Her creaking stays of leather, stout and brown;...

v. 173.

The Country Maid.

Invidious barrier! Why art thou so high,

When the slight covering of her neck slips by,

There half revealing to the eager sight

Her full, ripe bosom, exquisitely white?

In many a local tale of harmless mirth,

And many a jest of momentary birth,

She bears a part, and as she stops to speak,

Strokes back the ringlets from her glowing cheek.

Now noon gone by, and four declining hours, and the weary limbs relax their boasted powers;
Thirst rages strong, the fainting spirits fail,
And ask the sov'reign cordial, home-brew'd ale:
Beneath some shelt'ring heap of yellow corn
Rests the hoop'd keg, and friendly cooling horn,
That mocks alike the goblet's brittle frame,
Its costlier potions, and its nobler name.
To Mary first the brimming draught is given,
By toil made welcome as the dews of heaven,

And never lip that press'd its homely edge

Had kinder blessings, or a heartier pledge.

Of wholesome viands here a banquet smiles,

A common cheer for all;...e'en humble Giles,

Who joys his trivial services to yield

Amidst the fragrance of the open field;

Oft doom'd in suffocating heat to bear

The cobweb'd barn's impure and dusty air;

To ride in mirky state the panting steed,

Destin'd aloft th' unloaded grain to tread,

Where, in his path as heaps on heaps are thrown,

He rears, and plunges the loose mountain down:

Laborious task! with what delight when done

Both horse and rider greet th' unclouded sun!

Yet by th' unclouded sun are hourly bred The bold assailants that surround thine head, Poor, patient Ball! and with insulting wing Roar in thine ears, and dart the piercing sting: v. 200.

Docking of horses condemned.

In thy behalf the crest-way'd boughs avail More than thy short-clipt, remnant of a tail, A moving mockery, a useless name, A living proof of cruelty and shame. Shame to the man, whatever fame he bore, Who took from thee what man can ne'er restore, Thy weapon of defence, thy chiefest good, When swarming flies contending suck thy blood. Nor thine alone the suff'ring, thine the care, The fretful Ewe bemoans an equal share; Tormented into sores, her head she hides, Or angry sweeps them from her new-shorn sides. Penn'd in the yard, e'en now at closing day Unruly Cows with mark'd impatience stay, And vainly striving to escape their foes, The pail kick down; a piteous current flows. Is't not enough that plagues like these molest? Must still another foe annov their rest?

The Gander.

v. 227

He comes, the pest and terror of the yard, His full-fledg'd progeny's imperious guard; The GANDER; ... spiteful, insolent, and bold, At the colt's footlock takes his daring hold; There, serpent like, escapes a dreadful blow; And straight attacks a poor defenceless cow: Each booby Goose th' unworthy strife enjoys, And hails his prowess with redoubled noise. Then back he stalks, of self-importance full, Seizes the shaggy foretop of the Bull, Till whirl'd aloft he falls: a timely check, Enough to dislocate his worthless neck: For lo! of old, he boasts an honour'd wound; Behold that broken wing that trails the ground! Thus fools and bravoes kindred pranks pursue; As savage quite, and oft as fatal too. Happy the man that foils an envious elf, Using the darts of spleen to serve himself.

v. 245.

Swine....Repose of Twilight.

As when by turns the strolling Swine engage

The utmost efforts of the bully's rage,

Whose nibbling warfare on the grunter's side

Is welcome pleasure to his bristly hide;

Gently he stoops, or stretcht at ease along,

Enjoys the insults of the gabbling throng,

That march exulting round his fallen head,

As human victors trample on their dead.

Still Twilight, welcome! Rest, howsweet art thou!

Now eve o'erhangs the western cloud's thick brow:

The far-stretch'd curtain of retiring light,

With fiery treasures fraught; that on the sight

Flash from its bulging sides, where darkness lours,

In Fancy's eye, a chain of mould'ring tow'rs;

Or craggy coasts just rising into view,

Midst jav'lins dire, and darts of streaming blue.

Anon tir'd labourers bless their shelt'ring home,
When MIDNIGHT, and the frightful TEMPEST come.

The Farmer wakes, and sees with silent dread The angry shafts of Heaven gleam round his bed; The bursting cloud reiterated roars, Shakes his straw roof, and jars his bolted doors: The slow-wing'd storm along the troubled skies Spreads its dark course; the wind begins to rise; And full-leaf'd elms, his dwelling's shade by day, With mimic thunder give its fury way: Sounds in his chimney top a doleful peal Midst pouring rain, or gusts of rattling hail; With tenfold danger low the tempest bends, And quick and strong the sulph'rous flame descends: The frighten'd Mastiff from his kennel flies, And cringes at the door with piteous cries...

Where now's the trifler? where the child of pride? These are the moments when the heart is try'd!

Nor lives the man, with conscience e'er so clear,
But feels a solemn, reverential fear;

11 1 2 1 1 T

v. 981.

Harvest-home:

When the spent storm hath howl'd itself to rest.

Feels too a joy relieve his aching breast.

Still, welcome beats the long-continued show'r, and the And sleep protracted, comes with double pow'r; Calm dreams of bliss bring on the morning sun, de addi For every barn is fill'd, and HARVEST done! Now, ere sweet SUMMER bids its long adieu, han And winds blow keen where late the blossom grew. The bustling day and jovial night must come, The long-accustom'd feast of HARVEST-HOME. No blood-stain'd victory, in story bright, at a world Can give the philosophic mind delight; No triumph please, while rage and death destroy: Reflection sickens at the moustrous joy. And where the joy, if rightly understood, Like cheerful praise for universal good?

The soul nor check nor doubtful anguish knows,
But free and pure the grateful current flows.

Behold the sound oak table's massy frame and the Bestride the kitchen floor! the careful dame

And gen'rous host invite their friends around,

For all that clear'd the crop, or till'd the ground,

Are guests by right of custom:...old and young;

And many a neighbouring yeoman join the throng,

With artizans that lent their dext'rous aid,

When o'er each field the flaming sun-beams play'd.

Yet Plenty reigns, and from her boundless hoard,
Though not one jelly trembles on the board,
Supplies the feast with all that sense can crave;
With all that made our great forefathers brave,
Ere the cloy'd palate countless flavours try'd,
And cooks had Nature's judgment set aside.
With thanks to Heaven, and tales of rustic lore,
The mansion cchoes when the banquet's o'er;
A wider circle spreads, and smiles abound,
As quick the frothing horn performs its round;

v. 317.

Ancient equality of this Festival.

Care's mortal foe; that sprightly joys imparts

To cheer the frame and elevate their hearts.

Here, fresh and brown, the hazel's produce lies

In tempting heaps, and peals of laughter rise,

And crackling Music, with the frequent Song;

Unheeded bear the midnight hour along.

Here once a year Distinction low'rs its crest,

The master, servant, and the merry guest,

Are equal all; and round the happy ring

The reaper's eyes exulting glances fling,

And, warm'd with gratitude, he quits his place,

With sun-burnt hands and ale-enliven'd face,

Refills the jug his honour'd host to tend,

To serve at once the master and the friend;

Proud thus to meet his smiles, to share his tale,

His nuts, his conversation, and his ale.

Such were the days,...of days long past I sing, When Pride gave place to mirth without a sting;

Contrast of modern usage.

v. 335.

To violate the feelings of the poor;

To violate the feelings of the poor;

To leave them distanc'd in the mad'ning race,

Where'er refinement shows its hated face:

Nor causeless hated;...'tis the peasant's curse,

That hourly makes his wretched station worse;

Destroys life's intercourse; the social plan

That rank to rank cements, as man to man:

Wealth flows around him, Fashion lordly reigns;

Yet poverty is his, and mental pains.

Methinks I hear the mourner thus impart had.

The stifled murmurs of his wounded heart:

- Whence comes this change, ungracious, irksome, cold?
- Whence the new grandeur that mine eyes behold?
- 'The widening distance which I daily see,
- ' Has Wealth done this?...then Wealth's a foe to me;
- · Foe to our rights; that leaves a powerful few):

The hope of humble industry is o'er;

The blameless hope, the cheering sweet presage

Of future comforts for declining age.

WINTER:

IV.

With kindred pleasures mov'd, and cares opprest;
Sharing alike our weariness and rest;
Who lives the daily partner of our hours
Through every change of heat, and frost, and show'rs;
Partakes our cheerful meals, partaking first
In mutual labour and fatigue and thirst;
The kindly intercourse will ever prove
A bond of amity and social love.

Benevolence springing from mutual sufferings and pleasure. v. 9.

To more than man this generous warmth extends,
And oft the team and shiv'ring herd befriends;
Tender solicitude the bosom fills,
And Pity executes what Reason wills:
Youth learns compassion's tale from ev'ry tongue,
And flies to aid the helpless and the young.

When now, unsparing as the scourge of war,
Blasts follow blasts, and groves dismantled roar,
Around their home the storm-pinch'd CATTLE lows,
No nourishment in frozen pastures grows;
Yet frozen pastures every morn resound
With fair abundance thund'ring to the ground.
For though on hoary twigs no buds peep out,
And e'en the hardy brambles cease to sprout,
Beneath dread WINTER's level sheets of snow
The sweet nutritious Turnip deigns to grow.
Till now imperious want and wide-spread dearth
Bid Labour claim her treasures from the earth.

Ice broken and Snow cleared for the Cattle.

On GILES, and such as Giles, the labour falls, To strew the frequent load where hunger calls. On driving gales sharp hail indignant flies, And sleet, more irksome still, assails his eyes; Snow clogs his feet; or if no snow is seen, The field with all its juicy store to screen. Deep goes the frost, till every root is found A rolling mass of ice upon the ground. No tender ewe can break her nightly fast, Nor heifer strong begin the cold repast, Till Giles with pond'rous beetle foremost go, And scatt'ring splinters fly at every blow; When pressing round him, eager for the prize, From their mixt breath warm exhalations rise.

Sweet then the ploughman's slumbers, hale and young, When the last topic dies upon his tongue;

Sweet then the bliss his transient dreams inspire,

Till chilblains wake him, or the snapping fire:

He starts, and ever thoughtful of his team,

Along the glitt'ring snow a feeble gleam

Shoots from his lantern, as he yawning goes

To add fresh comforts to their night's repose;

Diffusing fragrance as their food he moves,

And pats the jolly sides of those he loves.

Thus full replenish'd, perfect ease possest,

And spatter'd mud his native colour hides: Through his swoln veins the boiling torrent flows, And every nerve a separate torture knows. His harness loos'd, he welcomes, eager-eyed, The pail's full draught that quivers by his side; And joys to see the well-known stable door, As the starv'd mariner the friendly shore.

Ah, well for him if here his sufferings ceas'd,
And ample hours of rest his pains appeas'd!

Beneath whose guardianship all hearts rejoice,
Woke by the echo of his hollow voice;
Yet as the Hound may fault'ring quit the pack,
Snuff the foul scent, and hasten yelping back;
And e'en the docile Pointer know disgrace,
Thwarting the gen'ral instinct of his race;

Chasing amain his frighten'd victims round,

Till death in wild confusion strews the ground;

Then wearied out, to kennel sneaks away,

And licks his guilty paws till break of day.

The deed discover'd, and the news once spread, The Vengeance hangs o'er the unknown culprit's head: The And careful Shepherds extra hours bestow

In patient watchings for the common foe;

A foe most dreaded now, when rest and peace the Should wait the season of the flock's increase.

In part these nightly terrors to dispel,

GILES, ere he sleeps, his little flock must tell.

From the fire-side with many a shrug he hies,

Glad if the full-orb'd Moon salute his eyes,

v. 243.

Moonlight Scattered clouds.

And through th' unbroken stillness of the night Shed on his path her beams of cheering light. With saunt'ring step he climbs the distant stile, Whilst all around him wears a placid smile: There views the white-rob'd clouds in clusters driven. And all the glorious pageantry of Heaven. Low, on the utmost bound'ry of the sight, The rising vapours catch the silver light; Thence Fancy measures, as they parting fly, Which first will throw its shadow on the eye, Passing the source of light; and thence away, Succeeded quick by brighter still than they. Far yet above these wafted clouds are seen (In a remoter sky, still more serene,) Others, detach'd in ranges through the air, Spotless as snow, and countless as they're fair; Scatter'd immensely wide from east to west, The beauteous 'semblance of a Flock at rest. The Spectre.

These, to the raptur'd mind, aloud proclaim

v. 26I.

Their MIGHTY SHEPHERD's everlasting Name.

Whilst thus the loit'rer's utmost stretch of soul
Climbs the still clouds, or passes those that roll,
And loos'd Imagination soaring goes
High o'er his home, and all his little woes,
TIME glides away; neglected Duty calls;
At once from plains of light to earth he falls,
And down a narrow lane, well known by day,
With all his speed pursues his sounding way,
In thought still half absorb'd, and chill'd with cold;
When lo! an object frightful to behold;
A grisly SPECTRE, cloth'd in silver-grey,
Around whose feet the waving shadows play,

Stands in his path!...He stops, and not a breath Heaves from his heart, that sinks almost to death. Loud the Owl halloos o'er his head unseen;

All else is silent, dismally serene:

v. 270.

The Explanation.

Some prompt ejaculation, whisper'd low,
Yet bears him up against the threat'ning foe;
And thus poor Giles, though half inclin'd to fly,
Mutters his doubts, and strains his stedfast eye.

- "Tis not my crimes thou com'st here to reprove;
- ' No murders stain my soul, no perjur'd love :
- ' If thou'rt indeed what here thou seem'st to be,
- 'Thy dreadful mission cannot reach to me.
- By parents taught still to mistrust mine eyes,
- 'Still to approach each object of surprise,
- ' Lest Faucy's formful visions should deceive
- In moon-light paths, or glooms of falling eve,
- 'This then's the moment when my mind should try
- ' To scan thy motionless deformity;
- But oh, the fearful task! yet well I know
- ' An aged Ash, with many a spreading bough,
- ' (Beneath whose leaves I've found a Summer's bow'r,
- Beneath whose trunk I've weather'd many a show'r,),

The terrors of surprise vanish on the use of recollection. v. 297.

- 'Stands singly down this solitary way,
- 'But far beyond where now my footsteps stay.
- "Tis true, thus far I've come with heedless haste;
- 'No reck'ning kept, no passing objects trac'd :...
- 'And can I then have reach'd that very tree?
- 'Or is its reverend form assum'd by thee?'
 The happy thought alleviates his pain:
 He creeps another step; then stops again;
 Till slowly, as his noiseless feet draw near,
 Its perfect lineaments at once appear;
 Its crown of shiv'ring ivy whispering peace,
 And its white bark that fronts the moon's pale face.
 Now, whilst his blood mounts upward, now he knows
 The solid gain that from conviction flows;
 And strengthen'd Confidence shall hence fulfil
 (With conscious Innocence more valued still)
 The dreariest task that winter nights can bring,
 By church-yard dark, or grove, or fairy ring;

Counting of the sheep in the fold.

Still buoying up the timid mind of youth, as a man ?

Till loit'ring Reason hoists the scale of Truth. 1 1887 With these blest guardians Giles his course pursues. Till numbering his heavy-sided ewes. Surrounding stillness tranquillize his breast, And shape the dreams that wait his hours of rest. As when retreating tempests we behold, Whose skirts at length the azure sky unfold, And full of murmurings and mingled wrath, Slowly unshroud the smiling face of earth, Bringing the bosom joy: so WINTER flies!... And see the Source of Life and Light uprise! A height'ning arch o'er southern hills he bends; Warm on the cheek the slanting beam descends, - (7) And gives the reeking mead a brighter hue, ... And draws the modest primrose bud to view. Yet frosts succeed, and winds impetuous rush, And hail-storms rattle through the budding bush; 3

Turn of the Season towards Spring... Ewes and Lambs. v. 333;

And night-fall'n LAMBS require the shepherd's care. And teeming EWES, that still their burdens bear; Beneath whose sides to-morrow's dawn may see The milk-white strangers bow the trembling knee: At whose first birth the pow'rful instinct's seen That fills with champions the daisied green: For Ewes that stood aloof with fearful eye. With stamping foot now Men and Dogs defy, And obstinately faithful to their young, Guard their first steps to join the bleating throng. But casualties and death from damps and cold Will still attend the well-conducted fold: Her tender offspring dead, the Dam aloud Calls, and runs wild amidst th' unconscious crowd: And orphan'd sucklings raise the piteous cry; No wool to warm them, no defenders nigh. And must her streaming milk then flow in vain?

Must unregarded innocence complain?

v. 351. Adopted Lambs: increase of the Flock.

No;...ere this strong solicitude subside,
Maternal fondness may be fresh apply'd,
And the adopted stripling still may find
A parent most assiduously kind.
For this he's doom'd awhile disguis'd to range,
(For fraud or force must work the wish'd-for change;)
For this his predecessor's skin he wears,
Till, cheated into tenderness and cares,
The unsuspecting dam, contented grown,
Cherish and guard the fondling as her own.

Thus all by turns to fair perfection rise;
Thus twins are parted to increase their size:
Thus instinct yields as interest points the way,
Till the bright flock, augmenting every day,
On sunny hills and vales of springing flow'rs
With ceaseless clamour greet the vernal hours.

The humbler Shepherd here with joy beholds
Th' approv'd economy of crowded folds,

E'en Giles, for all his cares and watchings past,

And all his contests with the wintry blast,

Claims a full share of that sweet praise bestow'd

By gazing neighbours, when along the road,

Or village green, his curly-coated throng

Suspends the chorus of the Spinner's song;

When Admiration's unaffected grace

Lisps from the tongue, and beams in ev'ry faces.

Delightful moments!... Sunshine, Health, and Joy,

Play round, and cheer the elevated Boy!

'Another Spring!' his heart exulting cries;

'Another Year! with promis'd blessings rise!...

Concluding Invocation.

- 'ETERNAL POWER! from whom those blessings flow,
- 'Teach me still more to wonder, more to know:
- Seed-time and Harvest let me see again;
- Wander the leaf-strewn wood, the frozen plain:
- Let the first flower, corn-waving field, plain, tree,

- 'And let me ever, midst thy bounties, raise
- An humble note of thankfulness and praise!'...

NOTES.

A fav'rite morsel with the Rook, &c. P. 9, l. 104.

In these verses, which have much of picturesque, there is a severe charge against Rooks and Crows, as very formidable depredators; and their destruction, as such, seems to be recommended. Such was the prevalent opinion some years back. It is less general now: and I am sure the humanity of the Author, and his benevolence to Animals in general, will dispose him to rejoice in whatever plea can be offered in stay of execution of this sentence. And yet more so, if it shall appear that Rooks, at least, deserve not only mercy, but protection and encouragement from the Farmer.

I shall quote a passage from Bewick's interesting History of Birds: the narrative part of which is often as full of information as the embellishments cut in wood are beautiful....

It is this.

Speaking of Birds of the Pie-kind in general, he says "Birds of this kind are found in every part of the known world, from Greenland to the Cape of Good Hope. In many respects they may be said to be of singular benefit to mankind: principally by destroying great quantities of noxious insects, worms, and reptiles. Rooks, in particular, are fond of the erucæ of the hedge-chaffer, or chesnut brown beetle: for which they search with indefatigable pains. These insects," he adds in a note, "appear in hot weather in formidable numbers; disrobing the fields and trees of their verdure, blossoms, and fruit; spreading desolation and destruction wherever they go. They appeared in great numbers in IRELAND during a hot summer, and committed great ravages. In the year 1747 whole meadows and corn-fields were destroyed by them in SUFFOLK. The decrease of Rookeries in that County was thought to be the occasion of it. The many Rockeries with us is in some measure the reason why we have so few of those destructive animals.

"Rooks," he subjoins, "are often accus'd of feeding on the corn just after it has been sown, and various contrivances have been made both to kill and frighten them away; but, in our estimation, the advantages deriv'd from the destruction which they make among grubs, earth-worms, and noxious insects of various kinds, will greatly overpay the injury done to the future harvest by the small quantity of corn they may destroy in searching after their favourite food!

"In general they are sagacious, active, and faithful to each other. They live in pairs; and their mutual attachment is constant. They are a clamorous race: mostly build in trees, and form a kind of society of which there appears something like a regular government. A centinel watches for the general safety, and gives notice on the appearance of danger."

* Wallis's History of Northumberland.

[†]Mr. Bewick does not seem to have been quite aware that much of the mischief, as I have been informed by a sensible neighbouring Farmer and Tenaut, is done in the grub-state of the chaffer by biting through the roots of grass, &c. A latent, and imperceptibly, but rapidly spreading mischief, against which the rooks and birds of similar instinct are, in a manner, the sole protection. C. L.

NOTES.

Under the Title, "Rooks," (p. 71.) Mr. Bewick repeats ... his observations on the useful property of this Bird.

I confess myself solicitous for their safety and kind treatment. We have two which were lam'd by being blown down in a storm (a calamity which destroys great numbers almost every spring). One of them is perfectly domesticated. The other is yet more remarkable; since although enjoying his natural liberty completely, he recognizes, even in his flights at a distance from the house, his adopted home, his human friends, and early protectors*.

The Rook is certainly a very beautiful and very sensible Bird; very confiding, and very much attach'd. It will give me a pleasure, in which I doubt not that the Author of this delightful Poem will partake, if any thing here said shall avail them with the Farmer; and especially with the SUFFOLK FARMER.
