

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

About Google Book Search

Google's mission is to organize the world's information and to make it universally accessible and useful. Google Book Search helps readers discover the world's books while helping authors and publishers reach new audiences. You can search through the full text of this book on the web at http://books.google.com/

Q. Lat.a. 1240-d 2252 Vizgilius

stere Digitized by Google

THE

WORKS

VIRGIL,

TRANSLATED INTO

ENGLISH PROSE,

As near the Original as the different Idioms of the Latin and English Languages will allow.

For the use of Schools, as well as of Private Gentlemen.

EDINBURGH:

PRINTED FOR A. GUTHRIE, NO. 25, SOUTH BRIDGE STREET. 1791.

BIDLIONEEC. REGIA

VIRGIL'S

BUCOLICS.

ECLOGUE FIRST.

Meliboeus. Tityrus.

You, Tityrus, lying all along under the covert of that full-fpread Beach, practife your woodland Lays on a flender oaten pipe : We are forced to leave the bounds of our Country, and our pleafant Fields ; we fly our country ; while you, Tityrus, in the fhade at eafe, teach the woods to re-echo fair Amaryllis.

TIT. A God, O Melibœus hath vouchfafed us this tranquillity; for to me he shall always be a God: A tender lambkin from our folds shall often stain his altar with its blood. "Tis he hath licensed my heifers to feed at large, as you see, and myself to play what tunes I pleased on my rural reed.

MEL. Truly I envy you not; but rather am amaz'd at your good fortune; now that all around there are fuch confusions in the country. Lo myfelf, fick as I am, drive far hence my tender goats. This too, O Tityrus, I drag along with much ado. For here just now among the thick hazles having yeaned twins, the hope of my flock, she left them, alas! on the naked flinty rock. This calamity, I remember, my oaks struck with lightning from heaven often prefaged to me, had not my mind been under infatuation. Often the illboding crow from an old hollow rock prefaged it. But tell me, Tityrus, who is this God of yours?

A

Tir. The city, Melibœus, which they call Rome, I foolifhly imagined to be like this our Mantua, whither we fhepherds oft times are wont to drive the tender offspring of our ewes. So I had known whelps like dogs, fo kids like their dams; thus was I wont to compare great things with fmall. But that city hath raifed its head as far above others as the cyprefiles ufe to do above the limber fhrubs.

MEL. And what important cause had you to visit Rome?

TIT. Liberty, which, though late, yet cast an eye upon me in my inactive time of life; after that my beard began to fall off a grizzled colour when I shaved; yet on me she cast her eye, and after a long period of shavery came at last. Ever since that Amaryllis sways me, and Galatea hath cast me off: For I will not diforwn it, while Galatea ruled me, I had neither hopes of liberty, nor concern about my flock. Though many a victim went from my folds, and many a fat cheefe was pressed by me for the ungrateful city, I never returned home with my hands full of money.

MEL. I admired, Amaryllis, why difeonfolate you was fill invoking the Gods; for whom you fuffered the apples to hang on their native tree. Now I fee the caufe. Your Tityrus from hence was abfent. The very pines, O Tityrus, the fountains, thefe very groves, invited thee to return.

TIT. What could I do? It was neither in my power, while here I flaid, to rid me of my thraldom, nor elfewhere could I experience Gods fo propitious. Here, Melibœus, I faw that divine youth, to whom for twice fix days our altars yearly fmoke with incenfe. Here first he gave this gracious answer to me his fuppliant. "Swains, feed your Heifers as formerly, yoke your "fteers."

MEL. Happy old man, your lands shall then remain fill in your possible, and large enough for you. Though naked stones and marsh with flimy rushes overspread all the pasture grounds; yet no unaccustomed fodder fhall taint thy pregnant ewes; nor noxious difeafes of the neighbouring flocks fhall hurt them. Happy old mau! here between the well known ftreams and facred fountains, you fhall enjoy the cool fhades. On the one hand, a hedge planted on the neighbouring marfh, whofe fallow blooms are ever fed on by Hyblæan bees, fhall often court you by its gentle hummings to indulge repofe. On the other hand, the wood lopper beneath a lofty rock fhall fing aloud to heaven : Nor mean-while fhall either the hoarfe wood-pigeons, thy delight, or the Turtle from his airy elm, ceafe to cooe.

Tir. Sooner therefore shall fleet stags feed in the air, and the feas leave fishes naked on the shore; fooner, each others bounds being mutually traversed, shall the Parthian exile drink the Soane, or Germany the Tigris, than his lovely image be effaced from my breast.

MEL. But we must go hence ; fome to the parched Africans; fome of us shall visit Scythia, and Oaxes the rapid river of Crete, and the Britains quite disjoined from all the world besides. Say, shall I ever, after a length of time, with wonder fee my native territories, and the roof of my poor cot covered over with turf, flanding behind fome ears of corn, my kingdom, my all? Shall then a ruffian foldier poffels these fo well cultivated lands of mine ? A Barbarian, thefe my fields of standing corn? See to what extremity civil discord hath reduced us, wretched citizens! See for whom we have fowed our fields ! Now, Melibœus, graft your pear-trees; in order range your vines. Begone, my goats; begone, once a happy flock. No more shall I, extended in my verdant grot, henceforth behold you hanging far above me from a rock with bushes overgrown. No carols shall I fing ; no more, my goats, tended by me, shall you browze the flowery cytifus and bitter fallows.

TIT. Yet here this night you may take up your reft with me on a bed of green leaves. We have mellow apples, chefnuts foft and ripe, and plenty of curds and cream. And now the high tops of the villages at diffance fmoke, and larger fhadows fall from the lofty mountains.

Ait

ECLOGUE SECOND.

ALEXIS.

THE fhepherd Corydon burned for fair Alexis, the darling of his mafter; nor had he any hope of fuccefs. Only among the thick beeches, with high embowering tops, he continually reforted. There, all alone, with unvailing fondnefs he threw away to the mountains and the woods, there indigefted complaints.

Ah cruel Alexis, to my fongs thou haft no regard ; on me thou halt no pity; thou wilt furely be my death at laft. Even the cattle now in this noon-tide heat pant after shades and cool retreats; now the thorny brakes shelter the vilest reptiles, even the green lizards; and Thestylis pounds the garlic and wild thyme, ftrong fcented herbs, for the reapers spent with violent heat. But to the hoarfe grafhoppers and me the groves refound, while under the fcorching fun I trace Was it not better to endure the rueful thy fteps. fpite and proud difdain of Amaryllis ? Had it not been better to endure Menalcas, though he was black, though thou art fair? Ah comely boy, truft not too much to a complexion. White privets fall neglefted; the purple hyacinths are gathered. By thee, Alexis, I am neglected ; nor once enquire you who I am ; how rich in fnowy flocks, how abounding in milk. A thoufand ewes of mine stray on the mountains of Sicily. I want not new milk in Summer, nor in the cold of winter. I warble the fame airs which Theban Amphion was wont to practife, what time on Attic Aracynthus he called his hords together. Nor am I fo deformed as to be the object of your difdain. Upon the shore I lately viewed myfelf, when the fea ftood unruffled by the winds. I will not fear to compare even with Daphnis, thyfelf being judge, if the image does not deceive me. O wouldst thou but vouchfafe to inhabit with me our mean rural retreats and humble cots, to pierce the deer, and with a bundle of green twigs to drive together a flock of kids! In the woods along with me thon shalt rival even Pan himself in finging. Pan first taught us to join together feveral reeds with wax ; Pan guards the fheep and fhepherds both. Nor be thou averfe to wear thy lip with a shepherd's reed. What pains did nor Amyntas take to learn this fame art of mine? A pipe I have of feven unequal reeds compactly joined, of which Damœtas fome time ago made me a prefent ; and in his dying moments faid : Thou art now its fecond master. Damœtas faid ; Me the foolish Amyntas envied. Belides, I have two young he-goats, which I found in a valley not without danger, whole fkins even now are fleched with white ; each day they drain the udders of a ewe. These I referve for thee. Long Theftylis has begged to have them from me ; and let her have them, fince my prefents are difdained by you.

Come hither, O lovely boy; behold the nymphybring the elilies in full bafkets. For thee, fair Nais, cropping the pale violets and heads of poppies, joins the Narciffus and flower of fweet fmelling Anife. Then, interweaving them with Caffia, and other fragrant herbe, fets off the foft Hyacinths with faffron marygold. Myfelf will gather for thee quinces whitening with tender down and chefnuts, which my Amaryllis loved. Plums I will add of waxen hue. On this fruit too fhall honour be conferred. And you, ye laurels, I will crop; and thee, O myrtle, next in dignity to the laurel: For, thus arranged, you mingle fweet perfumes.

Ab Corydon, thou art a filly clown thus to flatter thyfelf. Alexis neither minds thy prefents; nor, if by prefents thou flowldft firive to win him, would Iolas, thy richer rival, yield. Alas, what was in my wretched mind? Undone, undone; I have let the fouth-wind loofe among my flowers, and the boars to pollute my cryftal fprings. Ah, witlefs boy, whom doft thou fly? The Gods themfelves have dwelt in woods, and there the Trojan Paris dwelt. Let Pallas inhabit palaces of which fhe is the foundrefs. Let us in woods above all things delight. The grim Lionefs purfues the Wolf, the Wolf himfelf the Goat; the wanton Goat purfues. A iij the flowery Cytifus; and Corydon thee, O Alexis. Each is drawn away by fome peculiar pleafure.

See, the labouring fleers bring home the plough born lightly on the yoke, and the retreating Sun doubles the growing fhadows. But me love fill confumes. For what bounds can be fet to love ? Ah Corydon, Corydon, what frenzy hath poffeffed thee ? Half-pruned is thy vine propped on the leafy elm. Why rather trieft thou not to weave, of ofiers and pliant rufnes, fome one or other at leaft of those implements which thy work requires ? Thou wilt find another Alexis, if this difdains thee.

ECLOGUE THIRD:

MENALCAS, DAMOSTAS, PALAEMON.

M. TELL me, Damætas, whofe is that flock? Is it that of Melibœus.

D. No; but Ægon's. Ægon lately gave it to my sare.

M. Ah fheep, ftill a lucklefs flock ! while the master himfelf careffes Nezera, and fears that the prefer me to him; this hireling thepherd milks his ewes twice in an hour; and by him the juice from the flock, and the milk from the lambs is filched away.

D. Remember, however, that these fcandals should with more referve be charged on men. We know both who feduced you, and in what facred cave, while the goats looked askance; but the good-natured Nymphawinked thereat, and fmiled,

M. Then, I suppose, when they faw me with a felonious bill cut down Mycon's grove and tender vines.

D. Or here by these old beeches, when for spite you broke the bow and arrows of Daphnis: which when you, cross-gained Menalcas, saw given to the boy, you both repined; and, hadst thou not by some means or other done him a mischief, thou hadst burnt for enzy. M. What may not mafters do, when pilfering flaves are fo audacious! Mifcreant! did not I fee thee infidioufly fnap the goat of Damon, while his mongrel barked with fury? And when I cried out, whither is he now fneaking off? Tityrus, gather your flock together: You fkulked away behind the fedges.

D. Ought he not, when vanquished in piping, to give me the goat which my flute by its music won? If you know not, I will let you know, that goat was my own; and Damon himsfelf owned to me the debt, but alleged he was not able to pay.

M. You vanquifh him in piping ! Or was there ever a wax-jointed pipe in your poffettion ? Wast thou not wont, thou dunce, in the crofs ways to murder a pitiful tune on a fqueaking ftraw ?

D. Are you willing then that we shall each of us try by turns what we can do? This young heifer I stake; and, left you should possibly reject is, the comes twice a day to the milking pale; two calves the fuckles with her udder: Say you what stake will you lay against me.

M. I dare not stake any thing from the flock; for I have a fire at home, I have a harfh ftep-dame; and twice a day they number the cattle both, and one the But what thyfelf shalt own of far greater vakids. lue, fince thou chooseft to be mad, I will pawn my beechen bowls, the carved work of divine Alcimedon : round with a curling vine fuperadded by the eafy /killful carver's art, mantles the cluftering berries diffufely fpread from a pale ivy-bough. In the midft two figures are embelled; Conon the one: And who was the other ? He who with his wand distributed among the nations the whole globe; who taught what feafons the reaper, what the bending ploughman should observe? Nor have I yet applied my lips to them, but keep them carefully laid up.

D. For me too the fame Alcimedon made two bowls, and with foft foliage wreathed their handles round; Orpheus in the midlt he placed, and the woods following; nor have I yet applied my lips to them, but keep them carefully laid up. If you confider the heifer, you have no reason to praise so much your bowls.

M. By no means that thou this day efcape: I will defcend to any terms you name. Let but that very perfon who comes (lo, it is Palæmon) liften to this debate: I'll take care you that not challenge any henceforth at finging.

D. Come on then, if thou haft any manhood; in me there shall be no delay; nor do I decline any judge. Only, good neighbour Palæmon, weigh this debate with the deepest attention; it is a matter of no small importance.

P. Sing then, fince we are feated on the foft grafs; and now every field, now every tree is budding forth: Now the woods look green, now the year is in its higheft beauty. Begin, Damœtas; then you, Menalcas, follow. Ye fhall fing in alternate measures: Alternate measures please the Muses.

D. From Jove, ye Muses, let us begin : All things are full of Jove : He cheristhes the earth ; my songs are his regard.

M. And me Phœbus loves : For Phœbus are ftill with me his facred gifts, the laurel and fweet blufhing hyacinth.

D. Galatea, a wanton girl, pelts me with apples; then to the fallows flies, but wifnes first to be feen.

M. But my darling Amyntas voluntarily offers himfelf to me; that now not Delia's felf is more familiar to our dogs.

D. I have a prefent provided for my love; for I myfelf marked the place where the airy ring-doves have built their neft.

M. What I could, I fent to my boy, ten golden apples gathered from a tree in the wood : To-morrow I will fend him other ten,

. D. Oh how often, and what charming things Galatea fpoke to me ! Some part, ye winds, waft to the cars of the gods.

M. What avails it, O Amyntas, that you defpife me not in your heart, if, while ye hunt the boars, 1. watch the toils, and fhare not with you the danger?

D. Iolas, fend home to me the charming Phyllis: It is my birth-day. When for the fruits 1 facrifice a heifeir, come thyfelf.

M. Iolas, I love Phyllis above others; for at my departure fhe wept, and faid, adieu, fair youth, a long adieu.

D. The wolf is fatal to the flocks; flowers of rain to ripened corn; flaking winds to trees; to me the wrath of Amaryllis.

M. Moifture is grateful to the fpringing corp; the arbutus to weaned kids; limber willows to the teeming cattle; to me Amyntas only.

D. Pollio loves my muse, though ruftic : Ye Pierian fifters, feed a heiter for your reader.

M. Pollio himfelf too composes noble verses; feed for him the bull which already butts with the horn and fpurns the fand with his feet.

D. Let him who loves thee, Pollio, rife to those honours to which he joys that thou hast risen: for him let honey flow, and the prickly bramble bring forth amomum.

M. Who hates not Bavius's verfe, may he love thine, O Mævius; and the fame fool may join foxes in the yoke, and milk he-goats.

D. Ye fwains who gather flowers, and flrawberries that grow lowly on the ground, oh fly hence; a cold deadly fnake lurks in the grafs.

M. Forbear, my sheep, to advance too far; 'tis not fafe trusting to the bank; the ram himself is but now drying his sheece.

D. Tityrus, from the river remove your browzing goats; I myself, when it is time, will wash them all in the pool.

M. Pen up the fheep, ye fwains; If the heat shall dry up the milk, as of late, in vain shall we squeeze the teats with our hands.

D. Alss, how lean is my bullock in a fertile field ! the fame love is the bane of the herd and of the herdfman.

M. Surely love is not the caufe why these too are fo lean. They force flick to their bones. I know not what malignant eye bewitches my tender lamba.

BUCOLICS. 104.

D. Tell me, and you shall be my great Apolloy where heaven's circuit extends not farther than three ells.

M. Tell me where flowers grow, inferibed with the names of kings; and have Phyllis to thyfelf alone.

P. 'Tis not in me to determine this weighty controverfy between you: Both you and he deferve the heifer; and whoever fo well shall fing the fears of sweet fuccefiful love, and experimentally defcribe the bitternels of difappointment. Now, swains, shut up your fireams; the meads have drunk enough.

ECLOGUE FOURTH.

Pollio.

YE Sicilian muses, let us fing fomewhat higher ftrains. The groves and lowly tamarisks delight not all. 1f rural lays we fing, let those lays be worthy a conful's ear. The last æra, the subject of Cammaan fong is now arrived : The great ferious of revolving ages begins a-new. Now too returns the virgin Aftraa, returns the reign of Saturn : Now a new progeny from high heaven descends. Be thou but propitious to the infant boy, by whom first the iron age shall cease, and the golden age over all the world arife. 'O chaste Lucina; now thy own Apollo reigns. While thou, too, Pollio, while thou art conful, this glory of our age shall make his entrance; and the great months begin to roll. Under thy conduct, whatever vefliges of our guilt remain, shall, by being done away, release the earth from fear for ever. He shall partake the life of gods, shall fee heroes mingled in fociety with gods, himfelf be feen by them, and rule the peaceful world with his father's virtues. Mean while the earth, fweet boy, as her first offerings, shall pour thee forth every where, without culture, creeping ivy with ladies-glove, and Egyptian beans with fmiling acanthus intermixed. The goats of themfelves shall homewards convey their

10.

udders diftended with milk ; nor shall the herds dread huge overgrown lions. The very cradle shall pour thee forth fair attractive flowers. The ferpent shall die; and the poifon's fallacious plant shall die. The Affyrian spikenard shall grow in every, soil. But soon as thou shalt be able to read the praifes of heroes, and the achievements of thy fire, and to understand what virtue is ; the field shall by degrees grow yellow with foft ears of corn ; blufhing grapes fhall hang on the rude brambles ; and hard oaks shall diftil the dewy honey. Yet fome few footsteps of ancient wice shall fill remain, to prompt men to tempt the fea in ships, to inclose cities with walls, and cleave furrows in the earth. Another Tiphys then shall be, and another Argo to waft chosen heroes over the main. There shall be likewife other wars ; and great Achilles shall once more be fent to Troy. After this, when confirmed age shall now have ripened thee into man, the failor shall of himself renounce the sea; nor shall the naval pine barter commodities: All lands shall all things produce. The ground shall not endure the harrow, nor the vineyard the pruning hook : Now the flurdy ploughman too shall release his bullocks from the voke; nor shall the wool learn to counterfeit various colours: But the ram himfelf shall in the meadows tinge his fleece now with fweet-blufhing purple, now with faffron dye. Scarlet shall spontaneous clothe the lambs as they feed. The definies harmonious in the established order of the fates fung to their spindles: " Ye fo happy ages run, hafte forward to the birth." Bright offspring of the gods, illustrious progeny of Jove, fet forward in thy way to fignal honours ; the time is now at hand See the world with its ponderous frame nodding to thee in fign of gratulation, the earth, the regions of the fea, and heaven fublime : See how all things rejoice at the approach of this happy age. O that my last stage of life may continue fo long, and fo much breath as shall suffice to fing thy deeds ! Neither Thracian Orpheus, nor Linus, shall furpais me in long, though his mother aid the one, and the fire the other, Calliopea Orpheus, and fair Apollo

Ed. IV.

Linus. Should even Pan with me contend, Arcadia's felf being judge; even Pan should own himself o'ercome, Arcadia's felf being judge. Begin, sweet babe, to distinguish thy mother by her smiles: Ten months did bring thy mother tedious qualms. Begin, sweet babe; that child on whom his parents never smiled, nor God e'er honoured with his table, nor goddes with her bed.

ECLOGUE FIFTH.

MENALCAS, MOPSUS.

ME. SINCE, Mopfus, we are happily met, both fkilful fwains, you in piping on the flender reed, I in finging verfes, why have we not fat down here among the elms intermixed with hazles ?

Mo. You, Menalcas, are my fuperior: 'Tis just that I be ruled by you: Whether under the shades that waver by the fanning zephyrs, or rather into this grotto we repair: See how the wild vine with clusters here and there hath mantled over the grotto.

ME. Amyntas alone in our mountains may vie with thee.

Mo. What if the fame prefumptuous youth should vie with Phoebus' felf in fong ?

ME. Begin you, Mopfus, first; whether you are disposed to fing the passion of Phyllis, or the praises of Alcon, or the glorious strife of Codrus; begin: Tityrus will tend the browzing kids.

Mo. Nay, I'll rather try those ftrains which lately I inferibed on the green bark of the beech-tree, and fung and noted them by turns; then bid Amyntas vie with me.

ME. As far as the limber willow is inferior to the pale olive, and humble lavender to crimfon beds of rofes, fo far is Amyntas, in my judgment, inferior to you.

Mo. But, fhepherd, no more : Now we have reached the grotto. The nymphs deplored Daphnis cut off by cruel death : Ye hazles and ye ftreams witheffed the mourning of the nymphs ; when the mother, embracing the lamented corpfe of her føn, reproaches both gods and ftars of cruelty. The mourning swains, O Daphnis, then forgot to drive their fed cattle to the cooling ftreams: No quadruped or tafted of the brook, or touched a blade of grafs. The favage mountains, Daphnis, and the woods, can tell, that the very lions in the wilds of Afric mourned thy death. Daphnis taught to voke Armedian tygers in the chariot; Daphnis taught to lead up the dances in honour of Bacchus, and wreathe the pliant spears with fost leaves. As the vine is the glory of the trees, as grapes are of the vine, as the bull is of the flock, as ftanding corn of fertile fields ; fo thou wast all the glory of thy fellowfwains. E'er fince the fates inatched thee away, Pales herfelf, and Apollo too, have left the plains. Lucklefs darnel, and the barren oats prevail in these furrows where we were wont to fow the plump barley. In lieu of the foft violet, in lieu of the purple narciffus, the thiftle fprings up, and the thorn with its tharp prickles. Strow the ground with leaves, ye shepherds; cover the fountains with shady boughs: Those rites Daphnis for himself ordains. And raise a tomb ; and on that tomb infcribe this epitaph : Here I Daphnis of the groves repole, from hence even to the fars renowned; the shepherd of a fair flock; fairer myfelf than they.

ME. Such, matchlefs poet, is thy fong to me, as flumbers to the weary on the grafs; as in fcorching heat to quench thirft from a falient rivulet of fresh water. Nor equal you your master in the pipe only, but alfo in the voice. Happy swain, you shall now be the next to him. Yet, as I can, I'll sing in my turn these verses of mine, and exalt your Daphnis to the stars: Daphnis I'll raise to the stars: Me too Daphnis loved.

Mo. Can aught be more acceptable to me than fuch a prefent? The fwain was both worthy himfelf to be celebrated, and Stimichon hath long fince praifedto me that fong of yours.

ME. Daphnis robed in white, admires the courts of heaven, to which he is a ftranger, and underneath his feet, beholds the clouds and flars. Hence mirthful pleafure fills the woods and every field, Pan, and the shepherds, and virgin dryads. The wolf does neither meditate mischievous plots against the sheep; nor are any toils fet to enfnare the deer. Good Daphnis delights in peace. For joy, even the unfhorn mountains raife their voices to the ftars : Now the very rocks, the very groves refound these notes : A God, a God he is, Menalcas. O be propitious and indulgent to thy own! See here four altars; lo, Daphnis, two for thee, and two for Phoebus. Two bowls foaming with new milk, and two goblets of fat oil will I prefent to thee each year : And chiefly, enlivening the feast with plenty of the joys of Bacchus, before the fire if it be winter, if harvest, in the shade, I will pour thee forth Chian wines rich as nectar. Damoetas and Lyctian Ægon thall fing to me : Alphefiboeus shall mimic the frisking Satyrs. These rites shall be ever thine, both when we pay our folemn anniverfary vows to the nymphs, and when we make the circuit of the fields. While the boar shall love the tops of mountains; while fishes in the floods delight; while bees on thyme shall feed, and grashoppers on dew; thy honour, name and praise, shall still remain. As to Bacehus and Ceres, fo to thee the fwains shall yearly perform their vows : Thou too shalt bind them to their vows.

Mo. What juft, what grateful returns fhall I make thee for fo excellent a fong? For neither the whifpers of the rifing fouth wind, nor fhores lashed by the wave, nor rivers that glide down among the story vales, please me fo much.

ME. First will I prefent you with this brittle reed. This taught me, "Corydon for fair Alexis burned :" This fame hath taught me, "Whofe is this flock ? Is " it that of Meliboeus?

Mo. But do you, Menalcas, accept this fheep-hook adorned with uniform knobs, and rings of brafs, which Antigenes never could obtain, though he often begged it of me; and at that time he was worthy to be loved.

BUCOLICS.

ECLOGUE SIXTH.

SILENUS.

My Thalia is the first who deigned to sport in Sicilian verse: nor blushed to be an inhabitant of the woods. When I offered to fing of kings and battles, Apollo twitched my ear, and warned me thus : A shepherd, Tityrus, should feed his fattening sheep, and sing in humble strain. Now then will I, O Varus, (for there will not be wanting fuch as are ambitious to celebrate thy praises, and record thy difastrous wars) exercise my rural mufe on the flender reed. I fing not unbidden strains, though humble : Yet whole enamoured with the rural mule, whole shall read even these; to him, O Varuy, our lowly tamarifks, to him each grove shall fing of thee : Nor is any page more acceptable to Phoebus, than on whole front the name of Varus is infcribed. Proceed, O Mufes. Chromis and Mnafylus, the youthful fwains, faw Silenus lying affeep in his cave, his veins as usual blown up with yesterday's debauch. His garlands just fallen from his head, lay at fome diffance; and his ponderous tankard hung by its worn handle. Laying hold on him (for often the fire had amused them both with the promise of a fong), they bind him with his own wreaths. Ægle affociates herfelf with them, and comes unexpectedly upon the timorous fwains, Ægle, the fairest of the Naiads, and, just as he is opening his eyes, she paints his fore-head and temples with blood-red mulberries. He, fmiling at the trick, fays, Why thefe bonds? Loofe me, fwains. It is enough that I have fuffered myfelf to be feen. Hear the fong which you defire : The fong for you ; for her I shall find another reward : At the fame time Then you might have feen the fauns and be begins. favages frifking about him in measured dance; then the rigid oaks waving their tops. Nor rejoices the Parnaffian rock fo much in Phoebus : Nor do Rhodope Bij and Ifmarus fo much admire their Orpheus. For he lung how, through the mighty void, the feeds of earth, and air, and fea, and pure ethereal fire, had been together ranged. How, from these principles, all the elements, and the world's recent globe itself combined into a fystem. Then how the foil began to harden, to flut up the waters apart within the fea, and by degrees to affume the forms of things. And how anon the earth was flruck to fee the new-born fun fhine forth, and how from the clouds, fulpended high, the thowers descend : When first the woods began to rife, and when the animals, as yet but few, began to range the unknown mountains. He rehearfes next the tranfformation of the flones which Pyrrha threw, the reign of Saturn, the fowls of Caucalus, and the theft of Prometheus. To these he adds the fountain where the Argonautic failors had invoked aloud their Hylas loft : How the whole shore refounded Hylas, Hylas. And next he foothes Pafiphae in her paffion for the fnowwhite buil; happy Princefs if herds had never been ! Ah, ill-fated maid, what madnefs feized thee? The daughter of Proctus with imaginary lowings filled the fields : Yet none of them purfued fuch vile embraces of a beaft; however they might dread the plough to be yoked about their necks, and often feel for horns on their fmooth fore-heads. Ah, ill fated maid, thou now art roaming on the mountains! He, refting his fnowy fide on the fost Hyacinth, ruminates the blanched herbs under fome gloomy ever-green oak, or courts fome female in the numerous herd. Ye Nymphs, fhut up, now, ye Dictaean Nymphs, fhut up the lawns and openings of the groves, if any where by chance my bullock's wandering footfleps may offer to my fight. Perhaps fome heifers may lead him on to the Gortynian stalls, or enticed by the verdant pasture, or in pursuance of the herd. Then he fings the virgin Atalanta, charmed with the apples of the Hefperides : Then how the fifters of Phaeton were wrapped about with the mois of bitter bark; and how, from the ground, the flately alders role. I hen fings how Gallus, wandering by the fireams of Permefius, was led to the Aonian mountains by one of the fifter mufes; and how the whole choir of Phoebus rofe up to do him honour. How Linus the shepherd of song divine, his locks adorned with flowers and bitter parfley, thus addreffed him : Here take these pipes the muses give thee, which before they gave to the Afcrean fage: By whole mufic he was wont to draw down the rigid wild ashes from the mountains. On these the origin of Grynium's grove by you be fung; that in no grove Apollo may glory more. Why should I tell, or how he fung of Scylla the daughter of Nifus? or of her, whom, round the fnowy wailt begirt with barking monfters, fame records to have vexed the Dulichian fhips, and in the deep abyfs, alas! torn in pieces the trembling failors with fea-dogs? Or how he defcribed the limbs of Tereus transformed ? What banquets and what prefents Philomela for him prepared? With what speed he fought the deferts, and with what wings, ill-fated prince, he fluttered over the palace once his own? All those airs he fings, which happy Eurotas heard, and bade its laurels learn when Phoebus played of old. The vallies, ftruck with the found, re-echo to the ftars ; till Vesper warned the shepherds to pen their sheep in the folds, and recount, their number; and advanced on the sky, full loth to lofe the fong.

ECLOGUE SEVENTH.

MELIBOEUS, CORYDON, THYRSIS.

M. DAPHNIS by chance fat down under a whifpering ever-green oak, and Corydon and Ihyrfis had drove their flocks together; Thyrfis his fheep, Corydon his goats diffended with milk: Both in the flower of their age, Arcadians both: Equally matched at finging, and ready to answer each other's challenge. Here, while I am fencing my tender myrtles from the cold, the he-goat himfelf, the husband of the flock, from me had ftrayed away: and lo I efpied Daphnis: When he again faw me, ftrait he cries, come hither, Meliboeus, your goat and kids are fafe; and, if you can ftay a while, reft under this fhade. Hither thy bullocks of themfelves will come aerofs the meads to drink. Here Mincius hath fringed the verdant banks with tender reed; and from the facred oak fwarms of bees refound. What could I do ? On the one hand, I had neither Alcippe nor Phyllis, to fhut up at home my weaned lambs: And on the other hand, there was a mighty match propoled, Corydon againft Thyrfis. After all, I poftponed my ferious bufinefs to their play. In alternate verfes therefore the two began to contend. Alternate verfes the mufes would have me record. Thefe Corydon, thofe Thirfis, each in his turn recited.

Biij

C. Ye Libethrian nymphs, my delight, or favour me with fuch a fong as you did my Codrus (he makes verfes next to those of Phoebus), or, if we cannot all attain to this, here on this facred pine my tuneful pipe shall hang.

T. Ye Arcadian shepherds, deck with ivy your rising poet, that Codrus's sides may burst with envy. Or, if he praise me beyond what 1 defire, bind my brow with lady's glove, left his ill tongue should hurt your future poet.

C. To thee, Diana, young Mycon for me prefents this head of a briftly boar, and the branching horns of a long-lived flag. If this fuccefs be lafting, thou fhalt itand at thy full length in polifhed marble; thy legs with fearlet bufkins bound.

T. A pail of milk, and these cakes, Priapus, is enough for you to expect from me: You are the keeper of a poor ill-furnished garden. Now we have raised these of marble such as the times admit : But, if the breed recruit my flock, thou shalt be all of gold.

C. Divine Galatea, fweeter to me than Hybla's thyme, whiter than fwans, fairer than white ivy: Soon as the full fed fteers shall return to their stalls, come, if thou halt any regard for Corydon.

T. Nay, may 1, Jweet maid, appear to thee more bitter than Sardinian herbs, more rugged than the furze, more worthles than fea-weed thrown out upon the shore, if this day be not longer to me than a whole year. Go home, my well fed bullocks, if you have any shame, go home.

C. Ye mosfy fountains, and grafs more fost than fleep, and the green arbute-tree that clothes you with its fhade, ward of the folfitial heat from my flock : Now foorching Summer comes; now the buds fwell on the fruitful tendrils of the vine.

T. Here is a glowing hearth, and unctuous pines; here is always a fivinging fire, and lintels footed with continual fmoke. Here we just as much regard the cold of Boreas, as either the wolf does the number of fheep, or impetuous rivers their banks.

C. Now junipers and prickly chefnuts crown the boughs; beneath each tree, its apples here and there lie ftrowed; now all nature fmiles: But, were fair Alexis to go from these hills, you would fee even the rivers dry.

T. The field is parched; by the intemperature of the air, the herbage thirfts and dies; Bacchus has envied our hills the shadows of his vine: At the approach of our Phyllis every grove shall look green; and Jove, full liberal, descend in joyous showers.

C. The poplar is most grateful to Hercules, the vine to Bacchus, to lovely Venus the myrtle, to Phoebus his own laurel; Phyllis loves the hazles: Thefe fo long as Phyllis loves, neither the myrtle, nor the laurel of Phoebus, shall surpass the hazles.

T. The afh is faireft in the woods, the pine-trees in the gardens, the poplar by the rivers, the fir on lofty mountains: But if, my charming Lycidas, you make me more frequent visits, the afh-tree in the woods shall yield to thee, and the pine-tree in the gardens.

M. Thefe verfes I remember; and that vanquished Thyrfis did in vain contend. From that time 'tis Corydon, Corydon for me.

ECLOGUE EIGHTH.

DAMON, ALPHESIBOEUS.

THE mule of the shepherds, Damon and Alphesiboeus, whom the heifers, mindless of their pasture, admired, contending, and to whose song the Lynxes listened with astonishment, and the rivers, having changed their courses, shood still: The mule of Damon and Aphesiboeus I fing.

Aid thou me, great Pollio, whether thou overpass the rocks of broad Timavus, or cruize along the coast of the Iberian fea; fay, shall that day ever come, when I shall be indulged to fing thy glorious deeds? Say, shall it come, that I may be indulged to diffuse through all the world thy verse, which fole merits to be praifed in Sophocles's lofty style? With the my muse commenced, with the any muse shall end: Accept my fongs, begun by thy command; and permit this ivy to creep around thy temples among thy victorious laurels.

Scarce had the cold fhades of night retired from the fky, what time the dew on the tender grafs is most grateful to the cattle, when Damon leaning against a tapering olive thus began :

D. Arife, fair Lucifer, and previous ufter in the cheerful day: While I, deceived by the feigned paffion of my miftrefs Nifa, to her complain, and to the Gods, now that I die, though it hath hitherto availed me nought, that I took them to witnefs, yet in my laft hour appeal. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian ftrains. Mount Maenalus has groves for ever filled with melody, and pines for ever vocal; he ever hears the loves of fhepherds, and the mufic of Pan, the first who fuffered not the reeds to be neglected. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian ftrains. Nifa is given away to Mopfus! What may we lovers not expect? Griffins now fhall match with horfes; and in the fucceeding age, the timorous does with dogs shall come to drink. Mopfus, cut your fresh nuptial torches : For thee a wife is conducting home Strow the nuts, bridegroom; Helperus for thee forfakes Oeta. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian strains. O rarely matched to a worthy fpouse? while you difdain all the world befides, and while you deteft my pipe and goats, my haggy eye brows, and my overgrown beard ; nor believe that any God regards the affairs of mortals. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian strains. When thou wall but a child, I faw thee with thy mother gathering the dewy apples on our hedges, I was your guide; I had then just entered on the year next after eleven : I was then just able to reach the slender boughs from the ground. How I looked, how I languished, how the fatal delution flole my heart away ! Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian strains. Now I know what love is: Ifmarus or Rhodope, or the remoteft Garamantes, produced him on rugged cliffs; a boy, nor of our race, nor of our blood. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian strains. Relentless love taught the mother to imbrue her hands in her own children's blood : A cruel mother too thou waft : Whether more cruel was the mother, or more impious the boy? Impious was the boy: Thou, mother, too wast cruel. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian strains. Now let the wolf of himfelf fly from the fheep: The hard oaks bear golden apples : The alder with narciffus bloom : The tamarifks diftil rich amber from their barks : Let owls with fwans contend : Be Tityrus an Orpheus; an Orpheus in the woods: an Arion among the dolphins. Begin with me, my pipe, Maenalian ftrains. All the world for me may even become one great abyfs: Ye woods, farewell. From the fummit of yon aerial mountain will I fling me headlong down into the waves : Take this last prefent from thy dying swain. Cease, my pipe, now cease Maenalian ftrains. Thus Damon : Ye Pierian mufes, fay what Alphefiboeus responsive fung. All things we cannot all.

A. Bring forth the water, and bind these altars with a foft fillet: Burn thereon fat uncluous vervain, and male frankincenfe, that I may try by facred magic fpells to difpoffels my love of a found mind. Nothing here but charms are wanting. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. Charms can even draw down the moon from heaven: Circe by charms transformed the affociates of Ulyffes. The cold inake is in the meads by incantation burft. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. First these three threads with threefold colours varied. I round thee twine; and thrice lead thy image round thefe altars. The Gods delight in the uneven number. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. Bind, Amaryllis, three colours in three knots: Bind them Amaryllis, now; and fay I bind the chains of Venus. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to nie. As this clay hardens, and as this wax with one and the fame fire diffulves; fo may Daphnis by my love. Sprinkle the falt cake, and burn the crackling laurels in bitumen. Me cruel Daphnis burns ; 1 on Daphnis burn this laurel. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. Such love on Daphnis, as when a heifer, tired with ranging after the bull through lands and groves, at length in absolute despair lies down on the green rushes by a rivulet of water, nor is mindful to withdraw from the late hour of night : Let fuch love on Daphnis feize; nor let his cure be my concern. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. These garments the faithlets shepherd left with me fome time ago, the dear pledges of himfelf : Which to thee, O earth, in the very entrance I now commit : These pledges owe to me the return of Daphnis. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. These herbs, and these baneful plants, in Pontus gathered, Moeris himself gave me; in Pontus they numerous grow. By these have I feen Moeris transform himfelf into a wolf, and skulk into the woods; often from their deep graves call forth the ghofts;; and transfer the fpringing harvefts to another ground. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. Bring forth the afhes, Amaryllis, throw them into a flowing brook, and over thy head: Look not back. Daphnis with thefe will I affail: Nought he regards the Gods; nought he regards my charms. My charms, bring Daphnis from the town, bring Daphnis home to me. See, the very afhes have fpontaneous feized the altars with quivering flames, while I delay to remove them: May it be a happy omen. Something here, I know not what, appears; and Hylax in the entrance barks. Can I believe? or do those in love form to themfelves fantaftic dreams? Ceafe, for Daphnis comes from the town, now ceafe, my charms.

ECLOGUE NINTH.

LYCIDAS, MOERIS.

L. WHITHER is Moeris bound? Are you for the town, whither the way leads ?

M. Ah Lycidas, we have lived to fee the day when an alien poffeffor of my little farm (what we never apprehended) may fay: Thefe are mine; old tenants, begone. Now vanquished and disconsolate, fince fortune turns all things topfy turvy, to him I convey thefe kids, of which I wish him little good.

L. Sure I heard that your Menalcas had faved by his verfe all that ground where the hills begin invisibly to withdraw, and by an easy declension, to fink down their ridges as far as the stream, and now broken tops of the old beech.

M. Thou heardft it, Lycidas, and it was reported: But our verfe juft as much avails amidft martial arms; as they fay the Chaonian pigeons do, when the eaglecomes upon them. But had not the ill-boding raven, from an hollow ever-green, oak warned me by any means to break off new pleas; neither your Moeris here, nor Menalcas himfelf, had been this day alive. L. Alas ! is any one capable of fo great wickednefs ! Alas, Menalcas, the charms of thy poetry were almoft fnatched from us with thyfelf ! Who then had fung the Nymphs ? Who with flowery herbs had ftrewed the ground, or covered with verdant fhade the fprings ? Or who had fung those fongs which lately I fecretly ftole from you, when you reforted to your darling Amaryllis ? "Feed, Tityrus, my goats, till I return ; fhort " is the way : And when they are fed, drive them, Ti-" tyrus, to watering : And while you are fo doing, be-" ware of meeting the he-goat ; he butts with the " horn."

M. Nay rather thefe, which to Varus, and yet unfinished, he fung: "Varus, the tuneful swains shall "raife thy name aloft to the stars, if Mantua remain "but in our possession, Mantua, alas! too near unfor-"tunate Cremona!"

L. If thou retained any, begin: So may thy fwarms avoid Cyrnean yews: So may thy heifers, fed with Cytifus, diftend their dugs. Me too the mufes have dubbed a poet 1 too have my verfes, and our fhepherds call me bard; but to them I give no credit: For as yet methinks I fing nothing worthy of a Varus or a Cinna; but only gabble as a goofe among fonorous fwans.

M. That, Lycides, is what I am about; and now con it over in filence with myfelf, if I can recollect it : Nor is it a vulgar fong. "Come hither, Galatea; "for what pleafure have you among the roaring waves? "Here is blooming fpring: Here, about the rivers, "earth pours forth her various flowers: Here the white "poplar overhangs the grotto, and the limber vines "weave fhady bowers. Come hither: Leave the mad "billows to buffet the fhores."

L. But what are thefe, which I heard you finging in a clear night alone? I remember the air, if I could recollect the words.

M. Daphnis, why gaze you with admiration on the rifings of the figus, which are of ancient date? Lo, Dionaean Caefar's ftar is entered on its course: The ftar, at whose rifing the fields were to rejoice with corn; at whole rifing the grapes on funny hills were to take on their purple hue. Daphnis, plant thy pear-trees. Pofterity shall pluck the fruit of thy plantations. Age impairs all things, even the mind itself. Often, I remember, when a boy, I fung long fummer days quite down the sky. Now all these forgs I have forgot: Now the voice itself has left Moeris; the wolves have feen Moeris first. But these Menalcas himfelf will often enough recite to you.

L. By framing excufes you tedioufly fufpend my fond defire. And now the whole furface of the main for thee lies fmooth and ftill; and mark how every whifpering breeze of wind hath died away: Befides, half of our journey ftill remains; for Bianor's tomb begins to appear. Here, where the fwains are ftripping off the thick leaves, here, Moeris, let us fing. Here lay down your kids: Yet we fhall reach the town betimes. Or if we are afraid left the night fhould gather rain before we arrive, yet we may ftill go on finging; the way will be lefs tedious. That we may go on finging, I will eafe you of this burden.

M. Shepherd, urge me no more, and let us mind the business now on hand. We shall fing those tunes to more advantage when Menalcas himself arrives.

ECLOGUE TENTH.

GALLUS.

INDULGE me, Arethufa, this last effay. A few verfes, but fuch as Lycoris herfelf may read, I must fing to my Gallus. Who can deny a verfe to Gallus? So when thou glidest beneath Sicilian waves, may brackish Doris not intermingle her stream with thine. Begin: Let us fing the anxious loves of Gallus, while the flatnofed goats browze the tender shrubs. We fing not to the deaf; the woods reply to all. What groves, ye virgin Naiads, or what lawns detained you, while

Gallus pined away with ill-requited love ? For neither any of Parnaffus's tops, nor thole of Pindus, nor Aonian Aganippe, the fountain of the muses, did retard you. There the very laurels, the very tamarifks condoled him : Even pine top'd Maenalus bemoaned him as he lay beneath a lonely rock ; and over him the stones of cold Lycaeus wept. His sheep too stand mourning around him, nor are they ashamed to share our griefs; nor of thy flock, divine poet, be thou ashamed : Even fair Adonis tended sheep along the fireams. The shepherd too came up: The flow-paced neat-herds came : Menalcas came wet from gathering winter-maste. All interrogate whence this thy love? Apollo came : Gallus, he fays, why ravest thou thus ? Lycoris, for whom you pine, is following another lover through fnows, and horrid camps. Silvanus too came up with rural honours on his head, waving the flowery fennels and big lilies that adorned his brow. Pan, the God of Arcadia, came; whom we ourfelves beheld stained with the elder's purple berries and vermilion. What bounds, he fays, will you fet to mourning ? Love regards not fuch vain lamentations. Nor cruel love with tears, nor graffy meads with ftreams, nor bees with cytifus, nor goats with browze are fatisfied. But he overwhelmed with grief: Yet you, Arcadians, he fays, shall fing these my wees on your mountains. Ye Arcadians only skilled in fong, O how foftly then my bones shall rest, if your pipe in future times shall fing my loves ! And would to heaven I had been one of you, and either keeper of your flock, or vintager of the ripe grape ! Sure, whether Phyllis or Amyntas, or whoever elfe had been my love, (what though Amyntas be fwarthy? The violet is black, and hyacinths are black) they would have repofed with me among the willows under the limber vine : Phyllis had gathered garlands for me, and Amyntas should have fung. Here are cool fountains ; here, Lycoris, foft flowery meads ; here a delicious grove : Here with thee I could confume my whole life away. Now love frantic, through despair detains me in the fervice of rigid Mars, in the midit of darts and adverse foes. Thou, far from thy native land (yet let me not believe it) beholdest nothing but Alpine fnows, and the colds of the Rhine; Ah ! hard-hearted fair ! alone, and without me. Ah ! heaven forbid that these colds should hurt thee ! that the fharp ice fhould wound thy tender feet ! I will go and " warble on the Sicilian shepherd's reed, those fongs which are by me composed in Euphorion's elegiac strain. I am refolved, rather than pursue thee thus in vain, to fubmit to toils and dangers in the woods, among the dens of wild beafts, and to inferibe my loves upon the tender trees : As they grow up, fo you, my loves, will grow. Mean while with mingled troops of nymphs, over Maenalas will I range, or hunt the fierce boars. No colds shall hinder me from traversing with my hounds, the Parthenian lawns around. Now over rocks and refounding groves methinks I roam; pleafed I am to shoot Cyrdonian shafts from the parthian bow : Foot that I am ! as if these were a cure for the rage of love ; or as if that God were capable of being foftened by human woes. Now neither the nymphs of the groves, nor fongs themselves charm me any more : Even to you, ye woods, once more I bid adieu. No fuffererings can alter him; not though in midft of frofts we drink of hebrus, and undergo the Sithonian fnows of rainy winter; nor should we tend our flocks in Ethiopia, beneath the fign of cancer, when the dying rhind is withered on the stately elm. Love conquers all; and let us yield to love. These verses, ye divine muses, it shall fuffice your poet to have fung, while he fat and wove his little basket of slender ofiers : These you will make acceptable to Gallus : To Gallus, for whom my love grows as much every hour, as the green alder shoots up in the infancy of spring. Let us arile : The evening-shade uses to prove noxious to fingers ; even the juniper's shade, at other times the most wholesome, now grows noxious; the evening-shades are hurtful even to the corn. Go home, the evening ftar arifes; my full-fed goats, go home.

Cij

VIRGIL'S

GEORGICS.

BOOK FIRST.

THAT makes the fields of corn joyous; under what fign, Maecenas, it is proper to turn the earth, and join the vines to elms; what care is requisite for kine, the nurture for breeding theep and leffer cattle; and what experience for managing the frugal bees; hence will I begin to fing. Ye brightest luminaries of the world, that lead the year fliding along the fky ; thou Bacchus and fostering Ceres, if by your bounty mortals exchanged Chaonian mafte for fattening ears of corn, and mingled draughts of achelous with the invented juice of the grape : And ye fauns propitious to the Iwains, ye fauns and virgin dryads, both come tripping up together : Your bounteous gifts I fing. And thou, O Neptune, to whom the earth, ftruck with thy mighty trident, firft poured forth the neighing flead ; and thou inhabitant of the groves, for whom three hundred inow-white bullock's cropt Caea's fertile thickets : Thou too, O Pan, guardian of the sheep, O Tegeaean god, if thy own Maenalas be thy care, draw nigh propitious, leaving a rubile thy native grove, and the lands of Lycaeus : And thou, Minerva, inventrels of the olive ; and thou, O boy, who taught the ufe of the crooked plough. And thou, Silvenus, bearing a tender cyprus plucked up by the root: Ye Gods and Goddeffes all, whole province it is to guard the fields, both ye who ncurifh the infant fruits that fpring from no feed fown by the hand of man; and ye who on the fown fruits fend down the liberal flower from heaven.

And chiefly thou, great Caefar, whom 'tis yet uncertain which council of the Gods is foon to have : Whether thou wilt youchfafe to vifit cities, and undertake the care of countries, and the widely extended globe receive thee; giver of the fruits, and ruler of the feasons, binding thy temples with thy mother's myrtle: Or whether thou comest, God of the unmeafured ocean, and mariners worfhip thy divinity alone : Whether remotest Thule is to be fubject to thee, and Tethys to purchase thee for her fon-in-law with all her waves : Or whether thou wilt take thy feat among the flars, join thyfelf to the flow months, a new constellation, where fpace lies open for thy reception, between Erigone and the fcorpion's purfuing claws : The fcorpion himfelf, impatient for thy coming, already contracts his arms, and leaves for thee more than an equal proportion of the fky. Whatever deity thou wilt be; (for let not Tartarus expect thee for its king, nor let. fuch dire luft of fway once enter thy mind : Though Greece admires her Elyfian fields, and Proferpine redemanded cares not to follow her mother to the upper world) grant me an cafy course, favour my adventrous enterprife; and, pitying with me the fwains. who are strangers to their way, commence a god, and accultom thyfelf even now to be invoked by prayers.

In early fpring, when the melted fnows glide down the hoary hills, and the crumbling glebe unbinds itfelf by the zephyr, then let my fleer begin to groan under the deep preffed plough, and the fhare worn on the furrow begin to glitter. That field at laft anfwers the wifnes of the covetous farmer, which twice hath felt the fummer's fun, and twice the colds of winter : Harvefts immenfe have even burft his barns,

But, before we cut an up nown plain with the conlter, let it be our care previoufly to learn the winds.

C iij

Book I.

and various quality of the climate; the ways of culture practifed by our forefathers, and the genius and habits of the foil ; what each country is apt to produce, and what to refuse. Here corn, there grapes more happily grow : Nurferies of trees elfewhere, and herbs spontaneous bloom. Don't you see how Tmolus fends us faffron odours, India ivory, the foft Sabaeans their frankincenfe? But the naked Chalvbes fteel, Pontus ftrong scented caftor, Epirus the prime of the Olympic Mares? These laws and eternal regulations, nature from the beginning imposed on certain places, what time Deucalion first threw thefe stones into the unpeopled world, whence men, a hardy race, fprung up. Come then, let your flurdy fleers turn up a foil that is rich forthwith from the first months of the year : And let the dufty fummer bake the lying clods with funs mature and vigorous. But, if the land, be not fertile, it will be sufficient to raife it up with a light furrow, even fo late as towards the rifing of Arcturus : In the former cafe, left weeds obftruct the joyous corn : In the latter, left the fcanty moisture forfake the barren fandy foil.

You shall likewise suffer your lands after reaping to reft every other year, and the field to harden, and be evergrown with fourf. Or, changing the leafon, you shall fow there yellow wheat, whence before you have taken up a joyful crop of pulle, with rattling pods, or the vetch's flender offspring, and the bitter lupine's brittle stalks, and rustling grove. For a crop of flax burns the land; as also oats and poppies impregnated with Lethaean fleep. But yet your labour will be cafy, even though you should for these kinds of grain every other year, provided only you be not backward to faturate the parched foil with rich dung; nor to fcatter fordid ashes upon the exhausted lands : Thus too, with this precaution, your land, will reft merely by changing the grain. Mean while, should your field remain untilled for one year, it would not be ungrateful.

Often too it has been of use to fet fire to barrenlands, and burn light furble in crackling flames: Whether the land from thence receives fecret ftrength and rich nourifhment, as is the cafe with land that is poor; or whether every vicious difpolition is exhaled by the fire, and the fuperfluous moifture fweats off, as it bappens if the foil be watery; or whether the heat opens more paffages, and fecret pores, through which the fap may be derived into the new born herbs, which is the cafe of the fliff clay; or whether it hardens more, and binds the gaping veins, as happens to a fpungy foil; that the fmall showers, or keen influence of the violent fun, or penetrating cold of Boreas may not hurt it.

He too greatly improves the lands, who breaks the fluggifh clods with harrows, and drags ofier hurdles over them (nor does yellow Ceres view him with an unpropitious eye from high Olympus) and he alfo who, after the plain has once been torn, again breaks through the land that raifes up its ridges, and gives it a fecond furrow, turning the plough acrofs, and vexes it with frequent exercise, and rules his lands imperiously.

Pray, ye fwains, for moist fummers, and ferene winters. In winter's dust most joyful is the corn, joyful is the field. This improves the fertile mysia more than all her culture; and hence even Gargarus admires his own harvests.

Why fhould I fpeak of him, who immediately after fowing the feeds, perfecutes the lands anew, and levels the heaps of barren fand? Then on the fpringing corn derives the ftream and ductile rills? And when the field is fcorehed with raging heat, the herbs all dying, lo from the brow of a billy track he decoys the torrent: Which falling down the fmooth-worz rocks, awakes the hoarfe murmur, and with gurgling ftreams allays the thirfty lands.

Why of bim, who, left the ftalk with over-loaded ears fall to the ground, feeds down the luxuriance of the crop in the tender blade, when first the springing corn is equal with the furrow? And who drains from soaking fand the collected moisture of the marsh? Chiefly when, in the variable rainy months, the overflowing river bursts from its banks away, and overspreads all around with flimy mud, whence the hollow dykes sweat with tepid vapour.

Book. I.

Nor-after all (when the labours of men and oxen have thus been tried in cultivating the ground) does the deftroying goole, the Strymonian cranes, and fuccury with its bitter roots, nought hurt the growing corn, or nought the shade injure. Father Yove himself willed the ways of tillage not to be easy, and first commanded to cultivate the fields by art, whetting the minds of mortals with care; nor fuffered he his reign to lie inactive in heavy floth. Before Jove, no husbandman fubdued the fields : nor was it fo much as lawful to mark out, or by limits divide the ground. They enjoyed all things in common; and earth of herfelf produced every thing freely, without any folicitation. He infused the noxious poifon into the horrid ferpent, commanded the wolves to prowl, and the fea to be put into commotion; he shook the honey from the leaves, removed fire out of mortals fight, and reftrained the wine that ran commonly in rivulets : That experience by dint of thought might gradually hammer out the various arts of life, in furrows feek the blades of corn, and from the veins of flint, strike out the hidden fire. Then first the rivers felt the hollowed alders : Then the feaman gave the flars their numbers and their names ; the Pleiades, Hyades, and the bright Bear of Lycaon. Then was invented the catching of wild beafts in toils, the deceiving with bird-lime, and the encompaffing the fpecious lawns with hounds. And now one, feeking the depths, lashes the broad river with his cast. ing-net : And on the fea, another drags his humid lines along. Then the rigid force of fteel, and the flat lingot of the grating faw (for the first mortals clove the fiftile wood with wedges) then various arts enfued. Inceffant labour and want, in hardships urgent, furmounted every. obstacle. First Ceres taught mortals with steel to turn the ground : When now the mafte and arbutes of the facred wood failed, and Dodona denied her wonted fustenance. Soon too was diffres inflicted on the corn: That noxious mill-dew should eat the stalks, and the lazy useles thiftle shoot up its horrid spikes in the field. The crops of corn die; burrs and caltrops, a rugged prickly wood, fucceed : And, amidit the gay fhining fields, unhappy darnels, and barren wild oats bear fway. But unlefs you both vex the ground with affiduous harrows, fright away the birds with noife, and with the pruning knife reftrain the fhades of the darkened field, and by prayers call down the fhowers; alas! while the labour proves in vain, thou fhalt view another's ample flore, and in the woods folace thy hunger by fhaking acorns from the oak.

We must also describe what are the instruments used by the hardy fwain; without which the crops could neither be fown nor fpring. First the share, and heavy timber of the plough, and the flow-rolling wains of the Eleufinian mother Cercs, the planks and fleds for preffing out the corn, and the harrows of unwieldy weight : Besides the mean ofier furniture of Celeus, arbute hurdles, and the myftic van of Bacchus. All which with mindful forefight you will provide long before-hand, if the blifsful country has due honour in ftore for thee. Straight in woods the flubborn elm bent with vaft force, is fubdued into the plough-tail, and receives the form of the crooked plough. To this at the lower end are fitted a beam extended eight feet in length, two earthboards, and share beams with their double back. The light lime tree alfo is felled before hand for the yoke, and the tall beech, and the plough flaff, to turn the bottom of the carriage behind. And the imoke feafons the wood hung up in chimnies.

I can recite to you many precepts of the ancients, unlefs you decline them, and think it not worth while to learn thefe triffing cares. The threfhing floor chiefly muft be levelled with the huge cylindric roller, and wrought with the hand, and confolidated with binding chalk; that weeds may not fpring up, and that overpowered with drought it may not chap. Then various pefts mock your boyer. Oftentimes the tiny moufe has built its cell, and made its granaries; or the moles, deprived of fight, have dug their lodges under ground. And in the cavities has the toad been found, and vermin which the earth produces in abundance: The weevil plunders vaft heaps of corn; and the ant, fcarful of indigent old age, Obferve alfo, when the almond fhall clothe itfelf abundantly with bloffoms in the woods, and bend its fragrant boughs: If the rifing fruit exceed the leaver in number, in like quantity the corn will follow, and a great threfhing with great heat will enfue. But, if the fhady boughs abound with luxuriance of leaves, in vain the floor fhall bruife the flaks fertile only in chaff.

'Tis true I have feen many fowers artificially prepare their feeds, and fleep them firft in nitre and black leas of oil, that the produce might be larger in the fallacious pods. And though, to precipitate them, they were foaked over a flow fire, felected long, and proved with much labour, yet have I feen them degenerate : Unlefs human induftry with the hand culled out the largeft every year. Thus all things, by deftiny, hafte into decay, and, gliding away, infenfibly are driven backward: Not otherwife than he who rows his boat with much ado againft the ftream, if by chance he flackens his arms, is inflantly gone, and the tide hurries him headlong down the river.

Further, the ftars of Arcturus, and the days of the kids, and the fhining dragon, muft be as much observed by us, as by those who, homeward born across the main, attempt the Euxine sea, and the ftraits of oyfterbreeding Abydus.

When Libra makes the hours of day and night equal, and now divides the globe in the middle between light and fhades; then work your bullocks, ye fwains, fow barley in the fields, till towards the laft fhower of the inclement winter folftice. Then too is the time to hide in the ground a crop of flax, and the poppy of Ceres, and high time to ply your harrows, whilft the ground yet dry, you may, whilft the clouds are yet fufpended.

In the fpring is the fowing of beans : Then thee too, O medic plant ! the rotten furrows receive, and Millet comes, an annual care ; when the bright bull with gilded horns opens the year, and the dog fets, giving way to the backward ftar. But if you labour the ground for a wheat harveft, and ftrong grain, and are bent on bearded cars alone ; let the Pleiades in the morning be fet, and let the Gnofian ftar of Ariadne's blazing crown emerge from the fun, before you commit to the furrows the feed defigned, and before you haften to truft the unwilling earth with the hopes of the year. Many have begun before the fetting of Maia; but the expected crop hath mocked them with empty ears. But if you are to fow vetches, and mean kidney-beans, nor defpife the care of the Egyptian lentil; fetting Bootes will afford thee figns not obfcure. Begin, and extend thy fowing to the middle of the frofts.

For this purpose, the golden fun, through the twelve constellations of the world, rules the globe measured out into certain portions. Five zones embrace the heavens: Whereof one is ever glowing with the flashy fun, and scorched for ever by his fire : Round which, two others on the extremities of the globe to right and left are extended, pinched and frozen up with caerulean ice, and horrid showers of snow. Between these and the middle zones, two by the bounty of the Gods are given to weak mortals, and a path cut through both, where the feries of the figns might revolve obliquely. As the world rifes up on high towards Scythia and the Raphaean hills; fo bending towards the fouth winds of Lybia, it is depreffed. The one pole to us is ftill elevated : But the other under our feet is feen by gloomy Styx, and the infernal ghofts. Here, after the manner of a river, the huge dragon glides away with tortuous windings, around and through between the two bears, the bears that fear to be dipt in the ocean. There, as they report, either dead night for ever reigns in filence, and, outspread, wraps all things up in darkness; or elfe Aurora returns thither from us, and brings them back the day : And, when the rifing fun first breathes on us with panting fteeds, there ruddy Vefper lights up his late illuminations.

Hence we are able to foreknow the feafons when the fky is dubious; hence the days of harveft, and the time of fowing; and when it is proper to fweep the faithlefs fea with oars, when to launch the armed fleets, or to fell the pine tree in the woods in feafon. Nor in vain do we fludy the fettings and the rifings of the figns, and the year equally divided into four different seasons. If at any time a bleak shower confines the husbandman, then is his time to provide many things, which. as foon as the fky is ferene, muft be done precipitantly. Then the plougman fharpens the hard point of the blunted share ; scoops little boats from trees, or stamps the mark on his fleep, or the number on his facks of Others point stakes, and two horned forks, and corn. prepare Amerine ofier bands for the limber vine, Now let the pliant basket of bramble twigs be wove : Now parch your grain over the fire, now grind it with the mill-ftone. For even on holy-days, divine and human laws permit to perform fome works. No religion hath forbid to drain the fields, to raife a fence before the corn, to lay fnares for birds, to fire the thorns, and plunge in the wholefome river a flock of bleatingsheep. Oftentimes the driver of the fluggish als loads his ribs with oil, or low rated apples: And, in his return from the town, brings back an indented mill-flone. or a mais of black pitch.

The moon too hath allotted days aufpicious to works. some in one order, some in another. Shun the fifth : On this, pale Pluto and the Furies were born. Then at a hideous birth, the earth brought forth Coeus, Iapetus, and ftern Typhoeus; and all the giant brothers who confpired to fcale the fkies : For thrice they did effay to lay Offa upon Pelion, and to roll woody Olympus upon Offa: Thrice father Jove with his thunder, overthrew the piled-up mountains. The feventh, next to the tenth, is lucky both to plant the vine, and break the oxen first caught in the yoke, and to add the woof to the web :. The ninth is better for a journey, but adverse to thefts. Many works too have fucceeded better in the cold night; or when, at the rifing of the fun, the morn fprinkles the dews upon the earth. By night the light stubble, by night the parched meadows are better shorn : The clammy dews fail not by night. And fome by the late fires, their winter light, watch all night long, and with the fharp steel shape matches into a tapering point. Mean while, by fong, his spouse cheering her tedious labour, runs over the webs with the shrill founding shuttle: Or over the fire boils away the liquor of the luscious must, and scums with leaves the tide of the trembling caldron.

Book I.

But reddening Ceres is cut down in noon-tide heat ; and in noon-tide heat, the floor threfhes out the parched grain. Plow naked, and fow naked : Winter is an inactive time for the hind. In the colds of winter, the farmers mostly enjoy the fruit of their labour; and rejoicing with one another, provide mutual entertainments: The genial winter invites them, and relaxes their cares. As weather beaten ships, when now they have reached the port, and the joyous mariners have planted garlands on the fterns. But yet then is the time both to stripe the maste of oak, and the bay-berries, the olive, and the bloody myrtle berries liben to fet springs for cranes, and nets for stags, and to purfue the long eared hares : And, whirling the hempen thongs of the Balearian fling, to pierce the does, when the fnow lies deep, when the rivers flove the ice along.

Why fhould I fpeak of the ftorms and conftellations of autumn? And what accidents must be guarded against by the fwains, when now the day is shorter, and the fummer more foft and mild? Or when the showery spring pours down its stores; what time the fpiky harvest briftles in the fields, and when the milky corn fwells on the green stalk ? Often have I feen, when the farmer had just brought the reaper into the yellow fields, and was now binding up the barley with the brittle ftraw ; often have I feen all the fiercenefs of the winds combine, which far and wide tore up full-loaded corn from the loweft roots, and toffed it up on high : Juft fo with blackening whirlwind, a wintery ftorm would drive light ftraw and flying ftubble. Often also an immense band of vapours gathers on the sky, and clouds collected from the deep brew thick a deformed ftorm of black fhowers : The lofty fky pours down, and with torrents of rain fweeps away the joyful corns, and labours of the oxen: The ditches are filled, and the deep rivers fwell with roaring noife; and in the fleaming frothy friths, the fea boils and rages. Father Yove himfelf, amidft a night of clouds, laftes the flafty thunders with his right hand: With the violence of which, earth trembles to its utmost extent: The beafts are fled; and through the nations humble fear hath funk the hearts of men. He with his flaming bolt ftrikes down, or Athos, or Rhodope, or the high Ceraunia : The fouth winds redouble, and the fhower is more and more condenfed; now the woods, now the fhores in howling notes refound with the tempeftuous wind.

 $-\Sigma$

In fear of this, observe the months and constellations of the heavens; which way the cold ftar of Saturn shapes his course ; towards which of the heavenly orbs, Mercury's fiery planet wanders. Above all, pay veneration to the Gods; and renew to great Ceres the facred annual rites, offering up thy facrifice upon the joyous turf, at the expiring of the last days of winter, when now the fpring comes on ferene. Then the lambs are fat, and then the wines most mellow : Then flumbers on the hills are fweet, and thick the fhades. In thy behalf let all the rural youths adore Cercs : In honour of whom mix thou the honey-comb with milk and gentle wine; and thrice let the aufpicious victim go round the recent grain : Which let the whole chorus of the village and thy affociates accompany in jovial mood, and with acclamation invite Ceres into their -dwellings. Nor let any one put the fickle to the ripe corn, till, in honour of Ceres, having his temples bound with wreathed oak, he perform the ruftic artlefs dance, and fing hymns,

And that we may learn these things by certain figns, both heats and rains, and cold-bringing winds, father Jove himself has appointed what the monthly moon should betoken; with what signs concomitant the fouth-winds should fall; from what common observations the husbandman should learn to keep his herds nearer their stalls. •

Straight, when the winds are rifing, the friths of the fea with toffings begin to fwell, and a dry crashing. noife to be heard in the high mountains : Or the farfounding fhores begin to be diffurbed, and the murmursof the grove to rife louder and louder. Now hardly the billows refrain from the crooked thips, when the cormorants fly fwiftly back to land from the midit of the fea, and fend their fcreams to the fhore; and when the fea-coots fport on the beach; and the heron forfakes the well-known fens, and foars above the lofty cloud. Often too, when wind is approaching, you shall fee the stars shoot precipitant from the sky; and behind them long trails of flame whiten athwart the fhades of night : Often the light chaff and fallen leaves flutter about : Or feathers fwimming on the furface of the water, frifk together.

But when it lightens from the quarter of furly Boreas, and when the house of Eurus and of Zephyrus thunders, all the fields are floated with full ditches, and every mariner on the fea furls his humid fails. Showers never hurt any unforewarned : Either the airy cranes have fhunned it in the deep vallies as it rofe : Or the heifer, looking up to heaven, hath fnuffed the air with wide noftrils : Or the chattering fwallow hath fluttered about the lakes; and the frogs croaked their old complaint in the mud. And often the ant, wearing a narrow path, hath conveyed her eggs from her fecret cell : The fpacious bow hath - drunk deep : And an army of ravens, on their return from feeding, have beat the air, and made a noife, with wings clofe crowded. Now you may obferve the various fea fowls, and those that rummage for their food about the Afius's meads, in Cayfter's pleafant lakes, keenly lave the copious dews upon their shoulders; now on the banks offer their heads to the working tides, now run into the streams, and sportive joy with eagernefs to wash their plumes in vain. Then the inaufpicious crow with full throat invites the rain, and folitary stalks by herself on the dry fand. Nor were even the maids, carding their tafks of wool by night, ignorant of the approaching ftorm ; when they faw the oil fputter in the heated potfheard-lomp, and foul fungeus clots grow thick around the wick.

Nor with lefs eafe may you forefee, and by fure figns diftern fun fhine fucceeding rain, and open ferene skies. For neither are the ftars then feen with blunted edge, nor the moon to rife obfcure, as indebted to her brother's beams : Nor thin fleecy clouds to be carried through the fky. Nor do Thetis's beloved haleyons expand their wings upon the fhore to the warm fun: The impure fwine are not heedful to tofs about with their fnouts loofened bundles of firaw. But the mifts fink down to the lower grounds, and reft upon the plain :-And the owl, observant of the fetting fun from the high houfe top, practifes her evening fongs in vain. Wifus, transformed into a harwk, in the clear fky appears aloft, and Scylla, in form of the lark, is punished for having cut her father's purple lock. Wherever the flying, cots the light air with her wings, lo hoftile, implacable Nifus, with loud fcreams purfues her through the fky : Where Nifus mounts into the fky, fhe, fwiftly flying, cuts the light air with her wings. Then the ravens with compressed throat thrice or four times repeat their notes clear and shrill : And often in their towering nefts, affected with I know not what unufual joy, they caw and make a buffle together among the leaves : The rains now paft, they are fond to revisit their. little offfpring, and beloved nefts. Not indeed, I am perfuaded, as if they had a spirit of difeerument from the gods, or superior knowledge of things by fate ; but when the temperature of the air and fluctuating vapours have changed their courfes, and Jove, veiled in flowers, by his fouth wind condenfes those things which just before were rare, and rarefies what things were denfe ; the images of their minds are altered, and their breafts receive now motions of one fort, now of another, while the wind rolled the clouds. Hence that concert of birds in the fields, and hence the cattle frifking for joy, and the ravens exulting in hoarfe notes.

But if you give attention to the rapid fun, and the moons in order following; the hour of enfuing morn shall never cheat you, nor shall you be deceived by the treacherous afpect of a night fair and ferene. When first the moon collects the returning rays, if with horns obfcure the inclose dusky air; a walt form of rain is preparing for the fwains and mariners. But, if the shall foread a virgin bluth over her face, wind will enfue: Golden Phœbe still reddens with wind. But if at her fourth rising (for that is the most unerring monitor) the walks along the fky pure and bright, norwith blunted horns; both that whole day, and all those that shall come after it, till the month be finished, shall be free from rain and winds : And the mariners, preferved from foipwreck, shall pay their vows upon the shore to Glaucus, Panopea, and Melicerta, Ino's fon.

The fun too, both riling, and when he fets in the waves, will give figns. The fureft figns attend the fun, both those which he brings in the morning, and those when the stars arise. When he shall chequer his . new-born face with fpots, hid in a cloud, and coyly flux the fight with half his orb, you may then fufpect flowers; for the fouth wind, pernicious to trees, and corn, and flocks, haftens from the fea. Or when, at the dawn, the rays shall break and featter themselves diversely among thick clouds; or when Aurora, leaving the faffron-bed of Tithonus, rifes pale ; ah, the vine leaf will then but ill defend the mild ripening grapes ; fo thick. the horrid hail bounds rattling on the roofs. This, too, it will be more advantageous to remember, when, having measured the heavens, he is just fetting; for often we see various colours wander over his face. The azure threatens rain ; the fiery, ftorms of wind. But if the fpots begin to be blended with bright fire; then you shall fee all embroiled together with wind and drifts of rain. Let none advife me that night to launch into the deep, nor to tear my cable from the land. But if. both when he ufhers in, and when he fhuts up the revolving day, his orb is clear and lucid; in vain shall you be alarmed by the clouds, but you shall fee woodswaved by the fair north wind.

In fine, the fun will give the figns of what weather late Vefper brings, from what quarter the wind will soll the clouds ferene and fair, what humid Aufter me-

Diii

Digitized by Google

Book I.

ditates. Who dares to call the fun a deceiver? He even forewarns often that dark infurrections are at hand; and that treachery and fecret wars are fwelling to a head. He alfo fympathized with Rome on Cæfar's death, when he covered his bright head with a dark enfanguined hue, and the impious age feared eternal night. Though at that time the earth too, and ocean's watery plains, dogs in hideous howlings, and birds, by importunate unseasonable screams, gave ominous figns. How often have we feen Mount Ætna from its burft furnaces boil over in waves on the lands of the Cyclops, and fhoot up into the air globes of flame and molten rocks ? Germany heard a clashing of arms over all the sky; the Alps trembled with uncommon earthquakes. A mighty voice too was commonly heard through the filent groves, and spectres, hideously pale, were scen under cloud of night; and the very cattle (O horrid !) Rivers flopped their courfes, earth yawned ipoke. wide. The mourning ivory weeps in the temples, and the brazen statues sweat. Eridanus, supreme of rivers, overflowed, whirling in his furious eddy whole woods along, and bore away the herds with their stalls over all the plains. Nor at the fame time did either the fibres fail to appear threatening in the baleful entrails, or fireams of blood to flow from the wells ; and cities to refound aloud with wolves howling by night. Never did lightning fall in greater quantities from a ferene fky; nor did direful comets fo often blaze. For this Philippi twice hath feen the Roman armies in inteltine war engage; nor feemed it unbecoming to the gods, that Emathia, and the extensive plains of Haemus, fhould twice be fattened with our blood. Nay, and the time shall come, when in those regions the husbandman, labouring the ground with the crooked plough, shall find javelins half-confumed with corrofive ruft; or with his cumbrous harrows shall clash on empty helmets ; and having dug up graves, admire at the huge bones.

Ye guardian deities of my country, ye Indigetes, and thou, O Romulus, and mother Vefta, who prefideft over the Tuscan Tiber, and the palaces of Romes forbid it not at least that this young prince repair the ruins of the age. Long fince have we with our blood atoned for the perjuries of Laomedon's Troy. Long fince, O Cæfar, the courts of Heaven envy us the pofferfion of thee, and complain that thou art concerned about the triumphs of mortals. Since among them the diffinctions of right and wrong are perverted; fo many wars, fo many species of crimes, prevail throughout the world : The plough has none of those honours that are its due : The fields lie wafte, their owners forced to bear arms; and the crooked forthes are forged into rigid fwords. Here Euphrates ; there Germany raifes war : Neighbouring cities, having broke their mutual leagues, take arms against each other : Pitilefs Mars rages over all the world. As when the four-horfed chariots have flarted from the goal, they fly out twifter and fwifter to the race, and the charioteer, ftretching in vain the bridle, is hurried away by the fteeds; nor is the chariot heedful of the reins.

Digitized by Google

42

Book I:

BOOK SECOND.

THUS far of the culture of fields, and of the confiellations of the heavens : Now, Bacchus, will I fing of thee, and with thee of woodland trees, and of the flow-growing olive's offspring. Hither, O Father Isenzus, (here all is full of thy bounties; for thee the field, laden with the viny harveft, flourifhes; for thee the vintage foams in the foll vats :) Hither, O Father Lenzus, come; and, having thy buskins ftript offs, flain thy naked legs with me in new wine.

Firft, Nature is various in producing trees: For fome, without any cogent means applied by men, come freely of their own accord, and widely overfpread the plains and winding rivers: As the foft ofier, and limber broom, the poplar and the whitening willows, with fea-green leaves. But fome arife from deposited feed: As the lofty chefauts, and the Æfculus, most majestic of the groves, which, in honour of Jove, fhoots forth its leaves; and the oaks reputed oracular by the Greeks. To others a most luxuriant wood of fuckers springs from the roots : As the cherries and the elms. Thus too the little bay of Parnaffus raifes itfelf under its mother's diffusive shade. Nature at first ordained these means for the production of trees : By these every species blooms, of woods, and fhrubs, and facred groves. Others there are, which experience has found out for itfelf by art. One, cutting off the fuckers from the tender body of their mother, fets them in the furrows : Another buries the flocks in the ground, and flakes, whole bottom is fplit in four, and poles with the wood fharpened to a point : Some trees luxuriant expect the bent-down arches of a layer, and living nurferies in their own native foil. Others have no need of any root : And the planter makes no fcruple to commit to earth the topmost shoots, giving them back to her care. Nay, (what is wondrous to relate) even after her trunk is cut in pieces, the olive tree shoots forth roots from the dry wood. Often we fee the boughs of one tree transformed, with no difadvantage, into those of another; and a pear tree thus changed bears ingrafted apples; and ftony Cornelian cherries grow upon plumbtree flocks.

Wherefore come on, O hufbandmen, learn the culture proper to each kind, and foften the wild fruits by cultivation: Nor let even poor and infertile grounds lie neglected; It is worth while to plant even rugged mountains, fuch as Ifmarus, with vines, and clothe vaft Taburnus with olives.

And thou, my glory, to whom I justly owe the greateft portion of my fame, be prefent, O Mæcenas; purfue with me this take begun, and flying, fet fail on thisfea, now opening wide. I choofe not to comprize allin my verfe: Not though I had an hundred tongues, an hundred mouths, and an iron voice: Be prefent, and coaft along the neareft flore. The land is fill in view. I will not here detain thee with fictitious fong, nor with circumlocution and tedious preamble.

Those which spring up spontaneously into the regions of light, are unfruitful indeed ; but they rife vigorous and ftrong : For in the foil lies hid fome natural quality peculiarly fuited to them. Yet, if any one ingraft even these, or deposit them transplanted in trenches well prepared, they will put off their favage nature, and by frequent culture will not be flow to follow whatever arts and methods of improvement you call them to. And the fuckers also, which fprout up barren from the low roots, will do the fame, if they be diffribated through fields where they have room to firike their roots : Now in their natural flate the high fhoots. and branches of the mother overshadow them, and hinder them from bearing fruit as they grow up, or plnchand ftarve them when they bear. The tree again, that is raifed from feed thrown into the ground, grows upflowly, fo as to form a shade for late posterity; and its fruits degenerate, forgetting their former juices : Thus even the vine bears forry clufters, a prey for birds. For labour must be bestowed on all; and all must be reduced into the trench, and tamed, and made prolific with . vast pains. But olives answer our wishes better when propagated by truncheons; vines, by layers; the myrtles of the Paphian goddefs, by fets from the folid wood. From fuckers the hard hazels grow the huge ash, and the poplar-tree that furnished Hercules his crown, and the oaks of the Chaoman father Jove: Thus also the bofty palm is propagated; and the fir-tree, doomed to visit the dangers of the main.

But the rugged arbute is ingrafted on the offspring of the walnut, and barren planes have borne ft out apple-trees. Chefnut-trees have borne beeches, and the mountain-afh hath whitened with the fnowy bloffoms of the pear: And fwine have crunched acorns under elms. Nor is the method of ingrafting and that of inoculating one and the fame: For inoculating is thus; where the buds thruft themfelves forth from the middle of the bark, and burft the flender coats, a fmall notch is made in the very knot: Hither they inclofe an eye from another tree, and teach it to unite with the moift rind. Or again, in ingrafting, the knotlefs flocks are cut, and a paffage is cloven deep into the folid wood with wedges: Then fertile cions are inferted: And in no long time a huge tree fhoots up to heaven with profperous boughs, and admires its new leaves, and fruits not its own.

Moreover, the species is not single, neither of strong elms, nor of willows, of the Lote-tree, nor of the Idzan cypreffes : Nor do the fat olives grow in one form, the Orchites, and the Radii, and the Paulia with bitter berries : Nor apples, and the orchards of Alcinous; nor are the shoots the same of the Crustumian and Syrian pears, and of the heavy Volemi. The fame vintage hangs not on our trees, which Lefbos gathers from the Methymnaean vine. There are the Thafian vines, and there are the white Marcotides; thefe fit for a rich foil, and those for a lighter one; and the Pfythian more ferviceable when dried, and the thinlight lageos, which will try the feet at length, and bind the tongue; the purple and the rathripe; and in what numbers shall I fing of thee, O Rhetian grape? Nor therefore vie thou with the Falernian cellars. There are also Amminean vines, best-bodied wines; which even Tmolus and Phanae king of mountains honours; and the fmaller argitis, which none can rival, either in yielding fo much juice, or in lafting fo many years. I must not pass thee over, Rhodian grape, grateful to the gods and fecond courfes; nor thee, bumastos, with thy swollen clusters. But we neither can recount how numerous the fpecies, nor what are their names; nor imports it to comprize their number; which whoever would know, the fame may feek to learn how numerous are the fands of the Libyan fea toffed by. the zephyr; or to know how many waves of the Ionian fea come rolling to the fhores, when Eurus, more violent, falls upon the fhips.

But neither can all foils bear all forts of trees. Willows grow along the rivers, and elders in miry fens; the barren wild aftes on rocky mountains. The flores rejoice most in myrtle-groves; Bacchus, in fine, loves open hills; the yews the north wind and the colds.

Survey also those parts of the globe that are fubdued and cultivated by hinds most remote, both the eastern habitations of the Arabians, and the painted Geloni. Countries are diffinguished by their trees. India alone bears black ebony : The frankincenfe-tree belongs to the Sabaeans only. Why fhould I mention to thee balms diftilling from the fragrant woods, and the berries of the ever-green acanthus? Why the forefts of the Ethiopians whitening with downy wool ? And how the Seres comb the fine filky fleeces from the leaves? Or the groves which India, nearer the ocean, produces, the utmost skirts of the globe? Where no arrows by their flight have been able to furmount the airy fummit of the trees; and yet that nation is not unskilful in archery. Media bears the bitter juices, and the permanent relifh of the happy apple; than which no remedy comes more feafonable, and more effectually expels the black venom from the limbs, what time-cruel ftepmothers have poifoned a cup, and mingled herbs, and not innoxious fpells. The tree itfelf is ftately, and in form most like a bay; and, if it did not widely diffuse a different scent, would be a bay. Its leaves fall not off by any winds; its bloffoms are exceedingly tenacious. With it the Medes correct their breaths and unfavoury mouths, and cure their afthmatic old men.

But neither the forests of Media, that richest country, nor the beautiful Ganges and Hermus, turbid with golden fands, can match the praifes of Italy; not Bactra, nor the Indians, and Panchaia, all enriched with incenfe-bearing foil. Bulls breathing fire from their nostrils never plowed these regions, to be fown with a hideous dragon's teeth; nor did ever a crop of men shoot dreadful up with helmets and crouded spears ; but teeming corn and Bachus's Campanian juice have filled the land; olives and joyous herds poffes it. Hence the warrior horfe with stately port advances into the field ; hence, Clitumnus, thy white flocks, and the bull, chief of victims, which, after they have been often plunged in thy facred ftream, accompany the Roman triumphs to the temples of the gods. Here is perpetual fpring, and fummer in months not her own: Twice a year the cattle are big with young, twice the trees productive of fruit. But here are no ravening tygers, nor the favage breed of lions, nor poi/onous wolfsbane deceives the wretched gatherers; nor here the fcaly ferpent fweeps his immense orbs along the ground, nor with fo vaft a train collects himfelf in fpires. Add fo many magnificent cities, and works of elaborate art; fo many towns upreared with the hand on craggy rocks, and rivers gliding under ancient walls. Or need I mention the fea which washes it above, and that below ? or its lakes to valt ? Thee, Larius, of largeft extent, and thee, Benacus, fwelling with the waves and roaring of a fea? Or shall I mention its ports, and the moles raifed to dam the Lucrine lake, and the imprisoned fea raging indignant with loud murmurs, where the Iulian wave afar refounds, the fea being driven back, and where the Tuscan tide is let into the Straits of Avernus? This fame land hath in its veins difclofed rivers of filver and mines of copper, and copious flowed with gold. The fame hath produced a warlike race of men, the Marfi, and the Sabellian youth, and the Ligurian inured to hardfhip, and the Volfcians armed with sharp darts. This fame produced the Decii, the Marii, and the great Camilli, the Scipios invincible in war, and thee, most mighty Caesar, who, at this very time victorious in Asia's remotelt limits, avertest from the Roman towers the Indian peaceful and difarmed. Hail, Saturnian land, great parent of fruits, great parent of heroes; for thee I enter on a fubject of ancient renown and art, adventuring to difclofe the facred fprings, and fing the Afcraean strain through Roman cities.

47

Now it is time to defcribe the geniufes of foils; what ftrength and energy to each belongs, what colour, and what its nature is apteft to produce First, untractable lands, and unfruitful hills, where lean clay abounds, and pebbles in the bushy fields, rejoice in Pallas's wood of long-lived olives. The wild olive rifing copions in the fame foil is an indication, and the fields strewed with woodland berries. But the ground that is fat, and gladdened with fweet moisture, and the plain that is

Book II.

Juxuriant in grais, and of a fertile foil, fuch as we are often wont to look down upon in the hollow valley of a mountain; hither ftreams glide from the high racks, and draw a rich fattening flime along: And that which is raifed to the fouth, and nourifhes the fern abhorred by the crooked ploughs; this in time will afford thee vines exceeding ftrong, and flowing with plenty of generous wine. This will be prolific of grapes, this of fuch liquor as we pour forth in libation from golden bowls, when the fat Tufcan has blown the ivory trumpet at the altars, and we offer up the fmoking entrails in the bending chargers.

But if you are fludious to preferve herds of kine and calves, or the offspring of the fheep, or kids that kill the nurferies; feck the lawns and diftant fields of fruitful Tarentum; and plains like thofe which haplefs Mantua hith loft, 'feeding fnow-white fivans in the graffy ftream. There neither limpid fprings nor paftures will be wanting to the flocks; and as much as the herds will crop in the long days, fo much will the cool dews in one fhort night reftore.

A foil that is blackish and fat under the deep piereing fhare, and whofe mould is loofe and crumbling (for this we imitate by ploughing) is generally beft for corn. From no plain will you fee more waggons move homeward with flow heavy-loaded oxen; or that from which the angry ploughman has bore away a wood, and felled the groves that have been at a ftand for many years, and with their lowest roots grubbed up the ancient habitations of the birds; they aban. doning their nefts foar on high : But the field looks gay as foon as the share is driven into it. For lean hungry gravel of a hilly field fcarce furnishes humble caffia and rolemary for the bees; and the rough rotten ftone, and chalk corroded by black water inakes; no other lands, they fay, yield fo fweet food to ferpents, or afford them fuch winding coverts. That land which exhales thin milts and flying imoke, and drinks in the moisture, and emits it at pleasure ; and which always clothes itfelf with its own verdant grafs, nor hurts the coulter with fourf and falt ruft; that will entwine thy elms with joyous vines, that is fertile of olives; that ground you will experience in manuring, both to be friendly to cattle, and submiffive to the crooked share. Such a foil rich Capua tills, and the territory adjoining to Mount Vesuvius, and the Clanius not kind to depopulated Acerrae.

E

Now will I tell by what means you may diffinguish If you defire to know whether it be rare and each. loofe, or unufually denfe and fliff; (becaufe the one is fit for corn, the other for wine ; the ftiff for Ceres beft, and the most loofe for Bacchus :) First you shall mark out a place with your eye, and order a pit to be funk deep in folid ground, and again return all the mould into its place, and level with your feet the fands at top. If they prove deficient, the foil is loofe, and more fit for cattle and bounteous wines: But if they deny the poffibility of returning to their places, and there be an overplus of mould after the pit is filled up, then it is a deufe foil ; expect reluctant clods, and fliff tenacious ridges, and tear up the land with fturdy bullocks.

But faltish ground, and what is accounted bitter, where corn can never thrive, (it neither mellows by ploughing, nor preferves to grapes their kind, nor to fruits their qualities) will give an experimental proof to this effect. Snatch from the fmoky reofs baskets of close-woven twigs, and the ftrainers of thy wine preffes. Hither let fome of that vicious mould, and fweet water from the fpring, be preffed brim full: Be fure all the water will ftrain out, and big drops pass through the twigs. But the tafte will clearly make difcovery, and its bitternefs will diffort the countenances of the tafters, offended with the feufation.

Again, what land is fat, we briefly learn thus: When fqueezed by the hand it never crumbles; but in handling, it flicks to the fingers like pitch. The moift foil produces herbs of a larger fize, and is itfelf luxuriant beyond due measure. Ah! may none of mine be thus too fertile, nor fhew itfelf too ftrong at the firft fpringing of the grain 1 The heavy land betrays itfelf by its very weight, without my telling you; and likewife the light. "Fis obvious to diftinguish the black at first fight, and whatever is the colour of each. But to fearch out the mischievous cold is no easy task; only pitch trees, and fometimes noxious yews, or black ivy, disclose its figns.

Thefe rules obferved, remember to dry and bake the foil long before, to encompais the fpacious hills with trenches, and expose the turned-up clods to the north wind, before you plant the vine's joyous race. Fields of a soofe crumbling foil are best: This effect the winds and cold frosts produce; and the fturdy delver, close plying his acres, toffed and turned upfide down.

But those whom not any vigilance escapes, first feek out a piece of ground, fimilar to that whence the plants are taken, where the first nursery may be provided for their trees, and whither it may foon be transplanted in rows; left the flips take not kindly to this new mother that is fuddenly changed upon them. Nay, they even mark on the bark the quarter of the fky, that in whatever manner each flood, in what part it bore the fouthern heats, what fides it turned to the northern pole, they may reftore to it the fame position. Of fuch avail is cuftom in tender years.

Examine, first, whether it is better to plant your wines on hills or on a plain ? If you lay out the fields of a rich plain, plant thick; Bacchus will not be the more backward to grow in fuch a foil when planted thick : But if you lay out a foil rifing with a gentle afcent, and floping hills, give room to your ranks ; yet fo as that your trees being exactly ranged, each fpace may fquare with the path cut across it. As often in dreadful war. when the extended legion hath ranged its cohorts, the battalions stand marshalled on the open plain, the armies fet in array, and the whole ground wide waves with gleaming brafs, nor as yet are they engaged in horrid battle, but Mars hovers dubious in the midft of arms : Thus let all your vineyards be laid out in equal proportions, not only that the profpect may feed the mind with vain delight, but because the earth will not otherwife fupply equal firength to all; nor will the branches be able to extend themfelves at large.

5 X

Εij

Perhaps, too, you may demand what depth is proper for the trenches. I could venture to commit my vine even to a flight furrow. Trees again are funk deeper down, and far into the ground: efpecially the Efculus, which fhoots downward to hell with its roots, as far as it rifes with its top to the ethereal regions. Therefore, not wintry florms, nor blafts of wind, nor fhowers, can overthrow it: It remains unmoved; and, rolling many ages of men away, outlafts them for many years. Then flretching wide its flurdy boughs and arms this way and that way, itfelf in the midft fuftains a mighty fhade.

Nor let thy vineyards lie towards the fetting fun; nor plant the hazle among your vines ; nor gather your cuttings from the top of the tree; but these that are sear the roots, which will thrive beft, having already contracted a fondness for the earth; fo much love to the earth avails. Nor hurt your fhoots with blunted fleel : Nor plant among them the truncheons of the wild olive. For fire is often let fall from the unwary shepherds, which at first fecretly lurking under the uncluous bark, catches the folid wood, and, fhooting up into. the topmost leaves, raifes a loud crackling to heaven; thence purfuing its way, reigns victorious among the branches and the lofty tops, involves the whole grove in flames; and, condenfed in pitchy vapour, darts the black cloud to beaven; chiefly if a florm over head sefts its fury on the woods, and the driving wind whirls the flames alost. When this happens, their ftrength decays from the root, nor can they recover, though cut, or sprout up from the deep earth fuch as they were : The unbleft wild olive with its bitter leaves, alone furvives the difaster.

Let no counfellor be fo wife in your eyes, to perfuade you to ftir the rigid earth when Boreas breathes. Then winter fluts up the fields with froft; nor, when the flip is planted, fuffers the frozen root to faften to the earth. The plantation of the vineyards is beft, when in the blufhing foring the white bird comes in, which the long inakes abhor; or towards the first colds of autumn, when the vehement fun does not yet touch the winter with his fleeds; the fummer is just gone, The fpring is chiefly beneficial to the foliation of the groves ; the foring is beneficial to the woods. In fpring, the lands fwell, and demand the genial feeds : Then Almighty Father Æther descends in fructifying showers into the bolom of his joyous fpouse ; and great himfelf, mingling with her great body, nourifhes all het offspring : Then the retired brakes refound with tuneful birds; and the herds renew their loves on the flated. days : Then beauteous earth is teeming to the birth, and the fields open their boloms to the warm breezes of the zephyr. In all a gentle moifture abounds ; and the herbs dare fafely trult themselves to the infant: funs; nor are the vine's tender shoots afraid of the rising fouth winds, or of a shower precipitated from the fix by the violent north winds ; but put forth their buds, and unfold all their leaves. No other days, methinks, had thone at the first origin of the rifing world ; it was reigning fpring ; the fpecious globe enjoyed fpring, and the east winds withheld their wintry blatts ; when first the cattle drew in the light, and man's laborious race upreared their heads from the hard glebel. and the woods were flocked with wild beafts, and the heavens with flars; nor could the tender productions of nature bear this labour, if fo great reft did not intervene between the cold and heat, and if heaven's indulgent fealon did not visit the earth in its turn.

For what remains, whatever layers you bend down: over all the fields, overfpread them with fat dung, and earefully cover them with copious earth ; or bury about them fpungy flones, or rough thells. For thus the rains will foak through, the fubtile vapour penetrate into their pores, and the plants become flout and vigorous. We find fome too who are for preffing them. from above with a ftone, and the weight of a great. potsherd. This is a defence against the pouring rains :: This a defence, when the fultry dog-ftar cleaves the gaping fields with drought.) and a Torste Fittal ga Teta Device Edige,

After your layers are planted, it remains to convey earth often to the roots, and ply the hard rags; or to labour the foil under the imprefied fhare, and guide your ftruggling bullocks through the very vinsyards; shen to adapt to the vines fmooth reeds, and fpears of peeled rods, and aften flakes, and two-horned forks; by whole ftrength they may learn to fhoot up, to contemn the winds, and elimb from flage to flage along the higheft elms.

And while their infant age forouts with new born leaves, you muft fpare the tender vines ; and while the joyous fhoot raifes itfelf on high, wantoning through the open air with loofe reins, the edge of the prunings kuife itfelf muft not be applied; but the leaves fhould be plucked with the in-bent hand, and culled here and there. Thereafter, when now they have fhot forth, embracing the elms with firm ftems, then cut their locks, then lop their arms. Before this they drend the fteel s then, and not till then, exercise fevere dominion such them, and check the loofe ftraggling boughs.

Fences too fhould be woven around them, and all cattle must be restrained; especially while the shoots are tender and unacquainted with hardships, which, besides the rigorous winters, and vehement beat of the fun, the wild buffaloes and perfecuting goats continually infult; the sheep and greedy heifers browze spon them. Nor do the colds condensed in heavy shost, or the fevere heat beating upon the scorched rocks, hurt them so much as the flocks and poilon of their hard seeth, and a fear imprinted on the gnawed stem.

For no other crime is the goat facrificed to Bacchus on every altar, and the ancient plays come upon the ftage; and for this the Athenians proposed to the tragic wits prizes of goats about the villages and cruffways; and amidft their cups full joyous danced in the fost meadows on goat fkin bottles befmeared with oil, On the fame account the Aufonian colony alfo, a race derived from Troy, sport in unpolished strains, and unbounded laughter, affuming borrid masses of hollowed barks of trees; and thee, O Bacchus, they invoke in jovial fongs, and to thee hang up fost images from a sall pine. Hence every vineyard fhoots forth with large produce : The hollow, vales, and deep lawns are filled with plenty, and wherever the God hath moved around his graceful head. Therefore will we folemaly aforibe to Bacchus his due honours in our country's lays, and offer to him chargers and the confectated cakes; and the facred goat led by the horn shall fland at his altar ; and we will roaft the fat entrails on hazle spite.

There is also that other toil in dreffing the vines, in executing which you can never bellow pains enough s for the whole foil must be ploughed three or four times every year, and the clods are continually to be broken with bended drags; the whole grove must be difburdened of its leaves : The farmer's pait labour returns in a circle, and the year rolls round on itself in its own fleps ; and now, when at length the vineyard has fhed its late leaves, and the cold north wind shook from the groves their honours, even then the active fwain extends his cares to the enfuing year, and close plies the defolate forfaken vine, cutting off the Juper fuons roots with Saturn's crooked hook, and forms it by pruning. Be the first to trench the ground ; be the first to carry home and burn the fuperfluous fhoots ; and the first to neturn beneath your roof the flakes that propped your vines : Be the last to reap the vintage, Twice a luxu. giant shade of leaves affails the vines : Twice thick prickly weeds overrun the field; each a fubject of hard labour. Commend large farms ; cultivate a fmall one, Befides all this, the rough twigs of butcher's broom are to be cut throughout the woods, and the watery reed on the banks; and the care of the uncultivated willow gives bim new toil. And now his babsur feems at an end, now the vines are tied ; now the vineyard lays afide the pruning hook; now the exhaufted vintager falutes in fong his utmost rows? yet must the earth be vexed avery, and the mould fill put in motion ; and now. after all, Jove and the weather are to be dreaded by the ripened grapes.

On the other hand, the olives require no culture; sor do they expect the crooked pruning-book, and tesocious harrows, when once they are rooted in the ground, and have fultained the air. Earth of herfelf lupplies the plants with moiltnre, when opened by the hooked flipping-iron, and weighty fruits, when opened by the fhare Nourifir with this the fat and peacedelighting olive. The other fruit trees too, as foon as they feel their tranks vigorous, and acquire their ftrength, quickly fhoat up to the flars by their own inherent virtue, and need not our affiltance. At the fame time, every grove is in like manner without culture loaded with offspring; and the uncultivated haunts of birds glow with blood-red berries. The Cyrifus is browzed on by cattle; the tall wood fupplies us with torches; and thence our noclurnal fires are fed, and fhed on us beamy light. And after this do men hefitate about planting and beltowing care ?

Why thousd I infift on greater things ? The very willows and lowly broom, even thefe fupply either browze for cattle, or fhade for fhepherds, fences for the corn, and materials for honey. It is delightful to behold Cytorus waving with the groves of Narycian pitch : It is delightful to fee the fields not indebted to the harrows, or any care of men Even the barren woods on the top of Caucafus, which the fierce east. winds continually are crushing and tearing, yield each their different produce: They yield pines, an uleful wood for thips, and cedars and cypreffes for houses. Hence the hufbandmen have laboured fpokes for wheels; hence they have framed folid orbs for waggons, and bending keels for thips. The willows are fertile in twigs, the elms in leaves for cattle : The myrtle again is uleful for fturdy spears, and the corneil for war : The yews are bent into Ityrean bows. ŀή like manner the fmooth grained limes, or box that potlishes with the lathe, receive any shape, and are hollowed with tharp fteel. Thus too the light alder launched on the Po, fwims the rapid stream : Thus too the bees. hide their fwarms in the hollow bark, and in the heart: of a rotten holm. What have the gifts of Bacchus. produced for worthy of record ? Bacchus has given occalion to offence and guilt : He quelled by death the ALL LIN AND REPORTS - EST OF Service site furious Centaurs, Rhoetus, and Pholus, and Hylaeus, threatening the Lapithae with a huge goblet.

Thrice happy fwains, did they but know their own blifs! to whom, at diflance from difcordant arms. earth, of herfelf most liberal, pours from her bosom their eafy fustenance. If there the palace high raifed with proud gates vomits not forth from all its apartments a vast tide of morning visitants ; and if they doat not on porticoes variegated with beauteous tortoife-fhell, and on veftments curioufly embroidered with gold, and on wafes of Corinthian brass; and if for them the white wool is not flained with the Affyrian drug, nor the ufe of the pure oil corrupted with Caffia's aromatic bark; yet theirs is peace secure, and a life of folid unfallacious blifs, rich in various opulence ; yet theirs are peaceful retreats in ample fields, grottoes, and living lakes; yet to them cool delicious vales, the lowings of kine, and fost flumbers under a tree, are not wanting. There are lawns, and dens for beafts of chace, and youth patient of toil, and inured to thrift; the worthin of the gods, and fathers held in veneration : Juffice, when the left the world, took, her laft fleps among them.

But me, may the fweet mules, whole facred fymbols I bear, finit with the violent love of philosophic fong; first, above all things elfe, receive into favour, and flew me the paths of heaven, and conftellations; the various eclipfes of the fun, and labours of the moon; whence the trembling of the earth; from what powerful confe the feas fwell high, burfting their barriers, and again fink back into themfelves; Why the winter funs make such halte to dip themfelves in the ocean; or what delay retards the flow paced funmer nights.

But if the cold blood about my heart binders me from penetrating into those parts of nature, let fields and fireams gliding in the vallies he my delight; may I count the rivers and the woods, inglorious and obfoure. O ta be where are the pleafant Theffalian plains, and the river Sperchius, and Taygetus, the focue of Bacchanalian revels to Spartan maids! O for one to fet me down in the cool vallies of Haemus, and fhelter me with a thick fhade of boughs! Happy he who was able to trace out the caufes of things, and who cast beneath his feet all fears, and inexorable deftiny, and the noife of devouring Acheron! Bleft too is he who has known the rural deities, Pan, and old Silvanus, and the fifter nymphs! Him neither the fasces of the people has moved, nor the purple of kings, nor difcord perfecuting faithlefs brothers; nor the Dacian defcending from the confpiring Danube; nor the revolutions of Rome, and perifhing kingdoms: He neither pined with grief, lamenting the poor, nor envied he the rich. What fruits the boughs; what fruits the willing fields yielded of themfelves fpontaneous, he gathered; nor faw the rigorous iron laws, the madly litigious bar, or the public courts.

Some vex the dangerous feas with oars; fome ru/b into arms; fome work their way into courts, and the palaces of kings. One deftines a city and wretched families to deftruction, that he may drink in gems, and fleep on Vyrian purple : Another hoards up wealth, and broods over buried gold. One, aftonished with the eloquence of the roftra, grows giddy : Another, peals of applause (for it is redoubled along the rows both of the people and the fathers) have captivated, and fet agape. Some rejoice in being flained with their brother's blood, and exchange their homes and fweet manfions for exile, and feek a country lying under another fun. The hufbandman cleaves the earth with the crooked plough; hence the labours of the year : hence he fultains his country and his little offspring; hence his herds of kine, and deferving fleers. Nor is there any intermission, but the year either abounds with apples, or with the breed of the flocks, or with bundles of Ceres's stalks; loads the furrows with increase, and overftocks the barns. Winter comes; the Sicyonian berry is pounded in the oil-preffes; the fwine come home gladened with acorns; the woods yield their arbutes, and wild fruits ; and the autumn lays down its various productions; and high on the funny rocks the mild vintage is ripened. Meanwhile the fweet babes twine round their parent's neck : His chafte family maintain a virtuous economy; the cows hadge down their udders full of milk; and the fat frifky kids wreftle together with butting horns on the cheerful green. The fwain himfelf celebrates feftival-days; and, extended on the grafs, where a fire is in the middle, and where his companions crown the bowl, invokes thee, O Lenaeus, making libation; and on an elm fets forth to the mafters of the flock prizes to be contended for with the winged javelin; and ftrips their hardy bodies in the ruftic ring.

38

Book II.

. .

This life of old the ancient Sabines; this Remus and his brother ftrictly obferved: Thus Etruria grew to its ftrength; nay, and thus did Rome become the glory and beauty of the world, and fingle hath encompaffed for herfelf feven hills with a hall. This life too golden Saturn led on earth, before the fceptered fway of the Dictaean king, and before an impious race of mortals featted on flain bullocks. Nor as yet had mankind heard the warlike trumpets blown; nor yet the fwords laid on the hard anvils clatter.

But we have finished this immensely extended field; and now 'tis time to loose the smoking necks of our fleeds.

BOOK THIRD.

THEE too, great Pales, and thee, O fhepherd, famed from Amphryfus; ye woods, and Arcadian rivers, will I fing. Other fongs, that might have entertained difengaged minds, are now all trite and common. Who is unacquainted, or with fevere Euryftheus, or the altars of infamous Bufiris? By whom has not the boy Hylas been recorded, and Latonian Delos? Hippodame, and Pelops fignalized by his ivory fhoulder, victorious in the race? I too mult attempt a way, whereby to lift me from the ground, and victorious fpread my flying fame, through the mouths of men.

I first returning from the Aonian mount will (provided life remain) bring along the mules with me into my country : For thee, O Mantua, I first will gain the Idumaean palms; and on thy verdant plain erect a temple of marble, fail by the ftream, where the great Mincius winds in flow meanders, and hath fringed the banks with tender reed. In the middle will I have Caefar ; and he shall command the temple. In honour of him will I, victorious, and in Tyrian purple confpicuous, drive an hundred four-horfed chariots along the river. For me all Greece, leaving Alpheus, and the groves of Molorchus, shall contend in races and the rigid gauntlet. I myfelf, graced with leaves of the fhorn olive, will dispense the prizes. Even now I am well pleafed to lead on the folemn pomps to the temple, and to fee the bullocks flain ; or how the fcene with fhifting front retires; and how the inwoven Britons lift up the purple curtain. On the doors will I delineate in gold and folid ivory, the battle of the Gangarides, and the arms of conquering Quirinus : And here the Nile furging with war, flowing majeftic, and columns rifing with naval brafs. I will add the vanquished cities of Afia, and fubdued Niphates, and the Parthian prefuming on his flight, and arrows that backward, and two trophies by perfonal valour fnatched from two widely distant foes, and nations twice triumphed over on either shore. Here too shall stand in Parian marble, breathing statues, the offspring of Affaracus, and the chiefs of the love defcended race; both Tros, the great anceftor of Rome, and the Cynthian Apollo, founder of Troy. Here baneful envy thall dread the furies and grim river of Cocytus; Ixion's twifted fnakes, the enormous racking wheel, and the ftone's unfurmountable labour.

Meanwhile let us purfue the woods of the Dryads, and untrodden lawns; thy commands, Maecenas, of no eafy import. Without thee my mind enterprizes nothing fublime; come then, break off lazy delays. Cithaeron with loud hallowing calls, and the hounds of Taygeta and Epidaurus, the tamer of horfes, and the voice doubled by the affenting groves re-echoes. Yet e'er long shall I be prepared to fing of Caelar's ardent battles, and to transmit his name with honour through as many years, as Caelar is distant from the first origin of Tithonus.

Whether any one, afpiring to the prizes of the Olympian palm, breeds horfes, or whether any one breeds flurdy bullocks for the plough, let him choofe with fpecial care the bodies of the mothers. The four-looking heifer's form is beft, whofe head is hideoufly large, whofe neck is brawny, and from the chin down to the legs her dewlaps hang. Then no meafure in her length of fide: All her parts huge; even her foot, and rough ears under her craskled horns. Nor would I diflike her if ftreaked with white fpots, or if the refufes the yoke, and fometimes is furly with her horn, and in afpect approaches nearer to a bull; and if the is ftately throughout, and fweeps her fteps with the extremity of her tail as fhe goes along.

The age to undergo Lucina, and juft hymeneal rites, ends before ten, and begins after four years: Their other years are neither fit for breeding, nor ftrong for the plough. Meantime, while the flocks abound with fprightly youth, let loofe the males; be the firft to indulge thy cattle in the joys of love, and by generation raife up one race after another. All the beft days of life fly firft away from wretched mortals; the firft so incered, and difconfolate old age, and pain; and the inclemency of inexorable death fnatches them away. There will always be fome whofe bodies you would choofe to have changed for better. Therefore continually repair them; and, that you may not regret them when loft, be before-hand, and yearly provide a new offspring for the herd.

Nor is the fame diferiminating care lefs needful for a breed of horfes: But fill, on those which you defign to bring up for the hope of the race, beftow your principal diligence immediately from their tender years. The colt of generous breed from the very first walks flately in the fields, and nimbly moves his pliant legs; be is the first that dares to lead the way, and tempt the threatening floods, and trust himfelf to an unknown bridge; nor starts affrighted at vain alarms : Lofty is his neck; his head little and flender, his belly fhort, his back round and plump ; and his proud cheft fwells luxuriant with brawny muscles : (The bay brown and bluth grey are in most request ; the worst colours are the white and dun.) Then, if he hears the diftant found of arms, he knows not how to ftand his ground; the pricks up his ears, trembles in every joint, and, fnorting, rolls the collected fire under his noftrils ; thick is his main, and waving refts on his right shoulder. A double fpinal bone runs down between his loins; his hoof fcoops up the ground, and deep refounds with its folid horn. Such was Cyllarus, broke by the reins of Amyclaean Pollux, and, which the Grecian poets have defcribed, fuch the harneffed brace of Mars, and the chariot korfes of great Achilles. Such Saturn too himfelf, precipitant, on the arrival of his wife, spread out a full main on his affumed horfe's neck, and, flying, filled lofty Pelion with fhrill neighing.

 \mathbf{F}

Him too, when with fickness opprefied, or now enfeebled with years he fails, flut up in his lodge, fpare his not inglorious age: When in years he is cold to love, and in vain drags on the ungrateful tafk; and, if ever he comes to an engagement, he is furioufly keen with no effect, ju/l as at times a great fire rages without ftrength among flubble: Therefore chiefly mark their fpirit and age; then their other qualities, their parentage, and what forrow each receives when vanquifhed, what pride when victorious.

See you not? When in the rapid race the chariots have feized the plain, and pouring forth rufh along; when the hopes of the youth are elevated, and palpitating fear heaves their throbbing hearts: they ply the twifted lafh, and bending forward give full reius: The axle flies glowing with the impetuolity : And now low, now high, they feem to be borne aloft through the open air, and to mount up into the fkies. No ftop, no ftay; but a thick cloud of yellow fand is toffed up: The foremoft are wet with the foam and breath of thofe that follow: So powerful is the love of praife, fo anxious the defire of victory. First, Erichthonius dared to yoke the chariot and four steeds, and over the rapid wheels victorious to prefide. The Pelethronian Lapithae first mounted on horfeback, applied the reins, and turned him in the ring; taught the horfeman under arms to bound infulting over the plain, and with proud ambling pace to prance along. Either toil, that of the chariot and of the manage, is equal; with equal care the masters in either cafe feek after a fleed that is youthful, of warm mettle, and fprightly in the race; though often he may have drove before him the flying foes, may boaft of Epirus, or of warlike Mycene for his country, and derive his race even from Neptune's breed.

These things observed, they are very careful about the time of generation, and beftow all their care to plump him up with firm fat, whom they have chose leader, and affigned stallion to the herd : They cut for him downy tender herbs, fupply him with fulnefs of water and corn, left he should not be sufficient for the soothing toil, and the puny fons refemble the meagrenefs of their But they purpofely extenuate the breed mares fires. with leannels; and, when now the known pleafure folicits the first enjoyment, they both deny them herbs, and debar them from the fprings : Often too they shake them in the race, and tire them in the fun, when beneath the beaten grain the barn-floor deeply groans, and in the rifing zephyr the empty chaff is toffed about. This they do, that by excellive pampering the genial foil may not be blunted in its use, and choak up the fluggish passages, but may with eagerness drink in the joys of love, and lay them up more deep within.

Again, the care of the fires begins to fail, and that of the dams to fucceed; when now, their months elapfed, they rove about pregnant: Let no one fuffer them to drag the yokes of heavy waggons, nor to leap acrofs the way, to fcamper over the meads with fprightly career, and fwim the rapid floods. Let them feed in spacious lawns, and befide full rivers, where mofs and graffy banks of prime verdurc, and caves may fhelter them, and over them a fhady rock project.

Fij

About the groves of Silarus and Alburnus, verdant with ever-green oaks, abounds a flying infect, which she Romans name Afylus, and the Greeks in their language have rendered Oeftron, armed with a fharp fling, humming harfh; with which whole herds affrighted By diverfe through the woods: The fky is furioufly thook with bellowings, and the woods and banks of dry Tanagrus. With this monfter did Juno once exercife her fell revenge, having meditated a plague for the Inachian heifer. This too (for in the noontide heats it rages more keen) you fhall keep off from the pregnant cattle, and feed your herds when the fun is newly rifen, or when the ftars ufher in the night.

After the birth, the whole care is transferred to the calves; and from the first they flamp with a hot iron the marks and names of the race; and which they choose to bring up for the increase of the flock, or which to keep facred for the altars, or which to cleave the ground, and turn up the foil all rugged with broken clods. The reft of the herd promiscuous graze amidst the green pastures.

Those which you would form for exercise and ruftic fervice, train up while calves, and enter on the way to tame them, whilft their minds in youth are tractable, while their age is pliant : And first fasten about their uecks loofe collars of flender twigs; next, when they have accustomed their free necks to fervitude, match your bullocks in pairs joined by those fame collars, and make them flep together; and now let empty wheels be dragged by them along the ground, and let them print their traces in the furface of the duft. Af. terwards let the beachen axle labouring under a ponderous load creak, and the brazen pole draw the joined wheels. Meanwhile, for the young untamed bullocks you shall crop with your hand not only grafs, or the willows tender leaves, or marshy fedge, but allo foringing corn; nor thall your fuckling heifers, as was the cultom of our fathers, fill the fnowy milking-pails, but fpend all their udders on their fweet offspring.

But if thy inclination is to war and martial troops, or with thy wheels to fkim along the brink of Pifa's Alphean ftreams, and drive the flying chariot in Jupiter's grove, the first task of the horse must be to view the fiercenels and the arms of warriors, to be patient of the trumpet, and to bear the rumbling of the wheels in their career, and in his stall to hear the rattling bridles; then more and more to rejoice in the foothing applaufes of his mafter, and to love the found of patting his neck: And thefe let him hear as foon as weaned from the udder of his dam, and now and then yield his mouth to foft head-stalls when weak, and yet trembling, and yet unexperienced from his years. But three fuil years elapsed, when his fourth summer is arrived, let him forthwith begin to wheel the ring, and with regular fteps to prance, and let him bend the pliant joints of his legs alternately, and feem to labour. Then let him dare the winds in fwiftness; and through the open plains flying, as loofened from the reins, fcaree print his steps on the surface of the fand : As, when astringent Boreas hath rufhed forth from the Hyperborean regions, and drives along the Scythiau ftorms and dry clouds ; then the high fields of corn and waving plains tremble with the first gentle gusts, the tops of the woods ruftle, and the lengthened waves prefs towards the shore : He flies, sweeping in his career at once the fields, at once the feas. Such a courfer, or round the goals and fpacious bounds of the Elean plain will fweat, and drive the flakes of bloody foam from his mouth; or will better bear the Belgic chariots on his pliant neck : Then at laft, when they are now broke, let their ample bodies grow with fattening math; for, if full fed before they are broke, they will fwell their mettle high, and, laid hold of, refuse to bear the kimber whip, and to obey the hard bits.

But no induftry more confirms their fitrength, than to avert Venus from them, and the flings of blind love, whether any one be fonder of a breed of bullocks or of horfes; and therefore they remove the bulls at a diftance, and to lonely paftures, behind an obftructing mountain, and beyond broad rivers; or keep them flut up within at full cribs: For the female infentibly confumes his vigour, and fires him while in his eye; nor fuffers him to mind his groves and pasture. Nay, fhe often, by her attractive charms, even impels her haughty lovers to combat together with their horns The beauteous heifer feeds in the spacious wood ; while they by turns with mighty force engage with repeated wounds : Black blood laves their bodies : and their adverse horns are impelled on the ftruggling foes with a vaft groan : The woods and spacious skies rebellow. Nor is it usual for the warriors to dwell together ; but the one vanquished retires, and becomes an exile in unknown diftant coafts, grievoully bemoaning his difgrace, and the wounds of the proud victor, in fine, the loves which unaverged he has loft; and with many a retrospect on the stalls, which contain the object of his defire, departs from his hereditary realms. Therefore, with the utmost care he exercises his strength, and lies all night long among the hard rocks, on a couch quite bare, feeding on prickly leaves and tharp-pointed fedge. He effays himfelf, and practifes his rage upon his horns, butting against the trunk of a tree; buffets the winds with blows, and preludes to the fight by fpurning the fand. Afterwards, when his ftrength is rallied, and his vigour recovered, he flits his camp, and is borne headlong on his unmindful foe; as a wave, when it begins to whiten in the middle of the fea, at diftance, and from the deep draws along a curling train, and as rolling to the land it roars dreadful among the rocks, nor lefs even than a mountain falls ; while with whirlpools the water from the bottom boils, and toffes up the blackening fand on high.

E iij,

And indeed every kind on earth, both men and fayages, the fcaly race, the beafts, and party-coloured birds, rufh into this fire and fury; love rages in all the fame. At no other time does the lionefs, forgetful of her whelps, range the plains more fierce; nor do the unfhapely bears usually foread fo numerous ravages and fuch havock in the woods: Then ferocious is the boar, then moft fell the tiger. 'Tis then, alas! unbappy wandering in the defolate fields of. Libya. See you not how tremulous ardour floots through the horfe's whole body, if his fmell has but fucked in the well-known gales ? And now neither bridles of men. nor cruel whips, nor cliffs, nor hollow rocks, and opposed rivers, that whirl with their torrent whole mountains fwept away, can retard him. Even the Sabellian boar rushes, and whets his tusks, and with his feet tears up the ground, rubs his flanks against a tree, and on this fide and that fide hardens his shoulders to wounds. What does the youth, in whofe vitals relentless love fans the mighty fire? Why, late in the darkfome night he fwims the frith boifterous with burfting ftorms; over whom the spacious gate of heaven thunders, and the feas dashing against the rocks remurmur : Nor can his diftreffed parents recal him, nor the maid, who will be fure to die in consequence of his disaftrous fate. What do the spotted lynxes of Bacchus, and the fierce race of wolves and dogs ? What the timorous ftags ? what dreadful wars they wage ! Yet know the fury of the mares is most of all extraordinary : And this spirit Venus herself inspired, what time his four Potnian mares tore the limbs of Glaucus to pieces with their jaws. Love drives them across the pathlefs Gargarus, and roaring Afcanius: They climb the mountains, fwim the rivers; and forthwith, when the flame is fecretly conveyed into their craving marrow, chiefly in the fpring (for in the fpring the genial heat returns into their bones) they all, with their mouths turned towards the zephyr, fland on high rocks, and catch the gentle gales : And often, wondrous to relate! without any mate, impregnated by the wind, over rocks and cliffs, and hollow vales they fcour ; not towards thine, O Eurus, nor the fun's rifing, nor towards Boreas and Caurus, or whence grimly Aufter arifes, and faddens the fky with bleak rain. Hence at last, what the shepherds call by its true name Hippomanes, a clammy poifon diftils from their groins. Hippomanes, which wicked flepdames often have gathered, and mixed therewith herbs, and noxious spells. But time flies meanwhile, flies irretrievable, while we, enamoured of the pleafing theme, minutely trace particulars.

Thus far of herds. Another part of our care remains, to manage the fleecy flocks, and flaggy goats. A labour this : hence hope for praife, ye flordy fwains. Nor am I ignorant, how difficult it is to raife luch fubjects by dignity of flyle, and add these poetical ornaments to things to low. But the fweet love of the mufes transports me through the thorny deferts of Parnass. Pleased I am to range those mountain-tops, where no tract of the ancients winds down with gentle declination to Castalia.

Now, adorable Pales, now muß I fing in lofty ftrain. To begin, I appoint the fheep to be foddered in foft · cotes, till first the flowery fpring return; and that the hard ground underneath them be ftrewed with plenty of flraw, and bundles of ferns, left the cold ice hurt the tender cattle, and bring on the fcab and foul gouts. Next, leaving them, I order to provide the goats with leafy arbutes, and to supply them with fresh ftreams; and, Ineltered from the woods, to oppose their cotes to the winter fun, turned towards the fouth ; when cold Aquarius now fets at length, and in the extremity of the year sheds his dews. Nor are these to be tended by us with lefs care ; nor will their ufefulnefs be lefs ; though Milefian fleeces, that have drunk the Tyrian glow, be fold for much. From these arises a more numerous breed, from these a greater quantity of milk. The more the pail froths with their exhausted udder, the more will joyous streams flow from their preffed dugs. Meanwhile the shepherds also shear the beards. and hoary chins, and long waving hair of the Cinyphian he-goat, for the fervice of the camp, and for coverings to the adventurous mariners : And then they eafily find pasture from the woods, from the summits of Lycaeus, from the rough brambles, and from brakes .that love the craggy rocks : And, mindful of their time, the goats of themselves return home, and bring their young with them, and can fcarce get over the threshold with their teeming udders. Therefore the lefs they themfelves provide against the wants of mortality, the more careful must you be to defend them from the ice and fnowy winds; and you shall cheerfully bring them, food, and browze of tender twigs : Nor thut up from. them your ftores of hay all the winter long.

Book III.

But when the gay fummer comes, invited by the zepbyre, you shall fend forth both flocks into the lawns and paftures : When Lucifer first arifes, let them crop the fields yet cold ; while the morning is new, while the grafs is hoary, and the dew, most grateful to the cattle, is on the tender herb. Then, as foon as the fourth hour of day shall have brought on thirst, and the plaintive grashoppers shall rend the groves with their fong; order the flocks to drink the water running in oaken troughs, or at the wells, or at the deep pools : But in the noon-tide heats let them feek out a fhady vale, wherever Jove's stately oak of ancient wood extends its huge boughs; or wherever a grove, embrowned with thick ever-green oaks, projects its facred shade. Then give them once more the translucent streams, and once more feed them at the fetting of the fun : When cool vefper tempers the air, and now the dewy moon refreshes the lawns, and the shores resound with halcyone, and the bushes with the gold-finch.

Why fhould I trace in fong the fhepherds and paftures of Libya, and their cottages, where fcatteringly they dwell? Their flocks often graze both day and night, and for a whole month together, and repair into long deferts without any fhelter; fo wide the plain extends. The African fhepherd carries his all with him, his houfe and houfhold-god, his arms, his Amyclaeau dog, and Cretan quiver. Juft as the fierce Roman, when, armed for his country, he takes his way under the unequal load, and, having pitched his camp, ftands in battalia againft the foe, before he is expected.

But not fo, where are the Scythian nations, and the Macotic waves, and the turbid Ifther whirling his yellow fand; and where Rhodope winds about, itretching itfelf under the middle of the pole: There they keep their herds fhut up in ftalls; nor are either any herbs to be feen in the fields, nor leaves on the trees: But the country lies deformed with mounts of fnow, and deep ice all around, and rifes feven ells in height. It is always winter, always north-weft winds blowing cold. Then the fun never diffipates the pale fhades; neither when borne on his fleeds he climbs the lofty sky; nor when he bathes his chariot in the ocean's ruddy plain. Crufts of ice fuddenly are congealed in the running river : Now on its back the wave fultains wheels bound with iron, the wave hospitable to broad ships before, to waggons now. Vales of brass frequently burft afunder; their garments grow fliff on their backs; they cut with axes the liquid wine, whole pools turn to folid ice; and the horrid icicle hardens on their uncombed beards. Meanwhile, it fnows inceffantly over all the air; the cattle perifh; the large bodies of oxen ftand wrapt about with hoar-froft ; and the deer crowding all together, lie benumbed under the unufual load, and fcarce appear with the tips of their horns. Thefe they purfue, not with hounds let loofe, nor with any toils, nor fcared with the terror of the crimfon plume: But as in vain they are shoving with their breafts the opposed mountain of fnow, they flab them with the fword close at hand, and put them to death piteoufly braying, and with loud acclamation bear them off triumphant. The inhabitants themfelves, in caves dug deep under ground, enjoy undisturbed reft, and roll to their hearths piled up oaks, and whole elms, and give them to the flames. Here they fpend the night in play, and joyous imitate the juice of the grape with their beer and acid cyder. Such is that favage race of men lying under the northern fign of Urfa Major, buffeted by the Riphaean east wind, and whole bodies are cloathed "with the tawny furs of beafts.

If the woolen manufacture be thy care; first let prickly woods, and burrs, and caltroops be far away: Shun rich pastures: And from the beginning choose flocks that are white with fost wool. And that Ram, though he himself be of the purest white, under whose moilt palate there lurks but a black tongue, reject; left he should fully the steeces of the new born lambs: and look out for another over the well stocked field. Thus Pan, the god of Arcadia, if the story be worthy of credit, deceived thee, O moon, captivated with a snowy offering of wool, inviting thee into the deep groves; nor didit thou form his invitation.

But let him who is fludious of milk, carry to their cribs with his own hand the Cytifus, and plenty of water-lilies, and falt herbs. Hence they are both more defirous of the river, and diftend their udders the more, and in their milk return a faint relifh of the falt.

Many reftrain the kids as foon as grown up from their dams, and fasten muzzles with iron spikes about the extremity of their mouths. What they milk at the funrising and the hour of morn, they press at night; what they milk now in the evening and at sun-setting, the schepherd at day-break carries to town in baskets: Or they feason it with a small quantity of salt, and lay it up for winter.

Nor let your care of dogs be the laft; but feed at once with fattening whey the fwift hounds of Sparta, and the fierce maftiff of Moloffus. While there are your guards, you shall never dread the nightly robber to your stalls, nor the incursions of the wolves, nor the reftless lberians coming upon you by stealth. Often too in the chace you shall pursue the timorous wild affes, and with hounds you shall hourt the hare, with hounds the hind. Often, driving on with full cry, you shall . give chace to the boar rouzed from his filvan foil; and over the losty mountains with hallowing pursue the stately ftag into the toils.

Learn also to burn fragrant cedar in the folds, and to drive away the rank water-fnakes with the fcent of gal-Often under the mangers, when not moved, banum. either the viper of pernicious touch lies concealed, and affrighted flies the light : Or that inake, the direful peft of kine, which uses to shelter itself under a roof and shade, and shed its venom on the cattle, keeps close to the ground. Snatch up ftones, shepherds, snatch up clubs; and while he rears his threatening gorge, and . fwells his hiffing neck, knock him down : And now in flight he has hid his daftardly head full deep, while his middle-knots and the wreaths in his tail's extremity are unfolded, and his last tortuous joint now drags its flow fpirits along. There is also that baneful snake in the Calabrian lawns, winding up his fcaly back, with breaft erect, and his long belly speckled with broad spots;

who, while any rivers burft from their fountains, and while the lands are moift with the dewy fpring, and rainy fouth winds, haunts the pools, and, lodging in the banks, intemperately gorges his horrid maw with fiftes and croaking frogs. After that the fen is burnt up, and the earth gapes with drought, he darts forth on dry ground, and rolling his inflamed eyes, rages in the fields, exafperated with thirft, and aghaft with heat. Let me not then choofe to indulge foft flumbers in the open air, or to lie along the grafs in the flope of a wood; when renewed and fleek with youth by cafting his flough, he rolls along: leaving either his young or eggs in his den, reared to the fun, and in his mouth quivers a three-forked tongue.

I will also teach thee the causes and the figns of their difeases. The filthy scab infects the sheep, when the raw shower hath pierced deep into the quick, and winter rough with hoary frost: Or, when the sweat unwashed away, adheres to them after fhearing, and prickly briers have torn their bodies. On this account the shepherds drench the whole flock in fweet rivers, and the ram with humid fleece is plunged in the pool, and fent to float along the ftream : Or they befmear their bodies after fhearing with bitter lees of oil, and mix with it litharge, native fulphur, idæan pitch, and fat unctuous wax, and the fea-leek, rank hellebore, and black bitumen. But there is not any more effectual remedy for their diffress, than to lance the head of the ulcer with fteel: The diftemper is nourifhed and lives by being covered; while the shepherd refuses to apply his healing hand to the wound, or fits ftill begging the gods to order all for the better.

Moreover when the malady, penetrating into the inmost bones of the bleating sheep, rages, and the fcorching fever preys upon their limbs, it has been of use to drive out the kindled inflamation, and between the under parts of the feet to open a vein spouting with blood : In such manner as the Bislatae use, and the fierce Gelonian, when he flies to Rhodope, and the deferts of Getes, and drinks milk thickened with horse blood. Whatever fheep thou feeft either creep away at a diftance from the reft under the mild fhade, or liftlefsly crop the tops of the grafs, and follow the flock in the rear, or lie down, as fhe is feeding, in the middle of the plain, and return by herfelf late in the evening; forthwith cut off the faulty animal, before the dire contagion fpreads among the unwary flock.

The whirlwind, that brings on a wintry ftorm, rushes not fo frequent from the fea, as the plagues of cattle are numerous. Nor do difeafes only fweep away fingle bodies; but on a fudden whole folds, the offspring and the flock at once, and the whole flock from the first breed, Whoever views the aerial alps, and the Bavarian caftles on the hills, and the fields of Iapidan Timavus, and the realms of the shepherds even now after so long a time deferted, and the lawns lying wafte far and wide, he may then be judge of this fad truth. Here in former times a doleful fweeping plague arole from the diftemper of the air, and grew more and more inflamed through the whole heat of Autumn; and delivered over to death all the race of cattle, all the favage race; poifoned the lakes, and tainted the pattures with contagion. Nor was the way of their death fimple and uncomplicated : But when the burning fever, revelling in every vein, had shrunk up their wretched limbs, again the waterish peftilential humour overflowed, and converted into its substance all the bones piece-meal confumed by the difeafe. Often-times amidit the fervice of the gods, the victim standing at the altar, while the woollen fillet with fnowy labal binds its temples, dropt down gasping to death in the hands of the lingering executioners. Or, if the prieft had flabbed any one before it fell, neither do its entrails when laid on the altars burn, nor is the augur, when confulted, able from thence to give responses : And the knives applied are fcarce tinged with blood, and the furface of the fand hardly stained with the thin meagre gore. Hence the calves every where expire in the luxuriant paftures, and render up their fweet lives at the full cribs. Hence the gentledogs are feized with madnefs; and wheezing cough thakes the difeafed fwine, and fuffocates them with tumours in the throat. The once victorious fleed, having now loft all heart to his exercises, and forgetful of his pafture, pines away, loathes the fprings, and often paws the ground with his foot; his ears hang down; there intermitting fweat breaks out, and that too cold at the approaches of death : His skin withered, feels hard, and in handling refifts the touch. These symptoms they give before death in the first days of their illnefs. But if in process of time the discase begins to rankle, then are their eyes inflamed, and the breath fetched from the bottom of the breaft is fometimes mixed with a heavy groan; and with a long fob they diftend their inmost bowels : Black blood gushes from their nostrils, and the rough tongue clings to their choaked up jaws. At first it was of service to pour wine down their throats; this appeared the fole remedy for them dying : Soon after, this very thing proved their destruction ; and being recruited, they burned with hideous rage; and they themfelves, now in the agonies of death (the gods award better things to the good, and fuch frenzy to our foes!). tore their own mangled limbs with their naked teeth. Lo the bull too, fmoking under the oppreffive fhare, drops down, and vomits cut of his mouth blood mingled with foam, and fetches his last groans. The ploughman, unyoking the fleer that mourns his brother's death, goes away fad, and in the midft of his work leaves the plough fixed down in the earth. Neither the shades of the deep groves, nor the foft meadows can effect his mind, nor the river, which, rolling over the rocks, glides to the plain more pure than amber : But his deep fides grow lank; deadness refts upon his heavy eyes; and his neck with unwieldy weight droops to the ground. What do their labours or good offices now avail them ? What their having turned the heavy lands with the share ! Yet they never injured themselves by the rich gifts of Bacchus, nor by fumptuous banquets. They feed on leaves, and the nourishment of fimple herbs : the cryftal fprings and running rivers are their drink, and no care interrupts their healthful flumbers. Then, and at no other time, they tell us that kine were wanting in those regions for Juno's facred rites, and that the chariots were drawn to her lofty fhrine by buffaloes ill-matched. Therefore, with painful labour they tear the ground with harrows, and with their very nails fet the corn, and over the high mountains drag the creaking waggons with their ftrained necks. The wolf now meditates no ambuscades around the folds, nor prowling roams about the flocks by night . A sharper care subdues him. The timorous does and fugitive flags now faunter among the dogs, and about the houfes. Now the waves wash out upon the extremity of the shore the breed of the immenfe ocean, and all the fealy race, like fhipwrecked bodies : And fea calves fly to the rivers their unufual haunt. The viper too, in vain defended by her winding den, expires ; and the aftonished waterfnakes creeting their scales, expire. To the very birds the air becomes unkindly; and they, falling headlong, leave their lives beneath the lofty cloud.

73

٠G

74

Book III.

Nor moreover avails it now the cattle to have their pasture changed ; the medicinal arts to which they had recourfe, prove noxious : The able malters in the fcience failed; Chiron, the fon of Phillyra, and Melampus, the fon of Amythaon. Pale Tifiphone, fent from the Stygian glooms to light, rages ; drives before her difeafes and difmay ; and, daily rifing higher, exalts her baneful head. With plaintive bleating of the flocks, and frequent lowings, the rivers, the withered banks, and floping hills refound : And now by droves and flocks fhe deals destruction, and in the very stalls heaps up carcafes rotting away with foul contagion, till they learn to bury them in the ground, and hide them in pits. For neither were their hides for use ; nor could any cleanse their flesh with water, or purge it by fire : Nor dare they fo much as thear the fleeces corrupted with difeafe and filthy fores, nor touch the putrid fluffs. But yet, if any one tried the odious veftments, fiery blains and filthy fweat overfpread his noifome body : And then, no long time intervening, the peftilential fire preyed upon his infected limbs.

Gü

BOOK FOURTH.

NEXT will I fet forth the heavenly gift of aerial honey. Vouchfafe, Mæcenas, thy regard to this part too of my work. I'll fing a fpectacle worthy of your admiration, tho' of things minute; the magnanimous leaders, the manners and employments, the tribes and battles of the whole race in order. Laborious effays on a mean fubject! But not mean the praife; if the adverse deities permit any one to execute the task, and Apollo invocated hear.

First, a feat and station must be fought for the bees, where neither winds may have accels, for the winds hinder them from carrying home their food, nor sheep and frisky kids may infult, the flowers, or heifer, strayin the plain, spurn off the dews, and bruise the rising herbs.

And let the lizards with fpeckled fealy backs be far from the rich hives, and wood-peckers, and other birds; and progne, whofe breaft is flained with her bloody hands : For they lay all things wafte around, and in their mouths bear away the bees themfelves while on the wing, a sweet morfel for their merciles young. But let clear fprings, and pools edged with green mole be near, and a small rivulet swiftly running through the meads; and let a palm or flately wild olive overfhade the entrance : That, when the new kings shall lead forth the first Iwarms in their own fpring, and the youth fport it iffuing from the hives, the neighbouring bank may invite them to withdraw from the heat, and the tree just in their way may receive them in its leafy shelter. Into the midft of the neighbouring water, whether it stagnates idle, or purling runs, throw willows across, and huge ftones; that they may reft upon frequent bridges, and fpread their wings to the fummer fun, if the impetuous east-wind has by chance disperfed those that lag behind, or immerfed them in the flood. Around these places let green caffia, and far-fmelling wild thyme, and flore of flrong-fcented favory, flower : And let beds of violets drink an irriguous fountain.

76

Book IV.

But as for your hives themselves, whether they be compacted of hollow bark, or wove with limber ofier, let them have their inlets narrow; for winter congeals the honey with its cold, and the heat melts and diffolves the fame : Either force is equally dreaded by the bees: Nor is it in vain they fmcar with wax the minute vents in their houfes, and fill up the edges with fucus and flowers, and preferve for those very uses collected glue more clinging than birdlime, or the pith of Phrýgian Ida. Often too, if fame be true, they have cherifhed their families in cells dug under ground; and have been found deep down in hollow Pumice ftones, and the cavity of a rotten trec. But do thou, to keep them warm, daub their chinky chambers round with fmooth mud, and ftrew it thinly over with leaves. Nor fuffer a yew near their lodges; nor burn in the fire the reddening crabs; nor truft them to a deep fen; or where a noifome fmell of mud, or where hollow rocks re-echo to the impulsive found, and the ftruck image of the voice rebounds.

For what remains, when the golden fun has driven the winter under ground, and opened the heavens with fummer light; they forthwith traverse the lawns and woods, crop the impurpled flowers, and lightly fkim the furface of the fireams. Hence, gladdened with I know not what agreeable fenfation, they grow fond of their offspring and young breed : Hence they labour out with art new waxen cells, and form the clammy honey. In consequence of this, when now you shall behold the fwarm issued from their hives into the open air, fwim through the ferene fummer fky, and the blackening cloud driven about by the wind, mark them well : They always feek the waters and leafy coverts : Here sprinkle the fragrant juices that are prescribed, bruifed baum, and the vulgar herb of honey-wort : Awake the tinkling founds, and beat the cymbals of mother Cybele They of themfelves will fettle on the medicatround.

Giij

ed feats ; they of themselves after their manner will retreat into the inmost chambers.

But if they shall go forth to battle; for often difcord with huge commotion feizes two rival kings, you may from the beginning know long before-hand both the animosity of the populace, and their hearts in trepidation for war: For that martial clang of hearfe brass rouzes the laggars, and a voice is heard refembling the trumpet's broken sounds. Then in a hurry they assessed their beaks, fit their claws, crowd thick around their king and to his pavilion, and with loud hummings challenge the foe.

As foon therefore as they find the vernal fky ferene, and the fields of air open, forth they rufh from their gates; they join battle: buzzing founds arife in the fky above: Mingled they clufter in a mighty round, and fall headlong: Hail rains not thicker from the air, nor fuch quantities of acoms from the fhaken oak. The kings themfelves, amidft the hofts diftinguished by their wings, exert mighty fouls in little bodies: Obstinately determined not to yield, till the dread victor has compelled either thefe or thofe to turn their backs in flight. These commotions of their minds, and this fo mighty fray, quashed by the throw of a little duft, will ceafe.

But, when you have recalled both leaders from the battle, put him to death that appears the bafer, left by idle prodigality he do hurt : And fuffer the more valorous king to reign in the court without a rival. The one will glow with refulgent fpots of gold : For there are two forts; this is the better, diftinguishable both by his make, and confpicuous with gliftering fcales : The other is horribly deformed with floth, and ingloriously drags a large belly.

As the kings are of two different figures, fo are the bodies of their people: For the one looks hideoufly ugly; as when a parched traveller comes from a deep dufty road, and fpits the dirt out of his dry mouth: The others fhine and fparkle with brightnefs, burnifhed with gold, and their bodies fpangled with equal drops.

This is the better breed : From these at the flated seafon of the year you shall press the luscious honey; yet not so luscious as pure, and fit to correct the harsher relish of the grape.

But when the roving fwarms fly about and fport in the air, difdain their hives, and leave their habitations cold; you shall restrain their unfettled minds from their vain play. Nor is there great difficulty to restrain them; do you but clip the wings of their kings: Not one will dare, while they stay behind, to fly alost, or pluck up the standard from the camp.

Let gardens fragrant with faffron flowers invite them; and the protection of Hellespontiac Priapus, the averter of thieves and birds, with his willow scithe preferve them. Let him, who makes such things his care, bring thyme himself, and pines from the high mountains, to plant them far and wide about their hives: Let him wear his hands with the hard labour; fet himself the fruitful plants in the ground, and water them with kindly showers.

And here indeed, were I not just furling my fails at the laft period of my labours, and hafting to turn my prow to land; perhaps I might both fing what method of culture would adorn rich gardens, and the rofe-beds of twice-blooming paeftum; and how endive and verdant banks of parfley delight in drinking the rills; and how the cucumber, winding along the grafs, fwells into a belly : Nor had I paffed in filence the late-flowering daffodile, nor the stalks of the flexile acanthus, nor the pale ivy, and the myrtles that love the fhores. For I remember, that, under the lofty turrets of Oebalia, where black galefus moistens the yellow fields, I faw an old Corycian, who had a few acres of neglected land; nor. was the foil rich enough for the plough, nor proper for flocks, nor commodious for vines : Yet here among the bushes planting a few pot-herbs, white lilies, vervain, and esculent poppies all around, he equalled in a contented mind the wealth of kings, and returning late at night, loaded his board with unbought duinties. The first to gather the role in spring, and fruits in autumn ; and even when fad winter now split the rocks with cold, and bridled up the current of the rivers, with ice; in that very feafon he was cropping the locks of the foft acanthus, chiding the late fummer, and the lingering zephyrs.

He therefore was the first to abound with pregnant bees, and numerous swarms; and to firain the frothing honey from the prefied combs: He had limes and pines in great abundance: And as many fruits as the fertile tree had been cloathed, with in early bloffom, so many it retained ripe in autumn. He too transplanted into rows the late far-grown elms, and hard pear-trees, and floe-trees now bearing damsons, and the plane now ministering fhade to drinkers. But thefe I for my part wave, reftrained by the narrow bounds I have preficibed myfelf, and leave to others hereafter to record.

Come now, I will unfold the qualities which Jupiter himself has implanted in the bees: For which reward accompanying the fhrill founds and tinkling brafs of the Curetes, they fed the king of heaven under the Dictzan cave. They alone of all the animal creation make their young the public care, fhare the buildings of a city in common, and pais their lives under inviolable laws: And they alone have a country of their own, and a fixed abode. Mindful of the coming winter, they experience toil in fummer, and lay up their acquisitions into the common flock. For some are provident for food, and by fixed compact are employed in the fields; fome within the inclofure of their hives lay Narciffus's tears, and clammy gum from bark of trees, for the first foundation of the combs, then build into arches the vifcid wax; others bring up to their full growth the young, the hope of the nation; others condense the purest honey, and distend the cells with liquid nectar. Some there are, to whole lot is fallen the watching at the gates; and thefe by turns obferve the waters and clouds of heaven; or receive the loads of those who return; or, forming a band, drive from the hives the drones, a fluggifh generation. The work is warmly plied; and the honey fmells fragrant of thyme.

As when the cyclops urge on the thunderbolts from the flubborn maffes, fome receive and render back the air in the bull-hide bellows; fome dip the fputtering Book IV.

brafs in the trough : Ætna groans under the weight of their anvils : They alternately with vaft force lift their arms in time, and turn the iron with the griping pincers. Just fo, if we may compare fmall things with great, the innate love of gain, prompts the Cecropian bees, each in his proper function. The elder have the care of their towns, and to fortify the combs, and frame the artificial cells; but the younger return fatigued late at night, their thighs laden with thyme; they feed at large on arbutes, and grey willows, on cafia, and glowing crocus, on the gummy lime, and purple hyacinths; all have one reft from work, all one time of labour. In the morning they rush out of the gates without delay. Again, when the evening at length has warned them to return from feeding in the fields, then they feek their habitations, and then refresh their bodies. The drowzy hum arifes, and they buzz about the borders and entrance of their hives. Soon after, when they have composed themselves in their cells, all is hushed for the night, and their proper sleep feizes on their weary limbs. Nor remove they to a great distance from their hives when rain impends, nor truft the fky when east-winds approach : But in fafety fupply themfelves with water all around under the walls of their city, and attempt but fhort excursions; and often take up little stones, as unsteady vessels do ballaft in a toffing fea : With these they posse themselves through the void and airy regions.

Chiefly you will admire this cuftom peculiar to the bees, that they neither indulge in conjugal embrace, nor foftly diffolve their bodies in the joys of love, nor bring forth young with a mother's throws. But the individuals fpontaneous cull the progeny with their mouths from leaves and fragrant herbs: They themfelves raife up a new king and little fubjects, and build for them new palaces and waxen realms.

Often too, in wandering among the flinty rocks, have they tore their wings, and voluntarily yielded up their lives under their burthen : So ardent is their paffion for flowers, and fuch their glory in making honey. Therefore, though they themfelves be limited to a narrow term of life (for it is not prolonged, beyond the feventh fummer); yet the immortal race remains, and for many years the fortune of the family fublits, and they count grandfires of grandfires in a long feries of generations.

Befides, not Egypt's felf, nor great Lydia, nor the nation of the Parthians, nor Median Hydaspes, are so obsequious to their king. Whilst the king is fase, all live in perfect harmony; when he is dead, they diffolve their union; they themselves tear to pieces the fabric of their honey, and demoliss the contexture of their combs. He is the guardian of their works; him they admire; and all encircle him with thick humming, and guard him in a numerous body. Often they list him upon their shoulders, in his defence expose their bodies in war, and through wounds seek a glorious death.

Some, from these appearances, and led by these examples of fagacity, have alleged that there is in bees a portion of the divine mind, and heavenly emanation : For that the deity pervades the whole earth, the tracts of fea, and depth of heaven. That hence the flocks, the herds, men, and all the race of favages, each at its birth derive their slender lives. Accordingly that all of them, when diffolved, return hither hereafter : Nor is there any place for annihilation; but that they mount up alive each into his proper order of star, and take their feat in the high heavens.

What time you are to rifle their august mansfion, and honey preferved in their treasures; first gargle your mouth with a draught of water, and fquirt it out upon them, and carry in your hand before you perfecuting fmoke. Twice they prefs the teeming cells: there are two feasons of that harvest; one, as foon as the Pleiad Taygete has displayed her comely face to the earth, and fpurns with her foot the despifed waters of the ocean; or, when the fame ftar flying the constellation of the watery fish, defcends in fadness from the fky into the wintry waves. They are wrathful above measure; and when provoked, infuse venom into their flings, and leave their bidden darts fixed in the veins, and lay down their lives is the wound, Yet, if you are afraid of a hard winter, you ought to fpare their future nourifhment, and have pity on their drooping fpirits and afflicted flate: But who would hefitate to fumigate their hives with thyme, and cut away the empty wax: For often the lizard preys unfeen upon the combs, and the vacant cells are fluffed with grubs that fhun the light; the drone alfo that fits exempt from duty at another's repaft, or the fierce hornet, has engaged them with unequal arms; or the moth's direful breed; or the fpider, hateful to Minerva, has fulpended her loofe nets in their gates.

The more they are exhausted, the more vigorously will they all labour to repair the ruins of their decayed race, to fill up the cells, and weave their magazines of flowers. But, feeing life has on bees too entailed our misfortunes, if their bodies shall languish with a fore difeafe, which you may know by undoubted figns : Immediately the fick change colour; horrid leannefs deforms their countenance, then they carry the bodies of their dead out of their houses, and lead the mournful funeral proceffions ; or, clinging together by the feet, hang about the entrance, and loiter all within-their houses shut up, liftless through famine, and benumbed with contracted cold. Then a hoarfer found is heard, and in drawling hums they buzz: As at times the fouth wind whilpers through the woods; as the ruffled fea. murmurs with refluent waves; as rapid fire in the pent furnace roars. In this cafe, now, I would advife to burn gummy odours, and to put honey through pipes of reed, kindly tempting, and inviting the drooping infects to their known repaft. It will be of fervice allo to mix with it the juice of pounded galls and dried roles, or wine thickened over a ftrong fire, or rafins from the Pfythian vine, Cecropian thyme, and ftrong-fmelling centaury. There is also in the meadows a flower, to which the hufbandmen have given the name of Amellus ; an herb eafy to be found : For from one root it shoots a vaft luxuriance of stalks, itfelf of golden hue; but on the leaves, which full thick are fpread around, the purple of the dark violet sheds a gloss. The altars of the gods are often decked with plaited wreaths of this forwer ; its tafte is bitterifh in the mouth ; the fhepherds gather it in new fhorn vallies, and near the winding fireams of Mella. Boil the roots thereof in flavorous wine ; and prefent it as their food in full bafkets at their door.

But if the whole flock shall fail any one on a fudden. and he shall have no means to recover a new breed; it is time to unfold the memorable invention of the Arcadian mafter, and how the tainted gore of bullocks flain has often produced bees : I'll disclose the whole tradition, tracing it high from its first fource. For where the happy nation of Pellœan Canopus inhabit on the banks of Nile floating the plains with his joverflowing river, and fail around their fields in painted gondolas; and where the river, that rolls down as far as from the fwarthy Indians, preffes on the borders of quivered Perfia, and fertilizes verdant Egypt with black fimy fand, and, pouring along, divides itself into feven different mouths; all the country grounds infallable relief on this art. First, a space of ground of small dimenfions, and contracted for this very purpole, is made choice of; this they ftrengthen with a narrow tile-roof and confined walls : And add four windows of flanting light from the four winds. Then a bullock, just bending the horns in his forchead two years old, is fought out : Whilft he ftruggles exceedingly, they clofe up both his noftrils, and the breath of his mouth ; And, having beaten him to death, his battered bowels burft within the hide that remains entire. When dead, they leave him pent up; and lay under his fides fragments of boughs, thyme, andf refh caffia. This is done when first the zephyrs stir the waves, before the meadows blufh with new colours, before the chattering fwallow fufpends her neft upon the rafters. Mean while the juices warmed in the tender veins ferment : And animals, wondrous to behold, first short of their feet, and in a little while buzzing with wings, fwarm together, and more and more fan the thin air, till they burft away like a fhower poured down from fummer clouds; or like an arrow from the whizzing ftring, what time the fwift Parthians first usher in the fight.

Book IV.

What god, ye mules, what god difclofed to us this mysterious art? Whence took this new experience of men its rife.

The thepherd Ariftæus, flying from Peneian Tempe, having loft his bees, as it is faid, by difease and famine, ftood mournful by the facred fource of the rifing river, dolefully complaining ; and with these accents addressed his parent : O mother Cyrene, O mother, who inhabiteft the depths of this flood, why haft thou brought me forth of the illustrious race of gods, if indeed, as you pretend, Thymbraean Apollo be my fire, thus abhorred by deftiny ? Or whither is thy love for me banished ? Why didst thou bid me hope for heaven ? Lo I, thine own offspring, am even bereaved of this very glory of my mortal life, which, amidit my watchful care of flocks and agriculture, I, after infinite effays, with much ado achieved. Why then go on, root up with thy own hand my happy groves ; fend hoftile flames into my stalls, and kill my harvests; burn up my plantations, and wield the flurdy bill against my vineyards ; if you are feized with fuch ftrong averfion to my praile.

But his mother heard the pitcous found beneath the chambers of the deep river : Her nymphs around her were fpinning the Melefian fleeces, dyed with rich feagreen tincture : Drymo and Xantho, Ligea and Phyllodoce, their comely hair flowing down their fnowwhite necks : Nefae and Spio, Thalia and Cymodoce, Cydippe and golden Lycorias; the one a virgin, the other just experienced in the first labours of Lucina: Clio, and her fifter Beroe, both daughters of the ocean, both in gold, both in parti-coloured fkins arrayed; Ephyre and Opis, and Afian Deiopeia ; and fwift Arethusa, having at length laid her shafts aside, among whom Clymene was relating Vulcan's unavailing care, the intrigues and pleafant thefts of Mars; and recounted the frequent amours of the gods down from Chaos. Whilft the nymphs, charmed with this fong, wind off their foft talks from the fpiudles, the lamentations of Aristaeus struck once more his mother's ears, and all were amazed in their crystal beds : But Arethufa up-reared her golden head before her fifters, darting her eyes abroad; and afar the cried, O filter Cyrene, not in vain alarmed with fuch piteous moaning, thy own Aristaeus, overwhelmed with forrow, thy darling care, ftands weeping by the water of l'eneus thy fire, and calls thee cruel by name. To her the mother, her foul deep feized with unufual concern, cries ; Conduct, conduct him quick to us : To him it is permitted to tread the courts of the gods. At the fame time fhe commands the deep floods to divide on all hands, that the youth might make his approach. And b the water, bent into the shape of a mountain, stood round about him, received him into its ample bofom, and let him pafs under the river. And now admiring his mother's palace, and humid realms, the lakes pent up in caverns, and the founding groves, he paffed along, and, ftartling - at the vast motion of waters, surveyed all the rivers gliding under the great earth in different places ; Phatis and Lycus, and the fource when deep Enipeus firft burfts forth, whence father Tiberinus, and whence Anio's streams, and Hypanis roaring down the rocks, and Myfian Caicus, and Eridanus, his bull-front necked with two gilded horns, than whom no river pours along the fertile fields with more violence into the empurpled fea.

Н

After he was arrived under the roof of her bed-chamber, hung with pumice-ftones, and Cyrene informed of the idle lamentations of her fon; the fifters in order ferve up the cryftal ftreams for the hands, and bring fmooth towels. Some load the boards with viands, and plant the full cups. The altars blaze with panchaean fires. Then the mother: Take, fays fhe, thefe goblets of Maeonian wine; let us offer a libation to Ocean. At the fame time, fhe herfelf addreffes Ocean, the parent of things, and the fifter nymphs, who prefide over an hundred woods, over an hundred rivers. Thrice fhe fprinkled glowing Vefta with the liquid nectar; thrice the flame fhot to the top of the roof, brightened.

With which omen encouraging her foul, she thus begins: In Neptune's carpathian gulf, there dwells a

feer, Caerulean Proteus, who measures the great sea with harneffed fifnes, and in a chariot yoked with twolegged steeds. He now revisits the ports of Emathia and his native Pallene : Him both we nymphs, and old Nereus himfelf adore ; for the prophet knows all things that are, that have been, and the whole concatenation of future events: For fuch is the will of Neptune, whole unwieldy droves, and unfhapely fea-calves, he feeds under the deep. Him, my fon, you first must furprise with chains, that he may explain to you the whole caufe of the difeafe, and make the iffue prosperous : For no inftructions will he give without compulsion; nor can you move him by intreaty : Ply him, when taken, with rigid force and chains: All his tricks to evade thefe proving vain, will at length be quite baffled. 1 myfelf, as foon as the fun has inflamed his noon-tide heats, when the herbs thirst, and the shade is now more grateful to the cattle ; I myfelf will conduct thee into the fenior's recefs, whither he retires from the waves, when fatigued; that you may eafily affail him overpowered with fleep. But when you shall hold him fast confined within your arms and chains, then various forms and features of wild beafts will mock your grafp: For, on a sudden, he will become a briftly boar, a fell tyger, a fealy dragon, and a lionefs with a tawny mane ; or he will emit the roaring found of flame, and fo escape the chain; or liquified into fluid waters, glide away. But the more he shall transform himself into all shapes, still closer draw, my fon, the hampering chains ; Till, rechanged, he shall become fuch as you faw him, when ufhering in fleep, be clofed his eyes. She faid, and fhed around the liquid odour of ambrofia, wherewith the fprinkled over the whole body of her fon : Now from his trimmed locks a delicious fragrance breathed, and active vigour was infused into his limbs. In the fide of a hollowed mountain, is a spacious cave, whither the waves in great numbers are driven by the wind, and divide themfelves into winding bays: At times, a station most fecure for weather beaten mariners. Within this cave Proteus hides himfelf, behind the barrier of a huge rock : Here the nymph places the youth in ambush, remote from view; she stays herself at a diftance, shrouded in a misty veil. Now, the fultry dog-ftar fcorching the thirfty Indians, blazed in the fky, and the fiery fun had finished half his courfe : The herbs withered; and the rays made the shallow overheated rivers boil, their channels being drained to the flimy bottom ; when Proteus, repairing to his accultomed den, advanced from the waves : The watery race of the vaft occean, gamboling around him, fcatters the briny foray far and near. The fea-calves apart. lay them down to fleep along the fhore. He himfelf (as at times the keeper of a fold upon the mountains, when evening brings home the bullocks from the pafture, and the lambs with noify bleatings whet the bunger of the wolves) fits in the centre of a rock, and reviews their numbers. Of feizing whom, fince fo favourable an opportunity offered itself to Ariftzus; scarce fuffering the aged god to compose his weary limbs, he rufhes upon him with a great fhout, and furprifes him with chains as he lay : He, on the other hand, not forgetful of his art, transforms himfelf into all the wonderous shapes in nature ; fire, and a grimly favage, and flowing river. But, when no fhifts could find him an escape, overpowered he returns to himself, and at length thus fpoke in human accent : Who, most prefumptuous youth, enjoined thee, he fays, to approach my habitation ? Or what demandelt thou here ? But he : Thou knoweft, O Proteus, thou knoweft of thyfelf; nor is it in any one's power to deceive thee: But do thou ceafe to try thy wiles on me. For in purfuance of divine command, I came hither to confult thy orac'e about my ruined affairs. He faid. Then the prophet at' length, with mighty force rolled his eyes flashing with azure light, and, gnashing his teeth fiercely, thus opened his mouth to difclofe the fates : 'Tis the vengeance of no mean deity that purfues thee : Thou art making attonement for thy heinous crimes : Thefe fufferings, by no means proportioned to thy guilt, unhappy Orpheus entails upon thee, unlefs the fates oppole; and he forely rages for his ravished queen. And indeed it was, whilft fhe fled precipitately from you

Ηij

88

Book IV.

along the river, that the maid doomed to death, was fo . unhappy not to fee the hideous water-fnake before her feet, as it guarded the banks in the tall grafs. But her coeval choir of dryads filled the highest mountains. with their fhrieks : The rocks of Rhodope wept ; fo did lofty Pangea, and the martial land of Rhefus, the Getes, and Hebrus, and attic Orithyia. Orpheus himfelf, foothing the anguish of his love with his concave fhell, fung thee, his fweet Eurydice ; thee by himfelf on the lonely fhore ; thee when the day arole ; thee when the day declined, he fung. He, entering even the jaws of Tænarus, Pluto's gates profound, and the grove overcaft with gloomy horror, vilited the manes, and . their tremendous king, and hearts incapable of relenting at human prayers. But the airy fhades, and phantoms of the dead, affected with his fong, advanced from the deep manfions of Erebus, in fuch throngs, as birds that shelter themselves by thousands in the woods, when evening, or a wintry shower drives them from the mountains : Matrons, and men, and ghofts of galfant heroes deceased ; boys, and unmarried virgins, and youths laid in the funeral piles before the faces of their parents; whom the black mud, and unfightly reeds of Cocytus, and the unlovely lake with fluggifts. wave incloses round, and ftyx nine times interfused, confines : Nay, the very habitations and deepest dungeons of death were aftonished ; and the Furies, with whole hair blue fnakes were interwoven ; and yawning Cerberus repressed his three mouths; and the circumrotation of Ixion's orb was fufpended by the fong. And now, tracing back his way, he had overpaffed all dangers; and reftored Eurydice was just approaching the Superior regions, following behind ; for Prosperpina had given him that law : When a fudden frenzy feized the unwary lover, pardonable indeed, if the manes knew to pardon. He ftopt, and just on the verge of light, ah! unmindful, and not matter of his mind, looked back on his Eurydice : There was all his labour loft, and the law of the relentless tyrant broke; and thrice a difmal groan heard through the Avernian lake. Ah ! Opheus, the fays, who hath both unhappy me, and thee H iii

-

89.

undone : What deep infatuation this ? See once more the cruel fates call me back, and fleep clofes my fwimming eyes. And now farewell : I am fnatched away, encompassed with thick shades of night, and firetching forth to thee my feeble hands, ah ! thine no more. She faid ; and on a fudden fled from his fight a different way, like fmoke blending with thin air : Nor more was feen by him grasping the shades in vain, and in act to fay a thousand things; nor did the ferryman of hell fuffer him again to crofs the intervening lake. What should he do? Whither should he turn him, his love . twice fnatched away? With what tears affuage the manes, with what accents the infernal powers ? She, already a cold shade, was failing in the Stygian boat. For feven whole months, 'tis faid, he mourned beneath a bleak aerial rock by the ftreams of defert Strymon, and revolved thefe woes under the cold caves, foftening the very tygers, and leading the oaks with his fong. As mourning Philomel under a poplar shade, bemoans her loft young, which the hard-hearted clown obferving in the neft, has ftole unfledged; but fhe weep through the night, and, perched upon a bough, renews her doleful fong; and fills the places all around with piteous wailings. No loves, no hymenial joys could bend his foul. All alone he traverfed the hyperborean tracts of ice, the fnowy Tanais, and fields never free from the Riphzan frofts, deploring his ravifhed Eurydice, and Pluto's bootless prefents. For which neglected nuptial rite, the Ciconian matrons, amidst the facred fervice of the gods, and nocturnal orgies of Bacchus; having tore the youth in pieces, fcattered his limbs over the wide fields. And even then, whilft Oeagrian Hebrus roll.d down the middle of its tide, his head torn from the alabafter neck; the voice of itfelf, and his faultering torgue, invoked Eurydice, ah, unfortunate Eurydice ! with his expiring breath : The banks reechoed Eurydice all along the river. Thus Proteus faid; and plunged with a bound into the deep fea; and, where he plunged, he toffed up the foaming billlows under the whirling tide.

But not fo Cyrene : For kindly the befpoke her trembling fon : My fon, you may eafe your mind of all vexatious cares. This is the whole caufe of your difaster ; hence the nymphs, with whom fhe celebrated the mingled dances in the deep groves, have fent this mournful devastation on your bees : Do thou humbly tender offerings, fupplicating peace, and venerate the gentle wood-nymphs; for at thy fupplications they will grant forgiveness, and mitigate their wrath. But first, will I shew you in order what must be your manner of worship. Single out four choice bulls of beauteous form, which the tops of green Lyczus now graze for thee, and as many heifers, whole necks are untouched by the yoke. For thefe, erect four altars, at the lofty temples of the goddeffes, from their throats emit the facred blood, and leave the bodies of the cattle in the leafy grove, Afterwards, when the ninth morn has difplayed her rifing beams, you shall offer Lethæan poppies, by way of funeral rites to Orpheus; venerate appeafed Eurydice with a flain calf, facrifice a black ewe, and revifit the grove.

Digitized by Google

1

Without delay, he inflantly executes the orders of his mother; repairs to the temple; raifes the altar as directed; leads up four chofen bulls of furpaffing form, and as many heifers, whofe necks were untouched by the yoke. Thereafter, when the ninth morning had ufhered in her rifing beams, he offers the funeral rites to Orphcus, and revifits the grove. But here, they behold a fudden prodigy, and, wondrous to relate, bees through all the belly hum, amidft the putrid bowels of the cattle, pour forth with the fermenting juices from the burft fides, and in immenfe clouds roll along; then fwarm together on the top of a tree, and hang down in a clufter from the bending boughs.

Thus of the culture of fields and flocks, and of trees, I fung; whilit great Cæfar at the deep Euphrates thunders in war victorious difpenfes laws among the willing nations, and purfues the way to heaven. At that time did I, Virgil, nourifhed by fweet Parthenope, flourifh in the fludies of inglorious eafe; who warbled paftoral fongs; and, adventurous through youth, fung thee, O Tityrus, under the covert of a fpreading beech.

VIR GIL'S

ÆNEID.

BOOK FIRST.

ARMS I fing, and the hero, the first who, in obedience to the decree of heaven, having fled from the coafts of Troy, came to Italy, and the Lavinian shore: Much was he tossed, both on sea and land, by the powers above, to gratify cruel Juno's unrelenting rage; much too he suffered in war, till he raised the city Lavinium, and introduced his gods into Latium; from whom sprung the Latin progeny, the Albian fathers, and the walls of losty Rome.

Declare, O muse! the causes why he fuffered, what deity had he offended, and why was the queen of heaven provoked to doom a man of such distinguished piety, to ftruggle with a feries of calamities, to encounter fo many hardships: Dwells such refertment in heavenly minds?

An ancient city there was, named Carthage, inhabited by a colony of Tyrians, fronting Italy, and the mouth of the Tyber, but far remote; a city of vaft riches, and yet extremely hardy by warlike exercises; which city Juno is faid to have honoured more than any other place of her refidence, preferably even to Samos. Here lay her arms; here flood her chariot; here the goddefs even defigns; and fondly hopes to establish the feat of universal empire, would the fates permit. But she had heard of a race to be descended from Trojan blood, that was one day to overturn the Tyrian towers : That hence a people of extensive regal fway, and renowned in war, was to come to the destruction of Lybia : So the destinies ordained. This the daughter of Saturn dreading, and bearing still in mind the long-continued war which fhe had the principal hand in carrying on before Troy, in behalf of her beloved Argos; nor as yet were the caufes of her rage and keen refentment worn out of her mind ; the judgment of Paris dwells deeply rooted in her foul; the affront offered to her neglected beauty ; the detefted Trojan race; and the honours conferred on ravished Ganymede; she, by these invectives fired, having toffed on the whole ocean the Trojans, whom the Greeks and merciles Achilles had left, drove them far from Latium; and thus for many years they were forced by fate to roam round every fea: So vaft a work it was to found the Roman flate.

Scarce had the Trojans, lofing fight of Sicily, with joy launched out into the deep, and began to plough the foaming billows with their brazen prows; when Juno, harbouring everlafting rancour in her breaft, thus argues with herfelf: Shall I then, baffled thus, defift from my purpole, nor have it in my power to avert the Trojan king from Italy ? And why, becaufe I am refrained by fate ! Was Pallas able to burn the Grecian fhips, and bury themfelves in the ocean, and for the offence of one, even the frenzy of Ajax, Oileus's fon ? She herfelf darting from the clouds Jove's rapid fire, both fcattered their fhips, and upturned the fea with the winds : Him too, she snatched away in a whirlwind, expiring flames from his transfixed breaft, and dashed him against the pointed rock. But I, who move majettic, the queen of heaven, both fifter and wife of Jove, must maintain a series of wars with one poor race, for fo many years. And who will henceforth adore Juno's deity, or humbly offer victims on her altars !

The goddefs, by herfelf revolving fuch thoughts in her inflamed breaft, repairs to Æolia, the native land of ftorms, regions pregnant with boifterous winds. Here, in a capacious cave, king Æolus controuls with imperial fway, the reluctant winds and bluftering tempefts, and confines them with chains to their prison. They roar indignant round their barriers, filling the hollow mountain with loud murmurs, Æolus is feated on a lofty throne, wielding a fceptre, and therewith affuages their fury, and moderates their rage. For, unless he did fo, they, in their rapid career, would hurl away fea and earth, and heaven fublime, and fweep them through the air. But almighty father Jove, guarding against this, hath pent them in gloomy caves, and thrown over them the ponderous weight of mountains, appointing them a king; who, by fixed laws, and at command, knows both when to curb them, and when to relax their reins; whom Juno then in suppliant words thus addreffed : Great Æolus (for the fire of gods, and king of men, hath given the power both to fmooth the waves, and raife them with the wind) a race by me detefted fails the Tufcan fea, transporting llium and its conquered gods, into Italy; add impulse to thy winds, overset and fink their ships; or drive them different ways, and strow the ocean with floating carcales. I have twice feven lovely nymphs, the faireft of whom, Deiopeia, I will join to thee in firm wedlock, and affign to be thy own for ever, that with thee fhe may spend all her years, for this fervice, and make thee father of a beautiful offspring.

To whom Æolus replies: To you, illuftrious queen, it belongs to confider what you would have done: On me, it is incumbent to execute your commands. To thee I owe whatever power I have; to thee my fcepter, and the finiles of Jove. You give me to fit at the tables of the gods, and make me lord of ftorms and tempefts.

Thus having faid, whirling the point of his fpear, he ftruck the hollow mountain's fide, The winds, as in a formed battalion, rush forth at every vent, and scour over the lands in giddy whirls. They ply the ocean furioufly, and at once, east and fouth, and stormy fouthweft, plough up the whole deep from its loweft bottom, and roll vaft billows to the fhores. The cries of the feamen fucceed, and the cracking of the cordage. In a trice, clouds fuatch the heavens and day from the eyes of the Trojans. Sable night fits brooding on the fea. Thunder roars from pole to pole : the sky glares with repeated flashes; and all nature threatens them with immediate death. Forthwith Æneas's limbs are relaxed with cold fluddering fear : He groans, and, fpreading out both his hands to heaven, thus expostulates: O thrice happy they, who had the good fortune to die hefore their parents eyes, under the high ramparts of Troy ! O thou, the braveft of the Grecian race, great Tydeus's fon, why was I not defined to fall on the Trojan plains, and pour out this foul by thy right hand ? Even there, where ftern Hector lies flain by the fword of Achilles; where mighty Sarpedon lies; where, in impetuous whirls, Simois, my native river, rolls along with its ftream, the fhields, and helmets, and bodies of fo many gallant heroes.

Thus, while he mourns in vain, a tempeft, roaring from the north, strikes across his fails, and heaves the billows to the flars. The oars are fhattered; then the prow inclines, and exposes the fide of the ship to the waves, which now fwell up, one after another, into broken hanging mountains. These hang trembling on the towering furge ; to those the wide yawning deep discloses the earth between two waves : The whirling tide rages with mingled fand. Three other ships, the fouth-wind hurrying away, throws on latent rocks; rocks in the midft of the ocean, which the Italians call the altars, whole huge back just rifes to the furface of the fea. Three from the deep the east wind drives on shoals and flats, a piteous spectacle ! and, dashing on the shelves, inclose them with mounds of fand. Α mighty billow, falling from the height of the /hip before the hero's eyes, dashes against the stern of one which bore the Lycian crew, and their faithful leader

Orontes : The pilot is toffed from his feat, and precipitantly tumbled headlong into the flood; there fixed, the galley thriee, by the working waves, is whirled around; and by the rapid eddy, fwallowed up in the deep. Then, floating here and there on the face of the vaft abyfs, are feen men, their arms and planks, and the Trojan wealth, among the waves. Now the florm overpowered the float veffel of Ilioneus, now that of brave Achates, and that which Abas, and that which old Aletes bore. All at their loofened and disjointed fides, receive the hoftile ftream, and gape into chinks.

Mean while Neptune felt the fea in vaft uproar and confusion, a ftorm sent forth into his domain, and the depth overturned from their lowest channels. He, in violent commotion, and concerned for his watery empire, reared his ferene afpect above the waves ; fees Æneas's fleet scattered over the ocean, the Trojans oppreffed with the conflicting waves below, and the convullive ruins of heaven above. Nor were Juno's wiles and hate unknown to her brother. He calls to him the east and west-winds, then thus in wrath befpeaks them : And do you thus prefume upon your birth ? Dare you, audacious winds! without my fovereign leave, to embroil heaven and earth, and raife fuch mountains on the fea ? Whom I-But first it is fit to affuage the tumultuous waves. A chaftifement of another nature from me awaits your next offence. Fly apace, and bear this meffage to your king : That not to him the empire of the fea, and the awful trident, but to be my lot are given : His dominions are wild, enormous rocks, your proper mansions, Eurus: In that palace, let king Æolus proudly boaft, and reign in the clofe prifon of the winds.

So fpeaks the god; and fwifter than fpeech fmooths the fwelling feas, difperfes the collected clouds, and brings back the day. With him Cymothoe and Triton, with exerted might, heave the ships from the pointed rock. He himself raises them with his trident; lays open the vast fand-banks, and calms the fea; and in his light chariot glides along the furface of the waves.

96

And as when a fedition has arifen amongle a mighty multitude, as often happeus, and the minds of the ignoble vulgar are all on fire; now ftones, now firebrands fly; their fury fupplies them with arms: If then, by chance, they fpy a man revered in piety and worth, all are hufhed, and ftand with liftening ears: He, by perfuafive eloquence, rules their paffions, and calms their breafts. Thus all the raging tumult of the ocean fubfided, fo foon as the parent of the floods furveying the feas, and wafted through the open fky, manages his fteeds, and throws up the reins, flying in his eafy chariot.

In the mean time, the weary Trojans direct their courfe towards the nearest shores, and make the coasts of Libya. Here in a long recess, a station lies; an island forms it into an harbour hy its jutting fides, against which every wave from the ocean is broke, and divided, runs into a remote, winding bay. On either fide vast cliffs arife, and two twin-like rocks, towering above the reft, threaten heaven : Under whofe furamit the waters all around are calm and ftill. Above, a fylvan scene, with waving woods, and a dark grove, with awful shade, hangs over the flood. Under the oppolite front a cave is formed of pendant rocks, within which are fresh springs, and feats of living stone, the cool receis of nymphs. Here tempest-beaten ships ride fafe, though neither cables hold, nor biting anchors moor them. To this retreat Æneas brings feven ships, collected from all his fleet : And the Trojans, longing much for land, now difembark, enjoy the wished for shore, and stretch their brine-drenched limbs upon the beach. Then first Achates ftruck the latent spark from a flint, received the fire in leaves, round it applied dry combustible matter, and instant blew up the fuel into flame. Then, spent with toil and hunger, they produce their grain damnified with the brine, and the inftruments of Ceres ; and prepare first to dry over the fire, and then to grind with ftones their corn faved from the wreck. Meanwhile, Æneas climbs a rock, and takes a prospect of the wide ocean all around, if by any means he can defery Antheus toffed by the wind, and the Phrygian gallies, or Capys, or the arms of Caicus ou the lofty deck. He sees no ship in view, but three ftags ftraying on the fhore : Thefe the whole herd follows, and is feeding through the valley in a long extended train. Here he stopped short, and Inatching his bow and winged arrows, weapons which the faithful Achates bore; first overthrows the leaders, bearing their heads high with branching horns; next, the vulgar throng ; and difperfes the whole herd, perfecuting them with darts through the leafy woods. Nor defifts he from the chace, till his conquering arm ftretches feven huge deer on the ground, and equals their number with his fhips. Hence he returns to the port, and shares the spoil amongst all his crew. Then the hero divides the wine which the good Aceftes had flowed in cafks on the Sicilian fhore, and given them at parting, and with these words cheers their disconfolate hearts : O friends and fellow-fufferers, who have fustained feverer ills than these (for we are not strangers to former days of advertity), to thefe too God will grant a happy period ; you have feen both Scylla's furious coaft, and those hideous roaring rocks ; you are acquainted even with the dens of the cyclops : refume then your courage, and difmifs your defponding fears; perhaps the day may come, when even these misfortunes shall be remembered with joy. Through various scenes of woe, through many perilous adventures we fleer our course to Latium, where the fates give us the prospect of peaceful settlements. There Troy's kingdom is allowed once more to rife. With patience persevere, and referve yourselves for prosperous days. So spoke the chief ; and though oppressed with a thousand heavy cares, yet wears the looks of well-diffembled hope, while he buries deep anguish in his breaft.

¢.

4

Now they addrefs themfelves to the fpoil and future feaft; tear the fkin from off the ribs, and lay the entrails bare. Some divide the flefh into parts, and fix on fpits the quivering limbs: Others place the brazen caldrons on the fhore, and prepare the fires. Then they repair their ftrength with food, and ftretched along the grafs, regale themfelves with generous old wine and choice venifon. After the rage of hunger was appealed, and the tables removed, in long difcourfe they explore the fate of their companions loft, hovering in fufpenfe between hope and fear, whether to believe them yet alive, or that they had finished their definy, and were now deaf to the laft folemn invocation of departed ghofts. Above the reft, the pious hero with himfelf bemoans, now the lofs of active Orontes, now of Amycus, and then the cruel fate of Lycus, with valiant Gyas, and no lefs valiant Cloanthus.

٩.

And now the day and discourse were ended; when Jove, from the lofty fky, looking down upon the navigable fea, and the lands lying at reft, with the fhores and the nations difperfed abroad ; thus, furveying all, flood on the battlements of heaven, and fixed his eyes on Libya's realms. To whom, revolving fuch cares in his mind, Venus, in mournful mood, her ftarry eyes bedimmed with tears, thus addreffes herfelf: O thou who, with eternal fway, ruleft the affairs of both gods and men, and with thy thunder overawelt the world; what fo high offence against thee could my Æneas or the Trojans be guilty of, that, after having fuffered fo many deaths, they must be shut out from all the wide world upon account of Italy ? Yet fure you promifed, that in fome future age, after a feries of circling years, the Romans should defceud from them, powerful leaders fpring even from the blood of Teucer reftored, who should be masters of the fea, who should rule the nations with abfolute fway. Almighty father ! whence is thy purpose changed ? I indeed was folacing myself with this promife under Troy's fall and fad catastrophe, with adverse fates balancing fates more prosperous. But now the fame hard fortune still pursues them, after they have been toffed and afflicted with fuch variety of woes. Great fovereign of the world, what end to their labours wilt thou vouchfafe to give ? Antenor, escaped from amidst the Greeks, could pierce the Illyrian gulf, and in fafety reach the inmost realms of Liburnia, and overpais the fprings of Timavus : Whence, through nine mouths, with loud echoing from the mountain, it burfts away like a fea impetuous, and fweeps the fields with a roaring deluge. Yet even there he built the city Padua, and eitablifhed a Trojan fettlement, gave the nation a new name, and fet up the arms of Troy. Now in calm peace composed he refts: But we, thy own progeny, whom thou, by thy unalterable nod, ordaineft to fit inthroned in heaven, even we, (Ob wee unalterable !) having loft our fhips, are given up to endlefs dangers, driven hither and thither far from the Italian coaft, and all to gratify the fpight of one. Are these the honours wherewith thou crowneft our piety ? Is it thus thou replaceft us on the throne.

The fire of Gods and men fmiling upon her, with shat ferene afpect wherewith he clears the tempestuous fky, gently kiffed his daughter's lips; then thus replies : My Cytherea, ceale from fear : Immoveable to thee remain thy people's fates. Thou shalt fee the ciby and promifed walls of Lavinium, and shalt raife magnanimous Æneas aloft to the stars of heaven; nor is my purpose changed. In Italy he (for 1 will speak to thee without referve, fince this care lies gnawing at shy heart, and, tracing farther back, I will reveal the fecrets of fate) shall wage a mighty war, crush a stubborn nation, and establish laws and cities to his people, till the third fummer shall fee him reigning in Latium, and three winters pass after he has subdued the Rutulians. But the boy Afcanius, who has now the additional furname of Iulus (Ilus he was, while the empire of Hium flourished) shall measure with his reign full shirty great folar circles of twelve revolving months, transfer the feat of his empire from Lavinium, and ftrongly fortify Alba Longa. Here again, for full three hundred years, the fceptre shall be fwayed by Hector's line, until Ilia, a royal priestefs, impregnated by Mars, shall bear two infants at a birth. Then-Romulus, exulting in the tawny hide of the wolf his nurfe, shall take upon him the rule of the nation, build a city facred to Mars, and from his own name call the people Romans. To them I fix neither limits nor duration of empire : Dominion have I given them without end. Nay more, even fullen Juno, who now, through jealous fear, creates endlefs diffurbance to fea, and earth, and heaven, even she shall change her counfels for the better, and join with me in befriending the Romans, those lords of the world, and the nation of the gown. Such is my pleasure. An age shall come, after a course of years, when the race of Affaracus shall bring under fubjection Phthia and renowned Mycenæ, and reign over vanquished Argos. A Trojan shall be born of illustrious race, Cæfar, whole empire the ocean, whole fame the ftars shall bound, Julius his name, from great Iulus derived. Him, loaded with the fpoils of the Eaft, you shall receive to heaven at length, having feen an end of all your cares : He too shall be invoked by vows and Then, wars having ceafed, fiercer nations pravers. shall foften into peace. Faith, with her hoary reverend locks, Vefta, and Quirinus, with his brother Remus, shall then administer justice. The dreadful gates of war shall be shut with close bolts and bars of iron. Within the temple impious Fury, fitting on horrid arms, and his hands bound behind his back with a hundred, brazen chains, in hideous rage shall gnash his bloody iaws.

He faid, and from on high fent down Maia's fon, that the coafts of Libya and the new-built towers of Carthage might be open hospitably to receive the Trojans; left Dido, ignorant of heaven's decree, should thut them out from her ports. He, on the fleerage of his wings, fhoots away through the expanded fky, and · fpeedily lighted on the coafts of Libya, And now he puts his orders in execution; and, at the will of the. God, the Carthaginians lay afide the fiercenefs of their The queen, especially, entertains thoughts of hearts. peace, and a benevolent disposition towards the Trojans.

But the pious Æneas, by night revolving a thoufand cares, refolved, as foon as cheerful day arofe, to fet out, in order to view the unknown country, to examine on what coafts he was driven by the wind, who are the inhabitants, whether men or wild beafts (for he fees nothing but wafte, uncultivated grounds), and inform his friends of what discoveries he makes. Withiu the shelter of a winding grove, under a hollow rock, he secretly disposed his fleet, senced round with trees and gloomy shades : Himself marches forth, attended with Achates alone, brandishing in his hand two javelins of broad-pointed steel.

I iii

To whom, in the midit of a wood, his mother prefents herfelf, wearing the mien and attire of a virgin. and the arms of a Spartan maid : Or refembling Thracian Harpalyce, when she tires her steeds, and in her course outflies the swift Hebrus. For, huntress-like. the had hung from her shoulders, a commodious bow, and gave her hair to wanton in the wind; bare to the knee, with her flowing robes gathered in a knot. Then first addressing them, pray, gentle youths, she fays, inform me, if by chance, ye have feen any of my fitters wandering this way, equipped with a quiver, and the fkin of a spotted Lynx, or with full cry, urging the chace of a foaming boar ! Thus Venus /poke, and thus her fon replied : None of your fifters has been heard or feen by me. O virgin fair, by what name shall I address thee ! for thou wearest not the looks of a mortal, nor founds thy voice mere human accents. Α goddels sure ! Are you the fifter of Phæbus, or one of the race of the nymphs? Oh ! be propitious, and, whoever you are, eale our anxious minds, and inform us under what climate, on what region of the globe we at length are thrown For here we wander, ftrangers both to the country and the inhabitants, driven upon this coaft by furious winds and fwelling feas. So fhall many a victim fall a facrifice at thine altars by our right hand. Then Venus replies : I, indeed, deem not myfelf worthy of fuch honour : It is the cuftom for us, Tyrian virgins, to wear a quiver, and bind the leg thus high with a purple buskin. Before you lies the kingdom of Carthage, a Tyrian people, and Agenor's city. But the country is that of Libya, and the natives, a race invincibly fierce in war. The kingdom is ruled by Didu, who fled hither from Tyre, to fhun her brother's hate. Tedious is the relation of her wrongs, and intricate the circumstances of her flory. But I shall trace

Book I.

the principal heads. Her husband was Sichæus, the richeft of the Phœnicians in land, and paffionately beloved by his unhappy fpouse. Her father gave her to him in her virgin bloom, and joined her in wedlock. with the first connubial rites, . But her brother Pygmalion then possefied the throne of Tyre, monstroully wicked beyond all mortals. Between them two an implacable hatred arofe. He, impioufly inhuman, and blinded with the love of gold, having taken Sichæus, at a surprize, secretly affassinates 'him before the altar, regardless of his fifter's love. Long he kept the horrid deed concealed, and forging many wicked lies, amused the love fick queen with vain hope. But the ghoft of her unburied hufband appeared to her in a dream, lifting up his vifage amazingly pale and ghaftly : He opened to her view the bloody altars, and his breaft transfixed with the fword, and detected all the hidden villany of the family : Then exhorts her to fly with speed, and quit her native country; and, to aid her flight, reveals a treasure that had been long hid in the earth, an unknown mais of gold and filver. Dido, . roufed by this awful meffage, provided friends, and prepared to fly. A felect band affembles, confifting of those who either mortally hated, or violently dreaded the tyrant : What ships by chance lay ready, they feize in hafte, and load with gold. The wealth of the covetous Pygmalion is conveyed over fea. A woman guides the whole exploit. Thither they came, where now you will fee the flately walls and rifing towers of newbuilt Carthage, and bought as much ground as they could inclose with a bull's hide, thence called Byrfa, in commemoration of the action. But (ay now, who are you? Or from what coafts ye came, or whither are you bound? To thefe her demands, the hero, with heavy figns, and flow raifing his words from the bottom of his breaft, thus replies : If I, O goddefs ! tracing from their early fource, shall purfue, and you have leifure to hear the annals of our woes, the evening ftar will thut heaven's gates upon the expiring day before my tale be finished. Driven over a length of feas from ancient Troy (if the name of Troy hath calually

103

reached your ears, a tempeft, by its ufual chance, threw us on this Libyan coaft. I am Æneas the pious, renowned by fame above the fkies, who carry with me in my fleet the gods I fnatched away from the enemy. For Italy my courfe is bent, and my defcendants fprung from love supreme. With twice ten ships I embarked on the Phrygian fea in queft of a fettlement referved for me by heaven's decree, my goddefs mother pointing out the way. Seven, with much ado, are faved. and those too torn and stattered by waves and wind, myfelf, a ftranger, poor and deftitute, wander through the deferts of Africa, banished from Europe and from Afia. Venus, unable to bear his further complaints, thus interrupted him in the midft of his grief : Whoever you be, I truft you live not unbefriended by the powers of heaven, who have arrived at a Tyrian city. Fear nothing, but forthwith bend your course directly to the palace of the queen : For, that your friends have escaped the dangers of the main, your fleet faved, and, by a favourable turn of the north wind, wafted into a fafe harbour, I pronounce to thee with affurance; unlefs my parents, fond of a lying art, have taught me divination to no purpose. See these twelve fwans now triumphing in a body; whom the bird of Jove, fhooting from the etherial region, had chaced through the open air : Now, in a long train, they feem either to choofe their ground, or to hover over the place where they have already chose to reft. As they, now out of danger, fportive clap their ruftling wings, wheel about the heavens in a joyful troop, and raife their melodious notes ; just to your thips and youthful crew, either are already poffeffed of the harbour, or enter the port with full fail. Proceed then, without further concern, and purfue your way where this path directs.

She faid, and turning about, gave a bright difplay of her rofy neck, and from her head the ambrofial locks breathed divine fragrance: Her robe hung waving down to the ground, and by her gait the goddefs flood confeffed. The hero, foon as he knew his mother, with these accents pursued her as the fled: Ab, why to oft doft thou too cruelly mock thy fon with borrowed fhapes? why am I not indulged to join my hand to thine, and to hear and anfwer thee by turns, in words fincere and undiffembled? Thus he expoftulates with her, and directs his courfe to the town. But Venus fkreened them in their way with dark clouds, and the goddefs fpread around them a thick veil of mift, that none might fee, or touch, or give them interruption, or enquire into the reafons of their coming. She herfelf wings her way, fublime to Paphos, and with joy revifits her happy feats; where, facred to her honour, z temple rifes, and a hundred altars fmoke with Sabean incenfe, and with frefh garlands perfume the air.

Mean-while they urged their way where the path directs. And now they ascended the hill, which hangs over a great part of the town, and from above furveys its opposite towers. Here Æneas admires the flately buildings, where cottages once flood : He admires the lofty gates, the hurry and buille of the town, and the magnificence of the fireets. The Tyrians warmly ply the work : Some are extending the walls, and railing a tower, or pushing along unwieldy stones : Some mark out the ground for a private building, and inclose it with a trench : Some choose a place for the courts of juffice, for the magiftrates halls, and the venerable fenate. Here fome are digging ports : There others are laying the foundations of lofty theatres, and hewing huge columns from the rocks, the lofty decorations of future scenes. Such their toil as in summer's prime employs the bees amidst the flowerv fields under the warm fun, when they lead forth their full-grown fwarms; or when they lay up the liquid honey, and diftend the cells with fweet nectar; or when they difburthen those that come home loaded, or, in formed battalions, drive the inactive drones from the hives. The work is hotly plied, and the fragrant honey fmells ftrong of thyme. O happy ye, Æneas fays, whole walls now rife ! and lifts his eyes to the turrets of the Then, throwded in a cloud, an amazing ftory, he city. paffes through the crouds, and mingles with the throng, nor is feen by any. In the centre of the city was a grove, which yielded a most delightful shade, where first the Carthaginians, driven by wind and wave, dug up the head of a fprightly coarfer, an omen which royal Juno shewed. For by this she signified, that the nation was to be renowned for war, brave and victorious through ages. Here Sidionias Dido built to Juno a flately temple, enriched with gifts, and the prefence of the goddels; whole brazen threshold role on steps, the beams were bound with brafs, and brazen gates turn on the creeking hinge. Within this grove the view of an unexpected scene sirft abated their fear: Here Eneas first dared to promise himself redress, and to conceive better hopes of his afflicted state : For, while he furveys every object in the fpacious temple, waiting the queen's arrival; while he is musing with wooder on the happy fortune of the city; while he compares the hands of the artifts, and their elaborate works, he fees the Trojan battles delineated in order, and the war of Troy now blazed by fame over all the world ; he fees the fons of Atreus, Priam, and Achilles, implacable to both. Amazed he flood ! and, with tears in his eyes, fays, what place, Achates, what country on the globe is not full of our difaster? See where Priam flands ! Even here praife-worthy deeds are crowned with due reward : Here tears of compassion flow, and their breafts are touched with human milery. Difmils your fears : This fame of our misfortunes will bring thee some relief. This faid, he feeds his mind with the shadowy representation, heaving many a figh, and bathes his manly vifage in floods of tears. For he beheld how, on the one hand, the warrior Greeks were flying round the walls of Troy, while the Trojan youth closely purfued : On the other hand, the Trojans were flying, while plumed Achilles, in his chariot, thundered on their rear. Not far from thence, weeping, he fpies the tents of Rhefus, diffinguished by their fnow-white veils ; which, betrayed in that first fatal night, cruel Diomed plundered, and drenched in blood, and led away his fiery fleeds to the Grecian camp, before they had tafted the pafture of Troy, or drunk of the river Xanthus. In another part of the temple Troilus, flying after the lofs of his arms, ill-fated youth, and unequally matched with

Beat I.

Achilles ! is dragged by his horfes, and from the chariot hangs supine, yet grasping the reins in death. His neck and hair trail along the ground, and the dufty plain is inferibed by the inverted spear. Mean while the Trojan matrons were maching in folemn procession to the temple of adverse Pallas, with their hair dishevelled, and were bearing the confecrated robe, like fuppliant fad, and beating their bosoms with their hands. The goddefs of wrath kept her eyes fixed on the ground. Thrice had Achilles dragged Hector round the walls of Troy, and was felling his breathlefs corpfe for gold. Then indeed Æneas fetches a deep groan from the bottom of his breaft, when he faw the fpoils, the chariot, and the very body of his friend, and Priam ftretching forth his feeble hands. Himfelf too he knew mingled with the Grecian leaders, and the eastern bands, and the arms of fwarthy Memnon. Furious Penthefilea leads on her troods of Amazons, armed with shields of crefcent form, and burns with martial rage amidft the thickest ranks. Below her naked breast the heroine girt a golden belt, and the virgin warrior dares even heroes to the encounter.

Thefe wonderous fcenes while the Trojan prince furveys, while he is loft in thought, and in one gazing posture dwells unmoved; queen Dido, of furpassing beauty, advanced to the temple, attended by a numerous retinue of youth. As on Eurota's banks, on mount Cynthus's top, Diana leads the circular dances, round whom a numerous train of mountain nymphs play in rings; her quiver hangs graceful from her shoulder ; and moving majeftic, fhe towers above the other goddeffes, while with filent raptures Latona's bosom Such Dido was, and fuch, with cheerful grace, thrills. the paffed amidst her train, urging forward the labour, and her future kingdom. Then, at the gate of the fanctuary, in the middle of the temple's dome, fhe took her feat, furrounded with her guards, and raifed on a throne above the reft. Here she administered justice, and difpenfed laws to her fubjects, and in equal portions distributed their tasks, or dispensed them by lot; when firait Æneas fees, advancing with a vaft concourfe, Antheus, Sergeftus, brave Cloanthus, and other Trojans; whom a black florm had toffed up and down the fea, and driven to other far diftant flores. At once amazement feized the hero; at once Achates was flruck, and, between joy and fear, both ardently longed to join hands; but the flrangeness of the event perplexes their minds. Thus they carry on their disguise, and, shrowded under the bending cloud, watch to learn the fortune of their friends; on what coaft they left the fleet, and on what errand they came: For a select number was deputed from all the flips to fue for grace, and, with mingled voices, made towards the temple.

Having gained admiffion and liberty to fpeak before the queen, llioneus, their chief, with mind composed, thus began : O queen, to whom it is given by Jove to build this riling city, and to curb proud nations with juft laws, we, Trojans forlorn, toffed by winds over every fea, implore thy grace; O! fave our thips from the merciles flames; spare a pious race, and propitiously regard our distresses. We are not come either to ravage with the fword your Libyan gods (fettlements), nor with rapacious hands, to bear away the plunder to our fhips. We have no fuch hoftile intention, nor does fuch pride of heart become the vanquished. There is a place, called by the Greek Hefperia, , an ancient land, renowned for martial deeds and fruitful foil; the Oenotrians poffeffed it once: Now fame reports that their defcendants call the nation Italy from their leader's name ; hither our courfe was bent, when fuddenly tempestuous Orion rising from the main, drove us on hidden shelves, and by violent, outrageous fouth winds, toffed us hither and thither over waves, and over inacceffible rocks, overwhelmed by the briny deep; Hither we few have escaped from shipwreck to your coafts. What a favage race of men is this, what country fo barbarous to allow of fuch manners? We are denied the hospitality even of the barren shore. In arms they rife, and forbid our fetting foot on the first verge of land. If you fet at nought the human kind, and the arms of mortals, yet know the gods will always have an unalterable regard to right and wrong. We had for our king Encas, than whom none mas more just in performing all the duties of piety, none more fignalized in the art of war, and in martial achievements ; whom, if the fates preferve, if ftill he breathe the vital air, and is not yet numbered with the ruthlefs shades, neither we shall despair, nor you repent your having been the first in challenging him to acts of kindnefs and humanity. We have likewife cities and arms in Sicily, and the illustrious king Aceftes is of Trojan extraction. Permit us then to bring to fhore our windbeaten fleet, and from your woods to choole trees for planks, and to refit our oars; that, if it be given us to bend our courfe once more to Italy, upon the recovery of our prince and friends, we may joyfully fet out thither, and make the Latian shore. But if our fafety is perished, and thou, O father of the Trojans, the best of men ! now liest buried in the Libyan fea, and no further hope of Iülus remains, we may at leaft repair to the ftraits of Sicily, and the fettlement there prepared for us, whence we were driven hither, and once more vifit king Aceftes. So fpoke llioneus. At the fame time the other Trojans murmured their confent.

Then Dido, with modeft, downcaft looks, thus in brief replies : Trojans, banish fear from your breafts ; lay your cares afide. My hard fate, and the infancy of my kingdom, force me to take fuch measures, and to fecure my frontiers, by planting guards around. Who is a ftranger to the Eneian race, the city Troy, her heroes, and their valorous deeds, and to the devaftations of fo renowned a war? Carthaginian hearts are not fo obdurate and infenfible; nor yokes the fun his fleeds at fuch a diftance from our Tyrian city. Whether therefore you be defigned for Hefperia the greater, and the country where Saturn reigned, or if you choose to visit Eryx's coast and king Aceftes ; I will difmifs you fafe with proper affistance, and support you with my wealth. Or will you fettle with me in this realm of mine? The city I now build shall be yours; Draw your fhips afhore; Trojan and Tyrian fhall be treated by me as if they were both the fame. And would to heaven the fame wind had driven your prince &neas too upon our coaft, and that he were here pretent ! However, I will find trufty meffengers along the coafts, with orders to fearch Libya's utmost bounds, if he is thrown out to wander in fome wood or city.

ĸ

Book I.

Animated by these friendly words, brave Achates and father Æneas had long impatiently defired to break from the cloud. Achates first addresses : Goddels-born, what purpole now arifes in your mind ? You fee all is fafe ; your fleet and friends reftored. One alone is milling, who funk before our eyes in the midft of the waves : Every thing elfe agrees with your mother's Scarce had he faid, when ftraight the cirprediction. cumambient cloud splits afunder, and diffolves into open air. Encas flood forth, and in bright day fhone confpicuous, in countenance and make refembling a god : For Venus herfelf had adorned her fon with graceful locks, flushed him with the radiant bloom of youth, and breathed a fprightly luftre on his eyes. Such beauty as the artift's hand fuperadds to ivory, or where filver and Parian marble is inchafed in yellow gold.

Then fuddenly addreffing the queen, he, to the furprife of all, thus begins : Behold the man you feek now prefent, Trojan Eneas, fnatched from the Libyan waves. O thou, who alone haft commiferated Troy's unutterable calamities ! who deignest to affociate in thy town and palace, as a remnant faved from the Greeks, who have now been tried to the utmost by woes in every shape, both by sea and land, and are in want of all things ! to repay thee due thanks, great queen, exceeds' the power of both us, and of all the Dardan race, wherever disperfed over the wide world. The gods, if any powers divine regard the pious, if juffice any where fubfifts, and a mind confeious of its own virtue, shall yield thee a just recompence. What age was fo happy as to produce thee? who the parents of fo illustrious an offspring ? While rivers run into the fea, while shadows move round the convex mountains, while heaven feeds the flars ; your honour, name and praife, with me shall ever live, to whatever climes I am called. This faid, he embraces his friend Ilioneus with his right hand, and Serestus with his left : Then the rest in their turns, the heroic Gyas, and heroic Cloanthus.

Sidonian Dido stood aftonisfied first at the presence of the hero, then at his fignal fufferings ; and thus her fpeech addreffed : What hard fate, O goddefs born; purfues thee through fuch mighty dangers? What power drives thee on this barbarous coaft? Are you the great Æneas, whom, by Phrygian Simois's ftream, fair Venus bore to Trojan Anchifes ? And now indeed I call to mind that Teucer, expelled his native country, came to Sidon in queft of a new kingdom, depending on the aid of Belus. My father Belus then reaped the fpoil of wealthy Cyprus, and held it in fubjection to his victorious arms. Ever fince that time I have been acquainted with the fate of Troy, with your name, and the Grecian kings. The enemy himfelf extolled the Trojans with diffinguished praife, and with pleasure traced his descent from the ancient Trojan race. Come then, heroic vouths, enter our walls. Me too, through a feries of labours toffed, like fate with yours, at length have doomed to fettle in this land. Myfelf no ftranger to misfortune, have learned to fuccour the diffreffed.

This faid, the forthwith leads Æneas into her royal apartments, and at the fame time ordains due honours for the temples of the gods. Meanwhile, with no lefs care, the fends prefents to his crew in the thips, twenty bulls, an hundred huge boars with briftly backs, as many fat lambs, with the ewes, and the joys of the God Bacchus. But the inner rooms of flate are fplendidly furnished with regal pomp, and banquets are prepared in the middle of the hall. Here are carpets wrought with art, and of the richeft purple; the tables fhine with maffy filver-plate, and emboffed in gold appear the brave exploits of her forefathers, a lengthened feries of hiftory traced down through fo many heroes, from the first founder of the ancient race. A. neas (for paternal affection fuffered not his mind to K ij reft) with fpeed fends Achates before to the fhips, to bear those tidings to Ascanius, and bring the boy himfelf to the city. All the fond parent's care centres in Ascanius. Befides, he bids him bring prefents for the queen faved from the ruins of Troy, a mantle ftiff with gold and figures, and a veil woven round with faffroncoloured flowers of Brank-urssine, the ornaments of Grecian Helen, which she had brought with her from Mycenæ, when bound for Troy and her lawless marriage; her mother Leda's curious gift. A sceptre too, which once Iliona, Priam's eldeft daughter, bore, a necklace strung with pearl, and a crown fet with double rows of gems and gold. This message to dispatch. Achates directs his course to the ships.

But Venus revolves in her breaft new plots and new defigns, that Cupid should come in place of fweet Afcanius, affuming his mien and features, and by the gifts kindle in the queen all the rage of love, and convey the fubtle flame into her very bones. For fhe dreads the falfe equivocating race, and the doubletongued, perfidious. Tyrians : Fell Juno's rage torments her, and with the night her care returns. To winged love therefore the addreffes thefe words : O fon, my ftrength, my mighty power; my fon, who alone defieft the Typhœan bolts of Jove supreme, to thee I fly, and suppliant implore thy deity. Thou knowest how round all shores thy brother Æneas is toffed from fea to fea by the complicated malice of partial Juno, and in my grief haft often grieved. Him Phoenician Dido entertains, and amuses with smooth speeches; and I fear what may be the iffue of Juno's acts of hospitality : She will not be idle in so critical a conjuncture. Wherefore, I purpose to prevent the queen by fubtle means, and fo befet her with the flames of love, that no power may influence her to change, but that with me fhe may cherifh a great fondnefs for Æneas. How this thou mayft effect, now hear what I advile. The royal boy, my chiefest care, at his father's call, prepares to vifit the Sidonian city Carthage, bearing prefents for Dido faved from the fea and flames of Troy. Him having lulled to reft, I will lay down on Cytherea's tops, of in fome facred retreat above Idalium, left he should discover the plot, or, intervening, marr its fucces. Do you artfully counterfeit his face but for one night, and, yourself a boy, afsume a boy's familiar looks : that when Dido shall take thee to her bofom in the height of her joy amidft the royal feafts, and Bacchus's cheering liquor ; when the thall give thee repeated embraces, and prefs thee with fweet kiffes, thou mayst breathe into her the facred flame, and by ftealth convey the poifon. The God of love obeys the dictates of his dear mother, lays alide his wings, and joyful trips along in Iulus's gait. Meanwhile Venus pours the dews of balmy fleep on Afcanius's limbs, and in her bofom fondling, conveyed him to Idalia's lofty groves, where foft Amaracus, perfuming the air with flowers and fragrant fhade, clafps him round.

Now, in obedience to his inftructions, Cupid went, along, and bore the royal prefents to the Tyrians, pleafed with Achates for his guide. By the time he arrived, the queen had placed herfelf on a golden couch, under a rich canopy, and took her feat in the middle. Now Father Æneas, and now the Trojan youth, grace the affembly, and plant themfelves on the purple beds. attendants fupply the guefts with water for The their hands, dispense the gifts of Ceres from bafkets, and furnish them with the fmooth towels. Within are fifty handmaids, whole talk it was to prepare and marshal the entertainments in due order, and burn incenfe to the household-gods. A hundred more, and as many fervants of equal age, are employed to crownthe boards with diffies, and place the cups. In like manper the Tyrians, a numerous train, affemble in the joyful courts, invited to fill the embroid red beds. They view with wonder the prefents of Æneas, nor with lefs wonder view Iülus, the glowing afpect of the God, his well diffembled words, the mantle, and yeil figured with leaves of the acanthus in faffron colours. Chiefly the unhappy queen, henceforth devoted to love's pestilential fever, gazes with unwearied delight, and is inflamed with every glauce, and is equally cap-K iij tivated with the boy and with his gifts. He on Encas's neck having hung with fond embraces, and having fully gratified his fictitious father's ardent affection, advances to the queen. She fixes her eyes, her whole foul, on the boy, and fometimes fondles him in her lap, not thinking what a powerful god there fits plotting her ruin. Meanwhile he, heedful of his mother's inftructions, begins infenfibly to deface the memory of Sichaeus, and with a living flame tries to prepoffels her languid affections, and her heart by long difuse grown cold to love.

Soon as the first banquet ended, and the tables were withdrawn, they place large goblets, and crown the sparkling wine. The roofs refound with buttling din, and the guests roll through the ample courts the bounding voice. Down from the golden cielings hang the flaming lamps, and blazing torches overpower the darkness of the night. Here the queen called for a bowl, ponderous with gems and gold, and with pure wine filled it to the brim, a bowl which Belus, and all her anceftors from Belus, used ; then, having enjoined filence through the palace, she thus began : O Jove, (for by thee, it is faid, the laws of hospitality were given) grant this may be an aufpicious day both to the Tyrians and my Trojan guefts, and may this day be commemorated by our posterity. Bacchus, the giver of joy, and propitious Juno, be prefent here; and you, my l'yrians, with benevolent hearts folemnize this meeting. She faid, and on the table poured an offering to the gods ; and, after the libation, first gently touched the cup with her lips, then gave it to Bitias with kindly challenge: He quickly drained the foaming bowl, and laved himfelf with the brimming gold ; after him the other lords. Long haired Iopas next tunes his gilded lyre to what the mighty Atlas taught. He fings the wandering moon, and the eclipfes of the labouring fun. Whence the race of men and beafts ; whence showers and fiery meteors arise. He fings Arcturus, the rainy Hyades, and the two northern cars; why winter funs make fo much hafte to fet in the ocean, or what retarding caufe detains the flow fummer nights.

Digitized by Google

114

The Tyrians redouble their applauses in praise of the fong, and the Trojans concur.

Meanwhile, unhappy Dido with various talk fpun out the night, and drunk large draughts of love, queftioning much about Priam, much about Hector. Now in what arms Aurora's fon had come; now what were the excellencies of Diomed's fleeds; now what figure Achilles made. Nay, come my gueft, fhe fays, and, from the first original relate to us the flratagems of the Greeks, the adventures of your friends, and your own wanderings; for now the feventh fummer brings thee to our coafts, through wandering mazes toffed on every land, and every fea.

BOOK SECOND.

ALL with one accord were filent, and fixed their eyes upon him, eagerly attentive: then father Æneas thus from his lofty couch began:

Unutterable woes, O queen, you urge me to renew; how the Greeks overturned the power and magnificence of Troy, and its deplorable realms; both what scenes of milery I myself beheld, and those wherein I was a principal party. What cruel Myrmidon, or Dolopian, or who of hardened Ulyffes's band, can, in the very relation of fuch woes, refrain from tears! befides, humid night is haftening down the fky, and the fetting fars invite to fleep. But fince you are fo fond to know our misfortunes, and briefly to hear the catastrophe of Troy, though my foul shudders at the remembrance, and bath thrunk back with grief, yet will I begin. The Grecian leaders, now extremely weakened by the war, and baffled by the fates, after a revolution of fo many years, being affisted by the divine skill of Pallas, build a wooden horfe to the fize of a mountain, and line its.

ribs with planks of fir. This they pretend an offering. in order to procure a fafe. return. Which report is industrionsly spread. Hither having secretly conveyed a felect band, chosen out by lot, they shut them up into the dark fides, and cram its capacious caverns and womb with armed foldiers. In fight of Troy lies Tenedos, an island well known by fame, and flourishing while Priam's kingdom flood; now it ferves only for a bay, and a station where ships are hardly safe to ride : Having made this island, they conceal themselves in that defolate fhore. We imagined they were gone, and that they had fet fail for Mycenz. In confequence of which, all Troy is releafed from its long-continued diftrefs; the gates are thrown open; with joy we iffue forth; with joy we view the Grecian camp, the now deferted plains, and the abandoned shore. Here lay encamped the Dolopian bands; there ftern Achilles had pitched his tent : Here were the fhips drawn up ; there the armies were wont to fight. Some view with amazement that baleful offering of the virgin goddefs-Minerva, and wonder at the flupendous bulk of the horfe ; and the venerable Thymætes first advises it may be dragged within the walls, and lodged in the tower, whether it was with treacherous delign, or that the deftiny of Troy now would have it fo. But Capys, and all whole fentiments are the refult of founder judgment, ftrenuoufly urge either to throw into the fea this. infidious engine of the Greeks, and their fufpected oblation; or, by applying flames, confume it to afhes; or, at least, to lay open, and ranfack the receives of the hollow womb, Meanwhile, the fickle populace is fplit into opposite inclinations. Upon this Laocoon, accompanied with a numerous gang, ringleader to the reft, with ardour haltens down from the top of the citadel ;. and while yet a great way off, cries out, O wretched countrymen, what desperate infatuation this? Do you believe the enemy gone ? Or think you any gifts of the Greeks can be free from deceit ? Is it thus you are acquainted with Ulyffes ? Either the Greeks lie concealed within this wood, or it is an engine framed against our walls : to overlook our houses, and to come down upon our city; or fome mischievous defign lurks under it. Trojans, put no faith in this horfe. However it be, I dread the Greeks, even with all the gifts they bring. Thus faid, with vigorous efforts he hurled his maffy spear against the fides and belly of the monster, where it fwelled out by the compacted boards into an arch; the weapon flood quivering, and, by the flock given to its fides, the hollow caverns rung, and fent forth a groan. And, had the decrees of heaven, permitted, or our minds not been infatuated, he had prevailed on us to lay open with the fword this dark receis of the Greeks : And thou, Troy, should still have stood, and thou, lofty tower of Priam, now remained ! In the mean time, behold Trojan shepherds, with loud acclamations, came dragging to the king a youth, whole hands were bound behind his back ; who, to them a mere ftranger, had voluntarily thrown himfelf in their way, to promote this fame treacherous defign, and open Troy to the Greeks; a refolute foul, and prepared for either event, whether to execute his perfidious purpofe, or fubmit to inevitable death. The Trojan youth in circling crowds pour in from every quarter, from eagernefs to fee him; and they vie with one another in infulting the captive, now mark the treachery of the Greeks, and from one crime take a fpecimen of the whole nation.

Book II.

For as he flood among the gazing crowds perplexed, defencelefs, and threw his eyes round the Trojan bands, Ah! fays he, what land, what feas can now receive me ? Or to what further extremity can I, a forlorn wretch, be reduced? For whom there is neither fhelter any where among the Greeks; and to complete my mifery, the Trojans too, incenfed againft me, fue for fatisfaction with my blood. By which mournful accents, our affections at once were moved towards him, and all the keennefs of our refentment fuppreffed: We exhort him to fay from what race he is fpruug, to declare what meffage he brings, what confidence we may repofe in him now that he is our prifoner. Then he, having at length laid afide fear, thus proceeds : I, indeed, O king, will confefs to you the whole truth, fays he, be the event what will : nor will I difown that I am of Grecian extraction; this I premise; nor shall it be inthe power of cruel fortune, though the has made Sinonmiferable, to make him also falle and difengenuous. If accidentally, in the courfe of common report, the nameof Palamedes, the descendant of Belus, and his illustrious renown, ever reached your ears; who, though innocent, was delivered over to death by the Greeks, under a falle acculation of treason, upon 'a villanous evidence, because he gave his negative against the war ;. now they mourn him bereaved of life: With him my father, who was but poor, fent me in company to the war, fo foon as I was able to bear arms, as I was his While he remained fafe in the kingdom, near relation. and the community of the Grecian princes was ftrengthened by his counfel. I too bore fome reputation and. honour : But, from the time that he, by the malice of the crafty Ulyffes (they are well known truths I fpeak) quitted the ftage of this world, I forely diffreffed, lengthened out my life in grief and obscurity, secretly repining at the bard fate of my innocent friend. Norcould I hold my peace, fool that I was, but vowed revenge, if fortune should give me the opportunity, if ever I returned victorious to my native Argos, and by my unguarded words provoked bin bitter enmity. Hence arole the first fymptom of my milery; henceforth Ulyffes was always terrifying me with new accufations; henceforth he began to fpread ambiguous, dark furmifes among the vulgar, and, confcious of his own guilt, fought the means of my ruin. Nor did he give over, till, by making Calchas his tool-But why do I thus in vain unfold these disagreeable truths ! Or why do I lofe time? If you place all the Greeks on the fame foot, and your having heard that one circumstance be enough to undo me, delay not a moment; ftrike the fatal blow : This the prince of Ithaca wants, and the two fons of Atreus would give large fums to purchafe. Then, indeed, we grow impatiently inquifitive, and long to find out the fecret caufes, unacquainted with fuch confummate villany and Grecian artifice. He proceeds with palpitation, and fpeaks in the falfehood

Beek 11.

of his heart. After quitting the fiege of Troy, the Greeks fought often to furmount the difficulties of their return ; and, tired out with the length of the war, longed to be gone. And would to heaven they had ! But as often did the rough tempeft on the ocean bar their flight, and the adverse fouth wind deterred them in their fetting out. Especially when now this horse, framed of maple planks, was reared, ftorms roared through all the regions of the air. In deep perplexity we fend Eurypylus to confult the oracle of Apollo; and from the facred fhrine he brings back this difmal refponfe ; Ye appealed the winds, ye Greeks, with the blood of a virgin flain, when first you arrived on the Trojan coast ; by blood must your return be purchased, and atonement made by the life of a Greek; which intimation no foouer reached the ears of the multitude, than their minds were fluaned, and freezing horfor thrilled through their very bones ; anxious to know whom heaven destined for the facrifice which Apollo demanded. Upon this, Ulyffes drags forth Calchas, the feer, with great buftle and ftir, into the midft of the crowd; importunes him to fay what those orders of the gods are : And, by this time, many prefaged to me the cruel purpole of the diffembler, and quietly forefaw the event. He for twice five days is mute, and close that up, obfinately refuses to give forth his declaration against any perfon, or doom him to death. At length, with much ado, teazed by the importunate clamours of Ulyffes, he breaks filence by concert, and deftines me to the altar. All affented, and were content to have the blow, which they dreaded each for himfelf, turned off from them, to the ruin of one poor wretch. And now the rueful day approached; for me the facred rites were prepared, and the falted cake and fillets to bind about my temples. From death, I own, I made my escape, and broke my bonds; and, in a flimy fen all night I lurked obfcure among the weeds, till they should fet fail, if I should be fo happy to fee that hour. Nor have I now any hope of being bleffed with the fight of my country, the ancient feat of my ancestors, nor of my pleafant children, and my much beloved fire; whom they, perhaps, will

Digitized by Google

119

fue to vengeance for my escape, and explate this offence of mine by the death of those unhappy innocents. But, by the powers above, by the gods who are conscious to truth, by whatever remains of inviolable faith are anywhere to be found among mortals, I obtest you compasfionate fuch grievous afflictions, compassionate a foul fuffering fuch unworthy treatment.

At these tears we gave him his life, and pity him from our hearts. Priam himself first gives orders that his manicles and ftrait bonds be loofed ; then thus addreffes him in the language of a friend : Whoever you are, now henceforth forget the Greeks you have loft ; ours you shall be. And now give me an ingenuous reply to these questions: To what purpose raifed they this flupendous bulk of a horfe? Who was the contriver? Or what do they intend by it? What was the religious motive ? Or what warlike engine is it ? He faid. The other, practifed in fraud and Grecian artifice, lifted up to heaven his hands now loofed from the bonds : To you, yeeverlatting orbs of fire, hefays, and your inviolable divinity: To you, ye altars, and horridinftruments of death, which I escaped; and ye fillets of the gods, which I a victim wore: to you I appeal, that I am free to violate all the facred obligations I was under to the Greeks; I am free to hold themfelves in abhorrence, and to bring forth to light all their dark defigne : Nor am I bound by any of the laws of my country; only do thou, O Troy, abide by thy promifes, and, by my means preferved, preferve thy faith now given ; provided I difclose the truth ; provided I make thee large amends.

The whole hope of the Greeks, and their confidence in the profecution of the begun war, always depended on the aid of Pallas : But from what time the facrilegious Diomed, and Ulyffes the projector of wicked defigns, in their attempt to carry off by force from her holy temple the fatal Palladium, having flain the guards of her high tower, feized upon her facred image, and with bloody hands durft prophanely touch the virgin fillets of the goddefs : From that day the hope of the Greeks began to ebb, and gradually decline ; their powers were weakened, the mind of the goddefs alienated from Book II.

them : Nor did Tritonia shew these indications of he" wrath by dubious prodigies : For fcarce was the flatue fet up in the camp, when bright flames flashed from her stating eye balls, and a briny fweat flowed over her limbs; and, what you will be amazed to hear, fhe herfelf fprung thrice from the ground, armed as she was, with her shield and quivering spear. Forthwith Calchas declares it to be the will of heaven, that we attempt the feas in our way homeward, and that Troy can never be raifed by the Grecian fword, unless they repeat the omens at Argos, and carry back the goddefs, whom they had conveyed over fea in their winding ships. And now, that they have failed for their native Mycenæ with the wind, they are providing themfelves in arms, and the gods to accompany their enterprize; and, having measured back the fea, they will be upon you in an unexpected hour : So Calchas interprets the omen. This figure, warned by heaven, they reared in lieu of the Palladium, in lieu of the symbol of the offended goddefs, in order to atone for their direful crime, But Calchas ordered to build the wooden engine of this enormous bulk, and raife it to the files, that it might not be admitted into the gates, or dragged into the city, nor protect the people under the patronage of their ancient religion. For he declared, that if your hands should offer violence to this offering facred to Minerva, then fignal ruin (which omen may the gods rather turn on himfelf!) awaited Priam's empire and the Trojans. But, if by your means it mounted into the city, that Afia, without farther provocation given, would advance with a formidable war to the very gates of Pelops's city Argos, and our posterity be doomed to the fame fate. By fuch treachery and artifice of perjured Sinon, the ftory is believed, and we, whom neither Diomed, nor Lariffæan Achilles, nor a ten year's fiege, nor a thoufand ships subdued, are infnared by guile and constrained tears. Here another more affecting fcene, and far more terrible, is prefented to our wretched fight, and fills our breafts with furprife and confusion. Laocoon, ordained Neptune's prieft by lot, was facrificing a fately bullock at the altars fet apart for that folemnity, when lo! from Tenedos (I shudder even at the relation) two ferpents, with orbs immense, ftretch their length along the fmooth furface of the fea, and with equal motion shoot forward to the shore ; whose breasts erect amidft the waves, and chefts bedropped with blood. tower above the flood ; their other parts fweep the fea behind, and wind their fpacious backs in rolling fpires. Lashed by their strokes, the floods refound, the briny ocean foaming; and now they were got to land, and darting fire from their glaring blood-red eyes, with forky tongues licked their hiffing mouths. Half dead with the borrid fight, we fly different ways. They, with refolute motion, advance towards Laocoon ; and first either ferpent, with close embraces, twines around the little bodies of his two fons, and with cruel fangs mangles their wretched limbs. Next they feize upon himfelf, as he is coming up with weapons to their relief, and bind him fast in their prodigious folds ; and now, grafping him twice about the waift, twice winding their fcaly backs around his neck, they overtop him by the head and lofty neck. He ftrains at once with both hands to tear afunder their knoted fpires, while his boly fillets are diffained with gore and black poifon : At the fame time he raifes hideous shrieks to heaven; fuch bellowings, as when a bull has fled wounded from the altar, and has eluded with his neck the erring ax. Meanwhile, the two ferpents glide off to the high temple, repair to the fane of ftern Tritonis, and are sheltered under the feet of the goddefs, and the orb of her buckler. Then, indeed, uncommon terror diffuses itself through the quaking hearts of all; and they pronounce Laocoon to have defervedly fuffered for his crime, in having violated the facred wood with his pointed weapon, and lanced his curfed spear against its fides. They urge with general voice to convey the statue to its proper feat, and implore the favour of the goddefs. We make a breach in the walls, and lay open the bulwarks of the city. All keenly ply the work ; fome under the feet apply fmooth-rolling wheels ; others fasten hempen ropes to the neck. The fatal machine mounts our, walls, pregnant with arms : Boys and unmarried vir-gins accompany it with facred hymns, and are fain to touch the rope with their hand. It advances, and with menacing afpect flides into the heart of the city. O my country ! ah Ilium, the habitation of Gods, and ve walls of Troy by war renowned ! four times it ftopped in the very threshold of the gate, and the arms resounded in its womb : Yet we, heedless of our own ruin, and blind with frantic zeal, urge on, and plant the baneful monfter in the facred tower. Then too, Caffandra, by the infpiration of her god, opens her lips to foretel our approaching doom ; ill fated virgin, never believed by the Trojans. Unhappy we, to whom that day was to be our last, adorn the temples of the gods all over the city with feftival boughs and garlands. Meanwhile the heavens are rolled about, and night advances apace from the ocean, wrapping up in her extended shade both earth and heaven, and the wiles of the Greeks : The Trojans, difperfed around their walls, were hushed and still : Deep sleep fast binds their weary limbs in his embraces. And now the Grecian troops, in their equipped veffels, fet out from Tenedos, making towards the well-known shore, aided by the friendly filence of the quiet moon-fhine night, fo foon as the royal galley from her fternhad fet up the fignal fire. And Sinon, preferved by the will of the gods adverse to Troy, in a stolen hour unlocked the wooden prifon to the Greeks shut up in that dark womb : The horse, from his expanded caverns, pours them forth to open air ; and . with joy iffue from the hollow wood Theffandrus and Sthenelus the chiefs, and curfed Ulyffes, fliding down by a fufpended rope, with Athamas, and Thoas, Neoptolemus the grand on of Peleus, and Machaon who led the way with Menelaus, and Epeus, he who built the fraudful engine. They affault the city buried in fleep and wine. The watches are knocked down ; and they throw open the gates to receive all their friends, and join the confcious bands. It was the time when the first fleep invades languid mortals, and steals upon them by the indulgence of heaven in fweeteft flumbers. that drowfy hour, lo ! Hector, extremely fad, feemed. to ftand before my eyes, and to fhed floods of tears ; Lij dragged, as formerly he had been, by Achilles's chariot, and all deformed with gory duft, and his fwollen feet bored through with thongs. Ah me, in what piteous plight he was ! how changed from that Hector who returned clad in the armour of Achilles, or darting Phrygian flames against the fhips of Greece ! wearing a foul grifly beard, hair clotted with blood, and those many wounds which he had received under his native walls. I, methought, in tears addreffed the hero first, . and poured forth these mournful accents : Thou, light of Troy, the Trojans firmest hope! ah fay what tedious caufes have detained you fo long ? Whence comes my longed, my looked for Hector? How it eafes my perplexity to fee thee after the many deaths of thy friends, after the various difafters of our men and city ! What unworthy caufe has deformed and marred the ferenity of thy looks? Or why do I behold those wounds ? He-not a word, nor regards me questioning of what nought availed ; but heavily, from the bottom of his heart, fetching a groan, ah, fly goddess-born, he fays, and fnatch thee from these flames : The enemy is in pofferfion of the walls : Troy tumbles down from its towering tops : To Priam, to my country all duty has been done. Could those walls have been faved by the hand of man, by this fame right hand they had been faved. Troy recommends to thee her facred things, her gods': these take, the companions of thy fate : For these go in queft of a city, which in process of time you shall raife to a great extent after a tedious wandering voyage. He faid ; and with his own hands brings forth from the inner temple the holy fillets, the image of the powerful goddefs Vefta, and the fire which always burned.

L

Meanwhile the city is filled with mingled fcenes of woe; and though my father's house ftood in a retired corner, remote from noise, and inclosed around with trees; yet louder and louder the founds rife on the ear, and the horrid din of arms affails us. I flart from fleep, and by hafty fteps mount to the higheft battlement of the palace, and ftand with liftening ears. As when a flame is driven by the furious fouth-winds on flanding corn, or as a torrent impetuoufly burfling from a mountain-river defolates the fields, defolates the rich crops of corn, and all the labours of the ox, and bears whole woods headlong down; the shepherd, struck with the found from the top of a high rock, stands amazed, not knowing whence it arifes. Then indeed the truth of Heftor's words is confirmed, and the treachery of the Greeks disclosed. Now Deiphobus's spacious roofs tumble down, overpowered by the conflagration: Now, next to him, Ucalegon blazes ; the straits of Sigzum shine far and wide with the flames. The mingled flouts of men, and clangor of trumpets, arife. My arms I fnatch with mad hafte; nor when in arms have reason enough to use them : But all my foul impatient burns to collect a body for the war, and rush into the citadel with a chofen band : Fury and rage hurry on my mind, and I reflect how glorious it is to die in the bed of honour. Lo! then Pantheus, efcaped from the fword of the Greeks, Pantheus the fon of Otreus, the priest of Apollo and of Minerva's tower, is hurrying away with himthe holy utenfils, his conquered gods, and little grandchild, and with hafty ftrides makes for the fhore like one diftracted. How is it, Pantheus, with our all? What fortrefs do we feize? I fcarce had faid, when, with a groan, he thus replies: Our last day is come, and the inevitable doom of Troy : Trojans we are nomore : Adieu to Ilium, and the high renown of Teucer's race : Jupiter in the fiercenels of his wrath hath made over all to Argos; The Greeks bear all before them in the city now on fire: The towering horfe,. planted in the midit of our ftreets, pours forth armed troops ; and Sinon the victorious traitor, with infolent triumph scatters the flames. Others are rushing in at our wide-opened gates, fo many thoufands as never came from populous Mycenæ. Others with arms have blocked up the lanes to oppose our passage ; the edged fword with glittering point flands unfheathed, ready to drink our blood: Hardly the foremost wardens of the gates make an effort to fight, and feehly relift in the blind encounter. By these words of Pantheus, and by the impulse of the gods I hurry away into the midft of flames and arms; whither the grim fury, whither the tumultuous din, and fhricks that rend the fkies, urge me on, Ripheus, Lill

125

and Iphitus advanced in years, join me ; Hypanis and Dymas come up with us by the help of the moon, and closely adhere to my fide ; and young Corœbus, Mygdon's fon; who at that time had chanced to come to Troy, inflamed with a paffion for Caffandra to madnefs; and, in prospect of being one day Priam's fon-in-law, brought affistance to him and the Trojans. Ill-fated youth, who heeded not the admonitions of his infpired spoule! whom, close united, foon as I faw refolute to engage, to animate them the more I thus begin: " Gallant youths, fouls, heroic and magnanimous, but ah in vain ! if it is your refolute purpose to follow me in this last desperate attempt, what is the fituation of our affairs you fee ? All the gods, by whom this empire flood, have deserted their shrines and altars abandoned to the enemy : You come to the relief of the city in flames : Let us meet death, and rush into the thickelt of our armed foes. The only fafety for the vanquifhed is to throw away all hopes of fafety," Thus the courage of the youths is kindled into fury : Then. like ravenous wolves in a gloomy fog, whom the fell rage of hunger hath driven from their dens, blind todanger, and their whelps left behind long for their return with jaws parched and thirfting for blood ; through arms, through enemies we march up to imminent death, and advance through the middle of the city: fable night hovers around us with her deepening shade. Who can describe the havock, who the deaths of that night ? Or who can furnish tears equal to the difasters ? Our ancient city, the feat of dominion for many years, tumbles to the ground : Great numbers of fluggish. carcafes are ftrowed up and down, both in the ffreets, · in private houses, and the facred temples of the Gods. Nor is it the blood of the Trojans alone that is fpilt : The vanquished too at times refume their courage; and the victorous Grecians bleed. Every where appears cruel forrow ; every where terror, and death in a thoufand shapes. The first of the Greeks who comes up with us is Androgeos, accompanied by a numerous band, unadvifedly imagining that we were confederate troops ; and he introduces himfelf to us with this friendly ad-

drefs : Hafte, brave affociates, what fo tardy floth de-, tains you? Others tear and plunder the blazing palaces of Troy. Are you but just come from your lofty fhips ? He faid, and inftantly perceived (for we returned him no very friendly answer) that he had flumbled into the midft of foes. He was nonpluffed, and with his words recalled his bally flep. As one who, in his heedless walk, hath trod upon a snake, shooting unawares from rough thorns, and in fearful hafte hath farted back from him, while he is collecting all his rage, and fwelling his azure creft; juft fo Androgeos, terrified at the fight of us, began to withdraw. We rufh in, and with arms to arms close joined, inclose them round; and knocked them down here and there, ftrangers as they were to the place, and arrefted with fear. Thus fortune fmiles upon our first enterprize. Upon this Corœbus exulting with fuccefs and courage : My affociates, fays he, where fortune thus early points out our way to conquest and fafety, and where the thews herfelf propitious, let us follow her. Let us exchange fhields, and accommodate to ourfelves the badges of the Greeks. Whether stratagem or valour, who questions in an enemy? They themfelves will fupply us with arms. This faid, he puts on the crefted helmet of Androgeos, and the rich ornament of his fhield, and buckles to his fide a Grecian fword. The fame does Ripheus, the fame does Dymas too, and all the youths well pleafed. Each arms himfelf with the recent fpoils. We march on, mingling with the Greeks, but not with heaven on our fide ; and in many a skirmish we engage during the dark night ; many of the Greeks we fend down to Pluto's kingdom. Some fly to the ships, and make what haste they can to the trusty Some, through difhoneft fear, scale once more fhore. the bulky horfe, and lurk within his well-known womb. But alas ! on nothing ought man to prefume, while the gods are against him. Lo! Caffandra, Priam's virgin daughter, with her hair all dishevelled, was dragged along from the temple and thrine of Minerva, raifing to heaven her glaring eyes in vain. I fay her eyes; for cords bound her tender hands. Coræbus, in the transports of his foul, could not bear this spectacle, and, resolute on death, flung himself into the midft of the band. We all follow, and rush upon them in a breaft. Upon this we are first overpowered with the darts of our friends from the high battlements of the temple, and a most pitcous flaughter ensues, occasioned by the appearance of our arms, and the fatal difguise of our Grecian crefts,

Next the Greeks, through anguish and rage for the refcue of the virgin, fall upon us in troops from every quarter; Ajax most fierce, both the fons of Atreus, and the whole bands of the Dolopes. As, at times, in a burfting hurricane, opposite winds encounter the weft and fouth, and Eurus, proud of his eastern fteeds ; the woods roar, foamy Nereus rages with his trident, and toffes up the feas from the lowest bottom. They too, whom, through the shades, in the dusky night, we, by ftratagem, had routed and profecuted all over the city, now make their appearance; they are the first who discover our shields and counterfeit arms, and mark the found of our voices to difagree with our armour. In a moment we are overpowered by numbers ; and first Corcebus finks in death by the hand of Peneleus, at the altar of the warrior goddefs : Ripheus too falls, the most eminently virtuous among the Trojans, and a man of the firictest integrity. But, though we may think he deferved a better fate, to the Gods it feemed otherwile. Hypanis and Dymas die by the cruel darts of their own friends : Nor did thy fignal piety, nor the holy fillet of thy god Apollo, fave thee, unhappy Pantheus, in thy dying hour? Ye facred re-mains of Troy, ye expiring flames of my country! witnefs, that in your fall I shunned not darts nor any deadly weapon of the Greeks; and, had it been fated that I should fall, I deferved it by this hand. Thence we are forced away, Iphitus, Pelias, and I; of whom Iphitus was now unwieldy through age, and Pelias, difabled by a wound from Ulyffes, forthwith to Priam's palace called by difmal outcries. Here indeed, a dreadful fight rifes to our view, as though this had been the only feat of the war, as though none had been dying inall the city befides; with fuch ungoverned fury we fee Mars raging, the Greeks rufhing forward to the palace, and the gates belieged by the troops, advancing under the shelter of their tortoifed bucklers. Scaling ladders are fixed on the walls, and by their fteps they mount at the very door-posts, and protecting themfelves by their left-arms, oppose their bucklers to the darts, while with their right hands they grafp the battlements. On the other hand the Trojans tear down the turrets and roofs of their houses; with these weapons, fince they see the extremity, they feek to defend themfelves now in their final cataftrophe, and tumble on their focs the gilded _ rafters, those stately ornaments of their ancestors : Others with drawn fwords befet the gates below ; thefe they guard in a firm, compact body. We refume all our ardour to relieve the royal palace, fupport our labouring friends, and infpire their drooping hearts with new life and vigour. There was a paffage and fecret entry that ferved for free communication between the two palaces of Priam, a neglected pollern-gate, by which unfortunate Andromache, while the kingdom flood, was often wont to refort to the royal pair without guard and retinue, and to lead the boy Aftyanax to his grandfire. By this I mount up to the roof of the highest battlement, whence the distressed Trojans were hurling unavailing darts. With our fwords affailing all around a turret, fituated on a precipice, and fhooting up its towering top to the stars (whence we were wont to furvey all Troy, the fleet of Greece and the Grecian camp), where the topmost story made the joints more apt to give way, we tear from its fleep foundation, and push on our foes. The huge pile, on a sudden tumbling down, brings thundering defolation with it, and falls with wide havock on the Grecian troops. But others foon fucceed. Meanwhile, neither ftones, nor any fort of miffive weapons, ceafe to fly. Just before the vestible, and at the outer gate, Pyrrhus exults, glittering in arms and gleamy brafs : As when a fnake comes forth to light, having fed on noxious herbs, whom, bloated with poifon, the frozen winter hid under the earth, now renewed, and fleek with youth, after cafting his skin, with breast erect he rolls up his flippery back, reared to the fun, and brandifhes a three-forked tongue in his mouth. At the fame time bulky Periphas, and Automedon, formerly charioteer to Achilles, now Pyrrhus's armour-bearer ; at the fame time all the youth whom Pyrrhus brought from Sevros-illand advance to the wall, and tofs flaming brands to the roof. Pyrrhus himfelf, in the front, fnatching up a battle-ax, beats through the flubborn gates, labours to tear the brazen pofts from the hinges : And now, having hewn away the bars, he dug through the firm boards, and made a large, widemouthed breach; through which the palace within is exposed to view, and the long galleries are discovered : The facred receffes of Priam and the ancient kings are prophanely exposed to view; and they fee the armed guards standing at the gate.

As for the inner palace, it is filled with mingled groans and deleful uproar, and the hollow rooms all throughout howl with female yellings: Their fhrieks flrike the golden ftars. Then the trembling matrons roam through the fpacious halls, and in fast embraces hug the door-pofts, and cling to them with their lips, Pyrrhus preffes on with all his father's violence : Nor bars, nor bolts, nor armed guards themfelves, are able to fultain his fury. The gate, by repeated, battering blows, gives way, and the door-polls, torn from their hinges, tumble to the ground. Thus the Greeks make their way by force, burft a paffage, and, being admitted, butcher the first they meet, and fill the places all about with their troops. Not with fuch a fury a river pours on the fields its heavy torrent, and fweeps away whole herds with their stalls over all the plains, when foaming it has burft away from its broken banks, and borne down oppoling mounds, with its whirling cur-Thefe eyes' beheld Neoptolemus transported rent. with bloody rage, and the two fons of Atreus in the gate : I faw Hecuba, and her hundred daughters-inlaw, and Priam at the altar, defiling with his blood the fires which himfelf had confecrated. Those fifty

130

÷

Digitized by Google

1

bed-chambers, whereon his great hopes of a numerous race were railed, those doors, that proudly shone with Barbaric gold, and fpoils of conquered nations, were levelled with the ground: Where the flames relent, the Greeks take place. Perhaps, too, you are curious to hear what was Priam's particular fate. So foon as he beheld the cataftrophe of the taken city, and his palace-gates broke down, and the enemy planted in the middle of his private apartments; the aged monarch. with unavailing aim, buckles on his fhoulders, trembling, with years, arms long difused, girds himself with his useless fword, and rushes into the thickest of the foes, refolute on death. In the centre of the court, and under the naked canopy of heaven, flood a large altar, and an aged laurel by, overhanging the altar, and encircling the houfhold-gods with its fhade. Here Hecuba, and her daughters (like pigeons flying precipitantly from a blackening tempeft), crowded together, and embracing the shrines of the Gods, fat round the altars, hoping for protection in vain. But, foon as she faw Priam clad in youthful arms, My most unhappy lord, fhe cries, what dire purpole hath prompted thee to brace on these arms? Or whither are you driving ? The prefent conjuncture hath no need of fuch feeble aid, nor hands like thefe in our defence : Though even my Hector himfelf were here, it would not avail. Hither repair, now that all hope is loft ; this altar will protect us all'; or here you and we shall die together. Having thus faid, the took her aged lord to her em, braces, and placed him on the facred feat. But lo'! Polites, one of Priam's fons, escapes from the fword of Pyrrhus, through darts, through foes, fhoots acrofs the long galleries, and, bleeding in his wounds, traverses the waste halls. Pyrrhus, all on fire, pursues him with the hoftile weapon, is just grasping him with this hand, and preffes on him with the fpear. Soon as he at length got into the fight and prefence of his parents, he dropped down, and poured ont his life with a ftream of blood. Upon this, Priam, though environed with death on every fide, yet did not forbear, nor had command of his tongue and paffion : But, may the

Gods, he cries, if there be any justice in heaven to regard fuch events, give thee ample retribution and due reward for this thy wickedness, for these thy audacious crimes, who haft made me witnefs to the death of my own fon, and defiled a father's eyes with beholding filial blood : Yet he, from whom you falfely claim your birth, even Achilles, was not thus barbarous to Priam, for all he was his enemy, but paid fome regard to the laws of nations and a fuppliant's right, reftored my Hector's lifeles corpse to be buried, and fent me back into my kingdom. Thus fpoke the aged monarch, and without any force threw a feeble dart. which was inftantly repelled by the hoarfe refounding brafs, and hung on the highest boss of the buckler without any execution. To whom Pyrrhus replies : These tidings then yourself shall bear, and go with the meffage to my father: Forget not to inform him of my cruel deeds, and of his degenerate fon Neoptolemus : Now die. With these words he dragged him up to the very altar, all trembling, and fl ling in a plash of his fon's blood, and with his left hand grafped his twifted hair, and with his right unfheathed his glittering fword, and plunged it into his fide up to the hilt. Such is the end of Priam's fate : This is the final doom allotted to him, having before his eyes Troy confumed, and its towers laid in ruins; once the proud monarch of Afia, who reigned over fo many nations and countries : Now he lies a trunk at large extended on the shore, a head torn from the shoulders, and a namelefs corpfe. Then, and not till then, fierce horror affailed me round : I flood aghaft ; the image of my dear father arole to my mind, when I faw the king, of equal age, breathing out his foul by a cruel wound: To my mind arole forlorn Creula, my rifled houle, and the fate of tender lülus. I look about, and furvey what troops were to fland by me. All had left me through defpair, and either flung their fainting bodies to the ground, or gave them to the flames. And thus now 1 remained all alone, when I fpy Helen keeping watch in the temple of Vefta, und filently lurking in a fecret corner : The bright flames give me light as

Book IE. I am roving on, and throwing my eyes around on every object. She, the common fury of Troy and her country, dreading the l'rojans, her deadly foes upon account of their ruined country, and the vengeance due to her from the Greeks, together with the fierce resentment of her deserted lord, had hid herself, and was fitting by the altars, an odious fight. Flames were kindled in my foul : I burned with rage to avenge my falling country, and take fatisfaction on her guilty head. Shall she then with impunity again behold Sparta and her country Mycenae, and go off in the pride of a queen, after the has gained her triumph ? Shall the again fee her marriage bed, her home, her fathers, her fons, accompanied with a retinue of Trojan dames, and Phrygian women, her flaves ? Shall Priam bleed ? Shall Troy be confumed ? Shall the 'rojan fhore fo often be drenched in blood, and yet she go unpunished? It must not be; for though there be no merit in pu-Rifhing a woman, nor any honour in fuch a victory, vet shall I be applauded for having extinguished a wicked incendiary, and for inflicting on her the punishment she deserves; besides, it will be a pleasure to gratify my defire of burning revenge, and to give fatisfaction to the manes of my friends. Thus was I expostulating, and furiously agitated in my foul, when my kind parent prefented himfelf to my view with fuch brightnefs as I had never ieen before, and amidit

the darkness of the night, shone forth in pure radiant light, displaying all the goddefs, with fuch dignity, fuch grandeur and majefly, as the thews to the immortals; she restrained me fast held by the right hand; and belides let' fall thefe words from her rofy lips: My fon, what high provocation kindles your ungoverned rage ? Why /o transported? Or whether are all thy regards to me now fled ? Will you not firft fee in what fituation you have left your father Anchifes, encumbered with age? Whether your spoufe Creufa be fill in life, and the boy Afcanius, around whom the Grecian troops from every quarter reel? And, had not my guardian-power opposed, the flames had already carried off, or the cruel fword drunk their blood, Not

м

133

Lacedæmonian Helen, thus odious in your eyes, nor Paris fo often blamed; but the gods, the unrelenting gods, overthrow this powerful realm, and level the towering tops of Troy with the ground. Turn your eyes; for L will diffipate every cloud which now intercepting the view, bedims your mortal fight, and fpreads a humid veil of mist around you. Fear not you the commands of a parent, nor refuse to obey her orders. Here. where you fee those heaps of ruins, and piles from piles of building torn, and imoke in waves alcending with mingled duft. Neptune shakes the walls, and foundations loofened by.his mighty trident, and overturns the whole city from its frm basis. Here again Juno, extremely fierce, is posled in the front to guard the Sczan gate, and, clad in martial array, with furious fummons calls from the ships her focial band. See where Tritonian Pallas hath now planted herfelf on that lofty turret, refulgent with her radiant cloud, and with her gorgon terrible. Father Jove himfelf supplies them with courage and ftrength for victory : Himfelf ftirs up the Gods against the arms of Troy. Speed thy flight, my fon, and put a period to thy toils. In every danger I will ftand by you, and fafe fet you down in your father's palace. She faid, and funk out of fight into the thick shades of night. Now direful forms appear, and the great Gods, adverse to Troy, in their awful majefty Then indeed, all Ilium feemed at once to fink into the flames, and Troy, built by Neptune, to be overturned from its loweft foundation. And, as when with emulous keennefs, the fwains labour to fell an afh that long hath flood on a high mountain, hewing it about with iron tools and many an ax, ever and anon it threatens a fall, and, waving its locks, nods with its convulfed top, till gradually, by wounds fubdued, it hath groaned its laft; and, torn from the ridge of the mountain, draws along with it ruin and defolation. Down I come, and, under the conduct of the god, clear my way amidft flames and foes : The darts give place, and the flames retire. But now, when arrived at the gates of my paternal feat, and ancient manfion houfe, my father, whom I was defirous first to remove to the high mountains, and whom I first befought, obstinately refules to survive the ruins of Trov, and to suffer exile. You, fays he, who are full of youthful blood, and whole powers remain firm in all their ftrength, do you attempt your flight. As for me, had the powers of heaven defigned I should prolong my life, they had preferved to me this manfion : Enough it is, and more than enough, that I have feen one cataftrophe of Troy, and outlived the taking of this city. Thus, oh leave me, thus, with the last farewel to my body laid in its dying posture. With this hand shall I find death myself : Or the enemy will pity me, and give it, and luft for my fpoils: The rites of sepulture I can eafily forego. Long have I lingered out a length of years, hated by the gods, and useles to the world; from what time the father of gods, and fovereign of men, blafted me with the winds of his thunder, and ftruck me with lightning. Such purpole declaring, he perfifted, and remained unalterable. On the other hand, I, my wife Creüla, Alcanius, and the whole family, burfting forth into tears, obtefted my father not to involve all with himfelf in ruin, nor haften our impending fate, He still is obstinate, and perfeveres in his purpole, and in the fame fettled refolu-Thus, once more I fly to my arms, and in extion. tremity of diffress long for death : For what other expedient had I left, or what profpect now of retrieving -my condition ! Could you hope, my dearest fire, that I could ftir one foot while you was left behind? Could fuch impiety drop from a parent's lips? If it is the will of the Gods, that nothing of this great city be preferved; if this be your settled purpose, and you are pleased to involve you and yours in the wreck of Troy; the way lies open to that death of which you are fo fond Forthwith Pyrrhus, reeking from the effution of Priam's blood, will be here; who butchers the fon before the father's eyes, and then the father himself at his own. altar. Was it for this, my indulgent mother, you faved me through darts, through flames, to fee the enemy in the midit of these recesses, and to see Ascanius, my father, and Creufa by his fide, butchered in one another's blood? Arms, my men, bring arms; this day, which is our last, calls us to exert ourselves, vanquished as we are. Give me back to the Greeks : Let me vifit once more the fight renewed: Never shall we all die unrevenged this day. Thus I again gird on my fword, and thruft my left-hand into my buckler, bracing it fitly on, and flung out of the palace. But lo ! my wife clung to me in the threshold, grasping my feet ; and reached to his father the tender boy Iulus. If, fays she, you go with a refolution to perifh ; fnatch us too with you to fiare all your fortuue : But, if from experience, you repole any confidence in those arms you have affumed, let this house have your first protection: To whom are you abandoning the tender Iulus, your aged fire, and me once called your wife ? Thus expostulating loud, she filled the whole palace with her groans, when a fudden and wondrous prodigy rifes to my fight : For, while the boy is in the arms and embraces of his mourning parents, lo ! the fluttering tuft from the top of Iulus's head was feen to emit a fream of light, and with gentle touch the lambent flame glides harmlefs along his hair, and feeds around his temples. We, all quaking for fear, run buftling to his relief, brush the blazing locks, and quench the holy fire with fountain water. But. my father Anchifes joyful raifed his eyes to the ftars, and ftretched his hands to heaven with his voice : Almighty Jove, if thou art moved by any fupplications, vouchfafe but to regard us; we alk no more: And, O heavenly father, if by our piety we deferve it, grant us then thy aid, and ratify thefe omens. Scarce had my aged fire thus faid, when with a fudden peal it thundered on the left, and a ftar that fell from the fkies, drawing a fiery train, fhot through the fhades with a profusion of light. We see it gliding over the high tops of the palace, lofe itself in the woods of mount Ida, full in our view, and marking out our way: Then all along its tract an indented path thines, and all the fpace, a great way round, fmokes with fulphureous steams. And now my father, forced to give way, raifes himfelf to heaven, addreffes the Gods, and pays adoration to the holy ftar : Now, now, in me is no delay : I am all fubmiffion, and where you lead the way, I am with you. Ye Gods of my fathers, fave our family, fave my grand-fon. From you this omen came, and Troy is in your divine disposal. Now, fon, I refign myself indeed, nor refuse to accompany you in your expedition. He faid : and now throughout the city the crackling flames are more diffinctly heard, and the conflagration rolls the torrents of fire nearer to us. Come then, dearest father, place yourself on my neck: With these shoulders will I support you, nor shall that burden oppress me. However things fall out, we both shall share either one common danger, or one falvation: The boy Iülus be my companion, and, my spoule, trace my fteps at some distance. Ye fervants, heedfully attend to what I fay. In your way from the city is a rifing ground, and an ancient temple of Ceres, now neglected ; and hard by an aged cyprefs-tree, preferved for many years by the religious veneration of our fore fathers. To this one feat by feveral ways we will repair. Do you, father, take in thy hand the facred fymbols, and the gods of our country. For me just come from war, so fierce and recent bloodshed, to touch them would be profanation, till I have purified myfelf in the living ftream. This faid, I fpread a garment and a tawny lion's hide over my broad shoulders and fubmiffive neck; and ftoop to the burden: The tender boy is linked in my right-hand, and trips after his father with unequal fleps : My spouse comes up behind : We hafte away through the gloomy paths. And I, whom lately not showers of darts could move, nor Greeks inclosing me round in a hoftile band, am now terrified with every breath of wind ; every found alarms me anxious, and equally in dread for my companion and my dear lord. By this time I was got near the gates, and thought I had overpaffed all the danger of the way, when fuddenly a thick found of tramping feet feemed to invade my ears just at hand : And my father, stretching his eyes through the gloom, calls aloud, Fly, fly, my fon, they are upon you. I fee their burnished shields and glittering helms of brass. Here, in my hurry and confternation, fome unfriends ly deity or other confounded and bereaved me M iii of my reason : For while in my journey I trace the by-paths, and forfake the known beaten tracks, I was fo unfortunate, alas! to drop my wife Creula; whether the was inatched from me by cruel fate, or loft her way, or through fatigue flopped fhort, is uncertain ; nor did thefe eyes ever fee her more : Nor did I obferve that the was loft, nor reflect with myfelf, till we were come to the riling ground, and facred leat of ancient Ceres : Here, at length, when all were convened, the alone was wanting, and gave fad difappointment to all our retinue, especially to her fon and husband. Frantic with grief, whom did I not accuse of gods or men? Or of what more cruel affecting scene was I spectator in all the defolation of Troy? To my friends. I recommend Afcanius, my father Anchifes, with the gods of Troy, and lodge them fecretly in a winding valley. Mylelf repair back to the city, and brace on my fhining armour. I am refolved to renew every adventure, revisit all the quarters of the town, and expole my life once more to all dangers. First of all I return to the walls, and the dark entry of the gate by which I had fet out, and backward unravel all my former fteps with care amidit the darknefs, and run them over with my eye. Horror stalks around; at the fame time the very filence of the night affrights my. foul. Thence homeward I bent my way, if by chance, by any chance, fhe had moved thither : The Greeks had now rushed in, and were masters of the whole. house. In a moment the devouring conflagration in fheets is rolled up by the wind to the lofty roof; the flames foor mount above ; the fiery, whirlwind rages to the fkies. I advance to Priam's royal feat, and revifit the citadel. And now in the defolate cloilters, Juno's fanctuary, Phoenix, and curfed Ulyffes, a chofen guard, were watching the booty : Hither, from all quarters, the precious Trojan moveables, faved from the conflagration of the temples, the tables of the Gods, the maffy golden goblets, and plundered vestments, are amafiled together: Gaptive boys, and timorous man trons, stand all around in a long train. Nay, more, adventuring even to dart my voice through the fhades,

Book. II.

135

Digitized by Google

Mii

I ; S

I filled the freets with outcry, and in the anguish of my foul with vain repetition, again and again invoked Creufa. While I am in this fruitlefs fearch, and with inceffant fury ranging through all quarters of the town, the mournful ghoft and shade of my Creusa's felf appeared before my eyes, and her figure larger than the ife. I ftood agbait ! my hair role on end, and my voice clung to my jaws. Then thus she bespeaks me, and relieves my cares with thefe words : My darling fpouse what pleafure have you thus to indulge a grief which is but madnefs ? "Thefe events fall out not without the will of the Gods. 'Tis not decreed you carry Creüfa hence to accompany you, nor is it permitted by the great ruler of heaven fupreme. In long banishment you must roam, and plough the vast expansion of the ocean : To the land of Helperia you shall come at. length, where the Lydian Tiber, with his gentle current, glides through a rich land of heroes. There prosperous days, a crown, and royal spouse, await you. Dry up your tears for your beloved Creufa, who is now happy, and at reft. I, of Dardanus's noble line, and the daughter-in-law of divine Venus, shall not be curfed to fee the proud feats of the Myrmidons and Dolopes, nor go to ferve the Grecian dames; but the great mother of the Gods detains me in her fervice in these coalts. Now, farewell, and preferve your affection to our common fon.

With these words she left me in tears, and ready to fay a thousand things, and vanished into thin air. There thrice I attempted to throw my arms around her neck ; thrice the phantom, grassed in vain, eleaped my hold, swift as the winged winds, and refembling most a fleeting dream. Thus having spent the night, I at length re-visit my affociates. And here, to my supprise, I find a valt confluence of new companions had joined us; matrons and men, and youths drawn together to *fbare*our exile, a piteous throng! From all hands they convened, resolute to follow me with their fouls and fortunes, into whatever country I inclined to conduct; them over fea. By this time, the bright morning-ftar; was rising on the craggy tops of lofty Ida, and uftered in the day: The Greeks held the entrance of the gates blocked up; nor had we any profpect. I gave way to fate; and bearing up my father, made towards the mountain.

BOOK THIRD.

AFTER it had feemed good to the gods to overthrow the power of Ana, and Priam's race, not for any fault of theirs, and flately Ilium fell, and Troy, now built by Neptune, fmokes in ruin; we are determined, by revelations from the gods, to go in queft of diftant retreats in exile, and unpeopled lands : We fit out a fleet just under the walls of Antandros, and the mountains of Phrygian Ida; and draw our forces together, not knowing whither the fates point our way, where it shall . be given us to fettle. Scarce had the first fummer begun, when my father Anchifes gave command to hoift the fails, in pursuance of heaven's decree. Then, with forrow, I leave the fhores and ports of my native country, and the plains where Troy once ftood : An exile forlorn, I launch into the deep with my affociates, my fon, my household gods, and the great gods of my country. At a diftance lies a martial land, well peopled throughout its wide extended plains (the Thracians cultivate the foil), over which in former times fierce Lycurgus reigned in ancient hofpitable retreat for Troy, and whole gods were leagued with ours, while fortune was with us. Hither I am carried, and found my first walls along the winding shore, entering on that enterprife with fates unkind, and from my own name I call the citizens Æneades. I was performing facred rites to my mother Venus, and the gods, the patrons of my works begun, and to the exalted king of the immortals I was facrificing a fhining bull on the shore. Hard by there chanced to be a rising ground, on whole top young cornel trees that up their tender twigs, and a myrtle rough and overgrown with thick spear-like branches. I came up to it, and attempting to tear from the earth the verdant wood, to cover the altars with the leafy boughs, I fee a dreadful prodigy, and wonderous to relate. For from that tree which first is torn from the foil, its rooted fibres being burst afunder, drops of black blood diftil, and ftain the ground with gore : Shivering horror fhakes my limbs, and my chill blood is congealed with fear. I again affay to tear off a limber bough from another, and thoroughly explore the latent caufe : And from the rind of that other, the purple blood defcends. Raifing in my mind many an anxious thought, I with reverence befought the rural nymphs, and father Mars, who prefides over the Thracian territories, to fecond the vision in due form, and give a favourable turn to the omen. But after that 1 attempt the boughs a third time with a more vigorous effort, and on my knees ftruggle against the oppofing mould; fhall I fpeak, or fhall I forbear ? A piteous groan is heard from the bottom of the rifing ground, and a voice fent forth reaches my ears : Æneas, why doft thou tear an unhappy wretch ! Spare me now that I am in my grave; forbear to pollute with guilt thy pious hands : Troy brought me forth no ftranger to you : Nor is it from the dead trunk this blood diftils. Ah, fly this barbarous land, fly the avaricious shore ! For the unhappy Polydorus am I: Here an iron crop of darts hath overwhelmed me, transfixed, and over me shot up in pointed javelins. Then indeed, inly depreffed with perplexing fear, I was flunned; my hair flood on end, and my voice clung to my jaws. This Polydorus unhappy Priam had formerly fent in fecrecy with large fums of money to be brought up by the king of Thrace, what time he began to be diffident of the arms of Troy, and faw the city with close fiege He (the king of Thrace), fo foon as the blocked up. power of the Trojans was crushed, and their fortune gone, efpoufing Agamemnon's intereft and victorious arms, breaks every facred bond, affaffinates Polydorus, and by violence poffeffes his money & Curfed avarice, on what desperate wickedness thy influence drives the minds of men ! After my quaking fear was gone, I report the portentous figns of the gods to our chofen leaders, and chiefly to my father, and demand what their refolution is. All are unanimous to quit that curfed land, abandon the polluted fociety, and fpread the fails to the winds. Therefore we fet about the renewal of Polydorus's funeral oblequies, and raife a large mound of earth for the tomb: An altar is reared to his manes, mournfully decked with leaden-coloured wreaths, and black baleful cyprefs : and round it the Trojan matrons fland with hair diffevelled according to cultom. We next offer the facrifices of the dead. bowls foaming with warm milk, and goblets of the facred blood of the victim: Thus we give the foul repofe in the grave, and with loud voice address to him the last farewel. This done, when first we durst confide in the main, when the favouring winds indulge us with peaceful feas, and the fouth-wind in foft whilpering gales invites us to the deep, my mates launch the fhips, and crowd the fhore. We are wafted from the port, and the lands and cities in prospect retreat. Amidit the fea there lies a charming fpot of land, facred to Doris, the mother of the Nereids, and Ægean Neptune, which once unfixed, and floating about the coafts and flores, the pious god who wields the bow, fast bound with high Gyaros and Mycone, and fixed it fo as to be habitable, and mock the infulting winds. Hither I am led : This most peaceful illand receives us into a safe port after our fatigue. At our first landing, we pay veneration to the city of Apollo. King Anius, who was both king of men and prieft of Phoebus, his temples bound with fillets and facred laurel, comes up, and prefently recollects his old friend Anchifes. We join right-hands in amity, and come under his hofpitable roof. I venerated the temple of the god, a structure of ancient stone, and thus began : Thymbræan Apollo, grant us, after all our toils, fome fixed manfion ; grant us walls of defence, a happy offspring, and permanent city : Preferve thefe other towers of Troy, a remnant escaped from the Greeks and mercilefs Achilles. Whom are we to follow? Or whither commandeft thou us to go? where to fix our refidence ? Holy father, grant us a prophetic fign, and glide into our minds. Scarce had I thus faid, when fuddenly all feemed to tremble, both the temple itfelf, and laurel of the god; the whole mountain quaked around, and, the fanctuary being exposed to view, the place of the oracle groaned. In humble reverence, we fall to the ground, and a voice reaches our ears: Ye hardy fons of Dardanus, that land which first produced you from your forefathers flock, the fame shall receive you in its fertile bofom after all your dangers paft : Search out your ancient mother. There the family of Æneas shall rule over every coast, and his children's children, and who from them shall spring. Thus Phœbus. Vast emotions of joy, with mingled tumult, arole, and all are anxious to know what city is defigned; whither Phoebus calls a wandering crew, and wills them to return. Then my father, revolving the hiftorical records of the ancients, fays, Ye Trojan leaders give ear, and learn what you have to hope for : In the middle of the fea lies Crete, the ifland of mighty Jove, where is mount Ida, and the nurfery of our race. The Cretans inhabit an hundred mighty cities, all most fertile realms ; whence our renowned anceftor Teucrus, if I right remember the tradition, first arrived on the Rhætean coafts, and there chose the feat of his kingdom. No Ilium then, nor towers of Pergamus, were raifed ; in humble vales they dwelt. Hence came mother Cybele, our patronefs, and the brazen cymbals of the Corybantes, and the Idzan grove : Hence that faithful fecrecy. observed in her facred rites, and hence the custom of yoking harneffed lions in the chariot of the imperial goddefs. Come then, and, where the commands of the gods point out our way, let us follow : Let us appeale the winds, and make for the Gnoffian realms. Nor lie they at the diftance of a long voyage : Provided Jove be with us, the third day will land our fleet on the Cretan coalt. This faid, he offered the proper facrifices on the altars, a bull to Neptune, a bull to thee, O graceful Apollo; a black sheep to the wintry power, and a white one to the propitious zephyrs. A report flies abroad, that Idomeneus, the Gretan leader, banished by his fubjects, hath quitted his paternal kingdom, and that the shore of Crete is now naked of defence; its manfions emptiel of our foe, and forfaken palaces fland open to receive us. We leave the port of Ortygia, and foud along the fea: We cruize along Naxos, on whole mountains the Bachanals revel, green Donyla, Olearos, fnowy Paros, and the Cyclades feattered up and down the main, and narrow feas thick fown with clustered islands. With various emulation the feamen's shouts arife. The crew thus animate one another, For CRETE AND OUR ANCESTORS LET US SPEED OUR COURSE. We fail full before the wind, and at length fkim along to the ancient feats of the Curetes. Therefore with eagerness, I raifed the walls of the fo much wished for city, call it the city of Pergamus, and I exhort my new colony, pleafed with their name, to keep much at home, and raile turrets of defence on their roofs. And now the ships were mostly laid up on the dry beach; the youth had performed facrifice for success on their nuptials and new fettlements; I was begun to difpense laws, and appropriate houses; when suddenly, from the infection of the climate, a waiting and lamentable plague feized on our limbs, the trees, and corns; and the year is pregnant with death. My friends left their fweet lives, or dragged along their fickly bodies : At the fame time the raging dog-ftar burnt up the barren fields The herbs were parched, and the unwholefome grain denied us fustenance. My father advises, that, measuring back the fea, we again apply to the oracle of Ortygia, and Apollo, and implore his grace, to know when he will bring our toils and wanderings to a period; whence he will bid us attempt a redrefs of our calamities, or whither turn our courfe. It was night, and fleep reigned over all the animal world. The facred images of the Gods, and the tutelar deities of my country, whom I had brought with me from Troy, and the midlt of the flames, were feen to fland before my eyes as I lay awake, confpicuous by a glare of light, where the full-moon darted her beams through the intervening windows. Then they thus addreffed me, and dif-

pelled my cares with these words : What Apollo would announce to you, were you wafted to Ortygia, he here reveals, and lo! unafked, he fends us to your dwelling. We, after Troy was confumed, followed thee, and the fortune of thy arms ; under thy conduct we have croffed the fwelling fea in ships : We too will exalt thy future race to heaven, and crown thy city with imperial power: Do thou prepare walls mighty for the mighty inhabitants, and flinch not from the long labours of thy wandering voyage. You must change your place of refidence : Thefe are not the shores that Delian Apollo advifed you to pursue; nor was it in Crete he commanded you to fettle. There is a place, the Greeks call it Hefperia by name; a country of ancient renown, powerful by its arms, and the fertility of the foil; The Oenotrians peopled it once; now there is a report, that their descendants have called the nation Italy from the founder's name. These are our lafting settlements ; hence Dardanus fprung, and father Ialius, from which prince our racei s derived : Hafte then ; arife, and with joy report to thy aged fire thefe intimations of unqueftionable credibility : Search out the city Coritus, and the Aufonian lands : Jupiter forbids your fettlement in the Cretan territories. Aftonished by this vision and declaration of the Gods (nor was it a mere illusion in fleep, but methought 1 clearly difcerned their afpect before me, their filleted hair, and their forms full in my view ; then a cold fweat flowed over my whole body), I fling me out of bed, and lift up my hands fupine to heaven with my voice, and pour hallowed offerings on the fires. Having finished the facrifice, with joy I certify Anchifes, and difclose the fact to bim in order. He owned the ambiguous offspring, and the double founders of the Trojan race, and that he had been deceived by the modern equivocal names given to ancient countries. Then he thus bespeaks me : O my fon, tried and exercifed in woe by the fates of Troy, Caffandra alone predicted to me that fuch was to be our fortune. Now I recollect, that the foretold this should be the deftiny of our race, and that she often turned her discourse on Hesperia, often on the Italian

Ν

realms. But who could believe the Trojans were to come to the Helperian shore? Or whom then did the prophetic Caffandra move? But now let us refign ourfelves to Phoebus ; and, fince we are better advifed, let us follow the gods. He faid, and exulting we all obey This realm we likewife quit, and, leaving his orders. a few behind, unfurl our fails, and bound over the fpacious fea, in our hollow veffels. After the ships were got into the deep, and now not any land is longer in view ; only fky and ocean all around : Then a blackening cloud ftood over my head, bringing on night and a wintry florm ; the waves put on the horrors of darknefs; the winds overturn the fea, and fwelling furges rife : We are toffed hither and thither on the expanded face of the deep : Clouds wrapped up the day, and humid night fnatched the heavens from our view; from the burfting clouds flashes of lightning redouble. We are driven from our courfe, and reel along the dufky waves. Palinurus himfelf owns he is unable to diffinguifh day from night by the fky, and that he has forgot his course in the mid-fea. Thus for three days, that could hardly be diffinguished from night by reason of dark clouds, and as many starless nights, we wander up and down the ocean. At length, on the fourth day, land was first seen to rife, the mountains from afar open to our view, and roll up their fmoke : the fails fubfide ; we ply the labouring oars ; inftant the feamen with exerted vigour tofs up the foam, and fweep the azure deep. The shores of the Strophades islands first receive me refcued from the waves. The Strophades, fo called by a Greek name, are islands fituated in the great Ionian fea ; which direful Celæno and the other harpies inhabit, from what time they were expelled Philenus's palace, and frighted from his table, which they formerly haunted. No monster more fell than they, no plague and fcourge of the Gods more cruel ever iffued from the Stygian waves. They are fowls with virgin-faces, a most loathsome flux of entrails, hands hooked, and looks ever pale with famine. Hither conveyed, fo foon as we entered the port, lo! we fee joyous herds of cattle up and down the plains, and flocks of goats along the meadows, without a keeper. We rush upon them with our fwords, and invoke the gods and Jove himfelf to fhare the booty. Then along the winding fhore we raife the banqueting couches, and feast on the rich repait. When fuddenly, with dreadful darting motion, the harpies are upon us from the mountains, shake their wings with loud rustling din, prey upon our banquet, and defile every thing with their impure touch : at the fame time, together with a rank, noifome finell, they emit hideous screams. Again we fpread our tables in a long recess, underneath a shclving rock, inclofed around with trees and gloomy fhade, and once more we plant fire on the altar. Again the noify rout, Mooting from a different quarter of the sky, and obscure retreats, flutter around the prey with hooky claws, and taint our viands with their mouths. Then I enjoin my companions to take arms, and wage war with the accurfed brood. My orders they punctually obey, difpofe their fwords fecretly among the grafs, and conceal their shields out of sight. Therefore, fo foon as, darting down, they raifed their fcreaming voices along the bending fhores, Miscenus with his hollow trumpet of brass gives the fignal from a lofty watch-tower. My friends fet upon them and engage in a new kind of fight, to employ the fword in deitroying obscene feafowls. But they neither receive any impression on their plumes, nor wounds in the body; and mounting up in the air with rapid flight, leave behind them their prey half confumed, and the ugly prints of their feet. Celæno alone took her feat on the brow of a high rock, a prophetels of plagues, and from her heaving breaft burft forth thefe words : War too, ye fons of Laomedon, is it your purpose to make war upon us as a compensation for our oxen, which you have flain and fed upon, for the havock you have made among our bullocks; and do you intend to banish the innocent harpies from their hereditary kingdom ? Lend then an ear, and in your minds fix thefe my words : What almighty father Jove revealed to Phœbus, Phœbus Apollo to me, 1 the chief of the furies difclofe to you. To Italy you fteer your courfe, and Italy you Nij

147

shall reach after repeated invocations to the thwarting winds, and you shall be permitted at length to enter the port: But you shall not inclose the given city with walls, till cruel famine and difaster, for shedding our blood, compel you first to gnaw and eat up your trenchers with greedy jaws. She faid, and on her wings upborne flew into the wood. As for our crew, their blood, chilled with fudden fear, flagnated in their veins : Their minds were quite dejected : And now they are no longer for having recourse to arms, but urge me to folicit peace by vows and prayers, whether they be goddeffes, or curfed and inaufpicious birds. My father Anchifes, with hands fpread forth from the shore, invokes the great Gods, and enjoins due honours to be paid them. Ye gods, ward off the effect of your threatenings; ye gods, avert fo grievous a calamity, and, propitious, fave your pious votaries. Then he orders to tear the ropes from the fhore, loofe and difengage the cables. The fouth winds ftretch our bellying fails : We fly over the foaming waves, where the wind and pilots urged our courfe. Now amidit the waves appear woody Zacynthos, Dulichium, Same, and Neritos with its fleepy rocks. We fhun the clifts of Ithaca, Laertes's realms, and curfe the land that bred the inhuman Ulyffes. Soon after this the cloudy tops of mount Leucata, and the temple of Apollo, the dread of feamen, opens to our eye. Hither we fleer our courfe, oppreffed with toil, and make up to the little city. The anchor is thrown out from the prow; the fhips are ranged on the fhore. Thus at length poffeffed of wished for land, we are purified for offering facrifice to Jupiter, and kindle fires on the altars, in order to perform our vows, and fignalize the promontory of Actium by celebrating the Trojan games. Our crew, having their naked limbs befmeared with flippery oil, exercife the wreftling matches of their country : We reflect with pleafure on having escaped fo many Grecian cities, and purfued our voyage without interruption through the midft of our enemies. Meanwhile the fun finishes the revolution of the great year, and frofty winter exafperates the waves with the north-winds. On the fronting door-pofts of the temple, 1 fet up a buckler of hollow brafs, which mighty Abas wore, and notify the action by this verfe; These arms Æneas won from the victorious Greeks. Then I order our crew to leave the port, and take their feats on the benches. They with emulous ardour lash the fea, and fweep the waves. In a trice we lofe fight of of the airy towers of the Phæacians, cruife along the coafts of Epirus, and enter the Chaonian port, and ascend the lofty city of Buthrotus. Here a report of facts scarce credible invades our ears, that Helenus, Priam's fon, was reigning over Grecian cities, poffeffed of the spoule and sceptre of Pyrrhus the grandchild of Æacus, and that Andromache had again fallen to 5 a lord of her own country. I was amazed, and my bolom glowed with strange defire to greet the hero, and learn the hiftory of fo fignal revolutions of fortune. I fet forward from the port, leaving the fleet and fhore. Andromache, as it chanced, was then offering to Hector's ashes her anniverfary feast and mournful oblations before the city in a grove, by the ftreams of the fictitious Simois, and invoked the manes at Hector's tomb; an empty tomb which flie had confectated of green turf, and two altars, incentives to her grief. So foon as the faw me coming up; and to her amazement beheld the Trojan arms around me, terrified with a prodigy fo great, the fainted away at the very fight : Vi tal warmth forfook her limbs. She finks down, and at length, after a long interval, thus with faultring ac cent speaks: Goddels born, do you present yourself to me a real substantial form, a real messenger? Do you live? Or, if from you the aufpicious light is fled, fay where my Hector is ? She faid, and fhed a flood of tears, filling all the place with doleful fhrieks. While fhe is in this transport, I with much ado briefly reply, and in , reat perturbation open my mouth in these few broken words : I am alive indeed, and fpin out life through all extremes. Entertain no doubt, for all you fee is real. Ah ! fay what accidents of life have overtaken you, fince you was thrown down from the hap-Niij.

148

py possession of your illustrious lord ? Or what fortune, fome way fuited to your merit, hath vifited you once more ? Is then Hector's Andromache bound in wedlock to Pyrrhus ? Downward fhe caft her eyes, and thus in humble accents fpoke : O happy, fingularly happy the fate of Priam's virgin-daughter, who, compelled to die at the enemy's tomb under the lofty walls of Troy, fuffered not in having any lots caft for her, nor as a captive ever touched the bed of a victorious Lord ! We, after the defolation of our country, being transported over various seas, have in thraldom bure with a mother's throws the infolence of Achilles's heir. and a haughty imperious youth : who afterwards, attaching himfelf to Hermione the grand-daughter of Leda, and a Lacedaemonian match, delivered me over a flave into the poffeffion of Helenus, likewife a flave. But Oreftes, inflamed by the violence of love to his betrothed fpoufe now fnatched from him, and hurried on by the furies of his crimes, furprifes him in an unguarded hour, and affaffinates him at his country's altar. By the death of Neoptolemus a part of his kingdom fell into the hands of Helenus; who denominated the plains Chaonian, and the whole country Chaonia, from Chaon the Trojan his brother; and built on the mountains another Pergamus, and this Trojan fort. But fay what winds, what fates have guided your courfe? Or what god hath landed you on our coafts without your knowledge? What is become of the boy Afcanius? Lives he still, and breathes the vital air? whom, on your care, when Troy was-Has the boy now any concern for the loss of his mother? Is he incited by the example of both his father Æneas and uncle Hector to ancient valour and manly courage? Thus, bathed in. tears the fpoke, and heaved long unavailing fobs ; when the hero Helenus, Priam's fon, advances from the city with a numerous retinue, knows his friends, with joy. conducts them to his palace, and fheds tears in abundance between each word. I fet forward, and furvey the little Troy, the caffle of Pergamus, that bore refemblance to the great original, a fcanty rivulet that bore Xanthus's name, and I embrace the threshold of the Scæan gate. The Trojans too at the fame time enjoy the friendly city. The king entertained them in his spacious galleries. In the midst of the court they, quaffed brimmers of wine, while the banquet was ferved in gold, and each flood with a goblet in his hand. And now one day, and a fecond, paffed on, when the gales invite our fails, and the canvas bellies by the fwelling fouth-wind. Then in these words I accost the prophetic Helenus, and question him thus : Son of Troy, interpreter of the gods, who knowest the divine will of Phæbus, the mysteries of the Tripods, the laurels of the Clarian god ; who knowest the fcience of the stars, the ominous founds of birds, and the prognoftics of every wing that fwiftly flies : Come then, declare (for hitherto the omens of religion have pronounced my whole voyage to be profperous, and all the gods, by indications of their divine will, have directed me to go in purfuit of Italy, and attempt a fettlement in lands reremote : The harpy Celano alone predicts a prodigy ftrange and horrible to relate, and denounces against us direful vengeance, and foul unnatural famine) what are the principal dangers I am to fhun? or by the purfuit of what means may I furmount toils fo great? Upon. this Helenus first folicits the peace of the gods by fa. crificing bullocks in due form, then unbinds the fillets of his confecrated head, and himfelf leads me by the hand to thy temple, O Phæbus, anxious with great awe of the god : Then the prieft, from his lips divine. delivers these predictions : Goddess-born (for that you fteer through the deep on fome enterprize of great moment to me is unqueffionably evident : So the fovereign of the gods difpenfes his decree ; thus he fixes the feries of revolving events; fuch the fcheme of things is haftening to the birth), that you may with the more fafety crofs the leas to which you are a ftranger, and fettle at last in the Ionian port, I will unfold to you a few particulars of many; for the definies hinder you from knowing the reft, and Saturnian Juno forbids Helenus to reveal it. First of all, a long intricate voyage, with a length of lands, divides you from Italy, which you ignorantly deam already near, and whole ports you are preparing to enter, as if they were juft at hand. Before that happen, you shall both ply the bending oar in the Trinacrian wave, and vifit with your fleet the plains of the Aufonian fea, the infernal lakes, and Æzan Circe's isle, before it be in your power to build a city in a quiet peaceful land. The figns I will declare to you; keep them treafured up in your mind. When, thoughtfully musing by the streams of the fecret river, you shall find a large fow that has brought forth a litter of thirty young, reclining on the ground, under the elms that fhade the banks of the river, white the dam, the offspring white around her dugs : That shall be the station of the city : There is the period fixed to all thy labours : Nor be diffurbed at the future event of eating your tables : The fates will find out an expedient, and Apollo invoked will befriend you. But hun those coafts, and those nearest limits of the Italian shore, which are washed by the tide of our fea: All those cities are inhabited by the mifchievous Greeks. Here the Locrians of the city Narycium have raifed their walls, and Cretan Idomenus with his troops has poffeffed the plains of Salentum : Here stands that little city Petilia defended by the wallsof Philoctetes the Melibœan chief. Further, when your fleet, having croffed the leas, shall come to a station, and you shall pay your vows at the altars raifed on the shore, be fure to cover your head, muffling your felf up in a purple veil : lest the face of an enemy, amidst the facred fires in honour of the gods, appear, and diffurb the omens. This cuftom in facrifice, let your friends, this yourfelf observe : To this religious institution, let your pious descendants adhere. But when, after setting out, the wind shall waft you to the Sicilian coast, and the straits of narrow Pelorus shall open wider to the eye, veer tothe land on the left, and to the fea on the left, by a long circuit : Fly the right both fea and shore. These lands, they fay, once with violence and vast defolation convulfed (fuch revolutions long tract of time is able to produce) burft asunder; when in continuity both. lands were one, the fea rushed impetuously between, and by its waves tore the Italian fide from that of Sicily; and now with a narrow frith runs between the - fields and cities, feparated by different fhores. Scylla guards the right fide, implacable Charybdis the left, and thrice with the deep eddies of its voracious gulph; fwallows up the valt billows into the broken abyls, and again spouts them out by turns high into the air, and lashes the stars with the waves. As to Scylla, a cave confines her within its dark receffes, reaching forth her jaws, and fucking in veffels upon the rocks. First she prefents a human form, a lovely virgin down to the middle : Her lower parts are those of a hideous priftie, with Dolphin's tails joined to the wombs of wolves. It is better with delay to circuit round the extremities of the Sicilian Promontory Pachynus, and fleer a long. winding courfe, than once to view the mishapen Scylla under her capacious den, and those rocks that roar with her fea-green dogs. Farther, if Helenus has any skill, if any credit is due to him as a prophet, if Apollo ftores his mind with truth, I will give you this one previous admonition, this one, O goddefs born, above all the reft; and I will inculcate it upon you again and again : Be fure you, in the first place, with fupplications worship great Juno's divinity : To Juno cheerfully in hymns addrefs your vows, and vanquish the powerful empress of the fkies with humble offerings; thus at length, leaving Trinacria, you shall be difmissed victorious to the territories of Italy. When, wafted thither, you shall reach the city Cumz, the hallowed lakes, and the floods of Avernus refounding through the woods; you shall fee the raving prophetels, who, beneath a deep rock, reveals the decrees of heaven, and commits to the leaves of trees her characters and words. Whatever verfes the virgin has inferibed on the leaves, fhe ranges in harmonious order, and leaves in the cave inclosed by themfelves, Uncovered they remain in their polition, -nor recede from their order. But when, upon turning the hinge, a fmall breath of wind has blown upon them, and the door, by opening, hath difcomposed the tender leaves, the never afterwards gives herfelf the trouble to catch the verfes as they are fluttering in the hollow cave, nor to recover their fituation, or join them together. Thus her votaries depart without a response, and deteft the Sibyl's grot. Let not the loss of fome time there feem of fuch confequence to you (though your friends chide your delay, the necessities of your voyage strongly invite your fails into the deep, and you may have an opportunity to fill the bellying canvas with a prosperous gale) as to hinder you from visiting the prophetels, and earneftly intreating her to deliver the oracles herfelf, and vouchfafe to open her lips in vocal accents. She will declare to you the Italian nations, your future wars, and by what means you may fhun or fustain every hardship; and, with reverence addreffed, will give you a successful voyage. These are all the instructions I am at liberty to give you. Go then, and by your achievements raife mighty Troy to heaven. Which words, when the prophet had thus with friendly accent pronounced, he orders prefents next of great value to be carried to 'the fhips, confifting of gold and ivory; and within the fides of my veffel, flows a large quantity of filver-plate, and caldrons of Dodonean brafe, a mail thick fet with rings, and wrought in gold of triple tiffue ; together with the cone and waving creft of a shining helmet : Arms which belonged to Neoptolemus. My father too has proper gifts conferred on him. He gives us horfes ; befides, he gives us a guide : he fupplies us with rowers, and at the same time furnishes our crew with arms. Meanwhile Anchifes gave orders to equip our fleet with fails, that we might not lofe the favouring gale. Whom the in-terpreter of Apollo accofts with high respect : Anchifes, honoured with Venus's illustrious bed, the object of heaven's peculiar care, twice faved from the ruins of Troy, lo! there the coast of Aufoniz lies before you ; thither speed your way with full fail : And yet you must steer your course beyond that coast : That part of Aufonia which Apollo opens to your hope lies remote. Go, fays he, happy in the pious duty of your fon : Why do I farther infift, and by my discourse retard you from enjoying the rifing gales ? In like manuer Andromache, grieved at our final departure, brings forth to Afcanius vestments wrought in figures of gold, and a Phrygian cloak; nor falls fhort of her dignity; fhe loads the boy befides with prefents of her labours in the loom, and thus addreffes him : Take these too, my child, which may be memorials to you of my handy-work, and teftify the permanent affection of Andromache, the spoule of Hector: Accept the last presents of thy friends; O the dear image, which is all that I have now left of my Aftyanax ! Just fuch eyes, fuch hands, fuch looks he fnewed : And now of equal age with you would have been blooming into youth. I, with tears in my eyes, thus addreffed them at parting : Live in joy and felicity, ye whole fortune is now accomplished. We are fummoned from fate to fate : To you tranquillity is fecured ; no expanse of sea have you to plough ; nor to purfue the lands of Aufonia still flying from us. You are bleffed to fee the image of Xanthus and Troy, which your own hands have built. Heaven grant it be with happier aufpices, and be lefs obnoxious to the Greeks. If ever I shall enter the Tyber, and the lands that border on the Tyber, and view the walls allotted to my race, we will hereafter make of our kindred cities, and allied people, yours in Epirus, and mine in Italy, who have both the fame founder, Dardanus, and the fame fortune ; we will, I (ay, make of both one Troy in mutual affection and good will : Be this the future care of our posterity.

150

352

Book III.

We purfue our voyage near the adjacent Ceraunian mountains; whence lies our way, and fhorteft courfe by fea to Italy. Meanwhile the fun goes down, and the opaque mountains are wrapped up in fhade. On the bofom of the wifhed for earth we lay us down by the waves, having diffributed the oars by lot, and all along the dry beach indulge ourfelves in foft repofe: Sleep diffufes its balmy dews over our weary limbs. Night, driven by the winged hours, had not yet reached her mid-way courfe, when Palinurus fprings alert from bed, examines every wind, and lends his ears to catch the coming breeze; He obferves every gliding flar in the filent fky, Arcturus, the rainy Hyades, and the two northren Bears, and throws his eyes around Orion armed with gold, After he fees all appearances of fettled weather in the ferene sky, he gives the loud fignal from the ftern. We decamp, attempt our avyage, and expand the wings of our fails. And now, the ftars being chaced away, blufhing Aurora appeared, when far off we fpy the hills obfcure, and lowly plains of Italy. Italy, Achates first calls aloud ; Italy, the crew with joyous acclamations hail. Then father Anchifes decked a capacious bowl with a garland, and filled it up with wine; and invoked the gods standing on the lofty ftern. Ye gods, who rule fea, and land, and ftorms, grant us a prosperous voyage by a favourable wind, and breathe propitious. The wifhed for gales begin to fwell; and now the port opens nearer to our view, and on the promontory appears the temple of Minerva. Our crew furl the fails and turn about their prows to the fhore. Where the waves break from the east, the port bends into an arch; the jutting cliffs foam with the fparkling brine; the port itself lies hid; two turret-like rocks firetch out their arms on either fide in a double wall; and the temple recedes from the shore. Here on the graffy meadow, I faw, as our first omen, four fnow white fleeds grazing the plain at large ; and my father Anchifes calls out : War, O foreign land, thou bringeft us; for war fteeds are harneffed ; war these cattle threaten. But yet the fame quadrupeds have long been used to fubmit to the chariot, and in the yoke to bear the peaceful reins; hope, therefore, there is of peace, he fays. Then we address our prayers to the facred majefty of Pallas with clashing arms arrayed, who first received us elated with joy; and before her altars we draw over our heads a Phrygian veil : And according to the instructions given us by Helenus, on which he laid the greatest stress, in due form we offer up to Argive Juno the honours enjoined. Without lofs of time, fo foon as we had orderly fulfilled our vows, we turn about the extremities of our fail-yards, and quit the abodes and fuspected territories of the fons of Greece. Next appears the bay of Tarentum, facred to Hercules, if common report be true : And on the opposite side of the bay, the temple of the Lacinian goddefs emerges, the towers of Caulon, and Scyllaczum the coaft of shipwrecks. Then at a distance from the waves is feen Trinacrian Ætna; and from afar we hear the loud growling of the ocean, the beaten rocks, and broken murmurs rolling to the fhore: The shallows exult, and fands are mingled with the whirling tide. And fays my father Anchifes: Doubtlefs, this is the famed Carybdis; Thefe the shelves, these the hideous rocks Silenus foretold. Get ye hence, my friends, and with equal ardour rife on your oars. Just as commanded, they obey : And first Palinurus whirled about the creaking prow to the left. The whole crew with oars and fails bore to the left. We mount up to heaven on the arched gulph, and down again we fink to the shades below, the wave having flipped from under us. Thrice the rocks bellowed amid their hollow caverns : Thrice we faw the foam dashed up from the rocks, and the stars dreached with its dewy moisture. Meanwhile the wind with the fun forfook us fpent with toil; and, not knowing our courfe, we run upon the coafts of the Cyclops. The port itself is ample, and undisturbed by the approach of the winds; but, hard by, Ætna thunders with horrible ruins, and fometimes burfts forth to the fkies a black cloud, afcending in a pitchy whirlwind of imoke, and glowing embers; throws up globes of flame, and kiffes the flars : Sometimes belching, flings on high the ribs and shattered bowels of the mountain, and with a rumbling noife in wreathy heaps convolves, in air molten rocks, and boils up from the lowest bottom. It is faid, that the body of Enceladus, half confumed with lightning, is preffed down with this pile, and that cumbrous Atna, laid above him, is therefore still spouting forth slames from its burft furnaces : And that, as often as he shifts his weary fide, all Trinacria, with a deep groan, inly trembles, and overfpreads the heaven with fmoke. Lying that night under the covert of the woods, we fuffer from those hideous prodigies ; nor see what cause produced the dreadful found; for neither had we the light of the flars, nor was the fky enlightened from the flarry firmament; but fettled gloom all over the dufky fky, and a night of reigning darknels, muffled up the moon in clouds.

0

And now the next day with the first dawn/was rifand Aurora had diffipated the humid shades, ing, from the fky; when fuddenly there bolts forth from the woods a ftrange figure of a perfon unknown to use emaciated to the laft degree, and in lamentable plight ;; and, with the air of a fuppliant, firetches forth his hands to the fhore, We look back : A fpectacle hewas of horrid filth, his beard overgrown, his garment. tagged with thorns; but, in all befides, he was a Greek, and had formerly been fent to Troy accompanying the arms of his country. So foon as he fpiedat some distance our Trojan drefs and arms, struck with terror at the fight, he pauled a while, and ftopped his progrefs : Then, in a trice, flung headlong to the thore with tears and prayers. I obtelt you, fays he, by the flars, by the powers above, by this celeftial light of life, ye Trojans, fnatch me hence ; convey meto any climes whatever, I shall be fatisfied. It is true, I am one who belonged to the Grecian fleet, and, I confess, I bore arms against the walls of Troy : For which, if the demerit of my crime be to heinous, fcatter my limbs on the waves, and bury them in the vait ocean. If I die, I shall have the fatisfaction to die by the hands of men. He faid, and clafping our knees, and wallowing on the ground, clung to us. We urge him to speak who he is, of what family born; and next, to declare what hard fortune purfues him. My father Anchifes frankly gives the youth his right hand, and fortifies his mind by that kindly pledge. At. length, all fear removed, he thus begins : I am a native of Ithaca, a companion of the unfortunate Ulyffes, Achaemenides my name; I went to Troy, my; father Adamastus being poor; but would to God I had never changed my ftate of life! Here was I deferted in the huge den of the Cyclop by my companions, while in hurry and confternation they fly from his cruel abodes, unconcerned for me. The cell, hor-, rid with gore and bloody banquets, within is gloomy and vaft; The Cyclop himfelf of towering height, beats the ftars on high (Ye gods avert fuch a peft from the earth), of terrible forbidding afpect, and inaccel. fible to every mortal : He feeds on the entrails and purple blood of wretches he has flain. I myfelf beheld, when, having grafped in his capacious hand two of our number, as he lay ftretched on his back in the middle of the cave, he dashed them against the stones, and the bespattered pavement floated with their blood; I beheld, when he ground their members diffilling black gore, and their throbbing limbs quivered under Not with impunity, it is true; fuch barhis teeth. barity Ulyffes suffered not to pals unrevenged, nor was the prince of Ithaca wanting to himfelf in that eritical hour. For fo foon as the monfter, glutted with his inhuman blood, and buried in wine, repofed his reclined neck to reft, and lay at his enormous length a-Tong the cave, difgorging blood in his freep, and gobbets intermixed with gory wine; we, having implored the gods, and diffributed our feveral parts by lot, pour in upon him on all hands at once, and with our pointed javelins hore out the huge fingle eye which was funk under his louring front, likes a Grecian bockler, or the folar orb; and thus at length we joyfully avenge the manes of our friends. But fly, ah wretches ! fly, and tear the cables from the fhore. For fuch and fosvalt as Polyphemus pens in his hollow cave the fleecy flocks, and drains their dugs, a hundred other direful cyclops commonly haunt thefe winding fhores, and roam on the lofty mountains. The horned moon is now filling up her orb for the third time, while in these woods, among the defert dens and holds of wild beafts, I linger out my life, and defery from the rock the enormous cyclops, and quake at every found of their feet and voice The berries and ftony cornels, which the branches fupply, is my wretched fuffenance, and the herbs feed me with their plucked up roots. Cafting my eyes around on every object, this fleet I fpied first fleering to the shore; "To it I was refolved to give up myfelf, whatever it Óij

had been : It fuffices me, that I have escaped from that horrid crew. Do ye deftroy this life by any fort of death, rather than leave me to their mercy. Scarce . had he spoke, when on the summit of the mountain we fee the shepherd Polyphemus himself, stalking with his enormous bulk among his flocks, and making towards the fhore, his usual haunt : A horrible monfter, misshapen, vaft, of fight deprived. The trunk of a pine guides his hand, and firms his fleps. His fleecy fheep accompany him ; this his fole delight and the folace of his diffres: From his neck his whiftle hangs. After he touched the deep floods and arrived at the fea, he therewith walkes away the trickling gore from his quenched orb, gnashing his teeth with a groan : And now he falks through the midft of the fea, while the waves have not yet wet his gigantic fides. We, in hurrying confternation, haften our departure far from that fhore ; having received our suppliant, who thus merited our favour, we filently cut the cable, and, bending forward, fweep the fea with ftruggling oars. He perceived, and at the found turned his steps. But, when it is quite out of his power to reach us with his eager grasp, and himself unable in pursuing us to equal the Ionian waves, he raifes a prodigious yell, wherewith the fea and every wave deeply trembled, and Italy to its inmost bounds was frighted, and Ætna bellowed through its inmoft caverns. Meanwhile the race of the Cyclops, roufed from the woods and lofty mountains, rufh to the port, and crowd the fhore. We fee the Ætnean brothers flanding with their one eye, louring terrors on us in vain, bearing their heads aloft to heaven : a horrid affembly ! As when aerial oaks, or cone bearing cypreffes, Jove's lofty wood, or Diana's grove, together rear their towering tops. lent fear impells our crew to tack about to any quarter whatever, and spread their fails to any wind that would favour their escape. On the other hand, the commands of Helenus warn them not to continue their courfe between Scylla and Charybdis, a path which borders on death on either hand : Our refolution therefore is to fail backward. And lo! the north-wind commiffioned from the narrow feat of Pelorus, comes to our aid. I am wafted beyond the mouth of Pantatagia fringed with living rock, the bay of Megara, and low-lying Tapfus. These Achaemenides, the affociate of accurfed Ulyffes, pointed out to us, as backward he cruifed along those coasts, that were the scene of his former wanderings.

Before the Sicilian bay, outstretched lies an island opposite to rough Plemmyrium : The ancients called its name Ortygia. 'Tis faid, that Alpheus, a river of Elis, hath hither worked a fecret channel under the "fea: Which river disemboguing by thy mouth, O Arethusa, is now blended with the Sicilian waves. We venerate the great divinities of the place as commanded; and thence I pais the too luxuriant foil of overflowing Helorus. Hence we skim along the high cliffs, and prominent rocks of Pachynus, and at a diltance appears the lake Camarina, by fate forbid to be ever removed, the Geloian plains, and huge Gela, called by the name of the river. Next towering Agragas shews from far its stately walls, once the breeder of generous steeds, and thee, Silenus fruitful in palms, I leave by means of the given winds; and I trace my way through the shallows of Lilybeum, dangerous by reafon of many latent rocks. Hence the port, and unjoyous coaft of Drepanum receives me; Here, alas! after being toffed by fo many ftorms at fea, I lofe my fire Anchifes, my folace in every care and fuffering : Here thou, best of fathers. whom in vain, alas! I faved from fo great dangers, here thou forfakest me spent with toils. Neither prophetic Helenus, when he gave me many dreadful intimations, nor execrable Celæno, foretold me of this mournint ftroke. This was my finishing difaster, this the termination of my long tedious voyage. Parting hence, a god directed me to your coafts.

Thus father Æneas, while all fat filent, he the only fpeaker, recounted the definy allotted to him by the Gods, and gave a hiftory of his voyage. He cealed at length, and here, having finished his relation, retired to, reft.

O iij

AENEID.

BOOK FOURTH.

But long before his fpeech was done, the queen, pierced with love's painful dart's, feeds a wound in every vein, and confumes by flow degrees in flames unfeen. The many virtues of the hero, the many honours of his race, ftill to her thoughts by frequent flarts recur: His looks and words dwell fixed in her foul; nor does care allow one moment's undiffurbed reft to her weary limbs.

Returning Aurora now illuminated the earth with Phoebus's lamp, and had chaced away the dewy shades from the fky, when thus the love fick queen bespeaks her affectionate sympathizing fifter : Sifter Anna, what vifionary dreams terrify and diffract my mind? What think you of this wondrous guest now lodged within our walls ? In mien how graceful he appears ! In manly fortitude and warlike deeds how great, how God-like ! I am fully perfuaded (nor is my belief groundlefs) that he is the offspring of the gods. Fear argues a mind ignoble and degenerate. Ah ! by what fatal difasters has he been toffed ? What toils of war he fung, with invineible fortitude endured to the laft ! Had I not been fixed and itedfaft in my refolution, never to join myfelf to any in the bonds of wedlock, fince my first love by death hath mocked and difappointed my fond hopes of bappines: Had I not been fick of the marriage bed and nuptial torch, to this one frailty I might perhaps give way. Anna (for I will frankly own it) fince the deceafe of my unhappy fpoule Sichæus, what time the houshold gods were stained with his blood shed by a brother, he alone has warped my inclinations and made impression on my wavering mind : I feel the fymptons of my former flame. But sooner may earth from her centre open to swallow me up, or almighty father Jove hurl me by his thunder to the pale shades, the shades of Erebus, and deepest night, than I violate thee, O facred modefty ! or break thy laws. He who first linked me to himfelf, hath born away my heart, may he possels it ftill, and retain it in his grave. This faid, the filled her bofom with trickling tears Anna replies : O dearer to thy fifter than the light, and will you thus in mournful folitude waste all your bloom of youth, nor know the dear delights of children and joys of love : Think you cold ashes and the buried dead regard these your vows and promifes ? what though no lovers moved you before when your forrows were green, nor here in Libya, nor before in Tyre ? What though you flighted Iarbas and other princes whom Afric, fertile in triumphs, maintains ? Will you also refift the flame which you approve, nor once reflect in whofe country you now refide ? Here Getulian cities, a race invincible in war, fierce, untamed Numidians, and inhofpitable quickfands inclose you round : There a region by thirst into a defert turned, and the Barcæans, who ftretch their fury wide o'er the land. What need I mention the kindling wars from Tyre, and the menaces of your incenfed brother ? Sure it was by the aufpicious influence of the gods, and by the particular favour of Juno, the Troian ships steered their course to this our coast. Ο fifter, how flourishing shall you fee this city, how potent your kingdom rife from fuch a match ! By what high exploits shall-the Carthaginian glory be advanced, when the Trojan arms join your own ? Wherefore, be this your fole concern to supplicate the favour of the gods, and, having by facred rites rendered heaven propitious, freely indulge yourfelf in acts of hospitality, and devife one pretence after another for detaining your guest, while winter's fury rages on the fea, and Orion charged with rain; while his thips are thattered, and the air is intolerably fevere.

By this fpeech the fanned the fire of love kindled before in Dido's breaft, buoyed up her wavering mind with hope, and banished her modefty. First to the temple they repair, and by facrifice the peace of heaven implore : - 1'o Ceres the law-giver, to 1'hæbus, and to father Bacchus, they offer ewes of two years old, as the manner was : Above all, to Juno, whole province it is to bind the nuptial tie. The queen herfelf, in all her beauty, holding in her right hand the confectated chip, pours it between the horns of a white Heifer : Or before the images of the gods in folemin pomp around the loaded altars walks, renews one offering after another all the day long, and, prying into the difelosed breaks of the victims, confults their panting entrails. But ah'! the blind eredulity of augurs and diviners! what can prayers, what can temples avail a raging lover ? 'I'he gentle flame preys all the while upon her vitals, and the fecret wound festers in her brealt. Unhappy Dido burns, and frantie roves over all the town, like a wounded deer, whom, heedlefs of her fate, a fhepherd, purfuing with his darts, has pierced at a diffance among the Cretan woods, and in the wound left the winged fteel unknown : She flying bounds over the Dictaan woods and lawns : The fatal fhaft flicks in her fide. Now fhe conducts Eneas through the midd of her fortifications ; thews him both what treafores the had brought from Tyre, and all the magnificence of her new city : She begins to fpeak, and ftops fort in the middle of a word: Again, when day declines, longs to have the fame banquets renewed : And, fond even to madnefs, begs again to hear the' Trojan difafters, and again hangs on the fpeaker's lips. Now, when all were feverally retired, what time the fading moon in her alternate courfe withdraws her light, and the fetting flars invite to fleep, Dido mourns alone in the waste hall, presses the couch which Heneas had left; and in fancy hears and fees the absent hero; or, captivated with the fathet's image in the boy, hugs Afcanius in her bofom, if poffibly 'fhe may divert the unutterable pangs of love. Her begun towers ceafe to rife, her youth neglect their warlike exercifes, and to prepare ports and bulwarks of defence for war : The works and the huge battlements on the walls are discontinued, and the engines that mate the skies are idle and unemployed.

Whom when Joye's beloved wife perceived to be thus flung with the poilonous darts of Love, and that even fenfe of honour could not relift its rage, she thus artfully addresses Venus: Diftinguished praise, no doubt, and ample fpoils, you and your boy have won, high and fignal renown, if one poor woman is conquered by the wiles of you two deities. Nor am I quite ignorant, that you apprehend danger from thefe our walls, and view the ftructures of lofty Carthage with a jealous eye; but where will all this end? or what do we now propofe by fuch hot contention? Why do not we rather promote an eternal peace, and firm nuptial-contract? You have accomplifhed your whole foul's defire; Dido burns in the flames of love, and has fucked the fury into her bones: let us therefore rule this people in common, and fhew them equal favour; let Dido be at liberty to bind herfelf in wedlock to a Trojan lord, and into thy hand deliver over the Tyrians by way of dowry. To whom Venus (for the perceived that Juno fpoke in the craftinels and infincerity of her heart, with a defign to transfer the feat of empire from Italy to the Libyan coafts) thus in her turn began; Who can be fo abfurd to reject these terms, and rather choose to engage in war with you ? Would fortune but concur with the scheme which you lay down. But by reason of the decrees of heaven I am driven to an uncertainty, not knowing whether it be the will of Jupiter that the Tyrians and Trojans should dwell in one city, or if he will approve of the two nations being incorporated and joined in marriage league. You are his confort. To you it belongs by fuppliant address to work upon, or try to bend his mind. Lead you the way; I shall follow. Then imperial Juno thus replied : That task be mine : Mean while, mark my words, I will briefly fhew by what means our prefent defign may be accomplished. Æneas and unhappy Dido are preparing to go a hunting together in the forest, soon as to morrow's fun hath brought forth the early dawn, and enlightened the world with his returning beams. While the horfemen fcamper o'er the plain, and incluse the lawns with toils, I will pour on them from above a blackening florm of rain with mingled hail, and with peals of thunder make heaven's whole frame to shake. Their retinue shall fly different ways for shelter, and be covered with a dark night of clouds. Dido and the Trojan prince shall repair to the fame cave : There will I be prefent; and, if I have your firm confent, I will join them in the lafting bonds of wedlock, and confecrate her to be his fole property. This deed of mine Hymen himfelf shall ratify. Venus without any opposition agreed to her proposal, and fmiled at the fraud the difcovered.

Book III.

Mean while Aurora rifing left the Ocean. Soon as the beams of day that forth, the chosen youth illue through the gates : The wide nets, the toils, the broadpointed hunting fpears, the Maffilian horfemen, and a pack of quick-fcented hounds, pour forth together. Before the palace gate the Carthaginian nobles wait the queen lingering in her alcove : Her fleed richly caparifoned with purple and gold ready ftands, and fiercely. champs the foaming bit. At length the comes attended by a numerous retinue, having a mantle of Tyrian dye, fringed with gold and embroidery, thrown round her fnoulders : Her quiver was of gold ; her treffes tied in a golden knot ; a golden buckle binds up her purple robe. The Trojan youth too and sprightly lulus accompany the procession. Eneas himself, diffing listed in beauty from all the reft, mingles with the retinue, and adds his train to her's. As when Apollo, leaving Lycia, his winter feat, and the fireams of Xanthus, revifits his mother's ifland Delos, and renews the religious dances : The Cretans, Dryopes, and painted Agathyrfi, mingle their joyful acclamations around his altars : The god himfelf moves majeflic on Cynthus's tops, and adjulting his waving hair, crowns it with a foft wreath, and infolds it in gold ; his arrows rattle on his fhoulders." With no lefs manly active grace Eneas moved : Such comlines fhines forth in his matchles mien Soon as 'they reached the high mountains, and pathlels haunts of the lavage beafts; lo! from the lummit of the craggy cliff the wild goats dillodged fkip down the rocks : On the other fide, the flags fcour along the open plains, and flying thicken their mingled troops involved in clouds of duft, and forfake the mountains. Now the boy Afcanius exulting drives his fprightly courfer through the inclosed vales; and now these, now those outrides, and devoutly withes a foaming boar would erofs his way amidft the weak feeble flocks, or a tawny lion defeend from the mountain.

Meanwhile the air begins to be overturned with a loud roaring tempest; a deluge of rain with mingled hail fucceeds. And now here and there the Tyrian train. the Trojan youth, and Venus's grandchild of Dardanian line, for fear fought different shelters through the fields,; Whole rivers from the mountains came pouring down. Dido and the Trojan prince repair to the fame cave : Then first the earth, and Juno who prefides over marriage, gave the fignal : Lightnings flashed, the fky brightened as confcious of the alliance, and nymphs were heard to yell on the mountains tops. That day to Dido proved the fource of death, the fource of all her woes ; for now the is neither influenced by confcious worth, nor fense of fhame, nor is the now fludious to carry on clandeftine love ; what the bas done the openly avows, calls it marriage; the fcreened her guilt with that specious name.

Forthwith Fame through the populous cities of Libya runs : Fame, than whom no fiend more fwift, by exerting her agility fhe grows more active, and acquires new, strength by progressive motion; small at first through fear; foon the thoots up into the thies, falks upon the ground, while the hides her head among the clouds. Parent Earth, enraged by the vengeance of the gods on her gigantic race, produced her the young. est fister, as it is faid, of Cœus and Enceladus, swift to move with feet and perfevering wings : a monfter hideous and enormous; who (wondrous to relate!) for as many plumes as are in her body, numbers fo many wakeful eyes beneath, fo many tongues, fo many babbling mouths, pricks up fo many liftening ears. By night through the mid region of the air, and through the shades of earth, the flies buzzing, nor ever inclines her eyes to balmy, reft : Watchful by day the perches either on fome high houfe-top, or on lofty turrets, and fills mighty cities with difmay : As obstinately bent on falshood and iniquity as on reporting truth. She then with various rumours filled the people's ears, pleafed with her tak, and uttered fictions and matters of fact indifferently : As how one Æneas, fprung from Trojan blood, was arrived, whom Dido, with all her charms, vouchfafed to wed; that now in revelling between them two they enjoyed all the long winter, unmindful of their kingdoms, and enflaved by a bafe paffion.

With this news the cruel malignant goddefs fills the mouths of the people. To king Iarbas straight she turns her course ; inflames his foul by her rumours, and aggravates his rage. This Iarbas, begot by Ammon on Garamantis, a nymph whom he ravished, raifed to Jove a hundred spacious temples within his extensive realms, with as many altars : And there had he confecrated the wakeful fire, with a facred watch to keep eternal guard, a piece of ground fattened with victims blood, and the gates adorned with wreaths of various flowers. He, inflamed even to madnefs by the bitter tidings, is faid, as he flood before the altars in the awful prefence of the Gods, to have thus importunately addreffed Jupiter in fuppliant form with uplifted hands : Almighty Jove, to whom the Moorish race, feasting on . painted beds, now offers a libation of their choiceft wine, feeft thou thefe things? Or do we vainly tremble and adore thee, when thou, O father ! darteft thy thunderbolts? And are those lightnings in the clouds that terrify our minds blind and fortuitous? And are we difturbed by mere idle founds ? A wandering woman, who hath built in our dominions a small city on a spot she purchased; to whom we affigued a barren track of land for tillage, and imposed upon her the laws of the country, hath rejected our proffered match, and hath taken Æneas into her kingdom for her lord and husband. And now this other Paris, with his effeminate unmanly train, having his Lydian bonnet bound under the chin, and his locks bedewed with odours, even he enjoys the ravished prize : This we have deserved, because we bring offerings to thy temples, and pleafe ourfelves with the vain name of being thy offspring.

While in fuch haughty terms he adreffed his prayer, and grafped the altar, the Almighty heard, and turned his eyes towards the royal towers of Carthage, and the lovers regardless of their better fame. Then thus he bespeaks Mercury, and gives him these instructions: Hy quick, my fon; call the zephyrs, and on thy pinions glide : To the Trojan prince, who now loiters in Tyrian Carthage, nor regards the cities allotted to him by the fates, address yourself; and bear to him this my meffage fwiftly through the fkies. Not fuch a one fair Venus promised us in her són, nor was it for this the faved him twice from the Grecian fword : But a prince who should rule Italy, a land big with future empire, and fierce in war, who should evince his defcent from Teucer's noble blood, and bring the whole world under his fubjection. If he is not to be fired by the glory of fuch heroic deeds, nor will attempt any laborious enterprise for his own perfonal renown; can it confift with his paternal affection to envy Afcanius the glory of founding Rome's imperial towers ? What does he propose ? Or with what prospect lingers he fo long among an unfriendly race, nor once regards his future Aufonian offspring, and Lavinium's deftined fields? Bid him fet fail: No more be this our awful meffage.

Book IV.

He faid : The god prepared to give obedience to his high father's will : And first to his feet he binds his golden fandals; which by their wings waft him through the air fublime, whether over fea or land he foars, swift as the rapid gales. Next he takes his wand : With this he calls from hell pale ghofts, difpatches others to gloomy Tartarus, gives fleep, or takes it away, and opens the eyes which death had fealed. Aided by this, he manages the winds, on, whofe wings he flies, and fkims along the thick condensed clouds. And now in his flight he fpies the ' top and lofty fides of flinty Atlas, who with his fummit props the fky : Atlas, whofe head crowned with waving pines is always encircled with lowering clouds, and lashed with wind and rain : Large sheets of Snow enwrap his shoulders : From his aged chin headlong torrents roll, and ftiffening icicles hang from his grizly beard. Here first Cyllenius poiling himself on even. wings alighted; hence with the weight of his whole body he flings himfelf headlong to the floods ; like the fowl, which, hovering about the flores, about the fifty rocks, flies low near the furface of the feas : Just fo Maia's fon, shooting from his maternal grandfire between heaven and earth, fkimmed along the fandy fhore of Libya, and cut the winds. So foon as he touched the cottages of Afric with his winged feet, he views Eneas founding towers, and raising new structures : At his fide,'he wore a fword all fparkling like ftars, with gems of yellowish jasper; and a robe which glowed with Tyrian purple hung waving from his shoulders: Prefents which wealthy Dido had given him, and whole hands had interwove the varied fluff with threads of gold. Forthwith he tharply accosts him: Is it for you to walte these important moments in laying the foundations of stately Carthage, and the fond flave of a wife, raile a fair city for her ? Regardles, alas, of your own kingdom and nearest concerns? Know then, I am fent down to you from the bright etherial manfions by the fovereign of the Gods, who governs heaven and earth by his awful nod. That fame great being ordered me to bear these his instructions fwiftly through the air. What doft thou propose ! Or with what profpect doft thou wafte thy peaceful hours in the territories of Libya? If you are to be wrought upon by none of these fo glorious incentives, and will attempt no laborious enterprize for your own perfonal renown; yet have fome regard at leaft to the rifing Afcanius, and the hopes of thine heir Iulus ; for whom the kingdom of Italy and the Roman territories are deftined by fate. When thus the God had fpoke, he dropped his visionary human form in the midft of the conference, and far beyond the hero's fight vanished into thin air.

P

Meanwhile Ænças was by the vision flruck dumb, intranced in fear and wonder: His hair with horror flood on end, and his tongue cleaved to his jaws. He burns with impatience to be gone, and leave the dear inchanting land, awed by the thundering meffage and dread command of the Gods. But ah ! what can he do? In what terms can he now prefume to folicit the confent of the raving queen? With what words shall he introduce the ungrateful difcourfe ? And now this way, now that, he fwiftly turns his wavering mind, fnatches various purposes by ftarts, and rolls his fhifting foul on every fide. Thus fluctuating, he fixed on this refolution as the best : He calls to him Mnessheus, Sergeftus, and the brave Cloanthus : Bids them with filent care equip the fleet, fummon their focial bands to the shore, furnish themselves with arms, and artfully conceal the caufe of this fudden change: In the mean time, that he himfelf, while indulgent Dido was ignorant of what they were about, and had no apprehenfion that their loves fo well confirmed were to be diffolved, would explore the avenues to her heart, and watch the foftelt moments of address, what means may most conduce to their defign. With joyful fpeed they all obey their prince's commands, and put his orders in execution.

But the queen (who can deceive a lover ?) was before hand in perceiving the fraud, and the first who fpied their future motions, dreading danger even where all was fafe : The fame malignant fame conveyed the news to the frantic queen, that they were equipping the fleet, and preparing to fet fail. She rages even to madnefs, and, with foul inflamed, wildly roams through all the city; like a bacchanal wrought up into enthufiastic fury in celebrating the facred mysteries of her god, when the triennial Orgies flimulate her rage at hearing Bacchus's name, and the nocturnal howlings ou mount Cithæron invite her. At length in these chiding acculations the first accosts Æneas : And didft thou hope too, perfidious traitor, to be able by diffembling arts to conceal from me this thy wicked purpole, and fteal away in filence from my coafts ? Can neither our mutual love, nor thy once plighted faith, nor the prevention of Dido's cruel untimely death, detain thy flight? Nay, fuch is your impatience to leave me, that you rigg out your fleet even in the rigorous wintery feason, and haste to launch into the deep amidst the roaring north-winds : ah, barbarous man ! what excufe ' can you plead ? Suppofe you were not bound for a foreign land and fettlements unknown; fay old Troy was fill remaining; should you set fail even for Troy on this tempeftuous fea? But though there were no danger in the voyage ; yet, will you fly from me ? By thefe my flowing tears, by that plighted right-hand of thine, (fince I have left nothing elfe to myfelf now, a wretch forlorn), by our nuptial rites, by our conjugal loves just begun ; If I have deferved any thanks at thy hand, or if ever you faw any charm in me, pity, I implore thee a falling race, and, if yet there is any room for prayers, lay afide your cruel refolution. For thy fake have I incurred the hatred of the Libyan nations, of the Numidian princes, and made the Tyrians my enemies : For thy fake have I facrificed my honour, and, what alone raifed me to the ftars, my former fame: To whom doft thou abandon dying Dido, ah, cruch gueft ! fince, inftead of a hufband's endearing name only this remains? What wait I for? Is it till my brother Pygmalion lay this city of mine in afhes, or till Iarbas, the Geturian prince, carry me away his captive ? Had I but enjoyed offspring by thee before thy flight; had I young Encas to play in my hall, were it but to give me the image of your perfon and features, I should not indeed have thought myself quite a captive and forlorn. She faid : He, overawed by the commands of Jove, held his eyes unmoved, and with hard ftruggle suppressed the anxious passion in his heart : At length he briefly replies : That you, O bounteous queen, have conferred on me numerous obligations, which you may recount at large, I never shall difown : And I shall always remember Eliza with pleasure, while I have any remembrance of myself, while I have a foul to actuate these limbs. But to the point in debate 1 shall briefly speak: Believe me, I neither thought by flealth to have concealed from you this my flight, as you call it; nor can you charge me with breach of faith, fince I never coloured over our loves with the name of -lawful nuptials, nor came I hither to make fuch a con-Had the fates left me free to conduct my life tract. by my own direction, and cafe my cares by means of my own choosing; my first regards had been shewn to Troy and the dear relics of my conntry; Priam's lofty palace should now remain, and with this hand I had repaired the walls of Pergamus, raifed again from ruin. But now to famed Italy Apollo worfhipped at Grynæum, to Italy the Lycian oracles have commanded me to repair : This is now by necessity become the object of my love, this my country. If you, a Phœnician born, have lest your native home, and here fondly doat upon the towers of Carthage, and are captivated with the fight of a Libyan city, why need you be diffatisfied that we Trojans fettle in the land of Aufonia ? Let us too have the privilege to go in queft of foreign realms. -What time the night overfpreads the earth with humid fhades, what time the foarkling ftars arife, the pale troabled ghoft of my father Anchifes vifits me in my dreams, and with dreadful fummons urges my departure : My fon Afcanius calls me hence, and the injury done my darling boy, whom I defraud of the Hefperian ~ crown, and his deftined dominions. Nay more, even now the meffenger of the gods difpatched from Jove himfelf, (I call them both to witness) swift gliding through the air, bore to me his high commands : Myfelf beheld the god in confpicuous brightness entering your walls, and with thefe ears I received his voice. Cease then from tormenting yourfelf and me by your vair complaints : The Italian coafts 1 pursue, not out of choice, but forced by fate.

Thus while he fpeaks, the queen views him all along from the beginning with looks of diffafte and averfion, rolling her eyes hither and thither, and with filent glances furveys his whole perfon ; then thus, inflamed with wrath, breaks forth : Nor goddefs gave thee birth, perfidious monster ! nor is Dardanus the founder of thy race ; but frightful Caucafus on ragged flinty cliffs brought thee forth, and Hyrcanian tigers gave thee fuck : For why faould-I diffemble? Or for what greater injuries can I be referved? Did he fo much as figh in my deepest distress? Did he once move his eyes ? Did he, overcome with pity, fled a tear, or compaffionate me in the anguish of my love? Where shall I begin my complaint : Now, nor Juno, our mighty protectire/s, nor Joye himself, the common father of the world, confi-P iii

der these my wrongs with due regard. Firm faith no where fubfifts. I received him an outcaft on my fhores an indigent wretch ; and, fool that I was, fettled him in partnership of my crown : His shipwrecked fleet I renewed ; his friends from death 1 faved. Ah! I am all on fire ; I am distracted with fury to hear him thus impudently allege: " Now the prophetic voice of Apollo warns me away; now the Lycian lots, and now the meffenger of the gods, difpatched from Jove himfelf, through the air conveys to me the horrid mandate." A worthy employment, no doubt, for the powers above, a weighty concern to difturb them in their peaceful state. It were easy to confute you; but I neither detain you, por argue against what you have faid. Go, fpeed your way for Italy with the winds, purfue this kingdom of yours over the waves. I hope, however (if the juft gods have any power), thou shalt fuffer the punishment thy crimes deferved, by being shipwrecked on the intervening rocks, and there often call on injured Dido's name. I, though absent, will purfue thy mind like a fury, armed with black vengeful flames : And, when cold death shall diffever from the foul these limbs, my ghost shall haunt thee in every place : Vengeance, mifereant ! awaits thee : I shall hear it; even in the deep infernal shades these glad tidings shall reach me. With these words she breaks off in the middle of the conference, and, fickening, fhuns the light : Suddenly fhe turns about, and flings away out of the hero's fight, leaving him greatly perplexed through fear, and preparing to make a thousand apologies. Her maids lift her up, bear her fainting limbs into her marble bed-chamber, and gently lay her on the royal couch.

Meanwhile the pious prince, though by all folacing means he is folicitous to eafe her grief, and by foothing words to divert her anguifh, heaving many a figh, and ftaggered in his mind by the mighty power of love; yet he gives obedience to the commands of the god, and revifits his fleet. Then indeed, the Trojans intenfely ply their work, and launch the fhips all along the fhore. The pitchy keel now floats; through eager hafte to fail, they bring from the woods oars unftripped of leaves, and usfafhioned timber. You might have feen them removing to the fhore, and pouring from all quarters of the town: As when a fwarm of ants, mindful of approaching winter, plunder a large granary of corn, and hoard it up in their cell: the black battallion marches over the plains, and along the narrow track they convey their booty through the meadows; Some fhoving with their fhoulders, pufh forward the cumbrous grains; fome rally the ftraggling bands, and chaftife thofe that lag behind: the path all glows with the work.

Book IT.

Unhappy Dido, how wast thou then affected with fo fad a prospect ? What groans didst thou utter, when from thy lofty tower thou beheldeft the shore in its wide extent filled with buftling crouds, and faw full in thy view the whole watery plain refounding with fuch mingled fhouts of the departing crew. Imperious, unrelenting love, how irrefistable is thy fway over the minds of mortals! She is conftrained once more to have recourse to tears, once more to affail his heart by prayers, and in a suppliant firain to subject all the powers of her foul to love: Left, by leaving any means unattempted, fhe should throw away her life rashly, and without cause. Anna, thou feeft over all the shore how they are haftening to be gone ; The whole bands are drawn together : The hoisted canvas now invites the gales; and the joyful mariners have crowned their fterns with garlands. O fifter, had I been able to forefee this fatal blow, I could also have borne it .- And even as it is, I shall be able to bear it. Yet, my deares Anna, deny not this one request to thy wretched, de-[pairing fifter : For yon perfidious man made you the fole object of his effeem, and even intrusted you with the fecrets of his foul; you alone knew the fair occafions and foft approaches to his heart. Go, fifter, and in suppliant terms bespeak the haughty foe : I never confpired with the Greeks at Aulis to extirpate the Trojan race, nor fent a fleet to Troy : Nor did I difturb the ashes and manes of his father Anchifes. Why does he ftop his unrelenting ears to my words ? Whither does he fly? Let him grant but this laft favour to his unhappy, defpairing lover; to defer his flight till it be fafe, and till the winds blow fair. I plead no more the facred, venerable name of wedlock, which he has batrayed: Nor that he fhould deprive himfelf of fair Latium, and reliaquifh bis hopes of a kingdom. I afk but a few triffing infignificant moments; a fhort refpite and interval from diffracting pain, till, fubdued by fortune, I learn to fuftain my woes. This favour I implore as the laft, (pity thy fifter); which when he has granted, I fhall fend him away completely happy in my death.

. 175

To this effect the prayed ; and her fifter, deeply diftreffed on her account, bears once and again the mournful meffage to Aneas: But by none of her mournful meffages is he moved, nor liftens with calm regard to any expolulations. The fates fland in his way, and heaven renders him deaf to all intreaty. And as the Alpine north winds by violent blafts, now on this fide, now on that, ftrive with joint force to overturn a fturdy ancient oak ; its howlings pierce the fkies, and the leaves ftrow the ground in heaps, while the trunk bends to the shock : The tree itself cleaves fast to the rocks ; and as high as it fhoots up to the top in the etherial regions, fo deep it defcends with its root towards the Tartarean shade : Just so the hero on this side and that fide is plied with importunate remonstrances, and thence feels deep pangs in his mighty foul : But his mind remains unmoved; only a few vain, uteless tears roll down his cheeks.

Then, indeed, unhappy Dido, firsck to the heart by her untoward fate, longs for death; the loaths to view the canopy of heaven. The more to prompt her to execute her purpole, and part with the light of life, while the was prefenting her offerings upon the altar that fmoaked with incenfe, the beheld, horrid to relate! the facred liquors grow black, and the field wine turninto loathfome, inaufpicious blood. This vition the revealed to none, not even to her fifter Befides, there was in the palace a marble firine in bonour of her former hulband, to which the paid extraordinary veneration, baving it encircled with fnowy fillets of wool, and Book IV.

feftival garlands. Hence voices were heard, and the words of her husband calling her, feemed to found in her ears, when the darkfome night fbrouded the earth : And on the houfe-tops the folitary owl often complained in doleful ditty, and spun out his long notes in a mournful strain. Besides, many predictions of pious prophets terrify her with dreadful forebodings. Æneas himself, now stern and cruel, disturbs her raving fancy in her fleep : And still she feems to be abandoned in folitude, still to be going a long tedious journey, with no attendance, and to be in quest of her Tyrians in some defert country. As frantic Pentheus fecs troops of furies, two funs, and Thebes appear double : Or like Oreftes, Agamemnon's fon, with diffraction toffed on the flage, when he flies from his mother armed with fire brands and black fnakes, and the avenging furies are planted in the temple gate.

When, therefore, overpowered with grief, the had taken the furies into her breast, and determined on death; fhe ponders the time and manner with herfelf; and thus accofting her fifter, the partner of her grief, covers her intention in her looks, and puts on a ferene air of hope. Rejoice, O fifter, with a fifter; I have found an expedient which will either reftore him to me, or fet my love-fick foul at liberty from him. Nigh the extremity of the ocean, and the fetting fun, the utmost boundery of Æthiopia lies, where mighty Atlas on his shoulder whirls about the celestial globe, spangled with refulgent ftars : From hence appeared to me a priestefs of the Massylian nation, the gaurdian of the temple of the Hefperides, who fupplied the dragon with food, and watched the facred branches on the tree, infusing liquid honey and soporiferous poppy. She undertakes, by charms, to releafe any fouls whom the pleafes, from the power of love; and to entail on others a load of irkfome amorous cares : To ftop the courfe of rivers, and turn the flars backward: She fummons up ghofts by night : You shall fee the earth bellowing under her feet, and the wild afhes from the mountains at her command descend. Sifter dear, I call the gods, and you, and that fweet life of thine to witnefs, that it is againft my will I fet about these magic arts. Do you in secrecy creft a funeral-pile in the inner court under the open air, and lay upon it his arms, which he, impiously base, left fixed in my bed-chamber, with all his clothes, and the nuptial bed in which I was undone. The priesters orders and directs me to destroy every monument of that execrable man. Having thus faid, the ceases: At the fame time, paleness overcasts her whole complexion. Yet Anna never dreams that her fister palliates death under pretext of these unufual rites, nor once fuspects that the had formed fuch a despende at the death of Sichæus. Therefore the gets ready what things were ordered.

But the queen, fo toon as the vaft pile was erected under the open air in the inner court, confifting of torches and faggots of oak, encircles the ground with garlands, and crowns it with funeral-boughs : Upon the bed fhe lays his clothes, the fword he left, and his image, well knowing what was to happen. Altars are raifed around, and the priestefs, her hair dishevelled, with thundering voice, invokes three hundred gods, and Erobus and Chaos, and three-fold Hecate, virgin Diana's triple form. She sprinkled also water, counterfeiting that of the lake Avernus : Ripe, full-grown herbs, cut by moon light with brazen fickles, are fearched out, together with black poifonous juice ; The knots of love too, torn from the forehead of a new-foaled colt, and fnatched away from the mother, are fought out. The queen herfelf, now refolute on death, having one foot bare, and her robe ungirt, flanding by the altar, with the falt cake and pious hands, makes her last appeal to the gods, and the ftars confcious of her fate: Then, if any deity, just, and mindful of human affairs, regards lovers unequally yoked, him the invokes.

It was night, and weary bodies over the earth were enjoying peaceful repofe; the woods and raging feas were full: When the ftars roll in the middle of their gliding courfe; when every field is hufhed: The beafts, and fpeckled birds, both those that far and wide haunt the liquid lakes, and those that possible the fields with

Book. IV. rough bushes overgrown, all stretched under the mantle

of filent night, allayed their cares with fleep ; and every heart forgot its toil. Not fo the foul-diffreffed queen; not one moment is the lulled to reft, nor enjoys the bleffing of the night with eyes or mind : Her cares redouble ; and love again arifing rages afresh, and fluctuates with a high tide of tumultuous paffions. Thus then the perfifts, and revolves these fecret reflections in her breaft : What shall I do? Baffled as I am, shall I. in my turn, apply to my former fuitors ? Shall I humbly fue for a match with one of the Numidians, whom I have fo often difdained to wed? Shall I then attend the fleet of 1lium, and fubmit to the bafeft commands of the Trojans? And that, becaufe I am well rewarded for having lent them my affiftance, and their grateful hearts retain a just refentment of my former kind-But, grant I was willing, who will put it in my nefs. power, or receive into their proud thips me, the object of their hate ? Ah, undone Dido ! art thou unacquainted with, art thou still to learn the perfidiousness of Laomedon's race ? What then is to be done ? Shall I fteal away by myself to accompany the triumphant crew? Or, attended by my Tyrians, and all my people in a body, shall I purfue them, and again lead out to fea, and order those to spread their fails to the winds, whom, with much ado, I forced from Tyre? Nay, rather die, as you deferve; and end all your woes at once with the iword. You, fifter, melted down by my tears, you first oppressed my distracted mind with these woes, and exposed me to the mockery of this infulting enemy. Might I not have led an innocent unwedded life, like a favage of the field, and had nothing to do with fuch cares ? Alas ! I have violated the faith I plighted to the manes of Sichæus.

These heavy complaints she poured forth from her heart. Meanwhile Æneas, determined to depart, was enjoying fleep in his lofty ftern, all things being now got in readinefs. That divine form which he had feen before, returning with the fame afpect, appeared to him in his fleep, and thus again feemed to fummon him away; in every thing refembling Mercury, in voice, complexion, golden locks, and comely youthful limbs:

"Goddefs-born, can you indulge yourfelf in fleep at this conjuncture? Infatuated! not to fee what dangers in a moment hall befet thee; nor liften to the breathing of the friendly zephyrs! She, bent on death, is hatching guileful purpofes, horrid wickednefs in her breaft, and fluctuates with a tide of various paffions. Will you not fly hence with precipitation, while thus to fly is in your power?. Forthwith-you fhall behold the fea all in commotion with her oars, and torches fiercely blaze; forthwith the flore lighted up with flames, if the morning reach you lingering on thefe coafts, Come then, quick, break off delay: Woman is a fickle creature, and always changeable." This faid, her mingled with the fable night.

Then, indeed, Æneas, in dreadful confternation with this fudden apparition, fprings from his bed, and rouses up bis companions : Awake, my mates, in hafte, and plant yourfelves on the benches; quick, unfurl the fails : Lo, a God, difpatched from the high heavens, once more prompts me to haften my departure, and cut the twifted cables. We follow thee, O holy power, whoever thou art, and once more with joy obey thy commands; Ah, be prefent; lend us thy propitious aid, and light up friendly ftars in the heavens.' He faid, and fnatches his keen flashing fword from the sheath, and cuts the haulfers with the drawn steel. The fame cagernefs at once feizes them all ; they hale; they hurry away: And now they have quitted the fhore : The fea lies hid under the fleet ; they with exerted vigour vex the foaming billows, and fweep the azure deep.

And now Aurora, leaving Tithonus's faffron bed, first fowed the earth with new born light; foon as the queen from her watch towers marked the whitening dawn, the Trojan fleet fetting forward with balanced fails, and perceived the shore and vacant port without one rower; with repeated strokes beating her fair bofom, and tearing her golden locks, Oh, jopiter! shall he go? she fays: And shall the strangesting mock my kingdom? Will they not bring form arms, and purfue from all the city? And will not others tear my ships from the docks ? Run, quick, fetch flames, unfurl the fails, ply the oars. What am I faying ? or where am I ? What madness turns my brain ? Unhappy Dido! are you then at length flung with the fense of his foul impious deeds? Then it had become thee fo to act, when thou imparted ft to him thy fceptre. Is this the honour, the faith ! this the man who, they fay, carries with him his country's Gods ! who bore on his fhoulders his father fpent with age! Might I not have torn in pieces his mangled body, and ftrowed it on the waves ? Might I not with the fword have deftroyed his friends, Alcanius himfelf, and ferved him up for a banquet at his father's table ? but the fortune of the fight was dubious. Grant it had been fo : Thus refolute on death, whom had I to fear ? I might have hurled firebrands into his camp, filled the hatches with flames, extirpated the fon, the fire, with the whole race, and . flung myfelf upon the pile. Thou fun, who with thy flaming beams furveyeft all works on earth, and thou Juno, the interpreter of these my cares, and conscious to my wrongs ; Hecate, with howlings invoked through the cities in the crofs-ways by night, and ye avenging furies, and gods of dying Eliza, receive thefe my words, in justice to my wrongs, turn to me your divine regard, and hearken to my prayers. If it must be, and Jove's decrees fo require; if this be his fixed determination, that you, execrable traitor, reach the port, and get fafe to land ; yet perfecuted, at leaft, by war, and the hostilities of an audacious people, expelled his own territories, torn from the embraces of Iülus, may he fue to others for relief, and fee the ignominious deaths of his friends : And, after he shall have submitted to the terms of a difadvantageous peace, let him neither enjoy his crown, nor the wilhed for light of life; but die before his time, and lie unburied in the midft of the fandy fhore. Thefe are my prayers; thefe the last words I pour forth with my blood. You too, O Tyrians, with irreconcileable enmity, pursue his offspring and all his future race, and prefent those grateful offerings to my shade. Let no amity nor 0 leagues between the two nations fublift. Arife fome avenger from my afhes, who may perfecute those Trojan fugitives with fire and fword, now, hereafter, at whatever time power shall be given. Let them take this curfe from me, that their shores, their waves, their arms and ours, may still be opposed to one another; and may their posterity too, and ours, be still in war engaged.

She faid, and every way turned her fhifting foul; feeking, as foon as poffible, to bereave herfelf of the hated light. Then briefly thus fhe befpoke Barce, the nurfe of Sichzus; for the dark grave lodged her own in her ancient country: Dear nurfe, call hinder to me my fifter Anna; bid her make hafte to fprinkle her body with running water, and bring with her the victims, and the things for explation, of which I told her: Thus let her come: and you yourfelf cover your temples with a holy fillet. I have a mind to finifh the factifice begum with proper rites, which I have prepared for Jupiter Stygius, to put a period to my miferies, and commit to the flames the pile of the Trojan. She faid; the other quickened her pace with an old woman's officioufnefs.

But Dido, fearfully perplexed, and wildly outrageous, on account of her horrid purpofe, rolling her blood-red eye-balls, her throbbing cheeks ftreaked with fpots, and all pale with approaching death, burfts into the gates of the inner palace, in frantic diforder mounts the lofty pile, and unsheaths the Trojan sword; a prefent not provided for fuch purposes as these. Here, after she had viewed the Trojan vestments and the confcious bed, having wept and mufed a while, fhe threw her on the bed, and fpoke her laft words : Ye remains, so dear to me, while God and fate permitted, receive this foul, and fet me free from these my cares. I have lived, and finished the race which fortune gave me; and now my ghoft shall defcend illustrious to the shades below. I have raifed a glorious city ; have feen the walls of my own building ; have avenged my hufband, and punished an unnatural brother. Happy, ah too happy, had but the Trojan ships never touched my shores! She faid; and, preffing her lips to the bed, shall. I then die unrevenged? But let me die, she fays. Thus, thus with pleafure I defcend to the shades below. Let the cruel Trojan from the fea feed his eyes with these flames, and bear with him the ominous signs of my death. She faid; and while she spoke, her attendants faw her fallen on the sword, and the weapon distained with foaming gore, and her hands therewith besome and. The outcry is darted to the losty palace. Fame wildly flies through the alarmed city. The houses ring with lamentations, groans, and female yelling; and the sky resounds with loud so the invading enemy, were tumbling to the ground, and the furious flames were rolling over the tops of houses and temples.

Her fifter was ftruck to the heart at the news; and with trembling hafte, all aghaft, tearing her face with her nails, and beating her bofom with her fifts, rufhes through the midft of the crowd, and calls her dying fifter by her name : O fifter, was this then your meaning? did you practife thus to deceive me? was this what I had to look for from that pile, those fires and altars? Abandoned ! where shall I begin to complain? Did you difdain a fifter for your companion in death? Had you invited me to share the fame fate, one diftres and one hour had fnatched us both away by the fame fword. Was it for this I raifed that pile, with thefe very hands, and, with my voice, invoked our country's gods, that I should cruelly absent myself from you thus ftretched on the funeral pile? Ab fifter ! you have involved vourfelf and me, your people, our Tyrian princes, and your city, in one common ruin. Let me bathe her wounds with water, and catch with my mouth, if there be yet any ftraggling remains of breath about her lips. This faid, the mounted the high fteps, and in her bofom embracing, cherifhed her expiring fifter with deep fighs, and dried up the black blood with her robe. She, effaying to lift her eyes, again finks down. Thewound, deep fixed in her breaft, hiffes. Thrice, leaning on her elbow, she made an effort to raise herself up : Thrice the fell back on the bed, and with fwimming eyes sought the light of heaven; and having found it, heaved a deepening groan.

Qij

Then all powerful Juno, in pity to her lingering pain and uneafy death, fent down Iris from heaven, to feparate her ftruggling foul and united limbs: For, fince fhe neither fell by fate, nor by a deferved death, but unhappily died before her time, and flung with fudden rage, Proferpina had not yet cropped the yellow hair from the crown of her head, and condemned her to Stygian Pluto. Therefore dewy Iris, drawing a thoufand various colours from the oppofite fun, fhoots downward through the fky on faffron wings, and alighted on her head: I by command bear away this hair, facred to Pluto, and difengage you from that body. She faid, and cut the lock with her right hand: at once all the vital heat was extinguifhed, and life vanifhed into air.

BOOK FIFTH.

MEANWHILE Æneas, unalterably refolved, was now got into the full fea, and cut the blackening billows before the wind, looking back to the walls which now glare with the flames of unfortunate Eliza. What caufe may have kindled fuch a blaze is unknown; but the thoughts of those cruel agonies that arise from violent love when injured, and the knowledge of what frantic outrageous woman can do, lead the minds of the Trojans into difmal conjectures. As foon as their ships were got into the main fea, and no more land appears, fky and ocean all around, a dark leaden coloured watery cloud flood over his head, bringing on night and ftorm ; and the waves were begrimmed with horrid darknefs. The pilot Palinurus himfelf from the lofty ftern exclaims; Ah ! why have fuch threatening clouds invested the sky ! or what, O father Neptune, hast thou in view? Thus having fpoke, he next commands to furl the fails, and ply the flurdy oars; the bellying canvas he turns afkance to the wind; and thus addreffes Æneas: Magnanimous Æneas, should Jupiter on his authority affure me, I could not hope to reach Italy in this weather. The winds changed, roar in our back fail, and rife from the louring weft; and the whole air is condenfed into cloud. We are neither able to ftruggle against the florm, nor make any progress: Since fortune overpowers us, let us follow her, and turn our courfe where the invites us. The trufty thores of your brother Eryx, and the Sicilian ports, I deem not far off; if I but rightly remembering review the stars I observed before. Then the pious hero: I indeed have observed long ago, that the winds urge us to this, and that your contrary efforts are in vain. Shift your courfe by turning the fails. Can any land be more welcome to me, or where I would fooner choofe to put in my weather-beaten fhips, than that which preferves for me Trojan Aceftes, and in its , womb contains the bones of my father Anchifes ? This faid, they make towards the port, and the prosperous zephyrs itretch the fails. The fleet fwiftly rides on the flood; and at length the joyous crew are wafted to the well-known strand. But Acestes, from a mountain's lofty fummit, ftruck with the diftant prospect of our arrival, and knowing our friendly ships, comes up to us, roughly arrayed with javelins, and the hide of an African bear; whom, begotten by the river Crinifus, a Trojan mother bore. He, not unmindful of his original, congratulates with us on our fafe arrival, and cheerfully entertains us with rude magnificence, and refreshes us after our fatigue with friendly hospitable . cheer.

When with the early dawn the enfuing day up rifingbright had chafed away the ftars, Æneas fummons to council his followers from all the fhore; and from the fummit of a rifing ground thus addreffes them : Illustrious Trojans, whole defeent is from the blood of the gods, the annual circle is completed by a full revolution of months, fince we lodged in the earth the relics and bones of my god-like fire, and confectated tos

Q iij.

him the altars of mourning. And now the day, if I mistake not, is at hand, which I shall always account a day of forrow, always a day to be honoured : Such, ye gods, has been your pleafure. Were I to pass this day in exile among the quicklands of Getula, or caught on the Grecian fea, and in the city of Mycene, yet would I regularly perform my annual vows, and the folemn funeral proceffions, and heap the altars with their proper offerings. Now, without premeditated defign, though not, I judge, without the direction, not without the influence of the gods, we are come to the ashes and bones of my own dear father, and are wasted. to this friendly port we are now entering. Come then, and let us all celebrate the joyous rites. Let us pray to him for prosperous winds; and that, when our city is. built, he will permit me to offer to him these rites annually in temples confectated to his honour. Aceftes, a fon of Troy, gives you two oxen for each thip : Invite to the feaft your houshold and country's gods, and those whom our host Acestes worships. Further, if the ninth morning shall bring forth the day fair and ferene to mortals, and brighten up the world with itsbeams, I will propose to the Trojans the first trial of skill to be with the swiftest of their ships. And whoever excells in running, in ftrength who boldly dares, or is fuperior in darting the javelin, and fhooting the nimble arrow, or who has courage to encounter with the bloody gauntlet; let all fuch be ready at hand, and expect prizes of victory fuitable to their merit. Join your aufpicious voices all, and encircle your temples. with boughs.

This faid, he crowns his temples with his mother's myrtle. The fame does Helymus; the fame does Aceftes ripened in years; the fame the boy Afcanius; whofe example the other youths follow. He went from the affembly to the tomb with many thousands, in the centre of a numerous retinue attending. Here in due form, by way of libation, he pours on the ground to Bacchus two bowls of wine, two of new milk, two of facred blood, then fcatters purple flowers, and thus speaks: Hail, holy fire: Once more, hail ye aftes revisited in vain : Ye ghosts and shades of my father hail. Heaven would not allow us to go together in queft of Italy, and the lands allotted to me by fate, nor the Aufonian Tyber, whatever river that is. He faid : when from the bottom of the fhrine a flippery fnake, his huge bulk collected in feven circling fpires, trailing along his feven fold volumes, gently twining round the tomb, and gliding over the altars ; whole back, azure ftreaks, and whole fcales drops of burnished gold. brightened up : As the bow in the clouds draws a thousand various colours from the opposite fun. Æneas flood amazed at the fight, At length the reptile, shooting forward a long train of moving folds between the bowls, and fmooth polifhed goblets, gently tafted the banquet, re-entered into the bottom of the tomb, and left the altars on which he had fed. Æneas with the more zeal purfues the facrifice begun in honour of his father, in doubt whether to think it the genius of the place, or the attendant of his father. He facrifices. five ewes of two years old according to cuftom, as many fows, as many bullocks with fable backs : The wine he poured from the goblets, and invoked the foul of. great Anchifes, and his ghoft from Acheron releafed. In like manner his mates offer gifts with joy, each according to his ability; they load the altars and facrifice bullocks. Others, in order place the brazen cauldrons, and ftretched along the grafs, apply burning coals under the fpits, and roast the joints.

Now the wished for day approached, and the fleeds of the fun ushered in the ninth morning bright and ferene: Fame and the renown of illustrious Acestes had drawn together the neighbourhood. They filled the shores with jovial crowds, fome to see the Trojans, fome too prepared to try their skill. The prizes first are set before their eyes in the midst of the oircus, facred tripods, green garlands and palms, the reward of the conquerors; arms and vestments of purple dye, talents of gold and filver: And now the trumpet from the midst of the rising ground gives the fignal that the games are begun.

Four ships selected from all the fleet, equally matched with ponderous oars, first enter the lists. Mnestheus manages the fwift failing Priftis with flout rowers, foon to be the Italian Mnessheus, from which name the family of Memmius is derived. Gyas commands the huge Chimera of flupendous bulk ; a work like a city, which with a triple tire the Trojan youth impel. The oars rife together in a triple row. Sergestus from whom the Sergean family has its name, rides in the bulky Centaur; and Cloanthus in the fea-green Scylla; from whom Cluentius, illustrious Roman, is thy defcents Ear in the fea there lies a rock opposite to the foaming thore, which fometimes overwhelmed is buffeted by the fwelling furges, when the wintery north west winds overcloud the stars : in a calm fea it lies hushed, and rifes above the still wave as a plain, and affords a delightful station for the cormorants basking in the func Here father Æneas erected a verdant goal of branching oak for a fignal to the mariners; whence they might know to turn back, and whence to wind about the long circuits. Then they choose their places by lot; and in the lofty decks the leaders, adorned with gold and purple, fhine with diftinguished luftre from afar ... The reft of the youth are crowned with poplar. wreaths, and glitter, having their naked shoulders befmeared with oil. They take their feats on the benches, and firetch their arms to the oars : With eager attention they wait the fignal, and their throbbinghearts beat high with the impulse of fear, and the generous thirft of praife. Then as foon as the loud trumpet gave the fignal, in a trice all flarted from their barrier : The feamen's clamour beats the fkies : And the feas up-turned by the force of their in-bent arms,foam. At once they plough the watery waves; and the whole deep, convulled with oars, and trident beaks. Not with fuch violent fpeed the courfers in the twoyoked chariot-race fpring to the field, and ftart with full career from the goal : Nor with fuch ardour do the charioteers shake the waving reins over the flying fteeds, and, bending forward, hang to give the lafh. Then, with the applause and uproar of the seamen, and.

the eager acclamations of the favouring croud, every neighbouring grove refounds: The bounded shores roll the floating voices ; the lashed hills echo back the found. Amidit the buftle and uproar, Gyas flies out before the reft, and fouds away the foremost on the waves : whom next Cloanthus follows, a more skilful rower ; but the veffel encumbered by its bulk, retards him. After thefe, at equal diftance, the Priftis and Centaur strive to gain the foremost place. And now the Priftis has it, now the huge Centaur gets before her vanquifhed antagonift : Anon, both advance together with united fronts, and with their long keels plough the briny waves. And now they approached the rock, and had reached the goal, when Gyas the foremost, and hitherto victorious, thus in mid-fea accosts Menœtes, pilot of his fhip : Whither away fo far to the right? This way fleer your courfe. Keep to the shore, and let the oar graze upon the rocks to the left; let others ftand out to fea. He faid : But Menœtes, dreading the latent rocks, turns out his prow towards the waves. Gyas with raifed voice called to him again; Menœtes, whither are you fteering fo opposite? Once more, I fay, keep to the rocks; and lo he fpies Cloanthus preffing on his rear, and fetching a nearer compais. He, between Gyas's ship and the roaring rocks, brushes along the left-hand path on the infide, and on a fudden gets a-head of him who was before, and leaving the goal, gains the fafe feas. Then indeed the foul of the youth was inflamed with vaft anguish : Nor were his cheeks not wet with tears : and, regardlefs. both of his own dignity, and the fafety of his friends, he tumbles daftardly Menœtes headlong from the lofty ftern into the fea. Himfelf fucceeds to the helm, both pilot and commander, encourages his men, and turns the rudder to the shore. But when incumbered Menætes, with difficulty at length, had got up from the deep bottom, as being now in years, and languid by reason of his wet garments, he crawls up to the summit of the rock, and fat down on the dry cliff. The Trojans laughed both to fee him fall, and to fee him fwimming; and they renew their laughter, when from his breaft he vomits up the briny wave. Here Sergestus and Mnhesteus, the two last, were fired with - joyous hope to outitrip Gyas lagging behind. Sergeftus gets the flart, and makes up to the rock, nor yet had he the advantage by the whole length of the ship, only by a part : The rival Priftis partly preffes him with her beak. But Mnhefteus in the mid deck walking among his crew, animates them : My Hectorean bands, whom I chofe affociates in Troy's last fatal hour, now, now with keennefs ply your oars : Now exert that vigour, now that greatness of foul which you were masters of in the quick fands of Getulia, in the Ionian fea, and Malea's coaft, where waves fucceeding waves purfued us. Your Mnhesteus afpires not now to the foremost place, nor contends for the victory: Though would to heaven! but may those conquer to whom thou, O Neptune, haft given that honour. Let us be ashamed to come in the laft. Surmount, my countrymen, and repel that criminal difgrace. They bend to the oar with the greateft ardour : the brazen-beaked galley trembles with the vaft ftrokes, and the watery furface from underneath them flies. Then thick panting shakes their limbs and parched jaws : Sweat flows from every pore in rivulets. Mere chance procured them the wished for honour; for, while Segeftus between Mnhefteus, and the goal in his furious career is preffing up the head of the thip to the rocks, and fleers in a difadvantageous place, he unluckily fluck among the jutting rocks. The cliffs receive a violent shock, and among the sharp craggy points the labouring oars with a crack were fhivered and the prow dashed against the rocks flood suspended. The mariners arife together, and with great clamour defift, and apply booms flod with iron, and poles with fharpened points, and gather up their fhattered oars on the ftream. Meanwhile Mnhesteus, flushed with joy, and more animated by this fame fuccefs, with the nimble impulse of the oars, and winds called to its aid, cuts the eafy waves, and fouds away on the open fea. As a pigeon, whole neft and darling young are in some harbouring rock, fuddenly roufed from her covert, flies away into the fields, and, flarting in a fright, gives a loud clap with her wings against the nest; then, shooting through the calm still air, skims along the liquid way, nor once moves her nimble pinions. Thus Mneftheus, thus the Priftis felf in her career cuts the utmost boundary of the watry plain : Thus the mere vehemence of her motion carries her forward in her flying courfe. And first she leaves behind her Sergestus ftruggling against the high rock and shallows, in vain imploring aid, and practifing to row with fhattered oars. Then he overtakes Gyas, and bulky Chimæra's felf : She yields, because she wants her pilot. And now, in the very end of the course, Cloanthus alone is before him : Whom he makes up to, and, firaining with the utmost vigour, purfues. Then, indeed, the fhouts redouble, and all the spectators, with hearty applauses, ftimulate him in the pursuit, and the sky refounds with roaring acclamations. Thefe indignation fires, left they should not maintain their possession of glory, and the honour they have won, and they are willing to barter life for praife. Those fuccess animates; they are enabled to exert themfelves, becaufe they are confident of their own power: And, perhaps, they had both been equally entitled to the prize, had not Cloanthus, stretching out his hands to the fea, poured forth prayers and invoked the Gods in form of a vow : Ye Gods, to whom belongs the empire of the main, whole feas I fail, I, bound by vow, will cheerfully prefent before your altars a fnow-white bull on this fhore, and prefent the entrails on the briny wave as an offering to you, and pour out pure wine by way of libation. He faid : and the whole choir of Nereids and Phorcus's train, and the virgin Panopea heard him from the bottom of the waves, and father Portunus himfelf with his ample hand, pushed on the gally in her course : She flies to land fwifter than the wind or winged arrow, and lodged herfelf in the harbour's deep recefs. Then Anchifes's fon, having affembled all in form, proclaims Cloanthus conqueror, by the loud voice of the herald, and crowns his temples with verdant laurel; gives him the choice of three bullocks defigned

Digitized by Google

Book V.

for prefents to the three victorious gallies, and gives him wine to carry away with him, and a great talent of filver. On the leaders themfelves he confers peculiar honours. To the conqueror a mantle embroidered with gold, round which a thick fringe of Melibean purple run in a double maze, and where the royal boy Ganymede inwoven purfues, with darts and full career, the fleet ftags on woody Ida, eager, feeming to pant for breath; whom Jove's fwift armour bearer, with his crooked talons fnatched aloft from Ida. The aged keepers in vain ftretch out their hands to the ftars, and the baying of the dogs rages to the skies. Next to him, who by his merit won the fecond place, he gives to wear a coat of mail thick fet with fmooth polifhed rings, and wrought in gold with triple tiffue, which his own victorious hands had torn from Demoleus, by rapid Simois, under lofty Ilium; he gives it to be his ornament and defence in war The fervants Phegeus and Sagaris, with united force, fcarce bore the cumbrous armour on their fhoulders : But Demoleus, formerly clad therein, chaced before him the ftraggling !'rojans. For the third prefent he beftows two kettles of brass; and two filver bowls of finished work, and rough with figures. And thus now all rewarded, and flushed with their wealth, walked in proceffion, having their temples bound with fcarlet fillets : When Sergeftus hardly with much art difentangled from the cruel rock, with the lefs of her oars, and in one tire quite difabled, brought up his howied galley without honour. As often a ferpent furprized in the highway, (which a brazen wheel hath croffed athwart, or a traveller, lending his weight at every ftroke, hath left half dead and mangled with ftones), attempting in vain to fly, shoots his body in long wreaths; in one part fierce, darting fire from his eyes, and rearing aloft his hifting neck; the other part, maimed with the wound, retards him, twifting his body in knots, and winding himfelf up in his own limbs. With fuch kind theerage the thip flow moved along : Her fails however the expands, and enters the port with full fail. Æneas gladly confers on Sergeftus the promiled reward for preferving the veffel, and bringing the crew fafe back. To him is given a female flave not unskilful in the works of Minerva, Pholoe, a Cretan by extraction, with her two children on the breaft. This game being over, the pious hero advances to a grafiy plain, which woods on winding hills inclosed around. And in the mid-valley was the circuit of a theatre, whither the hero, in the midst of many thousands repaired, and took his feat in the affembly raifed high. Here he offers inviting rewards, to those who chance to be inclined to enter the lifts in the rapid race, and exhibits the prizes. The Trojans and Sicilians in mingled throngs convene from every quarter; Nifus, and Euryalus the first. Eryalus diftinguished for his lovely form, and freih blooming youth ; Nifus, for his terder affection to the boy : Whom next Diores followed, a royal youth of Priam's illustrious line. After him Salius, and with him Patron; of whom the one was an Acarnanian, the other from Arcadia, of the blood of the Tegean race. Next two Sicilian youths, Elymus and Panopes, trained to the woods, the companions of aged Aceftes. Many more befides, whom fame hath buried in obscurity. In midft of whom thus then Aneas fpoke : Mark thefe my words, and attend with joy: None of this throng shall go unrewarded by me. Two bright Cnoffian darts of polifhed fleel, and a carved battle-ax of filver I will give each man to bear away. This honour shall be conferred equally on all. The three first shall receive prizes, and shall have their heads bound with a w.eath of yellow olive. Let the first conqueror have a steed adorned with rich trappings: The fecond on Amazonian quiver fraught with Thracian arrows, which a broad belt of gold around embraces, and a buckle clafps with a tapering diamond. Let the third content himfelf with this Grecian helmet. When he had thus faid, they take each his place, and, upon hearing the fignal, flart in a trice, and quit the barrier, darting forward like a tempeft : At the fame time they mark the goal. Nifus gets the flart, and fprings away far before the reit, outflying the winds and winged lightning. Next to him, but though next, yet widely diftant, follows Salius : Then after him Euryalus, with fome fpace left between them. And Elymus follows Euryalus; clofe by whole fide, lo next Diores flies, and now juftles heel with heel, preffing on his shoulder; and, had more stages remained, he had skipped away before him, or left the victory dubious. And now they were almost in the utmost bound, and breathlefs were approaching towards the very goal; when unhappy Nifus flides in a flippery puddle of blood, as by chance it had been fhed upon the ground from victims flain, and foaked the verdant grafs. Here the youth, already flushed with the joy of victory, could not fupport his tottering fteps on the ground he trod, but tumbled headlong in that fame obscene filth and facred gore. But he was not then forgetful of Euryalus, nor of their mutual loves; for, as he role from the flippery mire, he opposed himself to Salius : He again tumbling backward, lay at his length on the tough clammy fand. Euryalus fprings forward, and victorious by the kindness of his friend, holds the foremost place, and flies with favouring applaufe and acclamation. Elymus comes in next, and Diores, now entitled to the third prize. Here Salius deafens the whole affembly of the ample pit, and the fronting fathers with loud expostulations, and demands the prize to be given to himfelf, from whom it was inatched away by unfair means. The favour of the spectators befriend Euryalis, and his graceful tears, and virtue that appears more lovely in fo comely a perfon. Diores aids him, and exclaims with bawling voice; who fucceeded to a prize and had a claim to the last reward in vain, if the first honours be given to Salius. Then father Æneas: Your rewards, fays he, brave youths, ftand fixed, and none shall turn the prize out of its due course : Give me leave to compassionate the difaster of my innocent friend. This faid, he gives to Salius the huge hide of a Getulian lion, ponderous with fhaggy fur and gilded claws : Upon this Nifus : If to the vanquished, fays he, such rewards be given, and your pity extends to those that fell, what gifts are due to Nifus? To me who by my merit won the first prize; had not the fame unkind fortune which bore Salius down overpowered me. And with these words he at the fame time shewed his face and limbs with oozy filth bedaubed. The best of princes smiled upon him, and ordered the buckler to be produced, Didymaon's ingenious work, which had been torn down by the Greeks, from the facred posts of Neptune's temple. With this fignal present he rewards the illustrious youth.

R

Next, when the race was finished, and the prizes diftributed : Now, fays he, whoever he be, in whofe breaft courage and refolution dwells, let him fland forth and raife aloft his arms, having his hands with gauntlets bound. He faid, and propofes a double prize for the combat : To the conqueror a bullock decked with gold and fillets ; a fword and fhining helmet, the folace of the vanquished. Instant, without delay, Dares shews his face and strengh prodigious, and rears himself amidst the loud murmurs of the spectators: He who alone was wont to enter the lifts with Paris : The fame, at the tomb where mighty Hector lies, ftruck down victorious Butes, of gigantic make, who boafted his defcent from the race of Amycus, king of Bebrycia, and ftretched him gasping on the yellow fand. Such Dares uprears his lofty head first in the lists, and prefents his broad shoulders, and in alternate throws brandishes his arms around, and beats the air with his fifts. For him a match is fought : Nor dares one of all that numerous crowd look him in the face and draw the gauntlets on his hands. Flushed therefore with joy, and imaginingall had quitted pretenfion to the prize, he flood before Æneas's feet ; and then, without farther delay, with his left hand he feizes the bull by the horn, and thus speaks : Goddels born, if none dares venture himself to the combat, where will be the end of thus hang. ing on ? how long muft I be detained ? Order the prefents to be brought. At the fame time all the Trojans murmured their confent, and ordered the promifed prizes to be delivered to him. Then venerable Aceftes thus chides Entellus, as he fat next him on the verdant graffy couch : Entellus, in vain reputed the flouteit of champions once, will you then fuffer prizes of fuch value to be carried off thus uncontefted ? Where is now that god of ours, Eryx, who you in vain gave out to be your master ? Where is your fame fo celebrated through all Trinacria, and those spoils hanging from your roof? He to this replies : It is not that my thirst of praise is gone, nor ny fense of honour by fear extinguished : But my frozen blood languishes through enfeebling age, and the strength worn out in my body is benumbed. Did I but now enjoy that youth which once I had, and wherein that varlet triumphs with vain confidence, then would I have taken the field. not indeed induced by the tempting prize of this fair bullock : Nor regard I rewards. Thus having fpoke, he then throws into the middle two gauntlets of huge weight ; wherewith fierce Eryx was wont to arm for the fight, and brace his arms with the flubborn hide. Amazement feized their minds, to fee feven huge folds of vaft oxen fliffening with lead and iron fewed within. Above all Dares himfelf stands aghast, and utterly declines the combat. And the magnanimous fon of Anchifes this way, and that way, poifes the weight and complicated folds of the gauntlets. Then the aged champion thus adreffed himfelf to the hero : What if any of you had feen the gauntlets and arms of Hercules himfelf, and the bloody combat on this very fhore? These arms your brother Eryx formerly wore. You fee them yet flained with blood and spattered brains. With these he flood against Alcides : With these I was wont to combat, while better blood fupplied me with ftrength, nor envious age as yet had fowed my temples with grey hairs. But if Trojan Dares decline thefe our arms, and if the pious Æneas is fo determined, and Aceftes, who prompts me to the fight, likewife approve, let us be equally matched : To oblige you, I lay afide the weapons of Eryx; difmils your fears, and do you put off your Trojan gauntlets. This faid, he flung from his shoulders his double vest, and bared his large finewy limbs, his big bones and arms, and flood forth in his huge dimensions on the middle of the field. Then father Æneas, the fon of Anchifes, brought forth eequal gauntlets, and bound both their hands with equal arms. Forthwith each on his tiptoes flood erect, and undaunted raifed his arms aloft in air. Far from the blow they backward withdrew their towering heads: Now hand to hand they join in close encounter, and provoke the fight. The one having the advantage in agility of foot, and relying on his youth; the other furpaffing in limbs and bulk : But his feeble knees fink under his trembling body : The thick pantings of age and decayed lungs shake his vast frame. The heroes deal many blows to one another with erring aim, and many they on the hollow fides redouble; from their breafts the thumps refound aloud, and round their ears and temples thick ftrokes at random fly : Their jaws crackle under the heavy blows. Entellus stands stiff and unmoved in the fame firm posture, only with his body and watchful eyes evades the ftrokes. The other, as one who belieges a lofty city with batteries, or under arms round befets a fort on a hill, explores now thefe, now those approaches, and artfully traverses the whole ground, and purfues his attack with various affaults, fill baffled. Entellus, riging to a ftroke, extended his ... arm, and lifted it on high : The other nimbly forefaw the blow defcending from above, and with agility of body hifting, flipped from under it. Entellus spent his forces on the wind; and, both by the force of his own natural weight, and the violence of the motion, falls to the ground of himfelf with his vaft ponderous bulk : As sometimes on Erymanthus or spacious Ida, a hollow pine torn from the roots tumbles down at once. The Trojans and Sicilian youth rife together with different affections : Their acclamations pierce the fkies, and Acelles first advances in halte, and in pity raifes from the ground his friend of equal age. But the hero, not difabled nor daunted by his fall, returns to the combat more fierce, and indignation roules his mettle : Then shame and confcious worth fet all the powers of his foul on fire : And now inflamed he drives Dares headlong over the whole plain, redoubling blows on blows, fometimes with the right-hand, fometimes with the left. No ftop, no ftay : As thick showers of hail come rattling down on the houfe tops; fo with thick repeated blows the hero thumps Dares with either hand, and toffes him hither and thither. Then father Æneas fuffered not their fury longer to exert itfelf, nor Entellus to rage with fuch fierce animolity, but put a period to the combat, and refcued Dares quite overpowered, foothing him with foft address, and befpeaks him in these terms : Unhappy ! what strong infatuation posseffed your mind ! Are you not sensible of his having foreign affiftance, and that the gods have changed fides ? Yield to the deity. He faid, and by his word decided the combat. As for Dares, his trufty companions conduct him to the fhips, dragging his feeble limbs, and toffing his head to either fide, difgorging from his throat clotted gore, and teeth mingled with his blood; and, at Æneas's call, they take the helmet and fword; but leave the palm and bull to Entellus. At this the conqueror, in foul elated, and proud of his prize, fays : Goddels-born, and ye Troians, hence know both what ftrength I have had in my youthful limbs, and from what imminent death you have faved Dares. He faid, and flood against the front of the opposite bull that was fet for the prize of the combat, and, rearing himfelf up, with his right-hand drawn back, levelled the cruel gauntlet directly between the horns, and, battering the skull, drove through the bones. Down drops the ox, and in the pangs of death, falls fprawling to the ground. Then over him he utters thele words : This life, more acceptable, O Eryx, I give thee in exchange for Dares's death : Here victorious I refign the gauntlets with my art.

Rij

Book V.

Rij

Æneas forthwith invites fuch as may be willing to try their skill in fbooting the swift arrow, and sets the prizes in their view; and with his mighty hand raises a mast taken from Serestue's ship, and from the high mast hangs a fluttering dove by a rope thrust 'through the mass, at which they may aim their shafts. The competitors assemble, and a brazen helmet received the shuffled lots. The lot of Hippocoons Hyrtacus's son, comes out the first of all with favouring shouts: Whom follows Mnhefteus lately victorious in the naval ftrife; Mnhefteus, crowned with a green olive wreath. The third is Eurytion, thy brother, illustrious Pandarus, who, once urged by Minerva to violate the treaty, first hurled thy dart into the midst of the Greeks, Aceftes remained the laft, and in the bottom of the helmet; he too adventuring with his aged hand to effay the feats of youth. Then with manly force they bend their pliant bows, each according to his ability, and draw forth their arrows from their quivers. And first the arrow of young Hyrtacus's fon, /het through the fky from the whizzing ftring, cleaves the fleeting air, reaches the mark, and fixes in the wood of the opposite mail. The mast quivered, and the frighted bird, by fluttering its wings, shewed figns of fear; and all quarters ring with loud applaufe. Next keen Mnhesteus stood with his bent bow, aiming on high, and directed his eye and arrow both together. But it was his misfortune not to be able to hit the bird itself with his shaft; but he burft the cords and hempen ligaments to which it hung tied by the foot from the high maft. She with winged fpeed fhot into the air and dusky clouds. Then Eurytion in eager hafte, having his arrow long before extended on the ready bow, poured forth a vow to his brother Eurytion, as he now beheld the joyful dove in the void fky, and pierced her under a dark cloud, as the was clapping her wings. She dropped down dead, left her life among the flars of heaven, and falling to the ground, brings back the arrow fastened in the wound. Aceftes alone remained after the prize is loft; who, notwithstanding, discharged his shaft into the aerial regions, fetting to shew both his address and twanging. bow. Here is prefented to our view a prodigy unexpected, and defigned to be of high portent; this the important event afterwards declared, and the alarming foothfayers predicted the omens late : For the arrow, flying among the watery clouds, took fire, and with the flames marked out a path, till, being quite conjumed, it vanished into thin air : As often stars, loofened

ŕ

from the firmament, fhoot across the fky, and flying, draw after them a fiery train. The Sicilians and Trojans flood fixed in aftonishment, and poured out prayers to the gods : Nor does great Æneas reject the omen ; but embracing Aceftes, overjoyed loads him with ample rewards, and thus befpeaks him : accept thefe, venerable prince; for the great fovereign of heaven, by thefe omens, has fignified his will, that you receive the honour of the victory, though out of courfe. This gift, which belonged to aged Anchifes's felf, you shall enjoy, a bowl imboffed with figures, which Thracian Ciffeus formerly gave for a magnificent prefent to my fire, as a monument and pledge of his love. This faid, he crowns his temples with verdant laurel, and in view of all pronounces Aceftes the first conqueror. Nor does good Eurytion envy him the preference in honour, though he alone ftruck down the bird from the exalted fky. The next prize is given to him who broke the cords : The last is be who pierced the mast with his winged fhaft.

But father Æneas, the games not being yet ended, calls to him the fon of Epytus, young Iulus's guardian and companion, and thus whifpers in his trufty ear : Go quick, fays he, bid Alcanius (if he has now got ready his company of boys, and put himself and them in array for the cavalcade) bring up his troops, and shew himself in arms to do his grandfire honour. The bero himself orders the crouds to remove from the extended cirgue, and the field to be cleared. The boys advance in proceffion, and uniformly fhine on managed fteeds, full in their parents fight : In admiration of whom, as they march on, the whole Trojan and Trinacrian youth join their acclamations. All, in due form, had their hair preffed with a trim garland: they bear two cornel spears, pointed with steel, and some have light quivers on their shoulders : a pliant circle of wreathed gold goes from the upper part of their breafts abont their necks. Three troops of horfemen, and three leaders, range over 'the plain : twelve ftriplings folloss each, fhine in a feparate body, and with commanders equally matched. One band of youths, young

Priam, bearing his grandfire's name, leads triumphant; thy illustrious offspring, O Polites, who shall one day do honour to the Italians, whom a Thracian courfer bears, dappled with grey fpots; the fetlocks of his foremost feet are white; and, toffing his head high, he difplays a ftarry front. The fecond is Atys, from whom the Attii of Rome have derived their origin. Little Atys, a boy beloved by the boy lülus. lülus the last, and in beauty distinguished from all the rest, rode on a Sidonian steed, which fair Dido had given him as a monument and pledge of her love. The reft of the youths ride on Trinacrian horfes of aged Aceftes. The Trojans, with shouts of applause, receive them, anxious for honour, and are well pleafed with the fight, and trace the features of the aged fires in the children. Now when the joyous youths had rode round the whole ring, and full in their parents view, Epytus's fon, from far, gave them the fignal with a shout, as they flood ready, and clanked with his lafh. They break away in pairs; and the three leaders divided their troops into feparate bands; and again, upon fummons given, they wheeled about, and bore their hofile Ipears on one another. Then they again advance, and again retreat in their oppofite grounds, and alternately form intricate orbs within orbs, and exhibit the reprefentation of a fight in arms : And now, flying, expose their defenceless backs; now in hoftile manner turn their darts on one another: Now, peace made up, ride on together. As of old, in lofty Crete, the labyrinth is famed for having had a winding alley, framed by dark intricate walls, and a puzzling maze, perplexed by a thousand avenues, whereby the fteps should still be loft in wandering and inextricable error. In just fuch mazy courfe, the fons of the Trojans involve their motions, and frame promifcuous ; fighting and flying in fport; like dolphine, that fwimming through the watery abyfs, cut the Carpathian or Lybian fea, and gambol amid the waves. This manner of tilting, and those mock fights, Afcanius first renewed, and taught the ancient Latins to celebrate, when he was inclosing Alba Longa with walls: As the boy himfelf, as the

Trojan youth with him had practifed them; fo the Albans taught their posterity : Hence, in after times, imperial Rome received them, and preferved the fame in honour of her anceftors; and at this day it is called the game of Troy, and the boys that perform it, the Trojan band. Thus far the trials of skill were exhibited by Eneas in honour of his venerable fire. Here fhifting fortune first turned treacherous and unkind. While they are celebrating the anniverfary at the tomb with various games, Saturnian Juno difpatched Iris from heaven to the Trojan fleet; and with the fanning winds fpeeds her way, forming many mischievous plots, and her old revenge not yet glutted. The virgin goddels accelerating her way, feen to none, amidit the bow with a thouland colours, fhoots down the path with nimble eafy motion. 7 She descries the vast concourse at the games : Then, furveying the fhore, fees the port deserted, and the fleet left desenceles : But at a difance, the Trojan dames apart were mourning the lofs of Anchifes on the defolate shore, and all of them, with tears in their eyes, viewed the deep ocean. Ah, that fo many perils, and fuch a length of fea, fhould ftill remain for us after all our toils! was the fole complaint of all. They pray for fome city, are fick of enduring the hardships of the main. Therefore, she, not unpractifed in mischief, throws herself into the midst of them, and lays alide the mien and habit of a god-She affumes the figure of Beroe, the aged wife defs. of Thracian Doryclus, who was nobly born, and once had renown, and an illustrious offspring; and thus she joins in difcourfe with the Trojan matrons : Ah ! how hard is our lot, that were not dragged forth to die in the war by the Grecian hoft under our native walls ! Ill fated race ! for what miferable doom are you referved by fortune? The feventh fummer from the deftruction of Troy is already rolled away; while we, having meafured all lands and feas, visited fo many inhospitable rocks and barbarous climes, are driven about; while along the wide ocean we purfue Italy, that flies from us, and are toffed on the waves. Here are the realms of his brother Eryx, and his friend

Buck V.

Aceftes : what hinders him to found walls, and give his fubjects here a city ? Ah my country, and our gods, in vain faved from the enemy; shall a city never more arife to be named from Troy ? Shall I never fee the Hectorean rivers Xanthas and Simois? Nay, rather come, and burn with me our curfed fhips. For in my fleep I faw the ghoft of the prophetels Caffandra prefent me with flaming brands : Here, fays she, feek for Troy, here is your fixed refidence : Now is the time for action. Nor let us delay after fuch awful figns from heaven: Lo, here are four altars to Neptune; the God himself spirits us to the enterprize, and supplies us with firebrands to put it in execution. With thefe words, fhe violently fnatches the deftroying fire, and, lifting up her right hand with exerted force, first waves at a diftance, then throws it. Rouzed' are the minds, and funned the hearts of the Trojan matrons. Then one of the number, Pyrgo, the most advanced in years, the royal nurse to Priam's numerous fons : Matrons, this is not Beroe whom you fee, it is not the from the Rheteum, the wife of Doryclus : Mark here the characters of divine beauty, eyes bright and fparkling; what fragrance in her breath, what majefy in her looks; or mark the accents of her voice, or her gait as the moves. Myfelf lately, as I came hither, left Beroe fick, in great anguish that she alone was cut off from such a solemnity, and was not to pay the honours due to Anchifes. She faid. But the matrons first began to view the fhips with malignant eyes, dubious and wavering between their wretched fondness for the present land, and the realms to which they were by fate invited ; when on equal poifed wings the goddefs mounted into the sky, and, in her flight, cut the spacious bow beneath the clouds. Then, indeed, thunderstruck with the prodigy, and feized with madnefs, they fhriek out together, and fnatch the flames from the hallowed heaths. Some rifle the altars, and fling boughs, and fapplings, and brands together. The conflagration rages with uncontroulable fury amidft the rowers feats and oars, and painted fterns of fir. Eumelus conveys the tidings to Anchifes's tomb, and to the benches of the theatre, that the fhips were burnt; and they themfelves behold the sparks of fire flying up in a pitchy cloud. And first Afcanius, as joyous he led the cavalcade, just as he was with full fpeed rode up to the troubled camp : Nor is it in the power of his guardians, half dead for fear, to check him. What ftrange frenzy this ? Whither, he cries, ah, my wreached countrywomen, whither would you now? 'Tis not the enemy, nor the hoftile camp of the Greeks, but your own hopes ye burn : Here am I, your own Afcanius : Then he flung at their feet the empty helmet, which he wore in exhibiting the images of war in fport. At the fame time Æneas and the whole bands of the Trojans come up in hafte. But the matrons for fear fly different ways up and down the fhore, and fkulking repair to the woods and hollow rocks wherever they may be concealed." They loath their horrid deed; they loath the light; and now penitent confess their friends, and Juno is dislodged from their breafts. But the flames and conflagration did not therefore abate their ungovernable fury. The fmouldring tow lives under the moillened boards, difgorging tardy languid imoke ; the imothered fire flow confumes the keel, and the contagious ruin fpreads through the whole body of the veffel. Neither the utmost efforts of the heroes nor injected rivers avail. Then pious Æneas tore his robe from his shoulders, and invoked the gods to his aid, and ftretched out bis hands: Almighty Jove, if thou doft not yet abhor all the Trojans to a man, if aught thy ancient goodnefs regards human disafters ; grant now, O Father, our fleet may escape from these flames, and fave from defolation the flate of the Trojans thus low reduced. Or, to complete thy vengeance, hurl me down to the realms of death with thy vindictive thunder, if I fo deferve, and crush me here with thy right hand. Scarce had he fpoke these words, when a black tempest of burfting rains rages with uncommon fury, both hills and vallies quake with thunder: The shower descending in turbid rain, and condenfed into pitchy darkness by the thick beating fouth winds, pours down from the whole atmosphere. The ships are filled from above; the half-burnt boards are drenched, till the whole finoke is even tinguished, and all the ships, with the loss only of four, are faved from the fiery pelt.

203

But father Æneas, ftruck with the fevere misfortune, turned his deeply anxious thoughts now this way, now that, pondering with himfelf whether he fhould fettle in the territories of Sicily, regardlefs of the kingdom allotted to him by fate, or fleer his course to the Italian coaft. Then aged Nautes, whom Tritonian Pallas fingularly taught, and rendered illustrious for deep penetration, gave forth these responses, intimating what either the high difpleafure of the gods portended, or what the feries of the fates required : And thus folacing Æneas, begins : Goddefs born, let us follow the dictates of heaven, whether they invite us backward or forward: Come what will, every fortune is to be furmounted by patience. You have Trojan Accftes of divine original : Admit him the partner of your counfels, and unite yourfelf to him your willing friend : To him deliver up fuch as are fupernumerary, now that you have loft fome thips; those who are fick of the great enterprize, and of your fortune; the old with length of years oppreffed, and the matrons fatigued with the voyage; felect all the feeble in your crew, and fuch as dread the danger, and, fince they are tired out, let them have a fettlement in these territories: They shall call the city Acesta by a licensed name.

Then indeed Æneas, fired by thefe words of his aged friend, is diftracted in his mind amidft a thoufand cares. Now fable night, mounted on her chariot with two horfes, poffeffed the heavens; when the fhape of his father Anchifes, gliding down from the fkies, fuddenly feemed to pour forth thefe words: Son, once dearer to me than life, while life remained; my fon, feverely tried by the fates of Troy; hither I come by the command of Jove, who averted the fire from your feet, and at length fhewed pity towards you from high heaven. Comply with the excellent counfel which aged Nautes now offers: Carry with you to Italy the choice of the youths, the flouteft hearts : In Lati-um you have to fubdue a hardy race, and rugged in their manners. But firft, my fon, visit Pluto's infernal manfions, and, in queft of an interview with me, crofs the deep floods of Avernus : For not accurfed Tartarus, nor dreary ghofts, have me in their poffef-, fion ; but I inhabit the delightful feats of the bleft, and Elyfium : Hither the chafte Sibyl shall conduct thee, after shedding a great quantity of black victims blood. Then you shall learn your whole progeny, and what fettlements are affigned to you. And now farewel ; humid night wheels about her mid-course, and the dawning light, which fiercely fummons me away, hath breathed upon me with panting fleeds. He faid, and vanished like fmoke into the fleeting air. Whither fo precipitant, fays then Æneas, whither doft thou whirl away? Whom flieft thou? or who debars thee from my embraces? So faying, he awakes the embers and dormant fire, and suppliant pays veneration to his Trojan domeftic god, and hoary Vefta's fhrine, with a holy cake and cenfer full of incenfe. Forthwith he calls his followers, and firft of all Aceftes, and informs them of love's command, and the instructions of his beloved fire, and of the prefent fettled purpose of his foul. No obstruction is given to his resolution ; nor is Aceftes averfe to the propofals made to him. They fingle out the matrons for the city, and fet ashore as many of the people as were willing, fouls that had no. desire of high renown. Themselves renew the benches, and repair the boards half confumed by the flames; fit oars and cables to the fhips ; in number inconfiderable, but of animated valour for war.

S

Meanwhile Æneas marked out a city with the plough, and affigns the houfes by lot: Here he orders a fecond llium to arife, their places to be called after those of Troy. Trojan Acestes rejoices in his new kingdom; inftitutes a court of judicature; and, having affembled his fenators, dispenses laws to his fubjects. Then on the top of mount Eryx, a temple approaching the stars, is raised to Idalian Venus, and a priest is affigned to Anchifes's tomb, with a grove hallowed far and wide. And now the whole people had kept the feftival for nine days, and facrifices had been offered on the altars, when peaceful breezes finooth the feas, and the fouth-wind in repeated whifpering gales invites-into the deep. Loud lamentations along the winding fhores arife : In mutual embraces they linger out both night and day. Even the timorous matrons and those to whom the face of the fea feemed lately grim and horrid, and its divinity intolerably fevere, even they would willingly go, and fubmit to all the toil of the voyage. Whom good Æneas in friendly terms folaces, and weeping recommends to his kinfman Aceftes. Then he orders to facrifice to Eyrx three calves, and a ewe lamb to the tempetts ; and to weigh anchor after the due rites were performed. The hero himfelf, having his head bound with a trim garland of olive leaves, ftanding on the extremity of the prow, holds the confecrated cup, and prefents the entrails on the briny waves, an offering to the fea goa's, and pours the limpid wine. A wind arising from the ftern, accompanies them in their course. The crew with emulous vigour lash the sea, and brush its smooth furface.

Meanwhile Venus, harraffed with cares, bespeaks Neptune, and pours forth these complaints from her breaft : Juno's cruel refentment and unfatiable malice compel me, O Neptune, to descend to all intreaties; Juno, whom neither length of time, nor any piety loftens; nor is the quelled and fubdued to peace, even by Jove's imperial fway, or by the fates. She is not fatisfied to have confumed the city from among the Phrygian race by her mercilefs rage, nor to have dragged its relics through all forts of fuffering : She perfecutes the ashes and bones of ruined Troy. The causes of such furious resentment are to her best known. Yourfelf can witnefs for me, what a heaving tempeft fhe fuddenly raifed of late on the Libyan waves. The whole feas the blended in confusion with the fky, vainly relying on Æolus's ftorms ; thus prefuming on your realms. Lo alfo (O wickedness!) by acting on the Trojan matrons, fhe hath fhamefully burnt the fhips, and forced their friends, now that Sй

they have loft their fleet, to abandon them in a land obscure and unknown. As to what remains, may they be allowed, I pray, to fail over the waves fecure by thy protection: May they be allowed to reach Laurentian Tyber; if I alk what may be granted; if the definies affign to them those fettlements. Then the imperial ruler of the deep ocean thus replied : Bright Cytherea, it is highly equitable that you confide in my realms, whence you derive your birth. Befides, I have a just claim to your confidence : For often, in favour of your fon, have I checked the furious rage and maddening tumult of fea and fky. Nor was I careful of your Æncas on earth (1 call Xanthus and Simois to witnefs), when Achilles, purfuing the troops of Troy, fainting and breathlefs, dashed them against their walls, gave many thousands a prey to death, and the choaked np rivers groaned, and Xanthus could not find his way, nor difembogue himfelf into the fea : Then in a hollow cloud I foatched away Æneas, encountering the mighty Achilles with ftrength and gods unequal; though I was defirous to overthrow from the lowest foundation the walls of perjured Troy, which my hands had reared. And still I continue in the fame disposition : Therefore banish your fear ; he shall arrive fafe at the port of Avernus, which you defire. Of one only loft in the deep shall he bereaved : One life shall be given for many. The father of the floods, having by thefe words foothed and cheered the heart of the goddefs, yokes his fleeds to the vehicle of gold, puts the foaming bit into their fierce mouths, - and throws up all the reins. Then along the furface of the feas he nimbly glides in his azure carr. The waves fublide, and the fwelling ocean fmooths its liquid pavement under the thundering axle : The clouds fly off the face of the expanded fky. Then appear the various forms of his retinue, unwieldywhales', and aged Glaucus's train, and Palæmon, Ino's fon, the fwift Tritons, and Phorcus's whole band, On the left, Thetis, Melite, and the virgin Panopea, Nefæe, Spio, Thalia, and Cymodoce. Upon this foft joys in their turn diffuse themselves through the anxious foul of father Æneas. Forthwith be orders all the mafts to be fet up, and the yards to be ftretched along the fails. At once they all tug the haulfers, and together unfurl fometimes the left hand fheets, fometimes the right. At once they turn the high extremities of the fail-yards, fometimes to the oue fide, fometimes to the other : Friendly gales waft the fleet forward. Palinurus the mafter-pilot, led the clofely united fquadron : Towards him the reft were ordered to fleer their courfe.

And now the dewy night had almost reached the middle of her courfe ; the weary failors, ftretched along the hard benches, under the oars relaxed their limbs in peaceful repose ; when the god of fleep, gliding down from the etherial flars, parted the dufky air, and difpelled the shades; to you, O Palinurus, directing his courfe, vifiting you, though innocent, with difmal dreams : And the god took his feat on the lofty ftern, in the fimilitude of Phorbas, and poured forth thefe words : Palinurus, fon of lafius, the feas themfelves carry forward the fleet; the gales blow fair and fleady; the hour for reft is given you. Recline your head, and tteal your weary eyes from labour. Myfelf a while will discharge your duty. To whom Palinurus, with difficulty lifting up his eyes, answers : Would you then have me a ilranger-to the face of the fea fmiling as it now appears, and its waves thus fill and calm? Shall I confide in this monfter ? For why shall I truft Æneas to the mercy of the fallacious winds, and that after having been to often deceived by the treacherous a'pect of a ferene fky ? Thefe words he uttered, while, fixed and clinging, he never parted with the rudder, and held his eyes directed to the flars ; when lo the god fhakes over both his temples a branch drenched in the dew of Lethe, and impregnated with a foporific Stygian quality; and, while he is dallying with fleep, diffolves his fwimming eyes. Scarce had foft flumber, stealing on him by furprize, relaxed his first limbs, when the god incumbent on him, with part of the ftern broke off, together with the helm, plunged him into the cryftal waves headlong, and often calling on hit S iii friends in vain. Then taking flight raifed himfelf on his wings aloft into the thin air. Meanwhile the fleet runs its watery courfe on the liquid plain with equal fecurity, and, fearlefs, is conducted by virtue of father Neptune's promises. And now, wafted forward, it was even coming up to the rocks of the Sirens, once of difficult access, and white with the bones of many subom they had drawn to fuffer shipwreck (at that time the hoarse rocks resounded far by the continual buffeting of the briny waves), when father Æneas, perceived the fluctuating galley to reel, having loft its pilot, and he himfelf ficered her through the darkened waves, deeply affected and wounded in his foul for the misfortune of his friend : " Ah, Palinurus, fays he, who haft too much confided in the fair afpect of the fkies and fea ! naked and unburied shall you lie on an unknown barbareus coaft !"

BOOK SIXTH.

THUS he fpeaks with tears in his eyes, and gives his thip full fail, and at length he makes the Eubean coaft of Cumz. They turn their prows out to the fea; then the anchor with its tenacious fluke moored the fhips, and the winding fterns line the margin of the fhore: The youthful crew fprings forth with ardour on the Helperian strand: Some explore the feeds of fire latent in the veins of flint : Some plunder the copfes, the close retreat of wild beafts, and point out rivers newly discovered. But the pious Æneas repairs to the towers over which exalted Apollo prefides, and to the ample dreary cave, the cell of the Sibyl awful at a diftance; whose great mind and foul the prophetic god of Delos infpires, and discloses to her futurity. Now they enter Diana's groves, and Apollo's golden roofs. Dzdalus, as is famed, flying the realms of Minos, adventuring to commit himfelf to the fky on nimble wings, failed aloft in air through an untried path to the cold regions of the north, and at length gently alighted on the tower of Chalcis. Having landed first on those coasts, to thee, O Phoebus, he confecrated his oary wings, and reared a huge temple. On the gates was represented the death of Andregeos: Then the Athenians doomed, as an atonement for their crime, a piteous cafe ! to pay the yearly tribute of feven of their children ; there ftands the urn whence the lots were drawn : In counterview answers the land of Crete raifed above the fea : Here is feen Pafiphae's fierce paffion for the bull, and she by artifice humbled to his embrace; and the minotaur, that mingled birth, and two formed offsprings, all monuments of execrable lust : Here is feen the laboured work of the labyrinth, and the inextricable mazes. But Dædalus, pitying the violent love of the princess Ariadne, unravels to Thefeus the intricacies and winding alleys of the ftructure, himfelf guiding his dark mazy fteps by a thread. You too, O Icarus, should have bore a considerable part in that great work, had but the father's grief per-Twice he effayed to figure the difastrous ftomitted. ry in gold; twice the parent's hand mifgave him. And now the Trojans would furvey the whole work in order, were not Achates fent before by Eneus just at hand, and with him the priesters of Phoebus and Diana, Deiphobe, Glaucus's daughter, who thus befpeaks the king : This hour admits not to be fpent in thefe amusements. At prefent it will be more fuitable to facrifice feven bullocks from a herd untouched with the yoke, and as many chofen ewes with usual rites. The priestess having thus addressed Æneas (nor are they backward to obey her facred orders) fummons the Trojans into the lofty temple. The huge fide of an Eubœan rock is cut out into a cave, whither an hundred broad avenues lead, an hundred doors; whence rush forth as many voices, the responses of the Sibyl. They had come to the entry of the cave, when thus the virgin Now is the time to confult your fate : The god, lo the god, the cries. While thus before the gate the fpeaks, on a fudden het looks change ; her colour comes and goes ; her locks are diffievelled ; her breaft heaves; and her fiercely untoward heart fwells with enthusiastie rage : she appears in a larger and more majeftic form, her voice speaking her not a mortal, now that the is infpired with the nearer influence of the God. Do you delay, Trojan Æneas, she fays, do you delay to pour forth vows and prayers? Inftantly begin ; for not till then shall the ample gates of this manfion where the god thunders with his voice, expand their jaws : And having thus faid, the ceafed. Shivering horror ran thrilling cold through the Trojans, and penetrated even to their hard and folid bones. Prince Eneas pours forth these prayers from the bottom of his heart : Great Apollo, always disposed to pity the grievous calamities of Troy, who guided the Trojan darts and the hand of Paris to the body of Achilles; under thy conduct I have entered fo many feas encompassing extensive countries, and the Massylian kingdoms far remote, and regions whole frontiers are guarded by quickfands. Now, after all our toils, we are in poffession of the coasts of Italy that flies from us. Let it fuffice that the fortune of Troy has perfecuted us thus far. Now it is but equity that you too spare the Trojan race, ye gods and goddeffes all, to whom Ilium and the high renown of Dardania was obnoxious. And thou most holy prophetels, skilled in futurity, grant (for I ask no realms but what are deftined to me by fate) that the Trojans, their wandering gods, and the perfecuted deities of Troy, may fettle in Latium. Then will I appoint to Phoebus and Diana a temple of folid marble, and festival days, called by the name of Apollo. Thee too a fpacious fanctuary awaits in our realms. For there, propitious maid, I will deposit thy oracles, and the fecret fates declared to my nation, and will confectate chosen men for thy fervice. Only commit not thy prophetic verfes to leaves, left they fly about in diforder, the fport of the rapid winds. I beg you yourfelf will pronounce them. He ended his address. But the prophetes, as yet impatient under the influence of Phœbus, raves with wild outrage in the cave, ftruggling, if poffible, to disburden her soul of the mighty God. So much the more he curbs and haraffes her wildly rebellious jaws, fubduing her ferocious heart, and by bearing down her opposition forms, and makes her pliable. And now the hundred spacious gates of the dome expanded of their own accord, and give forth these responses into the open air : O thou who haft at length overpaft the vaft perils of the ocean ! yet feverer trials by land await thee. The Trojans shall come to the realms of Lavinium; difmifs that concern from your break; but they shall wish too they had never come thither. Wars, horrid wars I fee, and Tyber foaming with a deluge of blood. Neither Simois nor Xanthus, nor Grecian camps shall be wanting to you there. Another Achilles is prepared for thee in Latium, he too the fon of a goddefs. Nor shall Juno, the appointed fcourge of the Trojans, leave them wherever they are: While in your distress, which of the Italian states, which of its cities shall you not humbly supplicate for aid ! Once more shall a confort, a hostefs, once more shall a foreign match be the cause of fo great calamity to the Trojans. Sink not under the weight of your fufferings, but encounter them with the greater fortitude the more that fortune shall oppose you. What you least expect, your first means of deliverance shall arife from a Grecian city. Thus from her holy cell the Cumæan Sibyl delivers her awfully myfterious oracles, and wrapping up truth in obscurity, bellows in her cave: With fuch rigour Apollo shakes the reins over her as she wildly rages, and deep in her breaft exerts his ftimulating power. So foon as her fury ceafed, and her maddening tongue was filent, the hero Æneas begins: To me, O virgin, no shape of fufferings can arife new or unexpected. I have anticipated all the ills of life, and acted them over before-hand in my mind. My fole requeft is (fince here the gate of the infernal king is faid to be, and the dark fome lake arifing from the overflowing of Acheron) that I may be fo happy as to come into the fight and prefence of my dear father: That you would fhew the way, and open to me the facred avenues. On these shoulders I refcued him through flames, and a thousand darts purfuing, and faved him from the midst of the enemy. He accompanied my path, attended me in all my voyages; and, though weak and infirm, bore all the terrors both of the fea and fky, beyond what the power and condition of old age can bear. Nay more, he it was that earneftly requested and enjoined me to come to thee a fuppliant, and visit thy temple, propitious virgin; pity, I pray, the fon and the fire: For thy power is unlimited; nor hath Hecate in vain given thee charge of the Avernian groves. If Orpheus had power to recal to light his confort's ghoft, affifted by his Thracian harp and harmonious ftrings : If Pollux redeemed his brother Caffor by alternate death, and goes and comes this way fo often : What need I mention Thefeus, or great Alcides? I too derive my birth as well as they from love supreme. In these terms he prayed, and held the altar, when thus the prophetels began to speak : Offspring of the gods, Trojan prince, fon of Anchifes, eafy is the path that leads down to hell; grim Pluto's gate stands open night and day : But to reascend, and escape from thence to the upper regions ; this is a work, this a tafk indeed : Some few, whom favouring Jove did love, or illustrious virtue advanced to heaven, the fons of the gods effected it. Woods cover all the fpace that lies between, and Cocytus gliding with his black winding flood furrounds. But if your foul be poffeffed with fo ftrong a love, fo ardent a defire, twice to fail aerofs the Stygian lake, twice to vifit gloomy Tartarus; and you will needs fondly purfue the defperate enterprize ; learn what first is to be done. On a tree of deepening shade there lies concealed a bough, with leaves and limber twigs of gold, facred pronounced to infernal Juno: This the whole grove covers, and fhades in dark vallies inclose. But to none is it given to enter the hidden receffes of the earth, till from the tree he pluck the bough with its golden locks. Fair Proferpine hath ordained this to be prefented to her as her peculiar prefent: When the first is torn off, a second likewile of gold soon succeeds, and a new twig shoots forth leaves of the same metal.

Therefore fearch for it with eyes erect, and when found, pluck it with the band as becomes : For if the fates invite you, itfelf will come away fpontaneous and eafy : otherwife it will not be in your power to mafter it by any natural ftrength, nor lop it off by the artificial means of flubborn fleel. Befides, the body of your friend lies breathlefs (whereof you, alas, are not aware) and pollutes the whole flore with his corpfe; while you are prying into the fecrets of heaven, and hang lingering on at my gate. First convey him to his place of reft, and bury him in the grave. Then bring black cattle : Let thefe be the first facrifices of the Stygian groves, realms inacceffible to the living. She faid; and, clofing her lips, was filent.

Æneas, with forrow in his looks, his eyes fixed on the ground, takes his way, leaving the cave, and muling ponders the dark event in his mind : whom faithful Achates accompanies, and moves on with equal concern. Many doubts they flarted between them in the wariety of their conversation ; who was the lifeles friend defigned by the prophetels, what corple to be interred. And as they came, they fee Mifenus on the dry beach, slain by a base ignoble death; Misenus, a fon of Æolus, than whom none more dextrous to rouze the hero by the brazen trumpet, and kindle the rage of war by martial founds. He had been the companion of great Hector, and about Hector he fought, diftinguished both for the use of the clarion and spear. After that victorious Achilles bereaved Hector of life. the valiant hero affociated with Dardanian Æneas, following a chief not inferior to the other. But at that time, while madly prefumptuous he makes the feas refound with his hollow trumpet, and with bold notes challenges the gods to a trial of skill, Triton, jealous of his bonour (if the flory be worthy of credit) having inveigled him between two rocks, had overwhelmed him in the foaming billows. Therefore all murmured their lamentations around him with loud noife, efpecially the pious Æneas. Then forthwith they fet about the Sibyl's orders in mournful plight, and are emulous to heap up the altar of the funeral pile with trees, and raife it towards heaven. They repair to an ancient wood, the deep haunts of the favage kind: Down drop the firs: The holm felled by the axes crafhes, and the aften beams, and the yielding oak is cleft by wedges: Down from the mountains they tumble the huge wild aftes. Æneas too in chief amidft thefe labours animates his followers, and is arrayed in like arms.

Meanwhile he thus ruminates in his distressed breast. furveying the fpacious wood, and thus prays aloud: Would but that golden bough on the tree now prefent itfelf to our view in this ample foreft : Since, Mifenus, all that the prophetefs declared of thee is true, alas, but too true. Scarce had he fpoke thefe words, when it chanced that two pigeons in their airy flight, came directly into the hero's view, and lighted on the verdant ground. Then the exalted hero knows his mother's birds, and rejoicing prays: Oh be my guides, wherever is my way, and iteer your courfe throughthe air into the groves, where the precious branch overshades the fertile foil: And thou, my goddelsmother, oh be not wanting to me in this my perplexity. Thus having faid, he paufed, obferving what indications they offer, and whither they wing their way. They, feeding and flying by turns, advanced before as far as the eyes of the followers could trace them with their ken. Then, having come to the mouth of noifome Avernus, they mount up fwiftly, and, gliding through the pure air, both alight on the wifhed for place, on the tree whence the particoloured gleam of the gold fhone through the branches. As in the woods the Mifletoe, which fprings bot from the tree whereon it grows, ules to flourish with new leaves in the cold of winter, and twine around the tapering trunk with its yellow offspring ; fach was the appearance of the vegetable gold on the fhadow holm : In like manner the metallic rind tinkled with every gentle breath of wind. Forthwith Æneas grafps, and eagerly tears off the lingering branch, and bears it to the grotto of the prophetic Sibyl.

Book VI.

Meanwhile the Trojans were no lefs affiduoufly employed in mourning Mifenus on the fhore, and in paying the last duties to his infensible, ungrateful shade. First they rear a vast pile unctuous with pines and split oak; whole fides they interweave with black baleful boughs, and place in the front deadly cypreffes, and deck it above with glittering arms. Some get ready warm water and caldrons bubbling from the flames, and wallr and anoint his cold limbs. They fetch a groan : Then lay the bewailed body on a couch, and throw over it the purple robes, his wonted apparel. Others bore up the cumbrous bier, a mournful office, and with their faces turned away from the pile, after the manner of their ancestors, underneath it held a lighted torch. Amaffed together blaze offerings of incenfe, the facred viands, and whole goblets of oil poured on the pile. After the afhes had funk down, and the flames relented, they drenched the relics and foaking embers in wine : And Chorinzus inclosed the collected bones in a brazen urn. Thrice too he made the circuit of the company with holy water, forinkling them with a gentle dew, and a branch of the lucky olive: And thus he purified them, and pronounced the last farewell. But the pious humane Æneas erects a fnacious tomb for the hero, with his arms upon it, and an oar and trumpet, under the brow of an airy mountain; which now from him is called Mifenus, and retains a name that shall be perpetuated through ages.

This done, he fpeedily executes the Sibyl's injunctions. There flood a cave profound and hideous, with a wide yawning mouth, ftony, fenced by a black lake, and the gloom of woods; over which none of the flying kind were able to wing their way unhurt; fuch noxious exhalations, iffuing from its grim jaws, alcended to the vaulted fkies : Whence the Greeks called the place by the name of Aornus. Here first the priestefs placed four bullocks with backs of fwarthy hue, and poured wine on their foreheads, and, cropping the topmost hairs between the horns, lays them on the facred Rames as the first offerings, by myflic founds invoking Hecate, whofe power extends both to heaven and hell. \mathbf{T}

Others employ the facrificing knives, and receive the tepid blood in bowls. Æneas himfelf fmites with his fword an ewe-lamb of fable fleece, in honour of the mother of the furies and her great filter; and in honour of thee, Proferpina, a barren heifer. Then he fets about the nocturnal facrifices to the Stygian king, and lays on the flames the carcafes of bulls folid and untroken, pouring fat oil on the broiling entrails. I.o now, at the early beams and rifing of the fun, the ground beneath their feet began to rumble, the mountain tops to quake, and dogs were feen to howl through the shade of the woods, at the approach of the goddefs. Hence, far hence, O ye profane, exclaims the prophetels, and begone from all the grove : And do you, Æneas, boldly fet forward, and fnatch your fword from its sheath : Now is the time for fortitude, now for firmnels of resolution. This faid, the furiously plunged into the open cave. He, with intrepid fteps, keeps close by his guide, as the leads the way. Ye gods, to whom the empire of ghofts belongs, and ye filent shades and Chaos, and Phlegethon, places where filence reigns around in the realms of night; permit me to utter the fecrets I have heard : May I have your divine permiffion to disclose things buried in deep earth and darkness. Darkling they travelled under the folitary night through the fhade, and through the defolate halls, and empty realms of Pluto. Much like travelling in woods by the precarious glimmering moon under a faint malignant light, when Jupiter hath wrapped up the heavens in shade, and fable night hath ftripped objects of colour.

Before the very courts, and in the opening jaws of hell, grief and vengeful tormenting cares have fixed their couches, and pale difeafes dwell, and difconfolate fullen old age, and fear, and the evil counfellor famine, and vile deformed indigence, forms ghaftly to the fight, and death, and toil: Then fleep that is a kin to death, and criminal joys of the mind; and in the opposite confronting threshold murderous war, and the iron bedchambers of the furies, and frantie difcord, having her viperous locks bound with bloody fillets.

219

In the midft a gloomy elm difplays its boughs and aged arms: which feat vain fantaflic dreams are commonly faid to haunt, and under every leaf they dwell. Befides many monftrous favages of various forms; in the gates Centaurs ftable, and double-formed Scylla's, and Briareus with his hundred hands, and the enormous fnake of Lerna hiffing dreadful, and Chimæra armed with flames; Gorgons, Harpies, and the form of Geryon's three-bodied ghoft. Here Eneas, difconcerted with fudden fear, grafps his fword, and prefents the naked point to the fhades as they came up. And had not his fkilful guide put him in mind that they were airy unbodied phantoms, fluttering about under an empty imaginary form, he had rufhed in, and with his fword ftruck at the ghofts in vain.

Hence is a path, which leads to the floods of Tartarean Acheron : Here a gulf turbid and impure boils up with mire and vaft whirlpools, and difgorges all its fand into Cocytus. A grim ferryman guards thele floods and rivers, Charon, of frightful flovenlinefs; on whole chin a load of grey hairs uncombed and neglected lies; his eyes all flame stand glaring : His veftment hangs from his shoulders by a knot with filth Himfelf works the barge with a pole, overgrown. and fupplies it with fails, and wafts over the bodies in his iron-coloured boat, now in years : But the god is of fresh and green old age. Hither the whole tribe of ghosts in fwarms came pouring to the banks, matrons and men, the fouls of magnanimous heroes, who had gone through the labours of life, boys and unmarried maids, and young men, who had been Aretched on the funeral pile before their parents eyes. As numerous as withered leaves fall in the woods with the first nipping cold of Autumn; or as numerous as birds flock to land from the deep ocean, when the chilling year drives them beyond fea, and fends to funny climes. They flood praying to crofs the flood the first, and were ftretching forth their hands with fond defire togain the farther bank : But the fullen boatman admits. fometimes these, sometimes those, whilst others, to a great distance removed, he debars from the banks.

Τij

Æneas (for he flood amazed, and much moved with the tumult) thus speaks : O virgin, fay what means that flocking to the river ? What do the ghofts defire? Or by what laws of diffinction must these recede from the banks, while those fweep with oars the livid flood. To him the aged priestefs thus replied : Son of Anchifes. undoubted offspring of the gods, you fee the deep pools of Cocytus, and the Stygian lake, by whole divinity the gods dread to fwear and violate their cath. All that croud, which you fee, is naked and unburied; the ferryman is Charon ; these whom the ftream carries are interred Nor is it permitted to transport them over the horrid banks, and hoarfe refounding waves. till their bones are quietly lodged in urns. They wander'an hundred years, and flutter about these stores : Then at length admitted, they visit the wished for lakes.

The offspring of Anchifes pauled, and repreffed his Reps, deep muling, and pitying from his foul their unkind lot. There he fpies Leucafpis, and Orontes, the commanders of the Lycian fleet, mournful, and bereaved of the honours of the dead : Whom, as they failed from Troy, over the ftormy feas, the fouth wind funk together, whelming both ship and crew in the waves. Lo the pilot Palinurus flow advanced : Who lately in his Lybian voyage, while he was obferving the ftars, had dropped from the ftern, plunged in the midft of the waves. When with much ado, by reafon of the thick shade. Eneas knew him in this mournful mood, he thus first accosts him : What god, O Palinurus, fnatched you from us, and overwhelmed in the middle of the ocean? Come tell me. For Apollo, whom I never before found false, in this one response deceived my mind; declaring that you should be fafe on the fea, and arrive at the Aufonian coafts? Is this the amount of his plighted faith ?

But he anfwers: Neither the oracle of Phœbus beguiled you, prince of Anchifes's line, nor a god plunged me in the fea: For, falling headlong, I drew along with me the helm, which I chanced with great violence to tear away, as I clung to it, and fleered our courfe, being affigned the guarding of the . fhip. By the rough feas I fwear, that any fear I had, was not formuch for myfelf, as left your thip, fpoiled of her rudder, difpoffeffed of her pilot, should fink while fuch high billows were rifing. The fouth wind drove me violently on the water over the fpacious fea, threerough wintery nights : On the fourth day, I defcried Italy from the high ridge of a wave whereon I was raifed aloft. I was fwimming gradually towards land, and now got out of danger, had not a cruel peoplefallen upon me with the fword, incumbered with my wet garment, and grafping with crooked hands the ragged tops of a mountain, and ignorantly taken me for a rich prey. Now the waves poffels me, and the winds tofs me on the flore. But by the pleafant light of heaven, and by the vital air, by him who gave you birth, by your hope of rifing, Iulus, I thee implore, invincible leader, release me from these woes : Lither throw on me fome earth (for it is in your power) and. feck out the Velin port; or, if there be any means. to bring it about; if your goddefs mother fhews you_ any (for it is not, I prefume, without the will of. the gods you attempt to crofs fuch mighty rivers and: the Stygian lake), lend your hand to an unhappy wretch, and bear me with you over the waves, that in death, at least I may reft in peaceful feats.

Thus he fpoke, when thus the prophetels began: Whence, O Palinurus, rifes in thee this fo impious a defire ? Shall you unburied fee the Stygian floods, and the grim river of the furies, or reach the bank againth the command of heaven ? Ceafe to hope that the deerces of the gods are to be altered by prayers : But, mindful, take the/e predictions as the folace of your hard fate. For the neighbouring people, compelled by portentous plagues from heaven, fhall through their feveral cities far and wide offer atonement to thy afhes, erect to flee a tomb, and flated anniverfary offering on that tomb prefent: And the place fhall retain the name of Palinurus for ever. By thefe words his cares were: removed, and grief a while banifhed from his difcon-folate heart : He joys in the land that is to bear his name.

T iij

They therefore accomplish their begun journey, and approach to the river : Whom when the boatman foon from the Stygian wave beheld, as they were advancing through the filent grove, and moving forward to the bank, thus he first accosts them in thefe words, and chides them unprovoked : Whoever thou art, who advanceft armed to our rivers, fay quick for what end you come; and from that very fpot advance not one flep farther. This is the region of ghofts, of fleep and drowfy night : To waft over the bodies of the living in my Stygian boat, is not permitted. Nor indeed was it joy to me that I received Alcides on the lake when he came lither. nor that I received Thefeus and Pirithous; though they were the offspring of the gods, and invincible in might. The one with audacious hand clapped in chains the keeper of Tartarus, and dragged him trembling from the throne even of our king : The others attempted to carry off our queen, from Pluto's bedchamber.

In answer to which the Amphrysian prophetess thus, fpoke : No fuch plots are here; be not diffurbed ; nor do thefe weapons bring violence : For us the huge porter may unmolefled bay in his den for ever to the terror of the incorporeal shades; Proferpine inviolate in her chaftity may for ever remain in her uncle's palace. Trojan Æneas, illustrious for piety and arms, descends. to the deep shades of Erebus to vifit his fire. If the image of fuch faining piety make no impreffion on you, own a regard at least to this branch (at the fame time fhe fhews the branch that was concealed under herrobe). Then his heart from fwelling rage is flilled :nor paffed more words than thefe. He with wonder gazing on the awful prefent of the fatal branch, feen after a long time intervening, turns towards them his. leaden-coloured barge, and approaches to the bank. Thence he diflodges the other fouls that fat on the long benches, and clears the hatches : At the fame time receives into his bottom the weighty Eneas. The frail patched veffel groaned under the weight; and being leaky, took in plenty of water from the lake. At length he lands the hero and the prophetefs fafe on the other fide of the river, on the foul flimy flrand and fea green weed. Huge Cerberus with barking from his triple jaws howls through thefe realms, flretched at his enormous length in a den that fronts the gate. To whom the prophetefs, feeing his neck now begin to briftle with horrid fnakes, flings a foporific cake of honey and medicated grain. He in the mad rage of hunger opening his three mouths, fnatches the offered morfel, and, fpread on the ground, releves his monftrous limbs, and is extended at vaft length over all the cave. Æneas, now that the keeper of hell is buried in fleep, feizes the paffage, and fwift overpaffes the bank of that flood, whence there is no return.

Forthwith are heard voices, loud wailings, and weeping ghofts of infants in the first opening of the gate : Whom, bereaved of sweet life out of the course of nature, and snatched from the breast, a black unjeyous day cut off, and buried in an untimely grave.

Next to those, are such as had been condemned to death by false accusations. Nor yet were those seats affigned them, without defination and appointment, nor without the fentence of a judge. Minos, as inquifitor, shakes the urn : He summons the council of the filent shades, and examines their lives and crimes.

The next apartments in order those mournful bands, possible, who, though free from crimes that deserved death, procured death to themselves with their own hands, and, fick of the light, threw away their lives: How gladly would they now endure poverty and painful toils in the upper regions ! But fate oppose, and the hateful lake of Acheron imprisons them with its dreary waves, and Styx, nine times rolling between, confines them.

Not far from hence, extended on every fide, are fnewn the fields of mourning : For fo they call those fields by name. Here by-paths remote conceal, and myrtle groves cover those around, whom unrelenting love, with its cruel envenomed darts, confumed away. Their cares leave them not in death itself. In these apartments he fees Phaedra and Procris. and disconfolate Eriphyle pointing to the wounds fhe had received from her cruel fon, Evadne and Paliphae : Thefe Laodamia accompanies, and Cæneus, once a man, now . a woman, and again by fate transformed into his priftine shape. Amongst whom Phœnician Dido, fresh from her wound, was wandering in a spacious grove: To, whom, as foon as the Trojan hero approached nigh, and discovered faintly through the shades, in like manner as one fees, or thinks he fees the moon rifingthrough the clouds in the beginning of her monthly courfe; he dropped tears, and addreffed her in love's. fweet accents : Haples Dido, was it then a true report I had of your being dead, and that you had finished your own deftiny by the fword ? Was I, alas ! the cause of your death? I firear by the flars, by the powers above, and if there be any faith under the deepearth, against my will, O queen, I parted from thycoaft. But the mandates of the gods which now compel me to travel through these shades, through noisome dreary regions, and profound night, drove me from youby their authority : Nor could I believe that I should involve you in fuch deep anguish by my departure. Stay your career, and withdraw thee not from my fight. Whom doft thou fly ? This is the last time fate allows me to have intercourfe with you. With thefewords Æneas thought to footh her foul inflamed, and eyeing him with stern regard, and provoked his tears to flow. She, loathing the fight of him, held her eyes fixed on the ground ; nor alters her look one jot more by the conversation he had begun, than if she were fixed immoveable like a flubborn flint, or rock of Parian marble. At length the flung away, and in detestation fled into a shady grove ; where Sichæus her first lord answers her with correspondent amorous cares, and returns her love for love. Æneas, neverthelefs, in deep commotion for her difastrous fate, with weeping eyes purfues her far, and melts with pity towards. her as the goes from him.

Hence he holds on his defined way: And now theywere got to the laft fields, which by themfelves apart.

renowned 'warriors frequent. Here Tydeus appears to him ; here Parthenopus illustrious in arms, and the ghoft of pale Adrastus; here those Trojans, who had died in the field of battle, much lamented in the upper world : Whom when he beheld altogether in a numerous body, he inly groaned ; particularly when he faw Glaucus, Medon, Therfilochus, the three fons of Antenor, and Polyboetes confecrated to Ceres, and Idæus still handling his chariot, still his armour. The ghofts in crouds around him ftand on right and left. Nor are they fatisfied with feeing him once : They are fond to detain him longer and longer, come into close conference with him, and learn the reasons of his coming. But fo foon as the Grecian chiefs and Agamemnon's battalions faw the hero, and his arms gleaming through the shades, they quaked with huge difmay. Some turned their backs, as ruhen they fled once to their fhips; fome raife their flender voices; the fcream just begun dies in their gasping throats.

And here he spies Deiphobus, the fon of Priam, mangled in every limb, his face all cruelly torn, his face and both his hands, his temples flashed, his ears cropped, and his noftrils flit with a hideoufly deformed wound. Thus he hardly knew him quaking for fear of being discovered, and feeking to hide his ghally fcars ; and thus he first accosts him with well known accents : Deiphobus, great in arms, fprung from Teucer's noble blood, who could choofe to inflict on you fuch cruelties? Or who was allowed fuch power over you ? To me, in that laft night, a report was brought that you, tired with the vaft flaughter of the Greeks, had fallen at last on a heap of mingled carcafes. Then, with my own hands, 1 raifed to you an empty tomb on the Rhectean shore, and thrice with loud voice I invoked your manes. Your name and arms poffefs the place. Your body, my friend, I could not find, and, at my departure, deposit in thy native land. And upon this the fon of Priam :- Nothing, my friend, has been ommitted by you : You have discharged every duty to Deiphobus, and to the shadow of a corple. But my own unhappy fate, and the curfed wickedness of Helen, plunged me in these woes: She hath left me these monuments of her love. For how we passed that laft night amidft falle ill grounded joys, you know, and muft needs remember but too well; when the fatal horfe came bounding over our lofty walls, and : pregnant brought armed infantry in its womb. She, pretending to celebrate a mingled dance, led her train of Phrygian matrons yelling around the orgies : Herfelf in the midst of them held a large flaming torch, and called to the Greeks from the lofty tower. I, at that time being oppreffed with care, and overpowered with fleep, was lodged in my unfortunate bed-chamber, where reft, balmy, profound, and the perfect image of a calm peaceful death, preffed me as I lay. Meanwhile my incomparable wife removes all arms from my palace, and had withdrawn my trufty fword from my head. She calls Menelaus into the palace, and throws open the gates. Hoping, no doubt, that would be a mighty favour to her amorous hufband, and that thus the infamy of her former wicked deeds might be extinguished. In short, they burst into my chamber : That traitor of Æolus's race, the promoter of villainy, is joined in company with them. Ye gods, requite these cruelties to the Greeks, if I supplicate vengeance with pious lips. But come, now in your thrn, fay what adventure hath brought thee bither alive. Come you driven by the errors of the main, or by the direction of the gods ? Or what fortune ftimulates thee to vifit thefe dreary manfions, troublous regions, where the fun never thines ?

In this convertation the fun in his roly chariot had now paffed the Meridian in his etherial courfe; and they perhaps would in this manner have fpent the whole time affigned them; but the Sibyl his companion, put him in mind, and thus briefly fpoke: Æncas, the night comes on apace, while we wafte the hours in vain lamentations. This is the place where the path divides in two; the right is what leads to great Pluto's walls; by this our way to Elyfum lies: But the left carries on the punifhments of the wicked, and conveys to curfed Tartarus. On the other hand Deipho-

bus :--Be not incenfed, great prieftefs; I fhall be gone; fill up the number of those disconfolate ghosts among whom I dwell, and be rendered back to my formez darkness. Pafs on, pafs on, thou glory of our nation; may you prove the fates more kind This much he spoke, and at the word turned his steps.

Æneas on a fudden looks back: and under a rock on the left fees spacious prisons inclosed with a triple wall; which Tartarean Phlegethon's rapid flood environs with torrents of flame, and whirls roaring rocks along. Fronting is a gate of huge dimensions, and columns of folid adamant, that no ftrength of men, nor the gods themselves can with steel demolish. iron tower rifes high ; and there Tifiphone, a wakeful fury, clad in a bloody robe, fits to watch the gate both night and day. Hence groans are heard ; the cruel lashes refound; the grating too of iron, and clank of dragging chains. Æneas ftopped fhort, and fartling liftened to the din. What scenes of guilt are thefe, O virgin, fay; with what pains are they chaftened; what hideous yelling afcends to the fkies? Then * thus the prophetefs began : Renowned leader of the Trojans, no holy perfon is allowed to tread the curfed threshold: But Hecate, when she fet me over the groves of Avernus, taught me herfelf the punishments appointed by the gods, and led me through all. Cretan Rhadamanthus poffess these ruthless realms, examines and punishes frauds; and forces every one to confess what crimes committed in the upper world he had left unatoned till the late hour of death, hugging himfelf in Secret crimes of no avail. Forthwith avenging Tiliphone, armed with her whip, fcourges the guilty with cruel infult; and in her left-hand fhaking them over her grim inakes, calls to her aid the fierce troops of her fifter-furies.

Then at length the curfed gates, grating on their dreadful founding hinge, are thrown open. See you what kind of watch lits in the entry? What figure guards the gate? An overgrown hydra, more fell than that of Lerna, with fifty black gaping mouths, has her feat within, Then Tartarus itlelf links deep down, and extends towards the shades twice as far as is the profpect upwards from the earth to the ethereal throne of heaven. Here earth's ancient progeny, the young Titanian brood, hurled down with thunderbolts, wel-, ter in the profound abyss. Here too I saw the two sons of Aloeus, gigantic bodies; who attempted with impious hands to overturn the fpacious heavens and thrust down Jove from his exalted kingdom. Salmoneus likewife I beheld fuffering punifhment inflexibly fevere for having imitated love's flaming bolts, and the awful founds of heaven. He, drawn in his chariot by four horfes, and brandifhing a torch, rode triumphant through the nations of Greece, and the midit of the city Elis, and claimed to himfelf the honour of the gods : Infatuate! who, with brazen wheels, and the prancing of his horn hoofed fleeds, would needs counterfeit the ftorms and inimitable thunder. But the almighty father, amidst the thick clouds threw a bolt (not mock thunder he, nor fire brands, and fmoaky light from torches) and hurled him down headlong in a vaft fiery whirlwind Here too you might have feen Tityus, the fofter-child of all-bearing earth: Whofe body is extended over nine whole acres; and a huge vultur with her hooky beak pouncing his immortal liver and bowels, the fruitful fource of punifhment, rummages them for her everlasting meal, and dwells in the deep receffes of his breaft ; nor is any respite given to his fibres still fpringing up afresh. Why should I mention the Lapithæ, Ixion, and Pirithous, over whom hangs a black flinty rock, every moment threatening to tumble down, and feeming to be actually falling ? Golden pillars fupporting lofty genial couches thine; and full in their view banquets furnished out with regal magnificence; while the chief of the furies fits by them, and debars them from touching the provisions with their hands; and, when they attempt it, flarts up, lifting her torch on high, and thunders over them with her voice. Here are those who, while life remained, had been at enmity with their brothers, had beaten a parent, or wrought deceit against a client; or who alone brooded over their acquired wealth, nor affigned a portion to their own, which class is the most numerous: Those too who were flain for adultery, who joined in impious wars, nor made any fcruple to violate the faith they had plighted to their mafters ; all thefe, fhut up in thofe doleful prisons, await their punishment. But what kind of punishment seek not to be informed, in what shape of milery, or in what piteous flate they are involved. Some roll a huge unwieldy ftone hang fast bound to the fpokes of wheels. There fits, and to eternity shall fit, . the unhappy Theseus: And Phlegyas, most wretched, is monitor to all; and with loud voice proclaims a through the shades : " Warned by my example, learn righteoufnefs, and not to contemn the gods." One fold his country for gold, and imposed on it a domineering tyrant; made and unmade laws for money. Another invaded his daughter's bed, and joined himfelf to her in unlawful wedlock: All of them boldly dared fome heinous crime, and accomplished what they dared. Had I an hundred tongues, and an hundred mouths, and iron loungs, I could not comprehend all the species of their crimes, nor enumerate the names of all their punifhments.

228

When the aged prieftefs of Phœbus had uttered thefe words, fhe adds : But come now, fet forward, and finish the task you have undertaken : Let us hafte on. I fee the walls of Pluto wrought in the forges of the Cyclops, and the gates with their arch full in our view, where our instructious enjoin us to deposit this our offering. She faid ; and, with equal pace advancing through the gloomy path, they speedily traverse the intermediate space, and approach the gates. Æneas springs forward to the entry, sprinkles his body with fresh water, and fixes the bough in the fronting portal.

Having finished these rites, and performed the offering to the goddefs, they came at length to the regions of eternal joy, delightful green retreats, and bleffed abodes, in groves where happiness abounds. Here the air they breathe is freer and more enlarged, and clothes the field with radiant light : Here the happy inhabitants know their own fun and their own ftars. Some exercise their limbs on the graffy plains, in sports contend, and wreftle on the yellow fand : Some beat harmony in the mingled dances, and fing hymns. Orpheus too, the Thracian prieft, in his long robe warbles in melodious lays the feven diffinguished notes of mulic : And now firikes the fame with his fingers, now with his ivory quill. Here is Teucer's ancient race, a most illustrious line, magnanimous heroes, born in happier times, Ilus, Affaracus, and Dardanus the founder of Troy. From far he views with wonder the arms and empty chariots of the chiefs. Their spears fland fixed in the ground ; and up and down their horles feed at large throughout the plain. The fame fondnefs they had when alive for chariots and arms, the fame concern for training up thining fleeds, follows them deposited under the earth.

Lo he views others on the right and left, feafting upon the grafs, and finging joyous hymns to Apollo in concert, amidft a fragrant grove of laurel : Whence from on high the river Eridanus rolls in copious streams through the wood. Here is a band made up of those who fuftained wounds in fighting for their country; priefts who preferved themfelves pure and holy, while the temptations of life remained ; pious poets, who fung in ftrains worthy of Apollo; those who improved buman life by the invention of arts; and who by their worthy deeds made others remember them with gratitude : All these have their temples crowned with a ' fnow-white fillet. Whom gathered around, the Sibyl thus addreffed, and Mufæus chiefly; for a numerous crowd has him in their centre, and admires him railed above them by the height of the shoulders : Say, happy fouls, and thou, belt of poets, what quarter, what apartment contains Anchifes ? On his account we have hither come, and croffed the great rivers of hell. And thus the hero briefly returned her an answer: None of us have a fixed abode: In shady groves wedwell, or lie on flowery couches all along the banks, and on meadows with rivulets ever fresh and green : But do you, if so your inclination leads, overpafs this eminence, and I will now fet you in the eafy path. He faid, and advanced on before, and fhews them from a rifing ground, the fhin-

230

ing plains. Then they defcend from the fummit of the mountain. But father Anchises, deep in a verdant vale, was furveying with fludious care the fouls there inclofed, who were to revisit the upper regions of light, and happened then to be reviewing the whole number of his race, his dear descendants, their fates and fortunes, . their manners and achievements. As foon as he beheld Æneas advancing towards him across the meads, he joyfully firetched out both his hands, and tears poured down his cheeks; and thefe words dropped from his mouth : Are you come at length, and has that piety fo much experienced by your fire, furmounted the arduous journey ? Am I permitted, my fon, tofee thy face; to hear and return the well known accents! So indeed, I concluded in my mind, and reckoned it would happen, computing the time. Nor have any anxious hopes deceived me. Over what lauds, O fon, over what immense feas have you, I hear, been toffed ! with what dangers harraffed ! how I dreaded left you had fuftained harm, from Libya's realms. But he : Your ghoft, your dreary ghoft, my fire, oftentimesappearing, compelled me to fet forward to thefe manfions. My fleet ides in the Tyrrhene fea. Permit me father, to join my right-hand with thine ; and withdraw thee not from my embrace. So faying, he at the fame time watered his cheeks with a flood of tears. There thrice he attempted to throw his arms around his neck ; thrice the phantom grafped in vain, escaped his hold ; like the fleet air, or refembling most a fugitive dream

Meanwhile Æneas fees in the retired winding vale, a grove fituate by itfelf, fhrubs rufiling in the woods, and the river Lethe, which glides by those peaceful dwellings. Around this river un-numbered tribes, and nations of ghofts were fluttering. And as in meadows on a ferene fummer's day, when the bees fit on the various bloffoms, and fwarm around the fnow-white lilies, all the plain buzzes with their humming noife. Æneas non-pluffed fludders at the unexpected fight, and asks the causes of that appearance; what those rivers youder are, or what ghosts have in fuch crowds.

Uij

filled the banks. Then father Anchifes : Thofe fouls, for whom other bodies are deftined by fate, at the Areams of Lethe's flood, quaff care-expelling draughts and lafting oblivion. Long indeed have I wished to give you a detail of these, pointing them out before you, and enumerate this my future race ; that you may rejoice the more with me in the poffession of Italy. 0 father, is it to be imagined, that any fouls of an exalted nature, will go from hence to the world above, and enter again into clum/y inactive bodies? What curfed love of life possefies the miferable beings ? I, indeed, replied Anchifes, will inform you, my fon ; nor hold you longer in suspense : Aud thus he unfolds each particular in order.

First then, the divine spirit within suftains the heavens, the earth, and watery plains, the moon's enlightened orb, and thining ftars, and the eternal mind diffufed through all the parts of nature, actuates the whole flupendous frame, and mingles with the vaft body of the universe. Thence proceed the race of men and beafts, the vital principles of the flying kind, and the monfters which the ocean breeds under its fmooth cryftal plain. These principles have the active force of fire, and are of a heavenly original, which they exert fo far as they are not clogged by noxious bodies, blunted by earth-born limbs, and fickly dying members. From this union and incumbrance they are subjected to various paffions, they fear and defire, grieve and rejoice; and fhut up in darkness, and a glocmy prison, lose fight of their native fkies. Nay, even when with the last beams of light their life is gone; yet not every ill, nor all corporeal stains are quite removed from the unhappy beings : And it is absolutely unavoidable that many vicious habits, which have long grown up with the foul, should be strangely confirmed and riveted therein. Therefore are they afflicted with pains, and pay the penatlies of their former ills. Some hung on high; are fpread out to whiten in the empty winds : In others, the guilt not done away, is washed out in a vast watery abyn, or burnt away in fire : We have each of us his demon, from whom we fuffer, till length of time, after the fixed period is elapfed, hath done away the inherent ftains, and hath left celeftial reason pure from all' irregular paffions, and the foul, that fpark of heavenly fire, in its original purity and brightness, simple and unmix-Then are we conveyed into Elyfium, and we, whoed. are the happy few, poffels the fields of blifs. All these fouls whom you fee, after they have rolled away a thoufand years, are fummoned forth by the god, in a great body, to the river Lethe : To the intent, that loling memory of the paß, they may revisit the upper regions, and again become willing to return into bodies. Anchifes faid, and leads his fon, together with the Sibyl, into the midft of the affembly and noify throng; then choofes a rifing ground, whence he may furvey them all as they ftand opposite to him in a long row, and difcern. their looks as they come up.

232

Book KI.

Now mark; I will explain to you what glory shall henceforth attend the Trojan race, what descendants await them of the Italian nation, fouls of diffinguished worth, and who shall succeed to our name; yourself too I will instruct in your particular fate. See you that youth, who leans on his pointles spear ? He by deftiny holds a station nearest to the regions of light; he shall ascend to the upper world the first of your race, who shall have a mixture of Italian blood in his yeins; Sylvius, an Alban name, your last issue : Whom late your confort Lavinia shall in the woods bring forth to you in your advanced age, him/elf a king, and the father of kings : In whom our line shall reign over Alba Longa. That: next is Procas, the glory of the Trojan nation, and Capys and Numitor, and Æneas Silvius, who shall reprefent thee in name, equally diffinguished for piety and arms, if ever he receive the crown of Alba. Sec what brave youths are thefe, what manly force they fhew ! and bear their temples shaded with a civic crown . of oak; thefe_to thy honour shall build Nomentum, Gabii, aud the city Fidena; these on the mountains shall raife the Collatian towers, Pometia, the fort of Inuus, Bola, and Cora. These shall then be famous names ; now they are lands namelefs and obscure. Farther, martial Romulus, whom Ilia of Affaracus's line-Uiij shall bear, shall affociate with his grandfire Numitor. See you not how the double plumes stand on his head erect, and how the father of the Gods himfelf already marks him out with his distinguished honours ? Lo, my fon, under his auspicious influence, Rome, that city of renown, shall measure her dominion by the earth, and hervalour by the fkies; and that one city fhall for herfelf wall around feven ftrong hills, happy in a race of herves. Clothed with fuch majefy as mother Berecynthia, crowned with turrets, rides in her chariot through the Phrygian towns, joyful in a progeny of gods, who embraces an hundred grandchildren, all inhabitants of heaven, all feated in the high celeftial abodes. This way now bend both your eyes : View this lineage, and your own Romans. This is Cæfar, and the whole race of Iulus, who shall one day rife to the spacious axle of the fky. This, this is the man whom you have often heard promifed to you, Augustus Casfar, the offspring of a God : Who once more shall establish the golden age in Latium, through those lands where Saturn reigned of old, and shall extend his empire over the Garamantes and Indians. . Their land lies without the figns of the Zodiac, beyond the fun's annual courfe, where Atlas, supporting heaven on his shoulder, turns the axle fludded with flaming, flars. Against his approach even now both the Cafpian realms, and the lands about the Palus Mæotis are dreadfully difmayed at the responses of the Gods, and the quaking mouths of fevenfold Nile hurry on their troubled waves. Nor indeed, did Hercules himfelf run over fo many countries ; though he transfixed the brazen footed hind, quelled the foreft of Erymanthus, and made Lerna tremble with his bow. Nor Bacchus, who in triumph manages his carr with reins wrapped about with vine leaves, driving the yoked tygers from Nyfa's lofty top. And doubt we yet to. extend the fame of our virtue by heroic deeds? Or is fear a bar to our fettling in the Aufonian land?

But who is he at a diftance, diftinguished by the olive boughs, bearing the facred utenfils? I know the venerable locks and hoary beard of the Roman king : who first shall establish the city by laws, fent from bie little city Cures, and poor effate, to vaft empire. Whom Tullus shall next fucceed, who shall break the peace of his country, and rouze to arms his inactive fubjects. and troops now unufed to triumphs. Whom follows next vain-glorious Ancus, even-now too much tickled with the breath of popular applaufe. Will you alfo fee the Tarquin kings, and the ftern unfubmitting foul of Brutus the avenger of his country's wrongs, and the fovereignty recovered to the people ? He first shall receive the confular power, and the fword of juffice inflexibly fevere; and the ill-fated fire shall, for the fake of glorious liberty, fummon to death his own fons, raising civil war, till then new, and unknown to Rome : However posterity shall interpret that action, love to his country, and the unbounded defire of praise, shall prevail over paternal affection. See besides at some diftance, the Decii, Drufi, Torquatus inflexibly fevere in executing juffice, and Camillus recovering the Roman flandards from the enemy." But those two ghofts whom you observe to shine in equal arms, in perfect friendship now, and while they shall be shut up in the realms of night, ah what war, what battles and havock fhall they between them raife, if once they have attained the light of life! The father-in-law defcending from the Alpine hills, and the tower of Monœcus ! The fon-in-law furnished with the troops of the east to oppofe him. Make not, my fons, make not fuch un-. natural wars familiar to your minds; nor turn the powerful supports of your country against its own bowels. And thou, Cafar, first forbear, thou who derivest thy origin from heaven; fling those arms out of thy hand, Omy offspring my own blood ! That one, having triumphed over Corinth, shall drive his chariot victorious. to the lofty Capitol, illustrious in the blood of flaughtered Greeks. That other shall overthrow Argos, and Mycenæ, Agamemnon's feat, and Æacides himfelf. the descendant of valorous Achilles; avenging his Trojan anceftors, and the violated temple of Minerva. Who can in filence pass over thee, great Cato, or thee Coflus ? Who the family of Gracchus, or both the Scithese two thunderbolts of war, the bane of pia's, Afric, and Fabricius in low fortune exalted ? Or thee Serranus fowing in the furrow thy own hands had made ? Whither, ye Fabii, do you hurry me already tired ? Thou art that Fabius, jufly filed the greateft, whofole fhalt repair our finking flate by wife delay. Others, I grant indeed, fhall with more delicacy mould the breathing animated brafs; from marble draw the features to the life; plead caufes better; defcribe with the aftronomer's rod the courfes of the heavens, and explain the riting flars: But to rule the nations with imperial iway be thy care, O Roman; thefe fhall be thy arts; to impofe terms of peace, to fpare the humbled, and cruft the proud flubborn foes.

Thus father Anchifes; and, as they are wondering, farther subjoins : Behold how adorned with triumphal fpoils Marcellus stalks along, and shines abovethe heroes all ! He, mounted on his fierce steed, shalt prop the Roman state in the rage of a formidable infurrection ; the Carthaginians he shall humble, and the rebellious Gaul; and dedicate to father Quirinus the third triumphal spoils. And upon this Eneas fays; for he beheld marching with him a youth diffinguished by his beauty and fhining arms, but his countenance not joyous, and his eyes funk and dejected; What youth is he, O father, who thus accompanies. the hero as he walks? Is he a fon, or one of the illuftrious line of his defcendants ? What buffling noife of attendants round him ! How great refemblance in him to the other ! But fable night with her dreary fhade hovers around his head. Then father Anchiles, while tears gushed from his eyes, thus began: Seek not, my fon, to know the deep difaster of thy kindred : Him the fates shall just shew on earth, nor fuffer longer to fublift. Ye gods, Rome's fons hadf eemed too powerful in your eyes, had these your gifts been permanent. What groans of heroes shall that field by Mars'simperial city fend forth ! What folenne funeral pomp shall you, O Tiberinus, fee, when you glide by his recent tomb ! Nor thall any youth of the Trojan line in hope exalt the Latin fathers fo high. Nor shall the land of Romulus ever glory fo much in any of her long,

Book VI.

Ah that piety ! ah that faith and integrity of ancient times ! and that right hand invincible in war ! none with impunity had encountered him in arms, whether when on foot he rufhed upon the foe, or goared with the fpur his foaming courfer's flanks. Ah, piteous youth ! if poffibly thou canft burft the bonds of rigorous fate, thou shalt be a Marcellus. Give me lilics in handfuls; let me ftrow the purple blooming flowers, these offerings at least let me heap upon my descendant's fliade, and difcharge this unavailing duty. Thus up and down they roam through all the Elysian regions in spacious airy fields, and survey every object. Through each of which when Anchifes had conducted his fon, and fired his foul with the love of future fame; he next recounts to the hero what wars he must hereafter wage; informs him of the Laurentine people, and of the city of Latinus, and by what means he may furmount or thus every toil.

Two gates there are of fleep, whereof the one is faid to be of horn; by which an eafy egrefs is given to true vitions: The other fhining, as being wrought of white ivory; but through it the infernal gods fend up lying dreams to the upper world. Here then Anchifes addreffes this difcourfe to his fon and the Sibyl together, and difmiffes them by the ivory gate. The hero fpeeds his way to the fhips, and revilits his friends. Then fleers directly along the coaft for the port of Cajeta: Where, having arrived, the anchor is thrown out from the forecaftle, and the flerns reft upon the fhore.

BOOK SEVENTH.

Тнои too, Cajeta, nurse to Æneas, expiring here, gavest to our coasts immortal fame : And now thy honour here refides : And the name Cajeta points to thy " ashes in Hesperia the great, if that be any glory to thy departed ghest. And now that her funeral obfequies in due form were paid, the grave raifed high in decent order, the pious Æneas, foon as the fwelling feas were hushed, fails on his destined course, and leaves the port behind. The gales breathe fair at the approach of night; nor does the filver moon oppose his voyage. Under her trembling light the ocean fhines. They fkim along the coafts adjacent to Circe's land ; where with inceffant fong the wealthy daughter of the fun makes her inacceffible groves refound, and in her proud palace burns fragrant cedar for nocturnal lights, flying over the slender web with her shrill-founding shuttle. Hence we heard groans, the rage of lions reluctant to their chains, and roaring at the lafe midnight hour; briftly boars and bears growl in their stalls, and wolves of prodigious form with borrid howlings strike the ear : Whom Circe, cruel goddefs, had by her potent magical herbs transformed from human shape into the features and limbs of wild bealts. Which monftrous changes that the pious Trojans might not undergo, if carried to that port, nor land on those cursed shores; Neptune filled their fails with favouring winds, and fped their flight, and wafted them beyond these boiling shoals. And now the fea began to redden with the dawning beams, and from the lofty sky the faffron coloured morn shone in her rofy carr, when on a fudden the winds grew still, every breath of air died away, and the oars ftruggle on the fmoothfurface of the lazy main. And here from the deep, Eneas fpies a spacious grove. Through this Tiberinus, god of the plcafant river Tiber, with rapid whirls and vaft quantities of yellow fand difcoloured, burfts forward into the fea. All around, and over head, various birds accuftomed to the banks, and channel of the river, charmed the liflening fkies with their fongs, and fluttered in refilefs motion up and down the grove. Hither Eneas commands his mates to bend their courfe, and turn their prows toward land; and joyous he enters the fhady river.

Book VII.

Now come, Erato ; with thy aid will I unfold who were the kings, what the period of time, what the state of things in ancient Latium, when this foreign army first landed their fleet on the Ausonian coafts; and trace back the original of the rifing war. Do thou, O goddefs, do thou instruct thy poet. Henceforth will I fing of horrid wars, and kings by their fierce paffions driven to mutual havock, the Tufcan troops, and all Hefperia in arms combined. A greater series of affairs rifes to my view; in a more arduous task I now engage. King Latinus, now full of days, ruled the country and its cities quiet and undiffurbed in the enjoyment of a lafting peace. This prince, we are told, was the offspring of Faunus and Marica, a Laurentine nymph. Faunus had Picus for his fire; and he, O Saturn, claims thee for his ; thou art the remoteft founder of the race: To him (Latinus) by the appointment of the gods, no fon, no male iffue remained; each, as he grew up, was fnatched away in the opening bloom of youth. An only daughter heired his royal feat, and all those large poffeffions, now arrived at maturity, and full ripe for marriage. Many from Latium's wide bounds, and throughout Aufonia, were in courtship of her : Turnus too makes his ad. dreffes, in charms far furpaffing all the reft, and powerfully recommended by anceftors illustrious for many generations; whom the royal confort, with wonderful eagerness, urged to have joined her fon-inlaw : But prodigies from heaven, with various circumstances of terror, oppose her inclination. In the midft of the palace, within the deep receffes of the inner court, flood a laurel, with facred venerable locks, and for many years preferved with religious awe : Which king Latinus having difcovered when he was raifing the first towers of his palace, was faid to have confecrated to Phochus; and from it to have given the name of Laurentines to the inmates of the country. On the high fummit of this tree thick cluftering bees, ftrange to hear, wafted athwart the liquid sky with vast humming noife, planted themfelves; and, having linked their feet together by a mutual hold, the fwarm hung in a furprifing manner from the leafy bough. Forthwith the foothfayer : Lo, fays he, we behold a foreign hero hither advancing, and an army making towards the fame parts where the bees alight from the fame parts whence they came, and bearing fway in this lofty palace. Again, while with holy torches he fumes the altars, and the virgin Lavinia is flanding by her fire; fhe feemed, O horrid! to catch the fire in her long flowing hair, and to have her whole attire confumed in the crackling flames, all in a blaze, both as to her royal locks and crown rich with gems: Then in clouds of imoke, mingled with ruddy light, the feemed to he involved, and to fpread the conflagration over the whole palace. As to this, it was reputed an omen terrible, and of aftonishing aspect. For, from thence, the footh fayers foretold that Lavinia herfelf was to be illuftrious, both in fame and fortune, but threatened her people with formidable war.

239 '

Meanwhile the king, anxious and perplexed by thefe portentous figns, repairs to the oracle of prophetic Faunus, his fire; and coufults his facred grove that lies beneath lofty Albunea, which of the woods the chief refounds with a facred fountain, and from its dark retreats fends forth pernicious noifome fleams. Hence the Italian nations, and the whole land of Oenotria, feek refponfes when in diffrefs. Hither when the prieft had brought offerings, and in the deep filence of night laid him down on the outfpread fkins of the victims flain, and difpofed himfelf to fleep; he fees many vifionary forms fluttering about in a wondrous manner, hears various founds; and enjoys interviews with the gods; and converfes with the fiends in the infernal regions. Here even father Latinus himfelf, being then in queft of a refponfe, with due rites facrificed an hundred fleecy ewes; then fupported on their fkins and out-fpread fleeces he lay. From the deep grove a fudden voice was delivered: Seek not, my fon, to join thy daughter in wedlock to a Latin prince; nor reft thy hopes on the match now defigned. A foreigner comes, thy future fon-in-law, who, by his noble blood, fhall to the ftars exalt our name; and of whofe line our defcendants fprung, fhall fee all things reduced under their feet, and ruled by their fway, where the revolving fun vifits either ocean.

AENEID. 92.

These responses of father Faunus, and intimations given in the filence of night, Latinus himfelf fluts not up within the door of his lips ; but fame, fluttering all around, had now wafted the tidings through the Aufofonian cities, when Laomedon's fons had moored their fleet on the verdant riling bank. Æneas, with the chief leaders, and blooming Iulus, lay their bodies at eafe under the branches of a tall tree ; prepare for a repaft ; and under their banquet fpread cakes of fine wheat along the grafs (fo great Jove himfelf determined them), and load the wheaten board with woodland fruits. Here, as it chanced, having confumed their other provisions, as penury of food compelled them to turn their grinders on the scanty cake, and violate with hands and chaps audacious the ominous bifket + orb, nor withheld their appetite from the dilated quadrants ; See ! Iülus laughing fays, we eat up our tables too : nor added more. No fooner was the word heard than it brought them affurance that their toils and wandering were at an end; and inftantly from the ipeaker's mouth, his father inatched the word, and, transported with admiration at the accomplishment of the oracle, mufed a while. Forthwith thus : Hail, O land deftined to me by fate; and hail ye Gods, he fays, ye faithful tutelary gods of Troy, hail. Here is our home; this our country. My fire Anchifes (for now I recollect) bequeathed to me thefe fecrets of fate ; When thee my fon, wafted to an unknown shore, famine shall compel to eat up your tables, after your provisions fail ; then be fure you hope for a fettlement after your toils, and there with your own hand found your first city, and fortify it with a rampart. This was that famine he defigned: These the last calamities awaited us, which are to put a period to our woes. Come then, and with the fun's first light let us joyously explore what many ner of country this, who the inhabitants, or where the cities of the nation lie, and from the port let us pursus different ways. At present pour forth bowls in libay tion to Jove, and by prayers invoke my father Anchifes, and plant the wine profusely on the boards.

241

X

Thus having faid, he binds his temples next with a verdant bough, and fupplicates the genius of the country, and Earth, the eldeft of the gods, together with the nymphs and rivers yet unknown; then night, and the night's rifing conftellations, and Idzan Jove, and Phrygian mother Cybele, he invocates in due form, and both his parents, the one in heaven, and the other in Erebus. Upon this almighty father Jove thrice from the lofty heavens thundered aloud, and from the fky difplays a cloud, refulgent with beams of goldea light, brandifhing it in his hand.

Here, on a sudden, the rumour spreads through the Trojan bands, that the day was arrived, wherein they were to build the deftined city. Therefore with ardent emulation they renew the banquet, and, rejoicing in the important omen, place the bowls, and crown the wine. Soon as the next day arifen had enlightened the earth with his first beams, by different ways they explore the city, the limits of the country, and the coafts of the nation : They learn that these are the ftreams of the fountain Numicus, this the river Typer; that here the valiant Latins inhabit. Then the fon of Anchifes orders an hundred ambaffadors, felected from his whole body, to repair to the imperial palace of the king, all of them crowned with Minerva's boughs; and carry prefents to the hero, and implore his peace and favour to the Trojans. Forthwith commanded, they haften to obey, and fet forward with quick pace. Meanwhile Eneas himfelf marks out the walls of his new city with a low trench, and plans out the ground, and their first fettlements on the shore, and incloses it with a parapet and rampart in form of a camp. And now the youths having meafured out their way, beheld the towers and lofty ftructures of the Latins, and approached the wall. Before the city, boys and youths in their primeval bloom, are exercised in riding, and tame the yoked fteeds on the dufty plain : or bend the valiant bows ; or, with the exerted ftrength of their arms, hurl the quivering dart, and challenge 'one another at the race, or miffive weapon : When a meffenger, riding before, bears the news to the ears of the aged king, that men of huge dimensions, in a strange garb, were arrived. He orders them to be invited into his palace, and feated himfelf in the midft, on his ancient throne. On the highest part of the city, stood a magnificent capacious structure, raifed aloft on an hundred columns, the palace of Picus of Laurentum, commanding awful veneration by its facred woods, and the religious monuments of the founders of the race. It was a facred ulage for the kings here to receive the fceptre, and alfume the first badges of royalty; this was their fenate-house, their temple ; this their apartment allotted for facred banquets; here, after the facrifice of a ram, the fathers were wont to take their feats together at the long extended tables. Befides, in the vestible, ranged according to their order, the statues of their anceftors in antique cedar flood ; Italus, and father Sabinus planter of the vine, holding a crooked fcythe under his image; old Saturn, with the image of double-faced Janus; and other monarchs, traced from the original of the race, who martial wounds fuftained in fighting for their country. Befides, on the facred door pofts, many arms, captive chariots, and crooked fcymetars are fuspended ; helmets, crifted plumes, and maffy bars of gates, and darts, and fhields, and heaks torn from ships. There Picus himself, for horsemanfhip renowned, fat with his augural wand, in his fcanty robe fuccincity dreffed, and in his left-hand wielded a little target : Whom Circe, his concubine, ftung with fierce defire, having ftruck with her golden rod, X iii and by her forceries transformed, made a bird, and interfperfed his wings with colours.

Within this temple of the gods, fuch as we have now described it, and on his hereditary throne Latinus feated, called to him the Trojans into the palace; to whom, being entered, he, in mild accent, firft thefe words addreffed : Say, ye fons of Dardanus (for we are neither unacquainted with your city nor your race, nor hither have you fleered your course unheard of), what are your demands? What caufe or preffing exigency hath wafted your fleet to the Aufonian coaft, over fuch an extent of azure feas ? Whether you have entered the banks of our river, and stationed in our port, by wandering from your way, or driven by ftrefs of weather { difasters fuch as in many shapes seamen fuffer in the deep), decline not to accept from us the . fices of hospitality, nor remain strangers to the Latins, Saturn's race, who practife equity not by constraint nor laws, but from spontaneous choice, and regulating themfelves by the conduct of that ancient god. And, indeed, I call to mind (though the tradition is fomewhat obscure through length of time), that the old Aurunci thus informed : How Dardanus, a native of this country, reached, the Idzan cities of Phrygia, and Thracian Samos, now called Samothracia. Hence he had fet out from his Tuscan feat in the city Coritus : now enthroned, he fits in the golden palace of the ftarry heavens, and, konoured with an altar, adds to the number of the gods.

He faid, and Ilioneus made the following reply : O king, the illuftrious offspring of Faunus, neither grim ftorm forced us, by raging billows harraffed, to enter your realms : nor did the falle direction of the ftars, nor ignorance of the coaft, millead us from the courfe of our voyage. We all with defign, and willing minds, are carried to this city ; expelled a kingdom, once the most powerful, which the fun, coursing from the extremity of heaven, furveyed. From Jove is the origin of our race ; the fons of Dardanus rejoice in Jove their anceftor. Our king himfelf, fprung from Jove's exalted line, Æneas, the Trojan hero, fent us to your courts.

What a terrible ftorm of war, burfting from cruel Mycenæ, hath overrun the plains of Ida? under the influence of what fates both worlds of Europe and Afia in arms engaged ? Even those have heard, if fuch there are, whom earth's extremity removes far from us, the expanded ocean intervening; and thole, if fuch there are, whom the region of the intemperate fun, that lies extended in the midft of the other four, divides from the reft of mankind. From that fweeping deluge, born over fo many vaft oceans, we beg for our country's gods a small settlement, and harmless fhore, aud water and air, which are open to all. We shall be no dishonour to your realm ; nor shall small fame redound to you from thence ; or our grateful sense of lo generous an action ever be. defaced; nor shall the Aufonians repent that they received Troy into their bosom. I fwear by the fates of Eneas, and by his right-hand that excels, whether any has experienced in faith, or war and martial deeds; many people, many nations (contemn us not, because of ourfelves we bring in our hands the wreaths, and in our mouths the words of fuppliants) have not only been willing, but courted us to affociate with them. But the counfels of the gods, by their commanding influence, compelled us to go in queft of your territories. Hence Dardanus fprung ; hither redemands his offspring; and Apollo, by his awful fummons, urges our course to the Tufcan Tyber, and the facred streams of the fountain Numicus. Our chief offers you belides some small presents, the remains of his former fortune laved from the flames of Troy. From this golden bowl prince Anchifes performed libations at the altar: These were Priam's ornaments, when he gave laws in form to the affembled people, the fceptre, and facred diadem, and the royal robes, the work of the Trojan dames.

At these words of Ilioneus, Latinus keeps his countenance fixed in fleady regard, and dwells unmoved on the ground, rolling his eyes intent. Neither the embroidered purple robe, nor Priam's fceptre, move him fo much, as he mufes on his daughter's nuptials, and deep in his breaft revolves the oracles of ancient Fau-Eus. Concluding, that this is he who comes from fo-X iii reign parts, by the fates ordained his fon-in law, and called to fhare the regal power with equal fway : That from him a race was to come in valour eminent, and who, by their power, fhould master the whole world. At length, with joy, he fays : May the gods crown with fuccels our enterprize, and their own prelage. Trojan, what you demand shall be given. Nor do I reject your presents. While Latinus sways the sceptre, nor the fatnefs of a luxuriant foil, nor the opulence of Troy, shall be wanting to you. Only let Æneas come in perfon, if he has fo great affection to us, if he longs to be joined with us in holpitable league, and to be called our ally; nor let him dread our friendly prefence. To me it shall be a confiderable advance towards peace, to have an interview with, and touch your prince's hand. Do you now, on your part, report thefe my inftructions to your king: I have a daughter, whom neither the oracles from my father's fhrine, nor numerous prodigies from heaven, permit to match with a hufband of our own nation : They foretel that this defliny awaits Latium, that its fons-in-law shall come from foreign coasts, who, in their descendants, shall to the stars exalt our name. That is he whom the fates ordain I both judge, and (if aught of truth my mind divines) I wish it too.

This faid, the aged monarch choofes out fleeds from his whole number. In lofty stalls, three hundred of them flood fhining, and in full plight. Forthwith for all the Trojans he commands the winged courfers, caparifoned with purple, and embroidered trappings, to be led forth in order. Golden poitrels hang low down from their breafts ; arrayed in gold, they champ the yellow gold under their teeth. For the abfent hero, be orders a chariot, and a pair of harneffed fteeds of etherial breed, from their nostrils fnorting fire, of the race of those which crafty Circe, having itole from thechariot of her father the Sun, raifed up a spurious breed by a fubstituted mare. With these generous presents and friendly speeches from Latinus, the Trojans, mounted on their fleeds, return, and bring back peace. But: lo, the unrelenting wife of Jove was on her return from Inachian Argos, and, wafted in her chariot, poffossed the aerial regions : And, from on high, at the distance of Pachynus, the Sicilian promontory, far off the fpied Æneas full joyous, and the Trojan flect. She fees the Trojans already labouring on their buildings, already fettled in the land, and that they have abandoned their ships. Pierced with sharp pangs of grief fhe ftood ; then toffing her head, fhe poured forth thefe words from her enraged breaft : Ah race deteffed, and fates of Troy fill opposite to ours! how have they baffled the utmost efforts of my revenge !' Was it in the compass of my power to overthrow them in the plains of Sigeum? Inthralled could they be held in chains? When Troy was burnt to afhes, were they conlumed? Through the midft of armies, through the midft of flames, have they then found their way? But, I suppole the power of my divinity tired out now, lies dead and inactive : or, glutted with full revenge, 1 have droped my refentment. Yet, with hoftile intention, I dared to purfue them over the waves flung out of their country, and on the wide ocean oppofe myfelf to the exiles. The powers of heaven and fea have been fpent on the Trojans. What did the quickfands of Afric, or Scylla, or the vaft Charybdis avail me? now in Tyber's wifhed for channel they are lodged, fecure againft the raging feas and me. Mars was able to defiroy the fierce enormous race of the Lapithæ : The father of the gods himfelf gave up his beloved Calydon to Diana's refentment : What crime, either of the Lapithæ, or of Calydon, had deferved fuch fevere nunifiment ? But I, the great confort of Jove, who had power to leave no means untried, who have had recourse to all expedients, unhappy ! am vanquished by Æneas. But, if my own divinity is not powerful enough, fure I need. not hefitate to implore whatever deity any where lub-If I cannot move the powers above, I will for filts. licit those of hell. Grant I be not permitted to barr him from the kingdom of Latium, and Lavinia be unalterably defined his spoule by fate : Yet I may protract and throw remoras in the way of those mighty events ; yet I may with the found of war cut off the fubjects of both kings. With this coftly price of their people's blood let the father and fon in-law unite. Thy dowry, virgin, shall be paid in Trojan and Rutulian blood; and Bellona waits thee for thy bridemaid: Nor did teeming Hecuba alone impregnated with a firebrand, bring forth a blazing nuptial torch: To Venus too this production of hers shall prove the fame, even a fecond Paris, and a firebrand fatal to Troy again tottering to its fall.

:

1

Having uttered these words, dreadful down to earth the plunged. From the manfion of the dire fifters, and the infernal glooms, the calls up baleful Alecto; whole heart's delight are rueful wars, strifes, and deceits, and noxious crimes. Her even her father Pluto's felf abhors : her hellifh fifters abhor the monfter : into fo many shapes she turns herfelf, fo hideous are her forms, with fo many fnakes the grim fury fprouts up. Whom Juno ftimulates with thefe words, and thus addreffes : Virgin, offspring of the night, perform for me this talk, this fervice, your own peculiar province, that our honour and wounded fame be not. quite baffled ; nor the Æneian race be able fawningly to circumvent Latinus by this intended match, and take possession of the Italian territories. Thou canft arm to war the most cordial brothers, and by hates and animofities embroil families ; thou canft introduce into houses scourges and firebrands of death; with thee are a thousand specious pretexts, a thousand arts of doing mischief : Ransack thy fruitful bosom, unhinge the established peace, fow crimes, the feeds of war : Let the youth incline to, and at once demand and Inatch up arms.

Forthwith Alecto, infected with Gorgonian poifons, repairs first to Latium, and the losty palace of the Laurentine monarch, and took possible of Amata's filent penfive gate: In whole inflamed breast a thoufand female cares and angry commotions boiled, on account of the arrival of the Trojans, and the match with Furnus. At her the goddels flings from her ferpentine locks one of her finkes, and plunges it deep in her bofom down to be inroll receffes : that, by the monfter driven to fury, fhe may the whole family embroil. He, fliding between her robes and fmooth breaft, rolls on with imperceptible touch, and, in the transport of her rage, steals on her unawares, infusing into her a viperifh foul; the huge inake becomes a chain of wreathed gold around her neck ; he becomes a long winding fillet, and entwines her hair, and, in flippery mazes, creeps over all her limbs. And while the first infection downwards gliding diffuses its humid poifon through her fenfes, and blends the mingling fire with her bones; and while her mind, in all its powers, has not yet catched the flame, fhe fpoke with fofter accents, and in the wonted manner of tender. mothers, making many a heavy lamentation about her daughter and the Phrygian match: And is Lavinia given in marriage to Trojan exiles ? And have you, her father, nor on your daughter pity, nor on yourfelf, nor on her mother, whom with the first fair wind the perfidious pirate will abandon, and make to fea, carrying off the virgin ? Did not the Phrygian shepherd thus steal into Lacedaemon, and bore away Ledzan Helen to the Trojan towers? What becomes of your folemnly plighted faith, that fond regard you have always fhewed for your people, and your right-hand of promise, fo often given to your kinfman Turnus! If the Latins must needs have a fon-in-law from a foreign nation, and this be determined, and the commands of your father Faunus prefs you, for my part I reckon every land foreign, which, independent, is disjoined from our dominion, and that thus the gods intend. And (if the first origin of his family be traced back) Turnus has Inachus and Acrifius for his progenitors, and Mycenæ, in the midst of Greece, his country.

When having tried him by thefe words in vain, the finds Latinus refolutely fixed against her, and the ferpent's infuriate poison had now funk deep into her bowels, and crept through all her frame, then, indeed, in wretched diforder, startled by hideous monsters, the rages frantic with unexampled fury through the ample bounds of the city : As at times a top whirling under the twisted lash, which boys intent on their sport ex-ercife and torture in a large circuit round fome empty court; the engine driven about by the fcourge is hurried round and round in circling fpires ; the unpractifed throng and beardless band is lost in admiration of the voluble wood: They lend their fouls to the ftroke. With no lefs impetuous career is the queen impelled through the midft of cities, and clouds all in fierce commotion. Nay more, enterprising a more atrocious deed, and ufhering in a higher fcene of madnefs, having counterfeited the enthulialm of Bacchus, the flies out into the foreft, and conceals her daughter in the woody mountains, that from the Trojans she may wreft the match, and retard the nuptials : Exclaiming Eva -Bacchus, and bawling out, that thou alone art worthy of the virgin; for that, in honour of thee, the wields the tender ivy spears ; round thee she circuits with her virgin-choir; for thee fhe feeds her facred locks. The rumour hereof flies : And forthwith the fame enthusiafm at once actuates all the matrons, inflamed by the furies in their breafts, to feek out new habitations. They abandoned their homes ; to the winds they expofe their necks and hair. Others again fill the fkies with quavering yells, and enwrapped in fkins, wield their vine dreffed spears. She herself, in the midst of them, all on fire, fuftains a blazing pine, and fings the nuptial fong for her daughter and Turmus, whirling her bloody eye-balls round; and fuddenly, with a ftern air, she crics. lo! ye Latin matrons, hear wherever you be : If any affection for unhappy Amata dwell in your humane fouls, if concern for a mother's right touches you to the quick, unbind the fillets of your hair, with me take up the orgies. In this fort among the woods, among the deferts of wild beafts, Alecto, with the ftimulating fury of Bacchus, all around goads on the queen.

After the feemed to have fufficiently kindled the first transports of rage, and embroiled the counfel and whole family of Latinus, forthwith the baleful goddels hence is borne on dufky wings to the bold Rutulian's walls: Which city Danae, wafted to Italy by the impetuous fouth-wind, is faid to have founded for her Acrifian colony. The place of old was called Ardua by the ancient inhabitants, and now Ardea it remains, an illuftrious name : But its fortune was now gone. Here, in his lofty palace, was Turnus enjoying repofe at the black hour of midnight. Alecto lays afide her hideous afpect, and fury's limbs; the transforms herfelf into the shape of an old hag, ploughs with wrinkles her obscene loathed front, affumes grey hairs with a fillet, and binds on them an olive bough : She becomes Calybe, the aged prieftefs of Juno's temple, and with these words prefents herself to the youth full in his view : O Turnus, will you fuffer fo many toils thus to be loft and thrown away, and your sceptre to be transferred to a Trojan colony ? The king absolutely refuses you the match and dowry you have purchased with your blood, and a foreigner is fought to heir his crown. Go now, thus baffled, expose yourself to thankles dangers ; go, overthrow the Tuscan armies ; in peace protect the Latins. And now, in these very terms, the all-powerful queen of heaven herfelf commanded me plainly to befpeak you as you lay in the ftill filent night. Wherefore dispatch, and with alacrity order the youth to be armed, and march forth to war: in flames confume both the Phrygian leaders, who have flationed in the fair river, and their painted veffels. So the awful majefty of heaven commands. Let king Latinus himfelf, unless he confents to grant the promiled match, and ftand to his word, know, and at length experience Turnus in arms.

Upon this the youth, deriding the prophetefs, thus in his turn replies: The news has not efcaped my cars, as you imagine, that a fleet is arrived in the Tyber's channel. Forge not to me fuch fham grounds of fear and jealoufy: Nor of us is imperial Juno unmindful. But old age, O dame, oppreffed with dotage, and barren of truth, in vain haraffer thee with cares; and with falfe alarms deludes thee a prophetefs, whole bufnefs lies not among the arms of kings. Your province is to guard the flatues and temples of the gods: Let men have the management of peace and war, by whom war ought to be managed.

By these words Alecto kindled into rage. As for the youth, while yet the words were in his mouth, a fudden trembling feized his limbs; his eves fliffened : With fo many fnakes the fury hiffes, and a fhape fo horrid discloses itself to his view : Then, as he hefitates, and purpofes more to fay, rolling her fiery eyeballs, the repelled his words, and reared the double Inakes in her hair, clanked her whip, and thus further spoke in outrageous accent : Lo here am I oppreffed with dotage, whom old age, barren of truth, deludes with falfe alarms amidft the arms of kings. Turn thy eyes to these figns: I come from the abode of the dire fifters: Wars and death in my hand I bear. Thus having spoke, she flung a firebrand at the youth, and deep in his breaft fixed the torch fmoking with grim horrid light, Exceffive terror broke his reft, and Iweat burfting from every pore drenched his bones and limbs all over. Frantic for arms, he raves ; for arms he rummages the bed, and every corner of the palace : A paffion for the fword, a curfed madnels after war. and indignation belides, together rage in his break. As when with loud crackling noife a fire of flicks is applied to the fides of a bubbling caldron, and by the heat in frifky bells the liquors dance; within, the violence of the water rages, and high the fmoaky fluid in foam overflows; nor now the wave itfelf contains : In pitchy fteam it flies all abroad. Therefore, now that the peace is profanely violated, he enjoins the chief of the youth to repair to king Latinus; and orders arms to be prepared, to defend Italy, to expel the enemy from their territories : That he is a fufficient match for Trojans and Latins both. Having thus faid, and in vows addreffed the gods ; the Rutulians with emulous ardour animate one another to the war. One his diffinguished gracefulness of form, and youth incites ; another, his regal anceftors ; a third, his righthand for glorious deeds renowned.

While Turnus iufpires the Rutulians with courageous fouls, Alecto on Stygian wings against the Trojans speeds her flight : having with new fraudful design spied out the place, where on the shore fair lulus was by fecret inares, and open chace, purfuing beafts of prey. Here the imp of hell throws on his hounds a fudden madnefs, and affects their noftrils with the wellknown fcent, with keen ardour to purfue a ftag: Which was the first fource of the enfuing calamities, and to war inflamed the peafants ruftic minds. The stag was of exquisite beauty, and large branching horns ; which fnatched from its mother's dugs, the fons of Tynhus nurfed up, and Tyrrhus, the father, to whom the royal herds are in fubjection, and the charge of the fields all around intrusted. Him, trained to discipline, their fifter Silvia with her utmost care was wont to deck, interweaving his horns with foft garlands ; the animal she combed and washed in the limpid stream. He, patient of the touch, and accustomed to his mafter's board, ranged in the woods by day; and again at night, however late, home of himfelf repaired to his familiar retreat. Him at a diftance, in his roving hour, the mad hounds of the young huntfinan Iulus roufed : When by chance he had been gliding down the river with the ftream, and on the verdant bank was now allaying his heat. Afcanius himfelf too, fired with the love of diffinguished praise, from his bended bow shot arrows at him : Nor was the god unaiding to his erring hand, and with a loud whizzing found, the shaft impelled through his flanks, and through his vitals pierced. But the wounded animal fled homeward to his known habitation, and groaning entered his fall : And all bloody, and, like one imploring pity, filled all the houfe with moans. Silvia, the fifter, first beating her arms with her palms, calls for aid, and fummons together the hardy fwains. They (for the fierce fiend that hurries them on lurks in the fecret woods) fuddenly come up : One armed with a brand hardened in the fire, one with a flurdy knotted club: Whatever by each in rummaging was found, his rage makes a weapon. Tyrrhus, as by chance with driven wedges. he was cleaving an oak in four, breathing fury, foatches up his axe, and fummons his ruffic bands. But the atrocious goddefs, having from her watch-houfe found the opportunity of executing her mischeivous plot, Y

233

mounts the high roof of the stall, and from the lofty fummit founds the shepherd's fignal, and in the winding horn strains her hellish voice; with which every grove forthwith quaked, and the deep receffes of the woods inly trembled. Even the lake of Diana, heard it from afar, the river Nar, white with fulphureous water, heard it, and the fprings of Velino: And frighted mothers pressed their infants to their breafts. Then indeed, wherever the cornet direful gave the alarm, the wild unpolifhed fwains, fnatching up arms, run together with speed from every quarter : And, in like manner, from their open tents the Trojan youth pour forth fupplies to Afcanius. They ranged their battalions. Nor now in ruftic skirmish are they engaged, with hardened clubs, and flakes burnt at the point; but with two-edged fteel they encounter, and a hideous crop of drawn fwords shoots up with horrid afpect, far and wide, and the arms of brais ftruck with the fun beams glitter, and dart their radiance to the clouds. As when with the first breath of wind the wave begins to whiten, the fea rifes by degrees, and higher and higher heaves its billows, then from the lowest bottom, fwells up together to the skies. Here before the foremost line of battle, young Almon, the eldeft of the fons of Tyrrhus, is by a whizzing arrow flain, for deep in his throat the wounding weapon fluck fast, and with the blood rufbing through the wound choaked up the paffage of the humid voice, and flender breath of life. Round him many bodies of heroes fall : And among the reft aged Galæfus, while he is offering to mediate peace; a man who was of all others the most upright, and of old the richest in Ausonian Five flocks of bleating theep, with five herds of lande. larger cattle, were his revenue ; and with an hundred ploughs he turned the foil,

Now, while in the plains these actions are going on with equal fury, the goddefs having accomplished her promise, when she had drenched the field of war in blood, and ushered in the havock of the first encounter, she leaves Hesperia, and up-borne through the aerial sky, in triumph, address Juno with haughty speech:

See difcord brought for you to its confummation by baleful war : Now bid them combine in friendship, and contract alliances; fince I have tinctured the Trojans with Aufonian blood. To these my exploits this will I further add, if I be affured of your confent, the neighbouring towns by rumours will I urge on to the war, and inflame their minds with the paffion which furious Mars infpires, that from all hands they may come auxiliaries : War will I fpread over all the country. Then Juno in return : Of terrors and fraud we have enough : Fixed are the caufes of the war; in arms they combat hand to hand ; those arms, which chance first gave, recent blood hath stained. Such efpoufals and fuch nuptial joys, let Venus's peerlefs off fpring, and king Latinus celebrate. Father Jove, the great ruler of heaven fupreme, permits you not to roam with farther licence in the/e higher regions. Hence then return. Whatever turn of fortune or labours may henceforth take, myfelf will manage. These words Saturnia uttered. At which the fury lifts up her wings hiffing with fnakes, and hies her to the manfion of Cocytus, leaving her high places in this upper world. In the centre of Italy, under lofty mountains, lies a place of high renown, and celebrated by fame in many regions, called the vallies of Amfanctus : The fide of a grove, gloomy with thick boughs, hems it in on either hand, and in the midst a torrent, in hoarfe murmurs, and with whirling eddies roars along the rocks. Here are shewn a horrible cave, and the vent-holes of grifly Pluto; and a vaft gulf, having burft hell's barriers, expands its pestilential jaws : Into which the fury, abhorred demon, having plunged out of fight, difburdened heaven and earth.

Nor less active meanwhile is Juno, the imperial daughter of Saturn, in conducting the begun war to its final confummation. The whole body of the fhepherds rufh from the field of battle into the city; and bring back their flain, the young Almon, and the corpfe of Galefus with ghaftly wounds difhonoured : They implore the gods, and obteft Latinus for yeageance. Turnus too comes up, and in the midft of Y iij

the charge of fire and fword, aggravates the terror ; complains that the Trojans are invited to fhare the crown; the Phrygian race incorporated with his; and he himfelf driven from court and favour. Then thole, whole mothers, ftruck with Bacchanal fury, bound over the pathlefs unfrequented groves in choirs, collected from every quarter, combine, and importunately u ge the war; for not inconfiderable is the influence of Amata's name. All these forthwith against the omens, against the decrees of the gods, in defiance of the thwarting power of heaven, crave the impious war. With emulous ardour they befet the palace of king Latinus. He, like a rock in the fea unmoved, withftands them : Like a rock in the fea, which, when the mighty shock comes on, when numerous waves around it roar, fupports itself by its own huge weight : In vain the cliffs and foamy rocks rage around, and the fea-weed dashed against its fides is repulsed. But when he finds no means will avail, to defeat their blind inconfiderate refolution, and things go on by the direction of fierce inexorable Juno ; the aged monarch hav-ing poured forth many proteflations to the gods and fkies : Alas! fays he, in vain by the fates are we overpowered, and borne down by the florm. Yourfelves, O wretches, with your facrilegious blood fhall pay the atonement of this your wickedness! And thee, O Turnus, the impious promoter of this war! thee dire vengeance shall in time overtake : And thou shalt supplie ite the gods by vows too late. For as to me, my reft is provided, and all my fecurity is near in view : A splendid funeral is dit I lose. Nor more he faid ; but that himfelf up in his palace, and quitted the reins of government.

In Hefperian Latium it was a cuftom, which the Alban cities all along have observed as facred; now Rome, the miftrefs of the world religiously observes; when first they rouze Mars to battle; whether with the Getes they intend to wage the disaftrous war, or with the Hyrcanians, or the Arabs, or march against the Indians, pursue the morning, and from the Parthions redemand the Roman Mandards. There are two gates of war, for fo they are called, held facred from principle of religion, and awful regard to ferocious Mars: An hundred brazen bolts, and the eternal ftrength of iron thut them falt ; and guardian Janus ftirs not from the threshold. These, when the Senatorian fathers have fixed the firm fentence of war, the conful himfelf, diftinguished by his royal robe, and Gabine cincture, unlocks the jarring portals; himfelf rouzes the combat : Him all the youth follow, and the brazen cornets with hoarfe affent coufpire. In this . fashion Latinus then too was urged to declare war against the Trojans, and unfold the dreary gates. The aged prince refrained from touching them, and with abhorrence fhrunk back from the flocking office, and shut himself up in the dark shades. Then Saturnia, the queen of the gods, shooting from the sky, herfelf with her own hand fhoved the lingering doors, and, turning the hinge, burft the brazen portals of war.

١

Book VII.

Aufonia, before at rest and unmoved, is all on fire. Some prepare to take the field on foot ; fome, mounted on lofty fteeds, amidft clouds of duft rufh with fury to the war; all are importunate for arms. Some with fat feam polifh their fmooth bucklers and glittering fpears, and on the whet-ftone grind their battle axes : Well pleafed they bear the ftandards, and hear the trumpets found. Moreover, five great cities on anvils raifed renew their arms; the powerful Atina, and proud Tivoli, Ardea, and Crustumeri, and Antemnæ with turrets crowned. They hollow trufty coverings for their heads, and bend the offer hurdles for the boffes of their bucklers : Others hammer out the brazen corflets, or from ductile filver mould the fmooth cuiffes. To this all regard of the fhare and feythe; to this all love for the plough gave way. In furnaces they forge. their father's fwords anew: and now the trumpets found : The tally, the private fignal for the war, is iffued forth. One in hurry and trepidation fnatches a helmet from the roof : Another joins his neighing fleeds to the yoke, and braces on his buckler and ha-bergeon wrought in gold of triple texture, and girds on his trufty fword.

•¥ ij

Now open to me the fprings of Helicon, ve facred mufes; infpire and conduct me while I fing; what kings were incited to the war ; what troops following leader filled the plain; with what heroes the aufpicious land of Italy flourished even in those early days ; with what arms it blazed. For you, ye goddeffes, both remember, and can record the fame : To us a flight breath of fame is fcarce derived. First enters on the war fierce from the Tuscan coafts Mezentius the contemner of the gods, and arms his troops. Next to him Laufus his fon; than whom none was more graceful, excepting Laurentine Turnus's fuir perfon. Laufus for horfemanship renowned, and a mighty huntiman, leads from the city Agylla a thousand followers, in vain, fince he was never to return ; worthy to have more joy in aboying a father's commands, and to whom Mezentius ought not to have been the father. Next to these Aventinus of fair renown, sprung from revowned Hercules, proudly difplays upon the graffy plain his chariot diffinguished with the palm, the trophy of victory, and his victorious fleeeds : And on his buckler wears his paternal enlign, an hundred fnakes, and Hydra environed with ferpents. Whom in a wood on the Aventine bill, the priestefs Rhea clandestinely brought forth into the etherial light, a woman mixing with a god, what time the victorious Tirynthian hero. having flain Geryon reached the Laurentine fields, and bathed his Iberian heifers in the Tufcan river Tyber. Javelins in their hands, and goring pikes. they bear into the field of war; and fight with the tapering point of the Sabine rapier. Himself on foot, shaking a lion's enormous hide, shaggy with threatening briftles, its white grinning tufks difplayed, having it thrown over his head : Thus he entered the royal palace, a horrid figure, and his shoulders mantled with the attire of Hercules. Two brothers next, Catillus and fierce Corus, Argive youths, forfake the walls of Tibur : Its people called by their brother Tiburtus's name : And before the vap, amidft thick flying darts, are hurried into action. As when two cloud born centaurs from the high mountain's top descend, with impetuous career, leaving Omole and the fnowy Othrys; the fpacious wood gives way to them as they move, and the fhrubs with loud rufiling noife retreat. Nor was the founder of the city Prænefte not prefent ; king Czculus, whom every age believed to have been begot by Vulcan amids the rural herds, and to have been found in the fire. Him a ruftic legion accompanies from all the neighbourhood around : Both those who. people high Præneste, and who the fields of Gabian Juno, and the cool banks of Anio, and the mountainous towns of the Hernicians, watered with defcending rills : Whom thos, rich Anagnia, and whom thou, father Amafenus, feedeft. Thefe are not all fupplied with arms, nor fhields, nor rattling cars : The greateft part fling balls of livid lead; fome weild two javelins in their hand, and for covering to their heads wear tawny beavers of the fur of wolves: With their left-foot naked they tread the ground ; a fhoe of unwrought leather covers the other. Meffapus next, a gallant horseman, Neptune's offspring, whom none had power by fire nor fteel to overthrow, fuddenly calls to arms his people funk in indolence through long inaction, and his troops difused to war, and handles the fword once more. These command the Fescennine troops, and the Falisci famed for equity; those possess the strengths of Soracte, and the - Flavinian lands, and the lake and mountain of Ciminus, and Capena's groves. Uniformly they moved in harmonious order, and fung the praifes of their king. As when at times the fnow-white fwans foaring through the liquid fky are homeward borne from pafture, and through their long necks pour melodious notes; the river Cayfter and Alius's adjacent lake flruck from far return the found. Nor would any one who had heard the music at a distance, have taken them for armed troops. of fuch a vaft body promifcuoully joined; but for an airy cloud of fonorous fowls driven to the shore from. the deep abyfs. Lo Claufus, of the ancient blood of the Sabines, leading a mighty hoft, and himfelf like to a mighty hoft; Claulus, from whom the Claudian tribe and clan is now through Latium diffused, fince Rome has been thared with the Sabines. With them Amiterna's numerous bands, and the ancient Quirites, the whole power of Eretum, and olive bearing Mutufcæ: Thole who inhabit the city Nomentum, the dewy fields of Velino, the horrid rocks of Tetrica, and mount Severus, Cafperia, and Foruli, and the river of Himella : Who drink the Tiber and the Fabaris; whom cold Nurfia fent forth, the Hortine Squa-. drons and the Latin nations; and thofe, whom Allia, an inaufpicious name, dividing runs between. In fuch numbers as the billows are rolled on the furface of the Libyan main, when furly Orion fets in the wintery waves; or, as the thick ears of corn are fcorched by the first heat of fummer's fun, either in the plain of Hermus, or Lycia's yellow fields. Their bucklers ring, and earth, ftruck with the trampling of their feet, trembles. Next Halefus, of Agamemuon's race, foe to the Trojan name, yokes his fleeds in the chariot, and hastens to Turnus's aid a thousand warlike troops; these who with harrows turn the foil of Mafficus fertile in vines, and whom those ancient fathers the Aurunci fent from their lofty hills, and the adjacent plains of Sidicinum, those who march from Cales, and who border on the fordable river Volturnus, and together with these the hardy inhabitants of Saticula, and the troops of the Ofci. Short tapering darts are their weapons; but their fashion is to fasten them to their arms, by a limber thong. A fhort target covers their left arms; and hand to hand they fight with crook -. ed faulchions. Nor shall you, Oebalus, be in my numbers left unnamed, whom Telon is faid to have engendered on the nymph Sebethis, when he was poffeffed of Capreae, the realms of the Teleboans, now advanced in years; but the Son, not content likewife with his paternal lands, even then extended his dominions far and wide over the people named Satraftes, and the plains which Sarnus waters; and those who inhabit Rufræ and Batulum, and the fields of Celenna, and those whom the turrets of fruit-bearing Abella overlook : Who, after the Teutonic fashion are wont to fling barbed darts, whofe helmets are the rind from the cork-tree torn, and of glittering brass their halfmoon shields, of glittering brass their swords. And you too, Ufens, mountainous Nurfæ fent forth to battle, fignalized by fame and happy feats of arms : Whofe Jubjects are the Æquicoli, a race peculiarly rough, bred in a hardened foil, and inured to frequent hunting in the woods. In arms they vex the earth, and ever take delight to carry off fresh spoils, and live by plunder. And Umbro too, of fingular fortitude, came by commiffion from his prince Archippus, priest of the Marrubian nation, his helmet decked with a wreath of the aufpicious olive, who by inchantment and magical operation was wont to fprinkle the dews of fleep on the viper's race, and the noxious breathing Hydra's, their furies he affuaged, and by his art their ftings he heal-But to cure the hurt of pointed Dardanian fleel ed. furpaffed his power and skill; nor soporific charms, nor potent herbs gathered in the Marsian mountains, availed him aught against those wounds. For thee Angitia's groves, for thee Fucinus with his chrystal flood, for thee the clear transfucent lakes did mourn. Virbius too, the beauteous offspring of Hippolytus, marched to the war; whom his mother Aricia fent forth illuftrioufly accomplified, having been educated in the groves of Egeria, near thole humid fhores, where, fat with offerings, and not hard to be appealed, Diana's altar stands. For they tell us that Hippolytus, what time by his mother's fraudful art he fell, and with his blood fatiated his father's vengeance, having been torn in pieces by his frighted fleeds, again vifited the etherial flars, and the superior regions of this world, recalled to life by herbs of fovereign virtue, and Diana's love. Then the almighty father, incenfed that any mortal should rife to the light of life from the infernal shades, himfelf with thunder hurled down to the Stygian floods Apollo's offspring, the inventor of fuch medicine and art. But propitious Diana conceals Hippolytus in a fecret receis, and configns him to the nymph of the Egerian grove; where in folitude and obscurity he passed his life in the Italian woods, aud, changing his name, was called Vibrius. Whence too from Trivia's temple and facred groves horn-hoofed fteeds are debarred, because, frighted by sea-monsters, they overturned the chariot, and the youth on the fhore. Yet not the lefs eagerly his fon managed his fiery fleeds on the level plain, and in his chariot rufhed on the war. Turnus himfelf, a comely perfonage, moves in the van, wielding his arms, and by the head entire furmounts the reft : Whofe towering helmet, plumed with a triple creft of hair, fuftains a chimæra exfpiring from her jaws Ætnean fires. The more outrageous she, and tremenduous with baleful flames, in proportion as with the effusion of blood the combat deepens and grows more fierce. But his polifhed fhield, an Io wrought in gold, with horns erect adorned, Io now overgrown with fur, now a heifer (an illustrious device) and Argus the virgin's keeper, and Inachus her fire, pouring the river from his emboffed urn. A' cloud of infantry fuceeds; and fhielded battalions in condenfed array overfpread the whole plains ; the Argive youth, the Aufonian bands, the Rutuli, and ancient Sicanians, the Sacranian hofts, and the Labici with their painted bucklers : Thole, Tiberinus, who manure thy lawns, and the facred banks of Numicus, and with the plough fhare labour the Rutulian hills and Circe's mount; over which fields prefides Jupiter of Anxur, and Feronia in her verdant grove rejoicing : Where lies Saturn's black dreary fens, and where chill Ufens through deep vallies shapes his winding way, and finks into the fea. Over and above all thefe came Camilla of the Volician nation, leading a fquadron of horfe, and troops gorgeoufly arrayed in arms of brafs, a virgin warrior. Not to the diftaff or Minerva's fost employments had she accultomed her female hands ; but, though a virgin, was inured to bear the hardships of war, and in swiftness of foot to outftrip the winds. Even over the topmost stalks of standing corn she could have lightly skimmed, nor once had hurt the tender ears in her career; or along the furfuce of the main, fuspended on the heaving furge, could glide, nor in the liquid plain once dip her nimble feet.

260

Her all the youth, pouring from city and country, and crowds of matrons, view with wonder, and gaze after her as fhe goes, gaping with minds aghaft to fee how the regal ornament of purple mantles her fmooth alabafter neck; how the buckle interlaces her hair in à caul of gold collected; with what grace fhe bears her Lycian quiver, and her paftoral myrtle-fpear tipped with fieel.

BOOK EIGHTH.

Soon as from the tower of Laurentum Turnus had difplayed the fignal, and with hoarfe clangor the trumpets rattled; foon as he roufed the fprightly courfers, and clashed the din of arms; forthwith the minds of all are driven to high commotion; all Latium at once with hurrying tumultuous hafte combine, and the madding youth burn with fury. The chief leaders, Meffapus, and Ulens, and that contemner of the gods Mezentius, draw together their fuccours from every quarter, and of the labourers depopulate the lands around. Venulus too is fent to the city of great Diomede, to crave a fupply : And give him intelligence, that the Trojans were fettled in Latium, that Æneas was landed with a fleet, aud introducing his conquered gods, and gave out that he was defigned by fate the king of Latium; that many nations joined themfelves to the Trojan, and his fame began to be fpread abroad all over Latium. What he propofes by these measures; what events and refolutions in confequence of the war he longs to bring about (if fortune attend him) appear more obvious to (Diomede) himfelf, than to king Turnus, or king Latinus.

Such in Latium was the ftate of affairs: All which the Trojan hero perceiving, fluctuates with a high tide of anxious care; and now this way, now that, he fwiftly turns his wavering mind, fnatches various purpoles by flarts, and shifts himself every way. As when in brazen vats of water the trembling beams of light, reflected back from the fun, or from the image of the radiant moon, swiftly floats over every place around, and now is darted up on high, and firikes the cielings of the lofty roof. It was night, and fleep profound held fast in his fost chains weary animals, the cattle and flying kind over all the earth; when on the bank, and under the cold canopy of heaven, father Æneas, diffurbed in mind with the thought of difaftrous war, laid him down, and indulged his weary limbs in late repose. To his view the old venerable god of the place, Tyberinus himfelf, from his fmooth gliding ftream, was feen to lift up his head among the poplar boughs. A fine robe of lawn enwrapped his limbs in its fea-green folds, and shady reeds covered his locks. Then thus he addreffed Eneas, and with thefe words eafed him of his cares : Hail, fprung from the race of gods, who to us bringent home the remains of our city Troy faved from their foes, and preferveit Pergamus defined to fland for ever, a welcome expected guest to the Laurentile foil and lands of Latium; here is thy fixed abode, thy fure dwelling place: Flinch not from thy defign, nor be difmayed by the threats of war. All indignation and anger of the gods is overpast. And now, that you may not imagine sleep forms in your mind these visionary ideas, under the elms on the banks of the river you shall find a fow lying, that has brought forth a litter of thirty young, white the dam, reclining on the ground, her offspring white around her dugs. That place shall be the station for your city, a fure harbour of rest from your toils : Inconfequence of which, after a revolution of thrice ten years, Afcanius shall build the city Alba of illustrious name. Events I foretel not dubious nor uncertain. Now attend, I will briefly shew by what means you may fuccessfully accomplish the work in hand. In these coafts the Arcadians, a race from Pallas descended, who, hither accompanying their king Evander and his flandard have chosen their place of refidence, and in the mountains built a city called Pallanteum, from the name of their anceftor Pallas. These perpetually carry on war with the Latin nation : Admit them the the confederates of your camp, and with them join league. Myfelf will conduct you along my banks and river, right on your way, that borne up by my aid you may with oars furmount the adverse stream. Arife, beftir yourfelf, O goddefs born, and with the firft fetting flars offer prayers to Juno in due form, and by Suppliant vows vanquish her refentment and threats. To me you shall pay honour when victorious over all your foes. I am he whom you behold gliding along the banks with my full ftream, and dividing the fertile lands, the azure Tiber, a river highly favoured by heaven. Here is my fpacious manfion ; nigh lofty cities my fountain springs. He faid : then in the deep pool the river god plunged, diving to the bottom: From Æneas night and fleep departed. Up he gets, and, viewing the rifing beams of the etherial fun, in his hollow palms with pious form he raifed water from the river, and poured forth to heaven thefe words : Ye nymphs, ye Laurentine nymphs, whence rivers have their origin ; and thou, O father Tiber, with the facred river, receive Æneas into your protection, and defend him at length from dangers. In whatever fource thy Subterraneous lake contains thee compafionate to our misfortunes, from whatever foil thou fpringest forth most beauteous; sovereign river of the Italian streams graced with the horns of gower, thou shalt ever be honoured with my veneration, ever with my offerings: Oh grant us but thy prefent aid, and by nearer figns confirm thy oracles divine. Thus he fpeaks ; and from his fleet fingles out two gallies, and furnishes them nuith implements for rowing; at the fame time fupplies his friends with arms. But lo, a prodigy fudden and ftrange to fight, a milk white fow, of fimilar colour, with her milk-white young, lay along the wood, and is feen on the verdant bank ; which to thee, O fovereign Juno (for to thee he was enjoined) the pious. Æncas a facred offering devotes, and prefents before. thy altar with her offspring. The Tyber all that night long calmed his fwelling river, and refluent with a filent fiream flood poifed; fo that, like to a mild unruffed pool, and peaceful lake, he fmoothed his watery plain, that there might be no need of flruggling with the oar. Therefore with aufpicious acclaim they fpeed their begun voyage: The pitchy fir glides along the Kream: The waves admire, the woods unaccuftomed to fuch feenes admire at the far gleaming fhields of heroes, and painted keels floating on the river. Their fleerage night and day they labouring ply, overpafs the long windings of the river, are fereened on either hard with various trees, and cut the green-wood fhades in the fmooth glaffy plain.

Z

The flaming fun had afcended the mid-region of the fky, when at a diftance they defery the city-walls, the fort, and the roofs of houses fcattered here and there, which now the Roman power hath raifed to heaven : Evander then poffessed the poor domains. Thither they turn their prows without delay, and approach the city. On that day the Arcadian monarch chanced to be offering a folemn anniversary facrifice before the city in a grove to the great Hercales, Amphitryon's foster fon, and his tutelary gods. At the fame time his fon Pallas, and with him all the youth of quality, and the poor fenate, were offering incenfe; and the tepid victims blood fmoaked at the altars. Soon as they fpied the tall veffels, and that they were gliding towards them between the shady grove, and the rowers incumbent on their filent oars ; they are flartled at the fudden fight, and, leaving their banquets, all rife up at once : Whom Pallas boldly forbids to interrupt the facred rites, and, fnatching up a javelin, flies himfelf to meet them, and at at a diftance from a rifing ground : Youths, fays he, what motive hath induced you hither to attempt your unknown way? Whither are you bound ? Who are you by delcent? Whenee come you? Peace bring you hither or war? Then father Æneas thus from the lofty deck replies, and in his hand before him extends a branch of peaceful olive : The fons of Troy you fee, and arms hoftile to the Latins, who have exiled and driven us out by proud licentious war. To Evander we repair. Bear him thefe tidings, and fay, Dardania's chofen chiefs are come, imploring his confederate arms. Pallas, ftruck with fo great a name, flood amazed : Land, he fays, whoever thou art; addrefs my father in perfon, and come under our roof, a welcome guest. Then he grafped him by the hand, and hung upon him in close embrace. Advancing they enter the grove, and leave Then with courteous accents Æneas thus the river. addreffes the king : Worthieft of the fons of Greece, to whom fortune hath led me to make my fupplication, and to fpread forth before you these boughs with fuppliant wreaths adorned ; I truly had no apprehenfion from your being a Grecian leader and an Arcadian, nor from your being originally allied to the two fons of Atreus ; but consciousness of my own uprightnefs, the holy oracles of the gods, the affinity of our anceftors, and your fame propagated over the earth, have bound me to you in friendship, and by fate urged me hither a willing gueft. Dardanus, the first father and founder of the city llium, born of Electra. the daughter of Atlas, as the Greeks record, to the Trojans steered his course : The mighty Atlas, who on his shoulder props the celestial orbs, gave to the world Electra. Your father again is Mercury, whom bright Maia having conceived on Cyllene's frozen top brought forth. But Atlas, if we may give any credit to tradition, the fame Atlas who fupports the ftars of heaven, procreated Maia. Thus from one flock both our stems divide. Relying on these circumstances, I had not recourfe to embaffies, nor artfully employed" preliminary means of founding your inclination; myfelf, and my own life I have exposed, and am come a fuppliant to your court. The fame Daunanian nation perfecutes us, which you with cruel war purfues : Us, if they once expel, nothing they prefume will hinder them from entirely reducing all Hefperia under their yoke ; and from being malters of the fea, both that above, and that which washes it below. Take then, and give pledges of faith. With us are perfonages fout. Zij and robult for war, with us are martial fouls, and youth tried and approved in action.

267

Æneas faid : He had all along with attention furveved his mouth and eyes, and whole body, as he fpoke. Then thus he briefly replies : Moft gallant of the Trojan race, how heartily do I receive and own you for my friend! how well I recollect the words, the voice and features of your great fire Anchiles ! For I remember, that Priam, Laomedon's fon, in his way to Salamis, to visit the realms of his fifter Helione, continuing his progress forward, visited likewise Arcadia's frozen coafts. Then manhood first shaded my cheek with down : I admired the Trojan chiefs, Laomedon's fon in particular I admired ; but Anchifes walked more majeftic than them all : My foul burned with youthful defire to accost the hero, and join hand in hand. Ŀ came up, and fondly led him to the walls of Pheneus. He at departing gave me a fplendid quiver, and Lycian arrows, a mantle interwove witht breads of gold, and two bridles with golden boffes, of which my Pallas is now poffested. Therefore I both join my right-hand with your In league as you defire, and, when first the morrow's light shall to earth return, I will difmils you joyful with Supplies, and aid you with my power. Meanwhile, fince hither you are come our friends, courteoully celebrate with us this anniverlary feftival, which to defer would be impiety, and even now accustom yourfelves to the banquets of your allies. Thus having faid, he orders the diffies and cups which had been removed, to be replaced, and himfelf plants the heroes on the graffy feat : And Æneas in chief he entertains with æ couch and the fur of a fhaggy lion, and invites him to share his maple throne. Then with great earnestness the chosen youths and prieft of the altar bring forward. the roafted joints of the bullocks, heap in canifters the gifts of Ceres laboured for ule, and dispense the joys of Bacchus. Æneas, and with him the Trojan youth, feath on the chine, and hallowed entrails of a folid ox.

As foon as hunger was affuaged, and luft of eating flaid, King Evander fays: Not superfition vain, and ignorant of the ancient gods, hath imposed on us these folemn rites, these banquets in due form prepared, this facrifice to fo great a deity : From cruel dangers faved, my Trojan guest, in gratitude we perform these rites, and merited honours renew. Now first observe this rock fuspended on craggs; how the huge piles are fcattered all abroad, and the mountainous abode ftands defolate, and the loofened cliffs have drawn down on the plain prodigious ruin. Here, in a vast recess, far from fight removed, was a cave, which the hideous figure of Cacus, that human favage, poffeffed, inacceffible to the fun-beams : still with recent bloodshed smoked the pavement; and to the proud inhuman gates the heads of men affixed, hung forth to view, all pale with pitcous gore. Vulcan was the monfter's father : whole footy flames belching from his mouth, he stalked with bulk Time at length to us brought the enormous. wished for aid and prefence of a god : For Hercules, the illustrious avenger of wrongs, leafonably arrived in proud triumph from the death and fpoils of three bodied Geryon; and this way the victorious here drove his stately bulls : And the heifers possessed the valley and the banks of the river. But the wildly licentious foul of thievish Cacus, left any villainy or fraudulent practice by him had been unattempted or uneffayed, earries off from their falls four bullocks of exquifite make, and as many heifers of form furpaffing. And these, lest there should be any prints of their feet direct, having dragged towards the cave by the tail, and hurried along with the traces of their way reversed, he concealed in his gloomy den. Thus no figns led the learcher to the cave. Meanwhile, when now the herowas moving from their stalls his full fed herds, and preparing to be gone, the heifers, at parting, began to low, the whole grove was filled with their plaintive notes, and the hills with clamorous din were left. One of the beifers returned the found, and pent up in the depth of the spacious cave rebellowed, and frustrated the hope of Cacus. Then, indeed, from his black gall, the hero's indignation burfling kindled into fury : In his hand he fuatches up arms, and his oak, ponde-Zii rous with knots, and with speed makes toward the summit of the airy mountain. Then first our men beheld Cacus difmayed, and by his eyes betraying confusion and diforder. Instant he flies fwifter than the east-wind, and feeks the fbeltering cave : Fear added wings to his feet. Soon as he had thut himfelf in, and burfting the chains in hafte, let down the enormous rock, which, by the power of iron and his father's art, was fuspended, and on bolts relying made fast the gates; lo the Tyrinthian here transported with fury was upon him, aud, examining every paffage to the cave, hither and thither rolled his eyes, gnashing with his teeth. Boiling with fire, he thrice furveys the whole Aventine mount; thrice. in vain effays to florm the gates of maffy rock; thrice in the vale fatigued and breathlefs he fet down to reft. A tharp flinty rock flood forth, with cliffs ragged and broken in the points around, and on the ridge of the cave role, towering to the fight, a convenient shelter for the nefts of dire inaufpicious birds. This, where, bending forward with its brow it overhung the river on the left, the hero, full opposite to it on the right, with strained effort shook, and from the deep roots up torn disjoined; then on a fudden impelled it: With which impulse the fky in its wide extent refounds, the fhattered banks leap hither and thither, and the affrighted river runs back. And now the den, and spacious hall of Cacus, bared of covering appeared, and his gloomy caverns in their inmost receffes were laid open r Juft as if by fome violence the earth in her deep receffes yawning wide fhould unlock the infernal manfions, and disclose those pale realms abhorred by the gods, and from above the hideous gulf be feen, and the ghofts flartle at the light darted in upon them. Him, therefore, thus fuddenly furprifed in the unexpected light, imprifoned in his hollowed rock, and in uncouth manner braying, Alcides from above galls with darts, calls every weapon to his aid, and plies him with flubs of trees and ponderous millftones. But he (for now no refuge from the danger remains) from his jaws vomits up vast quantities of smoke, wonderous to tell ! involves the cave in pitchy vapour, fnatching all profpect from the hero's eyes; and deep in his cave fhoots up in wreaths a night of imeke, intermingling fire with darkness. This Alcides in his rage could not bear; but with an impetuous fpring flung himself amidst the flame, where in thickest vol-Hes the fmoke drives its waves, and the capacious den fluctuates with rolling tides of pitchy vapour. Here, in his darkened cell, he feizes Cacus difgorging unavailing flames, grasping him hard as in a knot; then griping fast, squeezes his eyes starting from their fockets, and his throat till it is quite parched and drained of blood. Forthwith having wrenched up the doors, the grim manfion is laid open ; the heifers that had been filchedaway, and the stollen effects abjured, are exposed to the view of heaven; the deformed carcafe is dragged forth by the feet. They are unable to fatiate their curiofity with gazing on his haggard eyes, his borrid aspect, and the breast of the demi favage shagged with briftly hair, and the extinguished fires in his throat. From that time the honours of the god have been celebrated in Italy, and posterity with joy have observed this day : And Potitius, the first founder, and the Pinarian family, the depository of this inflitution facred to Hercules, erected this altar in the grove; which shall both be stilled by us the great, and the great shall be for ever. Wherefore come, noble youths, in celebrating virtues fo illustrious, encircle your locks with a garland, and extend your goblets in your hands, invoke our common gods, and offer the wine with good will, He faid, when with its Herculean shade the poplar of varying hue, both decked his locks, and with its leaves entwined hung down : And a facred goblet filled his right-hand. Forthwith, all with joy pour libations on the table, and supplicase the gods. Meanwhile the fphere of day declining, evening draws nearer on : And now the priefts, and Potitius on their head, marched in proceffion, clad in. fkins, according to form, and in their hands bore flaming torches. They renew the feaft, and introduce the grateful offerings of the fecond fervice, and heap the altars with chargers richly loaded. Then round the altar, fmoking with perfumes the Salii amidft fongs advance, having their temples bound with poplar boughs; in two bands they divide, the one a choir of youths, the other of aged men; who in numbers celebrate the praifes and exploits of Hercules; How in bis cradle with his mighty hand he flew the first monfters of his ftep mother Juno, and squeezing strangled her two faakes; how in war, the fame hero overthrew illustrious cities, Troy and Oechalia both; how, under king Euryftheus, by the defination of unfriendly Juno, he endured a thousand grievous toils. Thou, invincible doft with thy arm [ubdue the cloud-born, double-membered Gentaurs, Hylæus and Pholus; thou fubdueft the fell moniters of Crete, and the huge overgrown lion, under the rock of Nemea. For fear of thee the Stygian lakes, for fear of thee, the porter of hell did tremble, couring down in his bloody den upon his half-gnawed bones; Nor did any forms, not even Typhœus himfelf of towering height, with arms in hand, throw thee into confernation : Thee not nonpluffed and difconcerted the Lernian fnake, that manyheaded monster, around beset. Hail, undoubted offfpring of Jove, added to the gods an ornament to their affembly : Both us, and thefe thy facred rites, with thy aufpicious presence visit. Such heroic deeds they celebrate in fong : Above all they fubjoin the den of Cacus, and Gacus felf breathing his foul in flames. The whole grove rings with the melodious din, and the hills rebound.

Then, having finished the divine fervice, all hie them back to the city. The king, with age oppressed fet forward; and as he walked along, had Æneas to accompany him, and his fon by his fide, and with various discourse relieved the tediousness of the way. Æneas admires and turns his rolling eyes around on every object; is charmed with the various scenes and landscapes; and fondly enquires, and fondly learns the feveral monuments of the men of antiquity.

Then king Evander the founder of the Roman power, thus began : These groves the native fauns and nymphs possessed, and a race of men sprung from the trunks of trees and flubborn oak ; who had neither laws nor polity; knew neither to yoke the labouring fleer, nor to gather wealth, nor to use their acquifi. tions with moderation : But the products of the branches, and favage hunting, fupplied them with food. From the etherial fky first Saturn came, flying the arms of Jove, and an exile disposseffed of his realms. He formed into fociety a race undifciplined and difperfed among the high mountains, and gave them laws; and chofe to have the country named Latium, becaufe in thefe regions he had lurked fecure. Under his reign was the golden age which they fo much celebrate. In fuch undifturbed tranquillity he ruled his fubjects : Till by degrees an age more depraved, and of a different complexion, and the fury of war, and love of gain, fucceeded. Then came in the Aufonian bands, and the Sicilian nations : And the Saturnian-land often changed its name. Then came a fucceffion of kings, and among the rest fierce Tybris of gigantic make; from whom we Italians in after times named the river Tyber : Thus ancient Albula loft its true, its proper name. Me, from my country driven, and tracing the utmost perils of the fea, almighty fortune and uncontroulable deftiny fettled in these regions : And the awful predictions of my mother the nymph Carmentis, and the god Apollo by his authority urged me hither.

Scarce had he faid, when fetting forward he fnews him next both the altar, and the gate called by a Roman name Carmentalis, which they record to be the ancient monument in honour of the prophetic nymph Carmentis, who first foretold the future grandeur of the Æneian race, and the renown of Pallanteum. Next he points out the fpacious grove which Romulus reduced into a fanctuary, and under a cold bleak rock the Lupercal, fo called from the Arcadian manner of worshipping Lycæan Pan. He likewife fnews the grove of Argiletum, facred to Argus; and calls the place to witnefs his innocence, and relates the death of Argus, his gueft. He leads him next to the Tarpeian rock and the Capitol, now of gold, but in those days all rough and horrid with wild bushes. Even then, the religious horrors af the place, awed the minds of the timorous fwains; even then they revered the wood and rock. This grove, fays he, this wood-topped hill a god inhabits, but what god is uncertain : Here the Arcadians believe they have feen love himfelf, when often with his right hand he shook the blackening tremendous Ægis, and rouzed to clouds of thunder, Farther, fays he, yon two cities you fee with their walls demolished, the remains and monuments of ancient heroes; this city father Janus, that Saturnus built : The one Janiculum, the other Saturnia was named. In fuch mutual talk, they came up to the palace of poor Evander ; And in that place where now the Roman forum and magnificent ftreets arife; they beheld around herds of cattle lowing. Soon as they reached his feat : Thefe gates, he fays, the victorious Alcides entered ; him this palace received : Have then my noble gueft, the greatness of mind to undervalue magnificence, and do you too form yourfelf into a temper becoming a god, and come not difgufted with thefe our mean accommodations. He faid, and under the roof of his narrow manfion conducted the magnanimous Æneas : and fet him down to reft on a bed of leaves, and the fur of a Libvan bear.

Night comes on apace, and with her dufky wings mantles the earth. Meanwhile Venus, the parent goddess, not without cause alarmed in mind, and disturbed both by the threats, and fierce uproar of the Laurentines, addreffes Vulcan, and in her hufband's golden bed-chamber thus begins, and by her accents breathes into him love divine : While the Grecian kings by war, brought fated Troy to defolation, and its towers doomed to fall by hoftile flames; not any fuccour to wretches, nor arms of thy art and power I craved; nor, my deareft fpoufe, was I willing to employ you . or your labours in vain : Though I both owed much to the fons of Priam, and often mourned the fevere fufferings of Æneas. Now, by Jove's command, he hath fettled on the coafts of the Rutulians : Therefore I the felf same fond wife a suppliant come, and implore arms from thy divinity to me adorable, a mother for a fon. Thee the daughter of Nereus, thee the wife of Tithonus by tears could perfuade. See what nations combine, what towns having flut up their gates, whet their fwords againft me, and for the extirpation of my people. She faid, and with her fnowy arms on this fide and that, the goddefs in foft embrace careffes him demurring : Suddenly he catched the wonted flame, and the accuftomed warmth pierced his marrow, and ran thrilling through his flaken bones. Juft as when at times, with forky thunder burft, a chinky ftream of fire in flafhy lightning floots athwart the fkies. This his fpoufe, well pleafed with her wiles, and confcious of her charms, perceived.

Then father Vulcan, fast bound in the eternal chains . of love, thus fpeaks : Why have you recourse to fuch far-fetched reafons? Whether, goddels is thy confidence in me fled? Had you been under the like concern before, then too it had been a righteous and practicable thing in me at your defire to arm the Trojans. Nor did almighty father Jove nor the fates forbid that Troy should stand, or Priam survive for ten years more. And now if war you meditate, and this be your refolution; whatever zeal to ferve you in my art I can promife; whatever can be done by fteel or liquid metals, as far as the power of fire and breathing engines reach, you may depend on me; wherefore defift by folicitation to bring your power and influence in question. Having spoke these words, he gave her the wished embrace; and, on the bosom of his spoule diffolved away, courted foft repole to every limb.

Then, foon as the first interval of reft, now that the mid career of night was rolled away, had driven fleep from his eyes; what time the houfewife, whofe chief concern it is to earn her living by the diftaff and poor handy-work, awakes the heaped up embers and the dormant fires, adding night to her labour, and by the lighted tapers employs her maids in their long tedious tafks, that chafte fhe may preferve her husband's bed, and bring up her little babes: Not otherwife, nor at that time less industrious, the mighty god of fire rifes from the foft couch to his mechanic labours.

Hard by the fide of Sicily, and Æolian Lipare, an island rifes of steep afcent with imoking rocks : Under which a den, and the caves of Ætna, embowelled by the forges of the Cyclops, thunder, and from the anvils the flurdy ftrokes in echoing groans refound, the red-hot bars of fteel hifs in the caverns, and the fire in the furnace pants ; Vulcan's habitation, and the land Vulcanian called. Hither then the fiery power descended from the lofty sky. The Cyclops in their capacious cave were vexing the fteel, Brontes and Steropes, and naked limbed Pyracmon. In their hands half-formed, with one part already polished off, was a thunderbolt, fuch as those which in profusion, the eternal father from all quarters of the fky hurls on the earth : The other part unfinished remained. Three fpikes they had added of the wreathed hail, three more of watry cloud; three of glaring fire, and winged wind. Now they were mingling in the work alarming flashes, the thunder's roaring noise and terror, and in the reliftless flames vindictive rage. In another part they were haftening forward a chariot and nimble wheels for Mars, by which he rouzes men and cities to war : And were polifhing amain the tremendous Ægis, the armour of enraged Pallas, with ferpents fcales and burnifhed gold; and the fnakes in mutual folds entwined, and to be worn on the breaft of the goddefs, the Gorgon's felf rolling her eyes in death after her neck is ftruck off.

Away with all, he fays, ye Ætnean Cyclops ; thefe your begun labours fet afide, and hither turn your attentive minds. Arms for a valiant hero muft be forged: Now it is requifite to ply your ftrength, now your nimble hands, now all your mafterly fkill. Fling delays away. Nor more he faid. But they immediately all fall on, and equally the labour fhared. Brafs and mines of gold in rivulets flow; and wounding fteel in the capacious furnace melts. A fpacious fhield they form, alone fufficient against all the weapons of the Latins, and orbs in orbs feven-fold involve. Some with the puffing bellows receive and difplode the air by turns; others dip the fputtering metals in the trough: The cave groans with the incumbent anvils. They with vaft force alternately lift their arms in equal time, and with the griping pincers turn the mafs.

While in the Æolian regions the Lemnian god is urging on these works, the cheering vital light, and the early morning longs of birds under his roof, raile The full of days Evander from his humble mansion. arifes, and in his tunic sheathes his limbs, and binds the Tuscan fandals round his feet. Then to his fide and shoulders girds his Arcadian fword, doubling back on the right shoulder a panther's skin that hung down from his left. Two guardian dogs too from the lofty gate march forth, and attend their mafter's fteps. The hero mindful of the last day's conversation, and the fervice he had promifed, hies him to the apartment and recefs of his guett Æncas. Meanwhile Æncas no lefs early, was advancing towards bim. With the one his fon Pallas, with the other Achates came in company. At meeting they join hands, feat themfelves in the midft of the court, and at length enjoy free unreftrained conversation, The king thus first begins : Great leader of the Trojans, during whole life I truly will never admit that the power and realms of Troy are overthrown; fmallare our abilities to support the war, in proportion to fo great a name : On the one hand we are bounded by the Tufcau river Typer; on the other hand the Rutulians prefs upon us, and round our walls with clathing arms befet. But I intend with you to join mighty nations and camps rich and . royally magnificent: which faving relief unexpected fortune opens to our view: Hither you came invited by the fates. Not far from hence stands the inhabited city of Agylla of ancient foundation: Where heretofore the Lydian nation, illustrious in war, planted a colony on the Tuscan mountains. This city having flourished for many years, Mezentius at last came to rule with imperious fway and cruel arms. Why should I mention his unutterable barbarities ? Or why the tyrant's horrid deeds? May the gods recompense them on his own head, and on his race. Nay, he even bound to the living the bodies of the dead; joining together hands to hands, and face to face; a horrid kind of torture! and them pining away with gore and putrefaction in this loathed embrace, he thus with lingering death deftroyed. But at length his fubjects, tired out, in arms, around befet both the tyrant himfelf raging past utterance, and all his house : They affaffinate his adherents, hurl flames against his roof. He, amidst the maffacre, making his escape, flies for shelter to the territories of the Rutulians, and finds protection from the arms of Turnus his hofpitable friend. Therefore all Etruria, with just furies incenfed have rifen, and by prefent war redemand their king for punifhment. Over these thousands, Æneas, I will affign you leader. For all along the fhore, the veffels ranged in thick array form for swar, and urge the banners to be difplayed. Them an aged foothfayer reftrains, this oracle in prophetic strains delivering : Ye chosen youths of Lydia, the flower and excellence of ancient heroes, whom just indignation urges against the foe, and Mezentius fires with due resentment ; no Italian born is destined to inbdue that powerful nation : Make choice of foreign leaders. Then, overawed by the declaration of the gods, the Tuscan army respiting their fury, encamped on this plain. Tarchon himself hath fent ambaffadors with the royal crown and fceptre, and to me commends thefe enfigns ; imploring me to repair to the camp, and affume the Tufcan administration. But life, with frozen blood benumbed, and worn out with years, and my capacity for heroic deeds fuperannuated, envy me the enjoyment of empire. My fon I would urge to accept of it, were it not that, being mixed with the blood of a Sabine mother, this country claims his birth in part. Do you, most gallant leader of the Trojans and Italians, to whole years and lineage both, fate is indulgent, you whom the oracles invite, enter to the possefion. Him too my only hope and folace, Pallas to thee I will join ; under thee his mafter let him practife to endure warfare, and the laborious fervice of

Aa

Book VIII.

279

Mars, be fpectator of thy actions, and from his earlieft years make the the object of his admiration. To him I will give two hundred Arcadian horfemen, the chofen ftrength of the youth; and as many more will Pallas give thee in his own name.

Thus fcarce had he fpoke, when Eneas, the nobla offspring of Anchifes, and trufty Achates, held their eyes fixed un the ground, and with heavy hearts began to revolve many hard perplexing thoughts, had not Cytherea difplayed a fign in the open air. For unexpectedly a flash of lightning, darted from the sky, came with thunder's roar, and fuddenly all things feem to threaten ruin, and the clangor of the Tufcan trumpet rattled through the fkies. Upwards they gaze : Again and again in dreadful peals it thunders loud; in a ferene quarter of the heavens, among the clouds they fee arms blaze athwart the clear expanse, and clashed refound in thunder. The rest were lost in amazement : But the Trojan hero knew the heavenly found, and promifed figns of his goddefs mother. Then to Evander he addreffes his speech : By nomeans, my hospitable friend, by no means be anxious to explore what emergency these prodigies portend : I am called by heaven to take up arms. My divine parent foretold fhe was to fend this fignal, if war fhould affail me, and that fhe would bring Vulcanian arms through the aerial regions to my aid. Ah, what havock awaits the unhappy Laurentines ! what ample fatisfaction shall you, Turnus, give me ! what numerous shields, and helms, and bodies of gallant heroes, fhalt thou, father Tyber, roll down thy ftreams ; let them challenge our armies, and violate their leagues.

Having faid these words, he raises himself from his lofty throne: and first of all he wakes the dormant fires on Hercules's altars; and visits with joy the Lar whom yesterday he first had worshiped, and the little houshold gods: With accustomed rites he offers a facrifice of chosen ewes; and in like manner Evander, in like manner the Trojan youth. After this he repairs to the ships, and revisits his friends; from whose number he chooses such as excelled in valour to accompany him to the war: The reft by the defeending fiream are borne along, and with no effort glide down the current of the river, to bring Afeanius tidings of his father, and of the affairs in hand. The Trojans, repairing to the Tufcan territories, are fupplied with fleads: For Æneas they lead forth one diffinguifhed from the reft, which a lion's tawny hide, faining before with gilded claws, covers all over.

A a ij

On a sudden, through the narrow city blazed, the rumour flies, that a band of horfe were fwiftly marching to the court of the Tuscan king. Through fear, the matrons vows on vows redouble, and, the nearer they are the danger, the more the terror grows, and the the image of Mars appears more formidable and enlarged. Then the venerable father Evander grafping the hand of his fon as he was going away, clings . to him, weeping beyond measure, and thus addreffes him : O that Juditer would recal my by-past years ! Or that I were now what I was, when, under the very walls of Præneste, I mowed down the foremost ranks, and victorious fet heaps of shields on fire, and with this right-hand fent king Herilus down to Tartarus; to whom at his birth, dreadful to relate, his mother Feronia had given three lives, and triple arms to wield; thrice by this death was he to be overthrown : Whom this right-hand however, did then all these lives bereave, and stripped him of as many fuits of armour. Nothing now, my fon, would part me from your loved embrace; nor had ever our neighbour Mezentins, infulting over this perfon of mine, by the fword effected. fo many cruel deaths, drained the city of fo many inhabitants. But oh ye powers, and thou Jupiter, great ruler of the gods, compassionate, I pray, a diffressed Arcadian king, and hear a father's prayers : If your providence divine, if the fates referve Pallas for me in fafety, if I live defined to fee him again, and to have a happy meeting with him; I pray for life: I will fubmit to endure any hardship whatever. But if, O fortune, thou threatenest him with some difaster not to be named; oh let me now, even now break off the thread of my cruel wretched life, while my cares are fill hoverng in fuspense, between fear and hope, while I have fome hope of thefuture however uncertain; while thee, loved boy, my late, my only joy, I hold in my embrace; left more mournful tidings wound my ears. In these accents the father poured forth his grief at final parting with his fon: His attendants bear him to the palace fainting away.

And now the horfe had rushed forth by the expanded gates; among the foremost Æneas, and his true friend Achates; then other peers of Troy. Pallas himfelf, in the centre of his troop, appears confpicuous in his mantling robe and painted arms : In fuch brightness as when, bathed in the ocean's waves, fair Lucifer, whom Venus loves beyond the other ftarry orbs, hath difplayed his venerable afpect in the heaven, and difperfed the darknefs. On the walls the timorous matrons ftand, and follow with their eyes the dutty cloud, and troops gleaming with arms of brafs. Through the thickets, where nearest lies the boundary of their way, they march in armour fheathed. Their acclamations rife, and, having formed themfelves into fquadrons, the horny hoof of the horse beats with prancing din the mouldering plain.

Near the cold river of Ceritis is a fpacions grove, facred all around by the religion of the ancient fathers; hollow hills on every fide have inclofed, and encompafs the grove with gloomy fir. There is a tradition, that to Silyanus, god of the fields and flocks, the ancient Pelafgi, who were once the first poffeffors of the Latin coalts, confecrated this grove, and a feflival day. Not far from this, Tarcho and the Tufcans kept their camp, defended by the fituation of the ground; and now from the hill the whole legion could be furveyed, and had pitched their tents upon the fpacious plains. Hither Alneas, the father of his country, and his youthful band felected for the war, come up, and, fatigued, indulge their horfes and themfelves in eafe.

Meanwhile the goddels Venus, in bright beauty fining among the etherial clouds, drew near, bearing the armour, her divine present: And soon as at a dis-Aa iij tance she spied her son in a recluse valley, retired by the chill river; fhe voluntarily prefented herfelf, and addreffed him in these words : Behold, my fon, the prefents finished by my confort's promited aid ; that fo this inftant you need not demur to challenge or the infolent Laurentines or fierce Turnus to the combat. Fair Cythera faid, and rushed into the embraces of her fon : Under an oak full in his view, the placed the radiant arms. He, overjoyed with the prefents of the goddels, and fuch fignal honour, gazes on them with infatiable fondnefs, and rolls his eyes over them one by one : He admires, and in his hands or arms thifts to every point of view the helmet waving its dreadful creft, and fhooting flames, and the fword pointed with death, the corflet stiff with brass, immenfe, of fanguine hue : As when the azure-cloud by the fun beams grows more and more inflamed, and darts afar its refulgent brightnefs. Then the polifhed greaves of electrum and gold refined, the fpear, and the texture of the shield curious beyond expression. There the fiery power, a prophet not unskilful, nor ignorant of futurity, had represented the Italian hiftory and triumphs of the Romans; there the whole defcendants of the future race from Afcanius, and their battles fought in order. There too he had figured the foftering wolf lying in the verdant cave of Mars : The twin-boys hanging played about her dugs, and, fearlefs fucked their favage dam : She, with tapering neck reclined, fondly licked them by turns, and formed their bodies with her tongue: Not far from this he had added Rome, and the Sabine virgins licentioufly. ravished in the crouded cirque at the great Circenfian games, and fuddenly an unufual florm of war, burfting upon the fons of Rome, and old Tatius, and the Cures rigid in virtue. Next the fame princes, now that mutual hoftilities are laid afide, sheathed in armour, and with the facred goblets in their hands, before Jove's altars flood, and, having facrificed a fow, ftruck up a league of peace. Not far from thence rapid chariots had torn Metius limb from limb asunder (but thou Alban should ft have adhered to thy flipulations), and Tullus was dragging the traitor's entrails through the wood, and the bushes sprinkled with his blood diftilled. Here too Porfenna was commanding the Remans to receive Tarquinius expelled, and invefted the city with close fiege. The Romans in defence of liberty were rushing on the fword. Him (Perfenna). you might have feen like one ftorming with rage, and like one breathing threats, because Cocles had boldly dared to beat down the bridge, and Cloelia, having burft her chains, fwam the river. On the fummit of the shield Manlius, guardian of the Tarpeian towers before the temple flood, and defended the lofty capitol; and the palace, as new thatched with Romulean ftraw, appeared rough. And here a goofe in filver, fluttering athwart the gilded galleries, gave warning that the Gauls were just at hand : The Gauls were feen advancing along the thickets, and were now feizing the fort, protected by the darkness and benefit of dufky night. Of gold their treffes were, and of gold their vestments ; in streaked mantelets they shine ; then their milk white necks are bound in chains of gold : Each in his hand brandishes two Alpine javelins, having their bodies protected with long bucklers. Here he had emboffed the dancing Salii, and the naked priefts of Pan, the facred caps tufted with wool, and the shields that fell from heaven : Chaste matrons infoft fedans were conducting the facred pageants through the city. To thefe in remoter prospect, he likewite adds the Tartarean manfions, Pluto's profound realms, the fufferings of the damned ; and thee, Catiline, fufpended from a rock that still threatens to fall, and trembling at the grim aspect of the furies : And the good apart from the wicked, with Cato difpenfing to them laws. Amidst these scenes the image of the fwelling ocean was wide diffufed in gold ; but the feas foamed with hoary filver waves : And all around conspicuous in filver the wheeling dolphins swept the fease with their tails, and cut the tide. In the midft were to be feen fleets with brazen prows, the fight of Actium; and you could difeern Leucate all in a ferment with the marshalled war, and the billows brightly displayed in gold. On the one fide Augustus Cafar conducting the Italians to the engagement, with the fenators and people, the domeftic gods, and the great guardian deities of the empire, standing on the lofty stern; whole graceful aufpicious temples dart forth flames, and on whole creft his father's ftar is difplayed. In another part, Agrippa, with winds and gods propitious, fublime appears leading his fquadron; whole brows are adorned with a naval crown's refulgent beak. On the other fide victorious Anthony, with his barbarian fupplies and various troops, brings up with him, from the nations of the morning, and the coafts of the red fea. Ægypt, the ftrength of the east, and Bactra, the boundary of his empire : And him follows, oh foul difgrace, his Egyptian spouse. All are rushing on together, and the whole watery plain foams convulfed with the labouring oars, and trident beaks. They make for the deep: You would have imagined the Cyclades uptorn were floating on the main, or lofty mountains encountering mountains ; with fuch flupenduous force the warriors in their turret bearing fhipsurge on the attack. From their hands flaming balls of tow, and from miffive engines the winged fteel is flung : Neptune's watery fields redden with uncommon flaughter. In the midst the queen (Cleopatra) roufes her squadrons with her country's timbrel : Nor as yet regards the two fnakes behind her. Her monstrous gods of every form, and barking Anubis, opposed to Neptune, Venus, and Minerva, are wielding their weapons. In midft of the combat Mars fculptured in iron ftorms, and the grim furies shooting from the sky, and difcord with her mantle rent stalks here well pleafed, whom Bellona follows with her bloody fcourge pollo of Actium viewing all these objects from above was bending his bow: With the terror thereof all Ægypt and the Indians, the Arabs and Sabæans, all were turning their backs. The queen herfelf, invoking the winds to aid her flight, feemed to fail, and with eager hafte to fling away the loofened cables. Her the god of fire had represented, amidit the flaughter, driven along by waves and winds, all pale with terror of approaching death. And full opposite in view the Nile with his gigantic form, in deep diffrefs, and expanding his fkirts, and with all his robe difplayed, calling his vanquished fons into his azure bofom and harbouring streams. Cæfar again, having in triple triumph entered the gates of Rome, was confectatingthrough all the city three-hundred flately temples, his immortal vow to the Italian gods. The fireets with joy, and games, and acclamations ring. In all the temples are choirs of matrons to pay their grateful offerings, and in all the temples altars funcke with incense: Before the altars the facrificed bullocks covered the ground. Augustus himself, feated in the snow-white porch of fhining Phæbus, reviews the offerings of the people, and in due order hangs them on the flately pillars. In long orderly procession the vanquished nations march, as various in the fashion of their garb and arms, as in their language. Here the all fubduing god had figured the Numidian race, and the Africana loofe in their attire; here the Leleges, the Carians, and Geloni armed with arrows. Euphrates now was Jeen to flow with gentler ftreams, the Morini, remotent of the human race, the two horned Rhine, the untamed Daha, and the Araxes, that once difdained to adwit a bridge.

Such curious fcenes on Vulcan's fhield, the prefent of his parent goddefs, the hero views with wonder; and though a ftrauger to the events, yet rejoices in their figure and reprefentation; and on his fhoulder bears aloft the fame and fortune of his race.

BOOK NINTH.

AND now while these transactions are carrying on in a quarter far distant from the camp; Saturnian Juno sent Iris from heaven to daring Turnus. Turnus then by chance was reposing himself in the grove of his progenitor Pilumus, which lay in a confectated vale. Whom thus the daughter of Thaumus with rofy lips befpoke : What none of the gods, O Turnus, could dare to promife to thy wifnes, lo revolving time hath of itfelf brought about. Encas, having abandoned his city, his friends and fleet, hath repaired to the realms and royal feat of Palatine Evander. Nor content with that; he hath penetrated into the remotest cities of Coritus, and arms a band of Lydians, ruftics, whom he has drawn together. Why do you demur? Now is the time to call for your fleeds, now your chariots. Break off all delay, and feize his camp while in difor-She faid, and on poifed wings raifed herfelf to der. heaven, and in her flight cut the fpacious bow beneath the clouds. The youth knew the goddels, and, firetching forth both hands to heaven, with those accents pursued her flying : Iris, bright ornament of heaven, who hath fent thee down to me to earth fhot from the clouds? Whence this fo fudden flash of light? I fee heaven in the midft afunder cleave ; and ftars wandering athwart the firmament. Signs fo illustrious will I obey, whoever thou art who fummoneft me to arms. And thus having faid, he repaired to the river, and from the pure furface of the ftream drew water, invoking the gods at large; and loaded heaven with vows.

And now on the open plains his whole army marched, rich in proud fleeds, rich in embroidered vefts and gold. Meffapus commands the van, the fons of Tyrrhus the rear: In the centre king Turnus moves, wielding his arms, and overtops the reft by the whole head. Silent and fedate they move; as the deep Ganges fed with feven peaceful rivers in filence forws; or as the fattening river Nile, when from the plains he hath retired, and now lodged himfelf within his channel. Here the Trojans defory a fudden cloud condenfed in wreaths of blackening duft, and darknefs rifing on the plains. Gaicus firft from the oppofite rampart calls forth: What numerous bands, O citizens, are hither rolling in a black cloud of duft ?

Quick, bring arms, give me darts, mount the walls; hafte, the foe is at hand, Wish loud outcry the Trojans block themfelves up within all their gates, and man the walls. For thus Æneas most accomplished in arms, at departing had ordered: That if any chance of war in the interim should befal, they would not venture to fet their army in array, nor trust to the field; only guard their camp and walls fecured by a rampart. Therefore, though shame and indignation prompt them to engage, yet they barricade their gates against the foe, execute the orders of their chief, and in arms expect the enemy within their hollow turrets.

Turnus, flying out before, had got the ftart of his tardy army, accompanied with twenty choien horfe, and unexpected comes upon the city; whom bears a Thracian fteed marked with white fpots, and a golden helmet with crimfon creft defends Which of you, gallant youths, first will join me to attack the foe? See here, he cries, and, brandishing his javelin, lets it fly into the air, the prelude of the fight; and in form majeftic rushes to the field. With shouts his friends fecond the motion, and follow with dreadful bluftering din : They wonder at the faint heartednefs of the Trojaus, that they venture not themselves in the equal field, nor oppose arms to arms ; but lie loitering in their camp. He, turbulent with ire, hither and thither on his fierce fleed furveys the walls, and by every pathlefs pafs explores access. As when a wolf in ambush for a full cott of sheep lies growling at the folds, enduring winds and rains at the hour of midnight; under their dams the lambkins in fafety bleat : He, fierce and felonious with ire, rages against the absent prey; his ravenous hunger by length of time contracted, and his blood-thirity jaws, pinch him inceffantly. Just fo the Rutulian's anger kindles, while he views the walls and camp; and within the hard bones his anguish burns, exploring by what means he may tempt accefs, and how force the inclosed Trojans from their intrenchment, and pour them forth into the plain. Their fleet, which to the fide of their camp adjoining lay concealed, fenced around with ramparts, and the ftreams of the river, he affails ; loudly calls for flames from his followers joyous to obey : And ardent fills his hand with a blazing pine. Then indeed they exert themfelves ftrenuoufly : The prefence of Turnus urges them on, and the whole youth are armed with black torches. They plundered the hearths : The fmoky brand fends up a pitchy light, and the fiery element darts the intermingled fparkles to the ftars.

Ye muses, fay what god averted from the Trojans fo fierce a conflagration? Who from the speeled fuch difastrous flames? Ancient is the testimony of the fact, but immortal is its fame.

What time Æneas first formed his fleet on Phrygian Ida, and prepared to launch into the deep ; Berecynthia herfelf the mother of the gods, is faid to have bespoke great Jove in these words: At my request, O fon, beflow what from thy dear parent from thee craves, now that Olympus is to thy power fubdued : On a lofty mountain flood a piny wood, by me many years beloved, embowered with gloomy firs, and the maple's fhady boughs, whither they brought me facred offerings; these trees I with pleasure gave to the young Trojan hero, when he wanted a fleet : Now anxious dread on their account preffes my unquiet mind. Loofe my fears, and let a parent by her prayers obtain, that by no voyage fhattered, nor by whirling blaft of wind they be fubdued : Let it avail them, that from our mountains they fprung. Thus to her in reply her fon, who rolls the ftars of the celeflial world : Whither, my parent-godde/s, art thou urging deftiny? Or what is thy aim in this request ? Shall veffels, built by mortal hands, an immortal privilege enjoy; and Æneas infured of fafety, run the round of dubious perils? In what god is to great power lodged ? Nay rather, when, having finished their defined course, they shall reach the goal and the Aufonian ports, which ever of them hereafter shall have escaped the waves, and carried the Dardanian chief to the territories of Laurentum, I will diveft them of their mortal form, and command to be goddeffes of the fpacious ocean : Such as Nereus's daughters, Doto and Galatea, cut with their breafts the foaming deep. He faid: And in fign of its being ratified by the rivers of his Stygian brother, by those banks that roll with torrents of pitch and black whirlpools, nods his head; and with that nod made heaven's whole frame to tremble.

The promifed day was therefore come; and the fates had filled up the defined periods of time; when this outrage of Turnus called on the mother of the gods to repel the firebrands from her facred ships. Here sirft an unufual light flashed forth from the eyes of the Trojans, and from the east a vast refulgent cloud was feen to shoot athwart the sky, and along with the godde/s her choirs of priefts : Then through the air a tremendous voice drops from above, and fills the hofts of Trojans and Rutulians both : Be in no hurry, ye Trojans, to protect my thips, nor arm your hands : Sooner to Turnus it shall be given to burn up the seas than those facred pines. Glide on now at your liberty ; glide ye on, goddeffes of the main : The parent of the gods com-And forthwith from the banks the ships mands. break each away her haulfers, and, dolphin-like, diving with their beaks plunge to the bottom of the fea. Thence, wondrous prodigy, fo many virgin forms rife up, and ride along the main, `as [hips with brazen prows had before been ranked on the shore. The Ruulians ftood aftonished in their minds ; Messapus himfelf, unable to check his ftartling fteeds, is feifed with conflernation; the river too makes a pause, refounding hoarfe, and Tiberinus recals his current from the deep.

But the confidence of daring Turnus abated not; he brikkly raifes their fpirits with his words, and brikkly chides their fears: Against the Trojans these portents are aimed; from them even Jove himself hath withdrawn his wonted aid; their fhips wait not the darts nor fires of the Rutulians. Therefore the seas are inaccessible to the Trojans, nor have they any hopes of c/caping by flight; from one half of the globe they are cut off, and the land, the other half, is in our hands: So many armed thousands the Italian nations bring to our aid. To me the fatal responses of the gods, whatever they are, to which the Phrygians pretend, give no concern. To the fates and Venus enough is given, that the Trojans have reached the lands of fruitful Aufonia. I too on the other hand have my deftiny, to extirpate with the fword the accurfed race, being robbed by them of my promifed fpouse; nor is it only the fons of Atreus, whom the painful fense of that indignity moves, nor to Mycenæ alone is licenfe given to take up arms in fuch a caufe. But perhaps it is enough that they fell once : Doubtless had they thought it enough to commit the fame crime but once before ; had they, instead of committing rapes conceived almost a total aversion to the whole race of women. They whom this confidence in their intervening rampart, whom the temporary defences of their trenches, narrow partitions that screen them from death, infpire with fo much courage; have they not feen the walls of Troy, built by the hand of Neptune, fink down in flames? But fay, ye felett warriors, who prepare to florm their rampart fword in hand, and with me invade their difordered camp? To me their is no need of divine armour, nor of a thousand ships against the Trojans. Let all the Tuseans this initant join themfelves to them in aliance : They need not fear that we will take advantage of the night, and repeat the daftardly theft of the Palladium, flaying the guards of Minerva's lofty tower : nor will we, like cowards, hide ourfelves in the dark womb of the Trojan horfe ; we are refolved openly by day to beleaguer their walls with fire. I shall make them fensible that they have not to do with Greeks and Argive striplings, whom Hector kept at bay till the tenth year. Now then, fince the better part of the day is paft, for what remains my valiant men, as things have thus far fucceeded well, cheerfully refresh your bodies; and prepared, expect the fight. Meanwhile to Meffapus is affigned the charge to befet their gates with fentinels, and inclose their ramparts with beaming fires. Twice feven Rutulians are chofen out to guard the walls; and those are followed each by an hundred youths waving their purple plumes, and glittering with gold: Around the walls they patrole, and mount the guard by turns, and by turns, firetched along the grafs, they indulge the wine, and quaff the brazen bowls. The fires together fhine; in play the watches spend the sleepless night. These Scenes the Trojans above from the rampart furvey, and in arms guard their high pofts ; their gates too in hurrying confternation they ftrictly watch, and with bridges join the bulwarks : They fland to their arms. Mneftheus and fierce Sereftus urge them on : Whom father Æness appointed directors of the youthful bands, and managers of affairs, if at any time crofs accidents should call them. The whole legion having shared the danger by lot, keep guard along the walls, and perform the alternate duties of the post which each has affigned him to maintain.

Digitized by Google

ВЪ

Nifus, the fon of Hyrtacus, in arms most fierce, ftood centinel of the gate; whom Ida, famed for hunting, fent the attendant of Æneas, nimble at the javelin and fleet arrow : and by his fide his companion Euryalus, than whom of all the fons of Æncas, none was more comely, and none more graceful wore the arms of Troy ; a mere boy, whole cheeks were ftreaked with the first bloom of youth. Their love, their fouls were one, and with equal eagerness they rushed to the war : Then too they were posted in common to guard the gate. Nifus fays, do the gods, Euryalus, this ardour into our minds infuse? Or is each one's predominant inclination his god ? Long has my mind been infligating me either to attempt the fight, or fome great enterprife; nor is content with peaceful reft and inaction. You fee what confidence in the state of their affairs posses the Rutulians : There lights twinkle here and there ; diffolved in fleep and wine they have laid them down; the places all around are hushed in filence. Advert further to what my doubting thoughts fuggest, and to the purpofe which now rifes in my foul. That Æneas fhould be invited home, all, both people and princes, importunately crave ; and that mellengers be difpatch-Βbij

ed to inform him of the true state of our affairs. Ιf to thee they will promife what I demand (for to myfelf the glory of the exploit is reward enough) methinks I can find a way under the brow of yon hill to : the walls and fortifications of Pallantum. Euryalus, flung with violent defire of praife, flood aftonished; st the fame time he thus addreffes his ardent friend : Do you then, Nifus, decline to join me your-companion in those high enterprises ? Shall I fend you away alone on fuch perilous adventures ? It was not thus my warlike father Opheltes instructed me, bred up amidft the alarms of Greece and the difafters of Troy : Nor have I acted fuch a cowardly part in your company, following the magnanimous Æneas and his fortune in all extremities. This foul, this foul of mine contemns mere life, and deems that honour, to which you afpire, well bought even at the expence of life itself. To this Nifus : Believe me, I had no fuch apprehentions of you, nor have I reason. No ; fo may great Jove, or whatever god with an equal eye regards what we are about, return me to you triumphant. But if any chance, (as many fuch you fee in enterprifes of this hazardous nature) or deity hurry; me on to adverse fate, I could with that you furvived : your age has a Juster claim to life. Let me leave a friend behind to deposit me in the earth among the dead, fnatched from the field, or redeemed by ranfom : Or if any fortune shall stand in the way of this, who may pay funeral obfequies to my absent corpse, and honour me with an empty tomb; nor let me be the cause of fuch deep anguish to thy wretched mother, who, favourite boy, of many mothers alone adventurous follows thee, nor minds the flately ftructures of the great Aceftes. But he : In vain you weave thefe fruitless remonstrances, Nor is my refolution now fraggered in the leaft. Let us dispatch, he fays. At the fame time he awakes the guard. They fucceed, and take their turns of duty : Then, having refigned his post, he fets forward in company with Nifus, and they feek the king together.

All creatures elfe over the whole earth with fleep relaxed their cares, and loft their toils in fueet oblivion : While the Trojan chiefs and felect youth were holding confultation about the important concerns of the flate ; what they ought to do, or who should be the meffenger to Æneas. Leaning on their long spears they ftand, wielding their targets in the centre of the camp Then Nifus, and with him Euryalus, with and plain. prompt alacrity begged to be admitted': That their bufinefs was important, and would compenfate the delay and interruption of their counfels. In this their hurry and trepidation Iulus first received them, and ordered Nifusto speak. Then thus Hyrtacides : Ye sons of Ænezs, listen with unbiaffed minds, nor be these overtures we bring judged of by our years. The Rutulians, buried in fleep and wine, have composed themselves to reft : We ourselves have seen a place fit for our clandestine defign, that lies obvious in the two-forked way before the gate, which is next the fea. Their fires are dying away, and a pitchy fmoke afcends to heaven. If you give us leave to embrace the fortunate occasion, you shall foon fee Æneas, in quest of whom we go to the walls of Pallanteum, here present with spoils, after vast havock made: Nor fet we out strangers to the way; often in the fhady vales at hunting have we feen the fkirts of the town, and have furveyed the whole river.

At this Alethes, of aged gravity, and mature in judgement : Ye gods of my country, under whole divine protection Troy always is, though you have been angry with us for a time, yet you are not purpoled utterly to deftroy the Trojans, fince you have produced fuch courageous fouls, fuch refolute hearts in our youth. So faying, he grafped the fhoulders and hands of both, and with tears his face and cheeks bedewed. What rewards, brave youths, what rewards of worth proportioned to fuch enterprifes, can I judge poffible to be conferred upon you? The faireft fhall the gods in the firlt place, and your own virtues give : Then the reft the pious Æncas fhall anon beflow, and Afcanius in his prime of life, who never will forget fo high an obligation.

Bbiij

Book IX.

Nay, fubioins Alcanius, I, whole fole happiness depends on my father's fafe return, conjure you, Nifus, by our great domeftic gods, by the tutelar deity of Affaracus, and the fhrines of hoary Vefta (whatever credit I have now, whatever fortune I shall have hereafter, I pledge in your own bosoms) recal my dear parent, give me back his prefence : At his return all -our forrows shall disappear. Two goblets of filver will I give of finished work, and high emboffed with figures, which my father won from facked Arifba : A pair of tripods, two great talents of gold, with a bowl of antique caft, which Sidonian Dido gave me. But if victorious, it shall be my fortune to possels myfelf of Italy, enjoy the crown, and to divide the fpoil by lot; faw you on what fteed, in what arms Turnus rode all in gold? That very shield and crimfon crefted helmet I will exempt from the lot; prizes, O Nifus, which are already your own. Beudes, twelve felect matrons my fire shall give, and as many captives of the other fex, and the arms that to them all belong : Befides all thefe, that ground which king Latinus himfelf posseffes. And as for you, idolized boy, whom my age follows in the nearer ftages of life, I now receive you with my whole foul, and embrace you for my companion in all events. Without thee no glory shall be won by my exploits, whether I am engaged in peace or war; to thee I chiefly will intrust my acts and counsels. To whom Euryalas thus replies : No day shall evince me degenerate from enterprises fo heroic ; only let fortune fall out prosperous, not adverse. But one thing above all favours I of thee implore : I have a mother of Priam's ancient race, whom unhappy, nor the land of Ilium, nor the city of king Aceftes, could with-hold from going along with me. Her now I leave, a ftranger, to this perilous adventure, whatever it is, and without taking farewel; night, and this righthand of thing be witness for me, that it was not for want of duty, but that I cannot bear a mother's tears : but comfort her forlorn, I beg, and fuccour her in her defolation. Let me bear away this hope from thee;

So shall I go with greater intrepidity on all adventures.

The Trojans, with minds deeply affected, fhed tears : Above all comely Iulus : and fo air an image of paternal duty touched his foul to the quick. Then thus he befpeaks him : I promife all that is due to thy glorious undertakings. For that mother of yours shall be mine, and only the name of Creufa shall be wanting; nor fmall gratitude awaits her for bleffing the world with fuch a fon, whatever fortune shall attend the heroic deed. I fwear by this head of mine, by which my father before me was wont to fwear, whatever 1 promise to yourself, if you return in fafety, and the event be profperous; the fame shall be made good to your mother and kindred. Thus weet ng over him he speaks : At the fame time divefts his shoulder of his gilded fword, which Cretan Lycaon with curious art had made, and dexteroufly fitted to the ivory sheath. On Nifus Mnestheus bestows the skin and fpoil of a grim fhaggy lion; trufty Alethes exchanges with him his helmet. Forthwith they march thus armed; whom the whole body of the peers, both young and old, with ardent prayers accompany in their way to the gates : and the comely Iulus too, endued with a foul and manly concern beyond his years, gave them many inftructions to carry his fire : But the winds difperfe them all, and fruitless give them to the clouds away. Having fet out, they overpals the trenches, and amidft the shades of night advance to the camp of their perdition ; but deflined first to be the death of many. In loofe diforder they behold bodies, overpowered with wine and fleep, ftretched along the grafs, chariots with their poles erect along the banks, men between the traces and the wheels ; arms together lying, together wine. First the fon of Hyrtacus thus fpoke : The right-hand, Euryalus, must be holdly exerted; now the fair occasion itself now invites us. Here lies our way : Watch you, and explore that no band be able to lift itfelf against us from behind? These fields will I render waste, and lead thee through a spacious tract of defolation. This faid, he suppresses

Digitized by Google

Book IX.

his speech, at the same time with the sword invades Rhamnes lying in proud flate : Who, as it chanced, on lofty carpets raifed high, was fnorting forth fleep from his whole breaft; at once a king himfelf, and an augur in highest favour with King Turnus. But not by his augur's art could he ward off the ftroke of death. Three fervants by his fide lying at random among the arms, and the armour-beartr of Remus, and, whom he found beneath the very horfes feet, the charioteer he ftabs, and with his fword cuts off their reclining Then from the master himself takes off the necks. head, and leaves the trunk gulping with blood : In purple gore the reeking earth and beds are drenched. Add to thefe Lamyrus, Lamus, and young Serranus, who, of diffinguished beauty, had been much engaged that night in play, and now was lying in every limb overpowered with the fullness of the god. Happy if that play without intermiffion he had equalled with the night, and lengthened out till day. As a famished lion making wild havock amidft a full sheep fold (for ravenous hunger prompts him on) grinds and tears the flock feeble and dumb with fear, he gnashes his bloody jaws. Nor lefs was the carnage made by Eurylaus : He too all on fire rages throughout, and in the middle falls upon a vulgar namelefs throng, Fadus, and Hebefus, Rhœtus and Abarus, not dreaming of their fate, Rhœtus broad awake, and viewing all; but for fear was hiding himfelf behind a capacious jar : In whole opposed breatt, now close at hand, he plunges the whole blade juft as he rifes on its point, and receives him with copious death. He vomits up the purple fiream of life, and in death renders back his wine mingled with blood. The other with ardour purfues his clandestine revenge. And now he was advancing towards the focial bands of Meffapus, where he faw the fire just in its extremity dying away, and the horfes in order tied, cropping the grafs : when Nifus thus in brief (for he perceived that they were hurried on by exceffive flaughter and luft of revenge) Let us defift, he fays : For the unfriendly light approaches. We have glutted ourfelves with vengeance

296

to the full : A paffage through our focs is made. This Jaid, they purfue their way. Many arms of the heroes Jain of folid filver elaborately wrought they leave behind, and together with them goblets and beautiful carpets. But the rich trappings of Rhamnes, and the belts with golden boffes ; prefents, which opulent Cædicus of old had fent to Tiburtine Remulus, when in abfence he joined with him a league of hefpitality ; he at death bequeaths them into the poffefion of his grandfon ; after his death the Rutulians, mafters of the field and booty, won them : Thefe Euryalus fnatched up, and adjufts them to his valiant fhoulders, but in vain. Then he puts on the helmet of Meffapus, of ingenious work, and with plumes adorned. And now they quit the camp, and take poffession of fafe ground. Meanwhile, three hundred horfe, all shielded, with Volseens on their head, dispatched before from the city of Latinus (while the reft of the legion in battle array flow on the plains advance), were marching up, and bore to king Turnus answers to his message. And now they were approaching to the camp, and juft entering the rampart, when at a diffance they fpy them turning away on the left-hand path : And in the glimmering shade of night the helmet betrayed the unwary Euryalus, and opposed to the beams of the moon shot a gleamy light. Scarcely was the object feen, when Volicens from the top exclaims aloud : Stand, fellows ; what motive brings you hither ? Or who are ye thus in armour? Or whither are ye bound? They aimed not at making a reply; but fpeeded their flight into the woods, and trufted to the night. On either hand the horfemen oppose themselves to their elcape at the known paffes, and every avenue encircle with a guard: There was a wood wide overgrown with horrid bushes and gloomy holms, which thick brambles had choaked up on every fide ; only here and there apath led through hidden tracts. The thick shade of boughs and cumberous booty embaraís Euryalus, and fear misleads him from the ftraight way. Nifus makes off; and now heedlefs of his friend, had from the foe escaped, and from the lakes which in after times were called Albania from Alba's name : Then king Latinus had there his lofty ftables. Soon as he ftopped, and for his abfent friend looked back in vain : Unfortunate Euryalus, in what quarter have I left thee ? Or where shall I feek thee ? Again meafuring back the whole perplexed path of the mazy wood, he at once with accurate furvey retraces all his fteps, and ranges over the filent thickets : He hears the fleeds ; he hears the buffling noife, and fignals of the purfuers. Nor long time intervened, when a general fhout affailed his ears, and lie fees Euryalus : Whom the whole band is now dragging along with fudden tumultuous uproar, betrayed and intercepted by the treachery of the place and night, and ftruggling hard in vain. What shall he do? By what power, by what arms shall he attempt the youth to refcue? Shall he, refolute on death, fling himfelf into the midit of his foes, and through wounds open a quick paffage to glorious death ? Strait with the full force of his contracted arm brandishing a javelin, thus to the exalted moon, with eyes turned up, he adreffes his prayer : Do thou, O goddefs, thou propitious aid my enterprise, ornament of the stars, and fair daughter of Latona, guardian of the groves ; if ever my father Hyrtacus for me brought offerings to thy altars, if ever I added to the number by my filvan spoils, or fuspended any in the cieling of thy temple, or affixed to thy facred roof; fuffer me to confound this congregated rout, and guide my weapons through the air. He faid ; and, ftraining at once with the whole force of his body, hurles the miffive fteel. The flying fpear cuts the fhades of night, and lights on the back of Sulmo, who was right against him, and there is shivered, and with the fplintered wood pierces through his vitals. Down he tumbles in the cold arms of death, discharging from his breaft the warm ftream of life, and with long heaving fobs beats his flanks. They throw their eyes around different ways. Lo he, animated the more with this fuccefs, poiled from the tip of his ear another weapon, while they are buffling about. The whizzing fpear from Tagus's either temple pierced, and, warmed in his transfixed brain, fluck fait. Volfcens furious ftorms, nor any where spies out the owner of the weapon, nor on whom in his burning rage he may wreck his vengeance. But you meanwhile, he fays, with your warm blood shall pay the forfeit of both : At the fame time with fword unsheathed he rushed on Euryalus. Then indeed in terrible agony Nifus frantic fcreams aloud : Nor longer was able to conceal himself in darkness, or to support such deep distres: On me, on me, here am I who did the mischief, O turn your fwords on me, Rutulians; mine is all the offence : Nought he, nor durft, nor could : Thefe heavens and confcious flars I call to witnefs: Only he loved his unhappy friend too much. Thus he fpoke: But the fword with force driven home pierces through his fides, and burfts a paffage in his fnow-white breatt. Euryalus welters in death; the blood flows down his beauteous limbs; and on his fhoulders the drooping neck reclines. As when a purple flower cut down by the plough pines away in death, or the poppies on their weary necks drop down their heads, when with rain they chance to be overcharged. But Nifus rufhes into the midst of them, and Volscens alone feeks through all : On Volfcens alone he fattens his attention. Whom round the foes incircling clofe, this way, and that way drive off. He not lefs keenly preffes on, and whirls his flashing fword; till he plunged it in the mouth, full oppolite, of the bawling Rutulian, and dying bereft his foe of life. Then covered with wounds he flung himfelf on his breathless friend, and there at length in peaceful death reposed. Happy pair! if my verses can aught avail, no day shall ever eraze you from the records of time; while the race of Æneas shall inhabit the immoveable Capitolian rock, and a Roman monarch hold the empire of the world.

The victorious × utulians, mafters of the prey and fpoils, in mournful proceffion bore lifelefs Volfcens to the camp. Nor in the camp was the mourning lefs, when they found Rhamnes pale in death, and fo many chiefs flain by one common maffacre, and Serranus, and Numa. A vaft confluence gather about the corpfes, about the expiring warriors, the ground recent with warm flaughter, and rivulets full of foaming blood. By comparing circumflances together, they find out the fpoils, and among the reft Meflapus's fhining helmet, and the trappings with much fweat and toil regained.

And now in her early hour Aurora, leaving Tithonus's faffron-coloured bed, sprinkled the earth with new born light; the fun having now shed on the world his beams, and objects by his light again revealed; Turnus roufes his men to arms, himfelf-with arms begirt around, and each leader rallies to the battle his troops arrayed in brafs, and by various rumours they ftimulate their martial rage. Nay the very beads of Nifus and Euryalus, a piteous spectacle, on spears erect they in the front affix, and with valt acclamation follow. On the left fide of the walls the hardy Trojans opposed to them their hoft, for the right is bounded by the river, and they maintain their ample trenches, and on their lofty turrets mournful stand, as foon as they beheld the heads of the youths fixed up to. view before the hoft, to the unhappy spectators but too well known, diftilling as they were with black gore.

Meanwhile the winged meffenger fame, flying ' through the frighted city, pours along, and glides to the ears of the mother of Euryalus; then fudden with mifery overwhelmed, the vital warmth forfook her bones. The weaving inftruments dropped from her trembling hands, and her labours are unravelled. In extreme agony the flies out, and with female thricks tearing her hair, diftracted takes her way with speed to the walls and nearest bands. Nor of men, nor darts, nor danger heedful : Then with these complaints the fills the fky : Is this you I fee, my own Euryalus? Art thou that late folace I promifed myfelf in my old age? Ab cruel! couldft thou leave me all alone? And to thy wretched mother didft thou not allow access to address thee her last farewell, when on fuch perilous adventures fent? Ah! in a strange land, given a prey to Latian dogs and fowls, thou lieft! Nor I, thy own mother, laid thee out for thy funeral obsequies, nor clofed thy eyes, nor bathed thy wounds, covering this body with the robe, which for thee in hafte I forwarded both night and day, and with the loom folaced my aged cares. Whither shall I go in pursuit of thee? Or what land now holds thy tender limbs, thy mangled members, and lacerated corple ? Is this all of thee, my for, thou bringelt me back ? Is this what I have followed both by land and fea? Transfix me, O Rutulians, if you have any tendernels of affection; at me hurl all your darts; let me be the first you with the fword cut off : Or thou, great father of the gods, compationatemy mifery, and with thy bolts thrust down to Tartarus this detefted head; fince I can by no other means get rid of this cruel life. By thefe doleful lamentations our minds are deeply ftruck, and a pitying groan is heaved from every breaft; quite broken and benumbed are all our powers for battle. On her thus inflaming our grief, Idzus and 'Actor, by the direction of Ilioneus, and deeply afflicted Iulus, lay hold, and in their arms bear back to her apartments.

100

Meanwhile the trumpet from afar with its shrill founding brafs rattled the dreadful din of war. Follows loud acclaim, and heaven echoes back the found. The Volicians with uniformity advancing the target fence, fpeed their march, and prepare to fill up the trenches, and demolifh the rampart. Some explore access, and by fcaling ladders to mount the walls, where the troops are but thin, and not fo thick of men, the circling bands are feen through. On the other hand, the Trojans, practifed by long war to defend their walls, poured on them every kind of miffive weapons, and pushed them down with sturdy poles. Rocks too of ruinous weight they tumbled down, if poffibly they might break through their fenced battalion : While the Rutulians, notwithflanding, under the close fence of their ferried shields, are willing all dangers to fuftain. Yet not long, nor now are they able to fland the flock : For, where thick embodied ranks prefs on the attack, the Trojans roll, and hurl down an enormous pile, which made wide havock among the Rutulians, and broke the fence works of their fhields. Nor care the bold Rutulians longer to contend in covered fight ; but by millive weapons ftrive to beat them Сс from the rampart. In another quarter Mezentius of horrid afpect, brandished a Tuscan pine, and flings souther quarter Messages a horseman brave, the progeny of Neptune, makes a breach in the rampart, and calls for ladders to scale the walls.

Ye fucred nine, and thou Calliope in chief, aid mewhile I fing; what deaths, what defolations there Turnus then with the fword effected; what hero each fent down to Pluto: And trace with me the comprehenfive limits of this war: For you, ye goddeffes, both remember, and can rehearfe the fame.

Of beight prodigious, and ftages above flages raifed aloft there flood a tower commodious in its fituation : Which with their utmost efforts all the Latins strove to florm, and with the full energy of their might to overthrow : The Trojans, on the other hand, defended it with ftones, and darts in thick vollies through the hollow loop holes flung. . Turnus in the van toffed a blazing brand, and to the fides of the tower fixed the flaming milchief; which, by the wind diffulely spread, feized the boards, and to the pillars clung till they The Trojans all aghaft raife fearful were confumed. buftle within, and helter from the difaster fought in vain. While they croud together, and backward retreat into that part which is free from the contagious ruin ; then fudden the tower with the weight overburdened tumbled down, and with the mighty crafh all heaven thunders: Down to the ground half dead they come, an immense pile of ruins following, pierced with their own weapons, and their breafts transfixed with the iron-pointed wood. Helenor alone, and Lycus with much ado efcaped: Whereof the elder Helenor (whom the flave Licymnia by a ftolen embrace had bore to the Lydian king, and fent to Troy in prohibited arms) was light armed with a naked fword, and inglorious with his fcutcheon blank. And foon as he amidit Turnus's thousands faw himfelf inclosed, and on either hand around him ranged the Latin troops; as a beaft of chace which, by a thick band of huntimen hemmed in, ranges against their darts, wilfully flings herself

Digitized by Google

302

on death, and with a bound fprings on the hunter's spears; just fo the youth, in despair, rushes on his foes, and, where he fees the thickeft forwers of di Its, advances. But Lycus, far more swift of foot, through the midft of foes, by flight reaches the walls, and ftrives with his hand to grafp their high fummits, and get hold of the belping arm of his friends. Whom victorious Turnus at once with fwift career and a winged dart purfuing, thus upbraids : Fool, didft thou hope, thou wouldest be able to escape our hands? At the fame time he grips him hanging, and with a great fragment of the walls pulls him down. As when Jove's armour-bearer, foaring on high, hath in his crooked talons raifed aloft either a hare, or inow-white iwan; or, facred to Mars, the wolf hath fnatched from the folds a lambkin, by the dam, which many a mournful bleating fought. The fhout from every quarter rifes. They fall on, and with heaps of earth fill up the trenches; while others to the battlements tofs the blazing brands. With a rock, and vast fragment of a mountain, Ilioneus overthrows Lucetius, approaching to the gate, and armed with flames; fo does Liger Emathion, Afylas Corynæus, the one skilled in the javelin, the other in the far deceiving arrow; Cæneus overthrows Ortygius, and Turnus the victorious 'Czneus: With Itys, Clonius, Dioxippus, Promulus, Sagaris, and Idas standing in defence of the lofty turrets : Capys Privernus Rays : Him the spear of Thermilla at first had slightly wounded, on which he, infatuate, throwing away his fhield, applied his hand to the wound : Up to him then the winged arrow fwiftly glides, and to the left fide his hand was nailed ; and, deep lodged within, with a deadly wound, it burft the breathing engines of the foul. In arms illustrious, the fon of Arcens flood, clad in an embroidered caffock, and thining in Iberian purple of diffinguithed form : Whom his father Arcens fent, in Mars's grove bred up about the streams of Simethus, where, fat with offerings and placable, the altar of Palicus stands. Mezentius himself, having laid aside his arms, thrice whirling around his head the thong, difcharged a bill-Ccij ing fling, and with the half melted lead clove his temples afunder, as he flood full opposite to him, and ftretched him at his full length on a large space of the fandy plain. Then for the first time in war Afcanius is faid to have directed the fleet arrow, where with he was wont before only to fright the timorous fugitive beafts of chace, and by his hand to have overthrown robust Numanus, whole furname was Remulus ; and had to avife the younger fifter of Turnus, with her in wedlock T lately joined. Before the van, bauling aloud whatever first occurred, whether decent or indecent to hear, and in heart elated with his new regal honour, he stalked, and thus with vaft clamour made his vaunt : Ye Phrygians, twice enflaved, are you not ashamed to be thus a fecond time by blockade and intrenchment shut up, and to fcreen yourfelves from death within your walls ? Lo thefe are they, who by force of arms claim to themfelves our brides ! What god, what madnefs rather drove you to Italy? They are not the fons of Atreus you have here to do with, nor the crafty-tongued Ulyffes ; but a race hardy from their original. Our infants, foon as born to the rivers we first convey, and in the rigid icy fifeams we harden. In the chace our boys are keen, and vex the woods ; their pastime is to manage the fierce fieed, and dart the arrow from the horned bow. Our youth again, of labour patient, and to frugality inured, or by the harrow fubdue the ground, or batter towns in war. Onr whole lifetime is worn out in arms, and with the inverted fpear we goad the backs of our labouring fleers ; nor flow unwieldy age impairs our strength of mind, or alters our vigour. Our grey hairs we with the helmet press; and fill take delight to fweep together fresh booty, and to live on plunder. Your very drefs, embroidered with faffron colours and gaudy purple, befpeaks you cowards : Indolence is your heart's delight ; to indulge in balls you love : To your vefts you wear effeminate steeves, and to your mitres fost unmanly ribbands. 0 Phrygian women fure, for men you cannot be! go range along the lofty tops of Dindymus, where the pipe founds the difcordant note to your accustomed ears.

The timbrels and Berecynthian flute of the Idzean mother Cybele invite you : Leave arms to men, and from the fword refrain. Him bluftering thus in haughty -ftile, and proclaiming horrid indignities, Afcanius could not bear; and, fronting him full, on the horfehair ftring extended his arrow, and, drawing both his arms to a wide diftance, paufed, first addreffing. Jove by vows in suppliant strain : Almighty Jove, affift my daring enterprife. So to thy temples shall I bring thee folemn offerings, and before thy altars prefent a bullock with a gilded forehead of fnowy whiteness, and bearing his head of equal flature with his dam, who already butts with his horn, and fpurns the fand with his feet. The father of gods and men gave ear, and from a serene quarter of the sky thundered on the left. At the fame time twangs the deadly how ; and whizzing dreadful flies the discharged arrow, and through the head of the Rutulian finds its way, and with the fteel-point transfixes his hollow temples. Go, infult valour in haughty terms. To the Rutulians your twice captivated Phrygians remit this answer. Ascanius faid no more. The Trojans fecond him with loud acclamation, ring with joyful applauses, and extol his va-. lour to the flars.

In the etherial region Apollo, the gold with golden locks, was then by chance furveying from above the Aufonian troops and city, feated on a cloud ; and thus he bespeaks victorious Iulus : Go on, hopeful boy, improve in virtue early begun; thus mortals to the ftars alcend ; defeendant of the gods, and from whom gods are to defcend. Under the line of Affaracus, all wars by fate ordained, in justice shall subfide : Nor is Troy capable of containing thee. At the fame time, having pronounced thele words, he flings himlelf from the lofty sky, divides the whispering gales, and to Afcanius repairs ; Then in the features of his face is transformed into old Butes : To Dardanian Anchifes he formerly had been armour bearer, and faithful guardian at the gate Then father Æneas affigned him the companion of Ascanius Thus marched Apollo, in every thing refembling the aged fire, both in Ccüi voice and complexion, in filver locks, and arms fierce with rattling din : And in thefe words addreffes Iülus ardent for the fight : Great offspring of Æneas, let it fuffice that by thy fhafts Numanus is fallen, thy felf unhurt : To thee this first honour great Apollo vouchfafes, and envies not thy fimilar feats of arms. For what remains, illustrieus boy, from fight abstain. This faid, Apollo dropped his human appearance, in the midft of the interview, and into thin air far vanished out of fight. The Dardanian chiefs knew the god and his divine shafts, and in his flight perceived his rattling quiver. Therefore by the mandate and divine authority of Phœbus they reftrain Afcanius panting for the fight : Themfelves once more to the combat advance, and on apparent dangers throw their lives. Along the battlements, round the whole compass of the walls, their acclamations run; they bend the valiant bows, and whifl the flings. All the ground is ftrewed with darts; then shields and hollow helmets in the conflict ring: A fierce engagement enfues. With fuch fury as a flower by the influence of the rainy kids, ariling from the welt, lashes the ground : As thick as storms of hail come rattling down precipitantly into the floods, when Jupiter, in the fouthwind riding tremenduous, hurls a watery tempeft, and burfts the hollow clouds in the fky.

Pandarus and Bitias, fprung from Alcanor of mount Ida, whom Silvan Hiera trained up in Jupiter's facred grove, youths tall as their native firs and mountains, on their arms relying, throw open the gate, which by their general's command was committed to their charge, and from the ramparts forwardly challenge the foc. Themfelves within, on right and left before the turrets fland, armed with fleel, and their heads with waving plumes adorned.

As about the chryftal ftreams, whether on the banks of Po, or by the pleafant Adige, two aerial caks together rife, and fhoot up to heaven their unfhorn heads, and wave their towering tops : The Rutulians, foon as they faw a paffage opened, rufh in. Forthwith Quercens, Equicolus graceful in arms, and

Tmarus in mind precipitant, and martial Hæmon, with all their troops, or routed turned their backs, or in the very threshold of the gate laid down their lives. Then the hoftile minds within grow more fierce with rage, and thither now the Trojans flock in thick embodied troops, and dare to encounter hand to hand, and make excursions on the foe. To Turnus the leader, in a different quarter spending his fury, and throwing the troops into diforder, the news is brought that the enemy was raging with uncommon flaughter, and had fet their gates wide open. He quits his | present enterprize, and, agitated with hideous rage, rushes forward to the Trojan gate, and the two haughty brothere : And first Antiphates (for he prefented himfelf the first) the spurious iffue of noble Sarpedon by a Theban mother, with a javelin hurled he overthrows. The Italian fhaft flies through the thin air, and, piercing the ftomach, finks deep into his breaft : The grizly wound emits a foamy tide of blood, and in his tranf. fixed longs the fleel is warmed. Then Merops, Ery . mas, and Aphidnus, with his hand he ftretches on the plain; next Bitias, flashing fire from his eyes, and in foul outrageous; not by a common javelin, for to the javelin he had not refigned his life; but a brandifhed fiery dart loud hiffing flew, like a bolt of thunder thot, which nor his shield of two bulls hides, nor his trufty corflet with double plates and feales of gold, were able to fustain. His enormous limbs fall prostrate on the ground. Earth gives a groan, and over him his buckler thunders loud. As on Baia's Eubœan shore falls at times a rocky pile, which before, built of enormous bulk they in the ocean place : Thus tumbling, headlong draws ruin with it, and dashed against the shallows, finks to its rest quite down. The feas are all embroiled, and the black feas are heaved on high. Then at the roaring noife high Prochyta trembles, and Inarime's hard adamantine bed thrown on Typhœus by Jove's command. Here Mars armipotent infpired the Latins with additional courage and prowefs, and deep in their breafts infixes his tharp flings; and on the Trojans threw flight and grim ter-

The Latins from every quarter gather, now ror. - that opportunity of a battle is offered, and the warriorgod hath illapfed on their minds. Pandarus, foon as he perceives his brother firetched at his length, in what fituation their fortune flands, and what an unexpected turn was given to their affairs, the gate with valt force he hurls on the turned hinge, shoving it along with his broad shoulders, and leaves many of his friends shut out from the city in the rigid combat : But others with himfelf he incloses, and admits them as they pour forward. Infatuate ! who marked not the Rutulian prince amidit the troops rushing upon him, and of his own accord inclosed him within the city; as a hideous tyger among the feeble flocks. Inflant an unufual light flashed on their eyes, and his arms founded dreadful; his flaming crefts tremble on his head, and from his shield he gleamy lightning darts. The Trojans all of a fudden, aghaft, discover his detested face and hi-Then mighty Pindarus springs out, and, deous limbs. inflamed with rage for his brother's death, thus addreffes him aloud : Not Amata's palace thy promifed dowry this, nor is it the heart of Ardea that now contains Turnus within his native walls. A hoftile camp. you fee; there is no poffibilty of thy escaping hence. Turnus with mind fedate thus fmiling on him fays : Begin then, if any courage be in thy foul, and hand to hand with me engage : To Priam you shall report, that here too you found an Achilles. He faid. The other, exerting his utmost force, hurls at him a spear. rough with knots, and the green rind, just as it grew. The air received the wound; Saturnia Juno interpoling turned it afide, and the fpear fixes in the gate. But not so this weapon, which my right hand wields with might, shall you escape ; for nor fo feeble he who owns the weapon, nor who inflicts the wound. He faid, and rifes to his fword lifted high, and in the middle just between the two temples, his forehead with the blade afunder cleaves, and his beardlefs cheeks with a hideous wound. A found enfues ; with his ponderous weight earth receives a shock. In death he firetches on the ground his ftiffening limbs, and arms.

- 308

bespattered with blood and brains; and on this fide and that fide his head in equal parts from either shoulder hung. In tumultuous confternation the Trojans turning their backs fly hither and thither. And had the conqueror straight bethought him, with his hand to tear away the bolts, and by the gates admit his friends, that day both to the war and Trojan race had been the last : But fury and exorbitant defire of flaughter drove him on the foes now full in his view. Firft Thalaris and Gyges, having imote off his ham, he receives with death : Then fnatching up their fpears, darts them into the backs of the fugitives : Juno with force and courage him fupplies. He joins Halys their companion in death, and Phegeus through the transfixed fhield having reached his heart : Next Alcander, and Halius, Normon and Prytanis, as on the walls they flood unapprifed of his admiffion, and roufing the martial fpirit of their friends. Lyncens advancing against him, and calling on his friends, he from the rampart full dexteroufly with his glittering fword affails, ftraining every nerve : His head together with the helmet, at one close blow ftruck off, far from its trunk was laid : Next Amycus, that deftroyer of the favage kind, than whom none more skilful to anoint the dart, and arm its poinsed steel with poison: And Clytius, a fon of Æolus and Creteus, a friend to the mufes ; Creteus, the mufes companion, who in the fong and lyre still took delight, and in melodious lays to ftretch the ftrings : Of fleeds and arms, and combats of heroes, he for ever fung.

At length the Trojan leaders, Mneftheus and fierce Sereftus, apprized of the flaughter of their troops, affemble and fee their friends in flight difperfed, and the enemy within the city. And firft Mneftheus calls: Whither, whither next bend ye your flight? What other walls, what other fortifications have you now beyoud this? Shall one man, O citizens, by ramparts every way hemmed in, fpread fuch havock through the city with impunity? Shall he difpatch to Pluto fo many, the moft illuftrious of our youths? Does neither flame nor pity towards your unhappy country, your ancient gods, and great Eneas, touch your recreant breafts? Fired by thefe words, they are fortified with courage, and in a close body ftand firm. Turnus now begins by flow degrees to retreat from the fight, and make towards the river, and that part of the walls which is bounded by the fiream. So much the more keenly the Trojans prefs upon him with loud acclaim, and form a cluftering band around him : As with annoying darts a troop of hunters perfecute a fierce lion; while the appalled favage, furly, louring, ftern, flinches back ; nor rage nor courage fuffer him to fly; nor can he for darts and men (though fain indeed he would) make head against them. Just fo Turnus, hoveringen fuspense, backward withdraws his lingering fteps, and just jo his foul with rage tumultuous boils. Nay even then twice had he attacked the enemy in their centre : Twice along the walls he chaced the troops in confusion routed. But isfuing from the camp in hafte, the whole hoft againft heaven alone combines ; nor dares Saturnian Juno fupply him with ftrength against them : For Jove from him fent down Iris, the aerial goddefs, bearing mandates to his fifter of import, not mild, unless Turnus quit the walls of the Trojans. Therefore, neither with his mighty fhield, nor valiant arm is the youth now able to withstand fo great a shock : he is so overwhelmed on all hands with showers of darts. With inceffant clang the helmet round his hollow temples ringe, and the folid arms of brafs, are riven with battering stones; from his head the plumes are struck off; nor is his buckler's bols fufficient to fupport the blows: The Trojans, and thundering Mneitheus himfelf at their head, with spears redouble thrust on thrust. Then all over his body the fweat came trickling down and pours a black clammy tide; nor has he power to breathe; languid pantings heave his weary limbs. Then at length, in all his arms, with a bound he flung himfelf headlong into the river : He, expanding his vellow bofom, received him at coming up, upbore him on his peaceful streams; and having washed away his flains of blood, returned him joyous to his friends.

Digitized by Google

310

AENEID.

BOOK TENTH.

MEANWHILE the palace of all-furrounding heaven is expanded, and the parent and fovereign of gods and men fummons a council in the ftarry manfion; Whence, high enthroned, he views all lands, the Trojan camp and Latin nations. In the magnificent domes they take their feats : Then Jove himfelf begins : Ye high celeftials, whence is your purpose backward turned? And why fo fierce do ye with hoftile minds contend? It was my will that with Trojans Italy should not engage in war : Whence all this diffention against my prohibition ? What jealoufy or these or those hathprompted to purfue hoftilities, and roufe the fword of war ? The just, the determined time for fight will come, forestal it not, when hereafter fierce Carthage shall on the Roman towers pour down mighty ruin, and the opened Alps : Then shall leave be given you to fight with mutual animolities, then to plunder and har-At prefent forbear, and cheerfully ratify the rafs. destined league. Thus Jupiter in brief : But bright Venus, on the other hand, not brief replies : O fire, O fovereign eternal of gods and men (for what other power sublists whom now we can implore) seeft thou how the Rutulians infult? And how Turnus on his fleed confpicuous is rapt through the ranks, and fwoln with fuccessful war ponrs along ? Now, not even their fenced bulwarks protect the Trojans; nay, within the gates, and on the very turrets of the walls they join battle, and the trenches are deluged with blood. Æneas, unapprized of all, is absent. Will you never fuffer us from blockade to be relieved ? Once more the enemy, and another enemy too, is hovering over the walls of Troy just rifing from its afters; and once more Tydides from Ætolian Arpi takes arms against the Trojans. I truly believe new wounds are referved for me, and I, your own progeny, am in pain for a mortal's arms. If without thy permiffion and in defiance of thy divine authority, the Trojans have come to Italy, let them attone for their offence ; nor support them with thy aid : But if they came in purfuance of fo many oracular refponses, which powers celestial and inferna both delivered, why now has any one the power to pervert thy commands? Or why to found a new fcheme of fate? What need I recal to mind the firing of their fleet on the Sicilian fhore ? Or why the king of ftorms and his furious winds raifed from Eolia ? Or Irisfent down from the cloud ? Now even to the powers of hell (that quarter of the universe alone unfolicited remained) she has recourse : And Alecto all of a fudden let loofe upon the upper world, infuriate, hath roamed through the midft of the Italian cities. For empire I am no farther folicitous; these hopes we entertained when fortune was kind ; But now let those prevail, whom thou wilt rather have prevail. If there be no fpot on earth which thy rigid fpouse will vouchfafe to the Trojans; thee I conjure, O father, by the fmoking ruins of demolished Troy, permit me to difmifs Ascanius fase from arms : permit my grandchild to furvive. For Æneas, truly, let him on feas unknown be toft, and pursue whatever course fortune shall give him : Let me but have power to protect the darling boy, and refcue him from the horrid fray. Amathus is mine: mine is lofty Paphos, and Cythera, and the manfion of Idalio: Here, laying arms afide, let him inglorious fpend his days. Command Carthage, if you will, to rule Aufonia with powerful fway; from him no opposition shall to the Tyrian cities arife. What hath it availed Æneas to efcape the ravages of war; and to have fled through the midit of Grecian flames; and to have exhausted fo many dangers both by fea and land immenfe ; while the Trojaus are in quest of this unhappy settlement in Latium, and of another Pergamus again tottering to its fall ? Had it not been better for them to have fettled on the last remains of their country, and the soil where Troy once flood ? Give back, I pray, the wretched exiles their Xanthus and Simois; and, father, permit the Trojans, rather than continue in this deplorable flate, to ftruggle once more with the difasters of Troy. Then thus imperial Juno, flung with fierce rage: Why do you compel me to break my profound 'filence, and by words proclaim my imothered grief! Did any of the gods or human race constrain Æneas to pursue war, or oppose himself a foe to king Latinus? He set out for Italy, you fay, by the authority of fate : I grant it was by the impulse of Caffandra's mad predictions. Did we advise him to abandon his camp, or to commit his life to the mercy of the winds? Or to truft a boy with the administration of the war, or with the government of the city? Or to folicit the protection of the Tuscan monarch, and embroil nations that were at peace ? What god, or what rigid power of mine urged him on to these guileful measures ? Where was Juno on this occasion, or Iris, who you tell us, has been dispatched from above? A high indignity no deubt it is, that the Latins should beleaguer your infant Troy with flames, and for Turnus to fettle in his native land; he whole grandfire is the god Pilumnus, whole mother the goddels Venilia. What think you then of the Trojans affaulting the Latins with foul hostilities ? What think you of their enthralling kingdoms not their own, and bearing away the plunder? What think you of their fuborning fathers-in-law, and carrying off betrothed spouses from the bosoms of their plighted lords? What think you of their fuing for peace like fuppliants, while on their fhips they difplayed the enfigns of war? You can privily convey Eneas from the hands of the Greeks, and in his flead fpread before their eyes a mifty cloud, and empty air ; you too can transform his fhips into fo many nymphs? But for us to have aided the Rutulians against him ever fo little, is a heinous crime. Æncas, you fay, in ignorance of all is absent. And absent let him remain in ignorance, Yours is Paphos, yours Idalium, and lofty Cythera; Why then do you folicit a city big with war, and hearts of fo rough a mould ? Is it we who attempt to overturn from its foundation thy frail Phrygian state ? Is it we, D d or rather he, who to the Greeks exposed the wretched Trojans? Who was the caufe that Europe and Afia rofe together in arms, and by a perfidious crime violated the ancient league that was between them? Was it under my conduct the Trojan adulterer flormed Sparta? Or did I fupply him with arms, or fomented the war by luft? Then it became you to be in fear for your minions: Now too late again/t us you rife with unjuft complaints, and throw out reproaches of no avail. Thus Juno pleaded her caufe: And all the celeftials rung with various affent: As when the rifing gales, pent in the woods, begin to mutter, and roll along foft whifpering murmurs, that to mariners betoken an approaching /lorm of wind.

313

Then the almighty fire, whole is the fupreme command of the universe, begins. While he speaks, the fublime manfion of the gods is hushed, earth from its foundation trembles; the lofty sky is filent; then the zephyrs are ftill, the fea levels its peaceful furface. Liften therefore, and thefe my words fix in your minds : Since it is not permitted that the Trojans with the Aufonians be joined in league, and your diffentions receive no end; whatever fortune to-day is for each referved, in whatever channel the hopes of each do run, be he Trojan or Rutulian, I will regard them both without destinction; whether the Trojan camp be now befieged with fates unkind to Latium, or in confequence of Troy's fatal error, and inaufpicious prefages given them. Nor do I exempt the Rutulians from deftiny. To each his own enterprizes shall procure difafter or fuccefs. Sovereign Jove shall be to all the fame. The fates shall take their course, Then, nodding his head, he confirmed the promife by the rivers of his Stygian brother, by those banks that roll with torrents of pitch and black whirlpools, and by his nod made heaven's whole frame to tremble, Here the confultation ended. Then Jupiter rifes from his golden throne, whom in their centre the celeftial powers conduct to his palace.

Meanwhile the Rutulians, at all the gates, are keenly employed in flaughtering the troops and beleaguer-

° 314

Book X.

ing the walls with flames. On the other hand, the hoft of the Trojans within their ramparts is close thut. up; nor have they any hope of escape: forlorn and diftreffed they fland on the lofty turrets, in vain aiming at defence ; and with thin bands befet the walls. Afius, the fon of Imbracus, and Thymætes, the fon of Hicetaon, the two Affaraci, and aged Tybris, with Caftor, lead the van: Those both the brothers of Sarpedon, and Clarus, and Hæmon, from lofty Lycia, accompany. Acmon of Lyrneffus, nor to his father Clytius. nor to his brother Mnestheus inferior, strainig with his whole body, bears a huge rock, no inconfiderable portion of a mountain. Some with darts, some with rocks ftrive to defend the town : Others hurl fire brands, and fit their arrows to the ftring. Lo, in the midft, Venus's most worthy care, the young prince of Troy. with his comely head uncovered, fparkles like the diamond which divides the yellow gold, an ornament orfor the neck, or for the head; or as fhines the ivory by art enchafed in boxwood, or Orician ebony: Whofe fpreading locks his milk-white neck fuftains, and a circle of pliant ductile gold upbinds. Thee too, O limarus, the magnanimous nations faw aiming wounds, and arming thy fhafts with poifon; Ifmarus, of a Lydian family nobly born, where the fwains manure, and Pactolus waters with his golden ftreams rich fertile lands. Mnestheus too lent his aid, whom his for-.mer glory of having beat Turnus from the baftion exalts on high; and Capys: From him the name of the city is derived. Thus they in the combats of the rugged war were mutually engaged : While Æne-. as at midnight was ploughing the waves. For foon as by commission from Évander, entering the Tuscan camp he repairs to the king, and lays before him his name and nation, what is his demand, what propofals he brings, what troops Mezentius is procuring for himfelf, and informs him of Turnus's outrageous temper; reminds him how little confidence is to be reposed in human affairs, and intermixes prayers: No delay enfues. Tarchon joins his forces, and ftrikes up a league. Then the Lydian nation, difengaged from the Ddij refiraint of fate, goes on board the fleet, by order of the gods put under the conduct of a foreign leader. Æneas's galley leads the way, under whole beak are Phrygian lions yoked: Ida towers above, a mountain most grateful to the Trojan exiles. Here great Æneas fits, and revolves with himfelf the various events of war: Pallas fast by his left-fide, now questions him of the flars that point their way in the darkfome night; now of the sufferings he suffained both by land and fea.

Now open Helicon, ye goddeffes, and me infpire to fing ; what troops meanwhile accompany Eneas from the Tufcan coafts, man his fhips, and are borne on the main.

First Massicus, in the brazen heaked Tigris ploughs the waves: Uuder whom is a band of a thousand youths, who the walls of Clufium, and who the city Colæ left : Whole weapons are arrows, and light quivers on their shoulders, and the deadly bow. With them fters Abas : His whole squadron with burnished arms, and his ftern with a gilded Apollo shone. То him Pupolonia his mother city had given fix hundred youths expert in war : But llva three hundred, an iffand ennobled by unexhaufted mines of steel. The third Afylas, the famed interpreter of gods and men, to whom the fibres of victims, to whom the ftars of heaven are in fubjection, and the languages of birds, and the flashes of prefaging thunder; he pours along his thousand, close ranged in battle array, and with horrent spears. These Pila, a Tuscan city, in its foundation, a colony from Alphean Pifa, to him put in fubjection. Follows Aftur, a most comely perfonage, Aftur confiding in his fteed and party-coloured arms. Those who in Cære, who the plains of Minio dwell, and ancient Pyrgi, and unwholefome Gravifcz, join with bim three hundred ; thefe all are animated with one refolution to follow their valiant leader. Thee, Cycnus, chief of the Ligurians, most valourous in war, I cannot pafs in filence ; nor thee, Cupavo, by few troops accompanied, on whole creft a fwan's fnowy plumes arife ; Your crime was too much love, and hence you bear the enfign of your father's transformation. For they tell us that Cycnus, while for grief of his beloved Phaeton he fings among the poplar boughs, his fifter's fhade, and with music fooths his disconfolate love, by transformation clothed with the downy plumes of a fwan, thus fpent his hoary age, leaving the earth, and foaring to the ftars with melodious voice. The fon in the fleet accompanying his cozval troops, with oars impels the bulky Centaur : The monfter flands louring on the flood, and reared high, threatens the waves with an enormous rock, and with his long keel ploughs the deep feas. The famed Ocnus too leads on a fquadron from his native coafts, fon of the prophetic Manto, and the Tuscan river Tyber, who gave thee walls O Mantua, and his mother's name ; Mantua rich and illustricus in anceftors : But they are not all of one lineage. Three clans to her belong; under each clan are four communities ; of those communities she herfelf is the capital city : The ftrength and prime of ber inhabitants are of Tuscan blood. Hence too Mezentius arms five hundred against himself, whom Mincius sprung from the parent-lake Benacus, crowned with azure reed, to the fea, along his fiream, in holtile ships of pine conveyed. Auletes, their leader, advances, ftern, and riting to the firoke, lashes the wave with an hundred fturdy oars : The furface overturned, the billows foam. Him bears the Triton enormous, and with his shell trumpet affrighting the azure floods; whofe hairy front, as he fwims along, difplays a human form down to the waift; his belly terminates in a Priftis : under his half favage breaft, the foamy furges murmur. So many chosen chiefs in thirty vessels rode. to the aid of Troy, and ploughed with prows of brafs. the briny plains.

316

And now day had from the heavens withdrawn, and auspicious Pheebe in her night wandering car shook the mid-region of the sky. Æneas (for his princely care gives not sleep to his limbs) himself feated at the helm both steers and manages the fails. And lo in his midcourse there comes up to him a choir of these who were his attendants in another shape before, Nymphs whom D d iii propitions Cybele had appointed to enjoy divinity in the fea, and from thips to become nymphs : With. equal motion they fwam along, and cut the waves ; as many as before had been drawn up on the shore brazen beaked veffels. Their king at a diftance they defery, and in circling dances him furround. Of whom Cymodocea, the most accomplished speaker, following behind, with her right hand grafps the ftern, while with her back the rifes above the flood, and with her left-hand gently rows her way along the filent waves. Then him unknowing the thus addreffes; Wakeft thou, Æneas, offspring of the gods ? Awake and give your thip full fails. We are the pines of Ida, from that mountain's facred top once thy fleet, now symphs of the fea. When the perfidious Rutulian preffed us with fire and fword till we were on the brink of ruin; constrained we burst thy cables, and go in quest of thee through the ocean. Mother Cybelein pity new fashioned us into this form, and gave us to become goddeffes, and to live under the waves. But know the boy Afcanius is blocked up in the walls and trenches, amidft /howers of darts and the Latins arsayed in all the terrors of Mars. Now the Arcadian. horfe, united with the valiant Tuscans, have reached the place appointed : Turnus is determined with his troops to intercept their march, that they may not join the camp. Come then, arife, and at the approach of morn first command thy troops to be fummoned toarms; and take thy shield impenetrable, which the power of fire thee gave, and encircled its borders with gold. Tomorrow's fun (if you deem not my words vain) shall behold vaft heaps of Rutulian slaughter. She faid ; and parting, with her right-hand shoved forward the lofty ftern; not unskilful in the art; the veffel flies along the waves fwifter than the javelin, and arrow that keeps pace with the winds. The reft then. speed their course. The Trojan prince, Anchises's fon, himfelf not knowing the cause, is loft in wonder : yet by the confpicuous omen raifes the fpirits of his - troops. Then furveying the high vault of heaven, he briefly prays: Bountcous parent of the gods, Idzan-

318

Cybele, whole dear delight is Dindymus, and turretbearing cities, and lions yoked in pairs fubmilfive to thy reins; be thou my leader in the fight; do thou, O goddefs, in due form render the omen propitious, and with thy aufpicious influence aid the Trojans.

This much he faid ; and meanwhile the day revolved was now with perfect light advanced, and had chaced away the night. First he enjoins his troops to observe the fignal, and dispose their minds for feats of war, and prepare themfelves for the combat. And now he has the Trojans and his camp in view, ftanding on his lofty deck. Then next on his left arm he raifed aloft his flaming buckler. The Trojans from their walls raife acclamations to the ftars. Additional hope rouses up their fury: Darts from their hands they hurl. As underneath the dark louring clouds, Strymonian cranes give the fignal, and fwim along the fkies with obstreperous din, and from. the formy fouth-winds with joyous clamour fly. But to the Rutulian prince, and Aufonian leaders, this new turn amazing feemed ; till, looking back, they fpy the fleet turned towards the fhore, and the whole channel of the river gliding along with veffels. The tufted helmet on his head blazes, and from the top of his creft a flame is fhot forth, and the golden bofs of his buckler darts copious fires: Just as what time in a clear night, a fanguine comet baleful glares; or as the dog-flar, that burning conftellation, when he brings drought and difeafes on fickly mortals, rifes and faddens the fky with inaufpicious light. Yet daring Turnus dropped not his bold purpofe to preoccupy the shore, and as they approached beat them from the land. Then brickly, by addreffing his men, he raifes their courage, and brifkly chides their fears : Lo the bour which. ardently you wished is come, by dint of .valour to crush your foes : Mars himself, the whole war, brave men, is in your power. Now each man be mindful of his wife and home : Now let him reflect on the illustrious deeds, the honours of his ancestors. Let us of ourfelves make head against them by the stream, while they are in harry and diforder, and their first fleps at landing ftagger. Fortune affifts the brave. He faid, and ponders with himfelf whom to lead against the enemy, and to whom he may intrust the fiege of the town.

Meanwhile Encas by bridges lands his troops from their lofty thips. Many watched the retreat of the ebbing fea, and with a fpring committed themfelves to the shallows : Others row themselves ashore. Tarchon having furveyed the ftrand where he hopes to find no shallows, and where no dashing wave remurmurs, but the fea unbroken glides with the fwelling tide, fuddenly turns thither his prow, and thus addreffes his affociates : Now, my felect band, ply the fturdy oars ; away with, urge on your veffels ; cleave with your beaks this hoftile foil, and' let the keel plough a way for itfelf. Nor shall I refuse to dash my fhip in peices in fuch a port, had we once feized the land. Which as foon as Tarchon thus had faid. his mates rose to their oars at once, and full on the Latin coafts their foaming gallies bear; till the beaks reft on the dry dock, and all the keels without harm are moved. But not fo thy veffel, Tarchon : For while against the fhallows dashed she hangs on the fatal ridge, long balanced in fuspense, and tires the beating waves, at length the is flaved to pieces, and exposes the crew in the midit of the waves, whom fragments of oars and floating benches embarraís, and withal the tide retreating repels their fteps.

Then no supine delay withholds Turnus: But impetuous he drives on his whole host against the Trojans, and on the shore ranges them full opposite. They found the alarm. Æneas first attacks the russic troops, a prelude to the fight: and roused the Latins, having flain Theron, their giant chief, who boldly makes up to Æneas: through the brazen texture of his buckler, and through his corflet rough with gold, he with the fword drains the blood from his transfixed fide. Lycas next he finites, who from his mother dead was ript, and to thee, O Phæbus devoted: Because in infancy he was permitted to escape the perilous chances of fieel. Nor far from thence, he overthrows in death hardy Cifleus, and gi-gantic Gyas, as they are felling the troops with clubs. Nought them the weapons of Hercules, nought their ftrength of arm availed; and their father Melampus, the companion of Alcides, as long as earth with toilfome labours him fupplied; lo, at Pharus hurling a javelin, he fixes it full in his bawling mouth, while he vaunts dastardly speeches. Thou too, Cydon, while thou hapless art purfuing Glytius, thy new charmer, shading his cheeks with the first yellow down, overthrown by the Trojan hero's arm, regardless of those loves which still thou entertained for boys, hadst lain, an object of compassion, had not a band of brothers, the progeny of Phorcus, in clofe array made head against him; feven they are in number, and feven darts they fling : Part from his helm and shield eneffectual rebound : Part just grazing on his skin indulgent Venus turned afide. Encas his trufty Achates thus bez fpeaks: Supply me with darts (not one against the Rutulians that my right hand hurl in vain) thefe which on the Trojan plains pierced fo many of the Greeks. Then he grafps at once, and toffes a mighty fpear : It flying pierces through the brazen plates of Mæon's shield, and his cuiras together with his breast transfixes. To him comes up his brother Alcanor, and with his right hand fuftains his falling brother : Piercing whole arm, the darted fpear flies with uninterrupted progrefs, and drenched in blood holds on its courfe, and from the fhoulder by the nerves the arm hung impotent and dead. Then Numitor from his brother's body fnatched a javelin, aims it at Æneas; but to him it is not permitted in his turn to transfix the hero, and it grazed on the thigh of great Achates. Here Claufus of Cures, confiding in his youthful perfon, comes up, and Dryops wounds at a diftance with a rigid fpear, under his chin with force driven home, and transfixing ing his throat while the word is in his mouth, at once of fpeech and life bereaves him : But he with his front knocks the ground, and at his mouth difgorges clotted blood. Three Thracians too, of Boreas's exalted line, and three whom their father Idas and Ifmara their parent foil fent to the war, by various cataftrophe

32 I

he overthrows. Him Halzfus encounters, and the Aroncian bands : Meffapus too, the fon of Neptune, with his fleeds confpicuous comes up : Now thefe, now those ftrive each other to beat off: In the very. confines of Aufonia they combat it. As in the fpacious sky jarring winds with equal rage and force raile war: Nor they to one another, nor clouds, nor-fea on either fide give way : Long is the combat dubious : All ftruggling against them stand. Just fo the Trojan and the Latin holts encounter : Foot to foot is fixed, and man to man close joined. But in another quarter, where the torrent had far and wide difperfed whirling ftones, and thickets from the banks uptorn, as foon as Pallas faw the Arcadians, unufed to combat on foot, turning their backs to Latium fierce in the purfuit. fince the rugged nature of the ground induced them to quit their fleeds; now with entreaty, now with bitter expostulation (the fole expedient left him in this distres) he kindles their valour : Whither, my fellow foldiers, do you fly? By yourfelves, and your own gallant deeds, by the name of Evander your chief, by the battles you have won, and by my hopes which now emulating my father's glory rife, truft not to your heels. With fword in hand you may burft a paffage through your foes, where that globe of men in thickeft array prefies on us : This way your ennobled country calls you, and Pallas your leader. They are not gods who purfue us; mortal ourfelves as we are, fo by a mortal foe are we urged; to us as many fouls, as many hands, as to them, belong: Lo the ocean with his immense barrier of sea hems us in : Now land too is wanting for us to fly to : Whether into the bofom of the deep, or for Troy shall we bend our course? He faid, and into the midft of the thick embodied focs burfts away. Him Lagus firft oppofes, impelled by his inauspicious fate : Him, while he is tugging a ftone of enormous weight, he transfixes with a whirled lance, where along the middle of the back the chine divides the ribs; and forces away the fpear fast flicking in the bones. Whom, flooping over the body, Hifbon prevents not with a blow, though this indeed he hopBook X.

ed :' For, as he rushes on unguarded, while by the cruel death of his companion he is driven to madnefs, Pallas furprizes him first, and buries the fword in his fwollen lungs. Next Helenus he attacks, and, of the ancient race of Rhætus, Anchemolus, who durft his ftep dame's bed defile. In the Rutulian plains you two twin-brothers fell, Latidus and Tymber, Daucus's exactly fimilar offspring, undiffinguished by their own parents, and the objects of their pleafing error. But now Pallas on you fixed cruel marks of diffinction: For from thee, O Tymbrus, the Evandrian blade lopped off the head : And thy difmembered hand, O Laridus, feeks for thee its owner ; the dying fingers quiver, and gripe once more the fteel. Against their foes mixed indignation and fhame arms the Arcadians fired by these fuggestions, and viewing the hero's glorious deeds. Then Pallas transfixes Rhætus flying across . him in his chariot. This gave Ilus space to live, and just fo long respite from death. For at Ilus he had aimed from afar the flurdy fpear; which Rhætus coming between intercepts, as thee he flies, most valiant Teuthras, and thy brother Tyres : And, tumbled from his chariot half dead, he spurns the Rutulian fields. And as in fummer, the winds have rifen to his wifh, the fhepherd lets loofe fcattered fires among the woods : In a trice Vulcan's fquadrons, having feized the intermediate trees, are at once extended in horrid array over all the spacious plains : The victorious shepherd fits viewing the flames triumphant : Just fo the whole valour of the troops in one combines, and thee fupports, O Pallas. But Hælefus, fierce in war, advances against the hostile bands, and within the covert of his arms himfelf collects. Ladon, Pheres, and Demodocus he knocks down, and from Strymonius with his fhining blade strikes off the right hand just raised against his throat : With a rock he batters Thoas's front, and dashes in pieces the bones mingled with bloody brains. His father in the woods had concealed Halæfus prefaging his fate : Soon as the aged fire in death relaxed bis whitening eyes. Now on him deftinies laid hands, and devoted to Evander's arms: To whom Pallas makes up, thus addreffing his prayer. Grant now, O father Tyber, to this millive fteel I poife, fuccels, and a paffage through the breaft of ftern Halæfus : So shall thy oak possels these arms and spoils of the hero. To this address the god gave ear : while Halæsus screened Imaon, in an unhappy hour he exposes his defenceles breaft to the Arcadian dart. But Laufus, no fmall portion of the war, fuffers not his troops to be difpirited by the vaft havock which the hero made. First Abas to him opposed he kills, the champion and flay of the battle. Down drop Arcadia's fons, down drop the Tuscans, and you, ye Trojans, who escaped the havock of the Greeks. Both hofts in hot encounter join, with leaders and with horfes equal: Thofe in the rear prefs on the ranks before: Nor does the croud leave room to wield their hands nor weapons. Here Rallas drives on and urges the attack : there in oppofition to him Laufus : Nor is much difference in their ages; in comelinefs diftinguished both : But whole rcturn to their country fortune had denied. Yet he who reigns in heaven fupreme, permitted not that with each other they should engage; their deftiny awaits them foon from the hand of a Iuperior foe.

Meanwhile Turnus, who through the midft of the hoft in his fleet chariot cuts his way, his gentle fifter warns to fly to Laufus's relief. Soon as his friends he viewed : 'Tis time for others from battle to defift : Against Pallas alone I am bound; to me alone is Pallas doomed : Would to heaven his fire himfelf were spectator of the combat. He faid : And from the plain the troops at his command retired. But the youth, flruck with the retreat of the Rutulians, and fuch imperious orders, on Turnus gazes with aftonifhment; over his huge body rolls his eyes, and with ferocious afpect all the man aloof furveys. Then with thefe words in return to the tyrant's fpeech moves up : Now, or by bearing away triumphal fpoils, or by illustrious death, shall I be fignalized. For either chance my fire is equally fortified. Away then with your vainglorious threats. This faid, he advances into the middle of the plain. Round the Arcadian hearts the cold blood congeils. Down from his chariot Turnus fprung; on foot prepares to meet him hand to hand. And as a lion, when from his lofty watch tower he hath fpied a bull flanding on the plains aloof, meditating the fight, to him flies up; fuch is the image of Turnus rushing to the combat. Soon as Pallas judged him within reach of the darted lance, he makes the first advance, with strength unequal, trying if fortune by any means will aid his bold enterprife; and thus to the lofty heavens himfelf addreffes : By my father's hospitality, and those boards which thou his guest didit vifit, Alcides, aid, I thee implore, my arduous attempt : May Turnus in the pangs of death behold me ftrip him of his bloody armour, and let his dying eyes endure the painful fight of a victorious foe. Alcides heard the youth; and deep in the bottom of his heart a heavy groan suppresses, and pours forth unavailing tears. Then the Almighty fire with these kindly words his fon bespeaks : To every one his day is fixed ; a short irretrievable term of life is given to all : But by their actions to lenghen out their fame, this is virtue's task. Under the lofty walls of Troy fo many fons of gods have fallen : Nay, with them Sarpedon my own offspring fell : Turnus too his deftiny calls, and to the utmost verge of life he is arrived. He faid, and from the fields of the Rutulians throws away his eyes.

But Pallas with vaft force hurls a fpear ; and from the hollow feabbard tears his fining blade. The weapon flying lighted where the high armour on the fhoulders rife, and, opening its way through the extremity of the fhield, at length too on the great body of Turnus grazed. At this Turnus, long poifing a javelin tipped with fharpened fteel, darts it at Pallas, and thus fpeaks: See whether ours be not the more penetrating dart. He faid, and with a quivering ftroke the fleely point pierces through the mid fhield, through fo many plates of iron, fo many of brafs, while the bull's hide fo many times encompafies it around, and through the corflet's cumbrous folds transfixes his breaft with a hideous gafh. He in vain wrenches out the reeking weapon from the wound: At one and the fame paf-

Digitized by Google

Еe

Book X.

fage the blood and foul iffue forth. Down on his wound he rushes; over him his armour gave a clang, and in death with bloody jaws he bites the hoftile ground. Whom Turnus bestriding : Ye Arcadians, fays he, to Evander faithfully thefe my words record: In fuch plight as he deferved, I fend his Pallas back. Whatever honour is in a tomb, whatever folace in interment, I freely give him. His league of friendship with Æneas shall cost him not a little. And thus having fpoke, he preffed with his left foot the breathlefs. corple; tearing away his belt's enormous weight, and the horrid ftory with which it was emboffed; (in one nuptial night a band of youths barbaroufly murdered, and their bridal beds bathed in blood) which the ingenious Eurytion had carved in copious gold : In which fpoil Turnus now triumphs, and exults in the poffeffion. At the minds of men to fate and future events, and to practife moderation blind, fill with profperity elated ! The time shall come when Turnus shall with with all his foul, that Pallas by him had not been touched, and when these spoils and this day he shall detest. But Pallas, stretched on his shield, a numerous retinue of his friends, with many a groan and tear, back to the camp convey. Oh ill fated youth, who to thy parent fhalt return his grief and ample glory both! This day first gave thee to the war; the fame fnatches thee away; yet after thou haft left vaft heaps of Aaughtered Rutulians.

And now not mere rumour, but an unquefionable voucher of great difaster flies to Eneas; that his friends were on the verge of utter ruin; that it was high time to fuccour the flying Trojans. With his fword he mows down whatever was near him, and with the fteel impetuous forces a wide passage through the host; in queft of thee, O Turnus, proud of thy recent flaughter. Pallas, Evander, all are full before his eyes: The first banquets in which then a guest be joined, and their right hands of friendship given. Here four youths, the progeny of Sulmo, and as many more whom Usens bred, alive he fnatches; whom as victims he may offer to the shade of Pallar, and drench with their captive blood the stames of his funeral pile. Next

326

Book X.

when at Magus he aimed from far his hoftile lance; he artfully floops, and over his head the quivering javelin flies, and embracing his knees him fuppliant he thus addreffes : By thy father's manes, and the hopes of thy rifing fon Iulus, I implore thee, fpare this life, both for a fon and for a father's fake. A ftately manfion 1 poffess; talents of filver emboffed lie deep lodged under ground ; maffes of wrought and unwrought gold I have: It is not here the victory of the Trojans turns; one poorlife will not fo great a difference make. He faid. To whom Æneas thus on the other hand replies: Those many talents of gold and filver you mention, referve for your fons All those laws and mutual flipulations of war Turnus first cancelled from the moment Pallas by bim was flain. So thinks the manes of my fire Anchifes, fo my fon Iulus. This faid, he grafps his helmet with his left hand, and bowing back his neck, as he begged for mercy, plunged in his throat his fword up to the hilt. Nor far from hence Æmonides, the prieft of Phœbus and Diana, whole temples a mitre with holy fillets bound, in his rube and burnished armour all refulgent. Him encountering he drives along the plain, and flanding over him fallen, offers him a victim, and covers him with the deep shades of death. Screftus gathering up his arms, bears them away on his shoulders, a trophy to thee, O Mars, stern monarch of the field. Cæculus, born of Vulcan's race, and Umbro, come from the Marsian mountains, renew the fight. The Trojan prince with fory against them burns : Anxur's left arm and his buckler's whole circumference he with his fword had ftruck off. Some mighty fpell he had pronounced, and imagined there would be virtue in the word, perhaps exalted his foulto heaven with vain hopes, and promifed himfelf grey hairs and length of years. On the other hand, Tarquitus, whom to filvan Faunus the nymph Dryope bore, in his refulgent arms exulting, to the incenfed hero himfelf opposed. He, darting a spear with full. force, renders his corflet and buckler's vaft bulk ufeless for defence. Then strikes down to the ground his head, as he begs in vain, and is in act to plead at Eeij

· 327

large; and, tumbling the warm trunk, over it these words pronounces from his hoftile breaft ; There now, redoubted champion, lie. Thee in the earth thy gracious mother shall not lodge, nor in thy native foil load thy limbs with a grave; to birds of prey thou shalt be left ; or, funk in the deep, the waves shall bear thee down, aud hungry fifnes fuck thy wounds. Forthwith Antæus and Lycas, Turnus's foremost leaders, he purfues, and valiant Numa, and Camers in yellow gold refulgent, from magnanimous Volfcens fprung; who of all Aufonia's fons was richeft in land eftate, and over Amyclz the city of filence reigned. As Egeon, who, they fay, had an hundred arms and an hundred hands, and flashed fire from fifty mouths and breafts, when against the thunderbolts of Jove he on fo many equal bucklers clashed, unsheathed fo many fwords. Just fo the victorious Eneas wrecked his fury over all the plain, when once his pointed fteel was warmed with blood. Nay even against the four harneffed fteeds of Niphzus and their fiery chefts he advances: But they, foon as from far they faw him marching up, and breathing dire revenge, with affrightment wheeling about, and rushing back, they tumble out the chief, and whirl the chariot to the shore. Meanwhile Lucagus in his chariot drawn by two white fteeds, flings himself into the midst of the squadrons, and his brother Liger : But with the reins his brother guides the fleeds ; fierce Lucagus flourishes the naked Iword. Them raging with fuch impetuolity Eneas could not bear : On he rushes, and majeftic flood before them with his lance opposed. To whom Liger : You see not here the steeds of Diomed, nor the chariot of Achilles, or the plains of Troy; now on this ground shall a period to the war and thy life be given. Such infulting words from raving Liger are let fly : But fomewhat elfe than words the Trojan hero in return prepares ; for against his foe a javelin he hurls. As Lucagus stooping forward to the lash with a dart eggedon his yoked fteeds, while with his left foot thrown out before he fits him for the fight; the spear passes through the lowest border of his thining buckler, then piercos

.his left groin. Toffed from the chariot, in the pangs of death he wallows. Whom Æneas, piteous as he Bas, in bitter terms addreffes : Lucagus, 'tis not the flownefs of thy fleeds in flight thy chariot hath betrayed, nor have empty shadows and phantoms turned them. from the foe; thyfelf, fpringing from the wheels, deferteft the chariot. Thus having faid, he feized the ftceds. His haples brother leaping down from the same car, ftretched forth his defenceless hands. By thy own felf, O Trojan hero, by the parents who begot thee thus illustrious, spare this life, and pity a wretch who begs for mercy. To whom pleading at great length, Eneas thus replies : It was not language like this you lately uttered : Die, and like a dutiful brother delert not a brother. Then with the pointed fteel he difclofes his breaft, the latent feat of the foul, Such havock made the Trojan chief over the field ; raging like an impetuous flood or boifterous whirlwind. At length the boy Afcanius, and the youth in vain blocked up, fally forth and quit the camp.

Meanwhile Jupiter of his own free motion thus addreffes Juno: My fifter, and my dearest confort both, 'tis Venus, as you alleged, fupports the Trojan powers. Nor are you mistaken in your judgment ; no active hands for war have the men themfelves, no fouls courageous or patient of danger. To whom Juno all fubmiffion : My lord, in whom the perfection of beauty dwells, why doft thou teize mt oppressed with anguish, and dreading thy fevere mandates ? Had I that influence over your affection which once I had, and. which it became me to have, thou the omnipotent couldst not fure refuse me this; but I might have it in my power both to refcue Turnus from the fight, and preferve him in fafety for his father Daunus. Now let him die, and glut the vengeance of the Trojans. with his pious blood : Yet from our flock he derives his name : And Pilumnus is his father in the fourth degree; and often with liberal hand and many offerings has he heaped thy courts. To whom the foveteign of the etherial heaven thus briefly fpeaks : If? you plead for a respite from present death, and a breath -.

E e iij

ing time to the fhort-lived youth, and if it is thy mind that I fhould fettle it thus; bear off Turnus by flight, and fave him from impending fate. Thus far to indulge thee is allowed. But if any higher favour iscouched under these petitions, and you imagine the whole face of the war is to be fhifted or reversed, youfeed yourfelf with empty hopes. To whom Juno all in tears: What if thou shoulds grant with thy heart what in words thou declines, and this life to Turnus were to be continued fixed by thy decree? Now a woful cataftrophe awaits the guiltles youth, or vain are my pretensions to the knowledge of futurity: But O that I may rather be with groundless fears misled, and that thou, to whom the power belongs, mayst alter thy purposes for the better !

When these words she had pronounced, forthwith she shot down from the lofty sky, arrayed in a cloud. driving florm and tempest through the air; and for Then of . the Trojan army and Latin camp fhe made. < a hollow cloud, ftrange monfter to behold! the goddefs in the shape of Æneas, dresses up with Trojan armour, an airy powerlefs phantom, and imitates to the life both his shield and the crested helmet of his divine head; gives it empty words, and gives it found without sense, and counterfeits the hero's gait as he walks. Such as those forms which after death are faid to flutter about, or those dreams which mock the fenses locked in fleep. But the phantom frifky exults before the foremost ranks, and the hero with dart provokes, and with the tongue defies. On whom Turnus preffes, and at distance hurls a hifting spear : The spectre wheeling about, turned its fteps. But then, as foon as Turnus imagined, Æneas with his back turned was giving ground, and boifterous in foul drunk in illusive hope : Æneas, fays be, whither doft thou fly? Defert not thy plighted nuptials : By this right-hand shall the fettlement be given you, in quest of which you have traversed the seas. Thus bawling he pursues him, and brandishes his naked fword ; nor fees the winds bear. his bogfied joys away.

By chance there flood a fhip adjoining to the margin of a fteep rock with extended ladders, and a bridge prepared, in which king Ofinius had been wafted from the Clusian coasts. Hither in fearful haste the image of Æneas flying, flings itfelf into a hiding place : And Turnus with no lefs fpeed pursues ; furmounts all obstacles, and overleaps the lofty bridges. Scarce had he reached the brow, when Saturnia burfts the cables, and over the tumbling waves hurries the veffel torn from the shore away. But him absent Æneas with impatience to the combat feeks; and many a here whom he met, dispatched to the shades below. Then the flecting image now no further concealment feeks; but, foaring aloft, blended itfelf with a dufky cloud : When in the mean time the whirlwind drives Turnus. on the mid-ocean. Back on the fore he cafts his eyes. quite at a lofs, and thanklefs for the prefervation of his life, and both hands to heaven he raifes with his voice. Almighty father, couldit thou judge me worthy of. fuch criminal shame, and appoint me to suffer such infamous punishment ? Whither am I borne? Whence am I come? What an ignominious flight carries me off, and in what difgrace shall it bring me back ? Shall I have the face again to fee the walls of Laurentum, or the Aufonian camp? What will that band of warriors. fay, who followed me and my arms, and whom, O foul impiety ! I abandoned in the horrible jaws of death ? And now I fee them straggling, and hear the groans of the falling. What can I do? Or what earth will now yawn to receive me deep enough in proportion to: my crime? Or rather, on me ye winds have pity ; on rocks, on crags (Turnus heartily adores you) drive my veffel, and fling it on the cruel shelves of quickfand; whither neither the Rutulians, nor confeious fame may follow me. So faying, now hither, now thither he fluctuates in his foul, whether in frantic defpair to fheath the pointed steel in his bosom, on account: of fo high a difgrace, and through his fide drives home the cruel fword; or to fling himfelf into the midft of the waves, by fwimming feek the winding fhore, and rnfh again amidft the Trojan arms. Thrice he effayed either expedient ; Thrice imperial Juno reftrained, and.

331

in her foul's compation checked the youth. He glides away, cutting the deep, with profperous wind and tide; and is wafted to the ancient city of his father Daunus.

'Meanwhile, by Jove's fuggestion, furious Mezentius fucceeds him in the fight, and affaults the Trojans flufhed with fuccefs. The Tufcan troops rushed on him. at once, and with all their rage and darts thick following each other press on him, on him alone. He flands firm as a rock which projects into the vast ocean, obnoxious to the furies of the winds, and exposed to the rage of the main, endures all the violence and terrors of the sky and sea, itself unmoved remaining. He stretches on the ground Hebrus the fon of Dolicaon, and with him Latagus and fugitive Palmus: But to Latagus with a rock and vast fragment of a mountain, he gives a preventing blow on his jaws and face full right against him : Palmus hamstrung, he fuffers recreant on the ground to roll; and gives Laufus to wear his armour on his shoulders, and on his helmet's top to fix his plumes. Evas the Phrygian too he overthrows, and Mimas the companion of Paris, and his equal in. age : Whom Theano brought forth to his father Amycus, in the fame night that queen Hecuba, the daughter of Ciffeus, pregnant with a firebrand, bore Paris: He in his native city buried lies, while the Laurentine coaft poffesses Mimas ob/cure and unknown. And as a huge boar by baying hounds purfued from the high mountains (whom pine-bearing Vefulus had sheltered for many years, and the lake of Laurentum). that in the reedy wood had fed ; foon as he is arrived amongst the toils, he makes a stand, stern and serocious roars aloud, and briftles up the horrors of hisfhoulders: Nor has any one the courage to wreck his fury on him, or approach him near ; but aloft they ply him with darts and shouts secure from harm : But he intrepid stands their attacks on every fide, gnashing. his tufks, and shakes the lances from his back. Just so, not one of those, whom just rage against Mezentius fires, have the foul to encouter him with the naked fword ; but at diffance they gall him with miffive weapons and vaft clamour. From the ancient coafts of:

Book X.

Coritus had Acron come, a Grecian, who deferted to Æneas, leaving his nuptials unconfummated : Him when from far Mezentius faw breaking through the midft of the ranks, gayly arrayed in the plumes and purple favours of his betrothed spouse ; as a famished lion that often ranges over the lofty stalls (for ravenous hunger prompts him) if by chance he fpies a timerous goat, or a flag rifing on his flately horns; yawning hideoufly, he exults, rears hishair on end, and couching down over his prey, fast to the entrails clings : Black gore bathes his ravenous jaws : Thus Mezentius rushes with alacrity on the embodied foes. Ill-fated Acron is overthrown, and expiring, fpurns with his heels the fwarthy ground, and with his blood befmears the broken lance. The fame warrior deigned not to cut off Orodes as he fled, nor with the darted fpear to give him an wound unfeen : But him overtaking, he confronted face to face, and encountered man to man; fuperior not in ftratagem, but valiant in arms. Then, trampling on him overthrown, and refting on his lance, he fays : Friends, here stately Orodes lice, no mean portion of the war. His affociates in acclamation join, repeating the joyful pæan. But he expiring fays: Whoever thou art, not over me unavenged, nor long shalt thou victorious rejoice; thee too, a like deftiny awaits, and foon shalt thou on these fame fields be ftretched. To whom Mezentius fmiling with a mixture of indignation : Now die; but of me let the father of the gods and king of men difpole. So faying, he from the body extracted the dart. Cruel flumbers, and the iron fleep of death, prefs down his eyes ; his orbs are fealed in everlafting night. Cædicus butchers Alcathous, Sacrator Hydaspes, Rapo Parthenius, and Orfes extremely hardy and robuft : Meffapus, Clonius, Lycaoinus, and Ericetes; the one by a fall from his unruly fteed laid on the ground; the other on foot, himself on foot affailed : against him Lycian Agis too had ftepped forth ; but him Valerus, not degenerate from the valour of his anceftors, overthrows : Authronius by Salius falls, and Salius by Nealces, skilled in the javelin and far deceiving arrow. Now ftern Mars en either fide equalled the diffrefs and mutual deaths ; The victors and the vanquifhed equally flew and equally fell : Nor these nor those know what it is to fly. In the courts of Jove the gods compassionate the fruitles rage of both, and that such toils are appointed to mortals. On the one side, Venus ; on the other, Saturnian Juno fits spectator. Pale Tisphone in the midst of thousands wrecks her fury.

But now Mezentius all turbulent and boifterous advances forward in the field, brandishing his massy spear. Huge as Orion, when on foot he marches, cutting his way through the vaft watery fields of the mid-ocean, with his shoulder overtops the waves: Or when, conveying an aged afh from the high mountains, he stalks on the ground, and hides his head among the clouds : Just fo Mezentius in vast armour strides along. Him. on the other hand, Æneas having fpied him in the long battalion, prepares to encounter. He unterrified remains, expecting his magnanimous foe, and ftands firm on his own huge basis : And, measuring with his eye as much space as his javelin could reach : Now let this right-hand, my god, and the miffive weapon which I poife, he my aid; I vow that you, my own Laufus, shall be clad in the spoils torn from the pirate's body, the trophy of Æneas. He faid, and hurled from far the hifling dart : but the winged weapon is by glancing on the shield flung off, and deep pierces illustrious Antores between the fide and the flank ; Antores, the attendant of Hercules, who from Argos fent had joined Evander, and fettled in his Italian city. He falls, unhappy, by another wound, looks up to heaven, and in death remembers his beloved Argos. Then the pious Æneas darts his spear: Through the concave orb of triple brafs, through the linen folds, and the complicated work with three bulls hides inwove, it made way, and fettled low down in his groin; but had fpent its force. Inftant Æneas, overjoyed at feeing the Tuscan's blood, fnatches his fword from his thigh, and darts impetuous on his foe ftunned with the ftroke. Lausus, soon as he saw it, fetched a deep groan in fond pity to his beloved fire, and the tears came trickling down his cheeks. Here, be affured 1 shall not pass in tilence, nor thee, praise-worthy youth, nor the cataftrophe of thy piteous death, nor thy virtuous deeds, thou best of fons, if any future age will give credit to an act fo noble. The father drawing back his steps, quite disabled and encumbered, gave ground, and in his buckler trailed the hoftile spear. The youth fprings forward, and flung himfelf amidft the armed troops, and flood under the point of Æneas's fword, just as he is rifing with his arm, and fetching the ftroke, and, keeping him a while at bay, fuftained his shock. His friends fecond him with loud acclamation, till, by the target of the fon protected, the father withdrew; fling showers of darts, and at a distance repel the foe with miffive weapons. Æneas ftorms, and keeps himfelf under the covert of his shield. And as, if at times the clouds in a drift of hail rush down, every labouring hind flies from the fields away, and every fwain, and the traveller lurks in fome fecure retreat, either in the banks of a river, or in the clifts of a high rock, till on the earth the flower be overblown; that, when the fun returns, they may purfue the labours of the day : Just fo Æneas, with darts from every quarter overwhelmed, fustains the whole storm of war, till the thunder fpend its rage; and chides Laufus from the field, and threatens him thus : Whither doft thou rush on to thy own deftruction, and attempteft what exceeds thy ftrength? Thy pious duty blindfolds thee unguarded, to thy ruin. He, infatuated, with no lefs infolence still braves the hero ; And now the fierce wrath of the Trojan leader rifes to a greater height, and the deftinies to Laufus wind up the last threads of life : For Æneas into the youth through the middle of his body plunges his mighty fword, and buries it quite within his bosom. The pointed fteel pierced both through the thin shield, the light armour of the vaunting youth, and the veft, which with foft . thread of gold his mother had fpun; and the blood his bofom filled : Then to the shades the foul fled mourning through the air, and left the body. But foon as the offspring of Anchiles faw his vilage and dying looks, his looks wonderous pale and ghafily, in pity he fetched a heavy groan, firetched forth his hand, and the image of his filial piety penetrated deep into his foul. Ah! piteous youth, what recompence proportioned to thofe virtues of thine, what honour becoming fo great excellence, fhall the pious Eneas on thee now confer? Thy arms, wherein thou rejoiced, fill retain; and to the manes and aftes of thy parents, if that be any object of thy care, I thee refign. Yet, haplefs youth, with this thou fhalt folace thy wretched death, by the right-hand of great Æneas thou falleft. Then ftrait he chides his lingering followers, and from the ground raifes them up, with his blood marring the beauty of those locks that were in comely order dreffed.

Digitized by Google

$34

Book X.

Meanwhile the father at the ftream of the river Tyber ftaunched his wounds with water, and eafed his body, leaning to the trunk of a tree. From the boughs apart his brazen helmet hangs, and his unwieldy arms reft on the mead. Chofen youths around him ftand : Himfelf quite faint, and panting for breath, eafes his drooping neck, having fpread on his breaft a length of waving beard. Of Laufus he inceffantly enquires, and many melfengers he fends again and again to recal him from the fight, and bear to him his afflicted father's orders. But his weeping friends were carrying lifelefs Laufus on their arms, a mighty corpfe, and with a mighty wound overthrown.

The father's ill-boding mind at a diftance underftood their groans: His hoary locks with vile afters he deforms, to heaven firetches both his hands, and faft to the body clings: O fon, was I with fuch fond defire of life possefield, to fuffer him I begot for me to fubfitute himfelf to the foe's avenging arm? By thefe wounds of thine am I thy father faved, living by thy death? Ab ! now at length on wretched me, my exile heavy lies; now a wound is driven homedeep into my heart. I too, my fon, the fame unhappy cause of thy death, have by my guilt fullied the glory of thy name, for odious mideeds driven from my throne and paternal fceptre. *Tis I that to my country's fatisfaction owed, and to the odium of my subjects ought to have paid the forfeit of my guilty life by a thousand deaths. And flill I live, unworthy as I am; nor yet from men and this hated light withdraw : But I will withdraw. Then with thefe words he raifed himfelf on his maimed thigh : And, though the violent fmart of the deep wound retards him; yet, not broken in mind, he orders his courfer to be brought. This was his ornament, this his folace; by him he came off victorious in all his wars. The fympathizing beaft he bespeaks, and thus begins : Long, Rhæbus, -have we lived, if aught that mortals use be long. Today you shall either bear away in triumph the head of Æneas and those spoils all bathed in his blood, and with me revenge the griefs of Laufus ; or, if no efforts open a way to this, you shall fall with me : For never, I prefume, wilt thou, most generous animal, deign to bear the commands of another and a Trojan lord. He faid : And, received on his willing back, placed his limbs in the accustomed feat, and with pointed javelins loaded either hand, his head gleaming with brafs, and roughly garnished with a creft of horfe hair. Thus with rapid fpeed he drove into the midft, Deep in his heart bears overwhelming fhame, and frantic rage with intermingled grief, and love racked with furious despair, and confcious worth; and here thrice with loud voice he called Æneas. Æneas knew him well; and, pleafed with the challenge, thus his prayer addreffes : So may the great father of the gods, fo may exalted Apollo influence thee to begin the combat. This much he faid, and with his menacing fpear ad- . vances forward against him. But he : Most barbarous man, why thinkest thou to affright me, now that my fon is from me fuatched ? This was the only way whereby thou couldst destroy me. I neither fear death, nor any of your gods regard. Your bluflering threats forbear; now am I come to die; but first to thee thefe gifts I bring. He faid, and hurled a dart against the foe; then after that another, and another he fixes fast. and flies over the field in a fpacious circuit: But the golden bols sustains theirschock. Thrice round Æneas, as he flood against him, he rode in circles to the left, Ff

Book. X.

ŝ

fill throwing javelins with his hand : Thrice the Trojan hero, wheeling as he wheels, bears about with him in his brazen shield a frightful grove of Spears. And now, when tired with fpinning out fo long delays, and tugging away fo many darts, and when he is hard put to it, being engaged in unequal fight, revolving many thoughts in his mind, at length he fprings forth to vengeance, and between the hollow temples of the warrior fteed darts his lance. The horfe raifes himfelf upright, then with his heels buffets the air, and falling upon his difmounted rider keeps him down, and floundering forward, overlays his proftrate shoulder. The Trojans and Latins both with acclamations rend the fky. Æneas flies to him, fnatches his fword from the feabbard, and over him thefe words pronounces : Where is now the ftern Mezentius, and that wild impetuofity of foul ? On the other hand, the Tufcan, as foon as lifting up his eyes to heaven, he began to breathe the air, and recover his fenfes : Despiteful foe, why infulteft thou and threatenest death? There is no crime in shedding my blood, that either you shall demur, or I be afraid of it; nor engaged I in the combat on fuch terms that you should spare my life ; nor did my Laufus make fuch a contract with you on my behalf. One thing I implore, by that grace, if any grace to a vanquifhed foe belongs, fuffer my body to be covered with earth. I know the cruel refentment of my fubjects befets me round, who want to deprive me of burial; defend me, I pray, from this outrage, and to a grave confign me in partnership with my son. He said, and in his throat not unprepared, receives the blade, and pours forth life in the blood ftreaming on his armour.

AENEID.

BOOK ELEVENTI.

MEANWHILE Aurora rifing left the ocean. Æneas (though both his princely cares hurry him to allot time for interring his friends, and his mind is perplexed about the funeral of Pallas); yet first, in consequeece of his victory, paid to the gods his vows foon as the dawa appeared. A huge oak with its boughs on every fide lopped off, he erected on a rifing ground, and clad it with thining arms, the fpoils of king Mezentius; to thee a trophy, thou great warrior god ! He fits to the trunk his creft diftilling blood, and the hero's shattered arms, and his breaft-plate in twice fix places dinted and transfixed : and to the left-arm he faftens his target of brafs, and from the neck fufpends his ivory-hilted fword. Then thus beginning he encourages his joyous friends (for the whole chiefs in a crouded body inclosed him round) : Illustrious warriors, our most important work is done : Henceforth all fear be banished. For what remains, these are the spoils, and first fruits of victory won from that infolent tyrant : And to this ftate the redoubted Mezentius is by my arm reduced. Now to the king and walls of Latium our way lies open ; your arms make ready for the fiege, and with ftout hearts and hopes anticipate the war; that no obstacle detain you unprovided, or a wavering resolution retard you clogged with fear, when first the gods permit us to pluck up the ftandard, and from the camp to lead forth the youth. Meanwhile let us to earth commit our friends, and the unburied corples of the flain : Which is the fole honour regarded in the infernal world. Go, he fays, with the last duties grace those illustrious fouls who for us have won this country with their blood : and first to the mourning city of Evander let Pallas be conveyed; whom not deficient in heroic: Ffii virtue a black inaufpicious day cut off, and funk in an untimely death.

339

Thus all in tears he fpeaks, and to the threshold takes his way; where aged Accetes watched the corpfe of lifeless Pallas laid out : Acates, who formerly was armour-bearer to Arcadian Evander; and now withlefs aufpicious omens came to the war appointed guardian to his darling fofter-fon. Around the dead the whole retinue of his fervants stood, a band of Trojans, and mourning dames of llium, with treffes in ufual form dishevelled. But, soon as Æneas entered the losty gates, beating their breafts, they raife to heaven a hideous groan, and the palace rings with mournful lamentation. Himfelf when he beheld the bolftered head and face of Pallas white and cold as fnow, and in his fmooth breaft the gaping wound of the Aufonian fpear, he thus with gufhing tears begins: Ob, lamented youth, how envious was fortune, just when she began to fmile, to fnatch thee from me; that you fhould not fee my kingdom, nor be born in triumph to thy paternal feats? Not fuch things of thee I at parting promifed to thy fire Evander : when me at fetting out, he with embraces fent against a mighty empire, and, trembling, warned me that the men we had to do with were fierce. and that we were to engage a rough and warlike nation, and now he, highly deceived with empty hope, is perhaps both making vows, and loading the altars with offerings ; while we in grief with unavailing pomp attend the youth, a lifelefs corpfe, and now released from his allegiance to the powers above. Ill-fated fire, thou shalt fee the difinal funeral of thy own fon ! Is it thus we return? are these our promised triumphs? This my boafted confidence ! Yet, for thy confolation, Evander, you shall not fee him with inglorious wounds repulsed : Nor on thy fon thus faved by disgrace, shalt thou in spite of paternal affection imprecate an accurled death. Ah me, how glorious a protector thou, Aufonia, and thou, Iulus, in him haft loft !

When thus he had vented his grief, he orders them to bear away the woeful corpfe, and fends a thoufand men, chofen from the whole troops, to accompany thefe last honours, and bear a part in the parent's tears ; fmall confolation for fuch mighty woe, but due to the unhappy fire! Others with forward zeal weave hurdles, and a pliant bear of arbute-rods and oaken twigs ; and with a covering of boughs shade the funeral bed high raifed. Here on the rural couch fublime they lay the youth : Like a flower, or of the tender violet or drooping hyacinth, cropt by a virgin's hand, from which neither the gay bloom, nor its own fair form hath yet departed ; the parent foil no longer feeds, nor with ftrength supplies it. Then two rich vefts fliff with embroidery of gold and purple Æneas brought forth, which formerly Sidonian Dido, pleafed with the tafk, with her own hands for him had wrought, and flripped the ftuff with flender threads of gold. one of these, his last ornament, the hero with a forrowful heart arrays the youth ; and muffles up in a veil his hair devoted to the flames. Besides, he amasses many rich prizes of the Laurentine war, and orders the booty to be led in long procession. He adds the steeds and arms whereof he had spoiled the foe. And behind their backs he had bound the hands of thefe whom to his shade as offerings he would fend, to sprinkle with their fhed blood the funeral-flame : and the chiefs themfelves he commands to bear trunks of trees decked with hoftile arms, and the names of the enemies to be infcribed upon them. Unhappy Accetes, worn out with age, is by fupporters led, now with his fifts tearing his breafts, now with his nails his face : And bending forward with his whole body, he grovels on the ground. His chariots too they lead befmeared with Rutulian Next his warrior horfe Æthon, his trappings blood. laid afide, moves on weeping, and with the big drops bedews his cheeks. Others bear his fpear and helmet ; for of the reft victorious Turnus is poffessed. Then in . mournful plight the phalanx and Trojans follow, the Tuscan leaders, and the Arcadians with their arms inverted. After the whole retinue of attendants had advanced before the corple in long procession, Aneas pauled, and with a deep groan fubjoined thele words : We to other scenes of woe by the same horrid fate of war are fommoned hence. Farewel for ever, illustrious Pallas, and adieu for ever. This faid, he bent his courfe to the high walls, and directed his fleps back to the camp.

Ff iij.

And now from the city of king Latinus ambaffadors came crowned with olive-boughs, and fupplicating grace from Eneas: That he would deliver to them the bodies of their dead which by the fword lay fcattered over the field, and permit them to be intombed in the earth; that with the vanquifhed and bereaved of hife, war is at an end; that he would fpare a people to whofe hofpitality and alliance he was once invited.

Whom not unreafonable in their demands, the cour-teous Æncas receives with grace, and farther adds these words : What undeferved fate, ye Latins, hath involved you in to difattrous a war, who thus decline us your friends? Is it for the dead, and the flain by the chance of war, you implore peace ! I truly would gladly. grant it to the living too. Nor hither had I come, unlefs the fates had here affigned my fettlement and place of refidence : nor with the Latin nation wage I war. With us your king renounced hospitality, and rather trusted himfelf to the arms of Turnus. Juster had it been for Turnus to have exposed himfelf to this death-If to terminate the war by perfonal valour, if to exper-Trojans he defigns ; me in these arms he ought to. have encountered . He of us two had lived, to whom , god or his own right-hand life had given. Now go, and underneath your unfortunate contrymen apply the funeral fire. Æneas faid. They in filence flood aftonished, and turning held their eyes and faces on . each other.

Then aged Drances, who fill by calumny and invectives on young Turnus wrecked his fpite, alternate, thus replies: Trojan hero, mighty in fame, but mightier fill in arms, by what encomiums shall I exalt thee. to heaven? Whether thy justice or thy achievements in war shall I most admire? We truly with grateful hearts will bear this answer back to our city: And thee, if any fortune shall open the way, will join to king Latinus: Let Turnus seek, alliances for himself. Nay more, with pleafure will we rear up the fabric of your defined walls, and on our shoulders bear the stones of Troy.

He faid: And all with one voice murmured their affent. They fettled a truce for twice fix days; and, during the intermediate peace, Trojans and Latins promifcuous, without hoftility, ranged the woods along the mountains. Felled by the two-edged fteel craffies the tall aff; pines fhot up to the flars they overthrow; they neither ceafe to cleave with wedges the oaken planks and fragrant cedar, nor to convey in groaning waggons the mountain affres.

And now flying fame, the harbinger of fo great woe, . Evander, and Evander's palace and city fills; Fame, which just now to Latium bore the nerws that Pallas was victorious. The Arcadians rufh to the gates, and, as the ancient manner was, fnatched up funeral torches. With a long train of flames the path, all flines, and far and wide illuminates the fields. The band of Trojans, advancing opposite to them, joins the wailing. troops. Whom, foon as the matrons beheld approaching the walks, they inflame the mourning city withtheir fhrieks. But no force can reftrain Evander fromrushing through the midft. The bier laid down, on , Pallas he falls proftrate, and with fobs and groans clings to the corpfe; and at length, with much ado, for grief is . a passage opened to these words : These, O Pallas, are. not the promifes thou gavest thy parent, that with . more caution thou would it truft thyfelf to the bloody combat. I was not ignorant, how far rifing fame in . arms, and the bewitching charms of honour in the firstaction, might carry you. Ab fatal to the youth have been his first effays, hard his probation in early war !" Ah my vows and prayers, by none of the gods regarded ! Thou most holy partner of my bed, happy in thydeath, nor to this woe referved ! whilft I by living on, have overpaffed my natural bounds to remain a childlefs father. Me fiding with the confederate arms of Troy, the Rutulians should have overwhelmed with their darts : My life with joy I had refigned, and me, not Ballas, this funeral pomp had home conveyed. Noryou, ye Trojans, will I accufe, nor your alliance, nor those right-hands we joined in hospitable league : this ftroke of fortune was deftined to my old age. However, if untimely death awaited my fon, it will be fome fatiffaction, that ushering in the Trojans into Latium he fell, having first flain thousands of the Volscians. And now with no other funeral obsequies, O Pallas, can I thee grace, than what the pious Æneas, and the noble Trojans, the Tuscan leaders, and whole army of the Tuscans, have given thee. Thy illustrious trophies they bear, those whom victims to death thy right-hand offered. Thou too, O Turnus, shouldst have stood among them, a huge trunk in arms, had my age been equal, , and my firength from years the fame with yours. But why do haples I detain the Trojans from the war? Go, and faithfully bear back thefe mandates to your king : That I linger out a hated life, after my Pallas is flain, is owing to the hopes I derive from thy righthand : from which you fee vengeance on Turnus is justly due to a fon and fire. This post of honour is alone referved for thee and thy fortune. It is not any joy in life I feek, nor is it fit I should; but to carry the joyful tidings to my fon down to the fhades below.

Meanwhile to wretched mortals Aurora had brought forth the aufpicious light, renewing the works and labours of the day. Now father Aneas, now Tarchon, on the winding shore erected funeral piles. Hither they conveyed, each after the manner of his anceftors, the bodies of their dead: And, having under them applied the baleful fires, the lofty fky with fmouldering imoke is hid in darkness. Thrice round the blazing piles on foot they ran, in fhining armour clad; thrice they encompaffed the mournful funeral fire on thorfeback, and gave forth doleful yells. With their tears bedewed is the earth, bedewed are their arms. The fhricks of men and clangor of the trumpets pierce the fky. Next on the fire fome fling the fpoils torn from the Latins flain, helmets, and glittering fwords, bits, and glowing chariot-wheels; fome prefent to the dead, well known, their own bucklers and unfuccefsful darts. Many heads of oxen all around are offered victims to death: And over the flames they flab briffly boars, and fheep fnatched from all the fields; then along the whole fhore they view their burning friends, and tend their half-confumed piles; nor can they be torn from them, till humid night inverted the face of heaven befpangled with fhining flars.

Nor with lefs pious care the wretched Latins in a different quarter reared numberless piles; and part in the earth bury many bodies of their heroes flain; and part carried off, they to the neighbouring fields convey. and fend back to the city. The reft, and a vaft heap of promiscuous flaughter, without number, and without honour, they burn : Then on all fides the spacious fields, as rivalling each other, blaze together with frequent fires. The third day's light had from the fky removed the chill shades of night, when with fad demeanor they huddled together on the hearths the heaped up ashes, and bones mingled in confusion, and loaded them with a imoking mount of earth. But now in the courts of opulent Latinus, and in the city, is the chiefest uproar, and by far the deepest scene of mourning. Here mothers, and hapless brides, here tenderhearted lifters in deep anguish, and striplings of their fires bereaved, curfe the rueful war, and the nuptials of Turnus; himfelf, himfelf, they urge by arms, and by the fword to decide the quarrel with his rival, fince. to bimfelf alone he claims the crown of Italy, and the firft hononrs. This spiteful Drances aggravates, and protefts that Turnus alone is called, alone is challenged to the combat. On the other fide, the votes of many in various speech are given for Turnus, and him the queen's illustrious name protects ; and his own diftinguished fame for trophies justly won supports the hero.

Amidst these commotions, in the heat of this raging tumult, lo, to compleat the distress, the ambassadors from Diomede's imperial city returning fad, their answer bring: That nothing was effected by all the expence of so great labour; that neither the gifts, nor gold, nor importunate prayers, had aught availed: that the Latins must have recourse ro other arms, or suc for peace from the Trojan prince. With deep forrow King Latinus himfelf faints away. Now the wrath of the gods, and the recent tombs before his facc, declare that Æneas, the meffenger of fate, is led on by manifest divine impulse.

Therefore within the lofty palace he affembles his great council, and the peers of his realm fummoned by his imperial order. They obey the fummons, and flock to the royal apartments along the crouded ways. In the centre, with unjoyous aspect fits Latinus, both most advanced in age, and first in fway. And here he orders the ambaffadors from the Ætolian city now returned, to fay what meffage they bring back; and demands each particular answer in its order. Then filence fat on every tongue; and Venulus thus in obedience to command begins : We have feen, O citizens, great Diomedes, and the Argive camp; and measuring a length of way, a thousand dangers overpassed, and touched that hand by which Troy's kingdom fell. He victorious was raifing in the plains of Apulian Garganus, the city Argyripa, after the name of his native country. After we were admitted, and had permiffion given to speak in the royal presence; we first present our gifts ; declare our names and country ; who made war upon us; what errand drew us to Argos. Our meffage heard, he thus with mild accent replied: O happy nations, once Saturn's realm, ancient Aufonians, what untoward fortune difturbs you, a peaceful race, and prompts you to roufe unufual wars? As many of us as with the fword violated the lands of Ilium, (I wave those extremities of woe which in fighting under its lofty walls we fuftained, what illuftrious heroes that Simois of theirs fwept away), have bore inutterable fufferings over the world, and all punifhments for our crime; a crew whom even Priam would pity. Minerva's difastrous constellation knows, and the Eubœan rocks, and vengefúl mount Caphareus. Ever fince that expedition, have we feverally on different coasts been driven; Menelaus, the son of Atreus, is exiled as far as the pillars of Proteus ; Ulyffes hath feen the cyclops of mount Ætna. Shall I mention the tragic fate of Neoptolemus's realms, and the overthrow of idomeneus's fettlement ? or the dispersion of the Locri that inhabit on Libya's barren coaft ? The prince of Mycenæ himfelf, the leader of the illustrious Greeks, fell by the hand of his unnatural spoule, in the first entrance to his palace ; and his adulterous affaffin by traiterous means poffessed himfelf of conquered Afia. Or shall I mention how the envious gods forebad that I myfelf, reftored to my native country, should fee my much loved queen and lovely Calydon? Even now prodigies of horrid afpect pursue me; my affociates loft to me for ever, into the aerial regions winged their way, and to birds transformed, wander along the rivers, (ah dire vengeance on my friends !) and fill the rocks with doleful notes. And indeed, I had reafon to look for these calamities, ever fince that time, when with the fword I madly affaulted the celeftial beings, and violated the hand of Venus with a wound. But urge not, urge not me again to fights like thefe : Nor with the Trojans wage I any war, now that Troy is overthrown; nor remember I with joy their former woes. Those gifts, which to me you brought from your native coafts, transfer to Æneas. We against his keen darts have ftood, and engaged him hand to hand: Truft me, who by experience know, how stern he rifes to his shield, with what a whirl he throws his lance. Had Ida's land produced two fuch heroes more, the Trojans had first advanced to the cities of Inachus, and Greece by a reverse of fortune mourned. Whatever obstruction was given at the walls of flubborn Troy, the victory of the Greeks was fufpended by the hand of Hector and Æneas, and was retarded till the tenth year. Both for valour are diftinguished, both for noble feats of arms; this in piety excels. Let your righthands be joined inleague, by whatever means you may; but beware of oppofing arms to arms. Thus, beft of kings, you have at once both heard his answer, and his refolution on this important war. Scarce had the legates faid ; when through Aufonia's troubled fous a various hubbub ran : As when rocks retard a river's rapid courfe, and from the pent up flood murmurs arife, and with the beating waves the neighbouring banks refound.

Book IX

Soon as their minds were calmed, and their tumultuous tongues were hushed ; the king having first addreffed the gods, thus from his lofty throne begins : I indeed could wish, ye Latins, and it had been better, that we had before determined on the common cause : and not to call a council at fuch a juncture, when the enemy lays fiege to our walls. Incommodious war, O citizens, we wage with a nation of gods, and heroes invincible, whom no battles tire out ; nor even vanguished can they lay down the fword. What hope you entertained from the invited arms of the Ætolians, now difmis ; each must be the contre of his own hope : But this how feeble too well you fee. With what ruin the reft lies overthrown I need not fay, fince all is by yourfelves both feen and felt. Nor yet accufe I any : What the highest pitch of valour could, has been achieved ; with the whole ftrength of the realm, we have bravely struggled. Now, then, lend your attention; I will unfold, and briefly fhew what purpose rifes in my wavering foul. To me an ancient tract of land belongs fast by the Tuscan river, in length extended to the welt, even beyond Sicania's bounds : The Aruncians and Rutulians fow the foil, and vex with the share the stubborn hills, and turn to pasture their most rugged parts. Let this whole region, and the lofty mountain's piny tract, be given away to the friendship of the Trojans, and let us pronounce equal terms of ace, and, as our allies, invite them into our realms. There let them fettle, if they have fuch ftrong defire, and build them cities. But if they have a mind to take poffeffion of other territories, and another country, and if from our land they can confistently with fate withdraw, let us build for them twice ten ships of Italian timber, or more, if they are able to man them : All the materials lie along the river: let themselves order the number and fashion of the veffels ; let us with money, men, and naval ftores supply them. Besides, our pleasure is, that an hundred ambaffadors of the first rank from Latium go, to bear our infructions, and confirm the alliance, and in their hands extend the boughs of peace : bearing prefents of ivory, and fums of gold, the chair of flate, and royal robe, the enfigns of our crown. Advife for the common good, and relieve a diffreffed flate.

Then the fame fpiteful Drances rifes, (whom the glory of Turnus inflamed with oblique envy and malignant flings, abounding in wealth, and abounding more in tongue, but a cold, champion in war, yet of no mean authority deemed in council, in faction powerful; him his mother's quality infpired with the pride of noble blood, but by the father's fide of birth obfcure : loads Turnus with these invectives, and aggravates the fpite against him : Gracious fovereign, you ask counfel in an affair which to none is mysterious, nor needs our debate. All must needs own they know full well what the flate of the nation requires; but through fear they hefitate to fpeak their mind. Let him but allow them freedom of fpeech, and moderate this vaunts, for whofe inaufpicious influence and perwerfe conduct (for my part I will fpeak out, though he threatens me with hostilities and death) we have feen to many illustrious chiefs perifh, and the whole city fit in mourning ; while he tempts the Trojan camp, trufting to flight, and heaven with his arms defies. To those numerous prefents which you order to be fent to the Trojans and their leaders, this one, this one more, O best of fovereigns, add; nor let any one's violent remonstrances withhold thee from giving away your daughter, in a father's right, to an illustrious fon-in-law, and a worthy match, and from confirming a peace by this perpetual alliance. But if fuch dread of Turnus haunts our minds and fouls ; him let us implore, and from him fue for grace : That to his fovereign he may refign, and to his country give up his proper right. Why doft thou fo often expose thy wretched citizens to open dangers? O thou, the fource and origin of thefe ills to Latium ! no fafety is for us in war; to thee, O Turnus, we all fue for grace, and at the fame time for the fole inviolable pledge of peace. Lo I the first, I whom as your spiteful foe you image

Gg

to yourfelf, nor am I concerned to disprove the charge, lo I come thy fuppliant : Have pity on thy own; lay afide thy fiercenefs, and baffled guit the field. Full many deaths have we with loss of victory feen, and brought the extended fields to defolation. Or, if fame have influence on you, if in your breaft fuch fortitude you lodge, and if your heart is fo much fet on a palace for your dowry; play the hero, and bravely expose your breast adverse to the foe. Forfooth, that Turnus may be bleffed with a royal confort, we, abject fouls, may be ftrewed on the field, an unburied, unlamented throng. And now, if thou haft any mettle, if thou haft aught of thy country's warlike genius, look him in the face, who gives thee the challenge. With these invectives, the fierce mind of Turnus was inflamed; He fetches a groan, and from the bottom of his breaft burfts forth these accents : Drances, I own, you have always a rich profution of words at the time when wars call for action; and when a council is convened, you are there the foremost : But this is not a time to fill the court with words, which in big torrents from thee in fafety flow, while the bulwarks of our walls keep off the foe, nor float our trenches with blood. Wherefore thunder on in noify eloquence, as you are wont, and arraign me of cowardice, thou the valiant Drances ; fince thy right-hand hath raifed fo many heaps of flaughtered Trojans, and every where thou deckeft the fields with trophies. You may however put that animated valour of yours to the proof: For not far have we to feek the foe: they all around befet our walls. March we against the adverse foe; Content, why do you demur? Will your prowefs always lie in your bluftering tongue, and in those feet only fwift to fly ?-I routed ! Or will any one, thou most abject wretch, justly tax me with being routed, who shall view the fwollen Typer rife with blood, and Evander's whole family with his race ftretched on the ground, and the Arcadians ftripped of their armour? Not fo Bitias and bulky Pandarus me proved, nor those thousands whom in one day I victorious sent down to Tartarus, inclosed within the walls, and shut up by the rampart of the foe. No fafety, you fay, is in war. Go, madman, vent fuch language to the Dardanian chief, and the Trojans thy own party. Wherefore cease not to embroil all with dreadful alarms, to extol the firength of the twice vanquished race, and on the other hand to deprefe the arms of Latinus. Add in favour of your new friends : Now the Myrmidonian chiefs tremble at the Phrygian arms ! now Diomede and Lariffæan Achilles ! And the river Aufidus, affrighted at steing their fleet, flies back from the Adriatic waves; for this is the language of his daftardly foul, even when the wicked diffembler feigns himfelf under terror of my menaces, and by his own fears aggravates the charge against me. Cease from being diffurbed : never shalt thou lose that worthless foul of thine by this right hand. Let it dwell with thee, and reft in that ignoble breaft. Now I return from this digression to thee, great father of the flate, and to the fubject of thy debate. If in our arms you repole no further confidence ; if we are fo defolate, and utterly undone by our army being once defeated, and our fortune is capable of no redrefs; let us fue for peace, and as suppliants extend our hands unarmed. Yet, ob, did any of our wonted worth remain, bow would we bluft at the proposal ! Happy he in my judgement, beyond othere happy even in his toils, and truly heroic in foul, who, that he might not fee aught like this, fell once for all, and dying bit the ground. But if we have both forces, and youthful troops still fresh, and Italian cities and nations left to our aid; if the Trojans purchase their honour with the expense of much blood; if they too have their funerals, and the florm of war has raged through all with equal fury : Why faint we inglorious in the first entrance to the war? Why does trembling feize our limbs, even before the trumpet found? Length of days, and the various labour of changeful time, hath reduced many things to a better flate; fortune, that vifits men alternately with good and ill, hath baffled the hopes of many, and again placed them in a flate of folid felicity. The Ætolian prince, it feems, and his city Arpi, will not support us : But Ggij

Boak XI.

350

Meffapus will, and the fortunate Tolumnius, and those brave leaders whom fo many nations have fent; nor fhall fmall glory attend the felect troops from Latium, and the Laurentine fields. With us too is Camilla of the illustrious race of the Volfcians, who leads a fquadron of horfe, and troops gayly glittering with brafs. But if the Trojans demand me alone to the fight, and if this be your pleafure, and I fo much obstruct your common good; I have not hitherto been fo much abandoned by victory, to decline any enterprife for fo glorious a prospect. I will advance against him with confidence, though he should even approve himself a great Achilles, and sheathe himself in fimilar armour forged by Vulcan's hands. To you, and to Latinus, my promised father in law, I Turnus, not inferior in valour to any of the ancient heroes, have this life of mine devoted. Does Æneas challenge me alone ? Heaven grant he may. Nor, whether this iffue in vengeance from the gods, shall Drances rather than my/elf by death make the atonement; or, whether in glory and valour, shall he bear away the prize.

Thus while they in mutual contention were debating on the perplexed state of their affairs, Æneas was advancing his camp and army towards the city of Laurentum. Lo in vast hurry a meffenger rushes through the court, and fills the city with dreadful alarms: That from the Tyber's ftream the Trojans ranged in battle array, and the Tufcan hoft, were marching down over all the plains. Forthwith all minds are feized with perturbation, the hearts of the populace are flunned, and their rage with keen flimulating impulse is rouzed, In hurry they call for arms in hand, for arms the ftorming youth exclaims. The fathers in fadnels mourn and repine. Here, from every quarter, the loud clamour with various difcordant notes alcends to the fkies. Just as when by chance in fome tall grove flocks of birds alight, or in Padufa's fifty ftreams fonorous fwans raife a clattering din through the loquacious refounding floods. Nay citizens, fays Turnus, fnatching the occasion, now convene your council, and seated there, harangue in praise of peace : Whill they ruth into our kingdom in arms. This faid, he flung away, and quick from the lofty hall withdrew. You, Volufus, he fays, command to arms the Volician troops, and lead on the Rutulians : Ye, Meffapns, and Coras with your brother, pour abroad the armed horfemen over the extended plain. Let fome fecure the paffes to the city, and man the towers; the reft employ their arms with me where I shall command. Instant to the walls they run from all quarters of the town. The royal fire Latinus himfelf quits the council and his great defigns of peace, and, distracted with the prefent difinit conjuncture, adjourns : Himfelf he much accufes, that he had not directly accepted the Trojan hero, and to the city admitted him his fon in law. Others dig trenches before the gates, or heave up to them rocks and pallifadoes; the hoarfe trumpet founds the bloody fignal for the war : Then in various circling crouds matrons and boys crowned the ramparts; Their laft extremity fummons all to join their aid. Meanwhile the queen, with a great retinue of matrous, is born aloft to the temple and high towers of Pallas, bearing offerings to the goddefs ; and by her fide attending the virgin Lavinia, the caufe of fo great woe, fattening on the ground her beauteous eyes. The matrons advance, and with incense fume the temple, and from the lofty threshold pour forth their doleful prayers : Armipotent patronels of war, Tritonian virgin, cruth with thine arm the Phrygian Pyrate's lance, and ftretch himfelf profirate on the ground, and overthrow him under our lofty gates.

Turnus himfelf with emulous ardour raging, is armed for battle; and now, clad in his Rutulian corflet, with brazen fcales he fhot a horrid glare, and had fheathed his legs in gold, his temples yet naked and unarmed; to his fide he had buckled on his fword, and from the high fort fpeeding his way flone all in gold; with martial pride he exults, and already in hope anticipates the foc. As when the courfer, having burft his bonds, flies from the flall, at length at liberty, and poffeffed of the open plain; either to the paftures and herds of mares he bends his way; or, accuftomed. G g iij to be laved in the well-known flood, fprings forth; and rearing up his creft on high, neighs with wanton pride, and his waving mane plays on his peck and shoulders. Whom full in the face, Camilla, attended by her Volfcian squadron, meets, and under the very. gates the queen leaps down from her horfe; after whofe example the whole troop, quitting their fteeds, flid down to earth. Then thus fhe fpeaks : Turnus, if juftly in themfelves the brave may aught confide, I dare and promife to ftand the flock of the whole Troian hoft, and fingly to make head against the Tufcan. horfe. Suffer me with this arm to tempt the first dangers of the war : By the walls ftay you behind on foot, and guard the city. To this Turuus, with eyes fixed. on the redoubted maid : O heroine, thy country's ornament, what thanks can I think to express, or to thee repay; but now, fince that foul of thine is fuperior to: all dangers, share with me the toil. Æneas, as fame and the fcouts we fent bring fure advice, with wicked purpose hath fent before light-armed horse to scour the plains : Himfelf along the defert height of the mountain, hafting down its brow, marches against the city. Therefore to foil his cunning, a ftratagem of war I devife, in a winding path of yonder wood to befet with, an armed band the defile which in two ways divides. Do you in close fight engage the Tuscan horse. The ` brave Meffapus thee will join, and the Latin troops, and the Tiburtine band: And affume you the general'scharge. He faid, and in like terms animates Meffapus and the confederate chiefs to the fight, and himfelf marches on against the foe. In a mazy winding tract. a valley lies, commodious for ambush and the wiles of war, which a gloomy flank of wood with thick boughs incloses on either fide ; whither a fcanty path. conveys, narrow defiles and malignant passes lead. Or ver this, in the mountain's prospective brow and lofty. fummit lies a concealed plain and fafe refort ; whether from right or left you choose to attack an enemy, or from the ridge to gall him, and tumble on him ponderous rocks. Hither young Turnus repairs along the path's well-known direction, with expedition feized the poft, and in the intangled thickets infidious lay.

Meanwhile Diana in the fuperior manfions addreffed fwift Opis, one of her virgin train and facred retinue, and with fad accent pronounced thefe words: O nymph, Camilla to cruel war fets out, and is with our arms in vain arrayed, the whom I love above her fellows. Nor is this a new paffion that rifes in Diana, and with a fudden fondnels moves my foul. When Metabus, expelled his kingdom for invidious measures, and info-- lent abuse of power, guitted his ancient city Privernum, flying amidit the tempeft of war, he carried off the infant his companion in exile, and from her mother's name Casmilla, with small variation, called her Camil-He in his bofom bearing her before him, to the la. remote mountains and folitary groves took his way ;: while cruel darts purfued him on all hands, and the Volicians hovered about, with troops around him. spread. Lo in the middle of his flight, Amasenusoverflowing foamed over his higheft banks; fuch a torrent of rain had burft from the clouds : He preparing to fwim, is retarded by his tendernefs for the child,. and fears for his darling charge. Weighing every expedient with himfelf, on a fudden this refolution with reluctance fettled in his breast. A ponderous javelin, which in his mighty hand the warrior chanced to wield, folid with knots and oak well feafoned; to this . he fastens the babe wrapped up in bark and filvan. mrk, and with dexterity binds her about the middle of the fpear; which poiling in his vaft hand, he thus addreffes himfelf to heaven : To thee, Diana, virgin, godde/s, aufpicious inmate of the woods, this child, thy. handmaid, I in a father's right devote; wielding thy weapons first she flies through the air, thy suppliant, from the foe : O goddefs, I thee implore, receive thy own, who now is committed to the uncertain winds. He faid, and with inbent arm flung the whirled lance : The waves refound; over the rapid stream, ill-fated Camilla on the whizzing javelin flies. But Metabus, a numerous troop purfuing him more closely, now flings, himfelf into the flood, and mafter of his with, plucks from the graffy turf the spear with the infant nymph, now Diana's confecrated gift. Him no cities, houfes, or walls received; nor, by reafon of his favage nature. would he have condefcended to live in fociety : But in the lonely mountains he led a fhepherd's life. There among the brakes and horrid haunts of wild beafs, he nurfed his child from the dugs of a brood mare, and with animal-milk; milking the teats into her tender lips. And foon as the infant with the first prints of her feet had marked the ground, he loaded her hands with the pointed javelin; and from the shoulders of the little Amazon a bow and arrows hung. Inftead of ornaments of gold for the hair, instead of being arrayed in a long trailing robe, a tyger's hide hange over the back down from her head. Even then with tender hand the flung childith darts, and whirled round her head a fmooth thonged fling, and ftruck down a Strymonian crane, or milk-white fwan. Many matrons through the Tufcan towns withed her for their daughter in-law. She with Diana alone content, a fpotlefs maid, cherifies the perpetual love of darts and virginity. Would the had never been in love with war like this, nor attempted to affault the Trojans? My favourite virgin, and one of my retinue, the might now have been. But come, O nymph, fince the is urged on by cruel fates, flide down the fky, and visit the Latian coafts, where with inauspicious omens the woeful fight is ushered in. Take these weapons. and from my quiver draw forth a vengeful arrows: By this, whoever with a wound shall violate her facred body, whether Trojan or Italian, let him to me without diffinction pay the forfeit with his blood. Then in a hollow cloud will I into a tomb convey the corpfe and unspoiled arms of my lamented maid, and restore her to her native land. Diana faid = But she. shooting down through the light airy regions of the sky, rattled along, her body wrapped around in a black. whirlwind.

But the Trojan hoft meanwhile approaches to the walls, and the Tufcan chiefs, and the whole army of horfemen in order ranged; the prancing courfer neighs aloud over all the plain, and curvets on the strait-born reins, this way and that way wheeling about : Then far and wide an iron field of spears rifes horrid to the view, and the plains floot a fiery glare with arms raifed aloft. Again, on the other fide, oppoled to thefe, appear in the field, Meffapus, and the fwift Latins, and Coras with his brother, and virgin / Camilla's wing; and with right hands drawn back, protend their spears far before them, and brandish their darts : The march of the heroes, and the neighing of the fteeds, fhews more and more fierce. And now either army, advancing within a javelin's throw, made a halt : Then with a fudden shout they spring forth, and cheer their fprightly steeds : At once from all quarters they pour thick showers of darts, like snow; and with their shade the face of heaven is covered. Forthwith Tyrrhenus and fierce Aconteus, exerting their whole force, rush on each other with lance to lance opposed, and first with mighty noise give a thundering charge, and with a violent flock, dash their horses counters against each other. Aconteus, toffed from his steed after the manner of a thunderbolt, or weight shot from an engine, is flung headlong to a diftance, and difperfes his. life in air. Instant the lines are thrown into diforder, and the Latins put to flight, caft their fhields behind, and turn the horfes to the city. The Trojans purfue : Afylas chief leads on the troops. And now they approached the gates : When the Latins again raife a shout, and wheel about the pliant necks of their steeds : The others fly, and giving their horfes full reins, retreat. As when the fea, rolling with alternate tides, now rushes on the land, and foamy throws over the rocks its waves, and with its fpreading skirts overflows the extremity of the ftrand : Now with rapid motion. and fucking in again the ftones rolled back with the tide, it retreats, and with ebbing current leaves the fhore. Twice the Tufcans drove the flying Rutulians to their walls : Twice the repulsed Rutulians face about on their foes, who fly in their turn, and with their targets defend their backs. But after joining vattle the third time, they mingled their whole armies in.

close fight, and man fingles out his man; then dying groans are beard, and arms and corpfes, and expiring fleeds, mingled with flaughtered heaps of men, roll in deep blood : A furious combat enfues. Orfilochus against the borfe of Remulus, when he dreaded to at* tack himfelf, hurled a lance, and left the steel beneath his ear. With which blow the courfer rages, bounding high, and, impatient of the wound, toffes his legs aloft, rearing up his breaft. His lord difmounted, tumbles to the ground. Catillus overthrows Iolas, and Herminius equally formidable for courage, for fize and arms : whole yellow locks waved on his bare head, and bare were his fhoulders. Nor wounds make him difmayed; fo ftrong, and of fuch huge dimensions he ftands to arms opposed. The spear driven through his broad shoulders, trembles, and transfixing the warrior, doubles him down with pain. Black gore is poured forth all around : Vying with each other, they deal destruction with the fword, and by wounds feek glorious death. But amidit heaps of flain, the Amazon Camilla, armed with a quiver, proudly prances over the field, with one breaft bared for the fight : And now with her hand in showers tough javelins she throws, now with unwearied arm fhe fnatches her fturdy halbert. From her shoulder rattles her golden bow, and arms of Diana. Even if at any time repulfed she gave ground, still from her bow turned against the foe, fhe aimed the winged shafts. Around her rode her felect retinue, the virgin Larina, Tulla, and Tarpeia, brandishing her brazen ax; Italian nymphs, whom facred Camilla herfelf had chofe, her ornament and faithful ministers in war and auspicious peace. Like Thracian Amazons, when they beat the banks of Thermodoon, and war with particuloured arms ; or round their queen Hippolyte ; or when martial Penthefilea in her chariot returns, and with loud yelling uproar the female troops with half-moon shields exult. Whom first, whom last, didst thou fierce virgin with thy shafts overthrow ? or how many bodies didft thou firetch gasping on the ground ? First Eumenius the fon of Clytius, whole exposed breast, as he stood right against her, the transfixes with the long spear of fir. He, vomiting up torrents of blood, falls, and bites the bloody ground, and dying writhes himfelf on his wound. Then Liris and Pegafus belides; of whom the one tumbling backwards from his horfe wounded under him, while he gathers up the reins, the other as he comes up, and reaches his unavailing hand to his falling friend, both headlong and at once rush to the ground. To these she joins Amastrus, the fon of Hippotas; and at a diftance keenly plying with darts, purfues Tereas, Harpalycus, Demophoon, and Chromis: And as many shafts as shot from her hand the virgin hurled, fo many Trojan heroes fell. Afar the hunter Ornytus in strange arms rides on his Apulian steed; the warrior's broad shoulders a hide torn from a bullock overspreads; his head a wolf's vaft yawning mouth and jaws with white grinning teeth cover, and a ruftic lance arms his hand. In the midft of the troops he moves about, and overtops the reft by the whole head. Him intercepted, (nor hard was the task, now that she had put his troop to flight), fhe transfixes, and over him these words with spiteful heart pronounces : Tuscan, didst thou fancy thou waft a-hunting beafts of chace in the woods? The day is come that by a female's arm refels your vaunts : Yet to the manes of thy fathers, this no inconfiderable honour shalt thou bear, that by the weapon of Camilla thou fell, In order next Orfilochus and Butes, the two most bulky bodies of the Trojans, she affaults; but Butes right against her with the pointed lance she transfixes, between the corflet and the helmet, where, as he fits the horfe, the fhining neck appears, and where down from his left-arm the buckler hangs: Orfilochus the mocks with diffembled flight, and wheeling round in a fpacious orb, turns fhort upon him in a narrower circle, and purfues the purfuer. Then rifing high, with ftroke on ftroke redoubled, fhe drives home her flurdy ax through his arms, and through his bones, as he prays, and earneftly begs his life : With his warm brains the wound befmears his face. Her cafually encountered, and startled with the fudden fight, flopped fhort the warrior fon of Aunus, inhabitant of mount Apennine, not the last of the Ligurians, while the fates fuffered him to practife fraud. Soon as he perceives that now by no flight he can evade the combat, nor avert the queen who preffes him clofe, with policy and craft attempting to execute his wifhes, he thus begins. What mighty courage, female, can you boaft, if on a warlike steed you rely ? But throw away the means of flight, and truit thyfelf with me hand to hand on fair equal ground, and address thee to the combat on foot : Soon shalt thou know which of us shall smart for vain-glorious boasting. He faid : But fhe, breathing fury, and flung with fierce refentment. delivers her steed to an attendant, and confronts him in equal arms with the naked fword on foot, and with her maden shield undaunted. But the youth, prefuming he had now overcome his foe by artifice, inftant flies off, and turning about his horfes head, is born away with precipitation, and tires his fleet courfer with the iron fpur. Fond Ligurian, fays fbe, flushed with unavailing pride of foul, in vain haft thou perfidious tried thy country's flippery arts; nor fhall all thy artifice bring thee off fafe to Aunus, thy fallacious fire. Thus the virgin faid, and with nimble foot, all on fire, outruns his courfer's fpeed, and grafping the reins engages him face to face, and takes vengeance on his hoffile blood; with the fame eafe as from a lofty rock the faulcon, facred bird of Mars, with winged fpeed overtakes a dove foaring aloft among the clouds, and feizing grips her faft, and fcoops out the bowels with his hooky talons : Then from the fky her blood and torn plumes drop down.

But not with regardless aspect the fire of gods and men, these fcenes furveying, on high Olympus exalted fits. The almighty parent rouzed Tuscan Tarchon to bloody battles, and with no gentle incentives inflames his rage. Therefore amids the fcenes of flaughter and flying fquadrons, Tarchon is rapped by his steed, and with various remonstrances animates the wings, calling each by his name, and rallies the broken troops to battle. Oh never to be moved with just indignation 1

Oh still dastardly faint-hearted Tuscans, what fear, what cowardice fo bafe has feized your minds? Does a woman drive you thus straggling, and put all these fquadrons to flight ? What avails the fword ? Or why wield we in our hands these useless weapons? But not fo flothful are ye in the fervice of Venus and her nocturnal wars; or when the winding pipe of Bacchus hath fummoned the choirs to wait for the banquets and bowls at the fumptuous board. This is your delight, this your ambition ; while the aufpicious augur declares the facred rites begun, and the fat victim invite you to the deep groves. This faid, he fpurs on his fteed into the midft; he too bent on death, and in furious perturbation, advances directly up against Venulus, and with his right hand grafps the foe torn off his fteed, and precipitant, with huge violence, bears him off before him. A shout is raised to heaven and all the Latins turned their eyes that way. Fiery Tarchon flies over the plain, bearing both the warrior and his arms : Then from the top of his lance breaks off the fteel, and explores the open chinks, where he may inflict the mortal wound. He, on the other hand, ftruggling against him, wards off his hand from his throat, and force by force evades. And, as when the the tawny eagle foaring high, bears off a ferpent feized his prey, hath fixed in him his feet, and with his talons griped him faft, the wounded ferpent writhes his curling volumes, and with erected feales looks horrid, and hiffes with his mouth, rifing high against his foe : She not the lefs with hooky beak fqueezes him ftruggling; at the fame time flaps the air with her wings : Just fo from the army of the Tiburtines, Tarchon in triumph bears off his prey. The Tuscans, fol lowing the example and fortune of their leader, rufh Then Aruns, to death devoted, with his javelin, on, and much artifice, first courses round the swift Camilla, and watches what molt favourable opportunity may occur. Wherever amidft the troops the furious maid drove on, there Aruns follows, and filently furveys her steps. Wherever she victorious returns, and from the foe withdraws her fteps, that way the youth fecretly Hh.

winds about the reins with fpeed. And now thefe, now those approaches, and the whole circuit around traverses, and with mischievous purpose, shakes his unerring lance. Chloreus, facred to Cybele, and long her prieft, at diftance shone confpicuous in bright Phrygian arms, and fourred on his foaming fteed : Which a hide compact with gilded scaly plates of brass, in form of plumes, did cover. The rider himfelf, gaudy in barbaric attire of blue and purple dye, fhot Cretan arrows from his Lycian bow. Of gold the bow hung rattling from his shoulders, and of gold was the helmet of the prieft : Then in a knot of yellow gold, he had collected his faffron fymar, and its ruftling plaits of lawn, having his tunic and Phrygian -cuiffes embroidered with needle work. Him the virgin, whether with a view to fix in the temple's front Trojan arms, or to shew herself at the chace in captive gold, of all the warring chiefs alone blindly purfued; and through the whole hoft, from a woman's longing for the prey and fpoils, with heedlefs ardour roamed. When at length Aruns, fnatching the occasion, from his covert throws a dart, and thus to the powers above addreffes his prayer : Apollo, greateft of gods, guardian of the holy bill Soracte, whom we chiefly adore ; in whofe honour the fire of pine, by us with heaps of fuel is fed; and through the midft of the flames, we thy votaries, relying on our piety, walk over a length of burning coals : Grant, almighty fire, that by our arms this infamy may be blotted out. Not pillage or trophy, or any spoils of a vanquished maid I feek : To me my other exploits shall procure renown. If fo be, that fmote by a wound from me, this rueful peft shall fall, I to my native city shall willingly return inglorious. Phoebus heard, and with himfelf ordained that part of his vow fhould be fulfilled : part in fleet air he dispersed. By sudden death to overthrow Camilla in this hour of perturbation, he granted to his fuppliant; that his illustrious country should fee him fafe returned he denied; and that petition, the tempefts turned adrift among the winds. Therefore, foon as fent from his hand, the fpear gave a whizzing found through the air, the armies turned their attention. and all the Volfcians on the queentheir eyes directed : Nought fhe, nor air nor whizzing found regarded, or the weapon flying from the fky, till plunged beneath her naked breaft the fpear fruck fast, and driven home, drunk deep her virgin blood. Her attendants in fearful hafte pour in together, and lift up their falling queen. Above all, Aruns funned with joy and mingled fear flies, and now no longer dares truft to his fpear, nor make head against the weapons of the virgin warrior. And as fome fierce wolf, after he has flain a shepherd or lusty bullock, confeious of his audacious act, forthwith by fome unbeaten path, hath to the lofty mountains made his retreat, before the hoftile darts pursue him; and cowring claps his cowardly tail under his belly, to thewoods repaired : Just fo Aruns in hurrying perturbation from fight withdrew, and pleafed with his flight mixed among the armed troops. She dying, wrenchco out the weapon with her hand; but between the bones in her fide, the steel point stands fixed with a deep wound. Down she finks bloodlefs; down fink her cold eyes in death; and now her once blooming hue hath forfook her face. Then thus, breathing her last, she addresses Acca, one of her compeers, who beyond the reft was fingularly trufty to Camilla, with whom the used to divide her cares : and thus thefe words the fpeaks : Thus far, O fifter Acca, have I held out; now a cruel wound undoes me, and all objects round me, put on a face of darknefs. Fly quick, and bear these my last commands to Turnus. Let him advance to the combat, and repel the Trojans from the city. And now farewel. At the fame time, with thefe words the dropped the reins, finking to the ground involuntary : Then of vital heat bereft, she difengages herfelf from the whole body by degrees ; and reclined her languid drooping neck, and head captivated by death, leaving her arms : And with a groanher life indignant, fled to the infernal shades. Then indeed, a prodigious outcry ariting, firikes the golden ftars. The combat grows more bloody, now that Camilla is overthrown. At once in thick array, rufh on the whole firength of the Trojans, the Tuscan chiefs, and the wings of Arcadian Evander.

Hhij

But Opis, appointed by Diana to watch the fair, a long while had fat aloft on the high mountains, and fearlefs viewed the combat. And, foon as from far she spied Camilla by a piteous death overthrown amidst the buffle of the infuriate youths, fhe inly groaned, and from the bottom of her breaft uttered these words: Ah hapless virgin, too, too cruel punishment hast thou fustained, for offering to defy the Trojans in war ! Nor hath it aught availed thee, that lonely in the woods thou waft a votary to Diana, and on thy fhoulder bore our quivers : Yet not without due honours will thy queen forfake thee now in death's extremity ; nor shall this thy death be unrecorded among the nations, nor shalt thoubear the infamy of being unrevenged. For whoever with a wound hath violated thy acred body shall by just death his crime attone. Underneath the lofty mountain flood the flately tomb of Dercennus, the ancient king of Laurentum, of a mount of earth, and fhaded with gloomy holm. Here first the goddels, furpaffing fair, with a rapid effort of her wings alights, and Aruns from the high eminence fur-VCV8. Soon as the faw him thining in armour, and vainly fwelling. Why, fays fhe, move you off that way? Hither direct thy course, hither come to meet thy doom ; that from Camilla thou mayst receive thy due reward. Shalt thou too, poltroon, have the honour to die by Diana's shafts? She faid, and from her gilded quiver the Thracian nymph drew forth a winged arrow, and wrathful bent her bow, and ftretched it to its full length, till the crooked points together met, and now with both hands alike she touched, with the left, the fleel point, with the right and bow-ftring, her breaft, Forthwith Aruns heard at once the hiffing of the fhaft and founding air, and in his body the fteel fluck faft. Him expiring and groaning his laft, his regardless friends abandon in the dufty plain unknown: Opis to the etherial fky on wings is borne away.

364

First flies Camilla's light atmed wing; now that their queen is loft, the Rutulians in confusion fly ; valiant Atinus flies; the difcomfited leaders, and the defolate companions both feek fafe retreats, and turning their backs, on fying courfers bend their courfe towards the town. Nor is any one now able with arms. to fustain, nor stand against the Trojans preffing the attack; and difpenfing death; but on their languid shoulders, they bear off their bows unbent, and with fwift career the courfer's hoof beats the mouldering plain. Duft in thick clouds of black vapour rolls towards the walls; and from the towers the matrons, beating their breafts, raife the female shrick to the ftars of heaven. On those who first with speed burst into the expanded gates, a hoftile throng, in a mingled body preffes ; nor escape they pitcous death, but inthe very entrance, under their native walls, and amiditthe shelter of the houses, transfixed together, they expire their fouls. Some fhut the gates ; nor dare to. open a paffage even to their friends, nor within the walls receive them imploring admiffion : And a most lamentable flanghter enfues of fuch as guarded with their arms the paffes, and fuch as rufhed on those arms. The excluded, before the eyes and faces of their grieving parents, tumble headlong into the deep trenches, ruin clofe purfuing. Some, giving their horfes loofe. reins, blindfold, and with rapid fpeed bounce againft the gates, and the firmly barricadoed pofts. Even the trembling matrons, foon as from the walls they fpied the corple of Camilla, with the greatest eagerness, (fincere affection to their country prompts them), throw darts with their hands, and rushing precipitant with. hardened oaks, flakes, and poles burnt at the point, imitate iron weapons, and are ambitious to die the firft: before the walls. Meanwhile this most cruel newsfills the ears of Turnus, as he lay ambufhed in the woods, and to the youth Acca reports the dreadful diforder : That the troops of the Volscians were cuts in pieces, Camilla fallen, the vengeful foes were mak-ing a furious onfet, and by fuccelsful war had made themselves mafters of all; that the consternation was now propagated to the city. He in furious hafte, (for fo the inflexible decrees of Jove require), quits the hills he had befet, forfakes the rugged woods. Scarce had he gone out of fight, and poffeffed the plain, when prince Æneas, entering the open lawns, overpasses the mountain's ridge, and fafe through the gloomy wood takes his way. Thus both impetuous, and with their whole army towards the city advance; nor are they many paces diftant from each other. And at once Æneas at a distance spied the plain smoking with dust, and faw the Laurentine bands; and Turnus defcried Æneas fierce in arms, and heard the tread of feet, and the fnorting of the fteeds. Forthwith they would engage in fight, and effay the combat, did not the rofy iun now dip in the weltern ocean his tired fleeds, and, day declining, bring back the night. In their camps, before the town they reft, and intrench the walls.

Hh.iij.

BOOK TWELFTH.

TURNUS, foon as he faw the Latins, quite broken with unfuccefsful war, had loft heart; that now his promife was claimed, himfelf marked out by the eyes of all; with inbred ardour he pants for the combat, implacably fierce, and raifes his martial fpirit high. As in the fields of Carthage, a grizly lion, whole breaft is pierced by the hunters with a fmart wound, then at length, he roufes all his terrors, and fprings to the fight with joy, shaking the brawny muscles of his fhaggy neck, and with undaunted pride breaks the infixed weapon of his murderous foe, and roars with bloody jaws. Just fo in Turnus's inflamed break impetuous fury rifes. Then thus he addresses the king, and thus in the perturbation of his foul begins : In Turnus is no delay : From him the daftardly Trojans have no handle to retract their challenge, nor to decline what they have agreed to. I enter the lifts ; Order thou, O royal fire, the facred rites, and ratify the truce. Or I with this right-hand, shall dispatch to Tartarus the Trojan, the renegade of Afia, (let the Latins fit ftill and look on), and alone shall with the fword refel the common charge; or let him rule us vanquished, let Lavinia be refigned his spouse. To him with mind composed, Latinus replied : O youth, heroic in foul, the more you excel in fierce daring valour, the more folicitoufly it concerns me to confult your Safety, and with fearful precaution to weigh the dangers of this prspafed combat. You are heir to the kingdom of your father Daunus, to this you have added many cities won by your valour; besides, you poffess the treasures and heart of king Latinus : Let thefe then fatisfy your ambition. Choice too there is of other virgins unwedded in Latium and the territories of Laurentum; nor ignoble in their birth. Giveme leave to lay before you, without guile, these truths however ungrateful : At the fame time let me intreat you to drink them in with deep attention. Heaven had decreed that I fhould wed my daughter to none. of the princes of Lavinium her former fuitors, and this decree both gods and men unanimous pronounced. Yet, overpowered by my love to thee, overpowered by the ties of kindred blood, and by the tears of my afflicted confort, I broke through all reftraints; wrefted my daughter from the fon-in-law to whom the was promifed ; nay more, I took up impious arms against bim. From that time, Turnus, you fee what calamities, what wars purfue me : What difasters yourself in chief endure. In two great battles routed, we scarce defend our hopes of Italy in this city: The ftreams of Typer ftill run warm with our blood, and the fpacious fields are white with the bones of our flain. Whither am I fo ofren driven back from my purpose ? What infatuatuation changes my mind ? If, upon Turnus's death, I am refolved to invite the Trojans to be my allies, why not rather put an end to all diffentions, while he lives ? What will my kinfmen the Rutulians, what the reft of Italy fay, if thee to death (heaven disappoint

my fears) I shall betray, who court my daughter, and alliance by marriage ? Confider the various chances of war : Pity thy aged fire, whom now difconfolate his native Ardea far from thee divides. By these remonftrances, the rage of Turnus is not checked in the leaft : He fwells up the more, and by medicine growsmore diffempered. As foon as he was able to fpeak, he thus began : Whatever care for me you entertain, moft excellent prince, I befeech you lay alide, and fuffer me to purchafe death in exchange for glory, Wby (hould we be difmayed ? We too, great monarch,. can fling the dart and spear with no feeble arm, and blood flows from the wounds we give, Nought shall his goddels mother him avail, who in a female cloud? fcreens the fugitive, and conceals herfelf in delufiveshades. But the queen, terribly alarmed with the new fate of the fight, was all in tears, and, ready to die with grief, grafped her outrageous fon in law: O Turnus, by these tears, by whatever regard for Amata touches your foul : Thou now the only hope, the only folace of my wretched age; on thee depends the glory and crown of king Latinus; on thee our whole: family now in its decline relies : This one request I make, forbear to engage with the Trojans. Whatever fortune waits thee in that combat, the fame, O Turnus, waits me too; with you will I quit this hated light, nor to be treated as a captive will I fee Æneas my fon-in-law. Lavinia, bathing her glowing cheeks in tears, liftens to the expostulations of her mother : Lavinia, in whom profound modelty lighted up a burning flush, and diffused itself over her inflamed. face. As if one has flained the Indian ivory with ruddy purple; or as when white lilies mingled with copious roles blush: Such colours the virgin in her vifage shewed. Love raises a tumult in his foul, and fixes his looks upon the maid. He burns for arms the more, and briefly thus addreffes Amata: O mother, don't, I befeech thee, don't with tears, don't with fo inaufpicious an omen fend me from you, now that I am in my way to the combat of rigid Mars; for Turnes is not at liberty to retard his death. Thous,

٠

Idmon, my faithful herald, report from me this no pleafing meffage to the Phrygian tyrant : When first the enfuing morn, born in her crimfon car, shall blush up in the iky; let him not lead his Trojans against the Rutulians: Let the arms of Trojans and Rutulians reft : By our blood be the war decided : In that field the heauteous bride Lavinia be won. When he had pronounced thefe words, and with rapid fpeed retired into the palace, he calls for his fleeds, and exults to fee them neighing in his prefence; which fleeds Orithya gave a royal prefent to Filumnus, fuch as in whitenefs might furpafs the fnow, in fpeed the winds. The officious grooms fland around, and with their hollow hands cheer their ftroked chefts, and comb their waving manes. Then he himfelf wraps about his fhoulders his corflet rough with gold and pale mountain-brass : At the same time, fits for use his fword and buckler, and the forks of his flaming creft ; The fword which the god of fire himfelf had forged for his father Daunus, and plunged the glowing metalin the Stygian wave. Next with force he grafps his mighty fpear, which in the middle of the palace flood refting on a mighty column, Aruncian Actor's spoil, and brandishes it quivering, exclaiming thus : Now, O trufly spear, that never baulked my call, now the time is at hand : Thee heroic Actor once, thee Turnus's right hand now wields : Grant 1 may ftretch the body on the ground, and with my forceful hand rend the corflet torn from that Phrygian eunuch, and foil in the dust his locks frizled with hot irons, and dripping with myrrh. With fuch furies is he toffed, and from the whole face of him inflamed sparkles incessant fly : From his fierce eyes the fire flashes. As when a bull, to ufher in the fight, raifes hideous bellowings, and on his horns effays his rage, goring against the trunk of a tree, with blows he beats the air, and preludes to the fight by fpurning the fand. Meanwhile Æneas, fierce in his divine arms, with no lefs ardour, whets his martial fury, and kindles up his rage, joyous that the war was to he decided on the proffered terms. Then he folaces his friends and the fears of dejected

Jülus, teaching them the fates : And orders the meffengers to carry back his positive answer to king Latimus, and prescribe the terms of peace.

The next day arifen had fcarce fprinkled the tops of the mountains with light, when first from the deep ecean's gulf the horfes of the fun lift up their heads, and from their crected noftrils breathe forth day. Under the walls of the spacious city Rutulians and Trojans both prepared the measured ground for the combat; and in the centre raifed hearths and altars of turf to their common gods : Others, attired in linen veils, and their temples bound with vervain, bore fountain-water and confectated fire. The Aufonian legion advances, and the armed fquadrons pour forth at the crouded gates : On the other fide, the whole Trojan and Tufcan army with various arms rufh to the field, no otherways ranged in battle array, with fword in hand, than if furmoned to the fierce combat of Mars. The leaders too in gold and purple decked amidit the thousands, scamper over the plain : Mnheftens, the offspring of Affaracus, and brave Afylas; and Meffapus, renowned horfeman, Neptune's fon. And foon as, upon the fignal given, each man to his flation retired, they fix down their fpears in the ground, and reft their shields. Then with eagerness to see the combat, matrons in crouds, the populace unarmed, and feeble old men, occupy the towers and roofs of houfes: Others stand by the lofty gates. But from the fummit of the hill, which now is called Alban, (then the mount had neither name, nor fame, nor honour), Juno, ftretching her view, furveyed the field, and both armies of Laurentines and Trojans, and the city of Latinus. Forthwith the fifter of Turnus fhe thus addreffed, a goddefs to the goddefs who over pools and founding ftreams prefides : On her this facred honour Jove, the high fovereign of the fky, for her ravished virginity conferred. O nymph, the ornament of rivers, deareft to my foul, thou knoweft how thee in chief to all the maids of Latium who mounted the ungrateful bed of mighty Jove, I have preferred, and willingly fettled thee partner of the fkies. Learn

Beck XII.

now, Juturna, lest me you should accuse, your fad difaster. As far as fortune feemed to fuffer, and the fates permitted the flate of Latium to prosper, Turnus and your city I protected : Now I fee the youth engaging with unequal fates, the day and untoward power of the deftinies draws nigh. With these eyes I am not able to behold this combat, nor this league. If aught thou dareft more prefent for a brother, proceed ; it well becomes thy care : Perhaps better fortune shall attend the wretched Lating. Scarce had she faid, when from her eyes Juturna poured forth tears, and thrice and four times with the hand beat her comely breaft. This is no time for tears, Saturnian Juno fays, dispatch, and, if there be any means to effect it, rescue your brother from death : Or kindle thou the war anew, and diffolve the concerted league. I authorife you in the daring attempt. Having thus advised, she left her nonplussed, and distracted with dreadful agony of foul. Meanwhile from the camp the kings advance, Latinus with a vaft cumberous retinue rides in a chariot by four horfes drawn, whole refulgent temples round twelve golden rays inclose the emblem of his grandfire the fun; Turnus moves in a car drawn by two white fleeds, flourishing in his hand two javelins tipped with broad fteel: On the other fide, father Æneas, the founder of the Roman race, blazing with his ftarry fhield and arms divine, and Afcanius by his fide, the other hope of mighty Rome, advance from the camp : In a pure vestment the priest brought up the youngling of a briftly fow, and a ewelamb that had never been shorn, and presented the victims at the blazing altars. They, turning their eyes towards the rifing fun, fprinkle with their hands the falt cakes, and mark with the fword the top of the victim's foreheads, and from the facred goblets pour libations on the altars. Then the pious Æneas, having unfheathed his fword, thus prays : Thou, O fun, be witnefs now unto my prayer, and this land, for whofe fake I have been able to fustain fuch grievous toils: And thou, almighty father, and thou, Saturnian Juno, now goddels, now more propitious hear, I pray:

And thou, glorious father Mars, who by thy fovereign will difposeft the fate of battles. The fountains and rivers I invoke, and whatever objects of religion in the heavens above refide, and the deities that in the azure ocean dwell. If the victory shall chance to fall to Aufonian Turnus, it is agreed that the vanquished Trojans shall to Evander's city retire : lulus shall quit these territories: Nor for the future shall the Æneadæ, infringing the peace, make war again on Latium, or vex these realms with the sword. But if victory shall declare Mars on our fide, (as I rather presume, and rather may the Gods confirm by their divine fanction), never fhall I compel the Latins to be fubject to the Trojans, nor aim I at empire for myfelf: Let both nations unsubdued submit on equal terms to an everlasting league. I shall ordain the facred rites and wor/hip of the gods : Let my father-inlaw Latinus enjoy the power of peace and war, his wonted fovereign rule: To me my Trojans shall raife a city, and to that city Lavinia shall give the name. Thus Æneas first : Then thus Latinus, raising his eyes to heaven, fucceeds, and to the ftars ftretches forth his right-hand: By those fame powers, Æneas, by the earth, the fea, the flars I fwear, by Latona's double offspring, and two-faced Janus, by the majefty of the gods infernal, and the awful courts of grizly Pluto : These oaths let the Almighty father hear, who by his thunder ratifies our leagues : On the altars I lay my hand; and the facred fires in the midft of them. and the gods, I call to witnefs: No day shall ever violate this peace, this treaty on the fide of the Italians, whatever way the event shall fall out : Nor shall any power make me fwerve from them with my will: Not though it should overwhelm the earth in the waves, blending fea and land in a general deluge; or, by a diffolution of nature, plunge heaven into hell. As this sceptre, (for a sceptre in his hand he chanced to wield), shall never more sprouting with light leaves, diffuse twigs or shady boughs, since once for all lopped in the wood from the low ftem it is fevered from its mother-tree, and forced by the ax laid down its locks and branching arms: Once a tree, now the artift's /kilful hand hath inchafed it in beauteous brafs, and fafhioned it for the Latin kings to wield. By fuch affeverations they mutually confirmed the league full in the view of the chiefs: Then over the flames they flab the victims confecrated in due form, and tear out their entrails from them yet alive, and heap the altars with loaded chargers,

372

,

But the Rutulians had long begun to think the match unequal, and their breafts were agitated with various mixed commotion : But then the more, as they difcern more nearly that the chiefs are of unequal ftrength. Turnus advancing with a filent pensive gait, and in suppliant form, with downcast eyes, venerating the altars, his wan cheeks, and the palenefs over his youthful body, aggravate their fears. Which furmifes, foon as his fifter Juturna observed to be spread abroad, and that the giddy minds of the populace were wavering; into the midft of the troops, perfonating the form of Camertus, (who was of a noble aucient line, and from his father's valour derived an illustrious name, himfelf too in arms most valiant), into the midst of the troops fie throws herfelf, not unskilled in expedients, fows various rumours among the lines, and thus harangues them : Are you not ashamed, O Rutulians, to expose one life for all these? Are we not equal in numbers and in firength ? Lo Trojans and Arcadians both, and the fatal band, Etruria inveterate to . Turnus, ail are here ranged before us : Yet should but every fecond man of us engage, we hardly have a foe. He (Turnus), 'is true, by fame shall be advanced to the gods, at whofe altars he devotes himfelf, and in the mouths of men shall ever live ; but we, who now as idle spettators are feated on the plain, shall, after having loft our country, be conftrained to fubmit to haughty lords.

By these words the resolution of the heroic youths was now more and more inflamed, and through the troops the murmur glides. Even the Laurentine's are changed in their resolution, and those very Latins, who were just how promising themselves repose from war, and prosperity to the state, now are to arms inclined, wish the league unmade, and pity the hard fate of Turnus. To these incentives, Juturna adds another yet ftronger, and gives a fign from high heaven; than, which none more effectually alarmed the minds of the Italians, and mifled them by its portentous influence. For in the ruddy fky the tawny bird of Jove with winged speed pursued a flock of sea fowl, and a noisy tribe of the feathered kind; when fuddenly flooping to the waves, cruelly rapacious, he fnatched up in his crooked pounces a goodly swan. The Italians rouzed their attention : And all the fowls with fcreaming noife torn their flight, amazing to fee! and darken the fky with their wings, and forming a cloud, purfue their foe through the air; till by the force of their attacks, and the very incumbrance of his burden overpowered, the bird gave way, and from his talons dropped his prey into the river, and flew far out of fight among the clouds. Then indeed with acclamation the Rutulians falute the omen, and put their troops in array : And first Tolumnius the augur ; this, fays he, this is what with ardent prayers I often wished; I welcome the omen, and own the interpolition of the gods; myfelf, myself upon your head; inatch up your iwords, O Rutulians, whom this injurious foreigner thus like weak fowls with war difmays, and by violence plunders your coafts. He shall betake himfelf to flight, and far hence fet fail into the deep. Ye all with one accord close your ferried squadrons, and from the combat fave your king, whom they would ravish from you.

Ιi

He faid: and, rushing forth, hurled a dart full in the face of the enemy: The whizzing shaft gave a twang, and with unerring aim cuts the air. At once 'tis done, at once a loud shout ari/es, and the whole ranks are alarmed, and their hearts inflamed with tumultuous rage. The flying javelin, as against it flood nine brothers, most comely perforages, whom one faithful confort of Tuscan blood had bore to Arcadian Gilippus; one of these, a youth diftinguished by his mien and shining arms, just in the middle, where the flitched belt embraces the waift, and the buckle firains the joints of the fides, it pierces through the ribs, and ftretches on the yellow fand. But the brothers, a refolute band, and flung with grief, some draw their fwords, some fnatch the missive steel, and rush blindfold .: Against whom the troops of Laurentum spring forth : Then in close array Trojans, and Tufcans, and Arcadians, with painted arms again deluge the plain. One common ardour fo strong possesses all to decide the strife by dint of fword. They rifled the very altars; a thick tempeft of darts flies through all the air, and an iron fhower pours down amain : And the facred hearths and goblets they overturn. Latinus himfelf, the league now broken, flies, bearing off his baffled and infalted gods. Some rein their chariots, or with a bound vault on their fleeds, and with drawn fwords are ready to fall on. Meffapus, eager to violate the truce, gives a terrible flock to the Tuscan Auleftes, a king, and bearing the enfigns of a king, by justling against him with his horse : He retreating Falls, and unhappily among the altars planted behind him tumbles on his head and shoulders. But Messapus fierce flies up with his lance, and with the beamy weapon from on high, railing himfelf on his fteed, fmites him with a grievous blow, earneftly imploring bis life, and thus speaks : He has got it ; this to the great gods a more grateful offering we give. The Italians run up, and strip his limbs, set warm. From the altar Chorinæns Inatches a burning brand, and confronting Ebufus, as he is coming up, and aiming a blow, prevents him, by dashing the flames full in His bushy beard blazed, and, finged all ohis face. ver, foread a stench. The other, close purfuing the blow, with his left hand grafps the hair of his confounded foe, and with exerted force, preffing his knee against him, nails him fast to the ground ; in this pofture he plunges the cruel ponyard into his fide. Next Podalirius with naked fword purfuing the shepherd Alfus, as in the front of the battle he rufhes through Showers of darts, prefies close upon him : He (Alfus) drawing back his ax, cleaves afunder in the middle. Iiij

AENELD. 307.

the forchead and chin of his opponent, and with the fpattered brains befmears his arms all over. Cruel flumbers and the iron fleep of death prefs down his cyes; quenched are their orbs in everlafting night.

But the pious Æneas, with his head uncovered, ftretched forth his unarmed hand in fign of truce, and with loud exclamation called to his men; Whither rush you? What sudden discord is this arisen? Oh reftrain your rage ! The league is now ftruck up, and all the articles fettled: I alone have a right to engage; permit me, and banish your fears : This hand of mine shall make the league firm and fure ; those facred rites give me fecurity for Turnus. Amids these words, amidft fuch like expostulations, lo a hiffing arrow with winged fpeed alighted on the hero. By whole hand thot, by whole whirling force impelled; who acquired fuch glory to the Rutulians, whether a god or chance, is uncertain : Smothered was the fame of the illustrious action; nor did any vaunt himfelf in Æneas's wound.

Soon as Turnus faw the chief retreating from the army, and the Trojan leaders all in diforder, with fudden hope impetuous he burns; his fteeds and arms at once he calls, and proudly fprings into the chariot with a bound, and with his own hands guides the reins. Then, flying over the field, he gives to death many gallant heroes ; many half dead he rolls along, or with his chariot tramples down their troops, or plies their flying backs with hafty flowers of darts. As when upon the banks of the cold Hebrus, bloody Mars with fierce commotion clashes on his shield, and, kindling war, let loofe his furious fleeds ; They over the open plain outfly the fouth winds and zephyr: Thraceto its utmost bounds groans beneath the trampling of their feet; and the features of grim terror, rage, and ftratagem, the retinue of the god, ftalk around. With like fury Turnus through the midft of the embattled plain exulting drives his fleeds fmoaking with fweat, prancing over his piteoufly flaughtered foes : Their rapid hoofs featter the dewy drops of blood, and gore with mingled fand is fpurned up, And now to death

he gave Sthenelus, and Thamyris, and Pholes, the two last encountering hand to hand ; the other at diftance : At diftance both the fons of Imbrasus, Glaueus and Lades, whom in Lycia Imbrafus had bred, and furnished them with equal skill in arms, either to fight on fost hand to hand, or on horfeback to outfly the wind. In another quarter Eumedes rushes into the midft of the field, the warlike fon of ancient Dolon, reprefenting his grandfire in name, in foul and action his fire: Who once, fent as a fpy to visit the Grecian camp, durst claim for his reward the chariot of Achilles. On him Tydides for fo audacious an attempt a quite other reward conferred : And now no more afpires he to the fleeds of Achilles. Him as foon as Turnus at a diftance spied on the open plain, having first fent after him a fleet arrow through the extended void, he ftops his harneffed steeds, down from the chariot fprings, and flies up to him expiring and proftrate; and, prefling his foot on his neek, wrefts the ponyard from his hand, deep in his throat plunged the fhining blade, and withal added thefe infulting words: Lo, Trojan, stretched at your lengthmeasure the lands, and that Hesperia which by war you fought; these rewards they reap, who dare attack me with the fword : thus they build their promifel walls. Then hurling his lance, he fends Butes to. bear him company, and Chloreas, and Sybaris, Dares, and Therfilochus, and Thymostes, fallen from the neck of his foundering horfe. And as when the blaft of Thracian Boreas roars on the Ægean fea, and to the fhore purfues the waves, wherever the winds exert their incumbent force, the clouds fly racking through the air; juft fo before Turnus, wherever he cuts his way, the troops retire, and the routed fquadrons fly : His impetuous ardour bears him on, and the wind blowing right against his chariot, shakes his fluttering creft. Him thus bearing all before him, and raging with boifterous fury, Phegeus could not endure : He opposed himself to the chariot, and with his righthand twifted about the mouths of the rapt fteeds foaming with the bit. In this firuggle, while he is dragged Liij along, and hangs upon the pole, Turnus's broad lance reaches him where he was undefended, and piercing, burfts his double tiffued coat of mail, and with a flight wound grazes the furface of his body. But he, with fhield oppofed turning on the foe, advanced, and from his unfheathed ponyard fought affiftance; when the wheel and axle, accelerated in its career, hurled him headlong, and firetched him out on the ground : And Turnus, following, with his fword flruck off his head, between the lower extremity 'of the helmet, and the upper border of the corflet, and left him on the fand a beadlefs trunk.

Joogle

Now while in the field victorious Turnus makes fuch havock, in the interim Mnhesteus, and trusty Achates, and Afcanius accompanying, placed in the camp Æneas bleeding in his wound, and on a long fpear propping his alternate steps. He ftorms, and, having broken off the fhaft, flruggles to wrench out the dart, and demands the speedich means; bids them make an. incifion with the broad fword, and quite lay open the weapon's deep receis, and fend him back to the war. And now came to his aid Iapyx, the fon of Iafius, by Phoebus above others beloved; to whom Apollo him. felf, captivated with a violent paffion for him, heretofore had given the option of his arts, of his gifts, hisfill in augury, in the lyre, and winged fafts. He, to prolong his dying father's fate, chofe to understand the powers of herbs, and use of medicine, and inglorious to practife those filent humble arts. Raging violently with impatience, Ænegs flood, leaning on his. maify spear, unmoved amidst the vast confluence, and by the tears of the youths, and grieving Iulus. The fkilful fage, in his robe doubled back, fuccinctly girt after the phyfician's mode, with anxious trepidation. makes many efforts in vain with his healing hand, and the potent herbs of Phoebus; in vain with his righthand tugs the dart, and with tenacious pincers gripes. the fleel. No fuccels attends the means ; his patrongod Apollo lends no aid: And now the fierce terror of the field spreads more and more, and the mischies is nearer. Now they fee the air ftand thick with ١.

duft ; Turnus's cavalry advance even to their trenches ;

and thick showers of darts fall in the midft of the camp. To heaven ascend the difmal shouts of youthe, fome fighting, and fome falling under the cruel firoke of Mars.

Here the parent-goddess Venus, deeply affected with the undeferved fuffering of her fon, from Cretan Ida crops a stalk of dittany with dowpy leaves, and diffusely fpread with purple flowers : To the wild goats those herbs are not unknown; for from them they feek relief. when in their backs the winged fhafts have fluck. This Venus, her face muffled in a black cloud, conveyed ; with this she tinctured of a blackish hue the water in the fhining vale, whereinto the fimples of Iapyxs were infired, fecretly preparing the medicine; and injects the juice of healing Ambrofia, and fragrant Panacea. With this liquor, aged Iapyx, not knowing its communicated virtue, fomented the wound, and fuddenly (for in a trice, all the pain fled from his body, and all the blood in the deep wound was flaunched: And now the arrow, following the hand, without any compullion dropped out, and to his priftine flate his vigour returned anew). Quick fly for the hero's arms : why do you fland ? Iapyx cries aloud, and first kindles their. courage against the foe. Not from human aid, nor any masterly art of man, proceeds this cure, nor, Æneas, is it my right hand that faves thee ; a god more powerful is the agent, and releafes thee for enterprizes of greater moment. He, panting for the combat, had incafed his legs in gold, is impatient of delay, and brandishes his lance. After his shield is fitted to his fide, and the corflet to his back, within his armed folds. he embraces Afcanius, and, through his helmet gently touching his lips, thus adreffes him : From me, my fon, learn valour and true hardinefs, thy fortune take. from others. Now shall my hand by war fet thee in. fafery from the foes, and lead thee into the glorious. fruits of victory. Be fure you this remember, when, e'er long your age shall be grown up to maturity; and, calling often to mind the examples of your anceftors, let your father Æneas, and uncle Hector, incite you fill to virtue.

Soon as he uttered these words, from the gates he iffued forth majeftic, in his hand brandishing a ponderous javelin : At the fame time in a thick body ruft forth Anteus and Mnhesteus; and the whole troops from the abandoned camp pour along. Then with mingled clouds of blinding duft, the plain is overfpread, and the earth, shaken with the trampling of their feet, trembles. Them marching, Turnus faw from an oppolite hill ; the Aufonians faw, and cold tremulous fear ran thrilling through their inmost bones. Before all the Latins Juturna first heard, and recognized the found, and in deep confernation fled. The hero, (Eneas), speeds his way, and along the open plain drives on his dufty fquadron. As when under fomé furious confiellation a flormy cloud moves athwart the mid ocean towards the land; ah ! how the hearts of the defponding fwains from far prefaging the difaster fhudder ! well knowing it will bring ruin on the trees, and defolation on the fields of corn, and lay all wafte around. The winds before it fly, and waft hoarfe murmurs to the fhore. With fuch fory the Trojan chief leads on his fquadron against the adverse foes : In the thick array they croud upon each other, closing their ferried files. Thymbraus with the fword fmites to the ground the ftern Ofiris, Mnheftheus knocks down Archetius, Achates Epulo, and Gyas Ufens. The augur's felf Tolumnius falls, who first had hurled his lance against the adverse foes. To heaven a shout of joy on the Trojan's fide is raifed ; and now the Rutulians routed in their turn fhew their backs involved in duft all over the field. Eneas himfelf deigns neither to put the fugitives to death ; nor those pursues, who engage in close fight, or who at distance throw the javelin : Turnus alone, with accurate furvey, he fearches out amidit the thick clouds of dust, him alone he demands to the combat.

With dread of this the warlike maid Juturna ftruck to the heart, overthrows Metifcus, Turnus's charioteer, between the harnefs, and leaves him far behind, fallen.

from the beam. Herfelf fucceeds, and with her hands guides the waving reins, affuming all, both the voice, and perfon, and arms of Metifcus. As when throughout the fpacious manfions of fome wealthy lord the fable fwallow flutters, and on the wing traverfes the lofty courts, picking up her feanty fare, and food for her loquacious young; and now to the empty cloifters,' now about the liquid pools chatters: In like manner through the midtl of the foes Juturna rides, and, flying in her rapid chariot, circuits all the plain: And now here, now there, exhibits her brother in triumph: nor fuffers him to engage in fingle combat: But far from Æneas devious flies.

But Aneas, with no lefs eagerness, unravels mazy orbs to intercept him, traces out the warrior, and with a loud voice calls after him through the broken diffpated troops. As often as he caft his eyes on the foe, and by his agility attempted the winged courfer's fpeed, fo often Juturna wheeled about the chariot, turning it Alas, what can he do ? In vain he fluctufrom him. ates with a tide of various paffions; and diverfity of cares urge his mind on opposite schemee. At him Messapus, as in his fwift career he chanced in the left hand to wield two javelins pointed with fteel, levels one of them, hurling it with a well-aimed wound. Eneas ftopped short, and shrunk himself up behind his shield, flooping on his knee: Yet the impetuous dart bore away the tufted top of the helmet, and from his head ftruck off the towering creft. Then indeed his rage fwells high, and by the fraudful arts of his foe forced to extremity, when he perceived the fleeds and chariot were driven back in a different career, he makes large protestations to Jove and the altars of the broken league. At length he rushes into the midst of the lines, and, under the auspicious influence of Mars, arrayed in terrors, ushers in a hideous undiftinguished flaughter, and gives loofe reins to all his fury.

What god in fong can now to me unfold fo many difaftrous fcenes, who the various havock aud deaths of the chiefs, whom by turns, now Turnus, now the Trojan hero chaces over all the plain? Was it thy pleafure, great Jove, that nations, which were one day to be joined in everlafting peace, fhould with fuch fierce commotion engage? Æncas, not loung time, full in the fide fmote Sucro to the Rutulian (this combat firft checked the Trojans in their career) and, where lies the way to speediest death, through the ribs and wattled fences of his breaft drives home the cruel blade. Turnus on foot encountering Amycus from his horfe overthrows, and his brother Diores; the one with his long fpear, as he comes up, the other with his fword he imites ; and, having cut off the heads of both, fufpends them on his chariot, and bears them along bedewed with blood. The other here difpatches Talos, Tanais, and ftout Cethegus, all three at one affault, and dejected Onytes, of Theban extraction, the fon of Peridia. Turnus again overthrows the brothers fent from Lycia and Apollo's lands, and Menœtes, an Arcadian youth, in vain to war averle ; whole art and poor abode had been about the freams of fifhy Lerna, a ftraager to the levers of the great, and in farmed land his father fowed. And as two fires let hofe from different quarters upon a withered copfe, and crackling laurel groves ; or when with impetuous downfal from the fleep mountains, two foamy rivers roll along, and roll to the fea, each laying his passage wafte; with no lefs impetuofity Æneas and Turnus both rufh through the embatteled plain : Now, now their rage boils up within : Their invincible breafts are ready to burft with fury : Now with full career they drive into the midst of wounds and flaughter. The one, (Eneas) with a rock and the whirling force of a huge ftone, overthrows headlong, and at his length ftretches on the ground, Murranus, vaunting loud his ancestry and the ancient names of his forefathers, and his whole line, through the Latin kings derived ; him beneath the harnels and yoke, the wheels tumbled along, and with rap on rap the rapid hooves of his fleeds, now regardless of their master, trample upon him. The other, (Turnus), encounters Hylus rushing on, and forming hideous with ire, and against his gilded temples hurls a javelin : Through his helmet transfixing his brain, the fpear flood quivering. Nor thee, thy right hand, O Creteus, braveft of Greeks, could fave from Turnus : Nor did his own gods protect Cupentus from the affault of Eneas. His fword found eafy accels to his heart : Nor aught the reliftance of the brazen shield availed its haples owner. Laurentum's fields, O Eolus, faw thee too fall, and freiched on thy back, cover the earth full wide, Here thou, whom neither the Grecian squadrons overthrow, nor Achilles, the deftroyer of Priam's empire, meeteft thy doom. Here were the boundaries of thy life: Under mount Ida thy flately palace, in Lyrneffus thy flately palace flood, all these you now resign for a grave in Laurentine ground. Thus now both hofts are on each other turned, both Latins and Trojans, all: Mnestheus, and ftern Sereftus, and Meffapus, an horfeman renowned, and gallant Afylas, the Tufcan Phalanx, and Arcadian Evander's horfe; the warriors each to his power their utmost efforts exert. No stop, no stay; with vast emulation they strain their utmost.

Here his lovely parent, Venus, infpired Æneas with the refolution to march to the walls, and forthwith advance his army against the city, and with an unexpected blow confound the Latins. While through the various ranks in quest of Turnus he rolled his eyes hither and thither around, he fees the city exempt from the difastrous war, and in fafety undifturbed. Inftantly the image of a more decifive battle inflames his foul: He calls the chiefs, Mnestheus, Sergestus, and brave Sereftus, and takes a rifing ground, whither the reft of the Trojan army affemble in thick array, nor lay their targets nor their darts afide. He, in the centre, posted on the high eminence, thus bespeaks them : No obstruction be given to my proposal : For Jove himfelf flands by us, and he directs our council : Nor, because the defign is fudden, let me find any the more backward in its execution. The city, the caufe of war, and the empire itfelf of Latinus, unlefs they confent to reseive our yoke, and vanquished, to fubmit, this day will I overturn, and lay their fmoking towers level with the ground. Am I forfooth to wait till Turnus deign to accept our offered challenge, and fo often beat, be again disposed to take the field ? , No, no, my fellow citizens, on this city. let us turn our arms; this is the fource, this the great hinge of the execrable war. Quick, fetch flaming brands, and with fire and fword re-affert the violated league. He faid: And all at once with emulous ardour form the wedged battalion, and to the walls in a condenfed body move. On a fudden the fcaling ladders, and unexpected flames Some fly to the gates, and butcher the first appear. they meet : Others hurl the miffive steel, and darken the ky with Howers of darts. Eneas himfelf among the foremost, beneath the walls, extends his hand, and with a loud voice accufes king Latinus; the gods he calls to witnefs, that he is a fecond time compelled to the fight; that the Latins are now twice become his foes, and this the fecond league they broke. Among the trembling citizens, diffention arifes : Some prefs to difinantle the town, and expand the gates to the · Trojans, and drag the king to the ramparts. Others take up arms, and march on to defend the walls. As when a shepherd hath traced out a fwarm of bees in. clofed in some harbouring cleft, and filled their cells with bitter fuffocating fmoke ; they within alarmed for their little state, in trepidation run hither and thither through the waxen camp, and with loud buzzings whet their rage. Through their cells the black baneful ftench is rolled ; Then with faint murmur the caverns within refound : While to the empty regions of air the fmoke afcends.

This new difaster too befel the diftress d Latins, which with overwhelming woe shook the whole city to the foundation. The queen, soon as the faw the enemy advancing to the town, the walls affaulted, the flames flying up to the roofs; no where the Rutulian bands, no troops of Turnus to be feen; had the misfortune to believe the youth flain in the heat of battle, and, with fudden grief distracted, cries, that the had been the cause, the criminal author, and fource of all their woes; and frantic in her raging anguish, pouring forth many wild exclamations, with her own hands in defpair afunder tears her purple robes, and from a lofty beam ties the fatal noofe of her unfeemly death. Which difafter, foon as it reached the unhappy Latin dames, firft her daughter Lavinia, tearing her golden treffes and rofy cheeks with her hands, then all the refl, run madding about. With fhrieks the palace far and wide refounds. Hence the doleful news is blazed through all the town. Their fouls defpond. Latinus, thunderftruck with the woeful deftiny of his queen, and the ruin of his city, goes about tearing his robe, deforming his hoary locks, fprinkled over with fordid afhes; and much himfelf accufes, for not having before received the Trojan prince Æneas, and cordially admitted him his fon in-law.

. مى

385

Meanwhile the warrior Turnus, in the extremity of the field, purfues a few ftraggling troops, now more languid, and lefs and lefs elated with the cheap victory of his horfe. The wind wafted to him this diflant outcry, mingled with unfeen terrors, the din and unjoyous murmurs of the diffracted city ftruck his liftening Ah me! why with fuch /brieks of woe are our ears. walls diffurbed? What alarming fhouts burft from the various quarters of the town ? He faid, and pulling in the reins, ftands listening in amazement loft. When his fifter, now that the was transformed into the figure of the charioteer Metifcus, and guided the chariot, the horfes and the reins, in these words replies : This way, Turnus, let us purfue the fons of Troy, where our first conquest opens the way. Others there are, who by their prowefs can defend the walls : Æneas affails the Latins, and with them joins battle. Let us too, by exerting our activity, difpense deaths to the Trojans without pity : Nor shall you quit the field inferior to him in the number of the flain, nor in the honour of the fight. To this Turnus : O fifter, think not to impose on me; I knew you long ago, when firft by artifice you broke the truce, and engaged yourfelf in these wars : And now, though a goddels, in vain you wear difguife. But fay, what god commissioned you to quit the fkies in order to fuftain fuch toils? Are you come to be witness of your unhappy cruel brother's Κk death. For what can I do? Or what success now can fortune promile, now that I have loft the deareft of my friends ? Myfelf before my eyes faw Murranus, than whom there furvives not one to me more dear; I faw him fall as he called on me with his expiring breath ; mighty the man, and with a mighty wound fubdued. Ill-fated Ufeus fell, that he might not be a spectator of my disgrace : The Trojans are in possession of his corpfe, and arms. Shall I fuffer our city to be rafed, the only thing that was wanting to compleat our diffres? nor by this righthand refute the calumnies of Drances; shall I turn my back? And shall this earth fee Turnus fly? Is it then fo grievous an ill to die? Oh infernal powers, befriend me, fince the powers above prove fo unkind. To you I shall defeend a spotlefs soul, and, from that imputation clear, at no time degenerate from my great anceltors.

Scarce had he faid, when lo Sages, rapt by his foaming fleed, flies through the midft of the foes, wounded with an arrow athwart the face, and imploring Turnus by name, he rufhes forward : Turnus, on thee our last relief depends ; have pity on thy own. Æneas thunders in arms, and threatens to overthrow the stately towers of Latium, and rafe them to the ground : And now to our roofs the firebrands fly. On thee their eyes, on thee their whole regard the Latins turn : King Latinus himfelf demurs, whom to call his fon in law, or to which alliance to incline. Besides, the queen, most faithful to your interest, is fallen by her own hand, and, abandoned to defpair, is fled from life. Before the gates, Meffepus and brave Atinasalone fustain the fight. Around those, on either fide the battalions stand in thick array, and an iron crop of na--ked fwords shoots a horrid glare : Yet, during thefe public alarms, you are wheeling your chariot along the defert field.

Confounded with the various image of diftrefs, Turnus was Lunned, and in filent gazing flood. Deep in his breaft boils overwhelming fhame, and frantic rage with intermingled grief, and love racked with furious defpair, and confcious worth. Soon as the clouds were dispelled, and light to his mind reftored, towards the walls he rolled his flaming eye-balls in turbulence of foul, and from his car furveyed the spacious city. When, lo, among the planks, a whirling torrent of flames, in rolling waves afcended to heaven, and had feized the tower, the tower which himfelf of . jointed beams had reared, and underneath it wheels applied, and with stately bridges overlaid. Sifter, he cries, now, now deftiny prevails ; forbear to flop me : Let us follow where the god within me, and rigid fortune calls. I am refolved to enter the lifts with Æneas : Whatever bitterpefs is in death, I am refolved to bear it : Nor, fifter, shall you fee me longer in difgrace. Permit me first, I pray, to give this fury vent.

He faid, and inftant from his charjot fprung with a bound upon the plain; through foes, through darts he rushes, and leaves his mourning fifter, and with rapid fpeed burfts through the middle ranks. And as when a rock tumbles precipitantly down from a mountain's top, torn by the winds, whether furious rains have washed it by degrees away, or undermining time by length of years hath loofened; down the precipice abrupt the pertinacious fragment of the mountain with vast impulse is hurried, and bounds over the ground, fweeping away with it woods, and flocks, and men: Just fo through the broken troops Turnus rushes to the walls of the city, where to a vait extent the earth is drenched in effused blood, and the air hiffes with javelins : With his hand he makes a fign, and at the fame time thus with a loud voice begins : Now, Rutulians, forbear, and ye Latins withhold your darts : Whatever fortune of the war temains, is mine : 'l'is more equitable that I alone attone the violated league in your itead, and by the fword decide the ftrife. At this the whole troops retired from between them, and made room for the combat.

But prince Æneas, having heard Turnus's name, forfakes the walls, and forfakes the lofty towers, and flings away all delays: All his begun enterprifes he breaks off, exulting with joy, and thunders dreadful K k ij is arms. As grand and majefic as Athos, grand as Eryx, or grand as the parent-mountain Apenninus himfelf, when with his waving oaks he roars, and glories in his fnowy top, exalting himfelf to the fkies. And now both Rutulians, and Trojans, and the Italians, all eagerly turned their eyes ; both those who on high guarded the battlements, and those who with the ram battered the walls below. Their arms they laid down from their shoulders. Latinus himfelf, with amazement views the mighty heroes born'. in diftant quarters of the globe, encountering each other, and decide their quarrel with the fword. They, foon as the lifts in the fpacious plain were cleared, having with rapid onfet flung their javelins from far, rush on the combat with shields and arms of brass refounding. Earth gives a groan : Then froke on ftroke they redouble. Chance and courage are blended together. And as in Sila's spacious grove, or lofty mount Taburnus, when two bulls with butting fronts rush on the hoftile combat, the shepherds in consternation are fled; the whole drove stands dumb with fear; the heifers faintly low, dubious which shall rule the herd. whom the whole drove are to obey: They with prodigious force deal promifcuous wounds to each other, and ftruggling keen, infix their horns, and with profusion of blood lave their necks and shoulders: The whole grove with their groans rebellows : Just fo impetuous the Trojan prince Æneas and Daunian hero with fhields against each other tilting run : Their arms loud clashing fill the skies. Great Jove on high fuftains two equally poifed fcales, and puts into them the different fates of both ; to frew whom the toilfome combat defines to victory, and in which fcale death finks down. Here Turnus, prefuming he wight with fafety, fprings forth, and on his tiptoes rifes with the force of his whole body to his uplifted (word, and difcharges a blow. The Trojans and tembling Latins flirick aloud, and both armies are fixed in uspense. But the treacherous fword breaks fhort, and in the middle of the flroke leaves the inflamed chief at the mercy of his foe, unless flight succeeds to his relief. Swifter than the east wind he flies, foon as he faw the hilt of an unknown fword, and his right-hand difarmed. 'Tis faid, that in his headlong hafte, when he mounted his yoked fteeds for the first onfet, while he is in hurry and trepidation, he inatched the fword of his charioteer Metifcus, leaving his father's heavenly tempered fleel behind: And long that ferved his purpofe, while the Trojans offered to him their flying backs : But, when it came to Vulcan's arms divine, the mortal blade, like brittle ice, in fhivers flew with the ftroke : Along the yellow fand, its splinters shine. Therefore, Turnus, nonpluffed, by flight traverfes the feveral quarters of the field, and now hither, then thither, wheels in uncertain mazes. For on every hand, the Trojans in close circling bands inclosed him ; and on this fide, a vast morals; on that, steep mountains environ him. Ner leis eagerly Æneas, though by the wounding shaft difabled, his weak knees fometimes check and oppole his fpeed, purfues, and fervent preffes clofe upon the heels of his trembling foe. As a hound, what time he has found a stag inclosed by a river, or hedged around by the terror of the crimfon plumes, purfues him with fpeed and full cry : While he, fcared by the toils and fleep bank, backward and forward flies a thousand ways. But the flaunch Umbrian dog him clofes, with open mouth, is just in act to gripe his prey, and, as if now he griped him, chides with founding jaws, and with delusive bite is mocked. Then shouts arife ; the: banks and lakes around re-echoe, and the whole fky thunders with uproar. At once he, (Turnus) flies, at once chides the Rutulians all, calling on each By name, and importunely craves his trufty well known fword. Æneas, on the other hand, denounces death and prefent dettruction, if any one approaches hirt, and overawes the trembling troops, threatening to raze the city, and, wounded as he was, preffes on his fde. Five rounds of the lifted field they finish in their career, and trace back as many more, this way and that way. For no flight or frivolous prize is fought ; but for the life and blood of Turnus they ftrive. K k iij

Sacred to Fanns. here chanced to fland a wild olive with its bitter leaves, a tree by feamen long revered : Where, faved from the waves, they used to fix their offerings to the Laurentine god, and fuspend their devoted garments; but the Trojans without diffinction, had cut down the facred flock, that they might combat in the field quite clear. Here flood the spear of Æneas: Here fixed, the hurling force of his right-hand had it conveyed, and riveted it in the tough root. The Trojan flooped, and attempted with his hand to wrench out the feel, that with the miffive weapon he might purfue, whom by fpeed he could not overtake. Then Turnus, with fear diftracted, cries : Oh Faunus, pity, I pray; and thou, propitious earth, detain the weapon : If I have always held your honours facred, which, on the contrary, the fons of Troy have by war profaned. He faid, and invoked the aid of the god by vows not vain : For ZEneas, long ftruggling, and after loss of time in effaying the tenacious root, was unable by his utmost efforts to difengage the firm hold of the wood. While he keenly ftrains and preffes, the Daunian goddels, again transformed into the shape of the charioteer Metilcus, runs forward, and reftores to her brother the fword. Venus, indignant that fuch licenfe should to the audacious nymph be given, aproached, and from the deep root tore up the spear. The towering chiefs, in arms and courage renewed, the one relying on his trufty Iword, the other ftern and majeftic with his fpear, ftand opposed to each other, breathlefs in the martial com-Àat.

Meanwhile the fovereign of immenfe Olympus addreffes Juno, as from a cloud she viewed the fight: Confort, when shall this strife be at an end? What arther enterprize remains? You yourself know, and own you are not ignorant, that Æneas is defined to be a denizon of the sky, and by the fates is to be advanced to the stars. What then do you propose? Or with what view are you hovering in the old clouds? Was it feemly for a god elect to be violated by a wound from a mortal? Or that Turnus (for without you what could Juturna?) should have his wrefted fword reftored, and to the vanquished new ftrength acrue ? Now at length defift, and be fwayed by my intreaty : Nor let fuch discontent prey upon you in filence, and often from those fweet lips be your fullen cares to me imparted. Now things are come to a crifis : You have been impowered to harafs the Trojans by fea and land? to kindle exectable war, to intail diffionour on the house of Latinus, and blend forrows. with this fatal match of Encas and his daughter ; Farther to attempt, I forbid you. Thus Jupiter fpoke: Thus, on the other hand, the Saturnian goddefs, with downcaft looks rejoined ; I own, great Jove, it was, because I knew this to be your will, that I, cross to my inclination, from Turnus and the earth withdrew. Nor had you feen me ele now fitting all alone in this airy recess, patient under such spectacles of indignity; But girt with vengeful flames, I had been planted in the very field of battle, drawing the Trojans on to adverse fight. 'Tis true I advifed Juturna to relieve her unhappy brother, and I approved, that for his life the thould make higher attempts; yet not that the thousd throw a dart, or bend a bow : This I fwear by the inexorable fource of the Stygian lake : Which is fet forth the fole object of religious horror to the gods above. And now for my part I yield to fate, and loathing renounce all combats for ever. This one favour, which by no law of fate is withheld, I implore of thee, in behalf of Latium, and for the honour of its princes, thy own blood. That when now by this aufpicious match, fo be it, they shall establish peace, when now they shall unite in laws and leagues; you would not command the natives of Latium to change their ancient name, nor to become Trojans, and be called Teucri, or that they should change their language, or alter their drefs. Let Latium fublift ; let the kings of Alba fublift through ages; let the fons of Rome rife to imperial power by means of the Italian valour : Troy is perifhed, and fuffer it to perish with its name for ever. To her the founder of men and things thus smiling Spoke : Sifter of Jove, and Saturn's other offspring, do you still roll in your breaft fuch tides of paffion? But come now, and at length quell that fury indulged in vain I grant wha: you defire ; by your prayers I am fubdued, and willingly myfelf refign. Their native language and cuftoms the Aufonians fhall retain : And, as it now is, the name fhall be : Only incorporated with them, the Trojans fhall fettle in Latium : The inflitutions and ceremonials of religion I will add, and make them all Latins of one fpeech. Hence a race, mingled with Aufonian blood fhall rife, which by their piety you fhall fee exalted above men, above gods : Nor fhall any nation with equai zeal, celebrate your honour. To thefe intimations, Juno affents, and filled with complacency gave her mind a contrary bias. Meanwhile the quitted the fky, and from the cloud withdrew.

This done, the almighty fire revolves another purpofe with himfelf; and meditates to difmifs Juturna from widing her brother's arms. Two pells there are, the dire lifters called ; whom, with hellish Megæra, joylefs night at one birth brought forth, and bound with equal fpires of ferpents, and added to them wings fwift as the wind. These at the throne of Jove, and in the court of the incenfed fovereign of heaven, wait as minifters of his wrath, and awaken terror in the minds of feeble mortals, what time the king of gods prepares baleful death and difeafes against the earth, or terrifies guilty cities with war. Of thefe Jove fends down one: in hafte from the lofty fky, and bids her before Juturna fland as a portentous fign. She flies, and in a rapid whirlwind to earth is born: Juft as through a cloudy fky, an arrow fhot from the ftring, which, tinged with the quinteffence of malignant poifon a Parthian or Cydonian hath hurled an incurable dart, flies hiffing and unfeen athwart the fleeting fhades. In like manner, the offspring of night fhot away, and hied her to the earth. Soon as the fees the Trojan battalions, and the troops of Turnus, fuddenly thrunk up into the form of the little fowl, which at times fitting by nights on tombs, or defolate towers, late inaufpicious, hoots amidst the shades ; into this shape trans- " formed, the fiend in fight of Turnus flies backward and: forward fcreaming, and flaps on his buckler with her wings. Unufual numbrefs relaxed his limbs with fear; his hair with horror flood on end; and his fpeech clove to his parched jaws. But, foon as his fifter Juturna at diftance knew the ftridour and the fury's wings, in deep diffres she tears her dishevelled treffes, mangling her face with her nails, and her breafts with her fifts : Oh Turnus, what can thy fifter now avail thee? Wretch that I am, what expedient have I now left? By what art can I prolong thy life ? So rueful a monfter can I withstand ! Now, now, I quit the field. Add not terror to my fear, ye inauspicious fowls : The beating of your wings, your deadly fcreams I know: Nor am I a stranger to the stern mandates of imperious Jove. Are these the returns he makes for my virginity? Why gave he me immortal life? Why was I exempt from the law of mortality? Sure now 1 might have put a period to fuch oppreflive woes, and accompanied my wretched brother through the fhades below. I immortal ! Or can I, brother, relish aught of my enjoyments without thee! Oh what earth to me will yawn full deep, and difpatch a goddels to the shades below? This faid, the muffled up her head in a feagreen vail, fetching many a groan; and the goddefs plunged herself into the deep river.

~~~~

On the other hand, Encas urges the attack, majeftic waves his maffy spear, and thus with wrathful foul bespeaks his foe. What means this delay now after all? Or why, O Turnus, do you now decline battle? 'Tis not at running we must try our skill, but in close fight with rigid arms. Turn thee into all shapes, collect whatever affistance you can draw, whether from valour or from artifice : Wifh to reach on wings the lofty flars, or shut up within the hollow earth to lie concealed. He, shaking his head, replies; 'I'is not from thy boifterous words, infulting foe, my fears arife : My fears arife from the gods, from adverse Jove. Nor more he faid; but cafts his eye on a huge ftone, a ftone antique, of huge dimensions, which in the field by chance was lying, fet for a landmark, to diftinguish the controverted bounds of the fields. Scarce would twelve chosen men support it on their shoulders, such bodies of men as earth now-a-days produces. The hero fnatched it up with trembling hand ; then, raifing himfelf aloft, and, rushing on with speed, hurled it against his foe. But, so difordered in his senses, he knows not within himfelf, whether he runs or goes, nor how he lifts up with his hand, nor how he wields the enormous ftone. His knees fink under him: His chill blood with shuddering terror is congealed. Then the flone itfelf rolled through the empty air, neither reached the hero's whole length, nor bore home the intended blow. And as in dreams by night, when languid fleep hath clofed our eyes, we feem in vain to make effort to prolong a race on which we are intent, and in midit of our efforts fink down quite faint; nor power is in the tongue, nor in the body competency of wouted ftrength, nor voice nor words obey the dictates of our will: Just fo from Turnus the curfed fiend withholds fuccefs, by whatever efforts of valour he fought the way. Then various thoughts are rolling in his breaft. Now he turns his eyes on the Rutulians, now on the city of Laurentum, now ftands hovering in dread, with his eyes fixed on the foe, and trembles for the approach of his dart. Nor perceives he whither he can fly, nor how he may make head against his foe, nor sees he any where the chariot, nor his fifter charioteer. In this perplexity Æneas brandishes against him the dart . of fate, having with his eye marked out the deftined wound, and with the whole force of his body hurls it from far. Never did ftones shot from a battering engine roar to loud, nor from the thunder burft fuch mighty peals. Like a black whirlwind flies the javelin winged with dire destruction; it opens a passage through his corflet's border, and the utmoft orb of his feven-fold shield : Then hiffing, passes through his mid thigh : Down to earth the mighty Turnus, wounded finks on his doubled knee.

Up rife the Rutulians together with a general groan, and the whole mountain around rebeliows, and the deep groves far and near return the found. He, humble, and in a fuppliant pofture, ftretching his eyes and imploring hand : I have indeed deferved

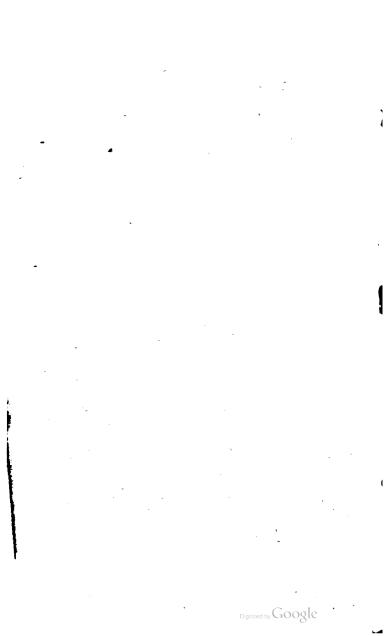

this-fate, he fays; nor do I deprecate thy vengeance; improve thy fortune. Yet if any regard to a wretched father can move thee, (thou too hadft fuch a fire, thy own Anchifes), have compaffion. I pray thee, on the age of Daunus : And me. or, if you rather choole my death, this body, dispoiled of life, unto my friends reftore . You have overcome, and the Autonians have feen thy vingaished foe ftretch forth his fuppliant hands : Thene if Lavinia the royal bride. Perfitt not farther in thy bate. Alneas, fierce as he was, from the heat of action paufing flood, rolling his eyes, and repressed his lifted hand. And ftill more and more his fpeech had begun to move his wavering mind; when on his high fhoulder the inaufpicious belt appeared, and with its well-known boffes the girdle of youthful Pallas fhone : Whom vanquished, and at his mercy, Turnus with an ungenerous wound had flain, and on his shoulders wore the hoftile badge. Soon as the hero fpied the memorials of his cruel grief, and the fpoils of his friend, inflamed with fury, and terribly enraged; And shalt thou from me hence escape clad in the spoils of my friends? Thee Pallas, Pallas with this wound a victim makes, and takes vengeance on thy devoted blood. With thefe words deep in his bofom oppofed to the ftroke, he furious plunged the fword. Then firaight with mortal cold are his limbs relaxed, and with a groan the foul indignant fled down to the Stygian shades.

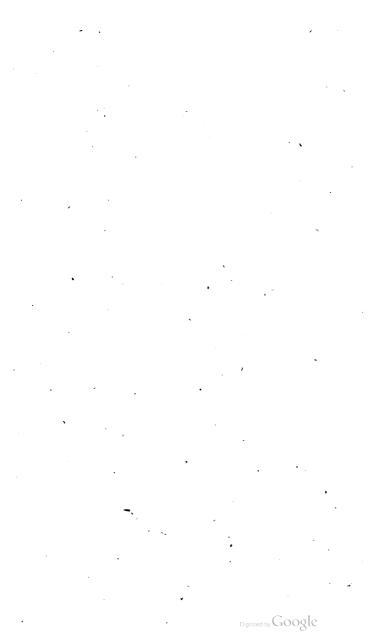

FINIS.

395

Digitized by Google

