PREFACE

TN the month of July 1910, the late Mr E. C. Quiggin of Cambridge, in the course of a tour through the Highlands, spent a week-end at the Manse of Strathfillan. On that occasion he spoke frequently of the Gaelic Ms. of Statius in the Advocates' Library, as being the last great Ms. still unpublished. He urged me to undertake the publication, and to make known my intention forthwith. I acted upon his suggestion, and soon after I proceeded to transcribe the Ms. In the month of July the following year Professor Mackinnon began to print a text and translation of the Ms. in the Celtic Review, No. 26, and continued to issue further instalments till No. 38 was reached, June 1915, the year of his death. Two more instalments were published and then, at No. 40, the Celtic Review was discontinued. By this time the Ms. up to E. 40^a 35, line 3191, had been printed.

In the meantime, feeling that Professor Mackinnon's work on Statius was not likely to hold the field permanently, I continued working at the text as opportunity offered; and soon after the cessation of the Celtic Review a text and translation were completed by me and laid aside, the war rendering futile all hope of immediate publication.

I have now the pleasure of expressing my deep gratitude to the Carnegie Trust who have promised a liberal grant for the production of the book, the generous intention on their part being to secure the Editor against financial loss; and a further result being, as is hoped, to provide the student with a suitable class-book on Middle Irish.

The Editor at the outset had in view an edition of the text and translation concluding with a list of the more difficult words. But having regard to the fact that a dictionary of Middle Irish is not yet offered, and that all the well-known texts containing a complete vocabulary are now long out of print, the Editor has endeavoured to supply the immediate needs of teachers who, like himself, wish to introduce their students to a knowledge of Middle Irish.

I take the opportunity of acknowledging my obligations to Dr Dickson, Keeper of the Advocates' Library, for his great kindness in allowing the MS, to be deposited for my use in the Library of Glasgow University over an extended period.

WHERE AND HOW EG. WAS WRITTEN.

THE note, which appears with its translation on pages xxii and xxiii, was placed by the scribe of the MS., Egerton 1781, British Museum, hereinafter written Eg., immediately after the Finit Amen of the text. It lets in a flood of light upon the circumstances under which the MS. was written. The scribe did not maintain himself, or pay for his food and lodging; but like the old poets on a free circuit—saorchuairt—he passed from house to house an honoured guest of the patrons of learning. No doubt the monasteries were at this period the great publishing houses of MS. literature; but proof is found here that side by side with the ecclesiastical system the old educational methods represented by the filidh still retained a hold upon the population.

THE DATE OF EG. LATER THAN E.

The date of the original translation from the Latin is in the early Middle Irish period. The above-mentioned note to Eg. gives the date of that MS. as 1487 A.D. Another version now in a very fragmentary condition, T.C.D., H. 2, 7, closes at p. 460 with the words: Finit. Anno Domini M.CCC.LXXIX. Obviously the Edinburgh MS. is older than Eg. for the following reasons among others: The dislocation at the end of p. 12 (line 998 of the printed text) is repeated in Eg.; but the words Ticead a dodrania, which were probably at first a penn gles to fill a space in the Edinburgh MS., are now incorporated in the Eg. text. Again acco-son 1385, a peculiar form, is common to both Mss. Further the Eg. MS. omits many unimportant details, as doubtless the scribe intended to economise space. Examples of these omissions may be found in the footnotes of the text, e.g. line 272. On the other hand there are additions in the Eg. MS. added as the story became more familiar, in parts that seemed to lack clearness or interest, e.g. 1041–1051, 1059, 1062–1065, 4801–4810.

In the language, aspiration almost always a sign of approximation to the modern period, while rarely marked in the Edinburgh MS. is present wherever possible in Eg.

The intention of saving space is not only the cause of many contractions and ingenious compendia but the reason for a much more drastic method.

Eg. omits parts of common words without giving any sign of contraction, e.g.: fordelud, fordelugud E. 4512; dorchudh, dorchachad E. 4540; drolmacha, drolmanacha E. 1273; 7 oraidh-sium, o raraid-sium E. 4888.

In not a few instances these devices to save space in Eg. render the true reading of the MS. highly problematical.

DESCRIPTION OF E.

The Edinburgh MS., hereinafter printed E., is catalogued Advocates' Library Gaelic MSS. VIII, Kilbride collection, No. 4.

It is a vellum MS., 9 in. by $12\frac{1}{2}$ in.; or to take the written part only, the MS. is from $6\frac{1}{2}$ to 7 in. broad, and from 10 to $10\frac{1}{2}$ in. long; and it is written in double columns, except folio 8, which, being a half-folio, contains a single column only.

The MS. is in a fairly good state of preservation. The first page is, however, illegible owing to damp and exposure through lack of cover. Some letters at the right-hand lower corner of the verso have been eaten away by mice. The writing is throughout clear and good.

The Errors in E.

Mistakes are not numerous. A few have been corrected by the professional corrector, e.g. 127, 863. These are printed in round brackets (additions by the Editor are printed in square brackets). Other errors remaining uncorrected in the MS. are capable of explanation.

Either the scribe had more than one MS. before him (which is unlikely), or he was copying from a MS. containing marginal notes, some or all of which he adopted into the text. This would sometimes result in a combination or fusion of two readings, e.g.: imarro dobai-sium 4546, would result from imar robai-sium, and imar dobai-sium; cid 'ma cidii 1249, from cid cíi, and cid 'ma cii; cindnim 664, from cinnim, and cindim.

A much larger class of errors suggests almost conclusively that the scribe often wrote to dictation, v. under Nasalisation in Vocab. The phrase, a ri a dei ritsu 1353 (possibly spoken, a ri adeirim ritsu) was felt to be a difficulty by the scribe of Eg., who wrote simply, ar na deibh ritsa. Cíni, for cáini, Eg. 1249, may also be so explained.

Lastly as the scribe himself was not permitted to correct the MS. he had just written, that being the duty of the corrector, one may more than suspect that in some instances of error he hastily covered up his tracks by writing an explanation in the text immediately after the error, e.g.: don ulad sin no so 1220; dealbh an muntuire no an minituir 4826, delbh na minadure Eg.; arna tregdad dosan dosam 4398, Eg. om.; anuauas Eg. 3144.

E. NOT THE ORIGINAL MS. OF THE TRANSLATION.

It is clear from the MS. itself that E. was by no means the original of the Gaelic translation.

1. Previous marginal readings and explanations are in E. taken into the text, e.g.: daig isinn immelbordaib int shrotha sin robid a hait 7 a hadba 185; 7 robad scith lim scur don chathugud sin, mani thairmiscdis i n-urchur 3263; 7 is eiside cetduine risar-cumdaigead múr na Teibi ar tus... 849-852; cf. 2670.

2. The language is in part archaic. Def. art.: in cluichi cainteacha sin 2589; the dual: isinn immelbordaib int shrotha sin 185; the neuter gender: ni hurchar n-imroill tuc 3769. V. Vocab.

These old forms are not numerous, and might owe their place in the text to the archaic tastes of the various scribes. But when the verbs are taken into account, the case for the greater antiquity of the MS. becomes immeasurably stronger. The deponent verbs are numerous, and deeply imbedded in the MS. The deponent is a regular feature of Old Irish but tends rapidly to disappear in the Early and Middle Irish periods.

E. A PROFESSIONAL WORK.

It is explicitly stated in the above-mentioned note to Eg. that the scribe, if not strictly non-professional in status, was dependent on the liberality of patrons for his subsistence. There are, on the other hand, many indications that the scribe of E. was one of the regular scribes of a monastery. Besides those already mentioned, the MS. itself by its ruling and its general finish, its well-formed capital letters and its artistic crosses, claims its origin in the scriptorium as the work of skilled hands there work too which had been long in ecclesiastical keeping.

E. THE WORK OF TWO SCRIBES.

E. was begun by two scribes simultaneously, and a space was assigned for the work of the first scribe. The -ma of domeanma, with which the verso of folio 8 ends, is repeated on the first page of the next folio (line 1351 of printed text). The calculation was wrong to such an extent that one folio, 8, consists of a single column only, and about half a column on the verso is b dn—a blank space. There is a break of four lines at the close of the story of the necklace, line 827; and after uada e, line 833, a further break of two lines. What was the intention for these breaks does not appear, unless the scribe wished to occupy more space. There is no writing on these breaks. But on the blank space it is different. This space was a favourite ground for penn ales pen-trying-the obiter dicta of the scribes ranging from pointless remarks to compositions or quotations suggestive of great poetry. One scribe contents himself with writing penn gles. Another sighs for the drink of barley-whey, the light refection that refreshed the labours of his six-hour day. Another invokes the son of Mary the Virgin, and signs himself Fergus O'Fergail. As his handwriting and that of the first hand are similar, Fergus is probably the first scribe. One well-known poem looks like a charm; and the longest, whether original here or not, is the work of one who was no stranger to the poetic art.

No marginal crosses are placed opposite the work of the first hand.

E. MARGINAL NOTES BY SCRIBES.

P. 5 (on top margin) [the alphabet] Amail.

• (Lower margin) Is bal dobeir Dia for mc ngha is bal dobeir snidhim for mc is gar nad nigar... [illegible].

P. 13 (lower margin):

It is not white silver that sets a wound on thee...

2. Ní heasbaid an bán-sa a ndeiread na duilleoigi acht a easbaid ar na comlanachad.

This blank space at the end of the leaf is no need suve the need of it to be filled up.

3. Ní deiread dom thonus féin mur frith in meag-eornu sin anois.

It is no end to my misery unless that barley-whey is found now.

Inmain bund sin, inmain band, Dotelccad do nim anull. O dogeibeath ghres ngeal ngrinn, Nochar-herad le fer fhinn. O man of gold there, O man of gold, It is not here that thy associates come. This is what the Shade says to us That the age of gold hath not come. In those trees, no sound of a tree Is the sound of its garments beside the ground. As for the sigh thou mayest hear in the wood It was uttered by the mouth of the Holy Spirit. Dear in melody is that, a dear strain That was sent from heaven down here. Since it was accomplishing its white clean work, It could not be rejected by a holy man.

[There is another long line at the foot of p. 16, but the writing is so illegible as to yield no sense.]

P. 19. Penn gles and so pen-trying here.

P. 29 (upper margin):

Uch monuaron, uch monuar, Gidh gearr o Domnach gu Luan, Is girra bis rí na nell Ag denam trein go ma truagh. O my sorrow, O my sorrow, Though soon from Sunday till the morrow, E'en sooner will the cloudy King The strong to abject weakness bring.

[A later and poorer hand and the ink is faded.]

P. 29 (on a strip of binding):

A Dhé 7 a Muire is mór an bhuile phleite sin dobhí ar Liógurgius a[c] caoinead a tsentacharaín miththapaidh ag tabhairt ar Ghrégaibh bheith ag milliud a n-oir 7 a n-indmusa.

O God and O Mary! great is that spiteful madness that was upon Lycurgus as he mourned his hapless infant, compelling the Greeks to destroy their gold and their treasure. P. 31 (upper margin):

Is mor an magadh do Gregaib ar-millset da maithus 7 da maoinaib ar son leiniph big.

A great reproach to the Greeks is all that they destroyed of property and treasures for the sake of a little child.

[A long marginal entry at the foot of p. 31 in a different hand is now almost invisible.]

P. 32 (upper margin):

Is maith an beidm-ceast sin dobhúaíl Alcidámus ar Chapaneobhus mór mac Tairsis gan bhuidheachas do fen.

Good is that cestus blow which Alcidamas gave to great Capaneus with no thanks (i.e. without effort) to himself.

[The hand is good, but there are misspellings.]

P. 36 (upper margin):

Ill-fated was that watch which the Thebans set upon the Greeks seeing they themselves had no awakening out of sleep till they were killed.

P. 48. Comortus and so se fer 'na leit[h] secha so híos.

The rivalry here of the six persons in the half past this below.

GAP IN E.

After folio 22, between pp. 44 and 45, lines 3547–3892 of this edition, there is a gap where two folios have been lost. This gap corresponds to Thebaid 1X. 280–X. 75; Egerton 230^a26–236^a16; T.C.D. H. 2. 7 (now 1298), pp. 457^a–460^b.

PORTION OF TEXT FOR EACH SCRIBE.

The first scribe wrote the text down to folio 5 verso, column 2, line 41 ina aiscid sin (line 795 of printed text). Then hand No. 2 begins. The transition is marked with a single cross similar to those that follow. Hand No. 2 continues to the end of the verso of the single column folio, p. 16 (line 1351 of the printed text). Here hand No. 1 resumes with the syllable -ma at the beginning of folio 9, and continues to the end of folio 22. At this point two folios are lost. After the gap the Ms. is continued in hand No. 2 from is andsin (line 3892 of printed text) to the end. This concluding part contains all the marginal crosses except the single one where hand No. 2 began at line 795.

Thus the marginal crosses are distributed as follows: one on p. 10, one on p. 35, six on p. 36, one on p. 37, and a few from p. 45 to the last page on which there are four.

CAN THE SCRIBES BE LOCATED?

Noteworthy in E. is the inf. in -b- where -g- is regular. The following instances of verbs in -igim, fut. -eoch-, occur with -b-:

do lesbugud 1146, cf. 4760	Eg. do lesugud
creachtnubad 1149	Eg. creachtnugud
'ca ndithubadh 3953	Eg. aca dithugud
rathubad 4072	Eg. rathugud
ag daingniubad 4101	Eg. ac daingniubad
ag dluthabad 4102	Eg. aca ndluthugud
agad grennubadh-sa 4376	Eg. agat grennugud-sa can airiubad 4402	Eg. can airiugud.

This peculiarity is found only in the second hand, pp. 11–16, 45-54.

Again, unpalatalised -b- and -f- are expressed by -u-, e.g. ua hairdri uar gasraid 332. This peculiarity is common in the work of the first hand, rare in that of the second. Both these peculiarities in spelling would occur readily, if written to the dictation of a reader speaking, as is probable, in the dialect of Munster.

GENERAL EDUCATION AT THE TIME OF E.

In an age which witnessed the publication in MS. form of Merugud Uilix maice Leirtis, more than one version of Togail Trói, the Pharsalia, the Eneid, and the history of Alexander as well as the Thebaid, one is curious to get a glimpse of the general state of education among the Gaelic-speaking literary class. Happily the bán—the blank space—offered a field where scribes (and possibly others) might give free expression to their own sentiments as distinguished from the rigid copying of the text. The entries seem to show that the scribe could give a brief and adequate résumé of the situation in good Gaelic. Two poetical compositions are set down, the one indifferently, the other well. These indications of general culture, so far as they go, are as good as one has any reason to expect.

If we compare the language of these entries with the text, the former appears to be much more modern than the latter, and does not greatly differ from the language of Keating. This fact would go to show that if the entries are authentic, the language of E. was already old when the MS. was written.

THE LATIN TEXT OF E.

The Latin Edition of Statius referred to or quoted is that by Alfredus Klotz, in the Teubner Series. The excellent vocabulary of proper names at the end of that edition renders a new list of proper names superfluous. There is abundant reference throughout the edition of Klotz to the various families of MSS. of the original Latin. The translation of the Latin into Gaelic is however very free; and, in the opinion of Professor Phillimore, it is not possible to say with certainty to what family of Latin MSS, that particular MS, belonged from which the translation into Gaelic was made.

And at the same period there were two bishops in the bishopric of Kilmore, to wit, Cormac, son of the bishop Magauran, and Thomas son of Andrew MacBrady, each one of them alleging that he himself is bishop there; and Felim, son of Donough, son of Tiernan is O'Rourke during the period of those bishops, and John son of Turlough son of John is O'Reilly at that time. And in the same year was slain Ua Mael-Shechlain, to wit, Laighnech Ua Mael-Shechlain, by Conn son of Art ua Mael-Shechlain.

And may the blessing of God rest on the soul of him that wrote this book. And there was war between Magauran and O'Reilly, to wit, John O'Reilly, in that same year; and another war between the descendants of Teige O'Rourke, etc.

THE THEBAID

BOOK I

A certain noble, revered, and honourable king, had assumed sway and proprietorship over the pleasant and splendid capital city of Thebes in Greece. His name was Laius; and he had a son, Oedipus; and from that Oedipus sprang the two fair distinguished sons, to wit, Polynices and Eteocles. They are those brothers that killed one another in the great war between the Thebans and the Greeks, as they contended on each side for the sovereignty of Thebes, the capital city.

Now at that time it came into the mind of Statius the wellborn eminent poet of the Franks to describe the origin of the Thebans, how they sprang from Cadmus, son of Agenor, that Agenor who was high-king of Tyre and Sidon, and whose daughter was the well-born maiden named Europa. With her Jove fell deeply in love so that he must needs go in the shape of a bull to fetch her over expanse of sea and ocean. And when he had crossed that sea to Crete, he returned to his own shape, and he held that maiden in great affection, and to that maiden Jove gave the great reward that Europe, one of the three principal divisions of the world, should be named from her.

As for Agenor, however, anger, intense rage, and deep grief took possession of him when he discovered the loss of his wellbeloved daughter Europa. Now the plan Agenor then took was to send his well-beloved son over sea and land to seek his sister throughout the world, and he told him, unless he found his sister, not to come again or be seen by him. Then indeed Cadmus searched the world's fastnesses and the wondrous isles of the vast ocean that girds the globe, and he experienced a deal of toil, trouble, and perils of sea and land throughout the world both by sea and by land, and found not the maiden during all that time, though he suffered much tribulation, and for that the reason was that he might not cross Jupiter the son of Saturn, head of the gods, to make known against him his stolen love.

THE THEBAID

And since he found not his sister, the plan he formed in his mind through his wisdom was this, to go to the temple of Apollo, the god of prophecy, and ask of him information and direction where the maiden was. And this Apollo told him, not to seek her, for he would not find her, but to fare forth to-morrow away on the delicately flowering level far-extended plain, "and a horned everybeautiful cow would meet you on that delicately beautiful plain. Follow her until she lie down, and where she will lie down let a fair-built city be built by you, with great vast walls, with very spacious palaces, and with mild sollers bright with light," so that that city might be the city of the pomp and assembly of the Greeks, and that its name might be Boeotia or Thebes, owing to the power and the oracle of the god Apollo.

Cadmus remained there, and experienced thirst; and a trusty messenger was sent by him for a draught, with a beautiful brazen vessel embossed around with gold and silver, unto a vast darksome cave that was near him, in the midst of an overhanging grove, with a very beautiful earth-cool well in the midst of it. When the messenger had reached the well, and dipped his vessel down into the water, from the back of the cave there came a venomous serpent, with four huge heads upon it, and with three rows of teeth in each several head, and of monstrous shape from tail to head. When it saw the messenger above the well, it at once dealt him a blow with its muzzle, and he was left there lifeless. Afterwards when Cadmus, son of Agenor, deemed his servant tarried long, he sent another of his following unto the cave and unto the water, and the serpent meted out the same treatment to him. Nay, fifty youths of his following fell thus. Then Cadmus, son of Agenor, rose, donned his armour, and prepared his arms with a soldier's heat, a lion's rage, and a serpent's venom, going to the door of the cave to avenge him on the man that had killed his retainers. And when he arrived, he saw the unspeakable huge serpent, and it made a great arched coil of itself from tail to head, like a mast of a very huge ship. When it saw the great man come nigh it, they fought together there a bloody, wounding, gory, blood-dripping fight then, and the serpent fell at last, and its poison came to nought. Thereafter he proceeded to the temple of Apollo, and the gods told him to plough the plain whereon the serpent had been killed, and from the sowing of that tilth with the serpent's teeth men arose under arms upon the hill. He tilled the soil before him, and they fought fiercely, furiously, angrily; and each one of them killed the other save a single quintette only, and Thebes was built by that quintette along with Cadmus, son of Agenor. That quintette was an illustrious unity, to wit Echion, who was engaged in building Thebes along with Cadmus, son of Agenor.

Well! Thebes was thus built by Cadmus, son of Agenor, and he dwelt in it for a long time prosperously and in wealth, till ill-luck found him in the end. For he himself and his wife were turned into serpent-shapes for the space of seven years, until the heart of the gods turned to them in the end, and then they got back into their own bodies, and of that man's seed sprang all the great and pure Theban kings, and of his seed was Oedipus, son of Laius. That Laius was in the sovereignty and occupation of Thebes for a long time, and of him prophets and wizards had foretold that when he should see any one of his children, his life would last no longer; so that on this account it was usually so done that in the case of every man-child that might be born to him, they were all destroyed. Then it chanced upon a time that Oedipus, son of Laius, was born of the witch Jocasta and after his birth he was carried to a very great wood near by, and his mother gave orders that he should not be lost or destroyed but lifted up into a very high and smooth treetrunk in the wood; and Oedipus was left thus, and when he was left alone, he sang his childish little strain.

A certain king's son, however, who was engaged in plunder and rapine, that lad's name by which he was named was Polybus, heard that plaint of the infant bound in the tree. That man came forward towards the infant, and saw the infant in the plight in which it was. He conceived an exceeding great love for it, and carried it away with him to be nursed and reared as a son originally his own. Then Polybus assumed the sovereignty of his own land and country, and he committed the government of his state to the boy who had been brought up by him, to wit, Oedipus, son of Laius. occasion after that untowardly, unexpectedly to fall in with his father Laius; and Laius knew not that it was Oedipus that met him, and no more did Oedipus know that it was his father Laius that was facing him. And each of them was demanding from the other his name, and neither of them would give the other his name. Then they fought a fierce and angry duel, and his father Laius fell by Oedipus through ignorance and want of guidance.

And Oedipus took his father's land, and on assuming sovereignty espoused his mother as a fitting consort, and knew nothing of that fact till the attention of Queen Jocasta fell upon Oedipus the king's naked feet, for thus they were with a hole through each of them. The queen asked: "What has pierced thy feet?" said she then. "Not hard," said he. "Thus was I found in the middle of a wood in a very high tree in the forest, with a nail through each of my feet keeping me in the tree, and I do not know who had placed me there in that fashion. But I was nursed and brought up by Polybus as his own son, and I knew not that it was not so, till I was reproached therefor, and I was told that I was a bastard waif, with no knowledge of my father or my mother. I ascertained of Polybus that he could not tell me how he had found me: and what I did was to go to Apollo, the god of prophecy, and to ascertain from him where I should find my fatherland. Apollo told me to make my name known to no man, and to do battle with the first man that met me there, and I should obtain tidings of my father and my mother thereby. And the first man that chanced to approach me thereafter was Laius, wandering in hunting near the city of Phocis, and he fell by me, as ye have heard." "That is sad in-deed," said Jocasta; "that Laius was in truth thy father, and I am thy mother; and it is I that gave orders that thou shouldest be bound in the tree and not killed, so much did I love thee; and it is I that bore thee these four children, Eteocles and Polynices. Antigone and Ismene being the two daughters." "Hard is that for me," said Oedipus, "that they should be born, and that these misdeeds should be done by me, though it be through ignorance and want of guidance that they happened." Then, moreover, Oedipus with his two hands seized his two eyes at once, and plucked them out of his head, to the end he might never look on anyone owing to the greatness of his shame in consequence of his committing those great sins, that no hosts or multitude might look upon him.

Now regarding the two sons of Oedipus, Eteocles and Polynices, envy and a strong contention arose between them about the sovereignty of Thebes so that neither of them could allow the other an equal share of the city or the tribe after the blinding of their father. They accorded no honour or distinction to their father, but were themselves with pride and ill-nature consuming their patrimony and the estate; and each one of the sons deems it should be himself that will be king there.

Now as to Oedipus after that, he dwelt gloomily and dejectedly in a cave-dwelling of the earth, with no kingdom or empire since his mutilating and destroying of himself. Then he made a great lamentation and an irresistible appeal to the dread gods of hell, and to the fiendish mad goddess, Tisiphone, in especial, and said: "Thou hast so reared and bred me that I have done many diverse ills through thine instigation and incitement. I have slain my decrepit long-lived sire at the city which is named Phocis, and by thine aid I solved the difficult insoluble riddles of the monster which was called Sphinx, and that is the monster that dwelt in the land of the Thebans, and 'tis it that used to ask this of every one that chanced to come nigh it: 'Which is the four-footed, two-footed, and three-footed animal?' And whoever could not give it a solution for the riddle, these were all slain, until I came to it, while I was in search of my father, and the monster asked the same riddles of me and I told it that the answer was man, inasmuch as he is four-footed in his infancy, to wit, as he moves about with his two feet and his two hands at the same time: two-footed, however, in his youth, to wit, and in his manhood, to wit, having only his two feet as he journeys: three-footed, however, in his old age and eld, to wit, having his two feet and his staff as he journeys. I had rede those riddles, we fought a fierce, wary, manly duel, and in consequence thereof the monster fell in the end." Then moreover Oedipus said: "It is by thine aid and help that I have done these deeds, both slain my sire, and wronged my mother; and through thine instigation I have plucked my wide grey liquid-cool eyes out of my head, and thereafter thou hast awakened a fury of bitter rage between these my sons, to wit, Eteocles and Polynices, that they have rent and violently disrupted the kingdom, so that the one of them can have no headship or control of the other; for pride and folly have filled them by reason of the dishonour and contempt they have shown to me because of my living blind and dark in a cave-dwelling of earth."

Now when Tisiphone had heard these words of Oedipus, then the fiendish mad Fury arose with her locks of venomous serpents about her head, puffing, croaking, whistling, fluttering, and sucking the welling fiery stream named Cocytus, because upon the borders of that stream her dwelling-place was. Then she leaped swiftly impatiently madly from the stream like darting fiery levin, or like a swift star lighting up the quivering firmament; and this was the way she came, through the fierce idle and fiendish rabble, and through the weak and sad assemblies of souls that dwelt in the gravelly abodes of hell, so that horror and vast fear seized them as they beheld the fiendish dusky face of that fiery red-lipped scald of war. And thereupon she advanced forth through Taenaros, baleful door of hell. And when she had arrived, thick darkness like night overspread all earth's face, so that terror and intense fear seized the people of the bounds and districts before her; and then she came by the wellknown and excellent road on hilly sloping glens, till she arrived at Thebes. Then a hundred venomous and hostile serpents with crests and stings arose about her head. Her coloured and darkgrey eyes were sucked and swallowed into the depths of her head and crown. Then she arose and shook the venomous serpent that was in her hand at the hosts, so that the sound and crash thereof were heard throughout the four quarters of Greece, to wit, as far as Mount Parnassus in the East, the river Eurotas in the West, fair Mount Oete in the South, and to the fringed borders of Isthmos in the North. And that sound, distinct, well marked and very loud, reached the brave contentious envious Theban stock, and Oedipus' large fair sons, to wit, Eteocles and Polynices, so that a lasting feud and intense mutual jealousy about the sovereignty arose through Tisiphone's instigation between those two sons, like two strong, vicious, envious bulls under a huge intolerable yoke, so that they strained and weakened their bonds and fetters, as they mutually strove and pulled one against another.

Now concerning the Thebans, they could not endure the mutual strife of those two sons about the sovereignty, and the plan they then adopted was that the kingdom should belong to each of the sons every alternate year, and that a decision by lot should be made between them as to which of them should come to the kingdom first; and it was so done. And from a decision by lot the kingdom fell to Eteocles for the space of that year, and for so long Polynices should be on adventures and in exile. Now when that plan had been decided on by the vast Echionian people, mutual jealousy and tedium possessed them at the king they had, and love and lasting affection came to them for the man who was on adventures and exiled from them, to wit, Polynices. It was then, moreover, that a certain rich wealthy well-born man of the great pure Theban race said that it was not right for the strong chosen people to alternate the sovereignty over them between the young restless kings: "For this is a simile of us, we are like a capacious very large ship being beaten by two contrary winds so that it knows not with which wind it should go, for vast is the suffering and the weakness thereof for us, to dwell under the kingly rule and kingly authority of our present king, to wit, Eteocles, and under the dread and menace of the other king, to wit, Polynices."

As to Polynices, however, son of Oedipus, he had been on the move wandering throughout the upland Echionian district.

And as he was proceeding and entering upon adventures and exile from his country and his land, many wondrous imaginations came into the mind of that soldier; for heavy and a great strain he deemed the duration and the discomfort of it to the end of that year till the kingdom should fall to him. He was glad and cheerful at one time when he would bring to his mind and to his thoughts that the kingdom should fall to him : despondent and unsettled was the counsel of that hero, for he did not know in what region or among what race in the world he would establish his companionship during the course of that year outwith his country, for he had no king's sons there, or great princes with whom he might take counsel. Further, no mercenary or warrior had that man then to cheer his way as he moved about for the space of that year. Now when Polynices had resolved to leave his fair and famous fatherland, and to make for an obscure and strange land, this is how he fared forward, through fairmeadowed Greece to the wondrous cities of Inachus, that Greek king, and to the green-tinted farms of Danae, and to the perverse and wicked city of Mycenae; and then he left behind him the heated caves of Bacchus, and the choice greenswarded hills of the Thebans. And after that, moreover, he proceeded onwards past the smooth easily traversed slope of Cithaeron, and past the great ill-famed rocks of Sciron. And at that Sciron lived a daring robber in a certain hollow rock at the road meetings. And this is a custom he practised, upon every man that climbed into that rock he would enjoin to kiss his feet; and when he was not kissing them, he would give him a kick so as to hurl him a long distance away, until Theseus, son of Ægeus, son of Neptune approached him, and was engaged in washing his feet. Then Theseus gave him a mighty pull towards himself, and again hurled him from him into the great vast sea.

Now concerning Polynices, he fared forward over the fair farms of Scyllaeum, and past the white-walled cities of the lofty level island of Corinthus. Then, however, came an end to the day and a beginning to the night, and up rose the conspicuous bright stars of the pitch-dark bitter night about a chill icy moon. And moreover the fowls, birds, and cattle browsing the earth were in sleep and lasting slumber till it was midnight. Then the clear stars of the moving firmament were hidden by clouds black with many waters, and the huge tempestuous caves of Aeolus, high-king of the winds, were then opened so that a rough wintry storm raised aloft its pursuit and threatening by the battling together of the rough pure furious winds crashing over one another's necks through the four quarters of the world, for it was like as if they would loosen and move the foundation walls of the firmament out of their courses and orbits. Then rose the South wind named Auster with an awful tempest, and it drove and packed a thick darkness over all earth's face, and threads of bright fire-bolts keenly quivered through the intolerable vast inestimable flood which poured down at that time, so that the very depths of the beautiful Nemean woods ran red, and the heights and places of Arcadia in the dry thirsty territories of Taenaros became huge cold brimming lakes, and floods of water filled the streams and rivulets, so that the woods and forests were broken by them, and the rough-headed hard heavy earth-fast rocks fell by them. Nay, the woods and groves of greenswarded Greece were broken. The gnarled greenbranched forests were rent and torn, so that their sites behind them were smooth very bright plains. Polynices was surprised and much amazed that the huge-capped craggy hills were breaking and crashing before the rushing flooded waters that kept coming in a sea and in tumultuous billows from those grand and very lofty hills. He wondered and was in great fear besides because the homesteads, the houses, and the wasteful voracious cattle were injured and destroyed through that stormy vast disturbance. Then Polynices fared forward swiftly furiously with no path and with no full light or full knowledge of the way. Notwithstanding, he preferred the blackness and darkness of that night, because he was afraid and in terror of the pursuit and the gathering his brother Eteocles might have awaiting him, and also he thought great shame that no friends or companions cheered his journey by fighting and smiting for one another at his side. Now this was the likeness of that Theban champion of the brave seed of Cadmus, son of Agenor. He was on the paths of that way as a steersman is, with his heavy-laded huge ship on the expanse of the rough cold wintry sea, seeing no point, no star whereby to steer a course, but the roar and tumult of the vast main full of ships, confusing and wrecking him, so that he knew not what haven or port of refuge he should make. And then Polynices fared forward, and with such strength and vigour did he journey by night that he shook and removed the thick lofty oaks while he drew his great soldier's shield through the forests with their secret shelters, and he broke the woods and the groves with his breast and his bosom by the roughness of his advance and the urgence of that hour until he saw a conspicuous bright light. And that light was situated in the royal lofty tower in the city named Larissa, in little Greece; and the light which he looked upon there was a flaming precious stone, equally bright day and night, which was adorning that lofty royal house.

Then he fared forward in his course of swift running towards the city of Larissa, having the left hand towards the noble temples of Juno which stood in the lofty pleasant city of Proshymna, and the right hand towards the broad marshes of Lerna; and then he fared forward away through the very lofty and pleasant open gates of that city, and he saw round about him the wide well-defined foundations of that city. And he laid his well-proportioned body at full length weakly and inertly along the floor and the bare ground after the anxiety of that night, against the doorpost of that house and against the doorpost of that royal palace, in a hard narrow bed, and he slept there.

Then, however, the noble venerated high-king, Adrastus, chanced to be in the broad pure most beautiful city of Larissa. And it was that long-lived contemporary Adrastus that was high-king over the purely great youth of the Greeks. For on this account that rich well-born king was thus: His father's and mother's original stock was Jupiter, Saturn's happy rich wellborn son. And there existed no care in that king's condition, save that he had not many children, but only two daughters, and these bright pure chaste daughters were worthy of upright chosen youths, and out of affection for these maidens he offered huge swollen sacrifices to Apollo, that he might declare to him the men whom these maidens would wed. And Apollo told him by making to him a true prophecy, that a huge rough wild pig, and a ravening raging lion, would be his sons-in-law. And Adrastus did not understand that prophecy, and no more did his poets or his learned men.

At that time and hour, however, came heavy strongly advancing Tydeus, son of Oeneus, to wit, a fine battle-victorious prince of Calydon, and this is why he had moved out from his country and his land unto this same fine strongly fortified city. Once upon a time he had gone to hunt and slaughter deer with his own brother german, a dear and well-beloved son of Oeneus, to wit, Meleager. And they had the fortune to kill a huge wild boar that was overrunning the country and the land. The first to wound it was Tydeus, son of Oeneus, and to him foll the saughter of it and the vaunt of it before Meleager. But he gave the hide of that wild boar to his sweetheart, a lady warrior that was in that hunt, to wit, Atalanta; and moreover Tydeus saw that. He asked his brother Meleager: "Why hast thou given to thy sweetheart the hide of the wild boar whose first wound I vaunted?" "It is I that killed and destroyed him, and therefore I gave it her." After that, then, Tydeus rose up to contend for the hide against the maiden, and he waged a dexterous contest with Atalanta, and there the maiden was vanquished, and Tydeus brought the hide with him. But when Meleager heard of that deed, he was seized with anger and great agitation, and he set out to avenge it upon Tydeus, and Meleager fell by his brother Tydeus in that way, so that for that he was exiled and banished. And he chanced on the same rough wintry night to approach the city of Larissa, and Tydeus was sad at the suffering of that night; for his garments were chill icy pieces around him, and heavy drenching showers of wet dripped from his hair and his clothing. And he fared forward on toward the place in which Polynices was, and he essayed to rest in that place. Thereupon Polynices perceived that, and said: "Who causes me this violence and disturbance at this time?" Then said Tydeus: "Arise," said he, "and leave to me the place and abode in which thou art, that I may sleep and enjoy long slumber there."

Now jealous contentious fury, and very great and manifest anger seized those soldiers, so that they did not show the kindness or the companionship of the place, or of their identical position that night, and they were brief in conversation and mutual address at that time. Then heat and wrath, vigour and anger, swelling and fury against one another seized those heroes, so that those brave warriors doffed their garments at the same time and place for that contest.

Now Polynices was taller and statelier, more kingly and valiant, comelier and shapelier than any man, and that champion was thirty years of age at that time. Tydeus, again, son of Oeneus, the brave champion of Calydon, was a man small in stature, strong, lively, wrathful, ireful, beautiful, ungentle, angry, rashly clamorous, high-spirited. Then Polynices, the strong tower of the Thebans, seized in one hand a broad grey very large spear with a stout goodly shaft wherewith to thrust at, and to put to flight his enemies; and in the other a broad, very long, very huge sword for slaughtering and smiting. Tydeus, again, son of Oeneus, took his weapons of war, battle and conflict then; and although that youth was of lesser age and height, he was stronger and of better constitution than any man.

Moreover strong, ever brave, and fierce were the heavy strong smiting assaults that each of them continued to deliver upon the other, so that resembling a red-rushing blazing fire were the flamings of the arms and the many edges while causing the crimson blood to shower from the bodies and heads of those mighty soldiers, and shrewd was the smiting they continued dealing on their heads and on their bosoms with their strong knees bent on each other's chests and breasts, so that foul and slippery were those streets with the dropping and the dripping of the blood from the wounds of those heroes, and they stretched out their flaming combatant hands to wound and cruelly to mangle the bodies of each other.

But there is one thing besides. Dangerous and hazardous had that conflict been to that cunning Theban man, Polynices, had not the noble king Adrastus heard that heavy strange shout of those heroes contending in combat, the plaining and panting of those champions as they encountered. When, however, the prosperous aged king, Adrastus, heard that, blazing brilliant flaming lamps were lit, and conspicuous gleaming torches, and he advanced from the pure bright summer palace in which he dwelt, and he beheld the dreadful rough unknown men, their faces mangled and very red with drops of crimson blood upon them. Then Adrastus told them not to commit folly, and he asked : "What madness are ye bent on, ye fair foreign youths ? and what vast mystery forces you to do combat and conflict in the night? And what is it?" said he. "Is it because of the day's shortness, think ye, that ye must struggle and fight at this time? And tell us now whence ye have come, and who ye yourselves are, and what space ye come, and what is the cause of your strife; and I know," said he, " ye are gentle well-born men." Then they answered him at the same time and place : "By the gods whom we worship," said they, "what ails thee at us?" And then Tydeus spoke: "I have come, then, from the bounds of Calydon, and the night has brought me thus far, and I wished to find here a place and position to escape the storm, and I know not who this man is," said he, "who did not allow to me the place in which I tried to stay, for he himself had come there first, and thou wilt find," said he, "whether I was brave and well-born through my deeds of valour and prowess; and also," said he, "Oeneus, the king of Calydon, is my father." And thereafter Polynices, the son of Oedipus, spoke: "Enough in my own estimation is my good birth," said he,

"and the greatness of my spirit." And what caused him not to mention or declare his father's name was owing to the greatness of his incest and his pollution, for he was ashamed to mention that incest.

Then spoke the gentle long-lived king, Adrastus : " Leave off your anger and your agitation, and come with me to my house." said he, "that your fellowship, your covenant, and your friendship may be linked together; and it is likely your fellowship will be all the better that ye have made strife, for these twelve men were the best in intimate friendship and fellowship in the world: Achilles and Patroclus, Orestes and Pylades, Nisus and Euryalus, Castor and Pollux, Theseus and Pirithous, Polynices and Tydeus." Then, after their breaking off from their fight and combat, they came along with Adrastus to the royal very lofty house; and Adrastus was looking at those men after that, and he saw round Polynices a lion's skin bright-piled, tawnymaned, large-portioned, ill-omened, accursed. As for Tydeus, son of Oeneus, however, thus was he, with his huge wild-boar's hide around him, and its hard curved tusks attached to that hide. And when Adrastus saw that, he understood the truth of the prophecy which Apollo had made to him, that a huge wild pig and a fierce ravening very huge lion would be sons-in-law to him; and because of the hides that were about them, Adrastus rendered his thanksgiving to the gods that those heroes would be sons-in-law to him. Then he took the right hands of those twain, and brought them with him into the most secret and hidden house in the royal castle. And thus was that house, at the end of a sacrifice which had been made by him there, and he said to his household: "Let flaming very great fires be lighted by you, and let truly intoxicating feasts of wine be renewed by you." Then arose clatter and tumult owing to the multitude and the activity of the king's household in serving and attending at that feast, and some of them arose to make up beds of fringed bright-purple sheets, and of beautiful golden couches, and of fine pillows in beds of down; others to serve and light the bright lamps with beautiful golden supporting chains therefrom ; others of them bestirring themselves and luchtaireacht¹ a feola na fleidi sin; \neg dream aile dib ac sæthar ^{Theb.} \neg ac suidigud² na mbairgen comshuaiti cruithnechta ar miasaib coimdenmacha cruindi. hurrying forward the flesh for that feast; and others of them labouring and setting the well-kneaded wheaten loaves upon finely fashioned round dishes. A great joy and pleasure to Adrastus were his household's ardour and elation, their heat and haste as they prepared that beautiful-sided house.

Then that haughty brilliant king sat on his finely fashioned throne of beautiful elephants' tusks. Moreover, on the other side of that house sat Polynices and Tydeus after handwashing and restoration. Those twain were gazing and ever gazing at one another. Then Adrastus, that prosperous aged king, said that Aceste, the nurse and female guardian of his daughters, should be brought to him; and Adrastus told Aceste to go for those maidens, and those lovely maidens perfectly alike came into that house, and as red as evebrights were the faces and countenances of those maidens, and at another time as white as the linen of a smock after a full cleansing at the greatness of the shame which seized them, as they glanced at and beheld the handsome strange men. And then they came towards their father, and sat down in his presence. When they had appeased and checked their sharpness and their hunger, and their wellrounded shapely dishes were put from them, the comely master of the revel put the ornamented goblet, fashioned of gold and silver with a great variety of forms and monsters of the earth thereon, into the hands of the noble king Adrastus, son of Iasius, son of Danaus, son of Phoroneus. Then Adrastus said : "Youths," said he, "do ye know what is the reason why we offer these sacrifices every year?" "We do not know," said they. "This was a custom with Greeks," said he, "when slaughter or suffering was inflicted upon them, to offer sacrifices against it; and give ye your attention to it, and I shall relate to you the reasons for these sacrifices, to wit: A well-known serpent, seven-coiled, horrible, rough-faced, hairy, winged, nimble,

And when Apollo heard that, he came to fight with the serpent, for that lovely consecrated place was his own; and that serpent fell by Apollo in that way because of very great innumerable wounds when he compassed and surrounded that serpent for a hundred days on the sloping plains of Cirrha.

And after that Apollo came onward to rich well-known excellent houses, unto the high-king of the Greeks, to wit, Crotopus, and thus was that king: he had a fine match of a bright pure chaste daughter, and that daughter loved Apollo exceedingly, and through her Apollo went in secret to the bank of the glancing pure stream of Nemea, and that maiden was pregnant for nine months, the period that every woman is, and she brought forth a pretty delicately beautiful darling boy in the secret shelters of the bending branching forest. And she gave him to nurse to a certain shepherd in the mountain that was nearest her, for she feared her father would heap his reproach upon her. And that boy was brought up in beds of grass and of a sacred grove, and under remote luxuriant clumps of oak. And the cause of sleep for that child was this, to wit, sweetly melodious hollow whistles playing to him. Once when he was thus asleep behind his fosterer, an open-jawed raging pack of wolves came to him, and devoured him. When the mother of that boy, to wit, the daughter of Crotopus, heard it, she filled the very wide royal halls with weeping and loud lamentation, and she told that to her father, and the father's heart went not out to her, and she was killed by him. Now Apollo took it ill that his wife should be killed, and he sent a very large fiendish mad monster to devastate the land and the earth in order to avenge his wife. The monster was thus, to wit, a woman's shape was upon it from the breasts upwards, with dusky dark-green serpents parting her tresses (?) about her head. And the thing she does is to come into houses to take youths and little people from their mothers' and nurses' bosoms, and to eat them.

Then, however, there was a young, youthful, lively, reckless, high-spirited Greek boy, to wit, Coroebus; and he could not endure the suffering and the injury which she imposed upon the people of the country and the earth; and he came forward to the crossing of two roads to meet that serpent. And thus it was with a boy in each of its two hands, and its hooked hard and sharp claws dragging their bowels, their entrails, and their hearts out of the cavity of their breasts. And Coroebus made a strong line of battle with his followers round it, and he thrust the lethal full great sword that was in his hand into the cavity of its chest and its heart, so that it fell lifeless, and that was heard by the Greeks. And great intolerable joy possessed them, and they all gathered unto it, and what they did was to thrust very sharp iron spits through its breasts and its entrails; and there was so great a pestilence from the monster that fowls. birds, dogs or packs of wolves descended not upon its entrails.

And Apollo's anger was greater about that deed than about anything else that had been done to him. Then indeed Apollo brought many dire pestilences upon all the Greeks in common, and upon the city of Larissa in especial. And after that a Greek king, to wit, Crotopus, asked of Apollo what would ward off from them those clouds of fire and those pestilences which were destroying them through Apollo's anger. And Apollo said: 'Let the soldier that killed the serpent,' said he, 'offer sacrifices to me.' Then said Coroebus to Apollo: 'I shall offer sacrifices to thee,' said he, 'of my own free will, provided thou inflict and work on me the vengeance thou wilt inflict, and let the Greeks alone.' And when Coroebus had offered sacrifices, he himself was saved, and the Greeks also. Every year," said Adrastus, "we offer these sacrifices in honour of Apollo." And when Adrastus had concluded relating that tale, he enquired of Tydeus and Polynices "Who are ye, O men?" said he. "And one of the two of you has told me that he is Tydeus, the son of Oeneus, son of the king of Calydon. Let the other one tell me who he is, since it is a fitting time for conversation." And that prudent Theban, Polynices, bowed his head, and looked aside at Tydeus, and said: "I am ashamed, indeed," said he. "to declare my original kin amid the lovely holy consecrated places; and yet," said he, "I am of the brave race of Cadmus, son of Agenor; and my own proper distinguished warlike stormy state is Thebes, and my mother is Jocasta." And what made him not mention his father's name was on account of the greatness of the shame he felt at that sin. Then, however, Adrastus said: "Wherefore shouldest thou hide that from us?" said he. "since no one exists throughout the four quarters of the globe but has heard of the sin and the valour of the envious Theban race. And, indeed, we have no territory or tribe without sin. but do thou do right thyself," said he, "and do not imitate the evils of the race of which thou art." And after that conversation with Polynices. Adrastus said : "Let the fires be extinguished, for it is the end of the night and the beginning of the day, and let praises be offered by us in honour of Apollo," said he.

That is the time, hour and period that Jove, Saturn's happy rich son, held meeting and counsel with the vast concourses of gods as to what vengeance he should inflict on the Thebans and on the Greeks for the evils they had done. And indeed ill did Juno brook that counsel to take vengeance on the Greeks. and she was hindering it. This is the counsel that Jove then took, to send his dear and much-loved son. Mercury, the messenger of the infernal gods, to hell to raise and to awake Laius, father of Oedipus, to make and enflame strife and anger, mutual jealousy and contention between his grandsons, Eteocles and Polynices. And when that counsel was fixed upon by Jove, son of Saturn, and by all the gods, Mercury, son of Maia, daughter of Atlas, arose and put round him his bare volatile full-beautiful bird-gear in order to hover and to fly above the earth. And he put his ornamented much-variegated helm upon his head, and took in his hand his beautiful-headed wand of power, caduceus was the name of that wand. And such was that wand that one end of it would wake the world's dead, the other would kill the world's men. And Mercury went forward after that unto assemblies of hell's depths, a place wherein dwelt Laius, in an unsettled joyless place upon the brink of the river Styx, and Laius went with Mercury after the wand had been laid upon him, and they came forward through the chill very hideous, very deep, shades of hell, and through the black dark huge intolerable clouds, and through deaf foul mists of confusion that were there, until they arrived at Taenaros, hell's woeful dreadful door, and when the fierce horrible open-jawed furious bravely fighting strong-headed dog, Cerberus, dog of Orcus, perceived those men approaching him, he opened the muzzle of the quivering hollow jaws which he had in order to rend and to gnaw and swallow those men, for he was the devilish merciless doorkeeper of hell. And Mercury lifted up his hand, and laid a stroke of the lethal end of the wand that was in his hand upon that dog, so that he remained in a sound and lasting slumber. And after that they, to wit, Mercury and Laius, passed out beyond hell's door.

BOOK II

And, moreover, Mercury came forward into the well-known bright paths along the stormy troubled upper air to Jove's smooth, very beautiful, very windy places. Laius, however, came forward through the very smooth easily traversed roads of mount Cirrha, and through Phocis, the visible fair-founded city—a place in which he himself had been killed and had perished—and he arrived at Thebes. He feared and dreaded to enter the city owing to its valour and sinfulness. And thus were the chiefs of the city at that time, drunk and enfeebled after they had offered sacrifices to Bacchus, the god of wine. Then he assumed, the fearful, horrified, woeful old man Laius himself assumed the form and shape of a certain Theban prophet and seer, Tiresias his name. And Laius assumed that form for the reason that he might be the more believed, for visions, marvels, or dreams were not believed there, unless there were noble persons spreading it about. And after that Laius raised the poet's wand that was in his hand and placed it on Eteocles' breast as he lay asleep, and said to him: "Thou oughtest indeed," said he, "to feel hardship and dejection rather than joy and gladness, and sorrow and lamentation than to lie in sleep and in slumber, for thy brother is gathering and mustering against thee. And again there is force and swelling, pride and haughtiness because the friendship and affinity of the noble king Adrastus have been obtained by him. And he has established fellowship and friendship with the brave man of Calydon, Tydeus, son of Oeneus, to oppose thee in order to fight with and banish thee out of thy sovereignty. And Jove, the chief of the gods, has sent me to tell thee of that, and let Thebes be thine own, and do not allow him to have heritage or landed property therein." And after that came day with its full light, and Laius in his own form laid himself down on the bed and splendid couch of his grandson Eteocles. He disclosed and recounted the wounds and the hurts which Oedipus had inflicted on him. And he shed from these wounds a river pool of clear crimson blood on Eteocles' breast and face. And then from his place and from his bed Eteocles arose terror-stricken, combative, and full of fear, and he was seeking his brother in order to quarrel and to fight with him, like a venomous hostile tiger, roused from sleep and long slumber by the clamour and the jollity of the hunters ranking round him.

Now it was the very end of the night and the beginning of the day at those vast sacrifices of Adrastus. And then came Adrastus, Polynices, and Tydeus to their beds and to their couches, and sleep and slumber fell upon them after the storm of that night. But the noble high-king, Adrastus, did not sleep; but many varied cares were upon that man's mind. On the morrow they came into that very bright palace, and each of them placed his hand in the hand of his fellow. He pledged his fellowship and friendship to his fellow; and Adrastus brought a ndenad-son them with him into a house apart, to wit, Tydeus and Polynices, into a retired secret place in which he might hold conference and counsel. And he said to them : "Ye handsome wise youths," said he, "the gods have guided you to me, and ye have experienced evil and pain in coming. Ye have heard, and all Greeks have heard, that I have two lovely beautiful daughters, Argia and Deipyle, and I am sad at the concourse for the wooing of these maidens, for there is no spirited well-born man or distinguished man of goodly estate but has sent a message to ask those maidens of me. For they have sent from Pheraeus, Oebalian towns, Achaea, Sparta, Pisa, and Elis to court those maidens. I have refused all those. I pledge," said he, "the troth of those twain with you through the counsel of the gods; for worthy do I deem," said he, "your birthright and your good descent for sons-in-law of mine." And when Tydeus and Polynices heard that, each of them remained a space long looking at his fellow as to which of them should first give heed, answer, or attention to that man. Now the ready unflinching man, bold distinguished Tydeus spoke and said : "Great indeed," said he, "is the humility and the lowliness, the clemency and the counsel on thy part, that thou shouldest have a feeling like that for us. For of the strenuous chosen kings of the earth no king that might have been so great in the righteousness of his kingdom has equalled thee, noble Adrastus. Yea, we are ready and eager in everything that is thy will, Adrastus," said Tydeus. And after that Polynices spoke a few profitable words, and said: "Who could refuse the affinity and friendship of a man like thee? And though we are in exile and banishment, we deem that no matter of haste and no sadness, but as it were a joy and encouragement, for we get pleasantness and honour from thee and we deem it a vast satisfaction to be sharing thy rich and prosperous kingdom along with thyself." After that conversation, moreover, they arose at the same time and hour out of that place, and they put their own right hands into the hand of the noble high-king Adrastus; and Adrastus promised them that he would maintain for them their own diminishing inherited estates, and that is a thing wherein he performed more than he had promised.

Now that was told to the people of the fine fortified city of Larissa, and the fame was heard of that fine foreign alliance existing with the king, and the betrothal of the very wise maidens of many charms: splendid Argia to the first one, Polynices son of Oedipus. And wonderful was the form of the maiden, and she was the first-born of the royal children of Adrastus. And it was told of the plump fair-hued goodly shaped virgin Deipyle, that she was joined to a spouse suitable for her, Tydeus son of Oeneus. And that tale was heard through the far foreign confines, and it was heard too as far as the broad moors of Lycaeus and throughout the wide excellent Parthenian wooded ridges and amid vast Isthmian assemblies, and from Thrace in the North to Thessaly in the South, and from the vast wave-bright river of Nemea in the East to the brink of the Adriatic sea towards the West, and to the beautiful lofty abodes of Ephyre, and to choice dwellings of Thebans, so that it disturbed and filled with foreboding the bold restless king Eteocles, to hear that tale.

Now when day came with its full light, wedding feasts of true wine were ordered and prepared. The royal very wide halls were filled and adorned with pleasant and joyous assemblies of Greek youth. It was a broadening of mind and a glorifying of nature for the hard patrimonial famous kingfolk, to wit, the close attention of looking and gazing at the engraved royal pictures of their fathers and their grandfathers that were upon the well-known sides of that fine well-built house. And these were some of the kings whose pictures were engraved there, to wit, noble Inachus up to whom are brought the genealogical trees of all the Greeks, and old venerable Iasius, and peaceful believing Phoroneus, and the battle-victorious conqueror Abas. and wrathful full-spirited Acrisius, and heroic slaughtering Coroebus, and treacherous truly shameful Danaus, and also there were many other beautifully coloured well-executed pictures in that house.

Now the walls of the firmament were resonant with the clamour and great intoxication of the soldiers drinking in that house. And it were much to relate the gentle winning conversations of the bright-cheeked Greek maidens as they drank and enjoyed in that house. And every blooming purple-clad woman was sipping and talking of espousing to Adrastus' beautiful daughters there, that they might have the less fear and dread of the handsome strange men.

And then came forward the fresh and bright, modest, pure-white, crimson-cheeked maidens, Argia and Deipyle. And great showers of tears kept dripping over the faces of the maidens owing to the greatness of their modesty at that hour. It was an exceeding great terror, misgiving, anxiety and fear with them to lose their virginity and their maidenhood to these men. For there were not on earth's surface at that time two maidens that were more worthy than those. For thus were they with beautiful heads, alike, grey-eyed, distinguished, crimson-cheeked, bright-fingered, crimson-lipped, womanly, with white teeth, stainless, whitehanded, high bred, with fine thighs, shapely calves, slender feet, and finely rounded heels. Nay, though a modest and very wise man were long contemplating those maidens, he would not know what choice he should make between them owing to their beauty and their similarity.

It was then, however, that plains, houses and woods were very narrow for the powerful Greek youths as they sacrificed and did honour to the wedding of those daughters of Adrastus. And when they were thus, they heard a disturbance and a crash in the woods and in the groves about them, and it was a sign of gloom and sorrow to those weddings of theirs afterwards. After that, however, the women of the country and the land came into Minerva's joyous and pure temple, for this was their custom at that time, that the young maidens who were to be united to husbands, should cut off some of their locks in that temple of Minerva as a sign of chastity. And when they had come into that temple, the weapons of spoil and dress of Euhippus, the king of Arcadia, who had fallen by Adrastus some time before that, fell; and arms and many-edged sharp weapons besides, that were in that temple, fell; and very loud intolerable trumpetblasts hurtled at them from every quarter concentrating on them. Those were diabolic portents and an omen of veritable evil; and they turned forth unto the king when they heard those baleful weapons, and they did not tell that to the king, but they themselves were holding a trembling conversation among themselves. And there were other baleful signs there, for thus was maiden Argia, spouse of Polynices, son of Oedipus, with a beautiful golden ornament about her neck, to wit, Harmonia's beautiful wonderful necklace. Wild and very shapely was that find, fateful and baleful was that gift to every one who had it. For it was baleful Vulcan, Hell's woeful smith, who invented that work, and Vulcan made that golden ornament for Harmonia, to wit, the daughter of Jove's son Mars, the war god, and of Venus, the goddess of love; and therefore did he give that to her in order to cause her ills. For Venus, mighty lady, was Vulcan's lovely spouse; and in Vulcan's despite, Mars got that daughter Harmonia by Venus. So that for that reason, Vulcan made that everlasting gem bringing happy love by looking at the outside of it, of serpents' venoms, toads' poison, filth of slime of fire or of lightning, dark-grey dusky manes of dragons, and flaming blazing stones in the midst. So that it was a blush to gloom, it was boiling of rage, it was a challenging of disease to every one that had it. And the first person on whom it plied its baleful qualities was Harmonia, comely spouse of Cadmus, son of Agenor, by whom Thebes was first built of yore. For that woman was turned into an ugly complaining serpent along with Cadmus, son of Agenor, so that they were together everlastingly hissing in the fine wasted plains. And thereafter that necklace reached Semele, daughter of Cadmus, son of Agenor; and to her Jove made warmest love. And no sooner had that necklace reached her than Juno, daughter of Saturn, to wit, Jove's wife, came to the maiden in the guise of her nurse, and this is what she said to Semele : "Ask thou," said she, "communion and a visit to thee in the form in which he visits Juno." And Semele asked of Jove to visit her thus, and Jove visited her in the guise of broadcast fiery lightning, as he usually did to Juno, so that Semele was at once burnt, for she could not endure the blaze of the divinity that touched her. And it was because of that necklace that a toad wounded that maiden, as those lying heathen fables testify. And it is told that Jocasta, mother of Polynices, had that invidious sinful ornament; and it was by that means that her own son, to wit, Oedipus, had her to wife, and that she bore him two sons, to wit, Eteocles and Polynices. And thereafter Polynices gave it to his own spouse, Argia, Adrastus' beautiful daughter. Mean and contemptible in the eyes of her sister Deipyle, were her own substantial bridal ornaments, as she gazed at that huge golden necklace. And moreover when Eriphyle, Amphiaraus' fair spouse, had seen that thing, an ever craving lust for it seized her, so that she preferred not her life apart from it. And Argia gave her that gift, and thereafter she sent Amphiaraus by force unto the war along with Adrastus and Polynices with the hosts and the seven kings, to carry on the war against the Thebans and Eteocles. Thereafter battle was joined, and Adrastus and Polynices were defeated, and the seven kings and Polynices were slain there, and no man came out of it alive save Adrastus alone; and Amphiaraus was drowned. As for Alcmaeon, again, son of Amphiaraus, he slew his mother, Eriphyle; for it was she that caused his father, to wit, Amphiaraus, to be drowned. Thereupon madness seized Alemaeon after his mother was killed by him. After that his wife, to wit, Callirrhoe was she, desired of Alemaeon the necklace; for she thought it likely that he would obtain health, if the necklace were parted from him. After that the necklace was given her, and for all that none the more did he obtain health. After that his mother's father, to wit, Phegeus, came to Alcmaeon, and he slew Alcmaeon, to wit, his daughter's son, for the crimes of his daughter, Alcmaeon's own mother. Alcmaeon's wife, Callirrhoe, requested of Jove that he would guard her two little sons for her until they could avenge their father; Amphoterus and Acarnan were their names. After that they arose, and gathered a great, an exceeding great, host E. 11ª 9 unto Phegeus; and they declared war on him. Phegeus, again, gathered his household and his soldiers. Nevertheless Phegeus asked of the sons a year's truce with no war waged on him. They said that they would give it, if they might have his head shorn from his neck within that year. Phegeus said that he would not give them his head with his consent. After that they joined battle furiously, wildly, wrathfully side on side, and an uncounted countless host was killed between them. Nevertheless Phegeus was defeated, and the two sons of Alcmaeon came up to him, and said to him: "Hast thou brought Alcmaeon with thee?" said they. "I have not," said he, "but if I had him now, I should bring him." After that Alcmaeon's sons struck off Phegeus' head, and inflicted exceeding great slaughter upon his following, including children and women. Thereafter they came home, having carried off victory and triumph.

Finit to the tale of the necklace.

After that, however, at the end of a year, Polynices sent a messenger to his brother Eteocles—the name of the messenger was Tydeus-and the messenger told him to give up the kingdom to his brother. Great anger seized Eteocles, and he said that what he had seized he would not let go, and he would not do right or reason respecting it, unless superiority in numbers or in battle should take it from him. "And I raise," said he, "no feud or jealousy about the high headship of all Greece through the friendship of king Adrastus, provided ve leave to me the rocky narrow farms of greenswarded Thebes. And my belief is that my father was Oedipus; and there are of his compeers, to wit, great Pelops, son of Tantalus, and Jove, happy son of Saturn. And it is I," said he, "that this people were used to have over them, and they do not wish," said he, "to be under the sway of a doubtful leader but to belong to one distinguished king of their own ; for every kingdom that will not be constant, is not sparing of tribes. And dost thou not see the terror and the fear that lie upon my people at my going from them ? And, indeed, the nobles of the Theban tribes will not let me away at all, or let me give the kingdom to him." But then Tydeus could not endure to hear or listen to those foolish wordy chirpings of Eteocles.

Then accordingly Tydeus said : "He will take," said he, "the sovereignty from thee; and though three vast walls of iron were round about thee, built by pre-eminent Amphion (and he is the first man by whom the wall of Thebes was built at the outset. and he did but sound his sweet-strained hollow harp, and by the music of his harp beams and stones would come, and go upon the wall), and though it be arms and many weapons and fastnesses of the earth, they will not protect thee from being killed and destroyed by our arms. And thy kingly diadem will be parted from thee along with thy head. And a sorrow to me," said he, "is the vengeance that will be inflicted on the valiant Calydonian bands that thou wilt bring with thee into that war in thine own company. Ah !" said Tydeus, "huge would be the slaughters and the dispersions on the slopes of Mount Cithaeron, and there will be from that encounter a profuse flood of blood in the beautiful river of Ismenos. And I do not wonder," said he, "at every evil ye will do, for cruel and sinful was every race whence ve have sprung, and there is not of all the Thebans a man that does not resemble his father in evil, except Polynices. And, O Eteocles," said he, "thine own evil will be avenged on thee unless thou give the kingdom for this year to us, for we seek but that."

And when bold distinguished Tydeus had thus spoken on the threshold of the king's house, he came forward keenly and restlessly, as came the strong huge wild-boar which Diana sent to devastate and to swallow up the confines of Calydon. For she was angry that no sacrifice was offered her by the people of Calydon. And his rough grey hairy bristles rose like a wood above his head, so that bright lightnings gleamed from his curved hard and sharp teeth about his very hideous cheeks, with a loud smiting of his sword or his tusks when he would crush them together, that he might dig up and root out heavy earth-fast rocks and the long plantations of the wood from the border edges of the river Achelous, when the ever-swift hunters of the Greek youths were beating them until that boar left Telamon behind him, and overthrew the heroic champion Ixion, until the greatly daring soldier Meleager slew him at last. And in this wise came the brave Calydonian champion from the jealous assembly of Thebes, as if it were to himself that a refusal had been given about his sovereignty. And swift was the passage of that man in the excellent easily traversed roads, and he cast from him the branch of an olive-tree that was in his hand as a sign of peace. And the women of the Thebans were for a while steadily gazing at that lad, and they were imprecating every evil upon Tydeus, and they were planning evil in their hearts against their own king Eteocles.

There however was the shameful evil-counselling virulent hostile man, Eteocles, searching in his mind how he should devise means for the death of that chosen messenger, Tydeus; and this is what that ruthless proud man did, to wit, that some of his valiant battle-champions, and of his stubborn steadfast young men be chosen, assembled, and sent to meet Tydeus obliquely on a path he could not avoid, and that he should be slain by them. And manly was the man to whom that complement of heroes was sent to match; and that band came by the foot-paths of the briery thorny secret and dense forests, and they found a dreadful place for a watch in a dark impassable glen between two high uneven hills with grassy luxuriant sacred groves. And there was a high awful rock, and therein dwelt the pestilential monster named Sphinx. That is the monster that used to search and sweep the plains nearest to her with her very ugly red eyes. And every man she sees, and who might come that way, she would ask questions of him; and as for every man who would not give her a reply, she would stretch out her terrible dark-grey hands, and her bare very sharp nails, and her rough spearing teeth at the head of every man, so that she might swallow and constantly chew them over her foul slobbering gullet, until the young irascible man, Oedipus, came and slew that monster. And wasteful cattle did not dare to graze the grass of that plain, or birds or winged flocks to descend over the trees of that wood over that abode. And the people of Eteocles came silently, without a word, unto that place, and they were waiting for proud Tydeus in order to waylay him.

Now black dark-grey clouds of the night came over the face of all the earth, and when Tydeus arrived at that time in the vicinity of the wood in which the men lay, gazing from the hill on which he stood, he saw, through a thinness of the wood, the sheen of the tortoise-formed shields and the shimmer of the golden much-adorned helmets against the light of the moon. And Tydeus was silent as he gazed at them. He proceeded towards them nevertheless, drew his sword, brandished the small sharppointed javelins that were in his hand, and asked roughly and angrily: "Whence have the men come," said he, "and why should ve take to hiding?" And not a man of them spoke to him. But then rose the strong and lively well-derived leader of that band, to wit, heroic Cthonius; and he took his thonged well-casting javelin in his strong full-valorous hand, and he delivered a cast at Tydeus so that it struck into the huge wildboar's hide that was about him on his left side; so that the shaft of the spear, as apart from the iron of it, struck between his breast and his navel. And wild angry terror seized that youth, so that his beautiful bushy hair rose like a horror of a white-thorn's wings; and he continued restlessly, uncertainly, angrily tearing at his face and his raiment owing to the raging of the wrath that was upon him. And he went up on the delicately beautiful plain to meet the champions, and he began to address them, and this is what he said : "Refrain ye from smiting, O youths, since I am but myself alone in the breach." And there was no delay on their part, and they came towards him, and he then saw those men, how that they were more numerous than he had hoped.

He came forward up to the top of the rock where abides the Sphinx, and he was breaking the solid rock with his clenched heroic hands, until he reached the top of the rock. And when he had arrived above, so that he had no fear of evil being done to him behind his back, he dug out and dragged a very large insupportable rock, which would have required the effort of a powerful team of six to drag it from earth's fastnesses, and he raised it over his shoulder strongly, ever bravely, like the hard-hitting tendtachair rodibraic¹ Polus mear morm*en*mnach aran læchraid^{Theb.}

goblet which reckless high-spirited Pholus threw at the Lapithean hero-folk at Pirithous' nuptials. And that strong Theban band wondered that Tydeus should be on the rock above their heads. And then Tydeus threw the rock that resembled a mountain, so that that tumultuous crash overwhelmed and scourged them, until the faces of that youthful soldiery and their unsheathed weapons fell to the ground at the same time and moment, and the hands of those heroes clave to them. The breasts of those champions were overwhelmed and crushed brokenly confusedly overpoweringly with his feats of strength as well as of his great hurling powers which that hero had exerted upon the hard stone. Now four heroic fighting men fell at one time by that stone, and died thereby; and that valorous heroic band at once fled, for the four that died there were distinguished and of good family. There was of them of that host a royal high-spirited bright fulminating man, to wit, Dorylas; and the illustrious well-born man of the seed of Mars, son of Jove, fell there, and stubborn in battle was that champion, to wit, Theron; and the great-spirited baleful woeful horseman, to wit, Halvs, and he was a foot-soldier at that time; and there also fell the hateful haughty man of the primary race of Pentheus, to wit, Phaedimus. Tydeus, however, saw the fall of those champions. and that all the hosts, broken and in disorder, fled; and he brandished the two very sharp javelins that were in his hand. and hurled them straight and right strongly, and afterwards made a leap from the hard rock on which he stood, out upon the great plain, following the flight of the Thebans; and he took the fine battle-victorious hard shield of the stubborn Theban man, to wit, Theron; and he took the dreadful wild-beast skin which belonged to himself about his head. Thereafter the Thebans again made themselves into a dense band of strong battle against Tydeus. Tydeus, however, drew stoutly hastily from its blue-sided sheath his strong lively Bistonian sword, the warlike gift to him from his famous sire, to wit, Oeneus for valiant fight in the hollow of his fine hand. At one time he drove together and surrounded those men. At another he scattered and cut them off; and an intolerable oppression to those men was the gleam of the polished weapons flashing together. And a hindrance to the champions' fighting was the multitude of them attacking one man, so that they smote and bruised each other's bodies in making for that king; and narrow and bloody was Tydeus' position amidst the naked weapons of the full-deadly hero-folk surrounding him in front and rear. Virulent, undaunted, and steadfast was that true hero as he drove the multitude far out from him; and exceeding great was the unexpected resource of that man as he plied his shield, so that he could smite in fury and at random around him, so that a wounded trembling man who was in haste to flee would find no path or way but brave Tydeus of Calydon met him directly in front. He kept throwing and shedding off from him the long, very sharp darts, that were remaining as fixed wellshot arrows in the shield and in the skin of that hero; and enough to stir his valour, to wit, Tydeus', were the jagged bleeding wounds which these men kept showering upon him. And there were four triumphant heroes hacking the body of that king, and these are their names : animated fiery Deilochus; and a reckless man of the Theban people, envious menacing Phegeus, with a broad hacking axe, a tower of battle and combat; and Gyas, an heroic Theban of furious deeds, promising, manly, oppressive; Lycophantes, mangling, full-valorous. Let him come, since he has come (?). defeated

However, Tydeus put to flight and turned those stalwarts so that they fell to earth's fastnesses by him. It is there the Thebans were counting themselves, and their fewness for fight was a grief to them at that time. Then Cadmean Chromis, whose mother was Phenician Dryope, shook the lethal club, ridged and goodly thick as a very thick oak, and he said : "Men," quoth he, "will one man, after slaughtering us, go from us scatheless to Argus ? And comrades," quoth he, "we are none the better for the multitude of our hands and arms, since he goes away alive; and it is not that which we, O Cydon and Lampus, promised to Eteocles the king." And whilst he was saying that, puissant

Tydeus let fly a cast of his riveted outrage-working spear at him, so that it struck his mouth and his neck so that it pierced his inwards and his diaphragm (?) in his chest; and though he was alive, he was dumb ever after that. And thereafter Periphas, son of Thespis, took with him his mangled half-dead brother between his two hands, and he continued much sorrowing and sadly lamenting on his account. And it was then that Tydeus cast, to wit, a heavy sharp keen-faced javelin at him by way of his back, so that it broke through his curved heroic ribs, and thrust a spear-point through his brother that lay within his arms. And the brother opened his eyes at the plucking out of the spear-head, and he continued looking at his brother bending over him, and Periphas said: "May a fate like this befall thine own son, O Tydeus." And thus fell the two brothers before Tydeus, and each of them closed the other's eyes.

He that escaped from that was Menoetes alone, and he fled until he fell, and Tydeus got hold of him, and Menoetes lifted up his hands, and continued asking protection of Tydeus, "By the gods whom ye worship, let me depart for Thebes that I may announce tidings of thee therein, how thou hast slain us," said he, "and that thou art alive." Tydeus, however, was not merciful to Menoetes: "I give my word besides," said Tydeus, "that I will not have thy tears or thy entreaty. For thou didst promise to bring with thee my head to Eteocles; and lay aside thine arms," said he, "and accept a favour of protection, because it were a brief space thou wilt be in life for the coming wars."

Then Tydeus directed insult in conversation and jibe against the Thebans; and then came great languor on Tydeus, so that he was unable to bear his shield or to hold his sword, so that streams of the blood in evidence of the soldiers he had slain dripped from his heavy shining locks, like a mad Mauretanian lion after slaughtering flocks and herds, till it was weary of consuming so much as that.

Howbeit this was the intention Tydeus had, to go to Thebes, and to bring with him the bloody crimson spoils of those men to Eteocles and all the Thebans, until the goddess Minerva said to him: "Son of the king of Calydon," said she, "what hatred or what malice hast thou for thyself when thou goest to give thyself up to Thebans? And do not spoil the victory thou hast gained and the great deeds thou hast done, seeing that all the Greeks will have fighting from the Thebans." And Minerva then changed Tydeus' mood.

BOOK III

With respect to Venus, mighty goddess, she approached her lover, Mars, son of Jove, and she entreated him, seeking succour for Thebans, and she urged upon him that Tydeus should go to Thebes to meet his doom, and she said to him : "If it were when thou didst love me very deeply, though I was Vulcan's, and I went to tryst with thee, and thou didst embrace me-Venus." And when Mars embraced Venus there, that chain bound them securely in the act of adultery; and when Vulcan saw them, he assembled all the gods and goddesses so that they saw plainly the adultery of those twain. "And if it were the day I got this shaming on thy account, O Mars, thou wouldst have granted me forgiveness for the Thebans; and Vulcan would grant me anything I might ask him much more than thou. O Mars, though I have done him wrong. And why didst thou allow me," said she, " to give the girl I bore to thee in Vulcan's despite, to wit, Harmonia, to the Tyrian Theban, to wit, to Cadmus son of Agenor, and that evil should be done to the people of Thebes in consequence? And it is a shame for thee," said she, "that Vulcan is stronger to destroy the Thebans than thou to save them, for it is Vulcan, through jealousy of thee, that brought upon them every sin they committed, to wit, by the necklace which he gave them." Now that fine battle-victorious hero, Mars, son of Jove, could not endure that Venus' words should pass in vain. He doffed his armour, leaped from his chariot, gathered the maiden to him in the hollow of his shield, and began affectionately and passionately to address her, and he said :

"Thou art the person dearest to me of mortals or of gods. Sooner would I drown myself in the chill streams of Hell than lose thy love and thy affection, and the love of the people of Thebes. And yet," said he, "I cannot but go on a message to the father, Jove," said he, "for his power holds in heaven and earth, on sea and land, and I may not go against the utterance of that mighty one. For Jove and all the gods have decreed from the beginning of the world that this war should be waged. But yet," said he, "when the two nations will be fighting on the plain of Thebes, to wit, the Greeks and the Thebans, I will give succour and support to the trusty Theban tribes, and I shall follow thy counsel every way I shall be able. For the gods allow us to succour our friends, provided there be no going against their will." And when he had said that, he urged his fleet fiery steeds. As quick as swift flaming lightning at the discharge of its shooting in chill stormy weather, thus came Mars son of Jove forward with that message.

As to Tydeus son of Oeneus, however, he set his pace fiercely awfully over the rocky fair-fielded farms of Greece, till he saw in the distance the top of the famous prosperous city of Proshymna. Foul and upstanding were the champion's locks at that time after being utterly matted with the very filth of the dust, and foul and wet were the jagged wounds in the skin of that hero through the sweat of his journey and wanderings, and rent and reddened were the eyes of that king for the want of sleep and rest, and high-spirited was that soldier after the victory he had won. For it is thus Tydeus, son of Oeneus, was at that timelike a fierce victorious bull after subduing and bringing down a well-matched antagonist, so that he was mangled and utterly dead in consequence after despoiling him. And, moreover, when Tydeus had reached these cities of Greece, he ceased not to inflame the wrath, boastfulness, and hatred of the Thebans against the contending nations, to wit, from Asopus to Argos; E. 13b 29 and he continued to say that he himself had been sent on a mission to Eteocles, to ask his kingdom for Polynices, and he related the treachery that had been attempted on himself through Eteocles' deceit that night, and that a refusal had been given him about the kingdom for Polynices. And it was easy for Tydeus to sow a temptation to evil among those peoples of Adrastus. For the cruel battle-potent god, Mars, was urging the same things upon them.

Then, however, the noble king Adrastus and the nobles of his people by him were in assembly and counsel, when Tydeus, unannounced and unobserved, approached them, and said at the door as he entered: "Men," said he, "seize your arms immediately; and, Adrastus," said he, "remember," said he, "thy high descent and the great spirit of the great men whence thou hast sprung, and don thy garb of battle, conflict, and contest; for with the Thebans there is no fulfilment of friendship to gods or men," said he, "and it would be easier for me to go with an embassage to any other fierce and angry race in the world than to them. And, O Greeks," said he, "take me to the war of the Thebans, that I may avenge upon them the treacherous device they put upon me in the night. And rise quickly," said he, "upon your enemies whilst they are fearful and weak before you, and whilst they are miserable and sorrowful lamenting their people, and burying outside their city the bodies of their friends whom I myself have killed, to wit, the champions of the Thebans. And though I am wounded and blood-stained, what I desire is to attack them at once again."

Then the Greeks arose together to meet Tydeus and to give him welcome, and the first man that reached him was the brave Cadmean champion, Polynices, son of Oedipus, who bowed his head, and said: "I see thy wounds, brave Tydeus, dear friend; and it is not thou that hast been wounded there," said he, " but as it were I myself; and that has been done to thee as monstrous wrongs to me. And be ye silent," said he, " ye Greeks, and let me fight my brother; and this I claim, O Tydeus," said he, " to avenge thy wounds upon the Thebans."

And when he had given that counsel generally to all, a woeful pang of sorrow and sickness arose in the hearts of all the Greeks, so that there was not there of young or old one person but made the same resolution, to leave his place and fatherland, and go to Thebes in order to sack it with Polynices, son of Oedipus. And the aged counseller, the father of the assembly, to wit, Adrastus, spoke and said: "Allow me and the gods to end your disputes, and do ye make haste about fighting with the Thebans. For the kingdom will not go as a present from Polynices without his vengeance, and that will be unprecedented when it is inflicted. But in any event," said he, "let Tydeus son of Oeneus be medicined and healed, and let sleep and rest be allowed to the wounded body of the hero that he may be well." When the fine troop of foot accompanying Tydeus, and his white-limbed womanly spouse, saw his skin covered with wounds their minds were troubled and excited. They all closed round about him densely and compactly, and Tydeus stood firmly and joyously in the palace, with his back to a solid pillar that was in the middle of the house, and the very skilful physician, to wit, Idmon of Epidaurus, cleansed the wounds of that hero with fullpure well-cold water, and with a very sharp blue-edged knife he cut off much of the proud flesh. He put powerful healing herbs into the gashes of that hero. And moreover Tydeus son of Oeneus was relating and telling of his own speech and encounter with Eteocles, king of Thebes; and he told of the place from which the treacherous spear was hurled at him, the time the battle was fought, the names of the chiefs that fell by him, and the tale-teller whom he intentionally let away, to wit, poetic and prophetic Maeon. And silence and anxiety fell upon the noble king, Adrastus, and the princes of the land and of the earth, who were listening to these tales; and the tales of the Thebans were a stirring of mind to that folk, and that was a rousing of the anger and wrath of great Polynices, son of Oedipus.

And then the bright-coloured glorious sun descended and sank on lovely bright-purple pillars over the borders of the high Iberian ocean Westward unto setting, so that dark impenetrable night surrounded and enclosed the swiftly moving hollow vault of the firmament round the hills and habitations of the whole earth so that everyone lay asleep and at rest save the gentle aged king, Adrastus, and his chief son-in-law, Polynices, searching for wisdom sleeplessly that night. And moreover Tydeus, with all his wounds, was fast asleep.

And thereafter came Mars, son of Jove, with loud sounding of armour that night over the high boundaries of Arcadia and over the bright-coloured farms of Nemea and over the top of the dry and bright hill of Taenaros and unto Apollo's noble city, Therapnae, so that desires of contentious war filled the palpitating heroic hearts of all Greece through the solicitation of the god Mars, son of Jove. And besides Fame, daughter of Earth, famously conspicuously scattered tales of that god, Mars, through the boundaries and headships of all Greece.

And at the end of seven days after that the anxious noble senior, Adrastus, rose up, and was very anxiously deliberating whether he should extol war, or seek peace for all. And this is the counsel he decided on, that his prophets and wizards should be brought to him, and that they should ask of the gods through sacrifices what the Greeks ought to do. And these were his poets at that time, to wit, Amphiaraus son of Oecleus, the astute priest, cognisant of the future; and the very skilful prudent senior, Melampus, son of Amythaeon. And there did not exist at the same time as he, one to whom Apollo would rather grant a true response than that great man, Melampus. And those prophets made divinations of prophecy at the outset through the blood and the entrails of cattle consumed by fire; and since they received no vision, they were glad by reason of those things.

Then they attempted divination by strong pure clouds of the air. It is thus they were, with a high pre-eminent fine smooth coiseargtha¹ a comfogus doib i. Aphesannt. Et is do mullach ^{Theb}₁₁₁ an sleibi² sin rofoluaimnig Peirs³ mac Ioip do cathugud risin consecrated mountain near them, to wit, Aphesas. And it was to the top of that mountain that Perseus, son of Jove, flew to fight with the Gorgon. And that Gorgon was thus, to wit, a three-headed monster, and every person that it saw, it used to turn to solid rock. And when Perseus, son of Jove, heard of that, he went to Minerva, and asked help from her against the Gorgon. Minerva gave him her own glassy shield, that through that shield he might see the shadow of the monster attacking him, and that the monster might see its own shadow, so that it might not advance upon him there; and the Gorgon fell by him in that manner. Then came those prophets and wizard-priests, to wit, Amphiaraus and Melampus, out of that beautiful oliveclad mountain, with their beautiful fillets for sacrifice about their heads, before the rise of the conspicuous blazing sun in the early morn. Then Amphiaraus spoke at the outset to the gods, to wit, to Jove in especial, and he recounted his various powers resting upon him in every place in order to seek truth from him, and that he should tell us "through the voices of the birds. O Jove, whether we shall gain a victory from the Thebans on this expedition." And when Amphiaraus had said that, he laid himself down on the solid rock on which he stood; and he continued beholding his prophecy in his mind there. And when he had beheld the stars and the constellations of the firmament and the fords of the air, Melampus the poet spoke after that: "Thou seest, Amphiaraus," said he, "that no bird or flock of birds shows stability or tranquility to this expedition. For thou seest dark gloomy birds of the air quarrelling and fighting together with their bent hard sharp talons, and that is a sign of gloom and sorrow." Thereupon Amphiaraus said : "I have often made prognostication when I was young, what time I went in the Argo along with Jason, Hercules, and all the kingfolk of Greece, to the territory of Colchis. And Jason did not believe his wizard nor his very skilful one, to wit, Mopsus, as he believed me. And I have never found," said he, "dire portents like these in prognostication that I have made. beautiful pure-white swans which I see coming from the North from the chill icy stream, to wit, Strymon, as well as from the South, from the pure bright river Nile. And do thou understand by the unwinging swans the silent taciturn Thebans at peace in strong cities," said he. "And behold ! a brood bolder than themselves approaching them, to wit, seven awful eagles, and these," said he, "are the seven kings of the Greeks, plundering and slaving the Thebans. And behold!" said he, "one of the eagles going aloft until it has been burnt and destroyed; and that," said he, "is the proud evil-hearted king, to wit, Capaneus one of the seven kings of the Greeks. Fiery lightning will burn him at the great war of Thebes. And I know," said he, "that this eagle which has fallen for weariness of wing-power is the foolish perturbed boy, Parthenopaeus, and also that this bird which has fallen on the neck of his fellow is great Polynices, son of Oedipus, and his brother is Eteocles king of the Thebans. And the eagle that has arrived safe and sound is noble Adrastus alone. And this bird which thou seest to be drowned," said he, "is Hippomedon; and the bird which thou seest gnawing another's head, that is Tydeus, son of Oeneus, and Melanippus."

Then Amphiaraus burst into weeping, and Melampus asked: "Wherefore dost thou weep, O sad one, just now?" Melampus said. "Sad indeed is that, thou noble and venerable Melampus," said Amphiaraus. "I recognise," said he, "by yon bird that has fallen without finding a place or position that it is I myself that will fall down through the earth at the great war of Thebes." Now a great quaking fear seized those prophets and wizards, and the seeing of that vision they thought terrible, and Amphiaraus doffed his noble sacrificial garment, and he came into the mountain gloomily dejectedly, so that he could not put from his thoughts the war of Thebes, as if it were carried on at that hour. And he went not into the house of king Adrastus, nor to converse with the nobles of the assembly; but he hid himself in a trackless unknown mound without the knowledge of anyone. immorro dobái fein isin tsleib chedna co cend se lá 7 se Theb. n-aidchi can labra ré duine. 574

Moreover Melampus was himself in the same mountain for six days and six nights without speaking to mortal.

And since the prophets did not speak truth of knowledge to the Greeks, great Jove, son of Saturn, mighty common head of all, urged the youthful soldiery of the Greeks to go to Thebes and sack it, so that the lands, forts, and strongholds of Greece might be unoccupied owing to the thoroughness and full measure of the muster of those champions, that they might not leave their wives, boys, and little ones wailing behind them. Then wide-mouthed very large chariots were cleaned and strengthened. Thonged and easily hurled spears were ground and burnished from rust and ugliness by them. Very sharp naked swords were polished and made smooth by them in order to slaughter and slay their enemies. Round shapely helmets and linked dark-grey coats of mail were made lustrous and newly bright by them. Beautiful battle-enduring tunics were shaped and fitted on the bodies of those heroes, and efforts to bend were expended by them on beautiful curved bows. Their worn-out plough irons, their stout sickles, and their heavy rakes of husbandry were melted and moulded, so that they were sharp ready weapons for strife. Their hard battle-victorious shields were protected and strengthened by blue layer-glued tough choice bull-hides.

And all at once unanimously the Greeks set out for Argos and for the house of the noble king Adrastus, and the shout of the Greek soldiery, beginning a contest with the people of Thebes, shook the ridge-pole of the firmament, so that that shout was like the sudden and rude noise of the well-balanced globe being convulsed by the heroic champion, to wit, Enceladus, from his noble mighty hills of well-watered Sicily.

And thus it is told that that hero was born among the hills of Sicily, to wit, wild warlike men existed at the beginning of time, and this is the counsel they resolved on, to go and sack heaven and seize sovereignty. And when the gods, to wit, Jove, Apollo and all the gods heard that, they gave battle to those heroes, and they were called the sons of the earth because of their heaviness and earthiness. That battle went against them, and they were bound and made fast by the gods; and one of them was placed under mount Etna. And it is said that when he makes a turn or utters a roar, a stream of fiery hail blows from the side of the hill; and Enceladus was bound there under the three hills of Sicily, to wit, Lilybaeus, Pachynus, and Pelorus; and when that hero moves, the globe of the whole firmament quakingly resounds. And like that was the yell of the Greeks as they sought an encounter with the Thebans.

And thereupon uprose a man powerful proud conspicuous haughty well-born, to wit, Capaneus, one of the seven kings of that muster of the Greeks; and he was that ungentle irreligious man who would do nothing for gods or men, and Capaneus spoke: "It is a forfeiture and contempt for us, Amphiaraus," said he, "that thou with an equal number of powerful heroes art waiting for a prophecy of any human being in the world. And as for me," said he, "I am not waiting for him, since there lies my power of conflict, in my sword; and I shall make a prophecy for you, O Greeks, if Amphiaraus do not."

And when the Greeks had assembled round that youth, Amphiaraus arose and said : "It is not because of the vehement angry outery of Capaneus, nor from fear, that I would make a prophecy to you, but for love of yourselves. But there is one thing more, ye wretched ones, what madness and what folly 4as excite, you? And what hatred de you show to yourselves and to your city of Argos, when ye go to attack the Thebans? And wherefore have ye forced upon me a prophecy to you? For I have seen portents of very great vengeance on you, O Greeks, and the threads of your life have been cut by the infernal Parcae." For three women are said to live in hell, and they are called Parcae, and the three have a distaff with its material to shape every man's life, to wit, one of them carries the distaff, to wit, Clotha; one spins the thread, to wit, Lachesis; the third cuts the thread, to wit, Atropus. "And, ye wretched ones, ye Greeks," said Amphiaraus, "what gratification is it for you that the homesteads of Thebes should be manured with the

And the priest remained silent then, and Capaneus heaped insult again upon Amphiaraus, and said: "Remain thou, a feeble fugitive, in Greece, thou and every one whom thou wilt inspire with fear by thy prophecy, and listen not thou to the keen and soft Tyrrhenian trumpets. And I myself," said he, "will make a prophecy to every one who will come with me to the war." And trumpets are called Tyrrhenian for this reason, because Tyrrhenus, king of the Tuscans, brother of Lydus, was the first man to whom a trumpet was ever blown at the outset.

And the Greeks uttered a huge crash of sound through the long-voiced tumult they made in agreeing with Capaneus, like the sound which a stream rushing headlong in flood makes in chill spring-time down the watersheds and the sloping glens of the earth. And when the night came, those heroes dispersed from conversing; and though many slept, it was not Argia, daughter of Adrastus, wife of Polynices, that slept owing to care and anxiety of mind regarding her husband, since she could not get that husband's company or conversation owing to anxiety and long deliberation how he should act towards his brother regarding his share of the kingdom and the sovereignty.

And at the end of the night she proceeded to her father's lofty palace, holding her own son (and her little children) by her hand, to wit, Thessander, son of Polynices. And she said to her father: "Thou knowest, O beloved father, Adrastus," said she, "the errand on which I have come to thy house, Adrastus, though it be not told thee. And it was not Polynices that told me to come but only gloom and dejection, restlessness and hardship were troubling me since thou gavest me to Polynices. And I say to thee, O king, give succour to that husband, gather battalions with him to fight for Thebes and, O beloved father," said she, "say whether thou wilt give it, for I have given my love to that husband; and it is the more just that thou shouldest help him; and though I am to-day urging the contest, methinks in tachair, is doig leam biait¹ aris acca thairmesc re hecla uile^{Theb.} daibsi." it is likely that I shall be again hindering it, for fear of evil to you." And after that Adrastus kissed his daughter, and: "Daughter," said he, "I do not cast back upon thee the complaint thou makest and the excessive lamentation. Put from thee thy fear, and cause thy spouse to be comforted, since we are preparing for that battle, and its being fought is a certainty." And since the morning came before the limits of that conversation, Adrastus arose.

BOOK IV

Now for three years up to the time of that beautiful springtide they had been preparing for that fratricide between the Thebans and the Greeks. And the contentious war-goddess arose, and brandished flaming baleful torches over the cities of the Greeks and the Thebans. She cried and spread horror over the broad and very long camps so that furious troops and stubborn mighty men seized their very sharp arms through pressure of the hastening of that red-mouthed goddess. And when the time came for that battle to be drawn up, huge and great sacrifices were made by them, so that the priests might cause an equal good to them afterwards through the sacrifices, and then arose small choice white boys, and fresh pure modest girls, and withered decrepit seniors to bid farewell to those men, so that swift showers of tears were dripping over the hollow helms, over the arms and clothing of those powerful friends as they kissed one another before parting.

The muster of the Greeks now hereafter.

These are the nations that went to that war, and their noble kings with them, to wit, the sad, silent, feeble, angry, anxious, ever guileful king, Adrastus. And that man was not strong to carry arms, save it were his sword only, his arms being with his people behind him. His charioteer yoked and caparisoned his swift well-running horses in the gate of the city of Larissa; and his quiet well-coursing horse, Arion, was becoming restive and hard-mouthed; and to them that was a sign of evil to come.

Then arose the hosts, multitudes, and allies of the noble king, Adrastus, out of their own proper bright-hued cities. And these are their names, to wit, Larissa, Proshymna, Midea, Phlius, Neris on the brink of the river Charadrus, Cleonae, and Thyrea in the confines of Lacedaemon; and the kindred nations came from the rocky mountains of Drepanum, and from the city of Sicvon between the very great river Langia and the huge river of Elison; and they came from the very lofty pleasant city of Ephyre, and from Cenchreis, and from the whole confines between the eminently beautiful well of Pegasis (Phlegethon?) in the West, and the beautiful mount Isthmos in the East, and the high Adriatic sea in the North, and the stormy Ægean sea in the South, they came as allies of Adrastus. And three thousand was the number of that host, rejoicing round their king, with various arms, since the nations were not similar, for some of those men had broad very sharp missile spears, another assembly of them had brilliant flaming half-javelins, another portion had bright front-hitting slings and smooth hard-peaked bows. And the noble king Adrastus, amid those assemblies, resembled a lofty dreadful bull with a multitude of wounds cicatrized in his body, so that the oxen of the herds dared not look upon him for dread of his horns, polled in front and lopt with the stress of every encounter.

There too the violent stubborn Theban stalwart, Polynices, son of Oedipus, raised his lofty dreadful standards; and these were the battle-champions around that man, the steadfast Thebans that had come from their country to him, and the troops of the cities which Adrastus had given him as a dowry along with his daughter; and these are the cities, to wit, Aegion, Arene, and the city of Theseus, son of Aegeus, son of Neptune, to wit, Troezen. And Polynices had the same armour and clothing at that time as on the night on which he had formerly proceeded to the house of Adrastus, to wit, about him the skin of a stout Teumesian lion, and sharp-pointed very thick spears in his hand wherewith he could wound in front and rear, and a long keen-edged sword at his left with the figure of the monster that had been killed by Oedipus therein, to wit, Sphinx. Yet Polynices was loth to go on that journey when it was borne in on him that Argia, daughter of Adrastus, his own spouse, would be left behind; and at another time he was in haste to go to the kingdom of his mother and of his people; and four thousand was the number of that allied multitude about that mighty man.

Then, too, the haughty, fulminating, joyous, cruel, restless man, to wit, Tydeus, set his people forward; and the spirit of that soldier rose when he heard the trumpets being blown, as rises a slimy angry serpent before the influence of the sun on a bright summer day, so that waves of its poison were belched over woodland grasses, and man or cattle dared not touch it, And these were the hosts of that man, the brave races of Pylene, and the excellent soldiers of Pleuron, wherein dwelt his brother, to wit, Meleager; and the brave troops of Calydon, the levies of Olenos, the heroes of the city of Chalcis, and dwellers by the river Achelous, cities of Italy those, in the confines of Calydon. And thus were the people of those cities, they had huge brass cuirasses to defend their bodies in battle, and broad spears in their hands for wounding, and beautiful ornamented helmets on their heads; and from every quarter those strong chosen youths gathered round the handsome high-spirited soldier, to wit, Tydeus, son of Oeneus. Joyous in battles was that champion, and sterner was the menace of Tydeus against the Thebans than the threat of Polynices.

Thereafter uprose the high pre-eminent king, to wit, fresh bright-cheeked Hippomedon; and his hosts were gathered by him from the banks of the full-fair river Lyrcius, from the borders of the river Inachus, and from the high confines of the river Asterion. And there came too the hard troops of the Dryopes, and the huge levies of Epeans, and the many famous bands of the Epidaurians; and with him also came good-spirited soldiers of the city of Dyme, and close well-drilled bands of the city of Pylos, whereof was Nestor, son of Neleus, son of Poseidon, head of Greek wisdom; and he was young then, yet though he was young, he refused to go and sack Thebes at that time. But Hippomedon through the heroism of his hand moved all the people of the city with him unto the war. And thus was Hippomedon with a beautiful brass helmet on his head with three equally lofty helmet-crests, so that it was like snow for its exceeding whiteness on his head, and the whole body of that hero was girt with arms. For thus was he with a glittering flaming round shield upon him, with figures of the children of Danaus and of Belus. And thus were these two brothers german with an angry feud between them. Fifty daughters had Danaus. and Belus a number equal to that of sons : and Danaus said to his daughters: "I shall give you to the sons of Belus, and do ye slay them in the night." And thus it was done save by one wife only, and she did not slay her husband, to wit, Lynceus. And there were figures of that band, and in many a setting many other figures in that shield depicted on it. And it was like as if the woods were shaking and the excellent easily traversed hills were humbled under the feet of that hero as he shook his shield among the gatherings before delivering an attack. And who is the man who could number those warlike nations, the battle-champions, and the many arms of those highspirited soldiers? But further, three hundred young dexterous boys came from Hercules' city, to wit, Tiryns; and there, too, came along with him Agylleus, son of Hercules, from the same city along with Hippomedon. And though the inhabitants of that city were fewer, they were taller and more veteran for a time of conflict. And no long thonged javelins for hurling were carried by that band, or steel swords for mangling in battle, but only the spoils of mangling lions, and the heavy stems of fir after a rough snedding, and excellent lethal arrows from yellow steel-tipped bows. They used to sing together the praise of Hercules whilst advancing on the way as allies of Hippomedon. And bands for conflict came from the woods of Nemea, and the following of Molorchus from the branching woods of Cleonae in the company of that high-spirited horseman, Hippomedon.

The allies of Hippomedon are those.

Thereafter uprose the strong contemptuous man, to wit, Capaneus; and he used to carry his shoulders above the battalions on both sides, and he seized his great warlike shield compacted together of four bull-hides and well engraved with images of serpents, toads, and all other monsters of the earth, so that the body of that hero was protected from sole to crown; and he donned his thread-knotted, plaited, hooked corslet above the under-parts of his raiment, and that battle-soldier put his engraved gleaming helmet on his head, and he took in his hand his thick-shafted equally balanced spear which no other man on earth could lift save only the brave heroic king, to wit, Capaneus. And as allies of that king came the inhabitants of the city of Amphigenia, the spirited soldiers of Messene, the war veterans of the city of Ithome, the daring mighty men of the city of Thryon, the assemblies of Aepy, the well-known hosts of Helos. the excellent men of Pteleon, and troops of a fine army from Dorion.

The muster of Capaneus son of Tarsis thus far.

Then, moreover, uprose the noble king and priest, to wit, Amphiaraus, to the sack of Thebes ; and though he went thither, he knew every evil that could thence arise to himself and every one else; and not willingly did he go thither but through persuasion of necessity; for Amphiaraus had hidden him[self] for dread of the Theban war, and no human being knew where he was save his own wife. And when they were seeking him, Eriphyle said to Argia: "Give me," said she, "the necklace of gold which thou hast, and I shall betray to thee my spouse, to wit, Amphiaraus; for, he being absent, there is no profit in this uair ni fuil¹ tarba in tachair-sea na Tebi 'na ingnais." assault of Thebes." And when Argia heard that, she told her husband, Polynices; and Polynices said that the gold necklace should be given to Eriphyle; and it was given to her, and she told them the place in which Amphiaraus was; and he was induced to go and sack Thebes, and through that necklace Amphiaraus fell, and his wife, and his son afterwards.

Now Amphiaraus' chariot was yoked to beautiful well-running horses of the stock of Cyllarus, the horse of Castor, son of Jove; and he placed on his head his beautiful mitre of pure white with its fair bright-purple fringes upon it, and the chariot of that hero was quivering with the sharp iron forest of fixed upstanding arms that were about him in the chariot, so that with every human being it was a horror to look upon the ample excellent spear of that man, like a very stout stately oak to be seen over the chariot of that king, and his royal very beautiful shield near him. And these were the bands of that hero for the war, for which they came from the isles of Amyclae, and from the cities, to wit, of Pylos, Pharis, and Messe; the strong troops of Taygetus, the vehement rough soldiers of the river Eurotas; and those noble hosts were joyous and spirited for pressing an attack. And the wives and mothers of those soldiers were glad that they should be killed in doing good. And on horses they used to go to their wars with two javelins in one thong in the hand of each man of them, and the shoulders of those men were naked, with rough hairy mantles round them from their shoulderblades downwards, and finely ornamented helmets on the heads of those heroes. And also with Amphiaraus came lieutenants and viceroys from Elis, from Pisa, and from the river Alpheus; and across that river Leander used to swim to his darling, Hero, so that on one of the nights he was drowned there, as he went to her.

The allies of the chief priest, great Amphiaraus, thus far.

Thereafter the young death-dealing boy, Parthenopaeus, the king of Arcadia, to wit, the darling son of Meleager, son of Oeneus, urged his lively warlike bands from Arcadia to sack Thebes without his mother's knowledge; and up to that period of time that youth was ignorant how to handle arms. But vet starts of liveliness urged him to that war; and it was the mother of that boy that was banished out of the country into a hunting place, for she was not able for war owing to her age at that time. But yet no one went to sack Thebes that was more beautiful or more wise than the king, Parthenopaeus, and every human being that used to see him used to love him, and that man's nature was warlike though he was no veteran in age. And the wish of that soldier was to hear battle-trumpets, to handle arms, and to marshal battalions; and he thought long till he should redden his arrows in hostile heroes, and bright with gold was the attire of that youth beyond every one in that gathering. For thus was he with a beautiful purplepure smock about him, and golden chains much ornamented. and a hard bossy round shield on his back, and a strongly delivering bow in his valiant left hand, and his bright quiver of lynx-skin much adorned with precious stones for the use of that king. He used to proceed at that time on his bridled wellcoursing horses, round which gathered the warlike assemblies of Arcadia, so that the fields of mount Maenalos and the Parthenian sacred groves were kneaded behind them; and an innumerable multitude of a host came from the cities, to wit, from Rhipe, Stratie, Enispe, Tegea, Cyllene, Nonacris, Orchomenus, Agros [= agros], Psophis, Erymanthis, and Stymphalus [= mons]. And these are the rivers from which came allies with Parthenopaeus, to wit, Clitor, Pythie [= Apollo], Lampia [= mons], Pheneos, and Azan [= populus], and the chiefs of Arcadia in the north of Greece; and though that people were all Arcadians, their arms and attire were diverse. For thus were some of those troops with great myrtles dragged from earth's fastnesses in their hands, and others of them had huge shepherds' staves, others of them had beautifully-tipped bows, others of them had long very sharp spits as arms, and hollow helmets on their heads. And though Mycenae was close to them there, no allied host came from it along with those kings unto Thebes; for it was at that time that Thyestes, son of Pelops, son of Tantalus, had gone in to the wife of Atreus, son of Pelops. And when Atreus heard that, he killed his own fosterling, the son of Thyestes, and gave him to Thyestes after being boiled, so that he consumed him in the form of flesh; and it is told that the sun turned upon its course, since it did not wish to come over that sinful city that day; so that on that account no allied host came from Maeonia and from Mycenae to Thebes, as is related of the fratricide of Tantalus' children. And when Atalanta, mother of Parthenopaeus, heard that her son had gone in that hosting, she went like a bold and eager tiger after her son to detain him, and she heaped reproach and shame on her son and on all the Arcadian people who were with him, and she would not have allowed herself to do that save that the chiefs of Arcadia were encouraging him to go with them to the war; and the beautiful girl, Atalanta, could not bear parting with her son owing to his loveableness. And that son of Atalanta the huntress, and Meleager the handsome king of Calydon, she was making known to the high-king Adrastus.

The allies of the host of Arcadia there.

The muster of the Greeks unto Thebes thus far.

But further, these are the two cities of the Greeks equal in importance, to wit, stubborn Thebes for the multitude of her soldiers triumphing in war and conflict, and Athens for the culture of her wisdom and knowledge.

Now, with respect to the Thebans, vast fear seized the warlike nations of Cadmus when they heard of the multitudinous muster of the Greeks to attack them. Thereupon Eteocles greatly and angrily mustered the Thebans to defend their city against the Greeks. Yet the people of Thebes were not glad and eager to begin that contest, and not a man of the Thebans had a desire for war at that time. For the walls of their city were effete and easily stormed and many cares rested on them, from whatsoever their anxiety used to arise, other than waging war. And yet for all that a rage of battle came into the hearts of the Thebans to defend their nation, and not to extend the sovereignty of the king Eteocles; for they all hated the besieger, to wit, Polynices. And this was the appearance of Eteocles, like as a wide-mawed raging wolf is among cattle after utterly breaking them. He bethinks him in flight that the shepherds of that flock, starkly slain, were following himself.

And an addition to the horror of the Thebans was the zealous keen tale-bearing rumour, scattering tales of the Greeks among them; for one there would say that cavalry of a picked body of Greeks had arrived at the bank of the river Asopis, or at easily passed mount Cithaeron, or at the green-clad knolls of Teumesus, near Thebes. And innumerable gloomy portents filled the whole earth, so that they saw the rivers as rivers of blood through phantasms of dreams, and dumb brute monsters used to speak working strong ill to Thebans from every quarter, and through phantasms was heard by them a zealous mad priestess of the people of Bacchus, the god of wine, prophesying throughout the city, and she said: "Thou doest ill, O Bacchus, to let these distresses fall upon the Thebans. And I see two strong envious bulls, who acknowledge one race and one fatherland, in conflict, and each of them slaving his fellow. To wit, Eteocles," said she, "thou doest evil to fight about a thing that is no more hereditary to thee than to thy brother, to wit, Polynices." And she was silent thereafter.

But the guileful quivering Eteocles asked of the seer that a prophecy should be made for him, and on one discreet and longlived he enjoined it, to wit, Tiresias. And though that wizard was blind, he was a good seer, and for this reason was that man blinded: for a year he had been a woman through a miracle of the gods, until a quarrel occurred between Jove and Juno, the goddess of carnal love, daughter of Saturn, that beauteous mighty Juno; and Jove said that the desire of the master mm[b]an na na fer¹. passion of women was greater than that of men. Juno, however, said it was false; and they submitted it to one witness, to wit, to Tiresias; for he had been for a while a woman and for a while a man; and he said that the women's desire was greater than the men's. And that was provoking to Juno, and she plucked out his eyes, and Jove gave him prophetic vision in lieu thereof. Not by birds or by offerings on an altar was that man wont to make prophecy, but by raising souls from Hades, since they could be more relied upon.

And Tiresias arose, and his daughter Manto, and Eteocles along with him, and they went into the luxuriant sacred grove that was nearest them; and round that sacred grove lay the plain in which Cadmus, son of Agenor, had sown the serpent's teeth at a former time; and man and cattle flee owing to the devilish horrible tumult that still exists in that place. And Tiresias made nine trenches equally broad there, and they were filled by him with black beautifully coloured sheep in honour of the gods of Hades. And the people of the country took it ill that so many sheep were wasted with those sacrifices. And Tiresias poured oblations of wine upon those equally filled trenches, and he was beseeching the awful gods of Hades, to wit, Orcus, and Proserpina that man's wife, and tempting baleful Tesiphone, and very fierce Charon, the ferryman of souls over the river Styx, that they should raise souls for Tiresias to tell him south. And vast horror seized Eteocles at Tiresias' madness in asking his request of the devilish people of Hades. And when Tiresias perceived that, he became wroth with the people of Hades at the length of time, he thought, had elapsed without anyone being sent to him from Hades. And the priestess his daughter, to wit, Manto, spoke: "Here thou hast, now," said she, "pallid bloodless assemblies of souls close to thee from Hades, and Hades' dreadful prisons have now been opened, and I see profoundest Hades' ever dark abodes and joyless places; and I see," said she, "Hades' fetid green-flowing streams, to wit, Acheron, Phlegethon, and Styx; and I see, too, Pluto, Proserpina, and Hades' unjust judges, to wit, Minos, Aeacus, and Rhadamanthus, three sons of Jove. And thus they pass judgments, to wit, they have an urn of justice with white stones and black stones therein. And when the white stone used to come up first, the decision was true; but when the black stone used to come up, the judgment was untrue. But enough do I relate to thee," said Manto, "of the monsters of Hades." "Enough indeed, O daughter," said Tiresias, "for who does not know the punishment which the hero, Sisyphus, undergoes? that a millstone is rolled up a hill and that it falls down again ; Tityos, a hero who offered violence to Apollo's mother, to wit, Latona, this is his punishment in Hades that a hawk is devouring his heart, and his heart continues growing there. Call unto us, O daughter," said he, "the souls of the Greeks and of the Thebans that are there, and tell me their form and shape, and which of them is nearest me." "There are," said she, "Cadmus, son of Agenor, and Hermione his spouse, and Cadmus' four daughters, to wit, Semele, Autonoe, Ino, and Agave and their children; and I see here," said she, "the unhappy dead of the Thebans and of all the Greeks."

And when Manto had given the reputation and description of the souls side by side, Tiresias arose and shook his head, and he took no staff in his hand, though he was an old man. "Be silent, O daughter," said he; "I understand what will result to Greeks and Thebans some time therefrom, and this contest will be worse for Greeks," said he, " than for Thebans ; for sad," said he, "are those of the Greek kings that are in Hades, as a sad presage to those of them that are alive." And these are the kings that were sad in Hades at that time, to wit, rough wrinkled Abas, mild mighty Phoroneus, wounded truncated Pelops, fierce very angry Oenomaus, and bold ungentle Proetus; and his wife was Sthenoboea who made love to her stepson, to wit, Bellerophon. And when the youth refused to approach her, she accused him to his father and said that violence had been done her; and Proetus was wroth with Bellerophon, and sent him to Sthenoboea's father. And he had a monster, to wit, Chimaera. And Bellerophon, mounted on the horse Pegasus, was sent unto Chimaera to meet his doom. And that monster fell by him. He was thrown from his own horse, and died.

Tiresias saw the fifty heroes which Tydeus had killed of the Thebans; and he saw great Laius, father of Oedipus, among the souls; and he was asking of him to make a prophecy to his grandsons, to wit, Eteocles king of Thebes, and Polynices son of Oedipus. And Laius said : "Wherefore shouldest thou ask of me, O Tiresias, to make a prophecy to the people of Thebes ? since it is a vastness of evil they have done me. And yet," said he, "I shall relate to you what I have heard from the gods of Hades regarding the Thebans. Now it is a certainty," said he, "that the vigorous heroes of Lerna, to wit, of Greece, march with an innumerable multitude of exceeding great battalions to sack Thebes. And victory is a certainty to Thebans over the expedition of a picked body of Greeks to approach Thebes, seeing the Thebans will not allow the Greeks place or position to burn or bury whoseever of them will be slain in the land of Thebes. But be not thou afraid, O Eteocles," said Laius, "of the kingdom being seized by thy brother Polynices, for though that man be fierce and aggressive, he will never be king of Thebes." And when Laius had said that, he fell into Hades, and he left in confused and dubious fashion tales of the Greeks behind him.

Now the wanderings of the Greeks are given plainly here. They advanced to the fresh green woods of Nemea, and an unspeakable thing was the ardour of that goodly army about the complete overthrow and demolition of Thebes by them. Bacchus, however, the god of wine, assembled the winter-coloured races of the Getae from mount Haemus, and from mount Othrys, and from mount Rhodope unto Thebes to succour it; for Semele, daughter of the king of Thebes, to wit, Cadmus, son of Agenor, was mother of Bacchus. For when Semele was burnt while Jove was approaching her in the form of fire, Jove drew Bacchus out of her womb owing to a month being wanting of her period, and Jove reared Bacchus at the base of his thigh for a month, and thereafter gave him to the people of Thebes to rear, so that for that reason Bacchus was succouring Thebes. And thus was he in those haughty intoxicated camps with venomous serpents drawing Bacchus' chariot. And heroic were the folk of Bacchus' chariot, and these are their names, to wit, Strength and Tumult, Anger and Fear. And when Bacchus saw the confused towers of mist and the full-dark dusty clouds because of the stormy sea of that host above the green-branched woods of Nemea, and the gleaming of the polished smooth blue arms from the rays of the brightly shining sun, there was a great silence with them with no pressing on of their massed attack upon the Greeks; and Bacchus said to his following: "Be ye silent, O youths," said he, " and check your tumults. The Greeks have resolved," said he, "to wrest Thebes from me," said he; "and it is my stepmother Juno who arrays those battalions against me. And she has done other evils to me before, to wit, burning my mother Semele; and she is now coming to Thebes to destroy it. But," said he, "I shall employ some device to delay the hosts."

And he advanced swiftly and with haste over the plain against the host, and it was midday at that time, and the entry the factor of the second second second second second second second bin, and he said to them : "Put ye," said he, "a hiding sereen over the estuaries of the waters of the whole of Greece, so that their beds behind them may be quite dry sloughs, and cover first the waters of the woods of Nemea, and I shall make a fitting recompense for it to you again," said he. And no sooner had he said that than the lakes and swift rivers, the wells and winter lochs of the land were dried up, so that the beds of these rivers were hard roads, to wit, of Lerna and Lyrcius, Inachus and Charadrus, Erasinus and Asterion. But yet there was one river under the sheltered recesses of the wood, with no ebbing of its waters, to wit, Langia was its name ; and few were they who knew of that water.

Now great thirst seized the Greeks, so that they were unable to hold up their shields, or to carry their flaming corslets: and their horses could not endure to carry those soldiers from the burning of an intense thirst that assailed them both horse and man. And Adrastus sent speculators in every direction to seek water, to wit, to the river of Amymone, and to meandering ever-cool Syene [a town], and they found not a drop of water in a channel of them. And they besought the gods for water, and they did not hope for water to spring from, or rain upon, the earth for ever; and there, as they were wandering through the wood, they beheld a beautiful woman of many charms in gloom and dejection, to wit, Hypsipyle, holding her distinguished fosterling in her hand, to wit, Archemorus, son of Lycurgus; but Opheltes is another name for that boy. And queenly was the stately form of that maiden, though her dressing and her attire were bad. And Adrastus remained silent beholding her, and he said : "Fair and mighty goddess," said he, "for we think thy form is not human but, as it were, a divine brilliancy, give us succour in finding water, since Jove does not assist us. And we are going to sack Thebes, and it is not war that slavs us but weakness from thirst. And we deem it sufficient of Jove that thou shouldest succour us with water. And do thou strengthen our bodies unto the war, and gifts of a cattle foray will be given thee, and sacrifices of every tribe shall be offered thee." And the very great and intolerable thirst did not allow the king Adrastus speech beyond that, and all the Greeks were pale and troubled by the violence of that thirst. And Hypsipyle bent down her face, and said: "I shall be a goddess to you, O Greeks, and indeed," said she, "I have a relationship with the gods, and I have a good father and fatherland originally; and not mine own is this little boy you see in my hand; and I am not to delay you longer, but come ye with me quickly to the potable ever-flowing stream, to wit, Langia, that ebbs not for thirst or for heat; and wizards have not sought to dry it up, inasmuch as it is consecrated." And she put her fosterling down upon the ground, that he might not delay the men, and she kept beguiling the infant for a little while, till he remained silent, and she preceded them after that. The boy, however, was breaking the grass under his feet at one time, and at another he kept wandering, searching, and ever crying, as he sought his nurse's breast. And that little boy was ignorant at that time either how to avoid evil or how to seek good.

As for the Greeks, however, each of them came straight forward on their ways to seek water throughout the dense impassable wood. And it was no leading of the way to the water that was allowed to the girl. But it was like as if it were a rending of the firmament with the joyous shout of that host at the river fall, [or] like the shout of shipwrecked sailors when they enter into port. The Greeks descended to the water without distinction or difference, without nobility or honour by one of them to another, so that the horses of the charioteers did not allow their lords to dismount for haste to drink the water. Immense was the storm of the waves at the approach of that mighty host as they drank the water, so that the banks were broken and the river was foul and troubled from one end to the other. And many a drink of consequence was being drunk there, and like as it were a tumult of gathering battle was the roar of that band as they drank the water, and one of those kings spoke right in the midst of the river. And he was blessing the water, and surveying the place in which it was, and greatly praising it, and he said : "We have not seen," said he, "better water than this, or a fairer wood than the wood in which it flows; and it is not meet," said he, "to put a stream ahead of it."

And when they had quenched their thirst in that stream they left the river. And they gave a free course for their horses and a contest for their foot-soldiers, joyously spiritedly on the green-bottomed grassy farms, so that force vehemence and pride, swelling and elation seized the Greeks as if they were to join battle then. And again battalions of them were formed and each was in his own place according to rank as they were before, and they hastened a march so that the plains on which they marched became very foul dust, and very bright rays gleamed over the embattled woods of arms which were above them. Then moreover Adrastus took his stand at the foot of a tree, having the spear of his son-in-law Polynices in his grasp as he stood in the midst of the host, and he asked of the maiden Hypsipyle: "Who is thy father, O maiden," said he, "and what is thy native land?" The maiden answered him miserably and sadly: "O noble one, O Adrastus," said she, "cruel are the deeds thou dost enjoin upon me to relate, how the women of the isle of Lemnos killed their men, save myself alone. I," said she, "did not slay my father; and that is enough to relate." said she, "for ye are in haste for the battle. But yet Thoas, son of Bacchus, is my father, and mine own name is Hypsipyle, and I am in bondage to Lycurgus one of your people."

Every one turned his attention to her, and thought it honourable and desirable to listen to her tales. Adrastus said to her: "Tell all thy tidings, till the common folk have run through the wood, for it is not easily traversed."

And she went ahead with the tale: "The isle of Lemnos," said she, "stands in the stormy Ægean sea, with mount Etna on one side of it, mount Athos on the other, and Thrace opposite, and there are huge green-branched woods in it, and abundance of every good in it both of men and of treasures, and not better than that isle is the isle of Samos, or Delos, or any isle situated in the whole Ægean. But yet we had never offered sacrifice to Venus, the goddess of love, and hence Venus was angry, so that fury and madness inflamed her against the people of the whole isle. Not joyous and happy was it for hosts at night with the people of that island, but as it were anger and disunion. until it came into the mind of the full-proud hero-folk to go and sack the land of Thrace; and though their sons and their people were detaining them they did not remain with them. The women, moreover, were sad at the departure of those men from them. And I myself was young and inexperienced at that time," said Hypsipyle, "and no sadness lay upon my mind. The other women moreover used, each of them, to strengthen the other, as they gazed away to Thrace, where their people were waging war. And once when we remained there," said the maiden, "at midday we heard four sudden cracks of doom in the air above our heads, so that the caves of the isle of Lemnos shook, and the sea was as if it were a wind that roughened it. and that was a foreboding of dire evil. For then arose the noble wife of Charope, one of the women of the isle of Lemnos, and fury and madness seized her, so that she continued fluttering about as she threw the town into confusion, tearing her face with her nails. And she assembled the town at one house which was at the top of the town, and she said: "Be your hearts strengthened, and yours be a manly aggressive nature, and slav all your mensons, brothers, fathers; and remember the hatred your men have shown you for the space of three years now. And, O ye wretched ones,' said she, 'have ye not heard that Procne, wife of Tereus, killed her own son, to wit Itys, and gave him to his father in the guise of other flesh, because of violence which Tereus offered to her own sister, to wit, Philomela her name. And he cut away the point of her tongue lest she should tell against him. And she wrote that in her kerchief with the blood of her tongue, and showed it to her sister afterwards, so on that account Procne slew her son. And what ails you,' said Polyxo, 'that ye will not slay your sons and your men? As for me, indeed, I shall slay my son and my man, since Venus,' said she, 'is telling us to slav them all, and she will give us something better than they are.' And the women of the isle of all Lemnos were of one mind as to following that counsel of Polyxo, and they resolved to kill all their men both young and old.

"At that time and hour the hero-folk of the isle of Lemnos came from sacking Thracia Major. Now there was a dark impassable sacred grove in the mountain that was nearest them, and the women of the isle of Lemnos went to ask an answer of the gods, and the red-mouthed goddesses of the depths of hell had come to confuse them hitherto. And Venus, mighty queen, and baleful Enyo, sister of Mars, the god of battle, were enjoining evil upon those women. And thus was Polyxo, wife of Charopus, with the shade of her son beside her there. And they made a conspiracy that they would kill their men. And great horror seized me," said Hypsipyle, "seeing those women like a fugitive hind amid an open-mouthed raging pack of wolves.

"Now those men came from their ships, and offered divers and many sacrifices, and gave themselves up to drinking and enjoyment, so that they were all drunk and worn out. And when the sleep of lasting slumber had fallen on the hosts, their fierce and furious wives came towards them to slav them, and attacked them like lionesses keen and hungry from their whelps, raiding flocks and herds. And beloved father, Adrastus," said Hypsipyle, "I do not know which of these evils I shall tell you first: but cruel ignorant Gorge slew her husband there, to wit, Elvmus. And thus was he, with his arms about her, till she thrust the sword into him, and he received its point in his own body, and he was still kissing her with his arms about her neck. But I am not able to number them all-every one who was slain there. But yet I shall mention some of their own nobles. to wit, Myrmidone. Moreover Epopea slew her own son, and Lycaste slew her own twin brother coeval with herself, Cydimon, and she remained weeping over him. And Alcimede [Lemnia quaedam] was slain, and his head was struck off him. And when I saw that, fear and horror seized me, and I came a troubled ghost to the house of my father Thoas, and though the house in which he lived was far away from the town, he kept asking : 'What means the clamour,' said he, 'which I have heard in the town ?' And she told all that to her father. 'Arise, dear father,' said she, 'for if we are caught, we shall both be slain'."

And thereupon Thoas and Hypsipyle, his daughter, arose and came away from the town by secluded paths, till they reached the battlefield, and they were watching it in concealment. And they saw husbands prostrate and foully mangled in their beds. slain by their own wives through Venus instigating them, and the red gory swords through their skins, and the spears quite broken through them, so that the beautiful banqueting cups were swimming on the huge pools of blood that lay there owing to the vastness of the slaughter. For there lay old men bled to death, young men slaughtered, and lads destroyed. And Hypsipyle saw thrice an apparition of Bacchus seeking his son Thoas, to wit, her own father, and she recognised Bacchus there. And Bacchus said to them: "Take thy departure, my son," said he, "and leave the isle of Lemnos, seeing the gods deem the time thou dost possess the isle long enough. And, daughter," said he, "take thy father with thee, and put him into his boat where the wall goes out into the great sea, and I shall bring him aid thereafter." Bacchus departed and left a way-mark for them, and they went forward on the way, and the maiden put her father on the sea, and they were weeping together till morning. And the maiden came back from him, and continued often to look behind her at her father

And when day came with its full splendour, the women of the isle of Lemnos saw those evils that they themselves had wrought, to wit, that their husbands were slain, and they repented of that, and came, and continued weeping and wailing over them.

But that isle up to that point was rich and prosperous in men, arms, and treasures; and only those women remained thenceforth with no tillage, husbandry, ploughing, or reaping; [and] with no kind husbands to protect it.

As regards Hypsipyle, however, she made a sacrificial fire in her father's house, and showed her father's arms and vestures. And the king's blood-stained sword was in her hand, as if it were so that she had just slain and buried her father. And the land of her father was then given her, to wit, the sovereignty of all the isle of Lemnos. Often did she and Polyxo remember that crime, and they used to be sad and silent, as they recounted it between them.

And when the women of the isle of Lemnos were in that state for their husbands, they saw the well-manned very great ship, like to an isle of the sea spaces, or like a broad very great mountain in size. And there was she, the long-prowed, scald-swift, foremost ship of the world, to wit, Argo, with the profoundly reckless bright-armoured Greek kingfolk on board, as they went in quest of the golden fleece to the land of Colchis. And when they had desisted from their rowing, and the sea was in a calm, "We heard," said Hypsipyle, "the voice of one man from the ship, and it was he that was there, to wit, melodious Orpheus, a harper, son of Oeager, with his shoulder against the mast as he made music to the crew of the ship, so that the fatigue of the noble hosts in toiling at the oar might be the less; and we thought it probable that they were the people of Thrace come to sack the isle of Lemnos upon us.

"And thereupon arose a shouting and a great tumult in the houses of the isle of Lemnos. And after that we went into very high large towers and strong bastions of planking above the city. And the bold and shaking women of the isle of Lemnos collected the hard missile stones, the long very sharp stakes, and the heavy sad arms of their own husbands whom they had previously slain, and they seized their deep-red bloody swords in their hands, and put their flaming foul linked corslets about their bodies, and their beautiful battle-helmets on their heads. And indeed we thought it probable that it was a huge hideous sea-monster that was there in order to requite and avenge upon us our wrongdoing and injustice, and that it was not a wellmanned very beautiful ship. But then arose a withe-twisting noisy wind, so that it drove that ship the shot of a long blue arrow away from land and shore. And then the dank misty clouds of the firmament were mingled together, so that there was a thick darkness between sea and land, and the mighty huge waves lifted up the ship above them, and at another time let her sink down to gravel and silvery red sand below. And though those heroes that were in that ship were vigorous and resolute, they were incapable of defence or deeds of prowess at that time owing to the strength of the great tempest. And the exceeding long and great mast of that ship was swiftly oscillating and nigh to breaking owing to its size and stately height as it rose and fell before the violence of that whirlwind at that time. And we also were shooting at and putting from us that ship from another side, so that we kept hurling very sharp naked arms against those soldiers, to wit, the resolute champion Telamon, and Peleus son of Aeacus, and Hercules son of Amphitryon. And vast was the labour of that good ship owing to the tempest of the sea and our fighting on the other side. And some of those goodly hosts were strengthening and defending their ship with tortoises of shields around them, others baling and emptying her bilge water out of her hold, while others fought boldly and bravely above their heads. And confused showers of hard arms were thrown by both sides there, so that like hard showers of hail in a rough winter season were the sharp-edged huge darts, the round easily hurled stones, the polished well-shot arrows. and the flaming full-sharp spears mingled with one another at that time.

"And thereafter bright and beautiful sunbeams and a ruddiness of great light arose, so that the hosts that were on board the ship became plain and distinct to us. And when we saw them in that guise, our arms fell from our hands, and our own foolish feminine nature came to us. And we saw in sooth there Peleus son of Aeacus, and great Telamon son of Ajax, keen and menacing Ancaeus, and comely dexterous Iphitus. And distinguished above those high-bred hosts was the slaughter-hound of the world's prowess, Hercules son of Amphitryon. He used to strain there every plank and every side of the ship whence he came with the boiling of exceeding rage as he made for the hosts. And also Jason, son of Aeson, was vigorous and robust in that ship, and Oenides reckless and high-spirited, and Idas gallant and renowned, and Talaus resolute and steadfast, and two keen and chosen sons of Tyndareus, to wit, Castor and Pollux, and two lively furious sons of Boreas, Zetes and Calais, and those were some of the goodly men of that ship.

"Now they continued in that manner in a spray rowing of the sea, and in dashing the drift from them. And also the composed and very skilful pilot was on board, to wit, Tiphys, steering that ship, so as not to let her be wrecked on the roughheaded rocks of the tempestuous sea. And they remained in that extremity, till uprose Jason, son of Aeson, with a beautiful olive-branch in his hand as a sign of peace—and it used to be in the hand of Mopsus, leader of his people—and he was asking peace from us.

"Howbeit, what Jason said had no weight with the crew of the ship. And we heard nothing save the strident sound of his voice coming to us against the wind. And then uprose fifty of the keenest and strongest champions in the ship, and grasped the huge red oars in their hands, and they rowed that ship boldly manly to the haven of a shore harbour. Very lovely to look upon at that particular time were the bright-cheeked countenances of those hardy heroes owing to the violence of the rowing and owing to the boiling of the very great rage that arose in them. That host seemed to us as if they were noble worshipful gods that should go to the very bright citadels of heaven from the earth.

"And there we saw Theseus, son of Aegeus, son of Neptune, rising out of the ship, and proud was that good hero after the sacking of the city, to wit, Marathon (sic); and we also saw there the noble king Admetus, and the melodious harper of Thrace, to wit, Orpheus; and there also was the soldier Meleager, son of the king of Calydon, and Peleus son of Aeacus, and Hyllus son of Hercules with arms in his hand.

"Well," said she, "the doors of our houses were opened by us to those bands. And no sacrifices had been offered, no sleep or rest enjoyed by us since we slew our men until that hour. And each man of them began choosing whom to woo from among all there were of us. Yet I swear by the gods there was no consent or plan on my own part to marry Jason that night, though he was comely and lovely to other women. And they remained with us to the end of an entire year in that island, till fine well-born children were born to them. And I bore there to Jason son of Aeson two sons, to wit, Thoas and Euneos are their names. Yet I know not their rank or their fate, for it is twenty years now since I left them to be reared and nurtured with the white-handed queen Lycaste. Now at the end of that year Jason began to press his people about leaving the island, when he saw the sea silent and calm. And though he promised to come again to me in the isle of Lemnos, he did not keep that promise.

"Well, when Tiphys, pilot of that ship, perceived that the sun-rays shone bright, he got ready his ship's gen, and the hosts arose together, and Jason took his weapons before everyone there, and thus they left the island. We remained waiting for them and keenly gazing for them, till our moisture went from our eves with continual looking for them.

"Now thereafter the women of the isle of Lemnos heard that my father was in the kingship of the isle of Chios, the isle of his brother, to wit, Chios, son of Bacchus; and they resented it that he had not been slain and destroyed by me, as they themselves had slain their husbands and their fathers, and it was decided by them that I should be slain therefor. When I heard that, however," said she, "I escaped from them alone to the sea side; and when I found no one to show me the way to my father Thoas, I was brought in bondage and in distress unto your territory, O Greeks."

When Hypsipyle was thus conversing with the noble king Adrastus, it escaped her notice that her fair and beautiful fosterling was left behind her in the wood. And when she went to search for water with the Greeks, and therefore left that little boy there, his erewhile drowsy slumber fell upon him in the midst of the grass and the oats. And while he was there, a horrible baleful serpent came towards him. That serpent was such that very large dark-green eyes were in its head with a foam of poison. The muzzle of its gullet was with three fiery tongues gleaming about its lower jaw, and three rows of crooked, hard and sharp teeth in its head. That serpent was sacred to Jove and there it used to sleep at times round about those beautiful consecrated temples that were near it. And it used to move the huge oaks from their place and position and the firm stones from their earth-fastnesses when it arose. And it came forward in search of water keenly madly with its hideous gullet opened wide, at one time sucking in a breeze of air, at another however eating the grass and oats to quench its thirst. And, all unknown to it, it struck that young boy with a stroke of its tail, and left him lifeless.

Now when Hypsipyle heard the scream of the dying boy, she arose to seek him, and continued to call him. Since she did not find him but saw the serpent, she shrieked and cried till all the Greeks heard the maiden's weeping. Then the young king of Arcadia, to wit, Parthenopaeus, urged his horses towards the cry, after he had been told by Adrastus the high-king. And when he had heard the reason for the lamentation, he told the others; and when he had done so, lofty splendid Hippomedon took a wellproportioned close-grained stone from its earth-fastnesses, and made a cast of a throw at the serpent. Yet that only caused it to start. But after that Capaneus came to encounterit with a thonged well-casting spear in his hand, and said to it: "The cast just now will not be similar," said he. "The gods of heaven cannot prevent my slaving thee." And he hurled the javelin at it after that, so that the dart struck it and pierced its breast and entrails, and it fell dead and lifeless. Jove, however, was wroth at that thing, to wit, that the serpent was slain by Capaneus, and he made ready to launch a fiery thunderbolt at him there, and yet again in turn he restrained himself from that.

As to Hypsipyle, whilst she was seeking the boy, she beheld the grass bedewed and crimson with the infant's blood, and she came to him sadly, eagerly, dejectedly, and continued to kiss the boy. Yet his form and hue were changed at that time, so that it was not easy to recognise his body after its cruel mangling by the activity of the serpent's venom. And thus did she remain about him there, like a bird fluttering about a nest after it has been destroyed about her by a serpent; and she took him into her bosom. She cleansed the wounds of his skin with her long and very beautiful hair, and she lifted up her cry of true weeping, and this is what she said : "Sad is that, O beloved Archemorus," said she, "thou wert dearest to me, and a child to me after the loss of my sons, and a comfort after the loss of my fatherland. And son," said she, " where is the clear bright-cheeked countenance and the laughing-voiced words that were thine, that no other mortals could understand save me by constant custom ? Now alas! sad is the journey whereon I went from thee when I forgot thee. And Greeks," said she, "slav me that I may not see this boy's father Lycurgus, or his mother Eurydice, for I am her foe after her son's being destroyed in my keeping; and indeed sooner may I be buried than place her son like this in her bosom."

But these tidings were heard immediately at the broad spacious houses of Lycurgus, that boy's father. And thus he was, even after offering sacrifices in mount Perses; and this was told him there that the first man that would be slain by Greeks in the Theban war would be of his people. Hence he came sadly and hastily unto the hosts, when he heard the beautiful wartrumpets sounding.

Now as for Hypsipyle when she was continuing to carry the dead boy about with her, his mother met her face to face with fair-headed bright-bodied bands of women in her train, and multitudes of a goodly host mourning that boy. As for Lycurgus, however, he was in wrath and frenzy when that tale came to him; and he came forward impetuously and madly, and said : "What," said he, "is the woman in whose hand my son was?

and give ve over to me, O men," said he, "the sinful furious one that she may be slain for the guilt to my son." And the moment he said that, he approached her with a drawn sword in his hand. Then the serpentine tireless hero, to wit, Tydeus son of Oeneus, put his shield to protect the maiden, and said : "Madman." said he, "leave alone the misdeed you attempt." And after that there arrived Capaneus, Hippomedon, and Parthenopaeus son of Erymanthus, with their drawn swords in their hands, and they closed round Lycurgus to slay and destroy him, if he should use violence to them with regard to the maiden. Then arose Lycurgus' people to do battle with Greeks, and the high-king Adrastus was restraining and keeping them apart. Amphiaraus, the priest, also said : "Leave off, O men," said he, "your fury and your fighting, for close is your affinity and relationship." Now Tydeus, son of Oeneus, did not wish to hinder the strife, and this is what he said: "What you attempt is bold of you, Lycurgus," said he, "to wit, to kill the woman under our safeguard and protection. But it is enough for you to remain behind us in ease and quict, weeping for your son, while we are contending with the Thebans." Now Lycurgus answered him, and this is what he said: "Indeed I did not know," said he, "that ye were troops of foes to sack Thebes. And if ye will then, destroy me; for I am not in numbers to meet you." And thus was he as he said that, cherishing great malice and anger. And he continued looking forth at his city, till he heard the gathering of battle and strife over in the city. There were reported to be there cavalry of a picked body of Greeks sacking that house of Lycurgus, for that was reported in the stronghold that evils and acts of injustice had been done to the hosts without by Lycurgus. And thereupon the Greeks who were over in the city arose with quick and flaming torches in their hands to burn Lycurgus' house, and to bear him away with them along with their beautiful altars for worship into bondage and distress. The house of that hero indeed was troubled with weeping and shrill crying of women and children being destroyed therein. Then, however, came the noble king Adrastus, and raised up Hypsipyle in presence of the host, and said : "Let your fits of wrath and fury be abated, O men," said he, " and let no evil be done to Lycurgus by you; for here is the woman, who gave you the water, safe and unwounded." Now the appearance of the Greek host at that time was like a wild and strong sea with the rough withe-twisting withe-breaking winds commingling and disturbing it, so that the ship-covered very huge main appeared on every hand as a rough winter tempest, until the noble honourable king, to wit, Neptune, arose to put it to silence and calm. And when the Greeks were in that state. then came the two sons of Hypsipyle and Jason son of Aeson from the isle of Lemnos after their mother to Lycurgus' house. And it was told to Lycurgus that these two had arrived at his house, to wit, the two sons of Hypsipyle. And they came forthwith to aid and succour Lycurgus, without being known or recognised. And when they heard the tale of the isle of Lemnos and Hypsipyle daughter of Thoas, they sundered the noble puissant hosts, until they reached the place in which their mother was, and closed their swiftly-locked arms about her. But when she saw the battle-weeds and the blazon of their father on their beautiful huge shields, and their naked weapons in their hands, she fell down there weakly and feebly owing to the excess of joy she felt in seeing those boys, and quick showers of tears dripped down her cheeks.

As for the Greeks, however, they let their angry feelings fall to the ground, and the noble king and priest Amphiaraus spoke and said: "Listen to me, ye troops of Greeks, and thou Lycurgus, till I relate to you what the god of prophecy, to wit, Apollo, has told me, that ye, O Greeks, would find these baleful signs in the course of your way in going on this journey. Wherefore it behoves you to restrain your feelings of wrath, to lay aside your arms, and to celebrate many noble sacrifices and pleasant joyous games in honour of this dead boy Archemorus, son of Lycurgus, that these may remain to the last of time and the end of the world. It was heard moreover throughout the cities of green-meadowed Greece that the Greeks were celebrating funeral games in honour and respect for the son of Lycurgus. And the first by whom the like of those games had ever been held was Hercules son of Amphitryon in honour of Pelops son of Tantalus.

Now when the light of rising time had come on the morrow, and the bright gay sun had risen, a blood-red mass, beyond earth's border edge, and his pure bright rays had gleamed over the human dwellings of the earth, the hosts both on this side and on that arose, so that the bosky woods of the forests of Nemea were sounding with the tumult and uproar of those hosts as they arose to celebrate those funeral games. Lycurgus, moreover, was on his throne, his consort Eurydice by his side, and bands of women troubled and wildly wailing were along with her, bewailing her son. At that time heroes, battle-soldiers, and champions of the Greeks cried aloud with them in the royal spacious houses of Lycurgus; and though the Greeks wept for that boy, they perceived that they were greatly hated by the people of the town. Then Adrastus, high-king of the Greeks, · began encouraging Lycurgus to cease his sadness and his sorrow. But he heard him not in that owing to the tempest of his grief and the boiling of his wrath. And thereafter by them was arranged for that boy a pyre of fine cypress-wood and other green twigs, and of bright-blossomed fragrant herbs that would permit no corruption or decay in the bodies round which they were placed, to wit, cinnamon, balsam, myrrh, and frankincense.

And beautiful bright purple garments of the land of the Syrians were spread over him outside his exterior, with many an ornament of beautiful golden thread and of round carbuncle gens. And then his father ordered the beautiful armour suited to that little boy, and the war-spoil armour of his grandfather to be brought to that corse in order to be sacrificed and burnt with it. For this was their custom then to burn honoured corses, and to offer them in sacrifice to the adored gods.

Then arose the very skilful wizard Amphiaraus, and all the Greeks of the other side; and by them a bright blazing-sided fire was laid, so that the thick impassable woods became easily passable firm places, and level roads behind them. And when that fire had been completed by them, altars were placed by them to the fresh bright gods of heaven and the horrible gods of hell, and great-hollowed sweet-noted whistles were blown to every part and to every side of them. And seven kings of Greece arose with Lycurgus to celebrate that mourning.

Along with the boy's mother, to wit, Eurydice, female womanly bands arose, and troops of common people about her, to wit, his nurse, and along with that little boy's nurse was Hypsipyle and along with her his two foster-brothers, the two sons of Jason, son of Aeson. But when Eurydice, the boy's mother, came out at the gate of the town, she spoke with a loud voice, and this is what she said: "Son," said she, "this is not a fate for thee that I can endure. And it is sad for me entrusting thee for thine upbringing and nurture to a treacherous perfidious woman of the people of the isle of Lemnos! And Greeks," said she, "do not any longer spend your wealth and treasures in the festive fires of this sacrifice, but let the woman in whose charge the boy was destroyed, to wit, Hypsipyle, be burnt by you, and let me be burnt along with her."

And when she had finished saying that, Lycurgus arose and laid aside his weeds and his noble sacrificial robe, and he shore his hair, and put them both together into the fire as a mark of sorrow and dejection, and this is what he said: "O Jove," said he, "perfidious hast thou been to me in letting my son be slain, for I was a noble sacrificing priest to thee even till to-day." of the sacrificial fire, and it was difficult for the Greeks to hold back Lycurgus and his spouse from going to be burnt in that fire. It was vast at that time, and resounding were the precious stones as they were being burned in it, and pure white molten silver, and gold dripping from royal very beautiful garments, and wine and blood boiling in fine strong vessels.

Then seven troops of Greek-cavalry arose round their seven spirited kings, and held three horse-races round those fires. They smote their palms, and breasts and bosoms were beaten there, and flocks and herds were sacrificed in order to seek knowledge and guidance, as was their custom. Now that day was spent by them in the contention of those games, until the flaming-sided fires were very fine burnt out ashes at the beginning of the night. In the morning on the morrow all arose, and by them was made a far-seen magnificent temple about the ashes of the body of that boy, to wit, Archemorus; and it was finished by them at the end of nine days and nine nights. Carved and set in order on the sides of that temple were, to wit, the figure of Hypsipyle searching for water for the Greeks when they were athirst aforetime; and the figure of Archemorus and of the serpent which killed him, and the figure of the spear of Capaneus wherewith he slew the serpent.

Now when they had finished doing that labour, there came bent and aged seniors, very small sportive youths, and idle and sluggish common people to celebrate a fair in honour of that boy along with picked Greek soldiers. And the place of the fair was, to wit, a green grassy smooth glen with bosky very bright woods around it between two round hills of equal height, and the valorous warlike troops of the Greeks sat down there at daybreak day by day. And they each numbered their forces there, and when they had done so, there were brought them a hundred handsome goodly fat cows and the same number of bulls of the same age and colour as they. And after that there were brought them the carved very beautiful figures of their fathers and their grandfathers to delight their nature in the fair. And first there were started by them swift, well-running, beautifully bridled, quiet, massed together, well-coursing steeds over the smooth level plains of that fair. Now this is the first horse that was brought there, to wit, Arion, the pleasing foreign horse of the high-king Adrastus. Distinguished indeed was the appearance of that horse, to wit, a blue-grey, excellent, thick-shouldered, warlike, prick-eared, quiet, gentle, well-coursed white mare, with a fair bright purple mane, and a tail of equal weight and colour, of the original stock of the horse of Neptune, god of the sea; for indifferently it could traverse sea and land. And it did not deign to let any other mount it save only Adrastus the high-king. And yet he gave it that day for the fair to Polynices, his son-in-law, saying: "Do not strike thy horse often, lad," said he, "but urge others, seeing that is enough of urging for it, and it will course the plain as coursed the horses of the sun, Phaethon's, son of Apollo."

And then arose Amphiaraus, the great priest of Greece, for the same contest, with two beautiful pure-white horses under him. with trappings of the same colour about him, as a sign of his priesthood, and those horses were of the seed of the horse of Castor, to wit, Cyllarus. And after that arose Admetus, chief of Thessaly, with bold, swift, well-running mares before him, and they were beautiful and dappled. And next to those were the two sons of Jason son of Aeson, and of Hypsipyle, to wit, Thoas and Euneos; and alike indeed were the figures of those twain both as to arms, horses, and garments. After those came there Chromis and Hippodamus. Now Chromis was of the seed of Hercules, son of Amphitryon; and Hippodamus of the seed of Oenomaus, king of Pisa; and none of those was urging his horses past another. And the horses of Diomede, king of the Thracians, were under Chromis, and that is the Diomede that used to give his guests to his horses that they might kill and eat them, till Hercules arrived as a guest at his house, and Hercules gave (Diomede) himself to them, and they killed him. Hippodamus moreover had under him the horses of his father, to wit, Oenomaus. It was this Oenomaus who used to impose a horse-race on every man that came to ask his daughter of him; and when his own horses got the better of them, those people were killed by him forthwith. And the horses were thus. They had a drop of the blood of the men that had been killed by them on their chariot as a sign of victory. Now by them was set there the goal and mark to which they should direct their horses—a broadstemmed bare-topped oak which stood at the end of the plain and a great strong earth-bound stone in another direction there, and the space of four shots of a long blue arrow between them.

Now this is the time when Apollo, son of Jove, was ever playing his harp, and he was on the top of mount Parnassus lauding the gods. And he saw in the distance the Greeks upon the great smooth plain on which they were: and he was able to recognise each of them apart, and he saw there Admetus king of the Thessalians, and Amphiaraus the noble priest, and those twain were indeed intimate friends to him. For he had been a flock shepherd to one of them, to wit, Admetus, when he had been divested of his godhead; and Amphiaraus was a noble sacrificing priest to him. And when he was so gazing, this is what he said: "Who in the world," said he, "is the god that has urged these two friends of mine to the war against Thebes? And yet I have a partiality of love for these two, for Admetus king of Thessalv is lord and original friend. Amphiaraus, however, himself knows everything of misfortune that will arise thereagent." And hardly had he said that when swift showers of tears broke over his cheeks; and he came like a thunderbolt or like arrow from string till he reached the wood of Nemea.

At that time Prothous was casting a lot in his helmet about their places in the race, and they were placed in that way. Now men and horses were in great eagerness and haste about the race. It was a great thing indeed to listen to the neighings and pantings of those horses, and their curvettings to the sounds of the bridles holding them in. And thereafter at the same time and moment they were let go for their course. Close and energetic indeed was the pace there, and none of them was noticeable or distinguished above another owing to the speed and swiftness with which they went away. And those crowds were all concealed by the darkened and mingled faces that emerged owing to the river-sweat of the course, the dust of the wheels, the breaths of the horses and of the heroes contending for first place in the race. and bemudded by the white showers of foam that dripped down from the jaws of the horses as they jingled their bridle-bits at that time. And the firmament then echoed owing to the contending heroes urging on the beautiful foreign steeds.

Now Arion, to wit, Adrastus' horse, then perceived that a gentle strange rider, to wit, Polynices, was mounted on it, and impetuosity, madness, and restiveness seized it, and it kept looking for its own master, and searching for him throughout the great vast plain. And though it was so doing, it went a shot of a long blue arrow away from the bright and beautiful steeds of the Greeks. Amphiaraus, however, was next to Arion and it was far between them, and behind him was the Thessalian rider, to wit, Admetus. And those that were next to him again were the two sons of Jason, Euneos and Thoas, and neither of these urged their horses past the other in order to fulfil their friendship. Fierce Chromis, however, and senseless Hippodamus were last, and the reason for that was the weight of those soldiers for their horses to carry. As for Amphiaraus, he hit upon a short-cut of the way to reach first place, and it was the same thing that Admetus king of Thessaly did, and vain was that rider, for indifferently he used to cling to the side and to the back of his horse. As for Arion, the horse that was under Polynices, she was swift and erratic, for it was not possible to steady her, until Amphiaraus had taken away the lead. And it was Admetus that was next to him until Arion, Adrastus' horse, turned again on the track of the way. Yet Polynices was neither urging his horse nor holding her in, but lay at that time in stupor and weakness at the bottom of the chariot.

It was then that those swift and mettled horses again left the tracks of their race, and went astray from the way, and brought their beautiful shapely chariots in collision with others and one another. And yet the heroes were not satisfied with urging their horses with sharp iron spurs until they had done so with loud voices and by their own proper names. Now Admetus urged there Pholoe and Iris, his two horses. Amphiaraus, again, urged coloured well-running Aschetos, and gleaming white thickshouldered Cygnus. Moreover Chromis urged Strymon. was under Euneos, son of Jason. Hippodamus, again, urged Cydon. Thoas son of Jason urged Podarces. Polynices did not speak to the horse that was under him, to wit, Arion, for he did not dare that his voice should be heard by her. And victory was long doubtful there among the horses.

Well, it was then that Thoas son of Jason held Admetus king of Thessaly, when he was going past him, and Euneos his brother brought him no succour, for fresh, bright-cheeked Hippodamus urged his horses between them. Chromis son of Hercules, again, gave a violent check to Hippodamus after the rest, so that the bridle-pieces of his horses became stretched and his chariot was broken. And when Hippodamus' chariot was thus broken, his horses turned upon him forthwith to eat him, for he was lying, as it was their custom previously to eat men. And when the brave champion Chromis saw that he abandoned his victory in the race, and turned to Hippodamus, and saved him from his horses.

Now Apollo came there to succour and help Amphiaraus, in order to give him victory in the race. And this is the thing he did, to fashion and make a very hideous bearded monster there in the midst of the fair, so that the awful hags of hell would conceive horror and fear at it. Now when Arion saw that thing, horror and terror seized her at it so that her mane rose stiffly lastingly rough over her shoulder, and she dragged her chariot with her and the other horse that was yoked to it, and Polynices fell out of the chariot, and lay broken and confused in the midst of the fair behind them. And he lay in that position till the chariot of Amphiaraus the priest, and the chariot of Admetus king of the Thessalians, and all the people of the race had gone. After that he raised his head feebly and weakly, and rose to view the race.

Then Amphiaraus essayed to gain first place from frightened very swift Arion, though she was now riderless, and he urged on his horses after her so that his speed and quickness were as swift as a grey cold blast of wind in a rough winter season. He followed her till there was none before him, and there would have been a lead to the horses of Amphiaraus rather than to Arion. had not Neptune, the god of the sea, urged that horse till the first place of the race was hers; and though Arion, to wit, the horse of Adrastus there, was first, Amphiaraus was victorious. Now the high-king Adrastus gave a gift of precious things and wealth to Amphiaraus, to wit, to the great priest, for bearing away victory in that race, to wit, a beautiful gold cup from which Hercules, son of Amphitryon, used to drink draughts of wine : and carved thereon were figures of the contentious Centaurs and the very brave Lapithae, and a figure of Marsepia queen of the Amazons, from whom Hercules took the wonderful weapons, to wit, in the case of every king who used to see them in forefront of battle, blood used to rush from his mouth and nose, stupor and weakness, flight and fear would come to the foreign hosts who used to see them, causing war among themselves : and a figure of all the battle victories which Hercules won throughout the world. And, again, to Admetus, chief of Thessaly, was given a beautiful bright purple mantle with figures in it manifold, fashioned of gold thread. And when Adrastus had given those gifts to those people as a sign of their victory, he was comforting his son-in-law, and gave him a captive female slave.

And thereafter Adrastus encouraged some of the hosts of foot to a contest in running in his presence. He was answered in that matter. And Idas uprose before the rest, and thus was he with a crown upon his head for victory in a race which he had won in mount Olympus; and these were his hosts, the people of Pisa and Elis, to wit, of those cities. After him, moreover, arose brave and victorious Alcon from Sicyon. After him arose Phaedimus. That man was twice victorious in a race on the strand of Isthmos. Dymas arose, whom horses could not excel in races when he was young, but already he was aged there. Parthenopaeus (or Parthanap), king of Arcadia, also arose, and the hosts of the fair were joyous at that youth; and indeed good running was hereditary to him from his mother, to wit, Atalanta; and the suppleness of that man was such as to catch the swift well-running deer by speed and sheer running; and the missile he used to cast before ahead of him, he used to perform feats in front of it before it could reach earth. And there he undid the beautiful gold pin that was in his fair fringed mantle, and he put it from him, and the white-hued goodly fashioned body of the goodly hero was reddened with oil; and Idas and Dymas also were reddened in the same way; and Idas was the most distinguished as to form in that contest, save Parthenopaeus alone, and Idas was older than Parthenopaeus. Now those men were testing their suppleness before they should make their struggle; and when the sign for racing was arranged with them, they ran abreast with equal suppleness, until they separated each of them past another, and Parthenopaeus won first place from them all at that time, and as swift as a blast of winter wind was the flight and speed [with which] he bore away from every one. And active dreadful Idas was next to him, Phaedimus and Dymas next to him, and it was a short space between them. Active was Alcon, moreover, behind those men. Now thus was Parthenopaeus there with his rippling distinguished hair loosely outspread over his shoulder away behind. And when Idas perceived the goal of the race near him, and Parthenopaeus going away from him unto it, this is what he did, he stretched forth his hand, and grasped the root of that long fair yellow hair, and threw him down towards him backwards.

But when the Arcadians saw that, they arose and made for Idas to slay him, and the hosts of Pisa and Elis arose to attend upon him, and hence the fair was confused and troubled, and they essayed to trouble the whole fair greatly. And when Adrastus the high-king heard that, he arose to check the affray, and this is what he said: "Let your angry feelings be calmed, O men," said he, "and stop your conflict, and let the race be repeated, and be not ye allowed in close proximity. Let none of you practise guile on his fellow."

Now that done by them, and Parthenopaeus bore away the victory in the race the second time, and it was like as if he did not touch the earth owing to the speed with which he ran.

When that ceased, precious things and wealth were given them as a reward of their victories, to wit, a lovely horse to Parthenopaeus, a beautiful lime-white shield to wicked Idas, and an arrow to all the rest.

And after that it was essayed by them to perform the game of the discus, to wit, a plate game. And thus that game was performed, a great huge plate of iron or brass on iron supports in their hands, and to whirl it round and cast it into upper regions of air and firmament; and unless it were caught again by the same support, it would kill and destroy every one that was under it.

Then Adrastus ordered Pterelas to arise for that game. Accordingly he arose and sent away the plate manfully and very high, and the Greeks stood for a long time looking at it. And these are they that arose to attend to it after that, to wit, two from Achaia, and three from Ephyre, one from Pisa, and one of the seven was Acarnan. Moreover after that arose bright-cheeked Hippomedon with another great huge plate in his hand, and this is what he said : "Youths," said he, "take this great plate in your hands, for to lift it and lower it is a greater feat of strength than anything ye attempt, and it will be a battering ram on coming to the city ve make for, to wit, Thebes." And after that he hurled it, and there remained none to await it along with the Greeks save Phlegyas and Menestheus from Athens (2), for they were afraid of the impact and weight of that plate owing to its size. And nevertheless brave and contentious Phlegyas attended to the plate after that. He projected the plate, and sent it aloft, so that it was not visible among the showery very great clouds of the firmament owing to the height he hurled it, till it took its course downwards after that unto earth and deep therein. And the Greeks were praising that lad greatly at that time. And that man attempted again to hurl it, and he could not; for it fell from him without his power or permission. Menestheus arose after that, and hurled it dexterously and high. Hippomedon, however, caught it after that; and higher did he hurl it again than any man ever did before him.

And when those games were finished, a glossy tiger's skin having round about upon it a fringe of red gold, was given to Hippomedon and a rough bent Cretan bow was given to Menestheus: also a broad full-sharp sword that had belonged to langer ac Pilasceius ac senathair¹ Adraist do Plieigias, luag a ^{Theb.} 2500 cluichi mesi².

Pelasgus, Adrastus' grandfather, was given to Phlegyas as a reward for their discus play.

And the heroes were not strong for celebrating the game of cestus at that time, except Capaneus, who, as an awful baleful arch of war, was asking of the hosts that one of them should rise against him, with his bull-hide gloves for an affray on his hands with very long thongs from the points of his fingers, and fullheavy masses of lead on the ends of these. And this is what he said : "Let one hero of you, O men," said he, "come against me at the cestus game, and I should prefer that it were a champion of the Thebans that should then come, for he would fall by me at this time." A great silence was that for the Greeks, and vast dismay seized them before him; and yet a very young Spartan hero, to wit, Alcidamas, rose to oppose him. Now amazement was on the Greeks that he should rise, for he was young as regards age, though he was expert in prowess; and Pollux was that lad's instructor in prowess and in the game of cestus. When Capaneus saw him approaching, he greatly grumbled at him, and was laughing and jeering at him, and asking another man along with him to oppose him. Not to fear or to flight did that move Alcidamas; but he became angry manfully and very fiercely at Capaneus till they raised very brave hands like emblazoned bright thunderbolts, each to strike the other's body. The Greeks had misgivings that the youth Alcidamas would die there, for vast was the size and fury of the soldier that was opposed to him, to wit, Capaneus; for no hero on earth was so big as that champion.

Alcidamas, on the other hand, was cautiously and very shrewdly waiting for him. But he attacked the youth fiercely ruthlessly and compassed him about as honeysuckle encompasses woods, or as a great huge sea wave encompasses rocks of a haven and harbour. Alcidamas provided for and attended to that, and no blow went from him in over-confidence or vacuity without striking Capaneus on the top of the head or the front part of his face, so that his hair and his face were crimson and covered with blood. Then Capaneus became maddened like a wildly mangling lion, and he began to pull down Alcidamas and lay him low with great martial lethal blows. Vain indeed was that for him, for Alcidamas defended himself so that no wound or full fracture reached him ; and thus they remained for a long time, till they fell upon their fair bended knees owing to the fatigue of their mutual smiting. And yet each of them arose again and approached his fellow, and as they were rising, Alcidamas dealt a cestus blow at Capaneus, so that he fell with the top of his crown towards ground and teeming earth, and as he was rising, he struck him again, and the hosts should as they saw that deed. Capaneus, however, rose again fiercely and dreadfully to avenge that on Alcidamas. And when Adrastus saw that thing, he said : "Men," said he, "let the soldiers be separated by you before either of them fall by the other in unhappy conflict, and let precious things and wealth be given by you to Capaneus to appease his wrath." Then Tydeus and Hippomedon arose to separate them. It was difficult, indeed, to sunder those twain, owing to the extent of the very great anger that waxed in them : and they said to Capaneus : "Allay thine anger," said they, "O king, and vouchsafe a grant of quarter from thee to this young lad, for ours is the pilotage of this hero." Capaneus, on the other hand, could not, and he said : "Men," said he, " how shall I let off the young lad, who has contrived to bring trouble and hardship upon me, without taking ample vengeance on him ?" And yet his people brought him with them, and thus separated them; and the people of Alcidamas uttered jeers of laughter at Capaneus.

And when that game was finished, Tydeus son of Oeneus arose, and challenged the hosts to wrestling and a fall there. And he that rose to oppose him was Agylleus son of Hercules, and that soldier was in size and courage as huge as Hercules son of Amphitryon, for he was of his seed. As for Tydeus, however, he was thus—a man low, stout, bull-like, strong, brave, dexterous, bold, ruthless. He was strong and contemptuous towards every one that chanced to oppose him.

And smooth mixed oil was applied to his body at that time, and he arose to approach Agylleus. Then each of them closed his Aigeleus hands and arms over the other, so that like a mast of a great principal ship, or a very lofty oak over very small saplings of a wood was Agylleus above Tydeus then, while pulling down and overthrowing him. Yet though Tydeus was smaller, he was keener and more resolute at that time, so that he pressed in Agylleus and controlled him, and threw him to ground and teeming earth. After that he tied and bound him in presence of all the Greeks; and thereupon gifts to mark his victory were given him. He was talking big and in self-complacency on the score of them, and he gave them to his people. And on Agylleus' arising quickly and weakly from his fetter, Adrastus gave him a very heavy corslet of iron as a reward to emphasise his game.

And after that two of them arose to play with very sharp quite naked weapons, to wit, Agreus of Epidaurus, and Polynices son of Oedipus. But the high-king Adrastus restrained them, and said : "Do no fighting, O men," said he, "United the fray of "Machee come, for ye shall get your fill of fighting and conflict therein." And thus they were restrained.

Then the chiefs of the Greeks told the high-king Adrastus to do his part of the games, so that the honour to the sepulture might be the greater. "It shall be done !" said he, and he arose. This is what he did, he shot an arrow of his bow of yew strongly and very bravely, so that it went from him for a space, and as it was going at its strongest, it turned actively and quickly back to the king who shot it. And that was with them a figure of prophecy, for from that it was understood that Adrastus alone should return from the war of Thebes, and arrive back at the confines of Greece.

So that it is the mourning for Archemorus and his funeral games thus far.

BOOK VII

Now when those funeral games were ended, Adrastus poured wine upon the grave, and he was praising the lad as a noble god to be worshipped, and this is what he said: "Son," said he, "offerings like these will be made to thee by all Greeks every uili gacha bliadna duid-seo, γ da tæt¹ lindi tigi na Tebi tret ^{Theb.} vil chumachta-su, bidid mo honoir² idbarta aris acaindi." year, and if the houses of Thebes fall by us through thy power, we shall have greater honour in sacrificing again." And that is what all Greeks would have wished to say.

That, however, was the time and hour when great anxiety was in the mind of Jove son of Saturn, for he felt it irksome that the Greeks should stay away from the war, and then was brought his son Mercury to Jove, and this is what he said to him: "Arise," said he, "and go to Mars the god of war, and tell the Greeks to be kindled unto the war." And Mercury arose and arrived at the tumultuous houses of Mars, son of Jove, the god of battles and conflicts, and told him to put the Greeks and the Thebans at variance with one another.

Now Mars arose at that incitement, and advanced over the shores of the strand of Ephyre to the top of mount Acrocorinthus between the Ionian sea in the East and the Ægean in the West. Thence he scattered fear and dread, wrath and tumult through hosts of Greeks, so that their minds started at the crashing noise they heard in the firmament above their heads and at that awful baleful tale. And he shook his spears and his shields, and starkly struck his horses overhead above the hosts, so that importunity and lust of battle and conflict seized the heroes at that time owing to that incitement and exhortation which Mars son of Jove bestowed upon them.

But when Bacchus, son of Jove, god of wine, saw the Greeks in their companies of a goodly host lying down close on Thebes, a yell and \u03e5 great sigh were uttered aloud, and he came forward to Jove his father, and bowed down in his presence, and was asking of him help for the Thebans, and this is what he said : "It is ill ye do," said he, "O Jove, in promoting war against the Thebans and destroying their land upon them, seeing thou givest to every other god protection for the race that is hereditary to him, and ye do not give it to me. For Semele, daughter of the king of Thebes, is my mother, and I know it is Juno of many charms that makes thee to thwart me for that reason." E. 32^b 48

When Jove heard that, he smiled his laughing smile at his son, gave him kisses, and said to him: "Son," said he, "it is not fury or wrath that makes me promote this war. But prophets and wizards from the beginning of the world have decided that this cruel war of Thebes would be waged. And be not thou afraid, O Bacchus, to sack Thebes now, and surely they may deserve evil to be done them, for their wickedness is vast." Bacchus was exceeding glad at those tidings.

As to them thus far.

But as to the Thebans, a trusty messenger of his people reached Eteocles, king of Thebes, and related to him that the kingfolk of the Greeks with their hosts and allies were nigh to the greenswarded plains of Thebes. It was sad, however, and disconcerting to the Thebans, in every place they were, to hear those great tidings. Now unto Eteocles were assembled his hosts and allies, his battle-champions and his valorous heroes there on the greenswarded lawns of his castle and city.

The mustering and gathering of the Thebans here.

And every company of a goodly host sat down there round its chief and lord of those that came from Aonia, Euboea, Phocis, and from all the cities of the Thebans. Moreover, women, youths, and little folks arose and filled the walls of the city and other heights for assembling, as they viewed that host.

There also was the virgin of many charms, to wit, Antigone, the sister of Eteocles and Polynices, on a very high huge tower at a distance away from the wall of that city. For this was a custom they observed that hosts and multitudes should not see their maidens, till they were married. And visible to her there was the march of the hosts away over the plain, but she was not visible to them. And he that was in attendance on her then was aged very learned Phorbas, to wit, a favourite of her father and of her grandfather, and her foster-father. And she began asking of him: "Who are they at all, this very great army?" said she. "And I behold," said she, "the fine pure banners of bright purple Menoeceus and the cruel arms of victorious Creon." But Phorbas answered her, and said: "Dost thou see there," said he, "Dryas from the cold-sided hills of Tanagrae, from the frigid north zone, with 1000 archers in his train? And dost thou see a grandson of Neptune there with the figure of a trident on his arms? Yonder among the allies of Eteocles are heroes of the city of Ocalea, reckless soldiers of Medeon, fresh bright warriors of Nisa, and resolute champions of the citadel of Thisbe. And next to them is cruel victorious Eurymedon, son of Faunus, god of the woods-and it is he that succours and saves from every peril of woods—and the rich and prosperous hosts of Erythrae along with him, and the hosts that came from the city of Scolos, and from the citadel of Eteonos, and from the city of Hyle, and from the citadel of Schoenos. Sharp piercing javelins, and round bossy shields are theirs. And there also are the hordes of the citadel of Onchestos of the seed of Neptune, god of the sea, and it is he that roughens and calms the chill stormy sea. And there are the men that are from Mycalessos on the confines of Greece and the Thebans, and along the river Melas and the fountain of Gargaphie, to wit, a wonderful fountain, and along the river of Haliartos [oppidum]. Hard and heavy-topped trunks of trees were arms for those, and full rough lions' skins were helmets on their heads, and hard branching hurdles were shields for them. And there are hordes of mount Helicon from the river Permessus, to wit, a river which flows in an alpine mountain in the North of the Thebans, and from the river Olmius. And all those heroes were melodious harpers from the Muses, to wit, the goddesses of melody."

And when Phorbas had said those words, and applied those descriptions to the hosts, Antigone spoke, and said: "Great indeed," said she, "is the resemblance between those twain brothers yonder, whom I see away among the hosts; for they are fair and equally matched as regards both arms and dress. And I should like," said she, "if my own two brothers were yon fellowship." "Indeed, maiden," said Phorbas, "thou art not the first person that has called them so, for multitudes have called them brothers though it were not so. For one of them is the other's father, and that happened thus: A nymph, a woman of the Lapithae, embraced a young boy named Lapithaon, and he had never embraced a woman before, seeing he had not come of age so to do. And it was an act sufficient for her conception, and Alatreus befell her from that pregnancy, and when that boy was begotten, it was but a short time till he was as tall and as comely as his father. And they are yon twain thou hast observed, that son and the father, to wit, Lapithaon and Alatreus his son, and 300 horsemen are the allies of each man of them in this muster from Glisas and Coronia. There also is Hypseus, son of Asopos, king of the northern tribes of the Thebans, with a beautiful fourhorsed chariot, a pleasant nobly bound shield of glued hides of bright leather on his back, a triple ringed threefold corslet about his body, and in his hand a thick very long javelin by which he does not deliver a missing shot. And there is a great army along with him of those that came from Itone and Alalcomenis, from Midea of great pheasants (?) and from Aulis, from Graea, and from Plataeae, and from Anthedon, with very great lumps of lead which these men used to hurl at stalwart soldiers' foreheads. And indeed I am unable to number," said he, "all that have come here of active diverse hosts from the many cities of the Thebans along with cruel horrible Iphitus son of Naubolus, to wit, the vicerov of the middle cities of the Thebans. And tired are mine eyes, and a mist of withered eld has overspread them in taking account of the hosts, and I am unable to tell them further, O maiden," said he.

After that Eteocles, king of Thebes, rose up upon the walls of his city in order to address his host and his allies, and this is what he said to them: "O good and great-minded kings," said he, "it is not I that press or hurry you unto this war, but your own liking and liveliness. And yet I shall be at one with you in defending your city and your land." And thus he was, while he was so saying, that he threw many reproaches at his brother, E. 34^a 10 to wit, Polynices, as if he were in his presence, and he ordered his guards to defend and protect the city and to hold the wall. He ordered brave champions to fight against Greek heroes away outside.

As to the Thebans thus far.

As to the Greeks, however, they marched forward with no sleep, no rest by day or night. And though many were the sinister signs and presage of veritable evil to them, it did not check them; and the fury of the wrath of the true heroes was the greater at every omen of malediction that was sent to them, till they reached the ever-beautiful green-flowing river Asopos in the land of the Thebans. They halted without crossing it at once, for vast were the flood and the wave-roar of the river at that time, through Bacchus' wizards laying a spell upon it, to wit, Bacchus the god of wine. Then came fierce and angry Hippomedon, and urged his horses into the ford in face of the hosts, and he said to them: "Timidity and cowardice are upon you, O men," said he, "that ye do not cross the river, and an attempt like that were of no avail to sack strongly armed Thebes." With that incitement they arose keenly and hastily, and across the river they went till they came to a fair-sided pleasant hill, and they beheld at a distance from that hill the high stately houses and the green-turfed very beautiful lawns of choice Thebes. A wide full-vast camp was pitched by them there, and they remained in it during the course of that night.

Now it were hard to know and to relate the trembling and the panic, the alarm and the long hurrying to and fro of the Thebans that night, when they saw the dappled wide tents and the thrust-in, firm-fixed arms of the Greek heroes at the doors of their speckled tents, after they had pitched their camp. Now so great was their fear that they had no confidence in any defence or shelter which they could have that night. scattered throughout each of the two hosts that night, to intensify the evil and the anger of each of them against the other.

Now when the very bright and beautiful stars arose on the morrow, Jocasta arose, the white-handed bright-cheeked queen, to wit, mother of Eteocles, king of Thebes, and of Polynices, destroyer of the city, and her two daughters along with her, to wit, Ismene and Antigone. Very old and aged indeed was the queen that came there, and when she had reached the very midst of the camp, she lifted up her angry very wailing cries, and said: "Ye Greek kingfolk," said she, "where is my son now and here, to wit, Polynices?" But when the lad heard that she was seeking him thus, he came to her, and was soothing her with pleasant and pacifying words. She answered him, and this is what she said to him: "Son," said she, "this is what I wish, that everlasting peace should exist between thee and thy brother, and the kindly terms of family relationship with Thebans; and do thou come with me over to Thebes, and make peace with thy brother, and ask of him kingship with his consent; and if he do not give it thee, the more just for thee is a cruel war against him." Now the heart of the Greeks was greatly moved there toward Jocasta, as she was alienating her son from the Theban war.

Now Polynices proceeded to go with her into the town, and Adrastus did not prevent his going, till Tydeus son of Oeneus, came and said: "Let no peace be made," said he, "till I avenge upon the Thebans the wounds of my skin and my body." And he showed his wounds and his many sores to the hosts there. Now that tale prevented Polynices going into the city and making peace with his brother; and all the Greeks were filled with very greatly exasperated feelings of wrath at the Thebans, when they saw Tydeus' wounds and his many sores.

At that time and hour came forth the tigers, that used to draw the chariot of Bacchus, son of Jove, in order to drink water at the very cold and clear streams of Thebes; and when tad covelthey went, there met them the charioteer of Amphiaraus, the great Greek priest, whilst he was giving his horses water. Upon him at once leaped the keen mad tigers, to wit, the tigers are species of hurtful animals that kill cattle and men. And they killed at once the charioteer and the horses, and also two other Greeks, to wit, Idas and Acamas were their names. And thereafter the tigers were seen by Aconteus, an Arcadian, to wit, the chief of a great tribe of them of Arcadia, and in his land is the stone which is ever aflame, to wit, Sisyphus (?) is its name-after those deeds were done by them. And he shot two arrows one after another at them, and pierced their hearts, and they carried the arrows with them into the town, and it was there they died. Heavy and sad was that deed in the eyes of the Thebans, and to avenge them came forth a man of the people of Bacchus, to wit, Phegeus was his name, and all unknown he arrived, and dealt a blow of his sword at Aconteus so that he fell dead, lifeless. The Arcadians, however, arose to avenge that, and they did not succeed, for Phegeus arrived safe and sound in the city after avenging Bacchus' honour outside.

After that deed, however, a huge and great alarm and tumult arose in the full-wide camp of the Greeks; and Tydeus, son of Oeneus, said to Jocasta and her daughters: "Depart," said he, "seeing ye will not bring peace or truce at this time." Jocasta departed gloomily and dejectedly after that, having been unable to make peace between her sons. But the bold triumphant brave soldier, Tydeus, son of Oeneus, arose and seized his arms, and roused his people and all the host of the Greeks. In sooth there was made a bold heroic rising and a hasty ruin of peace so that it was confused and troubled among the chariots and champions of the camp at that time. And such was the keenness with which they arose that no lead or precedence was allowed to brave wartrumpets, or to pleasant silken banners, but their keen bands of common soldiers and their champions of valour were in mutual emulation for fight, and were seeking battle of the Thebans.

On the other hand the keen daring resolute champions of Thebes arose to attend and wait upon them, and every prince and every lord of them took to urging and strengthening his great following. Indeed it was then that each of them strongly attacked the other, so that the clamour and the noisy crash of those furious turbulent troops rushing at one another were like as it were the great-dripping large-stemmed green-topped wood that had fallen into one another's cleft-forks and arms before the withetwisting of the fiercely cold winter wind, or as it were the intentrevealing lie-desiring day of judgment that should come to rake up the ash hearth of the world; and every prince and every high-king broke a gap before his troop in another's battalion at that time. And as each of the two hosts were engaged in that joint effort of battle, then his strong very mad mare took a champion of the Thebans, to wit, Pterelas, away with her into a battalion of the Greeks. And Tydeus, son of Oeneus, awaited him, and dealt him strongly very boldly a strenuous thrust with if was a watthe shit through the hero's body, and his horse brought him back again so that he fell there lifeless among the Thebans. Now after that man's fall the brave battalions assaulted one another angrily very fiercely, and the contentious battle-combat closed till as close as a stop-hurdle after being quite closed was the line of . riveted long-extending spears that were planted in the pleasant sides of noble well-born scions there in that strong and vast battle which they waged. Nay, multitudes were thereby destroyed, trunks were mutilated, faces were blanched, eyes were reddened, and heroes' senses were overcome as they fell together. And after that the battle fell into duels between them. There fought Hippomedon a lofty and famous Greek, and Sybaris a very proud Theban; and at the completion of that duel, Sybaris fell there by the hand of the Greek. After that two champions of the Thebans, to wit, Pylius and Parthenopaeus, fought against a single champion of the Greeks, to wit, Menoeceus; and the Thebans fell of that encounter, and Menoeceus won his victory and his boast. And after that Parthenopaeus, king of Arcadia, inflicted slaughters on the Thebans, and by him fell the trio, to wit, Itys, Sybaris, and Periphas. A Greek hero, Caeneos, fell before murderous Haemon, son of Creon, a Theban; and as he was falling, Abas, a Theban, seized the man's weapons, and challenged to a duel on his behalf; and a Greek shot an arrow at him, and left him lifeless.

After that arose a priest of the followers of Bacchus, to wit, Eunaeus; and round him his bright beautiful coloured vesture in which he used to offer sacrifices to Bacchus; and he heaped vituperation and contempt upon all the Greeks, and this is what he said : "Do not put against the Thebans, O Greeks," said he, "for brave are their heroes, mighty their gods, and strong the wall of their great city." But when the fierce-mad valour-mad Greek king, to wit, Capaneus, heard, he awaited him, and came to meet him on the way in his warlike awful arch, and he shook and brandished the sharp-edged very long spear with its fair straight shaft of fine cypress wood and said: "Foolish and womanish," said he, "are the haughty words thou sayest to the hosts. And pity it is not the god ye worship that stands in thy likeness now: for if it were, he would fall by me," And no sooner had he said that than he delivered a straight-tooled shot at Eunaeus so that it split his shield, and broke his back, and he reached earth a dead man forthwith.

Then Eteocles, king of the Thebans, attacked the Greek soldiery with slaughters and vast and many fatal deeds, so that multitudes were quickly slain by him every way he went. Polynices, however, gave advantage and protection to the Thebans for the sake of the original family affection, and for love of his own native land.

Then Amphiaraus, the noble Greek priest, essayed to do bravely, and he urged his splendid fleet horses resolutely and hastily, so that the hard battlefield was very small dust behind him every way that chariot-fighter went. And bright beautifully coloured at that time as very splendid stars was the sheen of his fair shapely helmet, and of his fine bossy shield between the battalions of each of the two armies; and he turned about among the hosts, so that the keen Theban champions were pierced and mowed down by arms every way in which he hewed the host. And there encountered him in the midst of the battle Phlegyas, a wild and very fierce Theban, and they fought a bloody heroic duel for a space and a time, till each of them wounded the other; and in the end of the encounter, Phlegyas fell by the hand of the veteran Amphiaraus. After that another keen proud Theban came unto him, to wit, Phyleus, and the heroes fought a hard contest between them, and the Theban fell from that fight.

After that two cruel contentious heroes of the same race attacked him, to wit, Chromis and Chremataon; and they assailed him roughly and fiercely, nevertheless the end of that affray was an end of them, for they fell under the severe and terrible wounds of Amphiaraus. Three resolute Theban champions saw that. They quickly approached Amphiaraus to avenge on him those outrageous deeds, to wit, Iphinous, Sages, and daring heroic Gyas. And the veteran Amphiaraus answered and attended them with reckless soldierly lethal blows so that the fair white-skinned bodies of the contentious champions were bent and battered spoils in gory pools of boiling crimson blood behind him. And after their fall by him, Alcathous, a Theban, prepared an attack on him, and he awaited him, and he ran for a hard missile stone, and let fly at Alcathous, and struck him on the top of his crown, so that he fell lifeless.

A haughty fierce Theban king, to wit, Hypseus, son of Asopus, saw that deed, and he was sad and in deep grief because of the bitter and huge slaughters Amphiaraus inflicted on the hosts, and he could not endure not to avenge it upon him, though it did not diminish his honour, as if he himself were smiting the Greek soldiery. And when those two brave heroes fought, each of them began to insult and threaten the other. Now when Apollo, god of prophecy, saw that, he made a cast of his spear at the chariot-fighter that was in Amphiaraus' chariot, to wit, Haliagmon, so that he fell forth lifeless out of his chariot, and he himself came in his place, and assumed the form of the chariot-fighter, and brought with him the horses and the chariot so as to avoid Hypseus. And Apollo was there driving Amphiaraus' chariot, directing his shootings, and guiding his horses, so that that man might deliver no vain blow or missing shot. Also he and his horses were protected against the dangerous shots of his foes. Then round Amphiaraus closed these four Theban heroes, to wit, the reckless haughty foot-soldier Melaneus, the lofty famous horseman Antiphus, the veteran of prowess, Action, and the wildly reckless Lampus. Against those heroes Apollo urged Amphiaraus' horses keenly and madly, and he practised a chariot feat on them so that they fell under the horses' feet, and he caused an utter breaking and bruising of their bones under the chariot beaks, and they died. Nay, it was a hindrance to the course and progress of those horses of Amphiaraus that their feet could not gain a hold on the earth for the multitude of white-skinned bodies of mangled heroes and of the upright spears thrust far into the hides of the noble scions, so that his horses and his chariot were all red with the stains of conjous crimson blood in the sides of chosen soldiers.

Then, moreover, Apollo doffed his wizard shape, and went into his own form; and he spoke to Amphiaraus, and this is what he said: "This," said he, "is the bourne and limit of thy life, and I am unable to protect thee any longer, and tales of thee and thy renown will remain till life's close and time's end. appointed thee; for it is better for thee than to remain with no sepulchral abode in the land of chosen Thebes." Amphiaraus answered him, and this is what he said: "O noble one, O Apollo," said he, "I perceived thee in the chariot beside me, and what ye say is true; for I myself hear the hideous fiercely cold streams of hell in their wave and billow searching for me, and I hear also open-mouthed Cerberus, the dog of Orcus, hell's woeful door-ward, baying at me and calling me. And do thou bear with thee the consecrated chaplets that are on my head, for they ought not to be borne into hell." Apollo, however, went from him thereafter, and left him; and when he had gone away from him, Amphiaraus heaved his hero's sigh in apprehension of calamity.

And then came a wave and a great earthquake in the earth on which they stood, and its dust and abundant sand arose, so that it was a very dense and confused mist around the hosts. And after that arose strong mightily shattering thunder, so that it tied and bound the battalions of each of the two armies, that no man of them was able to ward off or lay about him at that time, but they remained standing with the shafts of their spears fixed against their breasts. And when they stood thus silent and still owing to fear of the confused crash of doom, they heard an exceeding swift splitting of the earth at that time, so that the glebe land of the green-surfaced lawn on which they stood became a very deep abysmal cliff, and the earth opened and swallowed strong and huge Amphiaraus with his arms, armour, horses, and chariot till he reached the bottom of chill hell with no retreat.

BOOK VIII

But when Amphiaraus had arrived in hell, loathing and fear seized the horrible assemblies of hell before him; for it was unknown to them hitherto that soldiers unslain, or horses or chariots should reach them. And Orcus, king of hell, heaped great reproach on the fresh bright gods of heaven about allowing that man to come to him, and he made great reprimand and vast menace against Amphiaraus himself. Amphiaraus answered him very weakly and without vigour, and this is what he said: "Abate thine anger," said he, "since it is not to raid and harry hell that I have come; and it is not through mine own ill-doing that I have been brought to you, but through mine own wife's betraying me, in order that the necklace of gold might be given her by Argia, to wit, the wife of Polynices. And I myself was desirous of escape from coming to sack Thebes; for I knew that I should meet my fate there. And let not my coming hither be evil in thy sight; for funeral games and honourable obsequies will be made for me by Greeks; and do thou put me into the beautiful sunny plains of hell," Now the nature of Orcus was soothed when he heard that, and he allowed everything that Amphiaraus had said. Twelve Theban kings had Amphiaraus the priest slain, to wit, a man crafty and intelligent as to his future.

As regards the Greeks, however, they were searching for Amphiaraus throughout the battle; for they were not certain of that man's fate, and they were terrified at the sudden bursting of the earth which they had seen in the midst of the plain on which they stood.

And when they stood thus, Palaemon, a Greek chief, came to Adrastus, and related to him Amphiaraus' fate, to wit, that he had fallen into the sudden bursting of the earth, and had not been seen afterwards, and he said: "O high-king," said he, "let us leave this strange baleful land into which we have come, for the hills of Thebes are swallowing the hosts, their heroes are bragging over us, their gods betraying and forsaking us." that, until two others of his people came to him, to wit, Mopsus and Actor, and related the same things to him, and more in addition. And at that tale the brave battalions of the Greeks turned about unto their camp in flight and in haste without arranging an end of conflict and a feat of battle. Tired were their horses and their chariot-fighters, and exhausted were their soldiers, and sad were their champions after that struggle in which Amphiaraus had fallen. As regards the Thebans, however, joyously and powerfully they marched, and thereupon came the night.

That is the first battle of Thebes.

Now gloomily and dejectedly did the Greeks pass that night in their camp, and it was not praise of their horses or their own prowess that they engaged in, but in relating Amphiaraus' combats and his heroic deeds. And they resolved that divers festivals and honourable sacrifices should be made to him. And cares and the long deep anxieties of the war pressed greatly upon the mind of the Greeks, till sleep and long slumber fell upon them.

Now it was not thus that the Thebans spent that night, but they were engaged in drinking, making merry, and extolling the prowess of their fathers and grandfathers, and in offering sacrifices to their noble gods that are to be worshipped. And it is related that that was the first night after he had been blinded that Oedipus son of Laius and father of Eteocles and Polynices. was brought unto the Thebans to drink and make merry; and it is related that his hair had not been rinsed, and his face had not been washed, since he was blinded, till the period of this hour, owing to the greatness of his gloom. And it was not to drink or to make merry even that he had come to them that night, but to urge on the war between the Thebans and the Greeks, and beautiful was the pre-eminence with which he did that. And thus were those people that night. As for Adrastus, however, high-king of Greeks, though his hosts slept with the fatigue of the struggle, he himself did not sleep as he listened to the Thebans' shouts of joy and gladness that night, and that was a grave anxiety in his regard.

But when day came with full light on the morrow, a meeting and a council were held by Greeks to ordain whom they should make king in Amphiaraus' stead, and who should cause prophecy and true guidance to be promulgated to them after him. Now he that was ordained in his stead was the very skilful wizard, to wit, Thiodamas son of Melampus; and it was the father of that man Melampus who had made prophecy along with Amphiaraus to Greeks before going on that hosting. And now when Thiodamas had there been ordained honourably in Amphiaraus' stead, that priest arose joyfully, and sacrifices and laudations were offered by him in honour of the goddess Terra, to wit, the earth, because it did not suddenly split and rend under the Greeks as it had done under Amphiaraus; and also sacrifices were made by them, and an honourable sepulture, and funeral games to Amphiaraus.

And when that was finished, red-lipped furious goddesses and awful demons of lowest hell went to the city of the Thebans to persuade and to enjoin upon them to make a joint rising against the Greeks. And the houses of Thebes were almost turned out of their foundations by the surge and outset of the Thebans there, as they arose together at once through seven conspicuous lofty very pleasing doors of the strong city at the urging of those agitating goddesses. And thus they went forth, to wit, cruel heroic Creon urged his company through the lofty bright-pure door called Ogygiae. And Eteocles, high-king of the Thebans, came through the shining beautiful gate, to wit, Neistae. A golden radiance rested upon it. Haemon, a veteran with his viceroys, came through the door Homoloides. Lions' heads its token. Moreover, Hypseus, son of Asopus, arose through the principal door, Proetiae. Forms of dragons were engraved thereon. Mad Dryas, to wit, the king of Tanagrae, from the icy frigid zone with his multitudes of a goodly host came through the beautiful gate, Electrae, Serpents blazed thereon, Eurymedon, with his great-spirited people, came through a speckled gate named Hypsistae. Figures of frogs were thereon. The greatspirited soldier Menoeceus also came through the strong door, Dircaeae. Forms of bittern were thereon. It was no mean thing, indeed, which the rising of that host resembled as they left the city, to wit, the sound and subdued thunder of the green-surfaced sea, so that it shakes and convulses the wide globe with the storm of the billows as they roll over the strands of the earth.

As to the Greeks, however, they arose tardily and weakly unto the battle that day, and there the people of Amphiaraus gathered round Thiodamas, son of Melampus, so that he was one of the seven Greek kings that day in the battle. Then each of those kings ordered his champions and chiefs into his presence to fight and do battle for them. Sad indeed it was for Greeks and Thebans, when that day came; for companies of them were left without their officers, tribes without chiefs, towns without yeomen, fair helms without heroes, arms without bearers, and chariots without charioteers because of their engaging in the fierce and strong battle that day.

There was steadfastly and ever on the move the cruel and mighty Mars, to wit, the god of war, with a very sharp hard spear in his hand, from which used to drip and flow profuse streams of blood from point to haft presaging the death and doom of the heroes of each of the two armies. And he hurried and urged roughly and angrily those active veterans unto one another and unto the fighting, so that he restored none of those to the confines or to the city whence he had come. A convulsion of boiling rage filled them, so that the hands of the hero-folk were ready with heroic swords of war and with long well-casting spears for joy at the conflict.

Nay, hardly was it the battle-soldiers that were reckless, for it were much to relate the onrush and haste of the savage horses as they violently shook the chariots and jingled the bridle-pieces, 3065 suarca sneachtaidi so that the green-surfaced plains were pleasant and snowy with the flecks of fine foam that continually dripped in steady abundance from the jaws of the horses every way the charioteers might go. And then each of them approached the other, and such was the closeness with which those veterans mutually joined that their feet fought below and their faces above, and their fine bossy shields one with another, and their hard and sharp swords of war, and their fair shapely helmets one with another, so that gallant and comely were the colours and the shinings of the ornaments. The heroes had other gleaming helmets till they were reddened by the showering blood from the bodies of the heroes at the mutual smiting afterwards. And when an envious contentious rage arose among those heroes, and had excited the minds of the soldiers, the strong and huge earth shook before the storm of the champions owing to the pressure of the fray. so that the hollow dome of the firmament was a troubled crash. as if the rough-voiced withe-twisting winds mingled and confounded the four expansive elements with their diverse natures. as they used to exist in the confused mass out of which they were evidently hewn at first, to wit, from the mass. And it was like night to those veterans owing to the strife of dark and exceeding great clouds of diverse arms being thickly hurled above the goodly host, so that the stormy air above them was congested owing to the multitude of the casts being exchanged between them. For very sharp iron darts were hurled there, and thonged well-casting spears were showered. And rounded stones were thrown from forehead-smiting slings, so that they shimmered like bright lightnings above the hosts, and lethal flights of arrows were cast between them. And it was not earth in which those arms shimmered as they fell, but they remained in the heads of heroes, in the sides of champions, and in the flanks of nobles. Nay, each man of them encircled the other, as a great sea wave encircles borders of havens and harbours, so they met in their encounters.

tered and shook the people of Menalcas so that they left their lord alone behind them in stress of battle. There he waged a heroic conflict against Hypseus for a long time; and when Hypseus had seized an opportunity of wounding that Greek at one side of his back, it was by the other side that Menalcas drew out the spear; and as he was falling, he let fly a cast of it at Hypseus, and wounded him, and he himself died forthwith. And afterwards a prudent Theban veteran, to wit, Amyntas, let fly an arrow cast at Iasus son of Phaedimus, a Greek, so that he fell by it. There fought a champion of Calvdon, to wit, Agreus, with a Theban stalwart, to wit, Phegeus, and each of them was equally slashing the other, till Agreus dealt Phegeus a blow, and cut off his right arm from his shoulder, and that hero's arm fell. It continued moving and leaping on the ground with the strong sword in its grasp. And when Acoetes, a Greek, saw that, he came and dealt the arm a mighty blow on the ground, and wounded it greatly. Then Iphis, a Theban, encountered ruthless Acamas, a Greek, and the Theban fell by the wounds of that Greek. Again also, Hypseus son of Asopus encountered puissant Argus, a Greek. They roughened their fight and hardened their combat, and Greek Argus fell, veteran though he was, in that strife. And after the fall of that man by Hypseus, the champion Iphis, a Greek, and mounted, chanced to come to him and they joined battle, and then came Iphis' charioteer, to wit, Abas into Iphis' presence, and wounded Hypseus severely. Hypseus, moreover, overthrew and starkly slew those men, so that they fell by him. Then happened in the midst of the battle a combat of four, to wit, two Theban brothers, Ion and Daphnis, and two Greek brothers, Pheres and Abas, and that was a warlike brotherly encounter of side against side, until those two Thebans fell by the two Greeks. And when they had fallen by the Greeks, they recognised that they were brothers by the keenness of their combat and the likeness of their forms, and the nature of the Greeks was greatly moved for them, and they were sorry that the Thebans had fallen by their hands.

Nay, illustrious and mighty were noble scions in that fight on both sides. And there puissant warlike Haemon of the brave seed of Cadmus overthrew and surrounded Greek soldiery so that they became confused companies and exhausted fugitives before the onrush of that Theban as he smote them. Resolute and choice Tydeus, however, son of the king of Calydon, attacked the strong hosts of the Thebans in front of him, so that they became scattered crowds, shaken with fear of a combat, and negligent of provess in consequence. Now this was the likeness of those two, as if two swift torrents of a flood rushed from lofty rugged mountains, so that the plantations of the earth were dug up and carried away by them, and the sloping herd-covered glens were filled with them.

Then arose Idas, a Theban, son of Onchestos [a town], and thus arose he with burning flaming torches in his hand, and he kept throwing them among the hosts, so that the Greek soldiery were perturbed by him, and as he was like that, Tydeus son of the king of Calydon, chanced to come to him, and made a strong thrust of his spear at the man, so that he fell with the breadth of his back on the ground, and his red torches above him, and this is what Tydeus said to him: "No more shalt thou burn the heroes of Lerna," to wit, the Greeks. "But indeed thou shalt be held till thy body become small dust after it is burned by the red-sided brands that thou thyself hast carried." And when he had done that, he turned him about among the host of the Thebans, like a cruel furious tiger among much cattle, and at that onrush these five royal soldiers fell by him, to wit, heroic Aon, most puissant Pholus, victorious Chromis, Helicaon of famous deeds, and strong and brave Taigis (sic).

But as for Haemon, not less were that veteran's deeds done upon the Greek hosts, and he did not secure from them appeasement of his rage owing to his importunate desire of quickly killing them, though thick were the hosts being hewn down, and though brave were the valiant heroes of Calydon, the resolute people of Tydeus. wit, wound-dealing Haemon, son of Creon, broke through and thinned them, till the lively wrathful youth, to wit, Butes chanced to meet him. He, however, was restraining the champions from taking to flight before Haemon. And as he was thus engaged in urging everyone to the combat, Haemon approached him unperceived, dealt him a blow with a heavy Theban axe, and split and swiftly cleft his head in twain. And thereafter Hypanis priest of Apollo forced an encounter with him, and at the end of that encounter he fell before Haemon. And after his fall by him, Polites, priest of Bacchus, god of wine, essayed a warlike dangerous strife with him, and that man also fell by the hand of the same bloody Haemon; and priest though he was, their violent deaths were not venerable in the eyes of Haemon. And after that two other Greeks attacked him, to wit, Hyperenor and well-approved Damasus, and they fell by him.

In sooth the Greeks had suffered loss from that conflict, had not Minerva, goddess of valour, been fighting along with them. And Hercules was favouring the Thebans, for he was a god at that time. There was an encounter between those gods, Hercules and Minerva, in the midst of the battle. This is what Hercules said: "Beloved sister, Minerva," said he, "what dire fate has impelled us with one consent to oppose one another in this war of Greeks and Thebans? For it were easier for me to conflict with my noble father Jove than with thee, O Minerva; for much battle-victorious triumph have I achieved through thy power. And I allow thee, O maiden, if thou hast a desire, to sack Thebes." Then, however, he bade farewell. And Minerva grew mild at Hercules gentle words, and thereafter she left the battle; and Hercules also avoided Haemon, refraining from assisting him. And they left equal opportunity between the heroes.

Now Haemon was weakened in slaughtering the Greeks, that Hercules should leave him thus; and Theban Haemon perceived that there was no prowess in his casts and no strength in his blows. He turned quickly to flee out of the battle. But the son of the king of Calydon saw Haemon fleeing. He delivered a well-aimed cast straight at him, so that the spear E. 40^a 30 struck him in the neck between the rim of the shield and his helmet; and though he lived afterwards, he was always wryheaded; and he did not simulate looking behind him on the face of the hero who had wounded him, for he was unable to fight him, but he crept away, and left the battle thereupon.

After that a chief of a Theban tribe, to wit, Prothous his name, chanced to approach the same Calydonian. Tydeus strongly directs the spear towards him, and by that cast killed the soldier and the stallion that was under him. And thereupon Corymbus, a valiant Theban, menaced the Greeks with a rough contest, and that man was a venerable priest of the Muses, to wit, the goddesses of melody. And yet, priest though he was, he was not long-lived; for he was slaughtered by the hand of the son of the king of Calydon.

After that Atys, a young puissant Theban, arose, and after jeering at their relationship that man threatened to do bravely. For he stood thus, espoused to him was Ismene, to wit, a sister of Eteocles, king of Thebes. And thus was that lad with a fair bright-purple tunic about him. And that man's chariot and helmet were adorned with splendid gold much inlaid, and beautiful golden arrows in his hand. And he turned himself about upon the hosts in that guise, like a raging mad lion upon the fleeing flocks of the earth. And this is the thing Atvs did. He was foolishly, madly, angrily challenging the son of the king of Calvdon to meet him and fight a duel with him. When Tydeus heard that he glanced at him, and laughed a derisive jeer in his face, and said to him: "It is much that thou dost ask, O lad," quoth he; " for great is the distinction for thee that a soldier like me should slay thee." And as he said that, he dropped all his weapons on the ground except a little spit of a toy javelin that was in his hand, for he did not deign to employ cruel heroic weapons upon that young childish lad, and he delivered a cast thereof at him so that it struck the weak spot of his body, and he fell at once. And though that man's weapons and clothing were beautiful in colour and distinguished, the son of the king of Calydon thought it undignified and dishonourable to strip him of those. And on his falling by him, he turned himself about upon the hosts of the Thebans. He used to attack the strong and the chiefs, and not to touch the crowds of common soldiers or inferior heroes, so that from that fight a loss of kin resulted to the chosen nobles of the Thebans, till Menoeceus, a Theban, arose, and urged the hosts, and this is what he said: "Wretched Thebans," said he, "are ye not ashamed not to avenge upon the Greeks an active insult?" Now that incitement produced energy and great anger in the Theban champions, so that they thronged the battle-conflict ahead of one another.

And whilst they were thus, it chanced then that the two daughters of Oedipus were weakly and very anxiously conversing with one another over in the city of Thebes, and intense was their anxiety as to their brothers; for they did not know which of them might be victorious at that crisis. And then Ismene said: "I am sad," quoth she, "beloved sister, at the intensifying of this battle between my brothers. And I have seen a vision," said she, "that I should myself be married to brave and heroic Atys, and there exists no portent or premonition of dire evil that I have not seen therein."

And as they were engaged in that conversation, they saw a great company approaching them in the city. And thus were they with a half-dead mangled body among them in the hollow of his shield, and he that lay there was Atys, and Jocasta saw him, and called her daughters unto her, and they all came and stood over him, and they were directing their exclamations and their voices towards the lad; and for all that he was unable to address them, but continued to gaze at them, till the little life that was in his breast escaped away.

Now while the women over in the city were engaged in those deliberations, the brave heroes of the battle on both sides pressed forth against one another as if they had never encountered before that. Such was the strength and pressure that each of them exerted on the other at that time that between them arose the warlike disturbing wife of Néid, to wit, Enyo, sister of Mars, the god of war. Yea, the Greek champions were wildly reckless in that strife, for deadly were the arrows of the king, to wit, Parthenopaeus; and active and famous were the horses of Hippomedon in pulling down the Thebans, and prosperous were the feats of valour and violent wounds of the spears of Capaneus. Though Greek heroes were indeed numerous there, and their feats many, the strong, bold, steadfast, resolute man, to wit, Tydeus, son of the king of Calydon, surpassed them all. And a panic of great fear seized his enemies before him, so that they could make no stand against him but only a hasty flight in every direction before him. And when he saw them in that guise, this is what he said to them: "Do not flee at all, O Thebans, seeing it is more proper for you to avenge on me the fifty heroes of you I slew on another occasion, and the many soldiers that fell to-day by my hand." And whilst he was saying that, he saw away in the battle the conspicuous pure-bright shimmer of the helmet of Eteocles, king of the Thebans. Then, however, he shook and brandished the bitter-nosed lethal spear, and discharged a throw of a cast of it at Eteocles. And I should have reluctantly to cease from that war, had not the gods checked the cast in order that it might be so that it struck Eteocles' chariot-fighter, to wit, Phlegyas, and left him lifeless. And when Tydeus saw that, he plied a sword-smiting upon the battalions while making for Eteocles, till the strong and mighty chiefs of the Thebans made a very sharp naked hedge-bill of their arms round about the high-king, and brought him back with them away out of the battle in order to avoid Tydeus. And yet, that did not restrain his mighty valour in destroying the hosts, till these heroes fell by his hand, to wit, menacing Thoas, mad Deilochus, triumphant Clonius, and angry Hippotades. And this is the thing which Tydeus then used to do, as he slew a hero he used to hurl his head and his helmet at once away through the battle. And there he used to select a narrow part of a road in the midst of the battle, the hosts hewing at him. till he was unable to effect a movement owing to the very high ramparts of heroes' bodies cruelly mangled, and owing to the bloody spoils of the champions falling around him on every side. And there strong resolute champions of the Thebans closed around him from every quarter and on every side, and threw many diverse weapons at him from every direction, so that his great warlike shield was a dense wood of hard spears planted together, when he used to shake them off. A helmet for that hero's head was no advantage against the hard well-aimed stones which the Thebans continued to throw at him from every quarter, till he was crimson with the gore of his head. Again, mail was no protection for that hero against the multitude of arrows swift from the string going through it, so that the pierced breast and sides of that strong soldier became red torrents. And in the glance which he glanced past him at the hosts, he saw Minerva, the goddess of wisdom, warding off some of those weapons from him. That, he thought, was a great aid and help.

But yet it was no protection for him against disaster, for a thick-shafted wide-socketed spear coursed through the battle unto him, past the edge of his shield, and struck into the breast of that veteran, to wit, the son of the king of Calydon, so that it split and dissolved his heart in his breast; and also it was not known who had made that cast, owing to the multitude of the weapons and the density of the host, till the puissant man and veteran, Tydeus, glanced the way whence the spear had come to him, and he recognised in the thick of the host the man who had thrown it, to wit, Melanippus, son of Astacis. And when he had recognised him in the distance, he took the spear from the hand of the man who was next himself, to wit, Hopleus, a Greek; and he delivered a valorous manly cast, weak though he was, so that it passed to Melanippus, through his chest and through his heart.

Then the Greeks at once approached Tydeus, and brought him with them to one side of the battle, and they placed two very strong purple shields about him there, to wit, on each side of him a shield. And this is what they said to him, that he would recover from that wound. And at the same time that they said that, they were in heavy sorrow and great despondency. But Tydeus, son of the comely king of Calydon, himself perceived the symptoms of death approaching him, and this is what he said: "Have compassion on me, O Greeks," said he, " and it is not my restoration to my fatherland or my burial E. 41^b 40 that I ask of you, for I now hate this frail fading body in which I am. But I ask of you that the head of Melanippus be given me, for methinks his strength was brought down by the cast I made at him. And, ye Greek kingfolk," said he, "grant me that request of you. And where," said he, "is warlike Hippomedon? and where is most puissant Parthenopaeus? Bring the mad-voiced Greek, Capaneus. Give over to me, O youths, the head of the hero who has wounded me."

And when he heard that, Capaneus arose and preceded everyone to the place where Melanippus was; and when he arrived, he raised him on his strong left shoulder, and made a cast of him thence into the presence of Tydeus. But when Tydeus had seen Melanippus there in blanchings of death and in symptoms of dissolution, this is what he said: "Bring the head of the hero close to me," said he. And when it was brought, he remained a while looking at it angrily; and he formed a plan, he pulled it down towards himself, and there commenced gnawing and rending hard at the head of Melanippus. And when he was thus engaged, then came Minerva, to wit, the goddess of valour, from Jove, son of Saturn, and it was about this she had gone to him, to ask help for Tydeus in the battle; and when it was not granted her, she asked of Jove to make a god of Tydeus. Fifteen Theban kings had Tydeus killed that day in single combats. And that was granted her, and she came unto Tydeus, and he being seen by her, horror and great fear seized her before him. She had seen him eating the head of Melanippus; and when the rough heroie serpents of the Gorgon had risen about the head of the goddess, to wit, Minerva, she turned and fled from Tydeus, and left him in that guise behind her. And he was thus eating the head of Melanippus, until the little life that was in him stole away from him, and he died forthwith.

Now vast was the sorrow and despondency of the Greeks at that deed. But when the Thebans heard that bloody and furious Tydeus had gnawed and eaten Melanippus' head, a fury of rage and vast anger seized them. As for the Greeks, however, their grief and their complaining were the less respecting Tydeus. For the transgression of a rational human law, viz. to eat a man, they held a crime. And this was said there also that Mars, the god of battle, left the battle that day from horror at that deed which Tydeus had done. Then the Thebans arose hastily to avenge Melanippus, as if they all were to him a proper family relationship of brothers; and Eteocles, king of Thebes, strongly urged the hosts there, and this is what he said: "It seems to us, O men," said he, "that the host ye attack, to wit, the Greeks, are not men but only venomous serpents and stark mad lions eating men as Tydeus has done, and they take no account of the gods above them, notwithstanding the dreadful signs they make." And when he had said that, he strongly assailed the Greeks, and it was the determination of every single person there with the Thebans to win the body of Tydeus from the Greeks that they might avenge upon him the eating of Melanippus' head, and all the evils he had done them.

Then rose Fame, daughter of Earth, very swiftly on the wing, and spread that tale through the many tribes of the Greeks, to wit, that Tydeus was slain. And though Polynices, son of Oedipus, heard that, that his comrade and confidant was slain, he did not believe it straightway. For he had such recognition of his prowess that he thought it unlikely that heroes should brag over, soldiers slay, or veterans do violence to that man unknown to him. And yet when he heard the certainty of it, silence fell upon him till every joint and every muscle of him from head to sole became as hard as a handstaff of a kiln, and he became blanched like a white clover flower, or like a fully bleached smock; and a very dark mist arose so that it was across his vision, and every way was dark and impassable for him. His mind was confused so that the words he spoke at that time were stammering and troubled. Then he seized his arms and proceeded sadly and totteringly with his spear behind him and with no power to raise it owing to the weight of grief. And on the way he came, the people of Tydeus met him bending over the body of their lord. It was shown him by them, and when he had seen it, he prostrated himself forthwith on the body of his friend, and he was uttering a great cry, and this is what he said: "O comrade," said he, "these are not worthy requests which thou hast claimed from me, to wit, that thou shouldest fall in the land of Thebes in winning a kingdom for me whilst I am safe behind thee. And it will be long that I shall be an exile from thy day, for I shall find no brother or friend and comrade like thee after thee. And, Greeks," said he, "leave me alone here that ye be not slaughtered more. But abandon both me and my brother, for methinks it is good to be without kingdom or sovereignty after Tydeus. And alas ! indeed, O Tydeus, that I did not fall with thee the night we first encountered together in the beautiful city of Adrastus. And fair was thy fame the day thou didst go to seek a kingdom for me at Thebes, and methinks no valorous heroes would have dared to mangle thee at all, or champions to encounter thee. And what are the innumerable bands or goodly hosts that have overthrown thee? For no more than Jove himself, or Mars, the god of battle, could they accomplish the infliction of violence upon thee." And after that he laid his hand on the darkened blood-stained face of the lad, and cleansed the drops of blood from it. "Indeed thou didst hate my enemies till to-day, and after thee I do not live at all." And no sooner had he said that than he unsheathed his sword, and proceeded to direct it to a vital spot, till his people closed their arms over him, and his noble father-in-law, Adrastus, restrained him, and continued to comfort him, till he put his sword into its sheath. And Polynices remained there feebly and weakly owing to the anguish of grief and the weight of sorrow.

And when he was thus, the chosen champions of the Thebans hastened round their high-king, to wit, Eteocles, unto the war, He that answered them at that time was the lofty famous royal soldier Hippomedon, a Greek, and thus he stood, that man, in his warlike troop, in the midst of the battle, with a strong broad round shield upon him, a thick very long spear in his [one] hand, and a broad very sharp sword in the other hand. And it was no insignificant thing that he resembled there, to wit, a firm immovable rock in the confines of haven and harbour, with the green-sided waves of the storm-shaken troubled sea strongly beating upon it, and it unsplit and unmoved before them. Then also Eteocles began addressing the Greeks, and this is what he said to them : "Wherefore," said he, "are ye not ashamed to remain defending the gory and sinful body of Tydeus? it being vain labour so to do. For though ve should leave him alone, no flying flocks of air or open-gulleted packs of dogs would settle on him, and no consecrated fire would burn him, after the sin he has committed, to wit, to eat a man." And no sooner had he said that than he delivered at bright-cheeked Greek Hippomedon a cast of the royal spear that was in his hand, so that it struck and stood out of his conspicuous sevenfold shield. And two other Thebans also delivered two casts at one time at Hippomedon, to wit, aggressive Pheres and full-valorous Lycus. The cast of Pheres shot past him, and the cast of Lycus lopped the crest of the hero's helmet. Yet, as for Hippomedon, many though the casts at him were, not a step backward did he take from the place in which he stood, but he remained in an alert warlike attitude, swiftly wielding his shield against the hero-folk. It was then that two daring Greek heroes saw that strait in which Hippomedon stood, to wit, warlike Alcon, a son of Sicvon [a town]. and active puissant Idas from Pisa. Those came, and their keen valiant companies along with them, to aid and help Hippomedon. And they put a knee to battle along with him. and that was a help to him from the confused showers of hard weapons that were directed upon him from every quarter. And when he lifted his head and hurled the rough and thick Grecian spear that was in his hand, it was as swift as arrow E. 43^a 44 from string directed through the hosts till it passed to Polites, so that there were signs of wounding after it, and through him. till it pierced the soldier Mopsus, and starkly slew the three Thebans next him, to wit, a Phocaean, Cydon, and a Tanagraean, and through those men without pause, till it struck in the head of the veteran Ervx, so that the rivets of the spear were sown among his teeth and in his brains. Thus they were six good heroes that Hippomedon slew at the one cast. And thereafter Leonteus arose to shield the host, and made a vain and hidden cast at Hippomedon, and he came thereafter secretly, and dragged Tydeus away. Though huge was the stress of valour in which Hippomedon was, he saw the Theban dragging Tydeus, and dealt him a sword-stroke, and smote off his arm at the shoulder. and this is what he said : "Tydeus," quoth he, "has struck thy hand off thee." Nay, thrice did the Thebans take unto them the body of Tydeus, and thrice did the Greeks take it from them by dint of fighting, prowess, and mutual wounding.

But there is one thing more. All the strong soldiers of the Thebans were unable to move Hippomedon from Tydeus' body. and though front-attacking battering rams whereby hills and cities are cleft, were hurled against him, they could not weary him from it, till the horrible infernal Fury, to wit, Tisiphone. came. And horror seized both the battalions at the loathsomeness of that witch, though they did not see her. It was then she assumed the form of a Greek, to wit, Halys, and she came stealthily and quietly to Hippomedon and spoke to him. And Hippomedon wondered at the fear and the terror that he conceived at the voice of the war-goddess, she being in the form of heroic Halys. For this is what she said to him, she being in sorrow: "What thou doest is vain," said she, "to defend Greek soldiers' entrails; and it were harder for thee to fetch Adrastus. the high-king, from Thebans out of the battle than his fellow, and he is first calling thee beyond everyone to aid and help him. And I regret how I saw his shining tresses in the hands of the hero-folk as they verily dragged him. And he is not far from thee at all, to wit, where thou seest the very great mass of dust, and the exceeding thick mist over the heads of the host." Now Hippomedon did not know what he should do thereat, and that war-goddess again urged him, and said to him: "It is more proper for thee to aid Adrastus than to stay by these perforated entrails of Tydeus." Then he put under the safeguard of his people after him the battle-objective, to wit, the body of Tydeus, and he came after the war-goddess, she being in the form of Halys, till she went from him in her own shape. And when she had gone away, he saw the Greeks, and amongst them Adrastus in his chariot, with no fear or anxiety on his part. And Tisiphone had wrought that guile in order that the Thebans might bear away the body of Tydeus behind Hippomedon's back.

But as to the Thebans, they took with them the body of Tydeus forthwith behind Hippomedon's back. Shouts of victory and boasting were raised by them over his head; and when Hippomedon heard that he recognised what had happened. "It is true," said he, "over Tydeus' body is this cry uttered." But yet it was rare for champions to brag over him while he lived, for more frequent with him were disasters of great calamities and defeats inflicted upon the Theban tribes by him. And when the body of Tydeus had reached them thus, they surrounded it from every direction and made an enemy mutilation of him as if he were alive, and it was a victory of valour to the champion among them who reddened his weapons in Tydeus' entrails. Now Hippomedon could not bear to listen to that without

Now Hippomedon could not bear to listen to that without going to him, though he knew that it was folly for himself to fight there for a lifeless body. And he proceeded with his naked sword in his hand, and he gave no recognition to friend or comrade there owing to the pressure of haste and the boiling of rage. But yet a hindrance to him were the paths slippery with the copious streams of blood which poured from the sides of the champions stricken by him, and owing to the quantity of weapons of the slaughtered veterans, and of the hard fractured chariots of the heroes utterly broken, and owing to half-dead warriors as they strove to rise again. And a hindrance to his moving and full activity was the wound which Eteocles, king of the Thebans, had inflicted on him. And he did not perceive that, or if he knew, he did not deign to show it, till he could avenge it on the man who had inflicted it on him. Then he saw Tydeus' faithful chariot-fighter, in his hand his master's horse, jingling her reins constantly; and he attempted to mount her, and when he did, the horse became hard-mouthed and restive to him, and this is what he said to her: "Why dost thou not allow me to mount thee, O horse?" said he. "For thine eye rests not on the confines of Calydon, or the king that trained thee. And thou wilt get truly bright grassy holms in Greek fields, provided thou come with me to avenge Tydeus upon the Thebans." Now it was likely that the horse understood what he had said to her, and she stayed for him, and he mounted her, and when he did, the horse galloped powerfully full-actively from the place where she was so that the very bright plains and the green-surfaced hills of Thebes shook with tumult. The rough crowds of the Thebans were massed and strengthened when they saw Hippomedon coming to them in that guise. Hippomedon smote and cut them down there so that the bodies of the heroes were writhing trunks falling behind him.

The Thebans turned about before him, and fled from the smooth plains on which they stood, till they reached the rugged borders of the river Ismenos; and hidden by-ways led them astray, and there was a copious very deep flood in the river when they reached it. Short was their stay there when Hippomedon arrived to attack them, and he menaced them without dismounting or leaping from his horse, but kept rounding up and gathering them. Then the Thebans leaped into the fords and estuaries of the river, and dropped their arms down the stream owing to the haste of the flight; and such was their eagerness for flight that they were pressing against the gravel and sand of the river while concealing themselves for fear of Hippomedon. For they preferred to be quickly drowned rather than to remain suffering tribulation from that man. Every one of them that was expert in water proceeded to swim over the stream, till the bound baldrics and very narrow cuirasses carried them to the bottom. He turned himself about upon them like a great huge sea-monster upon little speckled salmon till they were scattered and dispersed before him to the edges of harbours and havens. There one of Hippomedon's people, to wit, Ion, encountered Chromis, a Theban, in the middle of the river, and Ion fell there by the Theban. That however was no unrequited deed; for Antiphos, a Greek, vanquished Chromis forthwith. That, again, was nothing but what happened to Antiphos, for he fell before Hypseus son of Asopus, a Theban; and that was an end of days to Astyages and Linus, Greeks; for they fell there in the same fall as Theban Hypseus. There Hippomedon overthrew and bore down the dispirited hosts of Thebes. On the other hand, Hypseus, in opposition to him, threw into confusion the Greek companies that were along with Hippomedon, so that the beautiful stream of Ismenos was at that time crimson and bloody, though its waves were welling and pure-sided when those battalions came. That was natural that the surface of the river from one bank to another was a strong easily crossed bridge of much broken armour; and mangled heroes submerged to the gravel and sand at the bottom of the river formed firm anchors for a road.

When they were thus, Agripus, a Theban, stretched out his hand to a tree that was above his head on the river bank; and Menoeceus, a Greek, dealt him a sword-stroke, so that he left the hand clinging to the tree, and he fell into the river forthwith. Moreover Hypsens, a Theban, dealt Tages, a Greek (sic), a spear-thrust so that his skin was full of open wounds at the bottom of the river. And Agenor his brother proceeded to raise him up with him, and as he was unable to carry him, he let himself be drowned along with him. And also Capetus, a Theban, fell there into the whirlpool that was nigh, and he was drowned in it. Now though death was the end of each of those heroes, their fates were various, for there the spear of Mycalesius (sic), a Theban, in its course down the stream collided with Agyrtes, a Greek, and left him lifeless.

Now, there was wounded the bright-flanked mare of Tydeus, which was under Hippomedon, so that she was restively madly throwing him off. And he wondered at that, for he did not know what ailed her, till he saw the spear standing out from her. And when he saw that, he leaped off her, and plucked the coicer miledh so do maithibh na (p. 230 β) Tiauanda les don^{Theb.}_{1X} spear out of her, and began on foot to hew the hosts, till these five soldiers of the Theban nobles fell by him at that onrush, to wit, venomous Nomius, warlike Mimas, swiftly puissant Lichas, full-brave Lycetus, and Anthedonius son of Thisbaeus (sic). And he gave quarter to another son of Thespiades, to wit, Panemus, and this is what he said to him : "Arise, O lad, and go to Thebes," said he, "and tell therein how I have avenged Tydeus on the Thebans. And it is my wish that the bodies of the Thebans should lie under sea-monsters without being eaten and having no place of sepulture, like the white-sided body of Tydeus without the honour of finding sepulture." And thereupon Hippomedon began hardly and madly a sword-breaking on the Thebans, so that these champions fell by his hand, to wit, strong warlike Theron, rough-weaponed Gyas, highly puissant Erginus, very valiant Herses, and victorious Cretheus. A very bold swimmer was that man; and when he was swimming across the stream to his people he made a spear-cast at Pharsalus, and left him lifeless. But who could remember the deeds of Hippomedon against the Thebans that day save for many a skilful wizard or aged magician of history?

It is there too that a false notion of maturity and vigour seized a Theban youth who had never seen a battle before, to wit, Crenaeus, son of Faunus and a Nymph, to wit, Ismenis, a goddess of the sea or of that stream. She was his mother; and he came unto the battle. Distinguished and splendid among the hosts was that lad, for thus was he with a very thick spear above him, and a polished excellent sword in his hand, a conspicuous much variegated shield with many diverse engravings upon it on his back. And he came in that guise unto Hippomedon, and began urging and challenging him with a loud voice, and he said : "Not quietly does it pour against these grasses," said he, "and not pleasant easily drunk is the fine consecrated stream behind thee." Hippomedon, however, did not speak to him, but assailed him; and the river rose against Hippomedon so that the swift and rapid rushings which were creeping over his shoulders owing to the tumblings of the river restrained that hero from dealing a full blow. Nevertheless he struck Crenaeus, and struck again, so that Crenaeus fell by him.

That deed, however, was heard of by the boy's mother, and she came hastily and madly with her hair scattered about her head, while she rent her raiment, beat her breast, and ever called and shouted for her son. And though she did, she found him not. Nevertheless it was signified to her that her son was where the stream Ismenos goes out into the sea, and she came forward fluttering about quickly till she reached the place where he was. And when she arrived, she put her head under the stream, and continued seeking him among the headless bodies that lay in the river, till she found him; and when she had found him, she fondly and womanlike raised him with her till she reached the bank, and laid him down upon the bosky grass, and cleansed his body and his wounds, and kept sorrowing over him, and this is what she said: "It was evil of thy grandfather to allow the noble gods to kill thee, my son, seeing thou wert a young pupil in their hands a short time ago when thou wentest from me; and as it is now, however, thy face has a stern aspect, and there is a hole through thy side." And she was stirring up her father Ismenos against Hippomedon in order to avenge that deed upon him, and she said: "Impetuous now is Hippomedon," said she, "and thick and dark-sided are the waves of the stream of Ismenos with the blood and the spoils of the Thebans from the royal rush of that king. And come thou, O Ismenos," said she, "that we may make a noble grave here for thy grandson, to wit, for this my son." And when Ismenos heard that, he came sadly and hastily towards her, and this is what he said : "Not noble is the honour for me from the head of the gods, to wit, from Jove, to put huge slaughters under the consecrated stream, seeing that many fair and powerful gods have been reared along its bank, albeit it is filled with bodies. And Hippomedon," said he, "if I am a god, it will not be a deed of battle unavenged on thee that this youth was slain by thee; and it were a mighty thing and it were a boast for thee to reach the plains of Mycenae, after slaving my grandson, and without his being avenged on thee."

And no sooner had he said that than the streams, falls, and rivers of the Thebans collected and gathered to the stream of Ismenos, and with them rose the flood of the stream of Ismenos over banks and bounds, so that the dry and thirsty places in which water had never been before, which were not very near Hippomedon, were swollen very deep lochs. And he wondered that the water of the river should rise about him on every side and on every quarter. And a vast and great storm arose there in the stream of Ismenos, and broke its bounds and its banks, and tumbled its rough-headed rocks out of their places and positions. Anxiety like that Hippomedon never felt before, for to such an extent came the rush and the heightening of the stream that it hurled the huge rocks at his elbows and his knees, and this is what he said: "O Ismenos," said he, "whence art thou able to have such power, to wit, that I should be overwhelmed by thee?" And when he had said that, Ismenos let huge oaks down with the storm of the waves towards him, so that they often beat and starkly struck his breast and his bosom. And since he could not bear the weight and the crushing of those very great oaks, and the strength of the stream beating against him, he turned his back to them, and let himself go with the stream. And equally did the red rushing currents of the strong huge stream continue to strike Hippomedon, and the showers of mixed stones and hard weapons which the Thebans threw at him from land. He knew not, indeed, what to do; and of the hosts he found none who would dare touch him, though he preferred to die.

There, however, grew a bushy old tree out of the earth above the banks of the stream, and he stretched out his right hand towards it, and seized a handful of the tree-top; and the tree fell from the foot and from the roots owing to the weight of the soldier dragging it, so that its place after it was a very deep whirlpool, and Hippomedon was swallowed up in that whirlpool. And when the streams were looking down upon that noble hero, this is what he said: "Woe to thee, O Mars, god of battle, that thou dost inflict a death like this on me, as might be done upon a coward. And till to-day the like was not laid to me."

So that that is the fate of bright-cheeked Hippomedon of Mycenae in Greece proper.

But when beauteous Juno heard that, she came unto Jove, and said to him: "Sufficiently dost thou allow the Greeks to be wounded," said she, "for Tydeus was slain through Minerva's violence, and Amphiaraus met his fate through Apollo's devices ; and let Hippomedon be spared to me unto his land in the city of Mycenae, for he is a Greek soldier by descent, and to me was sacrificed what he brought with him of the cattle of his territory. And where is the promise thou didst make that thou wouldest allow the Greeks to be buried afterwards, Hippomedon's body being in a river in water?" When Jove heard that, he remained looking at distant Thebes; and the flood of the stream of Ismenos ebbed and abated, so that Hippomedon was visible in the place wherein he lay. When the Thebans saw him in that guise, they hurled a shower of spears and arrows at him. so that his body was a thick wood of them; and though that hero was half-dead and mangled, no Theban hero dared to spoil him of sword or helmet, till Hypseus, son of Asopus, came to him and struck his armour from him and was exulting and boasting throughout the host with the other king's gleaming sword in his hand and his helmet on his head. "Here," said he, "is victorious Hippomedon. And he was avenging Tydeus on the Thebans. They were destroyed and scattered in the stream of Ismenos," so that bright-cheeked Hippomedon slew twentythree kings at that onslaught in avenging Tydeus on the Thebans: and records in general do not commemorate the hosts he slew there.

Now deeply grieved was the high-spirited king Capaneus, son of Tairsis (sic), a Greek, to hear that boasting; and he shook and brandished the spear in his hand, and this is what he said: "It were just for thee, O hand," said he, "to assist me in fighting, for in thee is my confidence and not in any other powerful friend." That hero threw the rough snedded fir that was in his hand, and he directed it towards Hypseus, so that it quickly broke his back after splitting his shield and mangling his cuirass, so that like a compact stone tower severely broken was the overthrow of that champion or soldier as he fell. And this is what Capaneus said: "Look thou," said he, "it is I that have slain thee. And my slaying thee is a cause of honour to thy name." No sooner had he said that than he plucked Hippomedon's sword and helmet from him, and therewith plucked his own sword from himself and placed them on Hippomedon where he was lying, and said to him: "Here, O king Hippomedon, are thine own arms for thee, and the arms of thine enemies along with them, and they will be burnt by us side by side, when thou shalt be sacrificed to the gods." Yet a victorious ending to that battle hung doubtfully between the Thebans and the Greeks.

For loud and rough were the mourning cries of the Greeks bewailing Hippomedon, and no less was the sorrow of the Thebans bewailing Hypseus. Now whilst they were thus engaged, Atalanta, mother of Parthenopaeus, went, with the seven kings that had gone to sack Thebes, to the river Ladon to offer sacrifices to Diana, to wit, she is the goddess of hunting; and her son Parthenopaeus was a famous hunter also, and this was her reason for offering those sacrifices, to wit, horrible visions which she used to see in the night, to wit, the spoils and the weapons of her son and his following seen in her presence, and without his being among them. And she saw also in a vision a spreading thick oak which was consecrated to Diana whereon she used to place her weapons when she was tired after her hunting, with its crop and branches falling into earth's fastnesses; and she asked what had lopped the tree. Maenas answered her, to wit, a priestess of the folk of Bacchus, a god assisting Thebans was that Bacchus. Fear and terror seized Atalanta at that deed. and she arose early on the morrow to see that tree, and she saw its crop upon it. She came swiftly in haste to the temple of Diana after bathing thrice in the river Ladon, and she was interceding with Diana and this is what she said: "O goddess, Diana," said she, "a huntress am I of thy stock, and to thee I have sacrificed my son, to wit, Parthenopaeus; and I beseech thee for that son to send him triumphantly; and however his coming to me may be, that I may see him. And, tell me, are the visions I have seen true? And if they be, grant my son an honourable death, and that knowledge of my death may reach him before."

She saw Diana's altars, that they were wet with tears, and she was cleansing them.

Yet that is vain for thee, for the end of that lad's life is come, and he may not go against fate. And dost thou see me sad on account of the royal priest Amphiaraus, seeing I was not able to save him?" Diana answered, and this is what she said: "Since it is a certainty," said she, "it is just for me to succour that man, and to avenge him on the man that slew him." And each of them kissed the other, and Diana proceeded to Thebes and to the place where she had slain Niobe's children some time before.

As to the Greeks and the Thebans, however, never before had a fury of battle like that seized them, for vast was the keenness and urgency of the Thebans to avenge Hypseus on the Greeks. Greater, however, was the fury and anger of the Greek soldiers to avenge Hippomedon upon the Thebans, so that they were stout-hearted, none of them fleeing from their opponents.

It was then that Parthenopaeus, the young king of Arcadia, urged his keen proud mad charger among the hosts. And thus was the horse with a thick tiger's skin about her as a sign of victory. This was the dress of that king that was mounted on her. to wit, a fair bright-purple smock, beautifully coloured its very numerous fastenings (?), and a gold-woven much variegated tunic at his skin, which his mother had made for him before going on that journey, and an easy smooth girdle over him without, with many a row of precious stones, and a bossy bent shield, and a heavy strong-smiting sword in his hand. A beautiful golden fringe pressing together his raiment about him that would not impede the vigorous use of his arms, a noticeable very serviceable quiver, a smooth chained helmet on his head. And he doffed it. and he loosed his bright heavily curled tresses to the influence of the sun, and fair for every man to look upon was the sheen of those tresses on his head. And the mien of that lad was the better of the boiling anger that came upon him at that time. And though he was thus, the Thebans neglected attending on him. They left a place of the battlefield to him owing to his youth and want of experience, as they deemed. On his part, however, he was hardly madly sweeping them as under at one time, and keenly threateningly gathering them at another. Now the women of the Thebans were from high places of assembly praising and encouraging the deeds of that young lad.

But when Diana saw him in that guise, this is what she said: "Sad and grievous, methinks, O lad," said she, "is the turmoil of folly in which thou art. For I know not what aid I shall give thee, and it were easier for thee to be hunting along with thy mother in the wooded groves of Nemea than to be in the strife of battle thus. And strongly has thy mother now urged me about aiding thee." And when she was engaged in that conversation, mysterious thick clouds came over to the very middle of the battle unto the lad, and she plucked away his quiver, and gave to him well-made arrows by which no missing shot at all was made, and she shook a wondrous juice upon his horse that no weapons might harm her.

It was then that Parthenopaeus in that guise attacked the hosts as a mangling lions' whelp attacks fleeing flocks, but it is not possible to number those Thebans that fell by his hand besides their chiefs and leaders. And these are the names of some of them, to wit, Coroebus a son of Tanagrae (sic), unsubdued Eurytion, lofty and wise Argus, full-beautiful Lamus, and full-powerful Lygdus for he was a priest, and noble veteran Aeolus from Euboea. Further not a missing cast did he send, and they were delivered from him at one another's heels. And who would have believed that it was from one quiver or from one bow the flights of arrows were hurled which that champion hurled? For simultaneously those showers of arrows would grievously wound and pour forth from rear, front, and each side of him.

Now at that time the Thebans attacked Parthenopaeus, for they thought it no honour not to avenge upon him the ills he had done them. And the one of them that strongly assailed him first was Amphion, of the original stock of Jove, strong-willed son of Saturn, and this is what he said to him : "Parthenopaeus," said he, "great is the pride and the madness that have seized thee in slaughtering the Thebans, since it is no honour for soldier or champion of theirs to contend with thee owing to thy youth and inexperience. Leave the battle, and go to Arcadia, and play with thy coevals; or if thou think it greater fame, thou wilt fall by us in this battle." When Parthenopaeus heard that, however, he said : "Not of the fleeing Theban stock is my lady mother at all," said he, "but of the manly Arcadian stock of Atalanta." Now Amphion did not endure listening to that, and he delivered a very strong cast of the thick huge spear that was in his hand at Parthenopaeus. When he saw the shimmering of the spear approaching him, he deftly avoided it, and let the spear pass him. The anger of Amphion was the greater that a missing cast should be delivered by him. And while they were thus. Diana came to the middle of the battle to aid Parthenopaeus and she assumed the form of Dorceus a Greek, for he was family tutor to Parthenopaeus, and by Dorceus did Parthenopaeus' mother enjoin him against going on that journey. And when she had assumed his form, then she said to Parthenopaeus: "Enough of Thebans hast thou wounded, lad," said she, "and arise and go safe and sound unto the sea whence thou hast come, for the honour of the gods." He did not accept that, and this is what he said: "O comrade Dorceus," said he, "let me slay the man that wounded me, to wit, Amphion, and let us not wound Thebans any more; and when he shall fall by me, I shall give his horse and his dress to Diana, and I shall give his quiver to my mother."

And when he had said that, it was revealed to Venus, the goddess, that Diana was assisting the Greeks. And she urged her lover, to wit, Mars, son of Jove the god of battle, that he should go to assist the Thebans. For Harmonia, daughter of Mars and Venus, was grandmother of the Thebans, and therefore she sent the cruel battle-powerful one, to wit, Mars, unto Diana; and when he arrived he continued reviling the maiden greatly, and this is what he said: "It is not for thee, O Diana," said he, "to marshal battlalions of valour or heroism, but to shoot warlike arrows in hunting." And she came silently to rescue Parthenopaeus.

And thereafter came Mars to incite the Thebans against the Greeks. And the one of them he incited first was Dryas, son of Orion, and that lad exercised his heroic activity on the Arcadians and on all the assemblies that were along with Parthenopaeus engaging in that battle. or heat there whilst hewing the hosts; for he was certain that though he might be languid in prowess, Parthenopaeus would fall by his hand. As for Parthenopaeus however, the baleful portents when Diana parted from him reft his prowess from him, to wit, that his strength should be lessened, and his quiver emptied by vain shots, and the gleam of Dryas' shield among the hosts as he hewed them. Great terror seized Parthenopaeus at those deeds, and he placed on string the well-poised arrow in his hand, though it was vain for him; for when he was placing the arrow on the string, at that moment Dryas the mad Theban delivered a cast of the jagged warlike spear that was in his hand, so that there with a hole in his side and transpierced from one side to another was Parthenopaeus, son of Meleager, the battle-victorious king of Calydon; and it is that Meleager who was foster-brother in the equal use of arms, to Theseus, son of Aegeus, son of Neptune. He was separated from horse and arms, and Dryas did not lower his hand till he delivered a cast at the horse and he cut and mangled its ham; and no sooner had Dryas delivered those casts than he himself fell stark dead forthwith.

They wondered however at that, for they knew not who had killed him. Nevertheless it was Diana that killed him in revenge for Parthenopaeus; as above, she had promised his mother that she would avenge her son upon the man who should slay him.

Now when Parthenopaeus fell, his followers, in order that he might be in a place secluded and inaccessible, raised and bore him to the side of the plain; and though he lay there very weak, it was not his own wounds he bewailed; but the Calydonian, full comradelike, was bewailing his horse that it should be slain. Nevertheless signs of death came towards himself; for then a blackness and an unseemliness came over his face, though he was bright-cheeked and crimson hitherto. And he shed awful showers of blood over his ever-white snowy body at that time; and there came to him joy, gladness, and joyous talk; and this is the testament he pleaded at last: "Dorceus," said he, "since I have fallen here, do thou go unto the castle of my wretched sorrowing mother, and do not confess to her forthwith m' oidhedh¹ d' faghuail damsa, \neg intan toicceua m' arm \neg m'^{Theb.}_{1X} edach dí, \neg abair ria rodl*ig*ius-sa m' oidhedh¹ da fhaghuail, uair 891 is daf sarugud-si \neg dar ainneoil na ndei tanac dochum in eatha-sa, \neg na denaid duba na domenmha don scel, \neg beir let 900 3850 mo trilis dí a n-inad commordha m' oidhedha, \neg abair ria can

Now it was then that Jove, son of Saturn, hastened great nobles towards those hosts to check their fray. Nevertheless it was not for good to Greeks or Thebans that he did that but to aid the kindly foreign tribes he had destroyed along with them. It was horrible to dwell in the plains of Thebes that night: for there were left soldiers with their followers slain officers with their companies slaughtered, chiefs with their champions fallen, arms furiously broken, and fleet horses stark dead that were sweating in heroes' chariots at the beginning of the day before. It was then those hosts separated, to wit, the Thebans to houses and the heroic mangled Greeks to camps. And though the gates were narrow for those goodly hosts in going to battle, they were broad and full-wide in going from it owing to the number of their losses. Again there was an exulting shout and vast weeping with each of those. It was a vast joy to the Thebans that four Greek kings should be slain and their hosts astray after them, to wit, Amphiaraus, Tydeus, Hippomedon and Parthenopaeus. The Thebans reached the cities, and this is the plan they resolved on to send out watchmen and a guard on the camps of the Greeks that night, in order that they might not escape them. And it was these that went on that guard, to wit, soldierly Meges, and heroic Lycus with their followers. And they brought with them wine feasts and fires. And Eteocles, king of Thebes, was strengthening them, and this is what he said to them : "Show bravery, O men," said he, "and fortify your minds, and guard the Greeks well to-night, seeing that to you belong victory and boast over them; for fallen are their kings, to wit, Amphiaraus, the noble priest, and Tydeus, the strong soldier, and pre-eminent Hippomedon." And he did not count Parthenopaeus, for he was ashamed of his youth, and that he had fallen by Thebans. "And there is none of them now at all," said he, "save the feeble old man Adrastus, and the young lad of no prowess, Polynices, and the mad man Capaneus, son of Tairsis (sic), and as for those," said he, "they would all have been killed had not night come immediately." And when Eteocles had uttered that message to the people of the watch, they arose actively mercilessly without staying, though their wives and followers were holding them back, till they came to the neighbourhood of that camp of the Greeks, and they had been watchfully feasting there the two days previously.

As for the women and female assemblies of the Greeks after the departure of their men, they then offered honourable sacrifices in the noble temples of Juno for the arrival of their men, victorious, safe and sound, and in good heart; and they were reminding Juno of all that the Thebans had done to them. And she did not know what she should do about that, but this is the plan she adopted, to enjoin upon the Thebans rest and sleep that night in order to accomplish the slaughter of them by the Greeks. And it was then she sent forth a powerful dame of her following, to wit, Iris, unto the god of sleep, to wit, Somnus, And when Iris had reached the sleepy houses of Somnus this is what she said to him: "Juno has told thee, O Somnus," said she, "to induce sleep and prolonged slumber on the Thebans both without and within." Now Somnus arose to perform that deed, and slumber fell heavily through sheer exhaustion upon the Thebans in each place wherein they were, so that they all remained exhausted and cowardlike in profound slumber

As for the Greeks, however, they were watchfully and angrily intent upon the Thebans who were round about them. And whilst they were thus engaged, Thiodamas, son of Melanippus, the Greek augural priest arose; and it was he that had been appointed by them in Amphiaraus' stead; and he began a prophecy to the Greeks, so that they all came into one place round the high-king Adrastus to follow his counsel; and they were sorrowful and sad as they beheld the empty places of the kings that had been slain of their following.

Now, it was then that the powerful augur arose, to wit, Thiodamas, to urge the hosts, and this is what he said: "The gods have abandoned the Thebans to you indeed this very night; and Amphiaraus has appeared to me, and this is what he has said to you, to avenge your followers to-night upon the Thebans, since it is a certainty for you to gain a victory over them; and though no other go there, I shall go."

Now with that incitement actively angrily arose the champions and chiefs of the Greeks. Yet it was then that Thiodamas chose the thirty strong Greek soldiers he deemed the best. And it was the earnest desire of all the Greeks at that time to make a strong assault upon the Thebans, and they said that a decision by lot should be made among them; for this was the choice of each of them individually that it might be he that would reach the Thebans first.

Now thereafter arose Adrastus, the high-king, and said: "Stay, O men," said he, "a few are enough to work their slaughter; and let us all come at daylight to attack them."

Now thereafter arose the very skilful wizard Thiodamas and Agylleus, son of Hercules, along with him. That lad was like his father; and noble Actor, for no Greek existed who was wiser than he; and ten men were along with each man of those. There Thiodamas put from him his distinguished garb into the bosom of the high-king Adrastus. And he put on the helmet and mail of great Polynices, son of Oedipus. Heroic Actor also took the sword of Capaneus into his hand. Moreover Agylleus son of Hercules brought with him the arms of venomous Nomius, for the arrows of Hercules which he himself possessed were not in his opinion suitable for fighting with in the place. And thereafter those people leaped forth actively over the top of their camp wall, for they did not wish the sound of the brass doors to be heard as they were being opened. And scarcely had they gone when they found the men drunk and overcome with sleep, and Thiodamas said : "O Greeks, are not these the folk that were besieging you? And it is easy for you now to be avenged on them." And he plucked his sword out of its sheath, and he came through the hosts, and he was hewing and slaving them, so that it was not possible to count their number or to remember the companies of their heroes that fell there by Thiodamas. For he left there heroes half-killed on their litters, and warriors broken in the hollow of their shields, and champions smitten on beds of grass and of sacred wood. Also the worshipful gods were there aiding the Greeks, and cutting at the Thebans. As for Agylleus, son of Hercules, however, not less were the slaughters he inflicted on the Thebans; and he continued to destroy and exterminate till the sweet musician Ialmenus, harper of the Thebans, met him after playing to the hosts; and his sweetness did not serve him, for he fell forthwith by the hand of the son of Hercules. As for Actor, again, not mild was his battle as he starkly slew the Thebans, till strong and valiant Thamyris fell by his hand. Echeclus, a Theban, also fell by Tagus, a Greek. Calpetus, a Theban, was sound asleep between the vokes of the chariot till Thiodamas, a Greek, came unto him and the awakening he bestowed on him was to give him a sword-stroke, so that he was a bare trunk in consequence of it.

Thus they continued starkly slaying the Thebans till the end of the night approached them, and prudent Actor, a Greek, saw that. He began to call Thiodamas to him, and this is what he said to him: "Sufficient," said he, "is the victory we have obtained, for all that were slayable here of Thebans have fallen by us, and let us be going with this battle-triumphant victory we have won." Thiodamas accepted that, and was extolling the goddess of night, to wit, Phoebe, for the victory she had given them that night. And every night-victory that anyone wins is through the intercession of that goddess, Phoebe, according to agelong heathen histories. And he promised her that he would sacrifice as many cattle to her as the whole of the hosts he had slain γ roimpad ar^1 co subach sirforfhailid leisna gnimaib sin dochum $\frac{\text{Theb.}}{x}$ a longphuirt².

there. And after these deeds they returned joyfully and with lasting gladness to their camp.

And there were two greatly virulent soldiers with them there, to wit, Hopleus of the followers of Tydeus, son of the king of Calydon, and Dymas of the following of Parthenopaeus, king of Arcadia; and neither of those twain preferred to live after their lords, and Hopleus said to Dymas: "O comrade," said he, "dost thou take ill the end of thy lord, to wit, Parthenopaeus, that his body should lie under the dogs and birds of Thebes? Yet mightily has it overwhelmed me, and tortured my heart, that my own lord should be thus, to wit, Tydeus, son of the king of Calydon; and let me not go alive to Calydon without his body being with me." "Alas for that," said Dymas, "I am sadder for my lord than any man, and I shall go there whether thou go or not."

Then they proceeded to search the battlefield in order to bring the bodies of their lords with them, and they continued searching for them till the radiance of the pure-bright sun arose on the morrow, and every full view about them was clear to them. And there each of them found the body of his lord, raised them up and carried them with them as very great burdens requiring very great effort. And they proceeded silently, sadly, hastily to their camp. They thought it hard, however, that the full glare of day should come with these doings.

Now when they had reached the neighbourhood of their camp, they heard a brisk sound and a big din behind them. And Amphion, a Theban, was there, and with him his band of a goodly host for whom they had no watches set; and they used to spy on the camp of the Greeks early in the morning. And Amphion saw there some Greeks with the bodies of their champions upon them, and he urged his horse till he overtook them, and this is what he said to them: "Stay, O men," said he, "till we find out who ye are. Yet as regards you it is clear to us that ye are foes to Thebans." Then was each of them hastening past the other for fear of Amphion. Yet it was not for themselves they feared anything, but lest the gory and wounded bodies that were upon their backs should be left. Now Theban Amphion was greatly menacing them, and he delivered a cast at the man of them who was in front, to wit, Dymas, and the spear fell near him without danger. Then came the greatspirited soldier Aepytus, a Theban, and delivered a strong very brave lethal cast of a spear at Hopleus, on whom was the body of Tydeus, so that it broke his back there, and pierced the body of Tydeus that was upon his back, and he fell owing to that wound. Dymas, however, glanced back, and saw too many of the Thebans pressing him heavily, and he did not know whether he should ask for quarter or give them battle. Yet this is the plan he adopted. He laid down the body that was upon him, to wit, Parthenopaeus' body, and placed his strong tiger's skin that was round him in his left hand, and his blazing flaming sword in his right, and in that guise he turned about upon the hosts like a full-angry lion which heroes do not tackle after his anguish about his whelps, so that he is indifferent whether to die or live. Then he and the Theban veteran, Amphion, encountered in battle and strife; and there Amphion dealt Dymas a swordstroke, and struck off his powerful right arm at the shoulder, and the Thebans dragged the body of Parthenopaeus away. When Dymas saw that, however, he was miserably and sadly begging the body, begging his lord from them, and he said to them: "By the gods that are yours, O men," said he, "show gentleness to the body ye drag, and give to birds and flocks my body, for that is more just than the body which ye have." Then said Amphion to him: "The body of thy lord will be given up to thee, and thou thyself wilt be let away as thou art, if thou should be tray and abandon the Greeks to me." Dymas answered him, and this is what he said: "Indeed I would not do that though it were to save my lord alive, provided that for myself no evil should attach to me." And no sooner had he said that than he ran his naked sword into his breast and his bosom and died there forthwith. Nay more, thus died they, to wit, Hopleus and Dymas, through the harmony of their friendship, as fell of yore Nisus and Euryalus, Trojans, in the great voyage of Æneas, when Turnus' following had slain one of them, as is related in the voyage of Æneas.

And thereafter Amphion sent away news to Thebes to relate those tales therein, and he himself advanced to besiege the camp of the Greeks, and to show them those heads.

Then the Greeks saw Thiodamas approaching, who had killed the watchers, and was himself joyous and ever glad, bragging of the deeds he had done; and by them were raised shouts of contempt and boastful laughter along with him; and when they were thus boasting of his victory, they then perceived that Hopleus and Dymas were absent. Sorrow and great complaint grew among them, when they did not see those men.

As regards Theban Amphion, however, he came forward till he reached the neighbourhood of the camp; and when he saw the huge slaughters of the Thebans, silence fell upon him greatly, so that he was not active in walking about, and conversations were unsuitable owing to the extent of the sorrow that came upon him as he saw them; and he turned him about forthwith there, and came back to Thebes.

As for the Greeks, however, they went actively bitterly through the gates of their camp to go to the Thebans; and there they proceeded through the middle of the field of battle which their following had waged the night before. They, on the other hand, were joyous as they saw how all the houses and dwellings of the Thebans were being demolished.

Then Capaneus encouraged the Greek soldiery about going to make a strong attack on Thebes, and this is what he said to them: "Arise, O youths," said he, "along with me, for I am long in raising my renown and my great power by the sack of Thebes. For my white-hued strong right hand is my god, and it is my hard heroic sword that is mighty for me." heroically, and great Polynices son of Oedipus, to wit, the exile of the siege; and Thiodamas son of Melanippus, and the two sons of Jason son of Aeson, to wit, Thoas and Euneos, and Agylleus son of Hercules. And these men came strongly in great haste to the walls of Thebes, and when they reached the city, there was puissant Amphion relating to the Thebans that their watchers had been slain by the Greeks. And Greek soldiery arrived there unobserved, and would have stood in the midst of Thebes were it not that the spirited soldier Megareus yelled and shouted at them from the walls of the city, and this is what he said: "O men," said he, "let the gates of your city be shut and strengthened by you, seeing your enemies are attacking you, to wit, the spirited hosts of the Greeks."

Then the Thebans arose, and shut the gates of their city forthwith, save one door only, to wit, Ogygiae; and Echion, a Theban, arrived alone to shut it against the Greeks; and when he was shutting it, the stern Spartan youths tried to go over him by force. Then Echion attacked them manfully, so that champions fell on the threshold of the gate from the skirmish of that Theban with them, to wit, Echion. The best of the Greeks that fell there by the hand of Echion are these, to wit, Panopeus from the green-surfaced hills of Taygetus, and the distinguished swimmer from the river Eurotas, to wit, Oebalus; and the puissant veteran Alcidamas. And strong was the battle of that folk on the threshold of Thebes, till these two Thebans arrived to help Echion, to wit, Acron and Ialmenides, and they shut the gate by force. And huge was the loss of each of those two hosts, for a crowd of Thebans was left out before the gate owing to the haste wherewith the town was closed. Also there was on this side a crowd of Greeks that had not arrived outside to their people, for on this side fell in the town Greek heroes, to wit, Ormenus and Amyntor, and that lad was beheaded by them, for thus was he with a beautiful gold necklace about his neck.

But as for the Greeks, they threw down and swiftly scattered the boundary wall of Thebes during that time, and heroes and foot-soldiers there pressed close; to the walls of the city. For their horsemen could not reach over the very broad moats that were around it. Also the Thebans were strengthening their city so that great was the sound of the bars being placed through the chains closing and pressing the huge brass doors against the very strong stone gateways of the city. Also a crowd of Greeks was there engaged in shooting fiery arrows at the tops of the towers and houses of Thebes in order to burn them. There were also other crowds of them sacking and undermining it from below, with a tortoise of shields round them. Moreover the Thebans filled the projecting galleries of Thebes in order to defend the towers and the houses. It was hard to endure under them at that time, owing to the abundance of various weapons being shot by them at the Greeks. They hurled thonged wellpoised spears, and very swift winged arrows, and hard wellaiming stones, and huge lumps of lead; and such was the density of those showers which the Thebans hurled in defending their city that their arms and various sharp weapons were as thick as hard showers of hailstones striking over the faces of the shields and over the hard helmets of the Greeks. Not to fear or flight did that move the Greeks. But they set their faces closely and earnestly up to the city, and they were strongly sacking it. It was then it came to pass that Antheus, a bold and valorous Greek, went round about the city, and a heavy Theban spear chanced to strike him in his breast and threw him out of his chariot, and his feet were cleaving to the wheels and ropes of the chariot, and he compassed the city in that manner, and afterwards died. But when the Greeks saw that, they uttered a fierce troubled shout, and their warlike battle-trumpets were sounded by them, and they divided their hosts among the gates of Thebes, and they were swiftly scattering the Thebans.

Awful indeed to listen to at that time were the clatter and tumult of the Thebans throughout the ancient city, owing to the greatness of the fear that seized them at the strong assault which the Greeks delivered round about them, and they filled the houses and temples of that city, and they were involved in sorrow, dejection, and many reflections among themselves. And some of them there were saying that the kingdom should be given to Polynices for the space of that year, and Eteocles put upon his agreement and driven from them. Some others of them said that counsel was not proper, and though they adopted it, that Polynices would not take it at their hands, till he could bring home upon them every injustice they had done to him. But they decided on this, that their very skilful wizard, to wit, Tiresias, should be brought to them, and a truthful prophecy be made them.

Then Tiresias arose and said to his daughter, to wit, Manto: "Make us an altar of sacrifice, O daughter, and light fires." And that the maiden did, till it was finished by her.

Then was seen the vision of a serpent on the highest point of the flame that rose from the fires, and through that occurrence Tiresias understood the burden of the prophecy, and he was illumined there by vision and by prophecy. And this is what he said to the Thebans: "If ye do everything that I shall tell you, victory were yours at this time, to wit, that the youngest man of the seed of Cadmus, son of Agenor, should be sacrificed to the gods; and it would be a blessing for that man that aid and help for the Thebans should be found through his means."

Heroic Creon of the brave race of Cadmus heard that, and great fear seized him thereat, for he thought that it was his own son that would be offered there, to wit, Menoeceus. For he was the youngest among them of the royal seed of Cadmus, son of Agenor.

And then Creon said to the wizard: "Hide that fact and speak it no more." Now the wizard remained silent thereupon. E. 47^b 19

And since he did, all the Thebans at once entreated that a further vision should be made them.

Then arose Tiresias and his daughter Manto, and took over them a hiding vail till they reached the place where was Menoeceus, son of Creon: and there was the lad in one of the doors of the city, with innumerable crowds of Greeks that had fallen by him, and puissant Haemon his brother and his coeval besides, fighting along with him there. There was none of them more beautiful or wiser than that lad, to wit, Menoeceus. And then Manto daughter of Tiresias said to him: "Lad," said she, "the gods are asking thee to be sacrificed to them for the sake of all the Thebans. And do thou leave the dull earthly body in which thou art, for it is better for thee to be in the very bright He accordingly accepted that from the maiden; for an honour, it seemed to him, was his own fate in order to gain an advantage for his countrymen. And he proceeded in haste to the middle of the town to interview his mother and his father. And when he came, his father was addressing him, and this is what he said to him: "Son," said he, "do not begin the journey on which thou goest, for everything Tiresias tells there is all a lie." But Menoeceus might not stay, though his father was detaining him, and he practised deceit on his father, and this is what he said to him : "Not on that errand do I essay to go at all," said he, "and it is not that that would urge me, that Tiresias should speak to me. But this has impelled me that my brother, to wit, Haemon is wounded by Greeks, and by dint of favour they got him from them; and do ye go to him, for death is nigh him, and here am I to ask the chief leech, to wit, Action, to attend him." They separated thus, and Creon advanced sorrowfully and doubtingly to seek his other son.

Menoeccus, however, when his father had separated from him in that manner, proceeded actively and in haste, till he arrived at the wall of the city, and when he had reached it, he spoke with the distinction of a loud voice, and this is what he said: "O gods! to whom I give myself," said he, "vouchsafe indeed E. 47^b 49 victory in this battle and fray to Thebans. Depress and overthrow Greek soldiers that they may fall by us." When he had said that he rushed a vulnerable part of his body on the hard point of his sword so that the wall of the city was red and bloody with his blood and entrails. The Thebans fetched his body from outside into the city, and left him in his father's house after extolling him in an elegiac quire-song; and they proceeded unto the battle thereafter.

But his mother cried and screamed over the lad, and this is what she said: "Vain indeed for me, O son," said she, "was my bringing thee up honourably; and unlike are my children and the sinful children of Jocasta, though my son has been slain, and her sons are safe, to wit, Eteocles and Polynices." And she continued in those reflections till her people came to her and brought her with them to her bed-chamber, and were comforting her there.

When the Thebans were engaged in those deeds, the stout soldier Capaneus urged the soldiers of the Greeks unto the gate of Thebes, and he turned himself about upon the hosts, and he encompassed and overthrew the horsemen of the Thebans. He thinned and starkly slew the heroes that used to march near him about the gates of the city.

Nay, towers and houses were overthrown by the very great stones which that champion continued to cast into the city, and troops were fatally broken by that hero's sword-strokes, and well marked were the sides of noble scions severely wounded by the spears he threw. And this was what seemed likely to Thebans there that the seven Greek royal soldiers would have fallen by them, if they had been at one time encompassing and starkly slaying them at that same attack which Capaneus made upon them. For indifferently he used to slay them, both young and old, women and little folks, so that no heroes or battle-soldiers would stay to meet and fight with him; and that Greek was a terror to every mortal, the while he was steadily contemplated, owing to the extent of his frightfulness.

Nay, no wizard or true man of skill had been able to extol the prowess of that man, had not the gods been earnestly bringing it E. 48a 32 to their good remembrance. And such was the greatness of mind that seized him unto war that he thought it no honour or distinction to fight with the tribes of the earth, but with strong bright gods of heaven. And Capaneus was there looking at the high stormy air over his head, and he saw near him two small sturdy oaks as high as the stone-walls of the city, and this is what he said there : "My great mind indeed does not allow me to rest without climbing these, that I may find out from the gods whether the man they killed in their honour were an advantage to Thebans, and that I may find out whether the gods themselves consist of honour or of strength." And he climbed joyously and gladly after that to the top of the city walls.

But silence fell on Thebans as they saw him a warlike baleful bow, as if the troubled day of judgment were come to raze their city on their heads, and yet they set their faces on him, and shot at him from the houses and projecting galleries of Thebes with huge oaks and well-aimed stones.

Now he sustained those very great showers which the men were pouring on him, and maintained himself there like a firm rock among the red rushing torrents of the eddies playing upon him. And when the Thebans discontinued these showers from him, he set about abuse and great contempt of them. And he said to them: "For whom might these slender Theban walls be a tower to be destroyed or thrown down to the ground?" And no sooner had he said that than he overthrew on the heads of the Thebans the firm structure of planking and projecting galleries for fighting that were above the walls of the city, and indeed he was in that way overthrowing Thebes from its wall and from its roof.

Then again powerful friends of the Thebans and powerful friends of the Greeks were addressing Jove, son of Saturn, and each of them asking help for his friend. Now it was they that were there assisting Thebans, to wit, noble Apollo, son of Jove, and powerful Venus, and mighty proud Bacchus, and warlike Hercules, son of Jove. But these were siding with Greeks, to wit, Juno of many charms, and Minerva of great might and Perseus of chief skill, son of Jove, and Danae daughter of a king of Greeks was his mother. Now Jove was impartial among those peoples, not assisting one of them more than another, till Capaneus reached him and this is what Capaneus said, for he did not obtain battle from Thebans where he stood upon the wall of their eity: "Where are ye at all," said he, "ye cowardly and weak gods of the Thebans, to wit, Apollo, Bacchus, and Hercules? and it is not to rally them," said he, "for it is not worth my while, but, O Jove in particular," said he, "it is with thee I think it worth while to fight, and do thou come to meet me, if thou art powerful over thunderbolts." $4e \tan(sic conif Cadda)$

When Jove heard that he laughed a derisive laugh, and thereupon said: "Grim is the rally thou layest upon us, and it is right to do thee harm." And after that Jove brought still very dark clouds and forebodings of heavy wetting on earth's face, so that the hills or houses of the Thebans were not visible at that time. And through that came great doom-crashing thunder above Thebes, to wit, as if it were moving the firmament out of its foundation and position. Capaneus, however, stood unmoved thereat upon the wall, till fiery thunderbolts lightened up as they fell upon the face and the northern edges of the earth.

This is what he said on seeing it: "It is indeed right," said he, "that fires like these should be left for Thebans, and now I shall get lighted torches and bushy oaks of red flame to shoot at them." And when Capaneus was in that word-complacency, a quivering purple-red thunderbolt chanced to reach him, and sent his helmet from his head, and split his shield from rim to border, and set the whole of his own body aflame from head to sole. The battalions on both sides saw that, and they withdrew on every side from the walls of the city in order to prevent the hero's body from falling upon them. body was illuminated on the course it fell from the city wall, and he died thus by a thunderbolt of Jove for the great word he spoke against him. And the very beautiful grassy plain on which he lay blazed with the flame of his body. Nevertheless it was right for the nations to remember the deeds of that lad, and for the gods to extol him afterwards; for a man with the strength of a hundred heroes would not have fallen were not gods to cast him off.

BOOK XI

Now when Capaneus fell, Jove son of Saturn sent darkness to the face of the earth. The Thebans all gathered to one place, and their wives and children came from houses and temples; for they dared not rise hitherto, owing to the fierce fight of Capaneus against them. But the Greeks then withdrew from the city; and assuredly that was not in order to flee from the Thebans, but for fear that Jove, son of Saturn, might burn them as he had burnt Capaneus.

When the spirited soldiers of the children of Cadmus, son of Agenor, had seen that, they followed them to camp and leaguers; and these are they of the Thebans that first followed the Greeks, to wit, young warlike Eurymedon, son of Pan; and full-brave Lapithaon, and his son along with him, to wit, Alatreus; and those champions inflicted huge slaughters on the Greeks, till they reached their camp. And they continued besieging them afterwards. Wonderful at that time was the fickleness of fortune, seeing that the men that were previously besieging the Thebans should be forthwith besieged by them when Capaneus fell. And it was these that fell before Thebans round about the gates of that camp-the youths that came from the city of Hercules in the army of the Greeks, till the veteran of prowess arose, to wit, Enveus, and blew a warning trumpet to the men to cross over into the camp in order to escape from the Thebans. And as Enveus was blowing his trumpet, a cruel barbed arrow chanced to come to him, and left him lifeless, and his empty trumpet was sounding after him.

The conflict of the king of Thebes and the king of the siege here, to wit, the two sons of Oedipus, to wit, great Polynices, and young warlike Eteocles.

Then arose the hideous, complaining, hustling, pursuing goddess, to wit, Tisiphone from the depths of hell, to urge and incite those two brothers against one another, to wit. Eteocles and Polynices. And since she did not hope to succeed by herself alone in stirring up the fury of the anger of those two, she uttered a loud awful cry for her treacherous uncourtly sister, to wit, Megaera. And when Megaera heard that she arose actively from the low places of the river of Orcus, and when she reached her sister Tisiphone, she said to her : " It is I that have promoted the battles till to-day," said she, " between those peoples; and now do thou take thy choice which of them thou wilt incite unto the battle. Nevertheless it is more proper to allow me Eteocles: for he has his mother and his sister detaining him, and do thou proceed to the camp of the Greeks, to the exile Polynices, in order to incite him strongly." Each of them parted from the other very swiftly on the wing there, and Megaera came forward to Polynices, and assumed the form of his spouse, to wit, Argia, daughter of Adrastus. And then Polynices chanced to meet her gloomily and sadly before the camp, with the anxiety and the constant thinking about the battle greatly on his mind, and sorrow for his intimate friend upon him, to wit, Tydeus, son of Oeneus. When he saw Megaera there, she being in the likeness of his spouse, he wondered, and said to her: "Wherefore comest thou, O maiden," said he, "and what is the sadness that lies upon thee?" She gave him no answer; and since she gave him no answer, he understood that that was a vision. For he did not hope that his own spouse had come hither from the cornfields of Greeks to visit him. And yet that goddess troubled Polynices, so that he preferred to find battle and conflict at that time rather than kingship and sovereignty over green-surfaced Thebes with its choice tribes. And he came forward in haste to address his father-in-law, to wit, Adrastus, and this is what he said to him : "It is late for me," said he, "that I have decided on a plan after (the death of) my friends; and it is sad that I and my brother did not then form a plan the first day the Greeks came to Thebes before the things befell that have happened between us. And now," said he, "I shall do battle with Eteocles, and do not hinder us from doing it. And health to thee, O highking, after I am gone, and to all the nobles of the Greeks." Now the heroes were equally sad at that farewell of Polynices, and Adrastus was comforting and detaining him; but he did not stay with Adrastus, for the goddess was disquieting him, to wit, Megaera. And this is what she said to him: "Do not delay, O lad," said she, "seeing thy brother Eteocles is calling for thee, and is hastening for battle and conflict with thee." Then, indeed, Polynices arose actively and in haste, and urged his horse over the fine smooth plains, till he came to the city of Thebes.

As to Polynices thus far.

As regards Eteocles, king of Thebes, he was thus engaged in offering honourable sacrifices to Jove, son of Saturn, for a Theban victory; and he was tracing back Jove's relationship with the Thebans. And when Eteocles was thus engaged in offering the sacrifices, a jet black spark sprang from the fire of the sacrifice. and burnt the king's helmet and his hair. And when he was so, a messenger came urgently and in haste to him, to wit, Aepytus. And this is what he said to Eteocles: "Quickly stop the sacrifices," said he, "seeing thy brother hath arrived at the gate of Thebes in quest of thee; and he is calling thee and challenging thee alone with a view to battle and conflict with thee." Now Eteocles heard that, and he arose angrily manfully, and the tale that had come to him he deemed no honour. And there approached him his battle-heroes and his usual soldiers accompanying, and this is what they said to him : "Stay, O highking," said they, "in thy royal seat, and be composed and joyous, and we shall ward off thine enemies from thee, and he that urged a combat on thee will fall." And then came powerful Creon to him, and it was not to check the fray he essayed; but he began to hurl wordy insults at Eteocles, pressing and strongly inciting him unto the combat. And this is what he said to him: "There will be no peace or joy in this fatherland," said he, "as long as thou art in kingship over them, and thou art well content that our sons and brothers should fall in battles and contests for thy sake, whilst thou thyself art in coward flight avoiding thy brother, though he is challenging thee at the gate of the city."

Eteocles answered Creon furiously and angrily, and this is what he said to him : "Well, it is not sorrow for thy people that makes thee say that, but thou thyself wouldest fain be in this kingship, if I should fall in the contest. And, O men," said he, "my arms must be prepared for me by you, that we may wage battle, I and the warlike hero that is challenging me, to wit, Polynices; and if I should be victorious in that contest, then I would disprove against Creon his angry and unjust judgment." And while Eteocles was engaged in these reflections, then came to him his mother, to wit, Jocasta, feebly and in tears, with her full-white hands outspread, and her shining bosom bare; and when she reached him thus, the lad was then donning his arms and his battle-gear of struggle and contest, and his swift well-coursing horse walking bridled in the hand of his charioteer beside him. Now this is what his mother said to him: "Alas, my son," said she, "what madness urges thee to a struggle with thy brother? And whither will go the one of you that is victor in the feat of arms after killing the other? And blessed is your father to-day to be deprived of his eyes ere he should be witnessing your struggle and your combat, O my sons. And blessing on thee," said she, "redden thy hand first on me, and inflict death on me, before I see thy brother's side rent and perforated by thee or thy side pierced by him."

For her that was indeed conversing with a rock, and it was giving warning to a doomed man; for though her son listened to her, he accepted nothing of what she said to him. Then came the modest virgin of many charms, to wit, Antigone, sister of those boys, unknown and unperceived by anyone in the city, till she arrived at the top of the wall; and along with her was her aged tutor and counsellor, to wit, Phorbas. And as she came there, she saw in the distance her brother, to wit, great Polynices, son of Oedipus, shooting at the houses of Thebes, and shaking the spears as he ever challenged his brother. And when she saw that, she screamed, and cried aloud, and said to him : "I adjure thee by the gods, lad," said she, "abate thy rage, and have pity on thine own original kin. Not good at all were thy trial of battle," said she, "in spite of the challenge which thou givest thy brother, seeing it is he that has been till to-day bent on injustice, for he refused to share territory or land with thee. And thy brother," said she, "rejected his mother's entreaty to him, not to engage in fight or contest with thee. And, a blessing on thee, thou wilt do it for me for the sake of the relationship that exists among us all."

And when the maiden had said those female womanly words to her brother, a splendour came over the mind of the soldier there, and he lowered his weapons, and drew the reins of the horses, and he remained silent for a space, looking at the maiden. And no sooner were they thus than the devilish mad goddess of war urged Eteocles to meet and confront his brother better the gate of Thebes, so that the doors were shaken by their blades, and the lintels of the city wrenched from their proper position owing to the martial valour of the champions as they hastened along with their lords unto Polynices. When Eteocles arrived at the middle of the green-surfaced plain of Thebes, he said : "O fatherland of the kings," said he, "to wit, thou greensurfaced chosen Thebes, to the man who carries off victory herefrom to-day, it is proper for thee to belong."

But when Polynices heard that, it was not to fear or flight he was moved, but to a strong attack on his brother, and to make a huge menace against him, and this is what he said: "Eteocles," said he, "dost thou remember that no fulfilment of friendship or sharing of territory was granted me? And it is no trial by combat at all with thee against me; and it had been more just to wage a combat with me before all those kings and great persons fell between us up till to-day." and envy of that man, to wit, Eteocles, at Polynices as he saw him kinging it, so that he hailed him to the contest; for thus was he with innumerable companies of a goodly host along with him, and a royal gleaming helmet on his head, and beautifully coloured well-fashioned saddles with fair bright-purple trappings on his foreign horses, under a gleaming splendid round shield upon him. And though that was huge in the eyes of Polynices, his own arms and his gear were royal. For thus was he with royal very beautiful garments upon him fashioned for him by the delicate bright women of Mycenae before his coming on that journey; and his were remarkable varied arms after being polished smooth and sharp by Greek smiths; and a swift very beautiful horse was under him. And when those veterans had approached one another, uprose black devilish hags settling upon their arms and horses, to wit, Tisiphone hurrying on Eteocles, and Megaera strongly urging Polynices.

The wife of Néid shook her sparkling blazing garments as she urged them, so that the shimmer of the arms being unsheathed by the heroes against one another became very great flames at that time, and the strong vast earth shook as if it were to fall from its place and position, owing to the approach of those champions to one another.

Then arose to view them the people of the city upon pleasant places of concourse, and on the lofty great walls of the town.

There in their presence were the gloomy vehement common people of the Thebans, their anxious seniors ever sorrowing, naked-sided mothers loudly wailing, and children silently complaining at the battle of those twain.

And there from hell came the souls of those Thebans and Greeks who had been slain in the war of Thebes, so that they filled the great smooth plain in which those soldiers were; and they were engaged in cries, whistling, and fluttering awfully around them everywhere.

Now the high-king Adrastus heard that there was no check by Thebans upon the fray of those twain, and he urged his horse swiftly between them in order to separate them. And he said there: "O Greeks, and O Thebans," said he, "check these men from their fratricide; and, O Eteocles," said he, "though thou art an enemy, remain with me; and O Polynices, if it be lust for a kingdom thou hast, here is the kingship of the Greeks for thee, provided thou do but check thy contest." Now no more did they listen to that than had it been spoken to the pursuing waifstrewn sea that ceases not from its noise and clamour round the world. And when Adrastus was unable to separate those twain. and saw their swift horses strongly pacing, and their thonged spears being directed from their long very white fingers, he turned from them unto his camp, and left a fair field between the heroes behind him. Now their fate was preventing them from falling in that short hour, for they urged their horses twice at one another. Neither of them inflicted wound or hurt on the other owing to the dexterity of their defence and the excellence of the guard which the champions maintained against one another; and thrice did they allow their reins to slacken out of their hands, and they roughly urged the horses with sharp iron spurs. The keen champions of the Thebans and the daring heroes of the Greeks looked on. Together they arose to support their princes and lords in the stress of conflict in which they were. Albeit it was the fate of those twain, to wit, Eteocles and Polynices, to fall by one another.

The goddess of peace, to wit, Pax, came from the very bright heights of heaven unto those battalions of both sides, so that they were glad and peaceful among themselves; and they abandoned the struggle to Eteocles and Polynices, giving no assistance to either of them. Hence furious and very great fits of rage were kindled in those men, and they hardened their warlike contentious hearts towards one another. It was a wail of "alas!" to their assemblies to be beholding that fratricide. For the faces of the warriors under their beautiful shapely helmets were alike. The cruel contentious heroes of that combat were the last posterity of the same mother, and the acknowledged sons of the same father, though they were angry with one another at that time.

Then the bold warlike king, to wit, Eteocles, directed his shining sharp-edged spear at Polynices. Polynices planted his shield against it, so that it rebounded as if from a rock. Polynices brandished the thonged very long spear that was in his hand. and said: "Gods of heaven," said he, "guide this cast, and I shall sacrifice myself to you out of my kingdom after gaining the victory over this hero." And when he had said that, he again hurled from him the spear, so that that war spear shaft was a beam that glittered from one flank to another of Eteocles' horse. When the horse was wounded he sprung actively, and broke his rein, and he began to gallop and to race madly, so that every way he went was red and crimson with his blood. Polynices rejoiced at that deed, and quickly urged his horse towards him, so that the reins of the horses, the hands of the heroes, and the weapons of the veterans fought together in one place. And when they fought together, each of them threw his arm around the other, so that they fell from their horses as they might have fallen down a rock or because of insecurity. They arose forthwith together, going roughly and harshly towards one another, and they fought together without their horses. And such was the closeness of their fight that there appeared no mark or distinction between the men at that time, and their helmets and swords were locked together, the hands of the heroes mingled as they strongly slaughtered one another, like two raging lions, or two strong emulous tigers, or two heroic venomous snakes.

Nay, each of them pierced and strongly wounded the other there, so that the skin of each of them was a perforated sieve; and though the wounds there upon the veterans were many, no terrible dangerous wounds were exchanged from one of them to the other during that time. Now not kind was the relationship of those two brothers, for it was a lust with each of them to attack and to shed blood from the body of his fellow rather than to defend and to protect his own side.

And it was then that great Polynices, son of Oedipus, laid on, and forced the broad grooved heroic sword that was in his hand into the body of his brother, so that he brought its dangerous point through his chest and through his heart. When, however, Eteocles foresaw his death therefrom, he placed his shield to defend him; and he proceeded to flee out of the fray, and to avoid his brother. But Polynices followed him, and strongly struck down his shield upon him. And he said: "Whither is flight attempted at all?" said he. "And it is a shame for you, O lad, to have a kingdom and principality up till to-day, and that a far-travelled exile like me should slay you." When Eteocles heard that he turned him about deceitfully and hardheartedly, and he let the breadth of his back down on earth's fastnesses, and he adjusted his arms above him.

But when the Thebans saw that, they uttered loud cries of sorrow and dejection, so that the echo of them lingered in the woods and forests of the neighbouring confines.

Polynices thereupon hastened unto his brother, and this is what he said to him: "Well, I am glad to see thee as thou art now," said he, "to wit, thy piercing very blue eye darkening in thy head, thy pure fair-cheeked countenance roughening and turning grey upon thee, and signs of death coming towards thee. And, O men," said he, "give me the sceptre of the kingdom, that Eteocles may see it in my hand before he die." And no sooner had he said that than he bent down on Eteocles to strip him of his arms and vesture in order to offer them to the gods, as he had promised before. And as he stood in a great warlike crescent above Eteocles, proceeding to strip him of his spoils, Eteocles thrust his sword up into Polynices' bosom, and left it in his breast after splitting his heart. And he himself died forthwith after that deed. But this is what Polynices E. 51^b 4 said, after that vengeful wound was inflicted on him: "False brother," said he, "long hast thou remembered thy wiles and thine anger—seeing thou art in the bosom of death—till I have fallen by thee." And when he had said that, he fell, a litter of gore, against his brother; and both met death and fate in that same bed.

Now when the blind old man, to wit, Oedipus, father of those twain, heard that they had died by the hand of each other, great was his wailing and distress to hear that tale. And he arose suddenly, taking by the hand his daughter, to wit, Antigone, and he said to her: "Well, daughter," said he, "lead me to the place where my sons lie slain." Then the maiden came forward through the slaughter to the place where those two lay, to wit, Eteocles and Polynices. And when they reached the bodies, they began to make an exceeding great cry of sorrow, and this is what Oedipus then said: "Sorrowful is my heart over you now, my sons," said he; "though ye were hated till to-day, ye are beloved now. And separate, O daughter, the bodies of the men," said he, "till I be laid in the midst between them." And even as he said that, he stretched forth his hand, searching for the arms of the soldiers in order to kill himself.

But when his daughter saw that, she stole the arms from him, and hid them from him; and since he did not get the arms, impatience and madness seized him, and he continued in heavy and sad weeping over the men.

Now as to Jocasta, to wit, the mother of the boys, she came forth in the midst of those very sid cries, with the family heirloom of those men in her hand, to wit, the broadsword of Laius, father of Oedipus; and she came therewith upon the wall of Thebes, and she fell fair upon that sword, and forthwith died there of grief for her sons. Moreover her daughter, to wit, Antigone, came and continued wailing and complaining greatly "over thy head (Jocasta)." and struggled about that kingdom, that it was not they that enjoyed its goodness or its benefits, but their enemies; for those Theban tribes there crowned heroic Creon of the victorious seed of Cadmus, son of Agenor, after Eteocles was slain. And because his son had given himself up in order to secure victory for the Thebans, they gave the kingdom to that man. And this is the first royal decree that he ordained there, to wit, that no Greek person be burnt or buried in the land of Thebes; but that they should be exposed to birds of the air or packs of wolves. And then Creon rose against Oedipus, son of Laius. And this is what he said to him : " Do not thou come into Thebes, and let not thy sin or thy corruption touch us; but let a place and a dwelling be made for thee in the woods and the wilderness of Thebes, since thy sons have fallen through thine own evil deeds."

Silence lay on Oedipus when he heard that, and he was filled with anger and exceeding wrath, and this is what he said wrathfully and very angrily: "Sad indeed are we," said he, "at the fate of the Thebans, that it should come to a creature like thee to be set in a kingdom and principality after the very proper kings that were therein before thee." And he continued thus censuring and contemning Creon very vehemently.

Antigone however spoke to Creon, and this is what she said to him: "Let thy heart go out to us, O Creon," said she, "and give no heed to the words of this difficult and sense-bereft person. And I shall vouch for him," said she, "to serve and to submit to thee, and he shall not be allowed to enter fair consecrated temples or into pleasant places of assembly in thy presence."

Now Creon's spirit was then moved at the maiden's words, and he said to her: "That shall be allowed thee, O maiden," said he, "only let a house and a dwelling be made for him in mount Cithaeron, near Thebes; and let him remain there, but not a step into this city towards us." And when Creon had said those words, he sat down in his palace in the city, and the Theban nobles along with him.

BOOK XII

As to the Greeks, however, when night came to them, they departed in flight at the very beginning of that night, and they left their quite empty camp and the homesteads of Thebes behind them. Now at that departure, no banners were raised before Greek soldiers, no chiefs were before their champions, or officers before their companies, but each of them went by a short-cut leading on to his district and kindred. And it would have been better for them that they had not come, when they came.

As for Thebans, however, they thought that night tedious, with no bodies of their friends or comrades to be buried or honoured; and they did not observe or notice regarding the Greeks that night.

And when day came with its full brightness on the morrow, the Thebans arose early, and went into the field of battle, and they were there for three days and three nights engaged in cremations and burial of their friends and relatives, such of them as had fallen by Greeks. Creon, however, did not deign to burn his son, to wit, Menoeceus, among those bodies of the Thebans; and by Creon were collected the shields and spears of the Greeks, such as had been left in the battlefield, and by him one fire was made of them and the body of his son was burned in that huge sacrificial fire. And when the Thebans had finished making those fires and burning and burying the bodies, they went into their city afterwards, and were feasting and resting therein.

Now the women of the Greeks heard that news, as did Argia, Adrastus' beautiful daughter, wife of Polynices, that her spouse had been killed there. And when she heard it, she fell. Weaknesses and deathlike fits fell upon her at that news; and alternately she arose out of them, and this is what she said: "Now I shall go," said she, "till I reach Thebes, that I may see the white-skinned body of my spouse, not leaving him to the circling flocks of the air or to hungry packs of dogs." Then she proceeded forward on that errand. And not less was the anxiety of her sister, to wit, Deipyle, daughter of the king of Greeks, wife of Tydeus, son of the king of Calydon, as she wept for her spouse in the same manner. Moreover, the wife of Hippomedon was troubled by that news, to wit, Nealce, daughter of the king of the Athenians. And not less the loss of Atalanta mother of Parthenopaeus there; and sad also was Capaneus' spouse, to wit, Euhadne, daughter of the king of the Eberda. And those advanced sadly and sorrowfully, with Argia in front, unto Thebes; and beauteous Juno made known to those women neglected paths past the Greeks, to wit, to mount Isthmos (sic) and to the city of Eleusis.

There one of the Greeks on a devious path met those women in the way, to wit, Ornytus his name; and when he heard the clatter and talk of the women, silence fell upon him, and he recognised them, and he wept with them, for great was his sorrow, and he said to them : "Bright-cheeked Greek women." said he, "whither go ye? And do ye hope thus to gain respect with yourselves and with perverse sinful Creon ? And this is my counsel to you not to go on that journey, for the bodies will not be granted you which ye go to ask. This is more proper for you, to go to the place wherein dwells Theseus, son of Aegeus. son of Neptune, at the bright-waved river Thermodon, after the victorious spoil of battle there by the angry women of Scythia, and adjure him by the original affection to go with you to avenge your heads on bloodstained sinful Creon. And let him remember perchance that Parthenopaeus son of Meleager fell by Thebans, for Meleager was his foster-brother and comrade in arms; and he will not forgive the Thebans for breaking the son of his foster-brother and companion."

When the women heard that, some of them were inflaming them to go to Thebes at once. Some others of them, again, were saying that it were more proper to go to Theseus. Nevertheless Argia decided to go to Thebes with no delay at all for love of her dear spouse's body. And she said to all the women : "Go ye to Theseus and ask help of him, and I shall go to Thebes also?

with my tutor Menoetes along with me, for sisters and friends of my spouse dwell therein." And thus they parted, and Argia and her tutor went the way Ornytus had come through the bosky wild woods, and the dense impassable forests and through the rough-headed rocky knolls, till they reached mount Pentheus in the vicinity of Thebes. And then he said to her: "Methinks. maiden," said he, "that Thebes is near to us, for I now perceive troublesome great stenches, and the shadow and the sound of the bird-flocks rising from the entrails in the battlefield." The maiden heard that, and silence fell upon her, and she devoted a while to sorrow and sad colloquy with the city, for she had lost hope of the queenship of the city. And she came afterwards to the house of a shepherd that was near her in the mountain. He kindled and lighted for her the remnant of a little fire that was in the house, so that the firebrands blazed up; and when they were ablaze, she plucked out one of the brands, and she arose, and began to use one of the quivering flaming brands to show the way at night in order to seek her spouse's body. Menoetes restrained her therefrom, that the Thebans might not see the gleam of the torch that night. Thereafter they approach the battlefield and search, till by them were examined attentively the Greek heroes' utterly broken heads, the champions' pierced sides, and the warriors' wounded skins, as they sought for great Polynices, son of Oedipus, and all the Greek soldiers.

Then arose beauteous Juno from the couch of Jove, son of Saturn, to seek help and aid for Greeks from Minerva, goddess of valour, where was the city of Theseus, son of Aegeus, son of Neptune. And on Juno's going with that message, she saw Argia, daughter of Adrastus, searching the field of slaughter for the body of her dear spouse in the darkness of the night. Then Juno urged the goddess of night, to wit, the Moon, to give light to Argia till she should find her husband's body. Then the Moon lit up plains, hills, and the earth; and when she did, Argia recognised in the distance the body and dress of her dear spouse aithnis¹ Airgia uaithi corp 7 cumthach² a cæmcheili Poliniceis, XII

Polynices, son of Oedipus. And she approached him, and saw the dead unloveliness that settled upon her spouse. Weakness came into her mind, stupor upon her tongue, and a mist of sorrow over her eyes; and she fell prostrate upon him, kissed the lad, and after that said to him: "Wretched is now thy state there, lad," said she, " and abysmal and very deep are the jagged wounds thy brother hath inflicted on thee. And I was strong in dissuading thee from this journey, and sad it is that thou didst not remain with me, and thy little son will be comforting me after thou art gone, to wit, Thersander son of Polynices. And no other spouse will come to my bosom or my bed after thee because of thy lovableness. And sad was our meeting when I met thee at the beautiful city of Adrastus; and long shall I be mourning for thy death after thou art gone."

And when she was at that wail of distress, then came forth from Thebes, Antigone, the sister of Polynices and Eteocles, with a flaming torch in her hand, as she went to bury her brothers. And it was by stealth she went on that errand; for she did not dare, owing to Creon, to go openly to bury the bodies of her brothers. And when she saw Argia near the men, she said: "Who is yonder? Let him say," said she. Argia did not answer her because of the greatness of her fear. Antigone spoke the second time, and this is what she said ; "O man," said she, "shouldest thou not fear, seeing I am Antigone, sister of the men over whom thou standest? And I adjure thee by the gods whoever thou art, assist me to burn their bodies." When Argia heard that, her heart rejoiced at it, and she gave her her surname, and said she: "If that be thou, I am Argia, daughter of Adrastus, wife of Polynices." They embraced there on the spot above the bodies, and they prostrated themselves on them, and they remained there in conversation and in a common sorrow, to wit, Argia narrating tales and details of her husband Polynices, Antigone lauding and telling tales of Eteocles. tutor, who was present with them, wearied of their conversing without him, and he said to them : "Cease your conversation," said he, "and do the thing ve have come for, seeing it is the end of the night, and the day is advancing upon you." Then the three of them arose, and by them in turn the bodies of those men, Eteocles and Polynices, were lifted to the banks of the river Ismenos, that was in the neighbourhood of Thebes. And when they had there cleansed the bodies of the heroes with the waves of the beautiful river Ismenos, they found near them a fire of wood continuing there through the powers of the gods. And they lit a pile of a very great fire of dry sticks and of inflammable stuff of the forest, and they placed the bodies on it forthwith, and the bodies were blazing together, and they swiftly fell asunder, and the fire and the stream of rushing flame that was above them parted as a sign of the disunion and anger of the twain whose bodies were upon the fire. And when they were thus, there came exceeding great thunder, so that the towers and houses of Thebes shook, and the watchmen and warders of the town arose, and the soldiers of the city came forth upon the great level plain. When Menoetes saw them, great fear seized him, but the women at the fire were without fear of Creon or his people for themselves, for they preferred to die when they had accomplished the thing they had come for. And they were relating, in high converse among them, so that the people of the king might hear, how they had brought the bodies where they were, And when they were heard thus, they were approached, tied, bound, and brought in fetters to sinful Creon.

As to Argia, wife of Polynices, thus far.

The muster of the Greek women here below.

Now as to the women who went to ask help of Theseus, son of Aegeus, son of Neptune, they arrived in haste at the city of Theseus, and Theseus was not in the city at that time; and it was demanded of them in the town whence their kindred, and what the business on which they had come. They answered at once, and narrated the fray of the Thebans and the Greeks, and the perverted judgment of Creon not to allow the bodies of the Greeks to be burned or harboured in his land or country.

And when they had told those tales, there was a beautiful altar for sacrifice in the middle of the town, consecrated to the goddess of mercy, to wit, Misericordia, with a bosky sacred grove around it. And it was not lawful for a person to go to that altar save for noble persons who were in distress and difficulty. And the women went towards it to ask help of her; and when they were urging their prayer for help at the altar, then they heard the joy, the gladness, and the boastful cries outside on the lawn. And he that was there was Theseus, son of Aegeus. son of Neptune, with the victory and boast of Northern Scythia as his from mount Pharos (sic). And there came forth the inhabitants of the town, both women and men, to see Theseus about assistance. And with regard to him, thus was he, with the shields of the Scythians about him, and the chariots and the swords of the Amazons; and as for Hippolyte, queen of the Amazons, he had near him her fine four-horsed chariot voked to beautiful foreign pure-white steeds. Then came the troubled, war-plaintful, plagued, and sorrowful women of the Greeks to that lad. He recognised them, and asked news of them. Euhadne, wife of Capaneus, answered him, and this is what she said to him: "O strong soldier, Theseus," said she, "hast thou heard that a slaughter of the Greeks has been inflicted by the Thebans in thy absence, and that their kings have been slain? And from Argos have we come, to wit, from the capital city of the Greeks, and the kings that were slain there were our husbands. And Creon, the king of Thebes, has resolved that their bodies should not be permitted to be burned or buried in his land. And I beseech thee by the gods, take pity on us, and arise and come to bury those entrails of thine own original kin." And what that maiden said, all the women said as well.

Theseus answered them, and this is what he said: "Indeed I left the Greeks at peace when I went to Scythia, and, O Creon," said he, "though it were my defeat thou hadst heard of, thou oughtest not to have made that resolution." And no sooner had he said that than he said to his charioteer, to wit, Phegeus: "Go forward to Thebes, O lad," said he, "and say to Creon 'let the Greeks be buried by him, or let him prepare to fight with me'." And though the hosts were sad, they came along with Theseus to their hosting. Separating or scattering was not allowed them, but only their great strengthening along with Theseus for Thebes. And he gathered more hosts and armies to attack it, to wit, the men of the isle of Brauron (sic) of the Torrian sea, and the isle of Marathon (sic), and the isle of Piraeus, and of the cities of Melaena, Parnes (sic), Sunion (sic), Salamis (sic) and Eleusis. And also Hippolyte, queen of the Amazons, would have gone in that gathering, had Theseus not prevented her; for she was pregnant by himself. And the conception she had then was Urbius son of Hippolyte, and he is called Urbius Urbibens subsequently. And it is not from his father, the son of Aegeus, that that boy was named but from his mother, to wit, Hippolyte. And he it was that came in the army of Turnus, son of Daunus, against Æneas, to fight for Italy and Rutulia. For Turnus' original extraction was Greek, so that it is for that reason that Urbius, son of Theseus and Hippolyte, came to fight for the Rutulians against the Trojans and Æneas, and to help the Rutulians. And that is the beginning of Urbius' genealogy : and he it was whom the gods twice revived after he had been killed by means of his stepmother.

And when those hosts had arrived at one place, this is what Theseus said to them : "Men," said he, "fortify your hearts, and hasten unto Thebes without delay by day or by night, till ye arrive at it." Then arose that great army, so that the earth shook from the madness of the stallions under the soldiers, and from the tempestuous temper of the powerful heroes hastening unto the battle, so that every level very green plain over which that host might go became a very durable road of kneaded blood-red clay, and the sides of the mountains past which they E. 54^a 9 went were bright with the sheen of the brilliant flashing arms that were above them, and vast was the great sound of them in the air above them, owing to the clangour of their various naked arms striking against one another. And they had great emulation in striving for first place to arrive at Thebes in order to sack it. Distinguished was the very great, fine, very beautiful king around whom that army was, to wit, Theseus, son of Aegeus. For thus was he with the forms of the islands upon him, and of the isles, and the cities he had won; and the form of the necklace or of the Minotaur which he had killed in the island of Crete graved on the sides of the fine bossy shield that was upon him, so that it was confusion to his enemies when he marched to battle to look upon that much-chequered varied shield. And they advanced in that manner unto Thebes without stay.

As to the Thebans on the other hand, there were brought with them Argia, daughter of Adrastus, and Antigone daughter of Oedipus, out over the town wall to be slain. And when that deed was in progress, then Phegeus, Theseus' lad, arrived among them. And it was that lad that prevented the women from being slain. And it was not a concession of peace that he asked, but war that he proclaimed. "There," said he, "is Theseus, son of Aegeus, with his great army."

Now when Creon heard that tale, this is what he said: "Enough of Greeks, indeed, have we slain in those of them whom we have slain already. And nevertheless, should he come now, he would get the same done to them." And he had not finished saying that, when he saw the towers of mist and the very dense forest clouds, above the keen and resolute hosts which were along with Theseus. Creon urged and hastened the Thebans to give battle to Theseus, son of Aegeus. The Thebans, indeed, were very loath to do that, for their hands were mangled, their sides pierced, and their skin was wounded; and the wall of their city round about them was dwindled away; and yet they arose at the instance of their king, and actively prepared their arms.

And an oppression for them to endure was the troublesome stench that arose from the entrails on being disturbed under their feet in the plain. And seeing them Theseus said: "Not good," said he, "is the honour Creon has given to these bodies, and it was not noble on their part not to give leave to bury or burn their bodies. And it is not safe for us to give battle where these are. And do ye come away to a level very bright place, where no entrails are, that we and the Thebans may join battle there."

Then both battalions advanced towards one another. The Thebans silently and sadly view the fight. But the Athenians advance keenly and threateningly to the fight. And there Theseus, son of Aegeus, raised the Marathonian spear that was in his hand, so that the shafts of that spear were like the shadow of a very high cruel-tooled very dark wood, and the blades of that spear were like a very bright radiant point of light, so that the plain on which the hosts stood was lighted up. And when the Thebans saw that menace, it was intolerable for them to stand still against it, but they turned their fine velvet standards, and the rush of a great rout of them broke towards their city. Theseus, indeed, did not deign to follow that crowd; for he had resolved not to slay a fear-stricken fugitive, and all the active common people of Athens were slaughtering them. Olenius, indeed, a Theban, remained; and Lamyrus, a champion in valour behind his people. Theseus shot straight-tooled at them, and they fell by him. There also against the people of Theseus remained the three sons of Alceta, to wit, Phyleus, Helops, and Iapyx, and inflicted a combat on them; and Theseus saw that affray, and he shot them without stay or hindrance, so that they were a pierced trio fallen behind him. Puissant Haemon, son of Creon, attempted to approach where Theseus was, and Theseus brandished his warlike baleful spear, and made a cast of it at Haemon; and he, being one of three Theban heroes, fell lifeless. Theseus also called and challenged Creon, king of Thebes, with a loud voice to a combat with him after his son had fallen by his hand. Cruel Creon looked at him, and his people turned with him. Theseus sent his own people away back, and he remained alone, awaiting Creon and his people. And Creon said to him : "Lad," said he, "what madness and what folly impels thee to challenge me to a combat with thee? And dost thou see Tydeus, son of Oeneus, son of the king of Calydon, fallen by us, and brightcheeked Hippomedon, and Capaneus, and Parthenopaeus, and all the Greek nobles fallen by us?" And when he had said that, he delivered a cast at Theseus, and struck the upper rim of his shield. Theseus laughed contemptuous laughter at that, and said: "Souls of the Greeks," said he, "open the awful doors of hell, that Creon may be added to you there." And he hurled at Creon the great Marathonian spear that was in his hand, so that it struck a weak spot of his body through a gap of his armour, and drove a thousand points through his skin. 'Creon falls by the wound of that hero with no change or rising again for him. And Theseus said : "Wilt thou now," said he, "give permission to cremate the bodies of the Greeks, and a place of burial for them? And take that with thee for thine own sins; and thou shalt be buried, though it be no duty so to do." Then indeed the Theban tribes and the assemblies of Athens gathered around Theseus, son of Aegeus, son of Neptune. And they all trusted him, and resolved on comradeship with him there; and they knotted an eternal peace between them; and they brought Theseus with them into the city, and the women and children of the town rose up to honour and laud that lad, and he remained in Thebes for the duration of that night.

Yea, Theseus was high-king over the Greek soldiery after Adrastus from Thrace in the North to the Repalia sea in the South and from the lofty top of mount Olympus and from the very pure river R... in the East to the brink of the Adriatic in the West. Oedipus stayed in Thebes. And Argia went to Larissa. And sad, weary, and anxious was the parting of those women from one another. And Argia dwelt there sorrowfully, sadly, despairingly. And no records recount her marriage with any man after her husband, so that she died at last of grief for Polynices. And her son, to wit, Thersander, son of Polynices, assumed the sovereignty of the Thebans, so that that Thersander was one of the twenty-seven kings that were present along with the Greeks at the siege of Troy.

But as to the Greek women with whom Theseus had come on that journey, they buried honourably and nobly the bodies of their friends and dear spouses, and they went to their dwellings and houses after that, wailing and forlorn. Now the number that was slain there of kings and common people is past reckoning. The writings and wild and varied tales do not commemorate those that were left alive there. Here it is not attempted. So that it is something of their deeds, tales and adventures thus far. Selah! Selah!
