PREFACE

As the intention of the editors has been to produce a collection of Latin and Greek versions which may fairly be regarded as representative of contemporary Oxonian scholarship, their first thanks are due to the various contributors who have furthered this aim by allowing the publication (in a few cases, the re-publication) of their compositions in the present volume.

Acknowledgement must also be made to Mr. A. Lang and Mr. A. C. Swinburne for permission to reprint passages from their works; to Mr. C. Baxter, acting as literary executor for R. L. Stevenson; to Mr. Cockerell and Mr. F. S. Ellis, acting in the same capacity for William Morris; and to Mr. W. M. Meredith, as representing George Meredith.

The editors wish to thank Mr. George Allen for permission to reprint lines by W. Johnson; Messrs. Blackwood, passages from 'Phaethon,' by P. S. Worsley; the Cambridge Press, a passage from Seeley's Life of Stein: Mr. B. Dobell, lines by J. Thomson; Mr. John Lane, passages by William Watson; Messrs. Kegan Paul, Trench, Trübner & Co., passages by Lewis Morris; Messrs. Macmillan, extracts from the poems of Tennyson, Matthew Arnold, A. H. Clough, O. W. Holmes, and Alfred Austin; and Messrs. Smith, Elder & Co., lines by Robert Browning.

I

Come down, O Maid, from yonder mountain height:
What pleasure lives in height? (the shepherd sang)
In height and cold, the splendour of the hills?

But cease to move so near the heavens, and cease
To glide a sunbeam by the blasted pine,
To sit a star upon the sparkling spire:

And come, for Love is of the valley, come,
For Love is of the valley, come thou down
And find him; by the happy threshold he,
Or hand in hand with Plenty in the maize,
Or red with spirited purple of the vats,
Or foxlike in the vine; nor cares to walk
With Death and Morning on the silver horns:

Nor wilt thou snare him in the white ravine,
Nor find him dropped upon the firths of ice,
That huddling slant in furrow-cloven falls
To roll the torrent out of dusky doors:

But follow: let the torrent dance thee down
To find him in the valley: let the wild
Lean-headed eagles yelp alone, and leave
The monstrous ledges there to slope and spill
Their thousand wreathes of dangling water-smoke,
That like a broken purpose waste in air:

So waste not thou: but come; for all the vale
Awaits thee: azure pillars of the hearth
Arise to thee: and children call, and I
Thy shepherd pipe, and sweet is every sound:

Sweeter thy voice, but every sound is sweet ;
 Myriads of rivulets hurrying through the lawn,
 The moan of doves in immemorial elms,
 And murmuring of innumerable bees.

K. Hen. Who hath sent thee now ?

Mont. The Constable of France.

K. Hen. I pray thee, bear my former answer back :
 Bid them achieve me and then sell my bones.
 Good God ! why should they mock poor fellows thus ?
 The man that once did sell the lion's skin
 While the beast liv'd, was kill'd with hunting him.
 A many of our bodies shall no doubt
 Find native graves ; upon the which, I trust,
 Shall witness live in brass of this day's work ;
 And those that leave their valiant bones in France,
 Dying like men, though buried in your dunghills,
 They shall be fam'd ; for there the sun shall greet them.
 And draw their honours reeking up to heaven.

Let me speak proudly : tell the constable,
 We are but warriors for the working-day ;
 Our gayness and our gilt are all besmirch'd
 With rainy marching in the painful field :
 There's not a piece of feather in our host—
 Good argument, I hope, we will not fly—
 And time hath worn us into slovenry :
 But, by the mass, our hearts are in the trim.

SHAKESPEARE.

Heaven lies about us in our infancy.
 Shades of the prison-house begin to close
     Upon the growing Boy :
 But he beholds the light, and whence it flows,
     He sees it in his joy :
 The Youth who daily further from the East
     Must travel, still is Nature's priest,
     And by the vision splendid
     Is on his way attended :
 At length the Man perceives it die away,
     And fade into the light of common day.

WORDSWORTH.

IV

The lights begin to twinkle from the rocks :
 The long day wanes : the slow moon climbs : the deep Moans round with many voices. Come, my friends,
 'Tis not too late to seek a newer world.
 Push off, and sitting well in order smite
 The sounding furrows ; for my purpose holds
 To sail beyond the sunset, and the baths
 Of all the western stars, until I die.
 It may be that the gulfs will wash us down :
 It may be we shall touch the Happy Isles,
 And see the great Achilles, whom we knew.
 Tho' much is taken, much abides ; and tho'
 We are not now that strength which in old days
 Moved earth and heaven ; that which we are, we are ;
 One equal temper of heroic hearts,
 Made weak by time and fate, but strong in will
 To strive, to seek, to find, and not to yield.

TENNYSON.

Vivimus infantes haud parvo lumine divum :
paullatim urgeri tenebris et carcere caeco incipiunt pueri : tamen illi luminis oras dispiiciunt, fontemque ipsum, gaudentque tuendo.
continuo ut iuvenis iam templa orientia linquens carpit iter, tamen interpres sanctusque sacerdos naturae est : adfulget eunti magna deum lux.
iamque viro, quoniam plenae stant robore vires,
aurorae proprius periit rubor, omnia deinde
albentis media mutantur luce diei.

Iam tremulae in saxis instaurant lumina taedae, vergit longa dies, successit tarda vicissim luna polo, planctuque et multa voce morantis unda vocat ; neque enim sero nova quaeritur ora.
ergo agite, o socii, remis incumbere tempus ordine quemque suo pariterque infindere sulcos.
hoc sedet, hoc certum est, solem superare caducum quaeque salo Hesperii tinguntur sidera ponti deficiat dum vita sequi ; seu gurgite mersos hauriri seu fata iubent sedesque beatas aspicere et notum dum vita manebat Achillen.
multa dies rapuit, superant et multa. fuerunt quae terras vires, quae numina magna movebant :
usque adeo nihil est quod nunc sumus ? usque adeo nil
una tot heroum virtus parque omnibus ardor ?
dextras fata hebetant annosaque tempora : perstat mente vigor solida, nitique et quaerere semper et reperire potens nec coepito absistere victus.

Let your shows be new as strange,
Let them oft and sweetly vary:
Let them haste so to their change
As the seers may not tarry.
Too long t' expect the pleasing'st sight
Doth take away from the delight.
All sour and sullen looks away,
That are the servants of the day:
Our sports are of the humorous Night,
Who feeds the stars that give her light.
And useth than her wont more bright,
To help the Vision of Delight.
See, see, her sceptre and her crown
Are all of flame, and from her gown
A train of light comes waving down.
This night in dew she will not steep
The brain, nor lock the sense in sleep:
But all awake with phantoms keep,
And those to make Delight more deep.

Cultu ludiera iam novo procedant, solitas nec peragant vices, sed gratum variantibus
     mutentur thiasis saepius, et cito alternata minus morae sint desideriis adspicientium.
 exspectare nimis diu quidquid non tenui lumina decipit
 fastu, mollibus eximit partem deliciis. migret amarior
 vultus, si quid et horridi lucis iussa manet. nostra licens iocis
 nox sollemnia commovet, altrix siderei, quo radiat, poli
 ac tum plus solito nitens dulcis delicias cum iuvat addita.
 sceptrum cernitis ut vomat ignis flammifero cum diademate ?
 ut de veste tremens deae decurrat liquidi fascia luminis ?
 illam non hodie iuvat immersisse suis pectora roribus, non somno premere obrutos sensus: te vigili, quisquis ades sacris, turba pascit imaginum,
     plenae crescat uti summa licentiae.

VI

I will not leave the smouldering pyre :
Enough remains to light again :
But who am I to dare desire
    A place beside the king of men ?

So burnt my dear Oechalian town ;
And I an outcast gazed and groaned.
But, when my father's roof fell down,
    For all that wrong sweet love atoned.

He led me trembling to the ship,
    He seemed at last to love me then ;
He soothed, he clasped me lip to lip :
    How strange, to wed the king of men !

I linger, orphan, widow, slave ;
    I lived when sire and brethren died.
Oh, had I shared my mother's grave,
    Or clomb unto the hero's side !

That comrade old hath made his moan ;
    The centaur cowers within his den :
And I abide to guard alone
    The ashes of the king of men.

Alone, beneath the night divine—
    Alone, another weeps elsewhere :
Her love for him is unlike mine,
    Her wail she will not let me share.

W. JOHNSON.

Non ego, dum semiustus adhuc rogus ardet, abibo;
     inde satis, flammae quo renoventur, erit:
 nec tamen hoc ausim: neque enim me funere tali
     dignor: in Herculea pars mihi nulla pyra.
 haud secus Oechalios memini flagrasse penatis et patrias, multum me lacrimante, domos;
 tot tamen amissis, tanta superante ruina,
     quod compensarem sat fuit unus amor.
 ipse iter ad navem dextra mihi fulsit amica, (aut amor, aut species illud amoris erat,) addidit et voces, et iunctis oscula labris;
     mira loquor, nato me placuisse Iovis.
 nunc mihi vir periit, fratres periere, paterque,
     et genetrix: resto serva superstes ero:
 debueram iam tunc sepeliri matre sepulta,
     vel latus hic domino conseruisse meo.
 iamque satur fletu cessit vetus ille sodalis;
     centaurum latebrae lustraque caeca tenent:
 sola ego dilectos cineres vigil ossaque servo,
     Herculeae custos una relictæ pyræ.
 est tamen, est quæ sola sacrae sub tegmine noctis,
     sola procul madidis mæret et ipsa genis:
 sed mihi nec similem curam fovet illa, nec unquam participem luctus me sinet esse sui.

These bad traditions of comedy affect us not only on the stage, but in our literature, and may be tracked into our social life. They are the ground of the heavy moralizings by which we are outworned, about Life as a Comedy, and Comedy as a jade, when popular writers, conscious of fatigue in creativeness, desire to be cogent in a modish cynicism : perversions of the idea of life, and of the proper esteem for the society we have wrested from brutishness, and would carry higher. Stock images of this description are accepted by the timid and sensitive, as well as by the saturnine, quite seriously ; for not many look abroad with their own eyes, fewer still have the habit of thinking for themselves. Life, we know too well, is not a Comedy, but something strangely mixed ; nor is Comedy a vile mask. The corrupted importation from France was noxious ; a noble entertainment spoilt to suit the wretched taste of a villainous age ; and the later imitations of it, partly drained of its poison and made decorous, became tiresome, notwithstanding their fun, in the perpetual recurring of the same situations, owing to the absence of original study and vigour of conception.

MEREDITH.

Nec scaenae nocuit prava haec comoedia tantum ;
scriptorum ingenio nocuit : quin noxia mores infecit nostros. patruae hinc mala taedia linguae :
'fabula vita hominum est,' aiunt, 'comoedia lena est' :
sic sapiunt patruos, lauti salsique videntur
esse sibi populoque placent, quos ad nova vires deficiunt fingenda. parum, qua vivere vitam aequum sit ratione, vident : semota ferarum
a vita et longo nondum perculta labore vita hominum hos homines quam sit pretiosa fefellit.
haec non morosi tantum : molli timidoque quicumque est animo, credit, mox seria dicit :
nam quotus est, oculis qui circum adstantia rectis aspiciat, quotus et suevit perpendere quaeque lance sua ? nec enim, scimus, comoedia vita est, sed lacrimas habet et risus, nec turpe Thalia
exodium tantum fingit. sed vecta per aequor pulpita pestifero lustravit non sua gressu fabula Graecorum, flexit quam insulsa propago in peius similemque sibi lasciva poposcit.
mox faece exhausta, motus docta decoros,
plurima ridendis coniunxit taedia, nodos
idem cum semper vindex laxaret eosdem.
non etenim aut operam scriptor dedit aut sua fortis pectorata concussit rebus fecunda novandis.

VIII

When the man wants weight the woman takes it up,
And topples down the scales ; but this is fixed
As are the roots of earth and base of all :
Man for the field and woman for the hearth :
Man for the sword and for the needle she :
Man with the head, and woman with the heart :
Man to command and woman to obey :
All else confusion. Look you ! the gray mare
Is ill to live with, when her whinny shrills
From tile to scullery, and her small goodman
Shrinks in his arm-chair while the fires of Hell
Mix with his hearth : but you—she's yet a colt—
Take, break her : strongly groom'd and straitly curb'd
She might not rank with those detestable
That let the bantling scald at home, and brawl
Their rights or wrongs like pot-herbs in the street.

Then I'll look up;
My fault is past. But, O ! what form of prayer
Can serve my turn ? 'Forgive me my foul murder ?'
That cannot be ; since I am still possess'd
Of those effects for which I did the murder,
My crown, mine own ambition, and my queen.
May one be pardon'd and retain the offence ?
In the corrupted currents of this world
Offence's gilded hand may shove by justice,
And oft 'tis seen the wicked prize itself
Buys out the law ; but 'tis not so above ;
There is no shuffling, there the action lies
In his true nature, and we ourselves compell'd
Even to the teeth and forehead of our faults
To give in evidence. What then ? What rests ?
Try what repentance can : what can it not ?
Yet what can it, when one can not repent ?
O wretched state ! O bosom black as death !
O limed soul, that struggling to be free
Art more engaged ! Help, angels ! make assay ;
Bow, stubborn knees, and heart with strings of steel
Be soft as sinews of the new-born babe ;
All may be well.

When winds that move not its calm surface sweep
 The azure sea, I love the land no more :
 The smiles of the serene and tranquil deep
 Tempt my unquiet mind.—But when the roar
 Of ocean's grey abyss resounds, and foam
 Gathers upon the sea, and vast waves burst,
 I turn from the drear aspect to the home
 Of earth and its deep woods, where, interspersed,
 When winds blow loud, pines make sweet melody :
 Whose house is some lone bark, whose toil the sea,
 Whose prey the wandering fish, an evil lot
 Has chosen.—But I my languid limbs will fling
 Beneath the plane, where the brook's murmuring
 Moves the calm spirit but disturbs it not.

SHELLEY
 (FROM MOSCHUS.)

XI

From fairest creatures we desire increase,
 That thereby beauty's rose might never die.
 But as the riper should by time decease,
 His tender heir might bear his memory :
 But thou, contracted to thine own bright eyes,
 Feed'st thy light's flame with self-substantial fuel,
 Making a famine where abundance lies,
 Thyselv thy foe, to thy sweet self too cruel.
 Thou that art now the world's fresh ornament
 And only herald to the gaudy spring.
 Within thine own bud buriest thy content
 And, tender churl, mak'st waste in niggarding.
 Pity the world, or else this glutton be.
 To eat the world's due, by the grave and thee.

Stirpibus a pulchris pulchra est optanda propago,
ut roseum possit stare perenne decus;
et, quotiens acto pereat maturior aevo,
in tenerum heredem forma paterna cadat.
tu vis ipse tuo tantum devotus amori tu, nova totius iam lux et gloria terrae, veris venturi nuntia purpurei,

visne tuam in sterili spem fructus condere gemma?
prodige, dum parcis; parce, profuse tamen!

How happy is he born and taught
 That serveth not another's will ;
 Whose armour is his honest thought,
 And simple truth his utmost skill ;
 Whose passions not his masters are ;
 Whose soul is still prepared for death,
 Untied unto the world by care
 Of public fame or private breath ;
 Who envies none that chance doth raise,
 Nor vice ; who never understood
 How deepest wounds are given by praise ;
 Nor rules of state, but rules of good ;
 Who hath his life from rumours freed ;
 Whose conscience is his strong retreat ;
 Whose state can neither flatterers feed,
 Nor ruin make oppressors great ;
 Who God doth late and early pray
 More of his grace than gifts to lend ;
 And entertains the harmless day
 With a religious book or friend.
 This man is freed from servile bands
 Of hope to rise or fear to fall :
 Lord of himself, though not of lands,
 And, having nothing, yet hath all.

The forward violet thus did I chide :
Sweet thief, whence didst thou steal thy sweet that smells,
If not from my love's breath ? The purple pride
Which on thy soft cheek for complexion dwells
In my love's veins thou hast too grossly dyed.
The lily I condemned for thy hand,
And buds of marjoram had stol'n thy hair ;
The roses fearfully on thorns did stand,
One blushing shame, another white despair ;
A third, nor red nor white, had stol'n of both,
And to his robbery had annex'd thy breath ;
But, for his theft, in pride of all his growth
A vengeful canker eat him up to death.
More flowers I noted, yet I none could see
But sweet or colour it had stol'n from thee.

Yet hold me not for ever in thine East :
How can my nature longer mix with thine ?
Coldly thy rosy shadows bathe me, cold
Are all thy lights, and cold my wrinkled feet
Upon thy glimmering thresholds, when the steam
Floats up from those dim fields about the homes
Of happy men that have the power to die,
And grassy barrows of the happier dead.

Iago. Patience. I say : your mind perhaps may change.
Oth. Never, Iago. Like to the Pontic sea,
 Whose icy current and compulsive course
 Ne'er feels retiring ebb, but keeps due on
 To the Propontic and the Hellespont,
 Even so my bloody thoughts, with violent pace,
 Shall ne'er look back, ne'er ebb to humble love.
 Till that a capable and wide revenge
 Swallow them up. Now, by yond marble heaven,
 In the due reverence of a sacred vow
 I here engage my words.

Iago. Do not rise yet.
 Witness, you ever-burning lights above,
 You elements that clip us round about,
 Witness that here Iago doth give up
 The execution of his wit, hands, heart,
 To wrong'd Othello's service ! Let him command,
 And to obey shall be in me remorse,
 What bloody business ever.

Kath. Fie, fie ! unknit that threatening unkind brow,
And dart not scornful glances from those eyes,
To wound thy lord, thy king, thy governor :
It blots thy beauty as frosts do bite the meads,
Confounds thy fame as whirlwinds shake fair buds,
And in no sense is meet or amiable.

A woman mov'd is like a fountain troubled,
Muddy, ill-seeming, thick, bereft of beauty ;
And while it is so, none so dry or thirsty
Will deign to sip or touch one drop of it.
Thy husband is thy lord, thy life, thy keeper,
Thy head, thy sovereign ; one that cares for thee,
And for thy maintenance commits his body
To painful labour both by sea and land,
To watch the night in storms, the day in cold,
Whilst thou liest warm at home, secure and safe ;
And craves no other tribute at thy hands
But love, fair looks, and true obedience ;
Too little payment for so great a debt.

So all night long upon the sandy shores
I heard the hollow murmur of the wave,
And all night long the hidden sea-caves made
A ghostly echo; and the sea-birds mewed
Around me; once I heard a mocking laugh
As of some scornful Nereid: once the waters
Broke louder on the scarped reefs, and ebbed
As if the monster coming: but again
He came not, and the dead moon sank, and still Only upon the cliffs the wails, the chants.
And I forsaken on my sea-worn rock.
And lo, the monster-haunted depths of sea.

Till at the dead dark hour before the dawn.
When sick men die, and scarcely fear itself
Bore up my weary eyelids, a great surge Burst on the rock, and slowly, as it seemed,
The sea sucked downwards to its depths, laid bare
The hidden reefs, and then before my eyes—
Oh terrible! a huge and loathsome snake
Lifted his dreadful crest and scaly side
Above the waves, in bulk and length so large.
Coil after hideous coil, that scarce the eye
Could measure its full horror; the great jaws
Dropped as with gore; the large and furious eyes
Were fired with blood and lust.

Sic intempesta, quam longa est, nocte per auris litore harenoso mittunt cava murmura fluctus;
interea miris clamoribus antra resultant abdicta, nec mergi circum increbescere questus cessabat; semel et risus audire videbar
Nymphae inludentis: tum dorsa latentia saxis unda ferit solito violentior, et cita retro ut monstro veniente relabitur: ille per undas haud aderat tamen, et caelo iam exhausta refugit luna, sed in scopolis idem iam plaugor et idem cantus: me rupes, quam vis terit undique ponti, sola tenet monstrisque horrentia marmora cingunt.
tum demum ante novos ortus, cum densior umbra, mors ubi prompta aegris, cum vix mihi fessa retentat lumina quin somno cedant timor, aspera saxo scinditur unda, marisque in stagna extrema vorari tota videbatur facies, et condita circum
saxa apparebant, visuque immane, trementis ante oculos subito serpens obsceneus ab undis horrentis squamas atque ora minacia tollit.
turpibus et spiris tam vasta volumina torquet
ut mea vix omnes possint explere tuendo lumina terrores: visae manare cruentem immeusae monstri fauces, oculique furentes sanguine ceu calidi saevaque libidine flagrant.

O lyric love, half-angel and half-bird
And all a wonder and a wild desire,— Boldest of hearts that ever braved the sun.
Took sanctuary within the holier blue,
And sang a kindred soul out to his face,—
Yet human at the red-ripe of the heart—
When the first summons from the darkling earth
Reached thee amid thy chambers, blanched their blue.
And bared them of their glory—to drop down,
To toil for man, to suffer or to die,—
This is the same voice: can thy soul know change?
Hail then, and hearken from the realms of help!
Never may I commence my song, my due
To God who best taught song by gift of thee,
Except with bent head and beseeching hand—
That still, despite the distance and the dark,
What was, again may be: some interchange
Of grace, some splendour once thy very thought.
Some benediction anciently thy smile:
—Never conclude, but raising hand and head
Thither where eyes, that cannot reach, yet yearn
For all hope, all sustainment, all reward,
Their utmost, up and on,—so blessing back
In those thy realms of help, that heaven thy home.
Some whiteness which, I judge, thy face makes proud,
Some wanness where, I think, thy foot may fall!

You see me here,
As one of you hath said, an old, unarm'd,
Defenceless man ; and yesterday you saw me
Presiding in the hall of ducal state,
Apparent sovereign of our hundred isles,
Robed in official purple, dealing out
The edicts of a power which is not mine,
Nor yours, but of our masters—the patricians.
Why I was there you know, or think you know ;
Why I am here he who hath been most wrong'd,
He who among you hath been most insulted,
Outraged and trodden on, until he doubt
If he be worm or no, may answer for me,
Asking of his own heart what brought him here ?
You know my recent story, all men know it,
And judge of it far differently from those
Who sate in judgment to heap scorn on scorn.
But spare me the recital—it is here,
Here at my heart, the outrage—but my words,
Already spent in unavailing plaints,
Would only show my feebleness the more,
And I come here to strengthen even the strong,
And urge them on to deeds, and not to war
With woman's weapons.

Tell me, ye studious, who pretend to see
Far into nature's bosom, whence the bee
Was first inform'd her venturous flight to steer
Through trackless paths and an abyss of air :
Whence she avoids the slimy marsh and knows
The fertile hills, where sweeter herbage grows
And honey-making flowers their opening buds disclose :
How from the thicken'd mist and setting sun
Finds she the labour of her day is done ?
Who taught her against winds and rains to strive,
To bring her burden to the certain hive,
And through the liquid fields again to pass,
Duteous and hearkening to the sounding brass ?
And, O thou sluggard, tell me why the ant,
'Midst summer's plenty, thinks of winter's want,
By constant journeys careful to prepare
Her stores ; and bringing home the corny ear,
By what instruction does she bite the grain,
Lest, hid in earth and taking root again,
It might elude the foresight of her care ?
Distinct in all the insect's deeds appear
The marks of thought, contrivance, hope and fear.

Yes, 'tis the eternal law that where guilt is Sorrow shall answer it : and thou hast not
A poor man's privilege to bear alone,
Or in the narrow circle of his kinsmen.
The penalties of evil, for in thine
A nation's fate lies circled. King Adrastus !

Dicite, quis amor est mentis impendere rebus,
 naturae secreta patent quibus, unde petitum saecla apium primo didicere audacibus alis avia per caeli volitare et inane profundum ?
 unde illis vitanda palus, collisque petendus fertilior quicunque datur, qua dulcior herba, melliferosque audent calices evolvere gemmae ?
 cur parta requie curis imponere finem densataeque monent nebulae solesque caduci ?
 cum desaevit hiems, ultro per flabra per imbris tendere, dum praedam certum ad praesaepe reportent quis docet, aut campos iterum tranare liquentis imperium pennis crepitantiaque aera secutas ?
 porro age, pigra cohors, quibus est ignavia cordi,
 eur mediis angustam opulentii in floribus anni pauperiem formica cavet, dum praescia brumae itque reditque viam totiens, ut condat acervum

Mailed as thy heart is with the usages
 Of pomp and power, a few short summers since
 Thou wert a child, and canst not be relentless.
 O ! if maternal love embraced thee then
 Think of the mothers who with eyes unwet
 Glare o'er their perishing children. Hast thou shared
 The glow of a first friendship, which is born
 'Midst the rude sports of boyhood, think of youth
 Smitten amidst its playthings—let the spirit
 Of thine own innocent childhood whisper pity.

O snatched away in beauty's bloom,
 On thee shall press no ponderous tomb,
 But on thy turf shall roses rear
 Their leaves, the earliest of the year,
 And the wild cypress wave in tender gloom.
 And oft by yon blue gushing stream
 Shall Sorrow lean her drooping head,
 And feed deep thought with many a dream ;
 And lingering pause and lightly tread,
 Fond wretch ! as if her step disturbed the dead !
 Away ! we know that tears are vain,
 That Death nor heeds nor hears distress :
 Will this unteach us to complain,
 Or make one mourner weep the less ?
 And thou, who tell'st me to forget,
 Thy looks are wan, thine eyes are wet.

He looked, and saw wide territory spread
Before him, towns, and rural works between,
Cities of men with lofty gates and towers,
Concourse in arms, fierce faces threatening war,
Giants of mighty bone and bold emprise.
Part wield their arms, part curb the foaming steed,
Single, or in array of battle ranged
Both horse and foot, nor idly mustering stood ;
One way a band select from forage drives
A herd of beeves, fair oxen and fair kine,
From a fat meadow ground, or fleecy flock,
Ewes and their bleating lambs, over the plain,
Their booty ; scarce with life the shepherds fly,
But call in aid, which makes a bloody fray ;
With cruel tournament the squadrons join ;
Where cattle pastured late, now scattered lies
With carcasses and arms the ensanguined field,
Deserted : others to a city strong
Lay siege, encamped ; by battery, scale and mine Assaulting : others from the wall defend
With dart and javelin, stones, and sulphurous fire ;
On each hand slaughter and gigantic deeds.

Low, like another's, lies the laurelled head :
The life that seemed a perfect song is o'er :
Carry the last great bard to his last bed.
Land that he loved, thy noblest voice is mute.
Land that he loved, that loved him ! nevermore
Meadow of thine, smooth lawn or wild sea-shore,
Gardens of odorous bloom and tremulous fruit,
Or woodlands old, like Druid couches spread,
The master's feet shall tread.

Death's little rift hath rent the faultless lute :
The singer of undying songs is dead.
Lo, in this season pensive-hued and grave,
While fades and falls the doomed, reluctant leaf
From withered Earth's fantastic coronal,
With wandering sighs of forest and of wave
Mingles the murmur of a people's grief
For him whose leaf shall fade not, neither fall.
He hath fared forth, beyond these suns and showers.
For us, the autumn glow, the autumn flame,
And soon the winter silence shall be ours :
Him the eternal spring of fadeless fame
Crowns with no mortal flowers.

And I will lay thee in that lovely earth,
And heap a stately mound above thy bones,
And plant a far-seen pillar over all,
And men shall not forget thee in thy grave.
And I will spare thy host ; yea, let them go !
Let them all cross the Oxus back in peace !
What should I do with slaying any more ?
For would that all whom I have ever slain
Might be once more alive ; my bitterest foes,
And they who were call'd champions in their time,
And through whose death I won that fame I have,
And I were nothing but a common man,
A poor, mean soldier, and without renown ;
So thou mightest live too, my son, my son !
Or rather would that I, even I myself,
Might now be lying on this bloody sand,
Near death, and by an ignorant stroke of thine,
Not thou of mine ; and I might die, not thou ;
And I, not thou, be borne to Seistan ;
And Zal might weep above my grave, not thine ;
And say : 'O son, I weep thee not too sore,
For willingly, I know, thou met'st thine end !'
But now in blood and battles was my youth,
And full of blood and battles is my age,
And I shall never end this life of blood.

Sir Richard spoke and he laugh'd, and we roar'd a hurrah, and so
The little Revenge ran on sheer into the heart of the foe,
With her hundred fighters on deck, and her ninety sick below ;
For half of their fleet to the right and half to the left were seen,
And the little Revenge ran on thro' the long sea-lane between.
Thousands of their soldiers look'd down from their decks and laugh'd,
Thousands of their seamen made mock at the mad
little craft
Running on and on, till delay'd
By their mountain-like San Philip that, of fifteen hundred tons,
And up-shadowing high above us with her yawning
tiers of guns,
Took the breath from our sails, and we stay'd.
And while now the great San Philip hung above us like a cloud
Whence the thunderbolt will fall
Long and loud,
Four galleons drew away
From the Spanish fleet that day,
And two upon the larboard and two upon the starboard lay,
And the battle-thunder broke from them all.
But anon the great San Philip, she bethought herself

Having that within her womb that had left her ill content ;
And the rest they came aboard us, and they fought us hand to hand,
For a dozen times they came with their pikes and musqueteers,
And a dozen times we shook 'em off as a dog that shakes his ears
When he leaps from the water to the land.
And the sun went down, and the stars came out far over the summer sea,
But never a moment ceased the fight of the one and the fifty-three.
Ship after ship, the whole night long, their high-built galleons came,
Ship after ship, the whole night long, with her battle-thunder and flame ;
Ship after ship, the whole night long, drew back with her dead and her shame.
For some were sunk and many were shatter'd, and so could fight us no more—
God of battles, was ever a battle like this in the world before ?
For he said 'Fight on ! fight on !'
Tho' his vessel was all but a wreck ;
And it chanced that, when half of the short summer night was gone,
With a grisly wound to be drest he had left the deck,
But a bullet struck him that was dressing it suddenly dead,
And himself he was wounded again in the side and the head,
And he said 'Fight on ! fight on !'

Tyr. The tyrannous and bloody act is done ;
The most arch deed of piteous massacre
That ever yet this land was guilty of.
Dighton and Forrest, whom I did suborn
To do this piece of ruthless butchery,
Albeit they were flesh'd villains, bloody dogs,
Melting with tenderness and mild compassion,
Wept like to children in their death's sad story.
'Oh ! thus,' quoth Dighton, 'lay the gentle babes :'
'Thus, thus,' quoth Forrest, 'girdling one another
Within their alabaster innocent arms :
Their lips were four red roses on a stalk,
Which in their summer beauty kiss'd each other.
A book of prayers on their pillow lay ;
Which once,' quoth Forrest, 'almost chang'd my mind ;
But, O, the devil !—there the villain stopp'd ;
When Dighton thus told on : 'We smothered
The most replenished sweet work of nature,
That from the prime creation e'er she fram'd.'
Hence both are gone with conscience and remorse ;
They could not speak ; and so I left them both,
To bear this tidings to the bloody king.

Still green with bays each ancient Altar stands,
 Above the reach of sacrilegious hands ;
 Secure from flames, from Envy's fiercer rage,
 Destructive War, and all-involving Age.
 See, from each clime the learn'd their incense bring !
 Hear, in all tongues consenting Paeans ring !
 In praise so just let ev'ry voice be join'd,
 And fill the gen'ral chorus of mankind.
 Hail, Bards triumphant ! born in happier days ;
 Immortal heirs of universal praise !
 Whose honours with increasing ages grow,
 As streams roll down, enlarging as they flow ;
 Nations unborn your mighty names shall sound,
 And worlds applaud that must not yet be found !
 Oh may some spark of your celestial fire,
 The last, the meanest of your sons inspire,

 Glows while he reads, but trembles as he writes)
 To teach vain Wits a science little known, opinion indeed of the present state of literature and of literary men, if you fancy that any one of us would hesitate to stick a knife into his neighbour penman, if the latter's death could do the State any service.

But the fact is, that in the literary profession THERE ARE NO SNOBS. Look round at the whole body of British men of letters, and I defy you to point out among them a single instance of vulgarity, or envy, or assumption.

April, April,
Laugh thy girlish laughter ;
Then, the moment after,
Weep thy girlish tears !
April, that mine ears
Like a lover greetest,
If I tell thee, sweetest,
All my hopes and fears,
April, April,
Laugh thy golden laughter,
But, the moment after,
Weep thy golden tears !

Thou think'st 'tis much that this contentious storm
Invades us to the skin : so 'tis to thee ;
But where the greater malady is fix'd,
The lesser is scarce felt. Thou'dst shun a bear ;
But if thy flight lay toward the roaring sea,
Thou'dst meet the bear i' the mouth. When the mind's free

The body's delicate ; the tempest in my mind
Doth from my senses take all feeling else
Save what beats there. Filial ingratitude !
Is it not as this mouth should tear this hand
For lifting food to 't ? But I will punish home :
No, I will weep no more. In such a night
To shut me out ! Pour on ; I will endure.
In such a night as this ! O Regan, Goneril !
Your old kind father, whose frank heart gave all,—
O ! that way madness lies ; let me shun that ;
No more of that.

In all my wanderings round this world of care,
In all my griefs—and God has given my share—
I still had hopes, my latest hours to crown,
Amidst these humble bowers to lay me down ;
To husband out life's taper at the close,
And keep the flame from wasting by repose.
I still had hopes, for pride attends us still,
Amidst the swains to show my book-learn'd skill,
Around my fire an evening group to draw,
And tell of all I felt, and all I saw ;
And, as the hare, whom hounds and horns pursue,
Pants to the place from whence at first she flew,
I still had hopes, my long vexations pass'd,
Here to return—and die at home at last.

O blest retirement, friend to life's decline,
Retreats from care, that never must be mine,
How happy he who crowns in shades like these
A youth of labour with an age of ease ;
Who quits a world where strong temptations try,
And, since 'tis hard to combat, learns to fly !
For him no wretches, born to work and weep,
Explore the mine, or tempt the dangerous deep ;
No surly porter stands in guilty state
To spurn imploring famine from the gate ;
But on he moves to meet his latter end,
Angels around befriending Virtue's friend ;
Bends to the grave with unperceiv'd decay,
While Resignation gently slopes the way ;
And, all his prospects brightening to the last,
His Heaven commences ere the world be pass'd !

Hic mihi, cum dolui—nec mens ignara dolorum est.—
 hic, quo solliciti cumque tulere pedes, spes erat extremae tandem fore tempore vitae
 poneret ut placidum nostra senecta larem:
 vitalem ut possem parcendo pascere flammam
 ne nimio proprias carperet igne faces.
 hic poteram doctus—faciunt sua quemque superbū—
 quae stupet insueta rusticus aure loqui, multaque quae vidi passim sensique viator
 ad vespertinos explicuisse focos:
 utque lepus canibus pulsus turbaque sequentum
 aeger adit notum, fugerat unde, locum, hoc erat in votis, ut longi fine doloris
 mors saltem patrio sub lare nostra foret.
 hos utinam peterem senio vergente recessus fasque foret curas hic posuisse meas!
 felix o nimium, cui quos tulit ante laborum contigit haec requies perfugiumque seni:
 qui loca blanditiis animum retinentia vitat et nimium forti pulsus ab hoste fugit.
 illi nulla manus miserando addicta labori
 effodit aut saevum per mare quaerit opes:
 ianitor haud unquam miseros et frusta rogantis
 liminibus magnis durus abire iubet.
 mors quoque non terret: superos sibi praestat amicos quisquis virtuti semper amicus erat:
 sed serae propius paulatim allabitur horae,
 itque minus duram, quod libet ire, viam:
 iam magis atque magis caelestia gaudia gustat:
 vivus in aetherias evehiturque domos.

To me most happy therefore he appears
Who, having once, unmoved by hopes or fears,
Surveyed this sun, earth, ocean, clouds, and flame,
Well satisfied returns from whence he came.

Is life an hundred years or e'er so few,
'Tis repetition all and nothing new;
A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay ;
An inn, where travellers bait, then post away ;
A sea, where man perpetually is lost,
Now plunged in business, now in trifles lost :
Who leave it first, the peaceful port first gain ;
Hold then, nor farther launch into the main ;
Contract your sails ; life nothing can bestow
By long continuance, but continued woe :
The wretched privilege daily to deplore
The funerals of our friends, who go before ;
Diseases, pains, anxieties and snares,
And age surrounded with a thousand cares.

All night the dreadless angel, unpursued,
Through Heaven's wide champain held his way; till morn,

Waked by the circling hours, with rosy hand
Unbarred the gates of light. There is a cave
Within the mount of God, fast by his throne,
Where light and darkness in perpetual round
Lodge and dislodge by turns, which makes through Heaven

Grateful vicissitude, like day and night;
Light issues forth, and at the other door
Obsequious darkness enters, till her hour
To veil the heaven, though darkness there might well
Seem twilight here; and now went forth the morn,
Such as in highest Heaven, arrayed in gold
Empyreal; from before her vanished night,
Shot through with orient beams; when all the plain,
Covered with thick embattled squadrons bright,
Chariots, and flaming arms, and fiery steeds,
Reflecting blaze on blaze, first met his view:
War he perceived, war in procinet; and found
Already known what he for news had thought
To have reported: gladly then he mixed
Among those friendly powers, who him received
With joy and acclamations loud, that one,
That of so many myriads fallen yet one
Returned not lost. On to the sacred hill
They led him high applauded, and present
Before the seat supreme; from whence a voice,
From 'midst a golden cloud, thus mild was heard.

O Patriot Statesman, be thou wise to know
The limits of resistance, and the bounds
Determining concession ; still be bold
Not only to slight praise, but suffer scorn :
And be thy heart a fortress, to maintain
The day against the moment, and the year
Against the day : thy voice, a music, heard
Through all the yells and counter-yells of feud
And faction ; and thy will, a power to make
This ever-changing world of circumstance
In changing, chime with never-changing Law.

Reason thus with Life :

If I do lose thee, I do lose a thing
That none but fools would keep : a breath thou art,
Servile to all the skyey influences,
That do this habitation, where thou keep'st,
Hourly afflict. Merely, thou art Death's fool ;
For him thou labour'st by thy flight to shun,
And yet run'st toward him still. Thou art not noble :
For all the accommodations that thou bear'st
Are nurs'd by baseness. Thou 'rt by no means valiant :
For thou dost fear the soft and tender fork
Of a poor worm. Thy best of rest is sleep,
And that thou oft provok'st : yet grossly fear'st
Thy death, which is no more. Thou 'rt not thyself :
For thou exist'st on many a thousand grains
That issue out of dust. Happy thou art not :
For what thou hast not, still thou striv'st to get,
And what thou hast, forget'st. Thou art not certain :
For thy complexion shifts to strange effects,
After the moon. If thou art rich, thou 'rt poor :
For, like an ass whose back with ingots bows,
Thou bear'st thy heavy riches but a journey,
And Death unloads thee. Friend hast thou none ;
For thine own bowels, which do call thee sire,
The mere effusion of thy proper loins,
Do curse the gout, serpigo, and the rheum,

Iure igitur vitam humanam ratio increpat ipsa ; tene ut ego amplectar cupide studeamve morari ?
 quam qui perdiderit, tantum modo perdidit illud
 non nisi quod stultis curae est ; quae corporis huius compaginem levis aura habitas, mutabilis horae insidiis, variisque minis obnoxia caeli.
 nec levia instanti debes ludibria morti :
 quam misera assidue properas vitare, graduque
 dum fugitas propiore petis. nec denique honesti in te, quod iactes, quicquam est ; quando omnia turpi commoda, quis frueris, tibi sunt ab origine nata.
 quin minime es fortis : terret quem parvula serpens,
 mollia ne bifidae intentet tibi vulnera linguae.
 tu, requies homini quia sic datur optima, somnum securum capis, atque arcessis saepius ultro :
 dum letum ipsa tuum, somno securius omni,
 caeca reformidas. nec vero es tutem et ipsa ;
 quippe aliunde animae cui sint alimenta petenda,
 quae tibi granorum tot millia pulvere ab ipso
 edita suppeditant. sed nec potes esse beata, quae quod abest quaeris semper, praesentia temnens ;
 nec stabilem praestare animum, quae motibus acta hue illuc variis fluitas levis atque vagaris, tot mutans, quot luna, vices. pauperrima certe
 tunc fies, cum dives eris ; quippe instar aselli, sarcina cui lumbos congesto praegravat auro,
 pondere pressa gravi cum cursum exegeris aevi,
 invenies, quae demat onus tibi, denique mortem.
 nec salvum vult te quisquam, neque amaris ab ullo :
 nam proprio tibi seminio qui nascitur heres,
 qui patrio appellat te nomine, saepe querelis increpitat scabiem, et febris, tardamque podagram, quod tibi non finem attulerint properantius aevi.

For ending thee no sooner. Thou hast nor youth nor age :
But, as it were, an after-dinner's sleep
Dreaming on both ; for all thy blessed youth
Becomes as aged, and doth beg the alms
Of palsied eld : and when thou art old and rich
Thou hast neither heat, affection, limb, nor beauty,
To make thy riches pleasant. What's yet in this
That bears the name of Life ? Yet in this Life Lie hid moe thousand deaths. Yet Death we fear,
That makes these odds all even.

SHAKESPEARE.

No, Time, thou shalt not boast that I do change :
Thy pyramids built up with newer might
To me are nothing novel, nothing strange ;
They are but dressings of a former sight.
Our dates are brief, and therefore we admire
What thou dost foist upon us that is old :
And rather make them born to our desire
Than think that we before have heard them told.
Thy registers and thee I both defy,
Not wondering at the present nor the past,
For thy records and what we see doth lie,
Made more or less by thy continual haste.

This I do vow, and this shall ever be ;
I will be true, despite thy scythe and thee.

SHAKESPEARE.

nec vero te prima iuvat, nec senior aetas;
 nam veluti conviva satur, superante sopore,
 dum specie frueris veri, mera somnia cernis;
 nempe dies, melior qua non datur ulla, iuventae fit tibi par senio, dum mendicare coacta auxilia a tremulis senibus vitalia captas;
 at matura annis, cum facta e paupere dives
 iam fueris, cum forma, calor, vigor artibus omnis exierint, torpente animo; nil denique restat divitis unde queat fieri iucundius aevum.
 tene igitur, vana cuius sub imagine mortis
 mille latent species, dignemur nomine vitae;
 dum veram atque unam, quae tot discrimina tollit,
 scilicet horremus cassa formidine mortem?

Non ita, non moveor; tempus, quid inane superbis?
 quid nova pyramidum tu mihi monstra refers?
 at mihi non nova sunt, non admiranda, tuenti;
 haec species notum dissimulavit opus.
 nostra dies brevis est, ergo quocunque vetusti

 nec potius patribus fabula trita suis.
 odi ego te fastosque tuos, tuaque omnia demum

I arise from dreams of thee
In the first sweet sleep of night,
When the winds are breathing low,
And the stars are shining bright.
I arise from dreams of thee,
And a spirit in my feet
Hath led me—who knows how?
To thy chamber window, sweet !

The wandering airs they faint
On the dark, the silent stream—
The champak odours fail
Like sweet thoughts in a dream :
The nightingale's complaint
It dies upon her heart,
As I must die on thine,
Belovèd as thou art !

O lift me from the grass !
I die, I faint, I fail !
Let thy love in kisses rain
On my lips and eyelids pale.
My cheek is cold and white, alas !
My heart beats loud and fast :
O press it close to thine again,
Where it will break at last.

Surgimus : ad lectum tua iam mihi venit imago, noctis ubi primae me tenet alma quies.
 aspice, tranquilli summisso murmure venti adspirant ; liquida sidera luce nitent.
 surgimus ; ante tuam mirando more fenestram
     nescio quid nostros duxit, amata, pedes.
 concidit aura vagans, stratis immota susurris,
     qua tacitus fuscis labitur amnis aquis ;
 ambrosii fugere rosae languentis odores.
     ut fugiunt orto dulcia visa die.
 lenitas etiam tristis philomela querelas
     ponit, et immoto corde quieta silet.
 o utinam ipse tuis, utinam requiescere possim pectoribus ; tantum me tuus urget amor.
 tolle solo, morior, me gramine tolle cadentem ;
     languesco, sensus deficiuntque mei.
 oscula multa genis pallentibus, oscula labris fige, voluntatis pignora grata tuae.
 me miserum, friget facies ; color omnis ab ore
     fugit ; et insano pectus amore salit.
 pectora pectoribus rursum, dilecta, foveto
     nostra tuis, isto iam moritura loco.

B.                   The fire takes.

C.                   It does so,

But no flame rises. Cease your fretful prayers,
Your whinings, and your tame petitions.
The gods love courage armed with confidence,
And prayers fit to pull them down ; weak tears
And troubled hearts, the dull twins of cold spirits,
They sit and smile at. Hear how I salute 'em.
Divine Andate, thou who hold'st the reins
Of furious battles and disordered war,
And proudly roll'st thy swarty chariot-wheels
Over the heaps of wounds and carcases,
Sailing through seas of blood ; thou sure-stealed sternness,
Give us this day good hearts, good enemies,
Good blows o' both sides, wounds that fear or flight
Can claim no share in : steel us both with angers
And warlike executions fit thy viewing ;
Let Rome put on her best strength, and thy Britain,
Thy little Britain, but as great in fortune,
Meet her as strong as she, as proud, as daring !
And then look on, thou red-eyed god ! who does best,
Reward with honour ; who despair makes fly,
Unarm for ever, and brand with infamy !

He scarce had said, when the bare earth, till then Desert and bare, unsightly, unadorned,
Brought forth the tender grass, whose verdure clad
Her universal face with pleasant green ;
Then herbs of every leaf, that sudden flowered,
Opening their various colours, and made gay
Her bosom, smelling sweet ; and, these scarce blown.
Forth flourished thick the clustering vine, forth crept
The swelling gourd, up stood the corny reed
Embattled in her field, and the humble shrub,
And bush with frizzled hair implicit : last
Rose, as in dance, the stately trees, and spread
Their branches hung with copious fruit, or gemmed Their blossoms. With high woods the hills were crowned.

With tufts the valleys and each fountain side,
With borders long the rivers : that Earth now Seemed like to Heaven, a seat where Gods might dwell,

Or wander with delight, and love to haunt
Her sacred shades : though God had yet not rained
Upon the earth, and man to till the ground
None was ; but from the earth a dewy mist
Went up, and watered all the ground, and each
Plant of the field ; which ere it was in the earth,
God made, and every herb, before it grew
On the green stem. God saw that it was good :
So even and morn recorded the third day.

Woods, that wave o'er Delphi's steep,
Isles, that crown th' Egaean deep,
Fields, that cool Ilissus laves,
Or where Maeander's amber waves
In lingering Lab'rinths creep,
How do your tuneful Echoes languish,
Mute, but to the voice of Anguish ?
Where each old poetic Mountain
Inspiration breath'd around :
Ev'ry shade and hallow'd Fountain
Murmur'd deep a solemn sound :
Till the sad Nine, in Greece's evil hour,
Left their Parnassus for the Latian plains.
Alike they scorn the pomp of tyrant Power,
And coward Vice, that revels in her chains.
When Latium had her lofty spirit lost,
They sought, oh Albion ! next thy sea-encircled coast.

Why do I love this man ? My country's daughters
 Love none but heroes. But I have no country !
 The slave hath lost all, save her bonds. I love him :
 And that's the heaviest link of the long chain—
 To love whom we esteem not. Be it so :
 The hour is coming when he'll need all love,
 And find none. To fall from him now were baser
 Than to have stabb'd him on his throne when highest
 Would have been noble in my country's creed :
 I was not made for either. Could I save him,
 I should not love him better, but myself ;
 And I have need of the last, for I have fallen
 In my own thoughts, by loving this soft stranger.

Not from the stars do I my judgement pluck :
 And yet methinks I have astronomy,
 But not to tell of good or evil luck,
 Of plagues, of dearths, or seasons' quality ;
 Nor can I fortune to brief minutes tell.
 Pointing to each his thunder, rain, and wind,
 Or say with princes if it shall go well,
 By oft predict that I in heaven find :
 But from thine eyes my knowledge I derive,
 And, constant stars, in them I read such art
 As 'Truth and beauty shall together thrive,
 If from thyself to store thou wouldest convert :'
 Or else of thee this I prognosticate :
 'Thy end is truth's and beauty's doom and date.'

My great love

Sprang up redoubled, and cast out my hate
And spurned all thought of fear; and down the stair
I hurried, and upon the bleeding form
I threw myself, and raised his head, and clasped
His body to mine, and kissed him on the lips,
And in his dying ear confessed my wrong.
And saw the horror in his dying eyes,
And knew that I was damned. And when he breathed
His last pure breath, I rose and slowly spake—
Turned to a Fury now by love and pain—
To the old man who knelt, while all the throng
Could hear my secret: ‘See, thou fool, I am
The murderer of thy son, and thou my dupe.
Thou and thy gods. See, he was innocent;
I murdered him for love. I scorn ye all,
Thee and thy gods together, who are deceived
By a woman’s lying tongue! Oh, doting fool.
To hate thy own! And ye, false powers, which punish
The innocent, and let the guilty soul
Escape unscathed. I hate ye all—I curse,
I loathe you!’

And night came down over the solemn waste
And the two gazing hosts and that sole pair
And darkened all, and a cold fog with night
Crept from the Oxus. Soon a hum arose
As of a great assembly loosed, and fires
Began to twinkle through the fog, for now
Both armies moved to camp and took their meal ;
The Persians took it on the open sands
Southward : the Tartars by the river marge,
And Rustum and his son were left alone.

But the majestic river floated on
Out of the mist and hum of that low land
Into the frosty starlight, and there moved Rejoicing through the hushed Chorasmian waste
Under the solitary moon. He flowed
Right for the polar star past Orgunje
Brimming and bright and large. Then sands begin
To hem his watery march, and dam his streams,
And split his currents, that for many a league
The shorn and parcelled Oxus strains along
Through beds of sand and matted rushy isles,
Oxus forgetting the bright speed he had
In his high mountain cradle in Pamire,
A foiled circuitous wanderer ; till at last
The longed-for dash of waves is heard, and wide
His luminous home of waters opens bright
And tranquil, from whose floor the new-bathed stars
Emerge and shine upon the Aral sea.

Nox ruit interea et late loca vasta tenebris occupat, arrectasque acies, solosque relictos ductores; gelidusque simul submissus ab Oxo
 it cum nocte vapor. mox, coetu ut saepe soluto, murmura misceri tractim, nebulaque micare interrupti ignes; etenim nunc agmen utrumque castra petunt, positisque parant se accingere mensis:
 Persica porrectis pubes epulatur harenis axe sub Austrino, sed rivi in margine Parthi:
 et solus genitor nati cum funere restat.

At, tacito strepitumque hominum nubesque iacentis flumine percurrentes, mox sese in aperta locorum laetus agit, Iove sub gelido, rex Oxus aquarum.
 claraque solivagae splendens ad lumina lunae
 fertur Hyperborei per vasta silentia campi.
 ille quidem Arctoo tendens iter obvius astro
 rura per Orguniae larga devolvitur unda, plenus adhuc, neque enim cursum mora tardat eunti.
 tum vero incipiunt alveo concrescere harenae,
 dividuoque obstant adversa mole fluento.
 sic per iter longum iam debilis inque peditus per vada limosa et iuncis et harundine densa obsita repit iners,—quantum mutatus ab illo qui nuper patriis missus de montibus Oxus lucentis urgebat aquas! nunc devius error
 ludit, mille vias frustra dum temptat eundi.

Mox tamen optato pelagi cum murmure, fulgens stellarum radiis, stellas modo laverat unda,
 en quaesita domus, requies ea certa laborum,
 metaque, tranquillum ponti patet aequor Aralis.

Gaunt. O ! to what purpose dost thou hoard thy words.

That thou return'st no greeting to thy friends ?

Boling. I have too few to take my leave of you,
When the tongue's office should be prodigal
To breathe the abundant dolour of the heart.

Gaunt. Thy grief is but thy absence for a time.

Boling. Joy absent, grief is present for that time.

Gaunt. What is six winters ? they are quickly gone.

Boling. To men in joy ; but grief makes one hour ten.

Gaunt. Call it a travel that thou tak'st for pleasure.

Boling. My heart will sigh when I miscall it so,
Which finds it an enforced pilgrimage.

Gaunt. The sullen passage of thy weary steps Esteem a foil wherein thou art to set
The precious jewel of thy home return.

Boling. Nay, rather, every tedious stride I make
Will but remember me what a deal of world
I wander from the jewels that I love.
Must I not serve a long apprenticeship
To foreign passages, and in the end,
Having my freedom, boast of nothing else
But that I was a journeyman to grief ?

Gaunt. All places that the eye of heaven visits
Are to a wise man ports and happy havens.
Teach thy necessity to reason thus ;
There is no virtue like necessity.
Think not the king did banish thee,
But thou the king. Woe doth the heavier sit,
Where it perceives it is but faintly borne.

With how sad steps, O Moon, thou climb'st the skies,
How silently, and with how wan a face!
What! may it be, and even in heavenly place,
That busy Archer his sharp arrows tries?
Sure, if that long with love acquainted eyes
Can judge of love, thou feel'st a lover's case;
I read it in thy looks, thy languish'd grace
To me that feel the like thy state descries.
Then even of fellowship, O Moon, tell me,
Is constant love deem'd there but want of wit?
Are beauties there as proud as here they be?
Do they above love to be lov'd, and yet
Those lovers scorn whom that love doth possess?
Do they call virtue there ungratefulness?

That same night both priest and sage
Died accursed in sombre rage.
Never more in wild wood green
Was that glorious Goddess seen.
Never more : and from that day
Evil hap and dull decay
Fell on countryside and town :
Life and vigour dwindled down :
Storms in spring nipped bud and sprout,
Summer suns shed plague and drought,
Autumn's store was crude and scant.
Winter snows beleaguered want :
Vines were black at vintage tide.
Flocks and herds of murrain died :
Fishing boats came empty home.
Good ships foundered in the foam :
Haggard traders lost all heart
Wandering through the empty mart :
For the air hung thick with gloom.
Silence, and the sense of doom.

Never love unless you can Bear with all the faults of man !
Men sometimes will jealous be.
Though but little cause they see.
And hang the head as discontent,
And speak what straight they will repent.

Illa gravis traxit nox et devota furenti morte sacerdotes fatidicumque genus.
 non iam per silvas, non iam viridante sub umbra

 venit inersque dies tum primum et decolor aetas.
 oppida conripiens ruraque tuta viis.

Ne sit amare viros curae, studioque teneri, quotquot habent culpas ni tolerare sedet.
 est ubi morosos livor capit invidus illos quum nil quod proprio iure querantur habent.
 est ubi demisisse caput iuvat, iraque verba
 quae dixisse pudet postmodo saeva iacit.

Men that but one Saint adore,
 Make a show of love to more ;
 Beauty must be scorned in none,
 Though but truly served in one :
 For what is courtship but disguise ?
 True hearts may have dissembling eyes.

Men, when their affairs require,
 Must awhile themselves retire :
 Sometimes hunt and sometimes hawk,
 And not ever sit and talk :
 If these and such-like you can bear,
 Then like and love, and never fear !

T. CAMPION.

The world is too much with us ; late and soon
 Getting and spending, we lay waste our powers ;
 Little we see in Nature that is ours :
 We have given our hearts away, a sordid boon !
 The sea that bares her bosom to the moon,
 The winds that will be howling at all hours
 And are upgathered now like sleeping flowers—
 For this, for everything, we are out of tune :
 It moves us not. Great God ! I'd rather be
 A Pagan, suckled in a creed outworn :
 So might I, standing on this pleasant lea,
 Have glimpses that would make me less forlorn,
 Have sight of Proteus rising from the sea,
 Or hear old Triton blow his wreathèd horn !

WORDSWORTH.

Child, when thou wert gone,
I envied human wives, and nested birds,
Yea, the cubb'd lioness ; went in search of thee
Thro' many a palace, many a cot, and gave Thy breast to ailing infants in the night,
And set the mother waking in amaze
To find her sick one whole ; and forth again
Among the wail of midnight winds, and cried,
· Where is my loved one ? Wherefore do ye wail ?'
And out from all the night an answer shrill'd,
· We know not, and we know not why we wail.'
I climb'd on all the cliffs of all the seas,
And ask'd the waves that moan about the world
· Where ? do ye make your moaning for my child ?'
And round from all the world the voices came
· We know not, and we know not why we moan.'
· Where ? and I stared from every eagle-peak,
I thridded the black heart of all the woods,
I peer'd thro' tomb and cave, and in the storms
Of Autumn swept across the city, and heard
The murmur of their temples chanting me,
Me, me, the desolate Mother ! · Where ?—and turn'd,
And fled by many a waste, forlorn of man,
And grieved for man thro' all my grief for thee,—
The jungle rooted in his shatter'd hearth,
The serpent coil'd about his broken shaft,
The scorpion crawling over naked skulls ;—
I saw the tiger in the ruin'd fane
Spring from his fallen God, but trace of thee
I saw not.

The building was a spacious theatre
Half-round, on two main pillars vaulted high,
With seats where all the lords, and each degree
Of sort, might sit in order to behold;
The other side was open, where the throng
On banks and scaffolds under sky might stand:
I among these aloof obscurely stood.

The feast and noon grew high, and sacrifice
Had fill'd their hearts with mirth, high cheer, and wine,
When to their sports they turn'd. Immediately
Was Samson as a public servant brought,
In their state livery clad; before him pipes
And timbrels, on each side went armed guards,
Both horse and foot, before him and behind,
Archers and slingers, cataphracts and spears.
At sight of him the people with a shout
Rifted the air, clamouring their god with praise,
Who had made their dreadful enemy their thrall.
He, patient, but undaunted, where they led him.
Came to the place; and what was set before him,
Which without help of eye might be assay'd,
To heave, pull, draw, or break, he still perform'd
All with incredible, stupendious force.
None daring to appear antagonist.

Q. Mar. O ! let me entreat thee, cease ! Give me thy hand,
That I may dew it with my mournful tears ;
Nor let the rain of heaven wet this place,
To wash away my woeful monuments.
O ! could this kiss be printed in thy hand,
That thou mightst think upon these by the seal,
Through whom a thousand sighs are breath'd for thee.
So, get thee gone, that I may know my grief ;
'Tis but surmis'd whiles thou art standing by,
As one that surfeits thinking on a want.
I will repeal thee, or, be well assur'd,
Adventure to be banished myself ;
And banished I am, if but from thee.
Go ; speak not to me ; even now be gone.
O ! go not yet. Even thus two friends condemn'd Embrace and kiss, and take ten thousand leaves.
Loather a hundred times to part than die.
Yet now farewell ; and farewell life with thee !

Suf. Thus is poor Suffolk ten times banished,
Once by the king, and three times thrice by thee.
'Tis not the land I care for, wert thou thence ;
A wilderness is populous enough,
So Suffolk had thy heavenly company :
For where thou art, there is the world itself,
With every several pleasure in the world,
And where thou art not, desolation.
I can no more : live thou to joy thy life ;
Myself to joy in nought but that thou liv'st.

For some were hung with arras green and blue,
Showing a gaudy summer-morn,
Where with puff'd cheek the belted hunter blew
His wreathed bugle-horn.

One seem'd all dark and red—a tract of sand,
And some one pacing there alone,
Who paced for ever in a glimmering land,
Lit with a low large moon.

One show'd an iron coast and angry waves.
You seem'd to hear them climb and fall
And roar rock-thwarted under bellowing caves,
Beneath the windy wall.

And one, a full-fed river winding slow
By herds upon an endless plain,
The ragged rims of thunder brooding low,
With shadow-streaks of rain.

And one, the reapers at their sultry toil.
In front they bound the sheaves. Behind
Were realms of upland, prodigal in oil,
And hoary to the wind.

And one a foreground black with stones and slags,
Beyond, a line of heights, and higher
All barr'd with long white cloud the scornful crags,
And highest, snow and fire.

And one, an English home—gray twilight pour'd
On dewy pastures, dewy trees,
Softer than sleep—all things in order stored,
A haunt of ancient Peace.

Loitering and leaping,
With saunter, with bounds—
Flickering and circling
In files and in rounds—
Gaily their pine-staff green
Tossing in air,
Loose o'er their shoulders white
Showering their hair—

See ! the wild Maenads
Break from the wood,
Youth and Iacchus
Maddening their blood !
See ! through the quiet land
Rioting they pass—
Fling the fresh heaps about,
Trample the grass !
Tear from the rifled hedge
Garlands, their prize :
Fill with their sports the field,
Fill with their cries !

Shepherd, what ails thee then ?
Shepherd, why mute ?
Forth with thy joyous song !
Forth with thy flute !
Tempt not the revel blithe ?
Lure not their cries ?
Glow not their shoulders smooth ?

‘So careful of the type?’ but no.
 From scarped cliff and quarried stone
 She cries, ‘A thousand types are gone:
 I care for nothing, all shall go.

‘Thou makest thine appeal to me:
 I bring to life, I bring to death:
 The spirit does but mean the breath:
 I know no more.’ And he, shall he,
 Man, her last work, who seem’d so fair.
 Such splendid purpose in his eyes,
 Who roll’d the psalm to wintry skies,
 Who built him fanes of fruitless prayer,
 Who trusted God was love indeed
 And love Creation’s final law—
 Tho’ Nature, red in tooth and claw
 With ravine, shriek’d against his creed—
 Who loved, who suffer’d countless ills,
 Who battled for the True, the Just,
 Be blown about the desert dust,
 Or seal’d within the iron hills?

Never any more,
While I live,
Need I hope to see his face
As before.

Once his love grown chill,
Mine may strive :
Bitterly we re-embrace,
Single still.

Was it something said,
Something done.

Vexed him ? was it touch of hand.
Turn of head ?

Strange ! that very way
Love begun :
I as little understand
Love's decay.

When I sewed or drew,
I recall
How he looked as if I sung,
—Sweetly too.

If I spoke a word,
First of all
Up his cheek the colour sprung.
Then he heard.

Sitting by my side,
At my feet,
So he breathed but air I breathed, Satisfied !

I. too, at Love's brim
Touched the sweet :
I would die if death bequeathed
Sweet to him.

 εἰ ταῦτοῦ μετέχοις ἀέρος, εἶχες ἄπαν.
 καὶ γὰρ ἐμοὶ γλυκὺς ἥλθεν ἔρως· καὶ ν κέρδος ἔδοξεν,
 εἴ τι σοὶ ἔξευροιμ' ἥδὺ θαυμῆσα, θαυμῆν.

'Speak, I love thee best !'
He exclaimed :
'Let thy love my own foretell,'
I confessed :
'Clasp my heart on thine
Now unblamed,
Since upon thy soul as well
Hanceth mine !'

Was it wrong to own,
Being truth ?
Why should all the giving prove
His alone ?
I had wealth and ease,
Beauty, youth :
Since my lover gave me love
I gave these.

That was all I meant,
—To be just,
And the passion I had raised
To content.
Since he chose to change
Gold for dust,
If I gave him what he praised
Was it strange ?

Would he loved me yet,
On and on,
While I found some way undreamed,
—Paid my debt !
Gave more life and more,
Till, all gone,
He should smile 'She never seemed Mine before.'

δέξαι μ' ὁ τριπόθητ', ηὔχου, δέξαι τὸν ἐρῶντα·
 δέξομαι, ἀντηύδωι, κάμε γὰρ ἔσχεν ἔρως.
 ἄμπεχ', ἔφην, χείρεσσιν ἐμὸν δέμας, ἄμπεχε χαίρων·
 ἵσα γὰρ ἀμφότεροι συνδεδέμεσθα πόθῳ;
 οὐ γὰρ ἐχρῆν δεῖξαι τὸν ἐμὸν πόθον; οὐ γὰρ ἀληθῆ;
 πάντ' ἐδίδωστε κάμοὶ δῶρα προσήκε πορεῦν.
 χρήμασιν, ἀγλαΐῃ, κάλλει, νεότητι κεκάσμην·
 μοῦνος ἔρως πάντων ἄξιος ἀντιλαβεῖν.
 τοῦδε γὰρ ἴμειρον, σοὶ τάνδικα πάντ' ἀποδοῦνται,
 καί σ' ἀσαι ποθέοντ' αἴτιος οὖσα πόθον.
 εἰ δὲ σὺ τοῦ χρυσοῦ φαύλην κόνιν εἴλου ἀμοιβήν,
 οὐ νέμεσις παρέχειν σοὶ τάδ' ἐφιεμένῳ.
 εἴθ' ἔτ' ἔρως σὲ κατεῖχε διαμπερές, ὡς τινα τέχνην ηὔροιν, ἀνελπίστως τ' ἀνταπέδωκα χάριν, ὡς μᾶλλον σ' ἐφίλονν καὶ μᾶλλον ἔτ' ἄχρι τελευτῆς,
 κἄλεγες, ἦ πασῶν ἥδ' ἄρα πιστοτάτη.

• What she felt the while,
     Must I think?
 Love's so different with us men !'
     He should smile :
 • Dying for my sake—
     White and pink !
 Can't we touch these bubbles then
     But they break ?'

Dear, the pang is brief,
     Do thy part,
 Have thy pleasure ! How perplexed Grows belief !
 Well, this cold clay clod
     Was man's heart :
 Crumble it, and what comes next ?
     Is it God ?

Of Manners gentle, of Affections mild ;
 In Wit, a Man ; Simplicity, a Child :
 With native Humour temp'ring virtuous Rage,
 Form'd to delight at once and lash the age :
 Above Temptation, in a low Estate,
 And uncorrupted, ev'n among the Great :
 A safe Companion, and an easy Friend,
 Unblam'd thro' Life, lamented in thy End.
 These are Thy Honours ! not that here thy Bust

 But that the Worthy and the Good shall say,
 Striking their pensive bosoms—Here lies GAY.

O moribus iucunde, mitis adfectu,

 te non egestas subditum tulit nummis,
 neque optimatum blanda cura corrupit;
 sed qui fuisti fidus ac sine offensa,
 vivum fovebant, mortuum dolent omnes.

LXII

From the forests and highlands
We come, we come :
From the river-girt islands,
Where loud waves are dumb
Listening to my sweet pipings.
The wind in the reeds and rushes,
The bees on the bells of thyme,
The birds on the myrtle bushes,
The cicale above in the lime,
And the lizards below in the grass,
Were as silent as ever old Tmolus was,
Listening to my sweet pipings.

Liquid Peneus was flowing,
And all dark Tempe lay
In Pelion's shadow, outgrowing
The light of the dying day,
Speeded with my sweet pipings.
The Sileni and Silvans and Fauns,
And the Nymphs of the woods and waves,
To the edge of the moist river-lawns,
And the brink of the dewy caves,—
And all that then did attend and follow,
Were silent with love : as you now, Apollo,
With envy of my sweet pipings !

I sang of the dancing stars,
I sang of the daedal Earth,
And of Heaven, and the Giant Wars,
And Love, and Death, and Birth :

And then I changed my pipings,—
Singing how down the valley of Maenalus

I pursued a maiden and clasped a reed :
Gods and men, we all are deluded thus !

It breaks in our bosom and then we bleed :
All wept, as I ween both ye now would,
If envy or age had not frozen your blood,
At the sorrow of my sweet pipings !

SHELLEY.

1 Cit. Come, come, we fear the worst : all will be well.

3 Cit. When clouds are seen, wise men put on their cloaks ;

When great leaves fall, then winter is at hand ;
When the sun sets, who doth not look for night ?
Untimely storms make men expect a dearth :
All may be well ; but, if God sort it so,
'Tis more than we deserve, or I expect.

2 Cit. Truly the hearts of men are full of fear ;
You cannot reason almost with a man
That looks not heavily and full of dread.

3 Cit. Before the days of change, still is it so :
By a divine instinct, men's minds mistrust
Ensuing danger ; as, by proof, we see,
The water swell before a boist'rous storm.

Forsake me not thus, Adam : witness Heav'n
 What love sincere, and reverence in my heart
 I bear thee, and unweeting have offended,
 Unhappily deceiv'd ; thy suppliant
 I beg, and clasp thy knees ; bereave me not.
 Whereon I live, thy gentle looks, thy aid,
 Thy counsel in this uttermost distress,
 My only strength and stay : forlorn of thee,
 Whither shall I betake me, where subsist ?
 While yet we live, scarce one short hour perhaps.
 Between us two let there be peace ; both joining,
 As join'd in injuries, one enmity
 Against a foe by doom express assign'd us,
 That cruel Serpent : on me exercise not
 Thy hatred for this misery befall'n ;
 On me already lost, me than thyself
 More miserable.

Weep no more, nor sigh, nor groan.
 Sorrow calls no time that's gone :
 Violets plucked, the sweetest rain
 Makes not fresh nor grow again ;
 Trim thy locks, look cheerfully,
 Fate's hidden ends eyes cannot see.
 Joys as wingèd dreams fly fast,
 Why should sadness longer last ?
 Grief is but a wound to woe,
 Gentlest fair, mourn, mourn no moe.

All are not just, because they do no wrong,
 But he, who will not wrong me when he may,
 He is the truly just. I praise not them,
 Who in their petty dealings pilfer not ;
 But him, whose conscience spurns a secret fraud,
 When he might plunder and defy surprise :
 His be the praise, who looking down with scorn
 On the false judgement of the partial herd,
 Consults his own clear heart, and boldly dares
 To be, not to be thought, an honest man.

Now fades the last long streak of snow,
     Now burgeons every maze of quick
     About the flowering squares, and thick
 By ashen roots the violets blow.
 Now rings the woodland loud and long.
     The distance takes a lovelier hue,
     And drown'd in yonder living blue
 The lark becomes a sightless song.
 Now dance the lights on lawn and lea,
     The flocks are whiter down the vale.
     And milkier every milky sail
 On winding stream or distant sea ;
 Where now the seamew pipes, or dives
     In yonder greening gleam, and fly
     The happy birds, that change their sky
 To build and brood ; that live their lives
     From land to land ; and in my breast
     Spring wakens too ; and my regret
     Becomes an April violet,
 And buds and blossoms like the rest. TENNYSON.

In vain do men
The heavens of their fortune's fault accuse,
Sith they know best what is the best for them :
For they to each such fortune doe diffuse
As they doe know each can most aptly use.
For not that which men covet most is best,
Nor that thing worst which men doe most refuse ;
But fittest is that all contented rest
With what they hold ; each hath his fortune in his breast.

Yet not the more
Cease I to wander where the muses haunt
Clear spring, or shady grove, or sunny hill,
Smit with the love of sacred song : but chief
Thee, Sion, and the flowery brooks beneath
That wash thy hallow'd feet, and warbling flow,
Nightly I visit : nor sometimes forget
Those other two equall'd with me in fate,
So were I equall'd with them in renown,
Blind Thamyris and blind Maeonides,
And Tiresias and Phineus, prophets old.
Then feed on thoughts, that voluntary move
Harmonious numbers ; as the wakeful bird
Sings darkling, and in shadiest covert hid Tunes her nocturnal note. Thus with the year
Seasons return ; but not to me returns
Day, or the sweet approach of ev'n or morn,

Thou, as a gallant bark from Albion's coast
 (The storms all weathered and the ocean crost)
 Shoots into port at some well-havened isle.
 Where spices breathe and brighter seasons smile :
 There sits quiescent on the floods that show
 Her beauteous form reflected clear below.
 While airs impregnated with incense play
 Around her, fanning light her streamers gay :
 So thou, with sails, how swift ! hast reached the shore.
 Where tempests never beat nor billows roar,
 And thy loved consort on the dangerous tide
 Of life long since has anchored by thy side.
 But me, scarce hoping to attain that rest,
 Always from port withheld, always distressed—
 Me howling blasts drive devious, tempest-tossed.
 Sails ripped, seams opening wide, and compass lost.
 And day by day some current's thwarting force
 Sets me more distant from a prosperous course.
 —Yet, oh ! the thought that thou art safe and he !—
 That thought is joy, arrive what may to me.

Vio. Ay, but I know,—

Duke. What dost thou know?

Vio. Too well what love women to men may owe:
In faith, they are as true of heart as we.
My father had a daughter loved a man,
As it might be, perhaps, were I a woman,
I should your lordship.

Duke. And what's her history?

Vio. A blank, my lord. She never told her love,
But let concealment, like a worm i' the bud,
Feed on her damask cheek: she pin'd in thought,
And with a green and yellow melancholy,
She sat like Patience on a monument,
Smiling at grief. Was not this love indeed?
We men may say more, swear more; but indeed
Our shows are more than will, for still we prove
Much in our vows, but little in our love.

Duke. But died thy sister of her love, my boy?

Vio. I am all the daughters of my father's house,
And all the brothers too; and yet I know not.
Sir, shall I to this lady?

Duke. Ay, that's the theme.

To her in haste; give her this jewel; say
My love can give no place, bide no delay.

She gleans her silvan trophies ; down the wold
 She hears the sobbing of the stags that flee
 Mixed with the music of the hunting roll'd.
 But her delight is all in archery,
 And naught of ruth and pity wotteth she
 More than her hounds that follow on the flight ;
 The goddess draws a golden bow of might,
 And thick she rains the gentle shafts that slay.
 She tosses loose her locks upon the night,
 And through the dim wood Dian threads her way.

Mess. Take then the worst in brief, Samson is dead.
Manoa. The worst indeed ; O all my hopes defeated
 To free him hence ! but Death, who sets all free.
 Hath paid his ransom now and full discharge.
 What windy joy this day had I conceiv'd,
 Hopeful of his delivery, which now proves Abortive as the first-born bloom of spring
 Nipt with the lagging rear of winter's frost !
 Yet, ere I give the reins to grief, say first,
 How died he ? death to life is crown or shame.
 All by him fell, thou say'st ; by whom fell he ?
 What glorious hand gave Samson his death's wound ?
Mess. Unwounded of his enemies he fell.
Man. Wearied with slaughter then, or how ? explain.
Mess. By his own hands.

Behold and listen, while the fair
 Breaks in sweet sounds the willing air,
 And with her own breath fans the fire
 Which her bright eyes do first inspire.
 What reason can that love control
 Which more than one way courts the soul?
 So when a flash of lightning falls
 On our abodes, the danger calls
 For human aid, which hopes the flame
 To conquer, though from heaven it came:
 But if the winds with that conspire,
 Men strive not, but deplore the fire.

Like as the waves make towards the pebbled shore,
 So do our minutes hasten to their end;
 Each changing place with that which goes before,
 In sequent toil all forwards do contend.
 Nativity, once in the main of light,
 Crawls to maturity, wherewith being crown'd.
 Crooked eclipses 'gainst his glory fight,
 And Time that gave doth now his gift confound.
 Time doth transfix the flourish set on youth
 And delves the parallels in beauty's brow,
 Feeds on the rarities of nature's truth.
 And nothing stands but for his scythe to mow:
 And yet to times in hope my verse shall stand.
 Praising thy worth, despite his cruel hand.

My tears, not gifts; and like the poor, that mourn
With green but humble turfs, write o'er his hearse
For false foul prose-men this fair truth in verse.

*Here Daphnis sleeps! and while the great watch goes
Of loud and restless Time, takes his repose.*

*Fame is but noise; all learning but a thought,
Which one admires, another sets at nought;
Nature mocks both; and wit still keeps adoe:
But death brings knowledge and assurance too.*

Now entertain conjecture of a time
When creeping murmur and the poring dark
Fills the wide vessel of the universe.
From camp to camp, through the foul womb of night,
The hum of either army stilly sounds,
That the fix'd sentinels almost receive
The secret whispers of each other's watch:
Fire answers fire, and through their paly flames
Each battle sees the other's umber'd face:
Steed threatens steed, in high and boastful neighs
Piercing the night's dull ear; and from the tents
The armourers, accomplishing the knights,
With busy hammers closing rivets up,
Give dreadful note of preparation.
The country cocks do crow, the clocks do toll,
And the third hour of drowsy morning name.

When I have seen by Time's fell hand defac'd
 The rich-proud cost of outworn buried age ;
 When sometime lofty towers I see down-raz'd,
 And brass eternal slave to mortal rage ;
 When I have seen the hungry ocean gain
 Advantage on the kingdom of the shore,
 And the firm soil win of the watery main,
 Increasing store with loss, and loss with store ;
 When I have seen such interchange of state,
 Or state itself confounded to decay ;
 Ruin hath taught me thus to ruminate—
 That Time will come and take my love away.

This thought is as a death, which cannot choose
 But weep to have that which it fears to lose.

Here lies the home of schoolboy life,
 With creaking stair and wind-swept hall,
 And scarred by many a truant knife,
 Our old initials on the wall ;
 Here rest, their keen vibrations mute,
 The shout of voices known so well,
 The ringing laugh, the wailing flute,
 The chiding of the sharp-tongue bell.
 Nay, take the cup of blood-red wine,—
 Our hearts can boast a warmer glow,
 Filled from a vintage more divine,—
 Calmed, but not chilled by winter's snow !
 To-night the palest wave we sip
 Rich as the priceless draught shall be
 That wet the bride of Cana's lip,—
 The wedding wine of Galilee !

Many are the sayings of the wise,
 In antient and in modern books enroll'd,
 Extolling patience as the truest fortitude ;
 And to the bearing well of all calamities,
 All chances incident to man's frail life,
 Consolatories writ
 With studied argument, and much persuasion sought,
 Lenient of grief and anxious thought ;
 But with th' afflicted in his pangs their sound
 Little prevails, or rather seems a tune
 Harsh, and of dissonant mood from his complaint,
 Unless he feel within
 Some source of consolation from above ;
 Secret refreshings that repair his strength,
 And fainting spirits uphold.

There in his noisy mansion, skilled to rule,
 The village master taught his little school.
 A man severe he was and stern to view ;
 I knew him well and every truant knew :
 Well had the boding tremblers learned to trace
 The day's disasters in his morning face ;
 Full well they laughed with counterfeited glee
 At all his jokes—for many a joke had he ;
 Full well the busy whisper, circling round,
 Conveyed the dismal tidings, when he frowned :
 Yet he was kind ; or if severe in aught,
 The love he bore to learning was in fault.
 The village all declared how much he knew—
 'Twas certain he could write and cypher too :
 Lands he could measure, terms and tides presage,
 And even the story ran that he could gauge.
 In arguing too the parson owned his skill,
 For even though vanquished, he could argue still ;
 While words of learnèd length and thundering sound
 Amazed the gazing rustics ranged around—
 And still they gazed, and still the wonder grew
 That one small head could carry all he knew.

K. Edw. Ah, Leicester, weigh how hardly I can brook
To lose my crown and kingdom without cause ;
To give ambitious Mortimer my right.
That like a mountain overwhelms my bliss,
In which extremes my mind here murdered is.
But what the heavens appoint, I must obey !
Here, take my crown ; the life of Edward too ;
Two kings in England cannot reign at once.
But stay awhile, let me be king till night,
That I may gaze upon this glittering crown :
So shall my eyes receive their last content,
My head, the latest honour due to it,
And jointly both yield up their wished right.
Continue ever, thou celestial sun :
Let never silent night possess this clime :
Stand still, you watches of the element ;
All times and seasons, rest you at a stay,
That Edward may be still fair England's king !
But day's bright beam doth vanish fast away,
And needs I must resign my wished crown.
Inhuman creatures ! nursed with tiger's milk !
Why gape you for your sovereign's overthrow ?
My diadem I mean, and guiltless life.
See, monsters, see, I'll wear my crown again !

Birds in the high Hall-garden
 When twilight was falling,
 Maud, Maud, Maud, Maud,
 They were crying and calling.
 Where was Maud? in our wood;
 And I, who else, was with her,
 Gathering woodland lilies,
 Myriads blow together.

Birds in our wood sang
 Ringing thro' the valleys,
 Maud is here, here, here
 In among the lilies.

I kiss'd her slender hand,
 She took the kiss sedately;
 Maud is not seventeen,
 But she is tall and stately.

I to cry out on pride
 Who have won her favour!

O Maud were sure of heaven
 If lowliness could save her.

I know the way she went Home with her maiden posy,
 For her feet have touch'd the meadows
 And left the daisies rosy.

Birds in the high Hall-garden
 Were crying and calling to her,
 Where is Maud, Maud, Maud?
 One is come to woo her.

Look, a horse at the door,
 And little King Charley snarling,
 Go back, my lord, across the moor,
 You are not her darling.

What tho' no weeping Loves thy ashes grace,
 Nor polish'd marble emulate thy face?
 What tho' no sacred earth allow thee room,
 Nor hallow'd dirge be mutter'd o'er thy tomb?
 Yet shall thy grave with rising flow'rs be drest,
 And the green turf lie lightly on thy breast:
 There shall the morn her earliest tears bestow,
 There the first roses of the year shall blow;
 While Angels with their silver wings o'er shade
 The ground, now sacred by thy reliques made.

So peaceful rests, without a stone, a name,
 What once had beauty, titles, wealth, and fame.
 How lov'd, how honour'd once, avails thee not,
 To whom related, or by whom begot;
 A heap of dust alone remains of thee,
 "Tis all thou art, and all the proud shall be!

Sing to Apollo, god of day,
 Whose golden beams with morning play,
 And make her eyes so brightly shine,
 Aurora's face is called divine.
 Sing to Phoebus and that throne
 Of diamonds which he sits upon,
 Io Paeans let us sing
 To Physic and to Poesy's king.
 Crown all his altars with bright fire,
 Laurels bind about his lyre,

Quid si nullus Amor decorat tibi flebilis urnam
 nec simulant vultus marmora trita tuos, invida nec iusto donat Libitina cubili,
 mussat et ad bustum praefica nulla tuum ?
 at tibi sub multo consurget flore sepulcrum,
 et leviter viridi caespite terra premet ;
 at lux orta dabit lacrimas quae prima recentes,
 sertaque florebunt nulla priora tuis ;
 at Dryades niveo nectentes brachia coetu defendant cineri rura sacrata tuo.
 tanta quies sopit tacitam cippoque carentem
 quam decor ornarat, gloria, nomen, opes, quantus amor fuerat, quam nil tibi restat honorum !

A Daphnean coronet for his head ;
 The Muses dance about his bed,

Go, for they call you, shepherd, from the hill !
 Go, shepherd, and untie the wattled cotes !
 No longer leave thy wistful flock unfed,
 Nor let thy bawling fellows rack their throats.
 Nor the cropped grasses shoot another head !
 But when the fields are still,
 And the tired men and dogs all gone to rest,
 And only the white sheep are sometimes seen
 Cross and recross the strips of moon-blanced green.
 Come, shepherd, and again begin the quest !

Here, where the reaper was at work of late—
 In this high field's dark corner, where he leaves
 His coat, his basket, and his earthen cruse,
 And in the sun all morning binds the sheaves.
 Then here, at noon, comes back his stores to use—
 Here will I sit and wait,
 While to my ear from uplands far away
 The bleating of the folded flocks is borne,
 With distant cries of reapers in the corn—
 All the live murmur of a summer's day.

O lady, leave thy silken thread
And flowery tapestrie ;
There's living roses on the bush,
And blossoms on the tree :
Stoop where thou wilt, thy careless hand
Some random bud will meet ;
Thou canst not tread, but thou wilt find
The daisy at thy feet.

'Tis like the birthday of the world,
When earth was born in bloom ;
The light is made of many dyes,
The air is all perfume ;
There's crimson buds, and white and blue —
The very rainbow showers
Have turn'd to blossoms where they fell,
And sown the earth with flowers.

There's fairy tulips in the east,
The garden of the sun ;
The very streams reflect the hues,
And blossoms as they run :
While Morn opes like a crimson rose,
Still wet with pearly showers ;
Then, lady, leave the silken thread
Thou twinest into flowers !

Go!—thou art all unfit to share
The pleasures of this place
With such as its old tenants are,
Creatures of gentler race.
The squirrel here his hoard provides,
Aware of wintry storms;
And woodpeckers explore the sides
Of rugged oaks for worms.
The sheep here smoothes the knotted thorn
With frictions of her fleece;
And here I wander eve and morn,
Like her, a friend to peace.
Ah!—I could pity the exiled
From this secure retreat;—
I would not lose it to be styled
The happiest of the great.
But thou canst taste no calm delight;
Thy pleasure is to show
Thy magnanimity in fight,
Thy prowess,—therefore, go!
I care not whether east or north,
So I no more may find thee;
The angry Muse thus sings thee forth,
And claps the gate behind thee.

Oh Friendship, cordial of the human breast !
 So little felt, so fervently professed !
 Thy blossoms deck our unsuspecting years :
 The promise of delicious fruit appears :
 But soon, alas, we find the rash mistake
 That sanguine inexperience loves to make,
 And view with tears the expected harvest lost,
 Decayed by time or withered by a frost.
 Whoever undertakes a friend's great part
 Should be renewed in nature, pure in heart.
 Prepared for martyrdom, and strong to prove
 A thousand ways the force of genuine love.
 He may be called to give up health and gain.
 To exchange content for trouble, ease for pain,
 To echo sigh for sigh, and groan for groan.
 And wet his cheeks with sorrows not his own.
 The heart of man, for such a task too frail.
 When most relied on, is most sure to fail ;
 And, summoned to partake its fellow's woe,
 Starts from its office, like a broken bow.

Menoceus, thou hast eyes, and I can hear
 Too plainly what full tides of onset sap
 Our seven high gates, and what a weight of war
 Rides on those ringing axles ! jingle of bits,
 Shouts, arrows, tramp of the hornfooted horse
 That grind the glebe to powder ! Stony showers
 Of that ear-stunning hail of Ares crash
 Along the sounding walls. Above, below,
 Shock after shock, the song-built towers and gates
 Reel, bruised and butted with the shuddering
 War-thunder of iron-rams ; and from within
 The city comes a murmur void of joy,
 Lest she be taken captive—maidens, wives,
 And mothers with their babblers of the dawn,
 And oldest age in shadow from the night,
 Falling about their shrines before their Gods,
 And wailing ‘Save us.’

But she, 'midst fear, beheld his kind grey eyes,
And then, as hope came glimmering through her dread,
In a weak voice he scarce could hear she said :

O Death, if thou hast risen from the sea,
Sent by the gods to end this misery,
I thank them that thou comest in this form ;
Who rather thought to see a hideous worm
Come trailing up the sands from out the deep,
Or suddenly swing over from the steep
To lap me in his folds, and bone by bone
Crush all my body : come then, with no moan
Will I make ready now to leave the light.
But yet thy face is wonderful and bright.
Art thou a god ? Ah, then be kind to me.
Is there no valley far off from the sea,
Where I may live alone, afar from strife,
Nor anger any god with my poor life ?
Or do the gods delight in misery,
And art thou come to mock me ere I die ?

Set where the upper streams of Simois flow
 Was the Palladium, high 'mid rock and wood ;
 And Hector was in Ilium, far below,
 And fought, and saw it not,—but there it stood !
 It stood, and sun and moonshine rained their light
 On the pure columns of its glen-built hall,
 Backward and forward rolled the waves of fight
 Round Troy—but while this stood, Troy could not fall.
 So, in its lovely moonlight, lives the soul.
 Mountains surround it, and sweet virgin air ;
 Cold, plashing past it, crystal waters roll ;
 We visit it by moments, ah, too rare !
 We shall renew the battle on the plain
 To-morrow :—red with blood will Xanthus be ;
 Hector and Ajax will be there again,
 Helen will come upon the walls to see.
 Still doth the soul from its lone fastness high Upon our life a ruling effluence send ;
 And when it fails, fight as we will, we die ;
 And while it lasts, we cannot wholly end.

Self-reverence, self-knowledge, self-control,
 These three alone lead life to sovereign power.
 Yet not for power—power of itself
 Would come uncalled for—but to live by law.
 Acting the law we live by, without fear :
 And because right is right, to follow right
 Were wisdom, in the scorn of consequence.

Saltibus in mediis, fontis Simoentis ad ipsos,
 Palladium sacra stabat in arce deae;
 proelia dum miscet Troiae sub moenibus Hector,
 nec sibi tam praesens numen adesse videt.
 numen adest; altam sanctis in vallibus aedem
 lumina iam lunae, iam tua, Phoebe, rigant;
 hinc illinc, velut unda, ruunt certamina belli;
 urbs intacta manet, dum dea praeses adest.
 sic sua cuique anima est praeses dea, montibus illa
 cincta suis fruitur liberiore polo;
 sunt gelidi circum, sunt multo murmure fontes,
 nos adyta, a, raro visimus illa pede.
 eras iterum campos bello fervere videbis,
 purpureas Xanthus sanguine tinget aquas;
 iamque Ajax iterum, iam proelia conseret Hector, Tyndaris et muros rursus, ut ante, petet.
 ast anima ex adyto qua se sola abdidit alto
 nostra tamen proprio numine facta regit;
 quo duce non omnes ex parte peribimus omni,
 sin absit, dextra nulla valente salus.

Nox erat: obliquus convertere plastra Bootes cooperat, impellens Arcton utramque manu;
 tempore quo fessae nimio cessere labori
 terrigenum gentes quotquot ubique iacent.
 en! Amor ante foris subitus consistit, et urget improbus oppositam voce manuque seram.
 huic ego: ‘quisquis ades, iam parce: quid ostia pulsas?
 somnia, si nescis, nostra, moleste, fugas.’
 flebilis ille: ‘times? aperi modo: sum puer,’ inquit:
 ‘luna latet: subito devius imbre rigor.’
 talia plorantis miseret: mora nulla, resurgo;
 ianuaque accensa lampade laxa patet.
 ecce pusillus adest, calamis instructus et arcu:
 penna premit tergum: pone pharetra sonat.
 inde foco manibusque manus refovere dolenti
 cura fuit, madidas executioque comas.
 frigore mox pulso: ‘modo ne mihi laeserit arcum
 imber! et en nervum tendere coner,’ ait.
 cornibus adductis steterat, pariterque sagitta oestrus uti medium per iecur acta volat.
 exsilit, et plaudens sibi ‘plaudere parcis, amice?’
 ‘hunc teneo salvum: laesus at ipse gemes.’

Life is a city with many a street :
Death is the market where all men meet :
If life were a thing which gold could buy,
The poor could not live and the rich would not die.

And Phaethon they found, or what seem'd he.
Low lying in the reeds, a charr'd black mass,
Furrow'd with trenchant fire from head to foot.
Whom yet with reverent hands they lifted up
And bare him to the bank, and wash'd the limbs
In vain : and, for the burnt shreds clinging to him,
Robed the cold form in raiment shining white.
Then on the river-marge they scoop'd a grave
And laid him in the dank earth far apart,
Near to none else ; for so the dead are laid
Whom Zeus, the Thunderer, hath cut off by fire.
And on the tomb they pour'd forth wine and oil.
Nor fail'd they to record in distich due
How from a kingly venture kingly fall
Result'd, and a higher than human fame.

Out upon it, I have loved
 Three whole days together;
 And am like to love three more
 If it prove fair weather.
 Time shall moult away his wings,
 Ere he shall discover
 In the whole wide world again
 Such a constant lover.
 But the spite on't is, no praise
 Is due at all to me:
 Love with me had made no stays,
 Had it any been but she;
 Had it any been but me
 And that very face,
 There had been at least ere this
 A dozen in her place.

Let those who are in favour with their stars
 Of public honour and proud titles boast,
 Whilst I, whom fortune of such triumph bars.
 Unlook'd for joy in that I honour most.
 Great princes' favourites their fair leaves spread
 But as the marigold at the sun's eye,
 And in themselves their pride lies buried,
 For at a frown they in their glory die.
 The painful warrior famous'd for fight,
 After a thousand victories once foil'd,
 Is from the book of honour razed quite,
 And all the rest forgot for which he toil'd:
 Then happy I, that love and am belov'd,
 Where I may not remove nor be remov'd.

 deliciae qui sunt regum, ceu caltha, colores
 oppandunt domini solis ad ora sui, nubila sit facies, illorum gloria fluxit,
 aureaque in sese forma sepulta iacet.
 strenuus et miles felicia notus ob arma,
 si totiens victor vincitur ipse semel,
 raditur e fastis omnino nomen honestis,

CIII

Soon the assembly, in a circle ranged,
Stood silent round the shrine: each look was changed
To sudden veneration: women meek
Beckon'd their sons to silence; while each cheek
Of virgin bloom paled gently for slight fear.
Endymion too, without a forest peer,
Stood, wan, and pale, and with an awed face,
Among his brothers of the mountain chase.
In midst of all, the venerable priest
Eyed them with joy from greatest to the least,
And, after lifting up his aged hands,
Thus spake he: 'Men of Latmos! shepherd bands!
Whose care it is to guard a thousand flocks:
Whether descended from beneath the rocks
That overtop your mountains; whether come
From valleys where the pipe is never dumb;
Or from your swelling downs, where sweet air stirs
Blue hare-bells lightly, and where prickly furze
Buds lavish gold; or ye, whose precious charge
Nibble their fill at ocean's very marge,
Whose mellow reeds are touch'd with sounds forlorn
By the dim echoes of old Triton's horn:
Mothers and wives! who day by day prepare
The scrip, with needments, for the mountain air:
And all ye gentle girls who foster up
Udderless lambs, and in a little cup
Will put choice honey for a favour'd youth:
Yea, every one attend! for in good truth
Our vows are wanting to our great god Pan.

Orsino, noble sir,

Be pleas'd that I shake off these names you give me:
 Antonio never yet was thief or pirate,
 Though I confess, on base and ground enough,
 Orsino's enemy. A witchcraft drew me hither:
 That most ingrateful boy there by your side,
 From the rude sea's enrag'd and foamy mouth
 Did I redeem; a wreck past hope he was:
 His life I gave him, and did thereto add
 My love, without retention or restraint,
 All his in dedication; for his sake
 Did I expose myself, pure for his love,
 Into the danger of this adverse town;
 Drew to defend him when he was beset:
 Where being apprehended, his false cunning,
 Not meaning to partake with me in danger,
 Taught him to face me out of his acquaintance,
 And grew a twenty years removed thing
 While one would wink.

O ! how much more doth beauty beauteous seem
 By that sweet ornament which truth doth give !
 The rose looks fair, but fairer we it deem
 For that sweet odour which doth in it live.
 The canker-blooms have full as deep a dye
 As the perfumed tincture of the roses,
 Hang on such thorns, and play as wantonly
 When summer's breath their masked buds discloses :
 But, for their virtue only is their show,
 They live unwoo'd, and unrespected fade ;
 Die to themselves. Sweet roses do not so ;
 Of their sweet deaths are sweetest odours made :
 And so of you, beauteous and lovely youth,
 When that shall fade, my verse distils your truth.

SHAKESPEARE.

CVI

The rain had fallen, the Poet arose,
 He pass'd by the town and out of the street,
 A light wind blew from the gates of the sun,
 And waves of shadow went over the wheat,
 And he sat him down in a lonely place,
 And chanted a melody loud and sweet,
 That made the wild-swan pause in her cloud,
 And the lark drop down at his feet.
 The swallow stopt as he hunted the bee,
 The snake slipt under a spray,
 The wild hawk stood with the down on his beak,
 And stared, with his foot on the prey,
 And the nightingale thought, ‘ I have sung many songs,
 But never a one so gay,
 For he sings of what the world will be
 When the years have died away.’

O quam forma solet formosior illa videri
 cui decus accessit quod dabit una fides!
 forma rosae pulchra est, at pulchrior esse putatur aura quod in medio vivit odora sinu.
 flosculus in pratis tanto splendore rubescit
 quantus odoriferis est color ille rosis;
 pensilis in spina simili, lascivit ut illae
 cum zephyri timidas elicit aura comas.
 sed, species tantum, spretus floretque caditque,
 labitur, at nemo tollere curat humo;
 non ea fit natura rosis, dulcissimus unus nascitur ex illis cum moriuntur odor.
 sic tibi, dulce caput, dum formae gloria marcat,

We must look the possibility of failure firmly in the face, and consider well that the Power we attack is great and the intelligence which guides it vigorous, that the contest is begun less in regard to the probability of success than to the certainty that without its destruction is not to be avoided, and that we do our duty better by our own age and the next and by the honour of the king and nation in falling with arms in our hands, than in patiently suffering ourselves to be fettered and held in chains. We must make ourselves familiar with the thought of every kind of sacrifice and of death if we would tread the path now proposed. Thus prepared internally and favoured by circumstances, let us begin in God's name and remember that by courage and fortitude great ends have been reached with small means. Only we must be rid of all languid wretched creatures that are insensible to noble feelings and incapable of any kind of devotion and sacrifice, people who mar and spoil everything and think of nothing but the quiet enjoyment of their miserable existence.

I dream'd there would be Spring no more,
 That Nature's ancient power was lost :
 The streets were black with smoke and frost.
 They chatter'd trifles at the door :
 I wander'd from the noisy town,
 I found a wood with thorny boughs :
 I took the thorns to bind my brows.
 I wore them like a civic crown :
 I met with scoffs, I met with scorns
 From youth and babe and hoary hairs :
 They call'd me in the public squares
 The fool that wears a crown of thorns :
 They call'd me fool, they call'd me child :
 I found an angel of the night ;
 The voice was low, the look was bright ;
 He look'd upon my crown and smiled :
 He reach'd the glory of a hand,
 That seem'd to touch it into leaf :
 The voice was not the voice of grief.
 The words were hard to understand.

Lady M. Out, damned spot ! out, I say ! One ; two : why, then, 'tis time to do 't. Hell is murky ! Fie, my lord, fie ! a soldier, and afeard ? What need we fear who knows it, when none can call our power to account ? Yet who would have thought the old man to have had so much blood in him ?

Doct. Do you mark that ?

Lady M. The Thane of Fife had a wife : where is she now ? What ! will these hands ne'er be clean ? No more o' that, my lord, no more o' that : you mar all with this starting.

Doct. Go to, go to ; you have known what you should not.

Gent. She has spoke what she should not, I am sure of that : Heaven knows what she has known.

Lady M. Here 's the smell of the blood still : all the perfumes of Arabia will not sweeten this little hand. Oh ! oh ! oh !

Doct. What a sigh is there ! The heart is sorely charged.

Gent. I would not have such a heart in my bosom for the dignity of the whole body.

Doct. Well, well, well.

Gent. Pray God it be, sir.

Doct. This disease is beyond my practice : yet I have known those which have walked in their sleep who have died holily in their beds.

O'er the smooth enamelled green,
Where no print of step hath been,

Follow me, as I sing

And touch the warbled string,
Under the shady roof
Of branching elm star-proof.

Follow me;

I will bring you where she sits,
Clad in splendour as befits

Her deity.

Such a rural queen
All Arcadia hath not seen.

Nymphs and shepherds, dance no more
By sandy Ladon's lilyed banks:

On old Lycaeus, or Cyllene hoar,

Trip no more in twilight ranks;
Though Erymanth your loss deplore,

A better soil shall give ye thanks.

From the stony Maenalus

Bring your flocks, and live with us;

Here ye shall have greater grace,

To serve the lady of this place.

Though Syrinx your Pan's mistress were,
Yet Syrinx well might wait on her.

Such a rural queen

All Arcadia hath not seen.

CXIII

Now on the summit of Love's topmost peak
 Kiss we and part; no farther can we go:
 And better death than we from high to low
 Should dwindle or decline from strong to weak.
 We have found all, there is no more to seek;
 All have we proved, no more is there to know;
 And Time could only tutor us to eke
 Out rapture's warmth with custom's after-glow.
 We cannot keep at such a height as this;
 And even straining souls like ours inhale
 But once in life so rarefied a bliss.
 What if we lingered till love's breath should fail!
 Heaven of my earth! one more celestial kiss,
 Then down by separate pathways to the vale.

A. AUSTIN.

CXIV

Let golden youth bewail the friend, the wife,
 For ever gone;
 He thinks of that long walk thro' desert life
 Without the one.
 The silver year should cease to mourn and sigh—
 Not long to wait—
 So close are we, dear Mary, you and I,
 To that dim gate.
 Take, read! and be the faults your poet makes
 Or many or few,
 He rests content, if his young music wakes
 A wish in you
 To change our dark Queen-city, all her realm
 Of sound and smoke,
 For his clear heaven, and these few lanes of elm
 And whispering oak.

TENNYSON.

Then Ganges and a troop of Eastern streams
Fled backward, each one to his cradle cave ;
Then the tall glaciers of the Polar zone
Flushed crimson to the roots of their cold realm :
For all the fir-crowned Scandinavian hills
Night-shrouded half the months, tier over tier,
Blazed in the gloomy North, like beacon-hells
Lit for world-wasting Furies who bear down
In convoy, with wild omens of the end.
And all the peopled plains sent up a smoke
Of harvests reaped by fire, and flaming towns,
Till the hot clamour of those masterless wheels
Rang deadlier, mingled with the loud-voiced curse
Of men by myriads overcome with hell.
And a long cry came to the ears of Zeus
Where in full conclave of the gods he sat ;
And while he doubted, a great rainy heat
Fell slant and sudden on the Olympian walls,
And all the ceiling glared like molten gold,
And the rich cloisters like a forest glowed
Of resinous pines, with every trunk ablaze.

CXVII

Not him I praise, who from the world retired,
 By no enlivening generous passion fired,
 On flowery couches slumbers life away
 And gently bids his active powers decay ;
 Who fears bright glory's awful face to see,
 And shuns renown as much as infamy :
 But blest is he, who, exercised in cares,
 To private leisure public virtue bears ;
 Who tranquil ends the race he nobly run,
 And decks repose with trophies labour won.
 Him honour follows to the secret shade,
 And crowns propitious his declining head ;
 In his retreat their harps the Muses string,
 For him in lays unbought spontaneous sing ;
 Friendship and truth on all his moments wait,
 Pleased with retirement better than with state ;
 And round the bower where humbly great he lies Fair olives bloom, or verdant laurels rise.

Then saw they how there hove a dusky barge,
 Black as a funeral scarf from stem to stern,
 Beneath them; and descending they were ware
 That all the decks were dense with stately forms,
 Black-stoled, black-hooded, like a dream—by these Three Queens with crowns of gold: and from them rose
 A cry that shiver'd to the tingling stars,
 And, as it were one voice, an agony
 Of lamentation, like a wind that shrills
 All night in a waste land, where no one comes,
 Or hath come, since the making of the world.

CXIX

Life! I know not what thou art;
 But know that thou and I must part;
 And when or how or where we met,
 I own, to me's a secret yet.

Life! we've been long together
 Through pleasant and through cloudy weather;
 'Tis hard to part when friends are dear—
 Perhaps 'twill cost a sigh, a tear:
 Then steal away—give little warning:

Choose thine own time:
 Say not 'good night,' but in some brighter clime
 Bid me 'good morning.'

Fallis me, mea vita; nam fatendum est
me nec iam reperire posse quid sis, nec quanam ratione, quave in hora congressus fuerim locove tecum;
id tantum patet, uniceque certum est,
digressum fore mox mei tuique.
nobis longa etenim simul peracta est

nec fletu poterit pio carere praestes omina nulla destinatae;

nec, cum nox aderit suprema, nostros

CXX

Let me confess that we two must be twain,
 Although our undivided loves are one:
 So shall those blots that do with me remain,
 Without thy help, by me be borne alone.
 In our two loves there is but one respect,
 Though in our lives a separable spite,
 Which, though it alter not love's sole effect,
 Yet doth it steal sweet hours from love's delight.
 I may not evermore acknowledge thee,
 Lest my bewailed guilt should do thee shame.
 Nor thou with public kindess honour me,
 Unless thou take that honour from thy name:
 But do not so; I love thee in such sort
 As thou being mine, mine is thy good report.

SHAKESPEARE.

CXXI

This world is all a fleeting show
 For man's illusion given:
 The smiles of Joy, the tears of Woe,
 Deceitful shine, deceitful flow,—
 There's nothing true, but Heaven!
 And false the light on Glory's plume,
 As fading hues of even:
 And Love and Hope and Beauty's bloom
 Are blossoms gather'd for the tomb—
 There's nothing bright, but Heaven.
 Poor wanderers of a stormy day!
 From wave to wave we're driven,
 And Fancy's flash and Reason's ray
 Serve but to light the troubled way—
 There's nothing calm, but Heaven!

Dividimur—fateor—fortuna et dispere vita,
 cum nec dividuuus constet et unus amor.
 proinde meum maculat quotiens infamia nomen.
 omne mihi crimen te sine ferre manet.
 at studio quamvis uno sociemur amandi,
 vincimur invidia distrahimurque deum.
 quae, licet officium finemque haud mutet amoris,
 tempora disperdit deliciasque rapit.
 iam scelus heu nostrum ne sit tibi causa pudoris,
 sit mihi fas ignis dissimulare meos :
 tuque palam noli nobis dare comis honorem
 ne mihi quem reddas sit tibi demptus honor.
 parce tuae famae : nam te modo, cara, potitus

Mortalis specie vita brevi fugit,

CXXII

To me most happy therefore he appears
Who, having once, unmoved by hopes or fears,
Surveyed this sun, earth, ocean, clouds, and flame,
Well satisfied returns from whence he came.
Is life an hundred years or e'er so few,
'Tis repetition all and nothing new ;
A fair, where thousands meet, but none can stay ;
An inn, where travellers bait, then post away ;
A sea, where man perpetually is tost,
Now plunged in business, now in trifles lost :
Who leave it first, the peaceful port first gain ;
Hold then, nor farther launch into the main ;
Contract your sails ; life nothing can bestow
By long continuance, but continued woe :
The wretched privilege daily to deplore
The funerals of our friends, who go before ;
Diseases, pains, anxieties and snares,
And age surrounded with a thousand cares.

S. JENYNS.

Quod quoniam docui, non est mirabile quare
 dicam felicem et vera fretum ratione qui nec spe nec iam cassa formidine torpens, hunc tuitus solem terras mare nubila flammam,
 unde exit plenus vitae ut conviva remigret.
 omnia si pergas vivendo vincere saecla,
 seu paucos annos, eadem tamen omnia semper,
 atque redit falsa novitate extrusa vetustas.
 quin rationem hominum et vitai collige mecum :
 tanquam mille foro videoas properare, neque ulli stare datum quem res trahat ; hospitioque refecti festinant ut nunc nugis nunc rebus agendis iactentur vastis vanarum fluctibus rerum.
 quare etiam atque etiam hoc primus qui evaserit aestu primus habet portum optatum pacemque petitam.
 ergo litora sunt servanda minoribus velis
 nec temptandum altum : quid enim productior aetas quit praebere tibi nisi longos longa dolores,
 luces quotquot eunt, ut acerbo funere mersos (munus triste) gemas, quos ipse et seru' sequere?
 adde etiam morbos, cruciatus corporis aegros,
 aerumnas, captamque malis etiam adde senectam.

CXXIII

For the ungodly said, reasoning with themselves, but not aright, Our life is short and tedious, and in the death of a man there is no remedy: neither was there any man known to have returned from the grave. For we are born at all adventure: and we shall be hereafter as though we had never been: for the breath in our nostrils is as smoke, and a little spark in the moving of our heart: which being extinguished, our body shall be turned into ashes, and our spirit shall vanish as the soft air. Let us crown ourselves with rose-buds, before they be withered: let none of us go without his part of our voluptuousness: let us leave tokens of our joyfulness in every place.

WISDOM OF SOLOMON.

CXXIV

Those hours, that with gentle work did frame
The lovely gaze where every eye doth dwell,
Will play the tyrants to the very same
And that unfair which fairly doth excel;
For never-resting time leads summer on
To hideous winter, and confounds him there;
Sap check'd with frost, and lusty leaves quite gone,
Beauty o'ersnow'd and bareness every where:
Then, were not summer's distillation left,
A liquid prisoner pent in walls of glass,
Beauty's effect with beauty were bereft,
Nor it, nor no remembrance what it was:

But flowers distill'd, though they with winter meet,
Leese but their show; their substance still lives sweet.

SHAKESPEARE.

Father, forbear: for I but meet to-day
The doom that at my birth was written down
In Heaven, and thou art Heaven's unconscious hand.
Surely my heart cried out that it was thou,
When first I saw thee; and thy heart spoke too,
I know it: but Fate trod those promptings down
Under its iron heel; Fate, Fate engaged
The strife, and hurled me on my father's spear.
But let us speak no more of this: I find
My father; let me feel that I have found.
Come, sit beside me on this sand, and take
My head between thy hands, and kiss my cheeks,
And wash them with thy tears, and say, 'My Son!'
Quick! quick! for numbered are my sands of life,
And swift; for like the lightning to this field
I came, and like the wind I go away—
Sudden and swift, and like a passing wind.
But it was writ in Heaven that this should be.

I burst the chain, I sprang into the boat.
Seven days I drove along the dreary deep,
And with me drove the moon and all the stars;

And felt the boat shock earth, and looking up,
Behold, the enchanted towers of Carbonek,
A castle like a rock upon a rock,
With chasm-like portals open to the sea,
And steps that met the breaker; there was none

CXXVI

Protinus insiliens cumbae retinacula fregi.
 perque dies septem iactatus in aequore vasto et lunam mecum comitantiaque astra videbam.
 septima nox aderat, posito cum flamine venti audivi duris resonare anfractibus oram et tandem inlisam saxis haerere carinam margine litoreo sensi; tum desuper arcem
 Phaeacum impendere, et non sine numine turris.
 illa velut rupes rupi superaddita moles
 portarum ingenti pelagus spectabat apertum discidio, et scalae deverbantur in undas.

Stood near it but a lion on each side
That kept the entry, and the moon was full.
Then from the boat I leapt, and up the stairs ;
There drew my sword. With sudden-flaring manes
Those two great beasts rose upright like a man,
Each gript a shoulder, and I stood between.

TENNYSON.

CXXVII

O ancient streams, O far-descended woods,
Full of the fluttering of melodious souls ;
O hills and valleys that adorn yourselves
In solemn jubilation : winds and clouds,
Ocean and land in stormy nuptials clasped,
And all exuberant creatures that acclaim
The earth's divine renewal ; lo ! I too
With yours would mingle somewhat of glad song ;
I too have come through wintry terrors—yea,
Through tempest and through cataclysm of soul
Have come and am delivered. Me the Spring,
Me also dimly with new life hath touched
And with regenerate hope, the salt of life ;
And I would dedicate these grateful tears
To whatsoever power beneficent—
Veiled though his countenance, undivulged his thought—
Hath led me from the haunted darkness forth
Into the gracious air and vernal morn,
And suffers me to know my spirit a note
Of this great chorus, one with bird and stream
And voiceful mountain.

W. WATSON.

nec formas astare hominum sed torva leonum

CXXVIII

I love, and he loves me again,
 Yet dare I not tell who:
 For if the nymphs should know my swain,
 I fear they'd love him too :
 Yet if it be not known,
 The pleasure is as good as none,
 For that's a narrow joy is but our own.

He is, if they can find him, fair,
 And fresh and fragrant too,
 As summer's sky, or purgèd air,
 And looks as lilies do
 That are this morning blown :
 Yet, yet I doubt he is not known.
 And fear much more, that more of him be shown.

JONSON.

CXXIX

Not mine own fears, nor the prophetic soul
 Of the wide world dreaming on things to come,
 Can yet the lease of my true love control,
 Suppos'd as forfeit to a confin'd doom.
 The mortal moon hath her eclipse endured,
 And the sad augurs mock their own presage ;
 Incertainties now crown themselves assured,
 And peace proclaims olives of endless age.
 Now with the drops of this most balmy time
 My love looks fresh, and Death to me subscribes,
 Since, spite of him, I'll live in this poor rime,
 While he insults o'er dull and speechless tribes :
 And thou in this shalt find thy monument,
 When tyrants' crests and tombs of brass are spent.

SHAKESPEARE.

CXXVIII

Urit me meus uriturque amator.
 quis sit, quaeritis? est timor fateri.
 nam desiderium meum puellae
 si norint, scio, iam volent, amabunt.
 sin celatus erit, peribit omnis
 fructus: nam leve gaudium est quod uni adserum vacat, alteri tegetur.

at pulcher, quibus invenire fas est,

CXXIX

Non mea, non populi timidiae praesagia mentis rerum venturas vaticinata vices, tempus amicitiae poterunt iam ponere nostrae,
 quam modo clausuri carcer et uncus erant.
 luna laborando defecit, et irrita vertunt
 omina terrifici quae cecinere senes.
 anxia iam festis, curae cessere coronis,
 pacis inexhaustos ducit oliva dies.
 nunc viret ambrosiae liquidis sub roribus horae
 noster amor, cedit nunc Libitina mihi;
 in tenui hoc versu vivam, dum quamlibet illa
 saevit in elinguis ac sine voce tribus;
 aeternumque tui monumentum hoc stabit. amice,
 cum tumidis regum molibus aera cadent.

Cor. Come leave your tears: a brief farewell: the beast

With many heads butts me away. Nay, mother,
Where is your ancient courage? you were us'd
To say extremity was the trier of spirits;
That common chances common men could bear:
That when the sea was calm all boats alike
Show'd mastership in floating; fortune's blows,
When most struck home, being gentle, wounded, craves
A noble cunning: you were us'd to load me
With precepts that would make invincible
The heart that conn'd them.

Vir. O heavens! O heavens!

Cor. Nay, I prithee, woman,—

Vol. Now the red pestilence strike all trades in Rome,
And occupations perish!

Cor. What, what, what!
I shall be lov'd when I am lack'd. Nay, mother,
Resume that spirit, when you were wont to say,
If you had been the wife of Hercules,
Six of his labours you'd have done, and sav'd
Your husband so much sweat.

What needs complaints
When she a place
Has with the race
    Of saints ?
In endless mirth
She thinks not on
What's said or done
    In earth.
She sees no tears,
Nor any tone
Of thy deep groan
    She hears :
Nor does she mind,
Or think on 't now,
That ever thou
    Wast kind ;
But, changed above,
She likes not there,
As she did here,
    Thy love.
Forbear, therefore,
And lull asleep
Thy woes, and weep
    No more.

CXXXII

Oh,

My God! Can it be possible I have
To die so suddenly? so young to go
Under the obscure, cold, rotting, wormy ground?
To be nailed down into a narrow place;
To see no more sweet sunshine; hear no more
Blithe voice of living thing; muse not again
Upon familiar thoughts,—sad, yet thus lost!
How fearful! To be nothing! or to be—
What? Or where am I? Let me not go mad!
Sweet Heaven, forgive weak thoughts! If there should be
No God, no heaven, no earth, in the void world,
The wide, grey, lampless, deep, unpeopled world!
If all things then should be my father's spirit,
His eye, his voice, his touch, surrounding me,
The atmosphere and breath of my dead life!
If sometimes, as a shape more like himself,
Even the form which tortured me on earth,
Masked in grey hairs and wrinkles, he should come,
And wind me in his hellish arms, and fix
His eyes on mine, and drag me down, down, down!
For was he not alone omnipotent
On earth, and ever present? Even though dead
Does not his spirit live in all that breathe,
And work for me and mine still the same ruin,
Scorn, pain, despair?

Beauty, truth, and rarity,
Grace in all simplicity,

Come, come; no time for lamentation now,
 Nor much more cause; Samson hath quit himself
 Like Samson, and heroically hath finish'd
 A life heroic, on his enemies
 Fully reveng'd; hath left them years of mourning.
 And lamentation to the sons of Caphtor,
 Through all Philistine bounds; to Israel
 Honour hath left, and freedom, let but them
 Find courage to lay hold on this occasion;
 To himself and father's house eternal fame;
 And, which is best and happiest yet, all this
 With God not parted from him, as was fear'd.
 But favouring and assisting to the end.
 Nothing is here for tears, nothing to wail
 Or knock the breast; no weakness, no contempt,
 Dispraise, or blame: nothing but well and fair,
 And what may quiet us in a death so noble.

And on the night
When Uther in Tintagil past away
Moaning and wailing for an heir, the two Descending thro' the dismal night—a night
In which the bounds of heaven and earth were lost—
Beheld, so high upon the dreary deeps
It seem'd in heaven, a ship, the shape thereof
A dragon wing'd, and all from stem to stern
Bright with a shining people on the decks,
And gone as soon as seen. And then the two Dropt to the cove, and watch'd the great sea fall,
Wave after wave, each mightier than the last.
Till last, a ninth one, gathering half the deep
And full of voices, slowly rose and plunged
Roaring, and all the wave was in a flame:
And down the wave and in the flame was borne
A naked babe, and rode to Merlin's feet.
Who stoopt and caught the babe, and cried 'The King!
Here is an heir for Uther!' And the fringe
Of that great breaker, sweeping up the strand,
Lash'd at the wizard as he spake the word.
And presently thereafter follow'd calm.

But, children, at midnight,
 When soft the winds blow,
 When clear falls the moonlight,
 When spring-tides are low ;
 When sweet airs come seaward
 From heaths starred with broom,
 And high rocks throw mildly
 On the blanched sands a gloom ;
 Up the still, glistening beaches,
 Up the creeks we will hie,
 Over banks of bright seaweed
 The ebb-tide leaves dry.
 We will gaze, from the sand-hills,
 At the white, sleeping town ;
 At the church on the hill-side—
 And then come back down.
 Singing : ‘There dwells a loved one,
 But cruel is she !
 She left lonely for ever
 The kings of the sea.’

A time there was, ere England's griefs began,
 When every rood of ground maintained its man.
 For him light labour spread her wholesome store.
 Just gave what life required, but gave no more.
 His best companions innocence and health,
 And his best riches ignorance of wealth.
 But times are altered, trade's unfeeling train
 Usurp the land, and dispossess the swain.
 Along the lawn where scattered hamlets rose,
 Unwieldy wealth and cumbrous pomp repose ;
 And every want to opulence allied,
 And every pang that folly pays to pride.
 Those gentle hours that plenty bade to bloom,
 Those calm desires that asked but little room,
 Those healthful sports that graced the peaceful scene.
 Lived in each look, and brightened all the green,
 These far departing seek a kinder shore,
 And rural mirth and manners are no more.

Olim, sic referunt, unius cultor agelli
 quisque fuit, domino sat dabat unus ager, dum patriae stabat res integra: tum labor aequus
 cuique tulit quantas vita requirit opes.
 tum melior nummis fuit ignorantia nummi.
 sanctaque mens sani corporis apta comes.
 en nova nunc rerum facies! felicia pulso institor agricola sordidus arva tenet.
 hic, prius in campis ubi rustica tecta nitebant.
 praegravis inter opes otia luxus agit;
 et quae pluris egens luxum comitata cupido est,
 quasque sui poenas dat sibi caecus amor.
 at contenta quies parvo, et quos copia iusta
 lege salutiferos iusserat ire dies;
 at chorus, et viridi certantum caespite ludi,
 unde vigor membris et decor ore nitent,
 his procul hinc sedes Iove sub meliore petuntur.
 et proba rusticitas, quae fuit ante, perit.

O fountains, when in you shall I
Myself, eased of unpeaceful thoughts, espy ?
O fields ! O woods ! when, when shall I be made
    The happy tenant of your shade ?
    Here 's the spring-head of Pleasure's flood ;
Where all the riches lie, that she
    Has coin'd and stamp'd for good.

Pride and Ambition here
Only in far-fetch'd metaphors appear :
Here nought but winds can hurtful murmurs scatter,
    And nought but Echo flatter.
The Gods, when they descended, hither
From Heaven did always choose their way :
And therefore we may boldly say
    That 'tis the way too thither.

How happy here should I
And one dear She live and embracing die !
She who is all the world, and can exclude
    In deserts solitude.
I should have then this only fear,
Lest men, when they my pleasures see,
Should all come im'tate me,
    And so make a city here.

COWLEY.

Quando erit, o fontes, cura resolutus ut omni
in vestris possim cernere memet aquis?
o rus et silvae, laetissimus incola vestros quando erit ut teneam, frondea lustra, sinus?
ille voluptatis fons est merus: omnis in illo
copia, signantis quam manus ipsa probat.
quisquis in his fastum vel Campi quaerit honores,
transtulit hue aliis verba petenda locis.
hic soli sparsere nocentia murmura venti,
solaque blanditias vox geminata sonat.
hoc superi, quotiens caelo excessere relicto.
optarunt unum carpere semper iter.
quin ausim dixisse, neque est dixisse profanum,
quisquis adis superos, hac licet ire via.
meque velim, quaeque una mihi carissima vivit.
posse sub hac olim consenuisse domo,
complexosque mori: comitum par illa catervae
solaque desertis est mihi turba locis.
illa ferat nobis, illa unica causa timorem,
ne pateant veneris gaudia tanta meae,
neve cohors veniat nos emirata virorum,
fiat et in medio iam locus urbis agro.

As the sky-brightening south wind clears the day,
And makes the massed clouds roll,
The music of the lyre blows away
The clouds that wrap the soul.
Oh that Fate had let me see
That triumph of the sweet persuasive lyre !
That famous, final victory
When jealous Pan with Marsyas did conspire !
When, from far Parnassus' side,
Young Apollo, all the pride
Of the Phrygian flutes to tame,
To the Phrygian highlands came !
Where the long green reed-beds sway
In the rippled waters grey
Of that solitary lake
Where Maeander's springs are born ;
Where the ridged pine-wooded roots
Of Messogis westward break,
Mounting westward, high and higher.
There was held the famous strife !

But not long

Had the fresh wave of windy fight begun
Heaving, and all the surge of swords to sway,
When timeless night laid hold of heaven, and took
With its great gorge the noon as in a gulf,
Strangled ; and thicker than the shrill-winged shafts
Flew the fleet lightnings . . . that our host,
Smit with sick presage of some wrathful God
Quailed, but the foe as from one iron throat
With one great sheer sole thousand-throated cry
Shook earth, heart-staggered from their shout, and clove
The eyeless hollow of heaven ; and breached therewith
As with an onset of strength-shattering sound
The rent vault of the roaring noon of night
From her throned seat of usurpation rang
Reverberate answer ; such response there pealed
As tho' the tide's charge of a storming sea
Had burst the sky's wall, and made broad a breach
In the ambient girth and bastion flanked with stars
Guarding the fortress of the Gods, and all
Crashed now together on ruin ; and through that cry
And higher above it ceasing one man's note
Tore its way like a trumpet : Charge, make end,
Charge, halt not, strike, rend up their strength by the roots.
Strike, break them, make your birthright's promise sure.
Show your hearts harder than the fenced land breeds,
..

Sons of the sea's waves ; and all ears that heard
Rang with that fiery cry, that the fine air

Ah ! little think the gay licentious proud,
 Whom pleasure, power, and affluence surround ;
 They, who their thoughtless hours in giddy mirth
 And wanton, often cruel, riot waste ;—
 Ah ! little think they, while they dance along.
 How many feel this very moment death
 And all the sad variety of pain ;
 How many sink in the devouring flood,
 Or more devouring flame ; how many bleed
 By shameful variance betwixt man and man ;
 How many pine in want and dungeon glooms,
 Shut from the common air and common use
 Of their own limbs ; how many drink the cup
 Of baleful grief or eat the bitter bread
 Of misery ; sore pierced by wintry winds
 How many shrink into the sordid hut
 Of cheerless poverty ; how many shake
 With all the fiercer tortures of the mind,
 Unbounded passion, madness, guilt, remorse :
 How many racked with honest passions droop
 In deep retired distress ; how many stand
 Around the death-bed of their dearest friends
 And point the parting anguish !

Time wasteth yeares and months and hours :
 Time doth consume fame, honour, will, and strength :
 Time kills the greenest herbs and sweetest flowers :
 Time weares out youth and beautie's lookes at length :
     Time doth convey to ground both foe and friend,
     And each thing els but Love, which hath no end.

This said, he left them, and returned no more.—
 But rumours hung about the country-side,
     That the lost Scholar long was seen to stray,
     Seen by rare glimpses, pensive and tongue-tied,
     In hat of antique shape, and cloak of grey,
     The same the gipsies wore.
 Shepherds had met him on the Hurst in spring ;
     At some lone alehouse in the Berkshire moors,
     On the warm ingle-bench, the smock-frocked boors
     Had found him seated at their entering.
 But, mid their drink and clatter, he would fly ;—
     And I myself seem half to know thy looks,
     And put the shepherds, wanderer, on thy trace ;
     And boys who in lone wheatfields scare the rooks
     I ask if thou hast passed their quiet place ;
     Or in my boat I lie
 Moored to the cool bank in the summer heats,
     Mid wide grass meadows which the sunshine fills,
     And watch the warm green-muffled Cumnor hills,
     And wonder if thou haunt'st their shy retreats.

[Should all our churchmen foam in spite
At you, so careful of the right,
Yet one lay-hearth would give you welcome]
(Take it and come) to the Isle of Wight ;
Where, far from noise and smoke of town,
I watch the twilight falling brown
All round a careless-order'd garden
Close to the ridge of a noble down.
You'll have no scandal while you dine,
But honest talk and wholesome wine,
And only hear the magpie gossip
Garrulous under a roof of pine :
For groves of pine on either hand,
To break the blast of winter, stand ;
And further on, the hoary Channel
Tumbles a billow on chalk and sand ;
Where, if below the milky steep
Some ship of battle slowly creep,
And on thro' zones of light and shadow
Glimmer away to the lonely deep,
We might discuss the Northern sin
Which made a selfish war begin ;
[Dispute the claims, arrange the chances ;
Emperor, Ottoman, which shall win.]

Better to wait :

The wise men wait ; it is the foolish haste,
And ere the scenes are in the slides would play.
And while the instruments are tuning, dance.

I see Napoleon on the heights intent
To arrest that one brief unit of loose time
Which hands high Victory's thread ; his marshals fret.
His soldiers clamour low : the very guns
Seem going off themselves ; the cannon strain
Like hell-dogs in the leash. But he, he waits :
And lesser chances and inferior hopes
Meantime go pouring past.

And I will pledge with mine ;
Or leave a kiss but in the cup,

But might I of Jove's nectar sup,
I would not change for thine.

Luminibus modo redde notas, ubi pocula sumis;
luminibus referam non secus ipse notas;
seu mihi, cum biberis, sola in quincunce relinques
oscula, sufficient oscula sola mihi.

at si suave Iovis liceat mihi ducere nectar,
non Iovis anteferam nectar, amata, tuo.

I sent thee late a rosy wreath,
 Not so much honouring thee,
 As giving it a hope that there
   It could not withered be ;
 But thou thereon didst only breathe,

 Since when it grows, and smells, I swear,
   Not of itself, but thee.

Ah, miserable and unkind, untrue,
 Unknightly, traitor-hearted ! Woe is me !
 Authority forgets a dying king,
 Laid widow'd of the power in his eye
 That bow'd the will. I see thee what thou art,
 For thou, the latest-left of all my knights,
 In whom should meet the offices of all,
 Thou wouldest betray me for the precious hilt ;
 Either from lust of gold, or like a girl
 Valuing the giddy pleasure of the eyes.
 Yet, for a man may fail in duty twice,
 And the third time may prosper, get thee hence :
 But, if thou spare to fling Excalibur,
 I will arise and slay thee with my hands.

Manuel, I do not shed a tear
Our parting to delay ;
I dare not listen to my fear,
I dare not bid thee stay.

The heart may shrink, the spirit fail.
But Spaniards must be free !
And pride and duty shall prevail
O'er all my love for thee.

Then go, and round that gallant head.
Like banners in the air,
Shall float full many a daring hope
And many a tender prayer.

Should freedom perish—at thy death
'Twere madness to repine ;
And I should every feeling lose
Except the wish for mine.

But if the destiny of Spain
Be once again to rise !
O grant me, Heaven ! to read the tale
In Manuel's joyful eyes.

Among the many methods which might be made use of for the acquiring of the virtue of contentment, I shall only mention the two following. First of all, a man should always consider how much more he has than he wants; and, secondly, how much more unhappy he might be than he really is. For the first point, I am wonderfully pleased with the reply which Aristippus made to one who condoled with him upon the loss of a farm. ‘Why,’ said he, ‘I have three farms still, and you have but one; so that I ought rather to be afflicted for you than you for me.’ On the contrary, foolish men are apt to fix their minds on those who are richer than themselves, rather than on those who are under greater difficulties. All the real pleasures and conveniences of life lie in a narrow compass; but it is the humour of mankind to be always looking forward, and straining after those who have got the start of them.

At this with maddened stare
And lifted hands and trembling lips he stood,
Like old Deucalion mountained o'er the flood,
Or blind Orion hungry for the morn.
And, but from the deep cavern there was borne
A voice, he had been froze to senseless stone;
Nor sigh of his, nor plaint, nor passionate moan
Had more been heard. Thus swelled it forth; ‘Descend,
Young mountaineer! descend where pathways bend
Into the rocky hollows of the world!

Stat fixis demens oculis atque ore trementi, attollitque manus, qualis stetit ille patentum
 culmine Deucalion celso spectator aquarum, vel cupidus caecis solem exoptabat Orion
 luminibus; iamque in lapidem cedebat inertem, nullos iam gemitus, suspiria nulla daturus,
 ploratusve sonum, medio nisi clamor ab antro
 erumpens pavidum dictis monuisset amicis:
 ‘tune illuc, iuvenis, metuas descendere, pergit
 semita qua sterilis terrae penetrare cavernas,

Oft hast thou seen bolts of the thunder hurled
 As from thy threshold; day by day hast been
 A little lower than the chilly sheen
 Of icy pinnacles; now, as deep profound
 As these are high, descend! He ne'er is crowned
 With immortality, who fears to follow
 Where airy voices lead: so through the hollow,
 The silent mysteries of earth descend!'

It must be—

And yet it moves me, Romans! it confounds
 The counsels of my firm philosophy,
 That Ruin's merciless ploughshare must pass o'er.
 And barren salt be sown on yon proud city.
 As on our olive-crownèd hill we stand,
 Where Kedron at our feet its scanty waters
 Distils from stone to stone with gentle motion,
 As through a valley sacred to sweet peace,
 How boldly doth it front us! how majestically!
 Like a luxurious vineyard, the hill-side
 Is hung with marble fabrics, line o'er line,
 Terrace o'er terrace, nearer still, and nearer
 To the blue heavens.

CLIV

A strait long entry to the temple led,
Blind with high walls, and horror over head ;
Thence issued such a blast, and hollow roar,
As threatened from the hinge to heave the door.
The gate was adamant ; eternal frame
Which, hewed by Mars himself, from Indian quarries came,
The labour of a God ; and all along
Tough iron plates were clenched to make it strong.
On the other side there stood Destruction bare ;
Unpunished Rapine, and a waste of war.
Loud menaces were heard, and foul disgrace,
And bawling infamy, in language base ;
Till sense was lost in sound, and silence fled the place.
The slayer of himself yet saw I there,
The gore congealed was clotted in his hair ;
With eyes half closed and gaping mouth he lay,
And grim, as when he breathed his sullen soul away.

Sleep, angry beauty, sleep and fear not me:
 For who a sleeping lion dares provoke?
 It shall suffice me here to sit and see
 These lips shut up, that never kindly spoke:
 What sight can more content a lover's mind
 Than beauty seeming harmless, if not kind?
 My words have charm'd her, for secure she sleeps,
 Though guilty much of wrong done to my love:
 And in her slumber, see! she close-eyed weeps!
 Dreams often more than waking passions move.
 Plead, sleep, my cause, and make her soft like thee,
 That she in peace may wake and pity me!

He scarce had finish'd, when such murmur fill'd
 Th' assembly, as when hollow rocks retain
 The sound of blust'ring winds, which all night long
 Had rous'd the sea, now with hoarse cadence lull
 Sea-faring men o'er-watch'd, whose bark by chance
 Or pinnace anchors in a craggy bay
 After the tempest: such applause was heard
 As Mammon ended, and his sentence pleas'd,
 Advising peace: for such another field
 They dreaded worse than Hell: so much the fear
 Of thunder and the sword of Michaël
 Wrought still within them, and no less desire
 To found this nether empire, which might rise
 By policy, and long process of time,
 In emulation opposite to Heav'n.

CLVII

Silent and moody he went, and much he revolved his discomfort;
He who was used to success, and to easy victories always,
Thus to be flouted, rejected, and laughed to scorn by a maiden,
Thus to be mocked and betrayed by the friend whom most he had trusted!
Ah! 'twas too much to be borne, and he fretted and chafed in his armour!

'I alone am to blame,' he muttered, 'for mine was the folly.
What has a rough old soldier, grown grim and gray in the harness,
Used to the camp and its ways, to do with the wooing of maidens?
'Twas but a dream,—let it pass,—let it vanish like so many others!
What I thought was a flower, is only a weed, and is worthless!
Out of my heart will I pluck it, and throw it away, and henceforward
Be but a fighter of battles, a lover and wooer of dangers!'
Thus he revolved in his mind his sorry defeat and discomfort,
While he was marching by day or lying at night in the forest,
Looking up at the trees, and the constellations beyond them.

CLVII

It tristis sine voce viam totaque repulsam

 unanimemne et qui ante omnes sibi fidus amicum illusisse fidem, pactum contemnere foedus?
 grande nefas. nec iam mediocri bile ferendum.
 sic ira spumante fremens iecur ibat in armis.
 et secum: 'mea culpa quidem est, vaecordia quando nostra fuit. quid enim vetus et non factus amori, inque paludato doctus canescere coetu,
 castrorum vitam atque omnes expertus in usus,
 virginibus teneris me credere tetricus ausim?
 verum ut erat somni sine pondere euntis imago,
 sic abeat, sic cedat amor: nam flosculus olim
 qui fuit, hic idem est abiecta vilior herba, cogor et ex animo vulsum radicibus imis proicere. hinc ego iam superest quod vivere Marti me dedero, pugnis flagrans et amore pericli.'
 sic tristem fortunam animo, sic saepe repulsam volvit amans, seu luce viam tenet, aut ubi noctu membra reclinatus silvis arbusta notabat suspiciens longoque abeuntia sidera caelo.

CLVIII

Oh, talk not to me of a name great in story!
 The days of our youth are the days of our glory :
 And the myrtle and ivy of sweet two-and-twenty
 Are worth all your laurels, though ever so plenty.
 What are garlands and crowns to the brow that is wrinkled ?
 'Tis but as a dead flower with May-dew besprinkled.
 Then away with all such from the head that is hoary !
 What care I for the wreaths that can only give glory ?
 Oh Fame ! if I e'er took delight in thy praises,
 'Twas less for the sake of thy high-sounding phrases.
 Than to see the bright eyes of the dear One discover
 She thought that I was not unworthy to love her.
There chiefly I sought thee, there only I found thee ;
 Her glance was the best of the rays that surround thee :
 When it sparkled o'er aught that was bright in my story,
 I knew it was love, and I felt it was glory.

Hero, when that he came not, watched all night.
 Into the darkness straining hard her sight ;
 And morning breaking and no sign of him,
 With aching heart she scanned the sea-face dim.
 Fearing to look because that lamp went out.
 He was not there, but casting all about,
 Lo, at the turret's foot his body lay,
 Rolled on the stones, and soaked with breaking spray.
 She rent her robe upon her, and leaped down
 Headlong, distracted, from the turret's crown ;
 There on his corpse she breathed her dying breath,
 And linked in life, those two were one in death.

Fer. This is strange: your father's in some passion
That works him strongly.

Saw I him touch'd with anger so distemper'd.

Pro. You do look, my son, in a movèd sort,
As if you were dismay'd: be cheerful, sir:
Our revels now are ended. These our actors,
As I foretold you, were all spirits and
Are melted into air, into thin air:
And, like the baseless fabric of this vision,
The cloud-capp'd towers, the gorgeous palaces,
The solemn temples, the great globe itself.
Yea, all which it inherit. shall dissolve
And, like this insubstantial pageant faded,
Leave not a rack behind. We are such stuff
As dreams are made on, and our little life
Is rounded with a sleep.

The Danube to the Severn gave
 The darken'd heart that beat no more :
 They laid him by the pleasant shore,
 And in the hearing of the wave.

There twice a day the Severn fills ;
 The salt sea-water passes by,
 And hushes half the babbling Wye,
 And makes a silence in the hills.

The Wye is hush'd nor moved along,
 And hush'd my deepest grief of all,
 When fill'd with tears that cannot fall,
 I brim with sorrow drowning song.

The tide flows down, the wave again
 Is vocal in its wooded walls ;
 My deeper anguish also falls,
 And I can speak a little then.

CLXII

The Autumn skies are flushed with gold,
 And fair and bright the rivers run ;
 These are but streams of winter cold,
 And painted mists that quench the sun.

In secret boughs no sweet birds sing,
 In secret boughs no bird can shroud ;
 These are but leaves that take to wing,
 And wintry winds that pipe so loud.

'Tis not trees' shade, but cloudy glooms
 That on the cheerless valleys fall ;
 The flowers are in their grassy tombs,
 And tears of dew are on them all.

Let not my cold words here accuse my zeal :
'Tis not the trial of a woman's war,
The bitter clamour of two eager tongues,
Can arbitrate this cause betwixt us twain ;
The blood is hot that must be cool'd for this :
Yet can I not of such tame patience boast
As to be hush'd and naught at all to say.
First, the fair reverence of your highness curbs me
From giving reins and spurs to my free speech ;
Which else would post until it had return'd
These terms of treason doubled down his throat.
Setting aside his high blood's royalty,
And let him be no kinsman to my liege,
I do defy him, and I spit at him ;
Call him a slanderous coward and a villain :
Which to maintain I would allow him odds,
And meet him, were I tied to run afoot
Even to the frozen ridges of the Alps,
Or any other ground inhabitable,
Where ever Englishman durst set his foot.
Meantime let this defend my loyalty :
By all my hopes, most falsely doth he lie.

But wherefore do not you a mightier way
 Make war upon this bloody tyrant, Time?
 And fortify yourself in your decay
 With means more blessed than my barren rime?
 Now stand you on the top of happy hours,
 And many maiden gardens, yet unset.
 With virtuous wish would bear you living flowers
 Much liker than your painted counterfeit:
 So should the lines of life that life repair,
 Which this, Time's pencil, or my pupil pen,
 Neither in inward worth nor outward fair,
 Can make you live yourself in eyes of men.
 To give away yourself keeps yourself still;
 And you must live, drawn by your own sweet skill.

Weary with toil, I haste me to my bed,
 The dear repose for limbs with travel tired;
 But then begins a journey in my head
 To work my mind, when body's work's expir'd:
 For then my thoughts—from far where I abide—
 Intend a zealous pilgrimage to thee,
 And keep my drooping eyelids open wide,
 Looking on darkness which the blind do see:
 Save that my soul's imaginary sight
 Presents thy shadow to my sightless view
 Which, like a jewel hung in ghastly night,
 Makes black night beauteous and her old face new.
 Lo! thus, by day my limbs, by night my mind.
 For thee and for myself no quiet find.

CLXXVI

No forest fell

When thou wouldest build ; no quarry sent its stores
To enrich thy walls : but thou didst hew the floods,
And make thy marble of the glassy wave.
In such a palace Aristaeus found
Cyrene, when he bore the plaintive tale
Of his lost bees to her maternal ear.
In such a palace Poetry might place
The armoury of winter ; where his troops,
The gloomy clouds, find weapons, arrowy sleet,
Skin-piercing volley, blossom-bruising hail.
Silently as a dream the fabric rose ;
No sound of hammer or of saw was there :
Ice upon ice, the well-adjusted parts
Were soon conjoined, nor other cement asked
Than water interfused to make them one.
Lamps gracefully disposed, and of all hues,
Illumined every side : a watery light
Gleamed through the clear transparency, that seemed Another moon new-risen, or meteor fallen
From heaven to earth, of lambent flame serene.

 tali crediderim, matrem cum quaereret olim,
 amissis pastorem apibus vidisse sedentem
 Cyrenen aula: talem finxisse poetae
 arcem debuerant hiemi, qua tela laterent nimborum agminibus, stridentes imbre sagittae, infestaeque nives, et floribus aspera grando.
 creverunt tacitae, veluti quas fingimus aedes

CLXXVII

This was the old man's favourite tale, and he loved to repeat it

When his neighbours complained that any injustice was done them.

'Once in an ancient city, whose name I no longer remember,

Raised aloft on a column, a brazen statue of Justice Stood in the public square, upholding the scales in its left hand,

And in its right a sword, as an emblem that justice presided

Over the laws of the land, and the hearts and homes of the people.

Even the birds had built their nests in the scales of the balance,

Having no fear of the sword that flashed in the sunshine above them.

But in the course of time the laws of the land were corrupted;

Might took the place of right, and the weak were oppressed, and the mighty

Ruled with an iron rod. Then it chanced in a nobleman's palace

That a necklace of pearls was lost, and ere long a suspicion

Fell on an orphan girl who lived as maid in the household. She, after form of trial condemned to die on the scaffold, Patiently met her doom at the foot of the statue of Justice.

As to her Father in heaven her innocent spirit ascended, Lo! o'er the city a tempest rose; and the bolts of the thunder

Mos erat haec narrare seni, si viderat ullos invidiam socios violataque iura querentis.

Urbs antiqua fuit (nomen mihi sustulit aetas),
inque foro stabat Themis aurea, nixa columna:
laeva manus lances e more tenebat, et ensem
dextera. sic patuit Themidos popularia iura esse sub imperio sedesque et corda virorum.
quietiam parvas ipsis in lancibus aedes ponebant volucres; non illas fulgura ferri terruerant solisque supra radiantis imago.
nec minus in peius leges volventibus annis tendebant et vis coepit pro lege valere, et nimis oppressam sub iniquo pondere plebem vexabant proceres. iamque ipsius in lare regis amissa est torques, furtique parentibus orba mox rea fit virgo, tectis ancilla sub isdem.
iure ea mentito capitis damnatur, et ipsos
ante pedes Themidos subit aequo pectore mortem;
dumque anima in sedes volat incorrupta piorum
horrida tempestas superingruit, igneaque aere

Smote the statue of bronze, and hurled in wrath from its left hand
Down on the pavement below the clattering scales of the balance,
And in the hollow thereof was found the nest of a magpie,
Into whose clay-built walls the necklace of pearls was inwoven.'
Silenced, but not convinced, when the story was ended,
the blacksmith
Stood like a man who fain would speak, but findeth
no language ;
All his thoughts were congealed into lines on his face,
as the vapours
Freeze in fantastic shapes on the window-panes in the winter.

LONGFELLOW.

CLXVIII

Money never made any man rich, but his mind. He that can order himself to the law of nature is not only without the sense, but the fear of poverty. Oh ! but to strike blind the people with our wealth and pomp, is the thing ! What a wretchedness is this, to thrust all our riches outward, and be beggars within ; to contemplate nothing but the little, vile, and sordid things of the world ; not the great, noble, and precious ! We serve our avarice ; and not content with the good of the earth that is offered us, we search and dig for the evil that is hidden.
God offered us those things, and placed them at hand and near us, that he knew were profitable to us ; but the hurtful he laid deep and hid. Yet do we seek only the things whereby we may perish ; and bring them forth, when God and nature hath buried them.

For thee, for thee. vile yellow slave,
 I left a heart that loved me true !
 I crossed the tedious ocean-wave,
 To roam in climes unkind and new.
 The cold wind of the stranger blew
 Chill on my withered heart: the grave
 Dark and untimely met my view.—
 And all for thee, vile yellow slave !

Ha ! comest thou now so late to mock
 A wanderer's banished heart forlorn,
 Now that his frame the lightning-shock
 Of sun-rays tipped with death has borne ?
 From love, from friendship, country, torn.
 To memory's fond regrets the prey,
 Vile slave, thy yellow dross I scorn !
 Go, mix thee with thy kindred clay.

CLXXI

But oh, that deep romantic chasm which slanted
Down the green hill athwart a cedarn cover !
A savage place, as holy and enchanted
As e'er beneath a waning moon was haunted
By woman wailing for her demon lover.
And from this chasm, with ceaseless turmoil seething,
As if this earth in fast thick pants were breathing,
A mighty fountain momently was forced :
Amid whose swift, half-intermittent burst
Huge fragments vaulted like rebounding hail,
Or chaffy grain beneath the thresher's flail ;
And 'mid these dancing rocks at once and ever
It flung up momently the sacred river.
Five miles meandering with a mazy motion
Through wood and dale the sacred river ran,
Then reached the caverns measureless to man,
And sank in tumult to a lifeless ocean :
And 'mid this tumult Kubla heard from far
Ancestral voices prophesying war.

COLERIDGE.

Quae deinde intulerit facies se mira, quis audet
dicere? nam viridi devolsum colle barathrum transversas aperit fauces cedrisque minatur

religione locus, qualem, dum contrahit ignis
Cynthia, desertis implebat vocibus Ino.
at barathro ex imo, velut acer anhelitus ipsam
tellurem atque imo quasset fundamine Manes, emicat en rapidus ferventi gurgite torrens.
nec tamen adsidue: spumas namque inter et aestum
grandia saxa volant; sic tectis horrida grando, sic tritae saliunt, urguet dum vannus, avenae.
hic sibi per saltum et volitantia fragmina montis
rumpit iter fluvius sacrisque elabitur undis.
deinde brevem vitam rapiens nemora inter et agros
implicat inumeros gyros cursumque moratur, nequiquam—iam finis adest antrisque propinquat
immensis, hominum nulli quae cernere fas est, stagnantisque adeo se condidit aequore ponti cum sonitu: at longe resonare audivit avitas
Aeneas voces, certum et praedicere bellum.

CLXXII

He was my friend, the truest friend on earth ;
 A strong and mighty influence join'd our birth ;
 Nor did we envy the most sounding name

By friendship giv'n of old to fame.

None but his brethren he, and sisters knew,
 Whom the kind youth preferr'd to me ;
 And ev'n in that we did agree,
 For much above myself I lov'd them too.

Say, for you saw us, ye immortal lights,
 How oft unwearied have we spent the nights ?
 Till the Ledaean stars, so fam'd for love,
 Wondered at us from above.

We spent them not in toys, in lusts, or wine ;
 But search of deep philosophy,
 Wit, eloquence, and poetry,
 Arts which I lov'd, for they, my friend, were thine.

COWLEY.

CLXXIII

Under the wide and starry sky
 Dig the grave and let me lie ;
 Glad did I live and gladly die,
 And I laid me down with a will.

This be the verse you grave for me :
 ' Here he lies where he longed to be ;
 Home is the sailor, home from sea,
 And the hunter home from the hill.'

STEVENSON.

CLXXIV

When in the down I sink my head,
    Sleep, Death's twin-brother, times my breath ;
    Sleep, Death's twin-brother, knows not Death,
Nor can I dream of thee as dead :

I walk as ere I walk'd forlorn,
    When all our path was fresh with dew,
    And all the bugle breezes blew
Reveielle to the breaking morn.

But what is this? I turn about,
    I find a trouble in thine eye.
    Which makes me sad I know not why.
Nor can my dream resolve the doubt :

But ere the lark hath left the lea
    I wake, and I discern the truth ;
    It is the trouble of my youth
That foolish sleep transfers to thee.

TENNYSON.

CLXXIV

Fessus ubi in plumam demitto tempora, fatus hos geminus Mortis dirigit ipse Sopor.
ipse Sopor geminam nescit cognoscere Mortem :
    nec mihi per somnos tu periisse potes.
vivis, et incedens tecum non sola pererro
    iam loca, sed laetas rore recente vias ;
ut cum more tubae nobis nova flabra Favoni mane refulsurum praecinuere diem.
sed quid conspicio? media inter gaudia miror nescio quid vultus sollicitare tuos.
ipse dolens dubito quae sit mihi caussa doloris:
    nec possum somnis certior esse meis.
ante tamen campos quam linquat alauda novales excitor, et didici, quod didicisse querar ;
scilicet hunc veterem nostro sub pectore luctum
    intulerant oculis somnia vana tuis.
